24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a principal or owner in a corporation appears in a local proceeding by submitting a letter on corporate letterhead, but the letter is phrased in the first person singular and appears to set out the views of the principal in his individual capacity, LUBA will presume that the letter constitutes an individual appearance as well as a representative appearance on behalf of the corporation. Pliska v. Umatilla County, 61 Or LUBA 429 (2010).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Under ORS 197.620(1) there is no requirement that to "participate" in a local government proceeding a person must articulate an individual position on the merits, and joining in a position on the merits asserted by others is not categorically insufficient to "participate." Smith v. City of Salem, 60 Or LUBA 478 (2010).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. A mere statement in favor or opposition to a proposal, without some explanation why the local government should approve or deny the application, does not suffice to present a position on the merits for purposes of ORS 197.620(1). An argument that an existing use plays a significant role in flood mitigation that would be eliminated by the proposed application, while brief, presents an argument that is sufficient to constitute "participation" under ORS 197.620(1). Smith v. City of Salem, 60 Or LUBA 478 (2010).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. A party does not establish that the party "appeared" during the proceedings below where the record of the proceedings that led to the challenged decision includes only evidence of the appearance by that party in a different land use proceeding. Sommer v. Josephine County, 58 Or LUBA 505 (2009).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a local government failed to provide DLCD with the notice required by OAR 660-041-0030 within the time set forth in the rule, LUBA will not dismiss an appeal on the grounds that DLCD did not make the required appearance, where DLCD's failure to appear can be attributed to the local government's failure to provide the notice. DLCD v. Deschutes County, 54 Or LUBA 799 (2007).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Persons who made an appearance during the local government proceedings that led to a city decision that was remanded by LUBA satisfy the ORS 197.830(7)(b) requirement that a person who moves to intervene in a subsequent LUBA appeal of the city's decision following LUBA's remand must have "appeared." The appearance during the initial local government proceedings is sufficient to satisfy the ORS 197.830(7)(b) appearance requirement, and it does not matter that the local government refused those persons' attempt to appear during the remand proceedings. South Gateway Partners v. City of Medford, 53 Or LUBA 593 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a person attempts but is denied the right to appear during a local government's proceedings that lead to a land use decision, in a subsequent LUBA appeal that attempt to appear is sufficient to satisfy the ORS 197.830(7)(b) appearance requirement, to allow that person to intervene in the LUBA appeal to assign error to the local government's refusal to allow a local appearance. South Gateway Partners v. City of Medford, 53 Or LUBA 593 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where persons appeared during the local government proceedings that led to a LUBA appeal and remand, that local appearance is sufficient to satisfy the ORS 197.830(7)(b) requirement for an appearance to have standing to intervene in a subsequent LUBA appeal challenging the local government's decision following the LUBA remand. For purposes of satisfying the ORS 197.830(7)(b) "appearance" requirement, it does not matter that those persons did not file a brief in the first LUBA appeal. South Gateway Partners v. City of Medford, 53 Or LUBA 593 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. LUBA will assume an applicant's planner has standing to intervene under ORS 197.830(7)(b) on the side of the applicant-petitioner, notwithstanding the planner's failure to allege in his unopposed motion to intervene that he was also an applicant or made an appearance on his own behalf, where there is no dispute that the petitioner has standing and both petitioner and the planner signed the petition for review. Gillette v. Lane County, 52 Or LUBA 1 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. When on remand a local government conducts an evidentiary hearing regarding a modified application, the local government may not restrict participation in the public hearing to parties to the original LUBA appeal. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 52 Or LUBA 509 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. A petitioner appealing a post-acknowledgment plan and land use regulation amendment to LUBA must have "participated" in the proceedings that led to the amendment, whereas a petitioner appealing other kinds of land use decisions only must have "appeared" in the local proceedings. The participation standard is higher than the appearance standard. Ettro v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 567 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Under the first sentence of ORS 197.830(9), which applies to appeals of land use decisions other than post-acknowledgment plan amendments, the 21-day appeal period commences on the date the decision is final. Under the second sentence of ORS 197.830(9), which applies to applies to appeals of post-acknowledgment plan and land use regulation amendments, the notice of intent to appeal must be "filed not later than 21 days after notice of the decision sought to be reviewed is mailed or otherwise submitted to parties entitled to notice under ORS 197.615." Ettro v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 567 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a petitioner files a timely notice of intent to appeal a post-acknowledgment land use regulation amendment within the time prescribed by the second sentence of ORS 197.830(9) but that petitioner did not participate in the local proceedings that led to the challenged decision, that petitioner does not have standing to appeal under the general standing rule that applies to appeals of post-acknowledgment land use regulation amendments. Ettro v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 567 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Without regard to whether a local government erred in doing so, its refusal to allow a person to appear during a land use hearing obviates the ORS 197.830(2) requirement that a petitioner at LUBA must have appeared below. Rice v. City of Monmouth, 52 Or LUBA 780 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a city's land use hearing following a remand by LUBA is a continuation of the proceedings that led to the initial, remanded decision, a party's appearance during the proceedings that led to the initial decision is sufficient to constitute an appearance in the continued proceedings. Rice v. City of Monmouth, 52 Or LUBA 780 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where the local record has not yet been filed, and petitioners assert that when filed the record will show that petitioners appeared before the local government, LUBA will deny as premature a motion to dismiss based on the petitioners' alleged failure to appear. Sommer v. Josephine County, 52 Or LUBA 806 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where an individual represents in a letter that is submitted in a local land use permit proceeding that the letter is submitted "on behalf of" an organization, it is reasonable to infer that the individual is authorized to submit the letter for the organization. Unless there is some reason to question that inference, LUBA will assume the letter constitutes an appearance for the organization. Neighbors 4 Responsible Growth v. City of Veneta, 51 Or LUBA 363 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a party seeks an evidentiary hearing to challenge whether an individual who submitted a letter on behalf of an organization in a local land use permit proceeding was in fact authorized to submit that letter on the organization's behalf, the moving party must provide more than speculation that the individual was not authorized to appear on behalf of the organization. Neighbors 4 Responsible Growth v. City of Veneta, 51 Or LUBA 363 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where an individual who submits a letter in a local land use permit proceeding in which he represents that the letter is submitted "on behalf of" an organization, but the letter does not expressly state that the individual is "authorized" to make the written appearance for the organization, that failure and a party's speculation that such authorization is "implausible" are not sufficient reasons to authorize an evidentiary hearing to consider extra-record evidence regarding whether the individual was actually authorized to appear on behalf of the organization. Neighbors 4 Responsible Growth v. City of Veneta, 51 Or LUBA 363 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a private organization appears during a local land use permit proceeding and later files a LUBA appeal, the fact that the private organization later changes its organizational structure to become a nonprofit corporation does not mean it is not the same person who appeared during the local land use permit proceeding. Neighbors 4 Responsible Growth v. City of Veneta, 51 Or LUBA 363 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. When ORS 197.620(1) was first adopted, the requirement that a person must have "participated" during the local proceedings that led to adoption of a post-acknowledgment plan amendment required that an appellant have done more than make a bare neutral appearance during the local proceedings. Century Properties, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 51 Or LUBA 572 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. The text, context and statutory history of ORS 197.620(1) and ORS 197.830(2) establish that while a bare neutral appearance will satisfy the standing requirement under ORS 197.830(2) that an appellant must have "appeared," such a bare neutral appearance will not satisfy the standing requirement under ORS 197.620(1) that an appellant must have "participated." To have participated under ORS 197.620(2), an appellant must have asserted a position on the merits. Century Properties, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 51 Or LUBA 572 (2006).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. For purposes of standing to appeal to LUBA under ORS 197.830(2), petitioner "appeared" on his own behalf, and not only as a representative of the organization that owns property near the subject property, pursuant to ORS 197.830(2), where petitioner filed the local appeal statement in his own name, the challenged decision identifies petitioner as the local appellant, and petitioner made a statement indicating that he was appearing on his own behalf. Heiller v. Josephine County, 50 Or LUBA 562 (2005).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. The ORS 197.830(7) "appearance" requirement is not satisfied and a motion to intervene will be denied where movant's request to participate in local hearing after the close of the record is denied, and movant does not argue that participation was erroneously denied. Anthony v. Josephine County, 50 Or LUBA 703 (2005).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Absent state or local requirements to the contrary, individuals may appear on behalf of other individuals or artificial entities in local land use proceedings. Neighbors 4 Responsible Growth v. City of Veneta, 50 Or LUBA 745 (2005).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Unless some challenge is made and some reason presented to question a person's claim that he or she is appearing on behalf of another person, an allegation to that effect is sufficient, provided the allegation adequately identifies the person he or she is appearing for. Neighbors 4 Responsible Growth v. City of Veneta, 50 Or LUBA 745 (2005).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. A person's allegation that he is appearing on behalf of a citizen organization's "membership in [the city] and surrounding area" is not sufficient to constitute an appearance on behalf of individual members of the organization. A more precise delineation of the represented persons is required to identify those persons adequately so that the city or any other party who might have grounds for challenging those appearances could do so. Neighbors 4 Responsible Growth v. City of Veneta, 50 Or LUBA 745 (2005).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. A petitioner's decision to rely on a city website that stated the city council meetings generally are held at 7 p.m. does not excuse the petitioner's failure to appear at a 6 p.m. hearing on a variance request where, although petitioner was not entitled to written notice of the hearing, the written notice of the variance hearing accurately stated the hearing would begin at 6 p.m. and was provided to all persons who were entitled to written notice of the hearing. Neighbors 4 Responsible Growth v. City of Veneta, 50 Or LUBA 745 (2005).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss based on a petitioner's failure to allege facts demonstrating her standing to appeal, where the party moving to dismiss alleges facts that demonstrate that petitioner filed a timely notice of intent to appeal and appeared during the local proceedings. Dobson v. City of Newport, 47 Or LUBA 267 (2004).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a city sends notice of a public hearing to adjacent landowners and other interested parties, advises them that the city council will consider a use determination request, and provides for an opportunity to testify and submit written evidence to the city council at the city council meeting, that meeting constitutes a "hearing" within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3) and, therefore, petitioner must have appeared at that meeting in order to have standing to file an appeal at LUBA, as required by ORS 197.830(2). Boly v. City of Portland, 46 Or LUBA 197 (2004).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. The legislature did not contemplate in adopting the standing requirements to appeal to LUBA at ORS 197.830(2) that a local government could "appear" before itself and thereby gain standing to appeal the local government's own decision to LUBA. Multnomah County v. Multnomah County, 46 Or LUBA 365 (2004).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. While it may be possible for a local government to adopt code provisions that allow a department or subdivision within the local government to "appear" before the local government decision maker and establish standing for that department or subdivision to appeal the final land use decision to LUBA for purposes of ORS 197.830(2), the statute does not permit a local government to appeal its own decision and appear before LUBA as both petitioner and respondent. Multnomah County v. Multnomah County, 46 Or LUBA 365 (2004).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a city makes a separate, appealable limited land use decision approving a final subdivision plat, a party's appearance during proceedings that led to the approval of the tentative subdivision plat is not an "appearance" before the local decision maker for purposes of appealing the final subdivision plat decision pursuant to ORS 197.830(2). 6710 LLC v. City of Portland, 45 Or LUBA 136 (2003).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. A city's failure to provide notice of a limited land use decision to a neighboring property owner's attorney does not excuse that property owner's failure to appear before the local decision maker, where there is no dispute that the city mailed notice of the limited land use decision to the address listed for the property in the tax rolls, pursuant to ORS 197.195(3)(b). 6710 LLC v. City of Portland, 45 Or LUBA 136 (2003).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. A petitioner alleging standing to appear before LUBA pursuant to ORS 197.830(5) must either point to evidence in the record that shows that petitioner is adversely affected by the decision, or file a motion requesting that LUBA consider evidence not in the record demonstrating that petitioner is adversely affected. 6710 LLC v. City of Portland, 45 Or LUBA 136 (2003).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. A member of the local governing body who adopted a land use decision is not a person who "appeared" before the local governing body and may not intervene as a party in a LUBA appeal. Roe v. City of Union, 45 Or LUBA 736 (2003).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Under ORS 197.830(2)(b) a petitioner's appearance before the city planning commission is adequate to constitute an appearance before "the local government;" the petitioner need not have appeared before the city council that rendered the final decision following a local appeal of the planning commission decision. Thomas v. City of Veneta, 44 Or LUBA 5 (2003).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. LUBA will reject a challenge to a petitioner's standing based on an allegation that petitioner appeared below as an agent of the property owner and not on its own behalf, where the only evidence cited to support that allegation is a letter from the property owner that does not authorize petitioner to act as an agent of the property owner; petitioner filed the application leading to the challenged decision; and it is clear from the record that petitioner appeared on its own behalf and not the property owner's. Confederated Tribes v. City of Coos Bay, 42 Or LUBA 385 (2002).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. An organization that appears before a hearings officer and county board of commissioners has standing to appeal the county's decision to LUBA under ORS 197.830(2), and need not establish that it also meets the test for representational standing under 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Multnomah Co., 39 Or App 917, 593 P2d 1171 (1979). Central Klamath County CAT v. Klamath County, 40 Or LUBA 111 (2001).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a local government cites no legal requirement that a petitioner must have (1) submitted written opposition to a proposed annexation with a request for public hearing and (2) appeared in person at the public meeting where the city council considered the written opposition and hearing request, LUBA will reject the local government's argument that both a written and personal appearance are required to exhaust local administrative remedies. Cape v. City of Beaverton, 40 Or LUBA 78 (2001).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. ORS 197.830(2), which grants standing to appeal to LUBA if petitioner files a timely appeal to LUBA and appeared during the local proceedings, is not limited to local proceedings that include a public hearing. Where a local government does not provide a public hearing, but provides an opportunity for written appearance, a written appearance is sufficient to confer standing to appeal to LUBA under ORS 197.830(2). Cape v. City of Beaverton, 40 Or LUBA 78 (2001).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a transcript that is attached to a brief in accordance with OAR 661-010-0030(5) shows that a letter signed by petitioners was read to the local decision maker during the proceedings below and that the local decision maker stated that the letter would be made part of the record, the transcript is sufficient to show that petitioners made a written appearance in accordance with ORS 197.830(2) and have standing at LUBA to appeal the local government's decision. Waibel v. Crook County, 40 Or LUBA 67 (2001).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Persons who appeared during local proceedings may intervene in a LUBA appeal on the side of respondent without demonstrating that the appeal will result in any actual damage or harm. Wynnyk v. Jackson County, 39 Or LUBA 500 (2001).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a local government procedure requires each participant in a land use proceeding to establish their status as either a party or a witness, and an individual representing an organization at no point advises the local government that she is appearing on her own behalf as well as on behalf of the organization, LUBA will not presume that the individual has appeared on her own behalf for purposes of ORS 197.830(2)(b). Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 156 (2000).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. The notice of the date of final hearing required by ORS 197.610(1) (1997) and OAR 660-018-0020(1) safeguard the ability of the Department of Land Conservation and Development and other interested parties to participate in proceedings leading up to decisions amending comprehensive plan and code provisions. The failure of a local government to submit notice at least 45 days before the date stated as the final hearing obviates the appearance requirement of ORS 197.830(2) and ORS 197.610(2)(b), even if another hearing is conducted at least 45 days after the submission of notice. OTCNA v. City of Cornelius, 38 Or LUBA 921 (2000).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where proceedings are pending before a lower body, a decision of the governing body to decline review of the lower body's decision in advance of that lower body's decision either (1) is not properly viewed as a separate land use decision, making a separate appearance by intervenors unnecessary, or (2) is so integral to the permit decision, that appearing before the planning commission satisfies the ORS 197.830(6) (1997) appearance requirement. SBA Towers, Inc. v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 1049 (2000).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. An appearance through an attorney during the proceedings before the local government is sufficient to satisfy the appearance requirement as required by ORS 197.830(2). Dowrie v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 998 (1999).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Petitioners have standing to appeal an annexation decision to LUBA when they demonstrate that they appeared before the local government during the proceedings leading up to the challenged decision and that they filed a timely notice of intent to appeal with LUBA. Johnson v. City of La Grande, 37 Or LUBA 380 (1999).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a city was not obliged to permit petitioners, who resided outside city limits, the opportunity to testify at a hearing that was scheduled to allow city residents an opportunity to comment on a proposed annexation pursuant to ORS 222.120, the fact that the city did permit petitioners to appear and present testimony in opposition to the annexation is sufficient to satisfy the "appearance requirement" of ORS 197.830(2). Johnson v. City of La Grande, 37 Or LUBA 380 (1999).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a local government refuses to consider petitioner's letters and refuses petitioner's requests to present testimony during the local proceedings, the appearance requirement of ORS 197.830(2) is obviated. Hugo v. Columbia County, 34 Or LUBA 577 (1998).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Petitioners' letter to the governing body, entered into the local record after the evidentiary hearing was closed but before the final decision was made, is sufficient to establish that petitioners appeared before the local government, where the governing body accepted the letter into the record and did not expressly exclude it. Wolverton v. Crook County, 34 Or LUBA 515 (1998).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a local government provides no prehearing notice of a proposed amendment as required by statute, and thus fails to provide a reasonable description of the nature of the local government's proposed decision, the exception to the appearance requirement set forth in ORS 197.620(2) applies. Casey Jones Well Drilling, Inc. v. City of Lowell, 34 Or LUBA 263 (1998).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. An appeal will be dismissed where petitioner failed to "appear" below and therefore lacks standing to appeal to LUBA. In that circumstance, the LUBA appeal will be dismissed notwithstanding the intervention as a petitioner of a party who did appear below, where that intervenor-petitioner did not also file his own timely notice of intent to appeal. Waters v. Marion County, 33 Or LUBA 751 (1997).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. The question of whether intervenor was a proper party in an earlier local proceeding is determined by the local ordinance governing standing and not the ordinance that regulates the content of materials that may be presented in that proceeding. Where a party appeared during the local proceeding, the party has standing at LUBA under OAR 661-10-050. Evans v. Multnomah County, 33 Or LUBA 555 (1997).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Petitioner's oral statement to the planning director in the planning director's office does not constitute an "appearance before the local government" that would allow petitioner standing to appeal to LUBA under ORS 197.830(2)(b). Field v. Grant County, 32 Or LUBA 346 (1997).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. When a county provides several opportunities for both sides to a dispute to be heard, but does not hold a hearing, as the term is defined in ORS 215.402 and used in ORS 197.830, a petitioner that did not appear earlier has standing to appeal to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3). Boom v. Columbia County, 31 Or LUBA 318 (1996).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. A real estate agency employee's quietly held view, not shared with the local decision makers or the other parties to the local proceedings, that he represents certain persons during those proceedings does not constitute an appearance by those persons for purposes of determining standing to appeal to LUBA. Krieger v. Wallowa County, 31 Or LUBA 96 (1996).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where petitioner identifies himself in eight letters to city planners as the representative of the Forest Park Neighborhood Association, but signs one letter with his own name, and expresses views throughout that are both his own and those of the association, petitioner will be treated, for purposes of standing before LUBA, as having appeared personally in the local proceedings before the city. Rochlin v. City of Portland, 31 Or LUBA 509 (1996).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. When county provides a hearing on appeal of a planning director's decision made without a hearing, but the hearings officer concludes she lacks jurisdiction over the appeal, the county has not provided a hearing on the decision, and petitioner may appeal to LUBA pursuant to ORS 197.830(3). Franklin v. Deschutes County, 30 Or LUBA 33 (1995).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. An appearance by a person before a local government on behalf of an artificial entity does not, of itself, constitute an appearance on behalf of each individual member of that entity. Ramsey v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 763 (1994).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. If a person moving to intervene in a LUBA appeal does not contend (1) the local government failed to follow statutorily required procedures in making the challenged decision and such failure prevented movant from being able to appear below, or (2) the local government improperly refused to allow movant to appear below, the appearance requirement of ORS 197.830(6)(b) is not obviated. Ramsey v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 763 (1994).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Petitioners may appeal a legislative post-acknowledgment amendment to LUBA despite failing to appear during the local proceedings if (1) they requested, in writing, notice of the challenged decision and such notice was not mailed to them more than 21 days before they filed the notice of intent to appeal (ORS 197.830(8)); (2) DLCD's notice of the proposed amendment did not reasonably describe the nature of the local government's final decision (ORS 197.620(2)); or (3) published notice of the local hearing did not reasonably describe the final decision (ORS 197.830(3)). Williams v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 602 (1994).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Local government failure to provide 20 days prior notice of a quasi-judicial land use hearing does not obviate the requirement of ORS 197.830(2)(b) for a local appearance for standing to appeal to LUBA, where petitioner (1) was not entitled to written notice, (2) received oral notice prior to the hearing, (3) attended the hearing, and (4) presented no oral or written testimony before the hearing was closed. Lester v. City of Eugene, 26 Or LUBA 453 (1994).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a local government refused to allow a person to appear during the proceedings below, that person has standing to intervene in a LUBA appeal to challenge the local government's determination that he not be allowed to appear.

However, if the person does not successfully challenge the local government's refusal to allow an appearance below, his motion to intervene will be denied. McKenzie v. Multnomah County, 26 Or LUBA 619 (1993).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a local government denies a person the right to present testimony on her own behalf, that person "appeared" within the meaning of ORS 197.830(6) and OAR 661-10-050(1), at least for the purpose of challenging the local government's decision to limit testimony. Sorte v. City of Newport, 25 Or LUBA 828 (1993).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Local government proceedings conducted after LUBA remand of the initial local government decision, regarding the same application, are a continuation of the initial local government proceedings. Where a petitioner submitted testimony to the local government at some point during the local proceedings, petitioner "appeared before the local government," as required by ORS 197.830(2)(b). DLCD v. Klamath County, 25 Or LUBA 355 (1993).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a challenged decision does not purport to amend an acknowledged plan or land use regulation, the requirement of ORS 197.610(1) for notice to DLCD of a proposed post-acknowledgment amendment is not applicable. In such circumstances, a local government's failure to give DLCD the notice required by ORS 197.610(1) does not obviate the appearance requirement of ORS 197.830(6)(b) for intervention by DLCD in an appeal before LUBA. Heceta Water District v. Lane County, 24 Or LUBA 402 (1993).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. It is not customary for individuals testifying in local land use proceedings to specifically state they are appearing on their own behalf. Where a person submitted written and oral testimony on behalf of an organization of which she is an active member, LUBA will assume the views she offered were her own, as well as the organization's, and therefore will conclude that person "appeared" before the local government. Terra v. City of Newport, 24 Or LUBA 579 (1992).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a county has never entered into any cooperative agreements with special districts pursuant to ORS 197.185(2), what such a cooperative agreement might contain is entirely speculative and, therefore, the lack of such an agreement between the county and a district does not render inapplicable the ORS 197.830(6)(b)(B) "appearance" requirement for intervention in an appeal of a district decision. Adkins v. Heceta Water District, 22 Or LUBA 840 (1992).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Under ORS 197.620(1), a person who submitted oral and written testimony while acting as a consultant in the local government proceedings leading to the adoption of a post-acknowledgment comprehensive plan or land use regulation amendment has standing to appeal that amendment to LUBA. Gray v. Clatsop County, 22 Or LUBA 270 (1991).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where no local hearings are conducted and no notice of the proceeding is provided, it is not possible to appear before the local decision maker and, consequently, it is unnecessary for a potential intervenor to have "appeared" below, as required by ORS 197.830(6)(b), to have standing to intervene in an appeal to LUBA. Weeks v. City of Tillamook, 22 Or LUBA 797 (1991).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. For purposes of establishing standing to intervene in a LUBA appeal under ORS 197.830(6)(a)(B), it is adequate to allege that (1) the persons requesting intervenor status were the property owners below, (2) their signatures or names appeared on the development applications at issue, and (3) the local government held no hearings to enable a more formal appearance. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 787 (1991).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a city fails to provide the statutorily required notice of hearing and hearing or notice of decision and opportunity for local appeal, the "appearance" and "aggrievement" requirements of ORS 197.830(3) for standing to appeal to LUBA do not apply. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 21 Or LUBA 515 (1991).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. "Appearance" is not a requirement for standing to appeal the adoption of a moratorium or corrective program to LUBA. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 20 Or LUBA 565 (1991).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. An appearance in writing before a local government may take the form of a memorandum, letter, petition or other document. However, regardless of the nature of the writing, in order for it to constitute a person's appearance before the local government, it must have been submitted to the local government by or on behalf of that person during the course of the proceedings below. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 20 Or LUBA 546 (1991).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Petitioner's submittal of a letter to the planning commission, in which he opposed the subject application, is sufficient to constitute an appearance during the local proceedings within the meaning of ORS 197.830(2)(b). Cecil v. City of Jacksonville, 19 Or LUBA 446 (1990).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where an organization is the only petitioner in an appeal to LUBA, there is nothing in the record which demonstrates that the organization itself appeared before the local government below and the organization does not claim representational standing on behalf of members who did appear below, the organization lacks standing to seek LUBA review of the local government's decision. East McAndrews Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Medford, 19 Or LUBA 390 (1990).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a county finds applicable approval standards are or can be met and grants first stage PUD approval, but includes a condition that (1) final grading and drainage plans be submitted later, and (2) approval of such plans follow a procedure that does not provide notice or an opportunity for further public involvement, the proper way to challenge the county's decision to proceed in such a manner is to appeal the first stage PUD approval decision. Parties may not fail to challenge that decision and appeal the subsequent approval of the final grading and drainage plans, arguing that such approvals are permits subject to the notice and hearing requirements of ORS 215.416, and that their failure to "appear" or file an appeal of such approvals within 21 days is excused because of the county's failure to observe such notice and hearing requirements. J.P. Finley & Son v. Washington County, 19 Or LUBA 263 (1990).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Giving oral testimony, during the "oral communication" portion of a regular board of county commissioners meeting, which concerns only the appeal to LUBA of an individual farm dwelling permit, does not constitute an appearance in legislative county code update proceedings. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 19 Or LUBA 537 (1990).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. A zone verification is not a statutory land use "permit" as defined at ORS 227.160(2)(b), and the city is not required to provide notice of the decision or opportunity for a local appeal of the decision. However, a zone verification decision is subject to LUBA review and a 21-day appeal period. ORS 227.175(11); ORS 197.830(5)(b). Leyden v. City of Eugene, 79 Or LUBA 151 (2019).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. A zone verification is subject to LUBA's jurisdiction and a person adversely affected by the decision may appeal the decision to LUBA "[w]ithin 21 days of the date a person knew or should have known of the decision where no notice is required." ORS 197.830(5)(b). The city was not obligated to and did not provide notice of the zone verification decision to petitioner. Petitioner was put on inquiry notice of the zone verification decision when the city provided petitioner multiple notices of a subsequent land use application, review, and approval for site review, traffic impact analysis, and adjustment review for the same subject property and development described in the zone verification decision. The city invited petitioner to participate in that subsequent land use action and to review public planning documents at the planning division and online. The appeal was untimely filed and must be dismissed because petitioner failed to make such inquiries and the 21-day appeal period expired before petitioner filed the appeal. Leyden v. City of Eugene, 79 Or LUBA 151 (2019).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. For purposes of the "knew or should have known" standard in ORS 197.830(3)(b) to gain standing to appeal to LUBA, the actual or constructive knowledge of a co-owner of property adjoining development is not imputed as a matter of law to the other co-owner, the petitioner. Grimstad v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 360 (2016).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. For purposes of the "knew or should have known" standard in ORS 197.830(3)(b) to gain standing to appeal to LUBA, the actual or constructive knowledge of a co-owner of property adjoining development is not imputed as a matter of law to the other co-owner, the petitioner. Grimstad v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 360 (2016).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. The presence of surveyor stakes on adjoining property is not sufficient to provide actual or constructive knowledge that a county has issued a lot of record decision for the property, for purposes of the "knew or should have known" standard at ORS 197.830(3)(b), because a property owner may hire a surveyor for reasons that have nothing to do with development or land use approvals. Grimstad v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 360 (2016).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. Where a local government failed to provide DLCD with the notice required by OAR 660-041-0030 within the time set forth in the rule, LUBA will not dismiss an appeal on the grounds that DLCD did not make the required appearance, where DLCD's failure to appear can be attributed to the local government's failure to provide the notice. DLCD v. Deschutes County, 54 Or LUBA 799 (2007).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. Where nothing in a conditional use permit proceeding concerning development of three lots in an existing subdivision is sufficient to put petitioner on notice of the existence of an earlier decision approving reconfiguration of those three lots, petitioner knew or should have known of the challenged reconfiguration decision only when her consultant informed her of the existence of that decision. Borton v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 478 (2006).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. Contrary to dicta in Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 38 Or LUBA 375 (2000), "actual notice" of a decision is provided under ORS 197.830(3)(a) only when the local government provides the written notice of decision required by law. Other circumstances that would lead a reasonable person to know that the local government has made a decision, or that would be sufficient to impute such knowledge, may trigger the 21-day appeal period in ORS 197.830(3)(b) for persons who are not entitled to notice of the decision, but such circumstances are not sufficient to trigger the 21-day deadline in ORS 197.830(3)(a) for persons who are entitled to actual notice of the decision. Frymark v. Tillamook County, 45 Or LUBA 685 (2003).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. Where a local government fails to recognize that it is rendering a permit decision without providing a hearing or the opportunity for a local appeal as required by ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10), ORS 197.830(4) provides the applicable deadline for filing an appeal with LUBA. Neighbors for Sensible Dev. v. City of Sweet Home, 39 Or LUBA 766 (2001).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. ORS 197.830(3)(a) (1997) applies, and a notice of intent to appeal must be filed with LUBA within 21 days after a petitioner receives "actual notice" of a decision, where (1) the city mistakenly fails to realize it should be proceeding under ORS 227.175(10)(a) (1997); (2) the city therefore fails to provide notice to persons who are entitled to receive notice of the decision under ORS 227.175(10)(a) (1997); and (3) no local appeal is available that must be exhausted before appealing to LUBA. Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 38 Or LUBA 375 (2000).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. Petitioners' appeal was timely filed pursuant to the second sentence of ORS 197.830(8) where the city failed to provide notice of the decision to petitioner pursuant to ORS 197.615(2). Petitioners were entitled to notice under ORS 197.615(2) notwithstanding that they requested notice of a limited land use decision rather than a land use decision. Casey Jones Well Drilling, Inc. v. City of Lowell, 34 Or LUBA 263 (1998).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. Petitioners are not entitled to notice of a permit decision and an opportunity for a local appeal as a party adversely affected or aggrieved under ORS 215.416(11)(a), where petitioners only allege they will be adversely affected by solid waste disposal, but the challenged decision approves a waste treatment facility and does not establish, control or limit where the treated waste will be disposed. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 33 Or LUBA 412 (1997).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. The "most recent county property tax assessment roll" to which ORS 197.763(2)(a) refers is the property tax assessment roll, whether printed out or not, that shows, as nearly as possible, the current ownership of each property in the county and that notes any property owner's change of address. Walz v. Polk County, 31 Or LUBA 363 (1996).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. A county may not rely on its failure to update its tax rolls as soon as possible to defeat the purpose of the notice requirement stated in ORS 197.763. Walz v. Polk County, 31 Or LUBA 363 (1996).

24.2.4 Standing – Before LUBA – Right to Notice. ORS 215.416(11)(a), which requires notice and an opportunity for appeal of a decision made without a hearing be provided to "those persons who would have had a right to notice if a hearing had been scheduled or who are adversely affected or aggrieved by the decision," establishes two categories of people to whom notice must be given. Walz v. Polk County, 31 Or LUBA 363 (1996).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Where a local government issues a LUCS for a DEQ permit for a natural gas pipeline, arguments that the local government denied a petitioner an opportunity to argue against the LUCS and that there is a perceived risk of explosion do not establish that the petitioner is "adversely affected" by the LUCS for purposes of ORS 197.830(3) where the petitioner cites no authority for the claim that they had a right to participate in the LUCS decision and where the LUCS does not authorize any development activity. McCaffree v. City of North Bend, 81 Or LUBA 32 (2020).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. A property owner is adversely affected for purposes of ORS 197.830(3) where an impediment to development of property within sight and sound of their property is removed by an interpretation, such as a similar use determination, that applies county-wide and that potentially allows uses in addition to or beyond those listed in the adopted and acknowledged zoning ordinance, even where the zoning ordinance allows for such an interpretation without notice to any property owners or any persons if the interpretation does not relate to a specific property. Jones v. Clackamas County, 80 Or LUBA 1041 (2019).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. A zone verification is subject to LUBA's jurisdiction and a person adversely affected by the decision may appeal the decision to LUBA "[w]ithin 21 days of the date a person knew or should have known of the decision where no notice is required." ORS 197.830(5)(b). The city was not obligated to and did not provide notice of the zone verification decision to petitioner. Petitioner was put on inquiry notice of the zone verification decision when the city provided petitioner multiple notices of a subsequent land use application, review, and approval for site review, traffic impact analysis, and adjustment review for the same subject property and development described in the zone verification decision. The city invited petitioner to participate in that subsequent land use action and to review public planning documents at the planning division and online. The appeal was untimely filed and must be dismissed because petitioner failed to make such inquiries and the 21-day appeal period expired before petitioner filed the appeal. Leyden v. City of Eugene, 79 Or LUBA 151 (2019).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Where the petitioners file a motion to take evidence for LUBA to consider affidavits and other documents to establish that petitioners filed a timely appeal and are adversely affected, along with a reply brief addressing the same jurisdictional issues, petitioners have sufficiently "explain[ed] with particularity" the facts petitioners seek to establish for purposes of OAR 661-010-0045(2)(a). Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 74 Or LUBA 38 (2016).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. While an unsigned or improperly signed declaration of a petitioner asserting facts that go to standing and whether the petitioner is adversely affected may be less persuasive in the face of conflicting evidence than a properly signed declaration, nothing in LUBA's rules requires that such declarations be signed in any particular manner, in order to be considered for the proffered purpose. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 74 Or LUBA 38 (2016).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Notwithstanding a petitioners' failure to identify the location of their property in relation to the property being developed, in order to establish that the decision to approve the development adversely affects petitioners under ORS 197.830(3), allegations that traffic from the development, which includes a 200-unit hotel, will adversely impact the petitioners' use of a narrow rural road for recreation and access to their property are sufficient to establish that the decision adversely affects the petitioners, absent evidence to the contrary. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 74 Or LUBA 38 (2016).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. A petitioner fails to establish that an intergovernmental agreement (IGA) between a city and a county that establishes a county process and review procedure for a road improvement project on a county-owned road located within the city will adversely affect petitioner within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3), where the petitioner argues that the road improvement project, if approved, will adversely affect petitioner, the IGA does not approve the road project or any proposed design or construction and does not apply any city or county approval criteria or standards that may apply to the road project, and allocates responsibility between the city and the county for the planning, design, approval and construction of the road project. MGP X Properties, LLC, LLC v. Washington County 74 Or LUBA 378 (2016).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. A petitioner fails to establish that an intergovernmental agreement (IGA) between a city and a county that establishes a county process and review procedure for a road improvement project located within the city on a county-owned road will adversely affect petitioner within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3), where the petitioner argues that the IGA eliminates petitioner's ability to participate in a city planning process for the road improvement project but petitioner does not take the position that the county planning process is an insufficient forum for petitioner to present its arguments against the road improvement project, explain how the county planning process differs from the city planning process in a way that adversely affects petitioner, or argue that petitioner will be prevented from participating in the county planning process for the road improvement project. MGP X Properties, LLC, LLC v. Washington County 74 Or LUBA 378 (2016).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Persons who own property within sight or sound of property that is the subject of an appeal are presumptively adversely affected by an appealed decision concerning the property. However, a petitioner who claims its property is located "approximately 6,280 feet" from the subject property, and does not claim that its property is within sight or sound, is not presumptively adversely affected by the decision. Pinnacle Alliance Group, LLC v. City of Sisters, 73 Or LUBA 188 (2016).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. To have standing to appeal under ORS 197.830(3), a person must be "adversely affected" by the appealed decision. Petitioner's undeveloped allegations that the use approved by that decision will use the same city road and water systems as petitioner are not sufficient to demonstrate the petitioner will be adversely affected by the use, where petitioner's property is located over a mile away from the approved use. Pinnacle Alliance Group, LLC v. City of Sisters, 73 Or LUBA 188 (2016).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. To have standing to appeal under ORS 197.830(3), a person must be "adversely affected" by the appealed decision. Petitioner's undeveloped allegations that the use approved by that decision will have economic impacts and violates petitioner's due process and equal protection rights lack sufficient specificity to demonstrate the use will have an adverse effect on petitioner. Pinnacle Alliance Group, LLC v. City of Sisters, 73 Or LUBA 188 (2016).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. A petitioner fails to establish that it is "adversely affected" by a land use decision within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3) where the petitioner does not allege any adverse physical effect to its properties from the decision, and the only adverse effect alleged is economic harm to the petitioner as a business operator from business operations that will be conducted on the property that is the subject of the decision. Devin Oil Co. Inc. v. Morrow County, 72 Or LUBA 14 (2015).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. The statutes that confer standing to appeal to LUBA require a petitioner to establish that it has standing to appeal each decision that is made by a local government. The fact that a party may have appeared before the local government in a separate proceeding on a different application does not establish that that party is "adversely affected," within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3), by a different, albeit related, decision on a different application. Devin Oil Co. Inc. v. Morrow County, 72 Or LUBA 14 (2015).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. A party is not "adversely affected" within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3), by a land use decision merely because it requests notice of the decision under the notice provisions of the local government's code. Devin Oil Co. Inc. v. Morrow County, 72 Or LUBA 14 (2015).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. "Adverse affect" within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3) and (5) does not include purely economic effects on a business competitor that will suffer no physical effects from the proposed use of the subject property because it is located more than a hundred miles from the subject property. Schnitzer Steel Industries, Inc. v. City of Eugene, 67 Or LUBA 444 (2013).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Standing to appeal a post-acknowledgment plan amendment to LUBA is governed by ORS 197.620(1), which requires only that the petitioner participate in the proceedings below. No statute governing LUBA requires that petitioners who wish to advance a facial constitutional challenge to an ordinance at LUBA must first demonstrate that the ordinance injures their legally protected interests. Barnes v. City of Hillsboro, 61 Or LUBA 375 (2010).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. The demonstration that must be made to demonstrate adverse affect under ORS 197.830(3) is not the same demonstration that must be made to demonstrate irreparable injury under ORS 197.845(1) to obtain a stay of a land use decision pending appeal at LUBA. The irreparable injury standard is a much more exacting standard. Zirker v. City of Bend, 55 Or LUBA 188 (2007).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Even though a mining operation on the applicant's property may be indistinguishable from mining on adjacent properties that does not mean that there is no adverse effect on petitioner's adjacent property. The cumulative effects of the additional mining may increase the adverse effects on petitioners. Michaels v. Douglas County, 53 Or LUBA 16 (2006).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. A city is adversely affected by a second city's annexation ordinance, within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3), where the first city has annexed some of the same territory that was annexed by the second city and an appeal is pending challenging the first city's annexation ordinance. City of Damascus v. City of Happy Valley, 51 Or LUBA 150 (2006).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Where a county code grants standing to file a local appeal to parties who are "adversely affected" by planning commission decisions, but the local code does not define the term "adversely affected," LUBA will assume the county's intended meaning of that term is consistent with its meaning in other land use laws. As that term is used in the 1979 statute that governed standing to appeal to LUBA, adversely affected means the "decision impinges upon the petitioner's use and enjoyment of his or her property or otherwise detracts from interests personal to the petitioner." Jefferson Landfill Comm. v. Marion Co., 297 Or 280, 283, 686 P2d 310 (1984). Burke v. Crook County, 46 Or LUBA 413 (2004).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Where a local code grants standing to appeal planning commission decisions to parties who are "adversely affected," a county may not limit standing to appeal to the applicant, nearby property owners and persons who testified, where the local code does not clearly adopt that limited interpretation of the term "adversely affected." Burke v. Crook County, 46 Or LUBA 413 (2004).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Voter approval of a initiative that adopts additional impediments to residential development of land that includes petitioner's property is sufficient to render petitioner "adversely affected" by the initiative for purposes of ORS 197.830(3), notwithstanding that petitioner does not currently propose residential development and current zoning does not allow for additional residential development of petitioner's property. Sievers v. Hood River County, 46 Or LUBA 635 (2004).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. For purposes of establishing standing to appeal to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3), petitioners who reside within sight of a disputed sign are presumptively adversely affected. Exactly how the sign affects petitioners and how many times petitioners have seen it are irrelevant considerations under that presumption, and depositions to resolve those matters are not warranted. Frymark v. Tillamook County, 45 Or LUBA 685 (2003).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Depositions of two petitioners to inquire into their allegations that they are adversely affected by the challenged decision for purposes of ORS 197.830(3) are not warranted, where the movant fails (1) to specifically controvert those allegations, and (2) to establish that depositions of two petitioners are likely to affect the outcome of LUBA's review proceeding. Frymark v. Tillamook County, 45 Or LUBA 685 (2003).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Under Utsey v. Coos County, 176 Or App 524, 32 P3d 933 (2001), a party seeking judicial review of a LUBA decision under ORS 197.850(1), in addition to meeting the statutory standing requirements, must also establish that the Court of Appeals' decision will have a practical effect on the appealing party's rights. LUBA is an executive branch agency rather than a court. Therefore, the standing requirements to appeal a local government land use decision to LUBA are established by ORS 197.830; and the statute does not require that the appellant establish that LUBA's decision will have a practical effect on the appellant. Doob v. Josephine County, 41 Or LUBA 569 (2001).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. A petitioner's undisputed claim that he owns property adjoining the property on which a proposed waste water processing facility will be located and is therefore within sight and sound of the proposed facility is sufficient to establish that the petitioner is adversely affected by the proposal. Farrell v. Jackson County, 39 Or LUBA 149 (2000).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Petitioner's allegations that a decision extending approval for an RV park expansion to be constructed partially on fill in a floodplain will exacerbate flooding and traffic problems on the road that serves petitioner's property and that the development will harm fishing in an adjoining creek where petitioner fishes are sufficient to demonstrate that petitioner is adversely affected by the decision. Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 38 Or LUBA 375 (2000).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. LUBA will consider supplemental affidavits, submitted after oral argument in support of petitioners' standing, where the parties' arguments did not focus on the theory of standing supported by the affidavits and the facts asserted in the affidavits are not disputed. In that circumstance, an evidentiary hearing is not required for LUBA to consider the affidavits. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 634 (1998).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Whether a person is "adversely affected" within the meaning of ORS 215.416(11)(a) is a fact-specific inquiry that depends upon the nature of the development and its externalities, the proximity of the person's property to the development, and any factors regarding the person's property or activities thereon that render the property more or less susceptible to impacts from the development. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 634 (1998).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Merely because a person owns property from which he can see or hear a proposed development does not necessarily render that person adversely affected by the decision. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 634 (1998).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Petitioners demonstrate they are adversely affected by a sewage treatment facility, where there is no attempt to rebut petitioners' allegations that they are adversely affected because they are within "sight and smell" of the facility and petitioners also allege "direct, specific, tangible and negative impacts" from the proposed facility. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 634 (1998).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Where a county makes a permit decision without a hearing and fails to send the notice of decision required by ORS 215.416(11)(a) to persons "adversely affected" by the decision, such adversely affected persons have standing to appeal to LUBA within 21 days of actual notice of the decision. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 634 (1998).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Where the procedure followed by the county to approve a permit only provided the applicant a right to participate or appeal, the county may not rely on ORS 215.416(11)(a) to contend petitioner lacks standing to appeal because petitioner is not "adversely affected." Hugo v. Columbia County, 34 Or LUBA 577 (1998).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Although a lot line adjustment only has intangible impacts, those impacts may nevertheless adversely affect proximate property owners. Persons within sight or sound of property are presumptively adversely affected by a property line adjustment decision affecting the property. Goddard v. Jackson County, 34 Or LUBA 402 (1998).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. A party may not claim standing before LUBA exclusive of all other parties on the grounds that it is the only party adversely affected by a local decision. Purdy v. City of Shady Cove, 33 Or LUBA 331 (1997).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. When challenged decision requires that some of petitioners' property be acquired and dedicated as a road, petitioners are "adversely affected" and have standing under ORS 197.830(3). Franklin v. Deschutes County, 30 Or LUBA 33 (1995).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Persons within sight and sound of a development proposal are presumed to be adversely affected by it. Kamppi v. City of Salem, 21 Or LUBA 498 (1991).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Statements that petitioners' interests in developing their property are substantially impaired by local government adoption of a corrective program which will not correct the problem justifying a previously adopted moratorium, and will create a situation in which there is no foreseeable end to that moratorium, are adequate to allege petitioners have interests which are substantially affected by the adopted corrective program. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 21 Or LUBA 214 (1991).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Where petitioner's affidavit in support of standing includes allegations concerning economic impact of the challenged decision on his law practice and is the only testimony or evidence in the record specifically addressing the alleged economic injury, the allegations in the affidavit are sufficient to establish standing based on the alleged economic impact. Seto v. Tri-Met, 21 Or LUBA 185 (1991).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. Allegations that (1) petitioners have ownership interests in land which is subject to an adopted moratorium on new construction, and (2) the moratorium prevents petitioners from developing such land for purposes for which it is zoned, are sufficient to demonstrate that petitioners' interests are substantially affected by the moratorium and, therefore, petitioners have standing to appeal the adoption of the moratorium to LUBA. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 21 Or LUBA 149 (1991).

24.2.5 Standing – Before LUBA – Adverse Effect. An allegation that a person is adversely affected by the appeal of a land use decision to LUBA does not satisfy the standing requirement of ORS 197.830(2)(1987) that an appellant be adversely affected by the land use decision. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 19 Or LUBA 537 (1990).

24.2.6 Standing – Before LUBA – Aggrievement. Where a local government procedure requires each participant in a land use proceeding to establish their status as either a party or a witness, and an individual representing an organization at no point advises the local government that she is appearing on her own behalf as well as on behalf of the organization, LUBA will not presume that the individual has appeared on her own behalf for purposes of ORS 197.830(2)(b). Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 156 (2000).

24.2.6 Standing – Before LUBA – Aggrievement. A county's code cannot define which participants in a land use proceeding are "aggrieved" by a land use decision, within the meaning of ORS 215.416, more restrictively than the statute. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 156 (2000).

24.2.6 Standing – Before LUBA – Aggrievement. A county errs in denying the opportunity for local appeal of a permit approval on the grounds that the petitioner is not "aggrieved" by the county's decision within the meaning of ORS 215.416(11), where petitioner is an organization interested in the correct application of the county's land use laws and it appeared before the county to oppose the county's approval. That petitioner is a recently formed organization and appears for the first time before the county is not a basis to conclude that petitioner is not aggrieved by the county's decision. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 156 (2000).

24.2.6 Standing – Before LUBA – Aggrievement. Amendments adopted in 1989 to ORS 197.830 eliminated the requirement that a petitioner be "adversely affected" or "aggrieved" to have standing to appeal a land use decision to LUBA. Pacific Western Co. v. Lincoln County, 32 Or LUBA 317 (1997).

24.2.6 Standing – Before LUBA – Aggrievement. Where the local code provides that any interested person may appear in a land use hearing and that any person appearing on the record has standing and is a party to the proceeding, and petitioners appeared and asserted a position on the merits contrary to the challenged decision, petitioners are "aggrieved" by the challenged decision. Schob v. Deschutes County, 24 Or LUBA 147 (1992).

24.2.6 Standing – Before LUBA – Aggrievement. Where a city fails to provide the statutorily required notice of hearing and hearing or notice of decision and opportunity for local appeal, the "appearance" and "aggrievement" requirements of ORS 197.830(3) for standing to appeal to LUBA do not apply. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 21 Or LUBA 515 (1991).

24.2.6 Standing – Before LUBA – Aggrievement. Where the local code makes no distinction among "interested persons," "disinterested witnesses," and "parties," any person who appears at a local hearing is recognized as an "interested person" who could be aggrieved by the local decision. Lowrie v. Polk County, 19 Or LUBA 564 (1990).

24.2.8 Standing – Before LUBA – Legislative Decision. Standing to appeal a post-acknowledgment plan amendment to LUBA is governed by ORS 197.620(1), which requires only that the petitioner participate in the proceedings below. No statute governing LUBA requires that petitioners who wish to advance a facial constitutional challenge to an ordinance at LUBA must first demonstrate that the ordinance injures their legally protected interests. Barnes v. City of Hillsboro, 61 Or LUBA 375 (2010).

24.2.8 Standing – Before LUBA – Legislative Decision. Where a local government adopts plan or land use regulation amendments but fails to provide the Department of Land Conservation and Development with timely notice as required by ORS 197.610(1), the Department or any other person has standing to appeal the decision to LUBA notwithstanding failure to appear before the local government. Home Depot, Inc. v. City of Beaverton, 37 Or LUBA 1020 (2000).

24.2.8 Standing – Before LUBA – Legislative Decision. Petitioners' appeal was timely filed pursuant to the second sentence of ORS 197.830(8) where the city failed to provide notice of the decision to petitioners pursuant to ORS 197.615(2). Petitioners were entitled to notice under ORS 197.615(2) notwithstanding that they requested notice of a limited land use decision rather than a land use decision. Casey Jones Well Drilling, Inc. v. City of Lowell, 34 Or LUBA 263 (1988).

24.2.8 Standing – Before LUBA – Legislative Decision. Petitioners may appeal a legislative post-acknowledgment amendment to LUBA despite failing to appear during the local proceedings if (1) they requested, in writing, notice of the challenged decision and such notice was not mailed to them more than 21 days before they filed the notice of intent to appeal (ORS 197.830(8)); (2) DLCD's notice of the proposed amendment did not reasonably describe the nature of the local government's final decision (ORS 197.620(2)); or (3) published notice of the local hearing did not reasonably describe the final decision (ORS 197.830(3)). Williams v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 602 (1994).

24.2.8 Standing – Before LUBA – Legislative Decision. Where a local government's final decision is not to adopt a legislative amendment to its acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations, ORS 197.830(2) and ORS 197.620(1) deny standing to appeal such a final decision to LUBA. ODOT v. Klamath County, 25 Or LUBA 761 (1993).

24.2.8 Standing – Before LUBA – Legislative Decision. Giving oral testimony, during the "oral communication" portion of a regular board of county commissioners meeting, which concerns only the appeal to LUBA of an individual farm dwelling permit, does not constitute an appearance in legislative county code update proceedings. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 19 Or LUBA 537 (1990).

24.2.9 Standing – Before LUBA – Limitations on. Where LUBA issues an interlocutory order approving or denying a motion to intervene, an appeal of LUBA's Final Opinion and Order to the Oregon Court of Appeals would allow challenge to that interlocutory order. Where the contested motion to intervene is briefed and ripe for resolution, delaying the resolution of the motion would unnecessarily prejudice the other parties, and complicate final resolution of the appeal by allowing a person LUBA has determined lacks standing to intervene to file a petition for review. Conte v. City of Eugene, 76 Or LUBA 498 (2017).

24.2.9 Standing – Before LUBA – Limitations on. After the petitioner withdraws from an appeal, any intervenor-petitioner who has not timely filed a separate notice of intent to appeal may not continue the appeal, and the appeal must be dismissed. Marylhurst Neighborhood Assoc. v. City of West Linn, 52 Or LUBA 612 (2006).

24.2.9 Standing – Before LUBA – Limitations on. Standing to appeal to LUBA is a matter of state law, and a local government cannot adopt code provisions that purport to enlarge or diminish the requirements for establishing standing to appeal to LUBA. Multnomah County v. Multnomah County, 46 Or LUBA 365 (2004).

24.2.9 Standing – Before LUBA – Limitations on. The legislature did not contemplate in adopting the standing requirements to appeal to LUBA at ORS 197.830(2) that a local government could "appear" before itself and thereby gain standing to appeal the local government's own decision to LUBA. Multnomah County v. Multnomah County, 46 Or LUBA 365 (2004).

24.2.9 Standing – Before LUBA – Limitations on. While it may be possible for a local government to adopt code provisions that allow a department or subdivision within the local government to "appear" before the local government decision maker and establish standing for that department or subdivision to appeal the final land use decision to LUBA for purposes of ORS 197.830(2), the statute does not permit a local government to appeal its own decision and appear before LUBA as both petitioner and respondent. Multnomah County v. Multnomah County, 46 Or LUBA 365 (2004).

24.2.9 Standing – Before LUBA – Limitations on. A party attempting to intervene in a LUBA appeal need only have appeared before the local government and file a timely motion to intervene with LUBA. Unlike petitioners before LUBA, there is no requirement that intervenors have exhausted all administrative remedies below. Comrie v. City of Pendleton, 45 Or LUBA 758 (2003).

24.2.9 Standing – Before LUBA – Limitations on. ORS 197.805 can be read in isolation to suggest that LUBA must apply the "practical effect" limitation on the judicial power described in Utsey v. Coos County, 176 Or App 524, 32 P3d 933 (2001), as a "sound principle of judicial review." However, read in context with ORS 197.830, it is clear that the legislature did not intend to require that petitioners invoking LUBA's review under ORS 197.830(2) establish that the challenged decision impacts their interests. Central Klamath County CAT v. Klamath County, 41 Or LUBA 524 (2002).

24.2.10 Standing – Before LUBA – State Agencies. Where a local government failed to provide DLCD with the notice required by OAR 660-041-0030 within the time set forth in the rule, LUBA will not dismiss an appeal on the grounds that DLCD did not make the required appearance, where DLCD's failure to appear can be attributed to the local government's failure to provide the notice. DLCD v. Deschutes County, 54 Or LUBA 799 (2007).

24.3 Standing – Representational. The inclusion of a party's name and address in a list of residents who "endorse" a report that was prepared by opponents to a project application, which includes a complete list of residents in the project area, and states that "100% of the residents * * * do not support" the project, and designates various individuals as "lead authors" and "supporting authors," but which does not list the party in question as one of the authors, is not sufficient to constitute an "appearance" for purposes of ORS 197.830(7)(b)(B). The party's intent regarding the inclusion of her name in the report is irrelevant; to demonstrate an appearance, the party must submit a document or oral testimony that the local government would reasonably recognize as an appearance by that party. Conte v. City of Eugene, 76 Or LUBA 498 (2017).

24.3 Standing – Representational. Where an entity named "Shepherdsfield Ministries" moves to intervene in an appeal to LUBA, but the entity fails to establish that it appeared during the proceedings below under that name, or that it has met the requirements for representational or organizational standing, the entity has not established standing to intervene. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 664 (2016).

24.3 Standing – Representational. Where a principal or owner in a corporation appears in a local proceeding by submitting a letter on corporate letterhead, but the letter is phrased in the first person singular and appears to set out the views of the principal in his individual capacity, LUBA will presume that the letter constitutes an individual appearance as well as a representative appearance on behalf of the corporation. Pliska v. Umatilla County, 61 Or LUBA 429 (2010).

24.3 Standing – Representational. An organization that appears before a hearings officer and county board of commissioners has standing to appeal the county's decision to LUBA under ORS 197.830(2), and need not establish that it also meets the test for representational standing under 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Multnomah Co., 39 Or App 917, 593 P2d 1171 (1979). Central Klamath County CAT v. Klamath County, 40 Or LUBA 111 (2001).

24.3 Standing – Representational. Where a local government procedure requires each participant in a land use proceeding to establish their status as either a party or a witness, and an individual representing an organization at no point advises the local government that she is appearing on her own behalf as well as on behalf of the organization, LUBA will not presume that the individual has appeared on her own behalf for purposes of ORS 197.830(2)(b). Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 156 (2000).

24.3 Standing – Representational. The fact that a neighborhood association did not exist on the date of the challenged local decision does not, of itself, preclude its standing; an organization that was not in existence at the time of a land use decision may assert standing to represent the interests of members who would have standing in their own right. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 33 Or LUBA 761 (1997).

24.3 Standing – Representational. An unincorporated association formed after the appealed decision was rendered cannot satisfy statutory "appearance" and "aggrievement" requirements and, therefore, may only assert representational standing to represent the interests of its members who satisfy the statutory standing requirements. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 22 Or LUBA 390 (1991).

24.3 Standing – Representational. To establish representational standing, an organization must show that (1) its members have standing to sue in their own right, (2) neither the claim asserted nor the relief sought requires the participation of individual members in the lawsuit, and (3) the interests the organization seeks to protect are germane to the organization's purpose. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 21 Or LUBA 611 (1991).

24.3 Standing – Representational. The principles applicable to determining whether an organization has representational standing to appeal a decision to LUBA are also applicable to determining whether an organizational petitioner acting in its representational capacity is deemed to have actual notice for purposes of calculating the time for filing the notice of intent to appeal under ORS 197.830(3). Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 21 Or LUBA 611 (1991).

24.3 Standing – Representational. Where one of a petitioner organization's members did not receive actual notice of a land use decision more than 21 days prior to the time the notice of intent to appeal was filed, an evidentiary hearing to establish that other individual members of the organization or the organization's board of directors had actual notice of the challenged decision more than 21 days before the challenged decision was made, is not warranted. Even if other members received such actual notice, petitioner's notice of intent to appeal in its representational capacity would be timely. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 21 Or LUBA 611 (1991).

24.3 Standing – Representational. Where an organizational petitioner timely files a notice of intent to determine in its representational capacity, it is only necessary to determine whether petitioner also filed the notice of intent to appeal within 21 days of the date it, as an organization, is deemed to have actual notice of the challenged decision, if there were a dispute concerning the member's standing upon whom petitioner's representational capacity to bring the appeals and its representational standing depend. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 21 Or LUBA 611 (1991).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. Where a local government requires opponents to be represented at a hearing by one spokesperson, their attorney, and prohibits oral testimony from the opponents themselves, and where the local government makes express and repeated findings that the opponents' written testimony is not credible or not supported when viewed through the "obscured" lens of the local government's judgement of the opponents' attorney's credibility, LUBA will conclude that the local government's procedure prejudiced the opponents' substantial rights to submit their case and to receive a full and fair hearing. Schrepel v. Yamhill County, 81 Or LUBA 895 (2020).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. Where a prior decision approved a plan amendment and zone change for the subject property and included a condition of approval limiting the type of future development to a "retail shopping center" and the size of future development to a certain square footage of gross leasable area, but where the prior decision approved no specific development, voluntary descriptions, statements, or representations made by the applicant during the prior proceeding regarding the particular store with which the shopping center would be developed are not binding on the applicant in a subsequent site plan review proceeding unless they were memorialized in conditions of approval for the prior decision. M & T Partners, Inc. v. City of Salem, 80 Or LUBA 221 (2019).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. A county ordinance that adopts a text amendment to a comprehensive plan that discontinues a coastal advisory committee that is provided for in the comprehensive plan, and replaces it with a process for "appointing advisory committees to address specific land use issues" does not violate the requirements of Statewide Planning Goal 1 (Citizen Involvement) to provide for "clearly define[d] * * * procedures by which the general public will be involved in the on-going land-use planning process" and for the "continuity of citizen participation and of information that enables citizens to identify and comprehend issues." Oregon Coast Alliance v. Clatsop County, 75 Or LUBA 277 (2017).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H) is silent regarding what procedures a local government may apply to a request for a land use compatibility statement (LUCS). LUBA's conclusion that a LUCS decision is excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction does not mean that the county lacked "land use jurisdiction" to process the LUCS request pursuant to land use procedures that provide for local appeal. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 103 (2015).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. Under ORS 192.660(2)(H), a city may consult with legal counsel to determine whether it should limit the subjects on which it will allow the presentation of additional evidence following a LUBA remand. Rosenzweig v. City of McMinnville, 66 Or LUBA 164 (2012).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. In the limited circumstance in which an applicant has withdrawn an application that led to a decision that is pending before LUBA, a local government could, consistent with Standard Insurance Co. v. Washington County, 17 Or LUBA 647, 660, rev'd on other grounds, 97 Or App 687, 776 P2d 1315 (1989), adopt a new land use decision that revokes the decision that has been appealed to and is pending before LUBA. That new decision would likely have the effect of rendering the pending appeal of the previous decision moot. Jacobsen v. Douglas County, 62 Or LUBA 461 (2010).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. The failure of a local government to provide LUBA with the entire local record does not in itself require remand. However, where the record is so inadequate that LUBA cannot adequately review the decision, the local government's failure to provide the whole record may result in remand. McCulloh v. City of Jacksonville, 49 Or LUBA 345 (2005).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. ORS 215.185 and ORS 197.825(3)(a) do not provide the exclusive procedures by which a county may enforce its zoning ordinance to require that property owners stop using their property in a way that the county believes violates its zoning ordinance. Cookman v. Marion County, 44 Or LUBA 630 (2003).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. Where a local ordinance limits appeals of local land use decisions to "land use decisions" as that term is defined in the local ordinance, a petitioner is not entitled to a local appeal where petitioner fails to demonstrate that the decision he wishes to appeal is a "land use decision" within the city's definition of the term. Robinson v. City of Silverton, 40 Or LUBA 159 (2001).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. Where petitioner submits a letter to the city that expresses an opinion concerning the elevation of petitioner's property but provides no evidence to support that opinion, the city's failure to object to the opinion in the letter does not constitute a waiver of the city's right to disagree with petitioner's opinion at a later time. Rivera v. City of Bandon, 38 Or LUBA 736 (2000).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. Where prior dealings between petitioner and city building officials concerning the elevation of native grade on petitioner's property simply show there was confusion about the issue, the city is not estopped from taking a position contrary to petitioner's regarding the location of native grade. Rivera v. City of Bandon, 38 Or LUBA 736 (2000).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. A city is not estopped from finding that a dwelling exceeds a code-mandated 28-foot height limit where a city building official approved the plans for the proposed dwelling, but the city building official who approved the plans did not have the authority to authorize a dwelling in excess of 28 feet. Rivera v. City of Bandon, 38 Or LUBA 736 (2000).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. A county does not commit a procedural error where local ordinances allow the county to call up a hearings officer decision and refer it back for reconsideration without first providing an opportunity for a hearing. A party is not prejudiced by such a summary procedure where it is provided an opportunity to appeal the hearings officer's decision on reconsideration. R/C Pilots Association v. Marion County, 33 Or LUBA 532 (1997).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. The failure of a city council expressly to consider denial of an application is not a basis for reversal or remand when the city council concluded the record supported approval. Brown v. City of Ontario, 33 Or LUBA 180 (1997).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. A city does not err by adopting an alternative decision on the merits in addition to dismissing a local appeal, where petitioner is not prejudiced by the alternative decision. Shaffer v. City of Salem, 33 Or LUBA 57 (1997).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. Where petitioner appealed a planning director determination that a solid waste transfer station is an outright permitted use in a particular zone, the city was neither required nor authorized to expand the scope of the local appeal hearing to include consideration of whether a solid waste transfer station is also an appropriate use in that zone. Pend-Air Citizen's Comm. v. City of Pendleton, 29 Or LUBA 362 (1995).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. A local government does not violate Goal 1 or comprehensive plan policies implementing Goal 1 by adopting a decision six weeks after the final planning staff report is available, where a great deal of citizen involvement and participation preceded issuance of the final staff report. Friends of Cedar Mill v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 477 (1995).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. A local government adjustment committee's failure to adopt written rules of procedure is a procedural error and provides a basis for reversal or remand only if petitioners' substantial rights are violated. Edwards v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 262 (1994).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. That a stipulation concerning the applicability of a local government's land use regulations to certain property is entered into by the local government and a property owner outside the confines of a land use proceeding and without following the procedures required for land use decision making does not make the decision any less a land use decision. DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. There is no basis for the application of the "exclusionary rule," which applies to criminal proceedings, to local land use proceedings. Choban v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 572 (1993).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. There is no general legal requirement that petitioners be provided an opportunity to rebut proposed local government findings. Adler v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 546 (1993).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. Claim preclusion applies to preclude relitigation of a claim that has been litigated. Where a party's claim of a vested right to residential use of certain property was determined in a circuit court judgment, to which the local government and other parties to the LUBA appeal were also parties, the local government is precluded from making a new determination on that vested right claim, even if it would otherwise have jurisdiction to do so. Joines v. Linn County, 24 Or LUBA 456 (1993).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. In the absence of a specific provision in the local code to the contrary, there is no general requirement that a party have an opportunity to object to proposed findings submitted to the local decision maker by the prevailing party in a local land use proceeding. Adler v. City of Portland, 24 Or LUBA 1 (1992).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. Where the maximum penalty for each separate violation of an ordinance is 500 dollars, and there is no possibility of imprisonment for violating the ordinance, the penalties provided by the ordinance are civil, not criminal, in nature. Therefore, a vagueness challenge based solely on the constitutional vagueness analysis applied where criminal sanctions are possible, provides no basis for reversal or remand of such ordinance Cope v. City of Cannon Beach, 23 Or LUBA 233 (1992).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. Where petitioners are afforded a de novo evidentiary hearing before a hearings officer, and where petitioners had an adequate opportunity to explain to the hearings officer why the planning department decision appealed from was wrong, that the planning department decision may have been based on erroneous assumptions provides no basis for reversal or remand of the hearings officer's decision. Ralston v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 573 (1992).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. A local code provision requiring that only members of the board of commissioners reviewing the entire record may act on a matter under review does not impose an affirmative obligation on each county commissioner to demonstrate he or she reviewed the entire record. Absent some indication in the record to the contrary, LUBA will assume a county commissioner performed her duties in accordance with the local code provision. Toth v. Curry County, 22 Or LUBA 488 (1991).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. Although a local decision maker is required to consider and weigh all relevant evidence before it in making its decision, it is not required to refer to all evidence considered in its findings. Angel v. City of Portland, 21 Or LUBA 1 (1991).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. City charter requirement for a majority vote of the governing body (as opposed to a majority vote of a quorum) is to be given effect and may leave a quorum of the governing body unable to achieve the required majority vote. Strawn v. City of Albany, 20 Or LUBA 344 (1990).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. It is not error for a governing body to provide a lower local tribunal with a memorandum in the nature of a declaratory ruling interpreting certain code provisions while an application to which those code provisions apply is pending before the lower tribunal. Even if it were a procedural error, there would be no prejudice if petitioners had an adequate opportunity in a local appeal to address the interpretation and applicability of the code provisions in question before the governing body. Hoffman v. City of Lake Oswego, 20 Or LUBA 64 (1990).

25.1 Local Government Procedures – Generally. A city charter provision delaying the effective date of an ordinance does not also delay the date the ordinance becomes a final decision subject to appeal to LUBA. Club Wholesale v. City of Salem, 19 Or LUBA 576 (1990).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Neither the filing of an injunctive and declaratory action in circuit court seeking to require that uses which are in violation of applicable land use regulations be removed and that a site be restored to its former state, nor an appeal to the Court of Appeals of the circuit court's denial of such relief divests a local government of authority to process land use applications which seek approval of the challenged uses. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 79 Or LUBA 380 (2019).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where a city code provides that a property owner must, as a condition of permit or partition approval, either provide the improvements or pay into an improvement fund if a street adjoining property without direct access to the street does not have standard full-width improvements, and petitioner argues that the code provision is not applicable to his proposed property partition, LUBA will sustain, in part, petitioner's challenge upon remand from the Court of Appeals, where the arguments on appeal have evolved and it is apparent that remand is necessary for the hearings officer to adopt findings regarding LUBA's underlying conclusion that the hearings officer was correct in concluding that the condition requiring a waiver of remonstrance against a street or stormwater facility improvement was justified under Clark v. City of Albany, 31 Or LUBA 375, 380, aff'd, 144 Or App 192, 924 P2d 877 (1966), and did not constitute a taking. Hill v. City of Portland, 78 Or LUBA 334 (2018).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. The statute of limitations in ORS 131.125(8)(c) is inapplicable to a county's separate land use enforcement proceeding procedures pursuant to a county code that does not contain any time limitation for enforcement actions for violations of the county's land use code, because the county has authority over land use code enforcement matters independent from any statutorily derived authority in ORS Title 14 pursuant to county charter, and because ORS 153.030(4) expressly provides that "[n]othing in this chapter affects the ability of any other political subdivision of this state to provide for the administrative enforcement of the charter, ordinances, rules and regulations of the political subdivision, including enforcement through imposition of monetary penalties." A Walk on the Wild Side v. Washington County, 78 Or LUBA 356 (2018).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. While a local government may not generally be required to expand the scope of remand to include new issues that could not have been raised during the initial proceedings, where on remand a new issue is raised regarding the continuing jurisdiction of the local government to process the underlying zone change application, the local government has an obligation to address the jurisdictional issue. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where a property owner whose property is subject to a rezoning application withdraws consent to the zone change, that withdrawal of consent may be effective to deprive a county of jurisdiction to proceed on the zone change application, even if it is possible that a circuit court will ultimately determine that the nonconsenting property owner is contractually obligated to support the zone change by contracts entered into by their predecessor-in-interest. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Standard Insurance Co. v. Washington County, 17 Or LUBA 647 (1989), holds that a local government lacks jurisdiction to modify a decision that is currently on appeal to LUBA or the Court of Appeals. However, Standard Insurance Co. does not prohibit a local government from commencing local proceedings to modify a condition of approval of a decision that is on appeal to LUBA, as long as the final decision adopting the modification is issued after all appeals of the original decision have been concluded. Foland v. Jackson County, 70 Or LUBA 247 (2014).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where a county code requires that the application be deemed denied on a tie vote, unless the planning commission members present at the hearing vote to reschedule the deliberation, but the planning commission does not vote to reschedule the deliberation until a subsequent hearing which does not include all of the same members present at the initial hearing, the planning commission may have committed procedural error. However, absent code language to the contrary, that procedural error does not deprive the planning commission of jurisdiction or authority to conduct a second vote on the application. McLaughlin v. Douglas County, 70 Or LUBA 314 (2014).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. When LUBA remands a land use decision, absent some authority to the contrary the decision becomes ineffective, and remains ineffective unless and until the local government takes action on remand to re-adopt the decision or otherwise render the decision or portions of it effective. Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 68 Or LUBA 162 (2013).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Even if a local government lacks authority under its code to modify the location of a driveway allowed under a previous permit approval, and can only modify express conditions of permit approval, petitioner does not demonstrate error where the permit included an express condition of approval limiting the use to that proposed by the applicant, including the location of the driveway, and thus modifying the location is a modification of the condition of approval. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 62 Or LUBA 329 (2010).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. In the limited circumstance in which an applicant has withdrawn an application that led to a decision that is pending before LUBA, a local government could, consistent with Standard Insurance Co. v. Washington County, 17 Or LUBA 647, 660, rev'd on other grounds, 97 Or App 687, 776 P2d 1315 (1989), adopt a new land use decision that revokes the decision that has been appealed to and is pending before LUBA. That new decision would likely have the effect of rendering the pending appeal of the previous decision moot. Jacobsen v. Douglas County, 62 Or LUBA 461 (2010).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. An application that is incomplete on the one hundred and eighty-first day after it has been submitted becomes void where the applicant has not taken one of the steps enumerated in ORS 228.178(4)(a) through (c). A city exceeds its jurisdiction when it thereafter approves such an application. Painter v. City of Redmond, 56 Or LUBA 311 (2008).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where a hearings officer's authority to issue a declaratory ruling has not been properly invoked, the hearings officer has no authority to issue the ruling, and the erroneous exercise of that authority is not accurately characterized as a mere procedural error that may be overlooked absent a demonstration of prejudice to the petitioner's substantial rights. Cushman v. City of Bend, 55 Or LUBA 234 (2007).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Absent a code provision to the contrary, a governing body does not exceed its authority in an appeal of a planning commission decision by approving a modification of the development application that the planning commission did not consider, and does not commit procedural error in doing so if all participants were provided an opportunity to present argument and evidence on the proposed modification. O'Rourke v. Union County, 54 Or LUBA 614 (2007).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A hearings officer had authority to issue a declaratory ruling interpreting a condition of approval in a prior decision, where the code allows a declaratory ruling when there is "doubt or a dispute" as to the meaning of a permit decision, and the condition of approval at issue was ambiguous regarding what components of the development must be located within a defined area. Chackel Family Trust v. City of Bend, 53 Or LUBA 385 (2007).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A failure to appeal an ambiguous condition of approval does not preclude the applicant from seeking a declaratory ruling regarding the meaning of the condition, under a code provision allowing such declaratory rulings if it is not a "substitute for appeal," where no party recognized the potential ambiguity until long after the appeal period had run. Chackel Family Trust v. City of Bend, 53 Or LUBA 385 (2007).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A hearings officer had authority to modify a prior permit's condition of approval requiring a perimeter fence, notwithstanding a code provision that prohibits a modification that is a "substitute for an appeal," where the requested modification is to approve a different fence location following a court order two years after the permit decision, and thus the modification could not have been the subject of an appeal. Chackel Family Trust v. City of Bend, 53 Or LUBA 385 (2007).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. ORS 223.930(1) does not require that a city, rather than a subdivision developer, construct public street improvements, in order to exercise its condemnation authority to acquire the street right-of-way. Butte Conservancy v. City of Gresham, 52 Or LUBA 550 (2006).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. When a city issues a variance to applicable driveway distance requirements while an approval of a previously issued driveway permit is on appeal to LUBA, the variance does not modify the driveway permit decision. Because the variance decision does not modify the earlier driveway permit decision, it does not run afoul of the jurisdictional principle in Standard Insurance Co. v. Washington County, 17 Or LUBA 647, rev'd on other grounds, 97 Or App 687, 776 P2d 1315 (1989). Delk v. City of Salem, 51 Or LUBA 123 (2006).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. When local government counsel denies a local appeal and returns the appeal fee, unless the local government takes some action to disavow its counsel's actions, LUBA will assume counsel had authority to take the actions. Wells v. Yamhill County, 51 Or LUBA 659 (2006).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where a city council exercises its authority to review a decision of a hearings officer granting approval of site development review, sensitive lands review and adjustments for a proposed development and, in substance, affirms the hearings officer's decision, its action is a final land use decision and is subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Beilke v. City of Tigard, 51 Or LUBA 837 (2006).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Absent legal authority to the contrary, withdrawal of an application for land use approval prior to reaching a final decision on that application results in the local government losing jurisdiction over the application. Grabhorn v. Washington County, 50 Or LUBA 344 (2005).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where the applicant requests in writing that an application be withdrawn, and planning staff with apparent authority to do so responds by sending a letter refunding the application fees for "withdrawal" of the application, the letter constitutes a decision allowing withdrawal of the application. Grabhorn v. Washington County, 50 Or LUBA 344 (2005).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. That a planner may have erred in failing to address a code provision governing withdrawal of applications in issuing a letter allowing withdrawal of an application does not mean that the letter is not a final effective decision allowing withdrawal. Unless that decision is appealed or formally rescinded or reconsidered in some way authorized under applicable law, the decision is a final decision that deprives the local government of jurisdiction to proceed on the application. Grabhorn v. Washington County, 50 Or LUBA 344 (2005).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. ORS 227.180(1) requires that a local government take action within 90 days of the date LUBA remands a decision or within 90 days of the date of final resolution of judicial review. ORS 227.180(1) does not authorize a local government to take action on a decision before LUBA prior to the effective date of LUBA's order or the date of the Court of Appeals' appellate judgment, if LUBA's decision is appealed to the court. Rose v. City of Corvallis, 49 Or LUBA 260 (2005).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Under Standard Insurance Co. v. Washington County, 17 Or LUBA 647 (1989), absent statutory authority to the contrary, a local government has no jurisdiction to modify a land use decision that is before LUBA or the Court of Appeals. Rose v. City of Corvallis, 49 Or LUBA 260 (2005).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A local government does not lose its inherent authority to interpret or reinterpret an ambiguous code provision in a quasi-judicial context when it decides to initiate a legislative code amendment process to resolve the code ambiguity. Bemis v. City of Ashland, 48 Or LUBA 42 (2004).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Contrary to Thede v. Polk County, 1 Or LUBA 339 (1980), irregularities in signing and approving a final city decision does not mean that the challenged decision is not a "final decision" subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Knutson Family LLC v. City of Eugene, 48 Or LUBA 618 (2004).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A county does not exceed the authority granted under ORS 195.025(1) or 197.005(3) by adopting county comprehensive plan amendments that inform cities what considerations will suffice to gain county concurrence in UGB amendments or other decisions requiring county concurrence. City of Woodburn v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 423 (2003).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. An assignment of error that alleges a planning commission may only make recommendations to the city council and may not make a final decision on an application for a conditional use permit for a home occupation is without merit where (1) ORS 227.090(h) specifically authorizes planning commissions to carry out the statutory provisions governing land use permits and (2) the city's zoning code specifically authorizes the planning commission to make decisions on conditional use permits. Roe v. City of Union, 45 Or LUBA 660 (2003).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. The Oregon Attorney General interprets ORS 174.130 to require the affirmative votes of a majority of a body that is made of three or more persons to take action, rather than a majority of the members of the body who happen to be present. However, where a body's enabling legislation includes provisions for a quorum, a majority vote of the quorum is sufficient to take action. Roe v. City of Union, 45 Or LUBA 660 (2003).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A local government decision maker has authority under ORS 197.830(13)(b) to make a decision on reconsideration from LUBA even when the appeal that led to the withdrawal of the decision has been dismissed. 6710 LLC v. City of Portland, 43 Or LUBA 177 (2002).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A local governing body may not adopt an order to disregard its acknowledged land use regulations, simply because those ordinance provisions are perceived to be too onerous. If the local governing body believes that ordinance provisions are either unnecessary or do not further land use planning goals, it must amend the ordinance to delete those provisions; it may not by order elect to ignore them. Palaske v. Clackamas County, 43 Or LUBA 202 (2002).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. ORS 197.620(1), which states that a decision not to adopt a legislative amendment or new land use regulation is not appealable to LUBA, does not explicitly or implicitly limit a local government's authority to define what matters it will consider on a quasi-judicial or legislative basis. Homebuilders Assoc. v. Metro, 42 Or LUBA 176 (2002).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. An urban growth area management agreement that identifies the county as having the decision making authority over all land use actions that "affect" the urban growth area does not confer authority on the county to decide any matters concerning property within the city that may affect property located within the urban growth area. ODOT v. City of Mosier, 41 Or LUBA 73 (2001).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A city has authority under ORS 92.040 and 92.180 to review and approve subdivision plats. Where a city requires an application for a subdivision replat to show revised easements and applies its land use regulations to approve the replat, the city's decision is a land use decision or limited land use decision subject to LUBA's review. Haber v. City of Gates, 39 Or LUBA 137 (2000).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where petitioner submits a letter to the city that expresses an opinion concerning the elevation of petitioner's property but provides no evidence to support that opinion, the city's failure to object to the opinion in the letter does not constitute a waiver of the city's right to disagree with petitioner's opinion at a later time. Rivera v. City of Bandon, 38 Or LUBA 736 (2000).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A city is not estopped from finding that a dwelling exceeds a code-mandated 28-foot height limit where a city building official approved the plans for the proposed dwelling, but the city building official who approved the plans did not have the authority to authorize a dwelling in excess of 28 feet. Rivera v. City of Bandon, 38 Or LUBA 736 (2000).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where the process a county utilizes to determine whether its land use regulations have been violated affords petitioners a hearing, a right to present and rebut evidence and a written decision, petitioners are not deprived of their substantial rights by the county's alleged failure to follow the procedures set out in its ordinance. Crook v. Curry County, 38 Or LUBA 677 (2000).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A county has authority or jurisdiction to deny a permit application on its merits, where the permit applicant fails to demonstrate he was authorized to submit the permit application but the code limitations on who can submit permit applications do not impose a "jurisdictional" requirement. Base Enterprises, Inc. v. Clackamas County, 38 Or LUBA 614 (2000).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where the city council's review of a planning commission decision is limited to whether the lower decision is supported by substantial evidence, and petitioner argues that the city council exceeded its review authority by reweighing the evidence, LUBA will deny the assignment of error where it concludes that the city council understood and applied the substantial evidence standard correctly. Ontrack, Inc. v. City of Medford, 37 Or LUBA 472 (2000).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where LUBA remands a decision for additional proceedings requiring that the current members of the county board of commissioners review the record compiled before the previous board, such remand cures the procedural error, if any, resulting from the fact that, due to an intervening election, only one of the three commissioners who signed the final written order attended the evidentiary hearings and participated in the oral vote on the merits of the application. Greer v. Josephine County, 37 Or LUBA 261 (1999).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A city must have jurisdiction over property before it approves applications for development on it. Therefore, in the absence of a specific agreement between the city and the county, the county retains regulatory control over property within its unincorporated boundaries. Benchmark Enterprises v. City of Stayton, 36 Or LUBA 433 (1999).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where provisions allowing enforcement of the city's ordinance only specifically authorize judicial remedies, the city's interpretation of the enforcement provisions as allowing the city to conduct quasi-judicial proceedings to determine nonconforming use status is inconsistent with the terms of that provision and not entitled to deference under Goose Hollow Foothills League v. City of Portland, 117 Or App 211, 843 P2d 992 (1992), or ORS 197.829(1). Dept. of Transportation v. City of Mosier, 35 Or LUBA 701 (1999).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A county is not equitably estopped from denying the nonconforming use status of a dog kennel because of the applicant's reliance on a previous county decision approving site design for a dog kennel. Marquam Farms Corp. v. Multnomah County, 35 Or LUBA 392 (1999).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A county hearings officer is not legally bound to defer to a board of county commissioners' determination that a particular site is necessary for a proposed utility facility, where the board of county commissioners adopted its determination in its capacity as the governing body of a service district. Clackamas Co. Svc. Dist. No. 1 v. Clackamas County, 35 Or LUBA 374 (1998).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. ORS 215.130(2) authorizes a city to process and approve a zone change contingent on future annexation to the city. Lodge v. City of West Linn, 35 Or LUBA 42 (1998).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where an intergovernmental agreement authorizes a city to grant conditional use and design review approval provided a pre-annexation agreement has been recorded, the city may grant such conditional use and design review approval subject to a condition of actual annexation. Lodge v. City of West Linn, 35 Or LUBA 42 (1998).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A city may generally exercise land use planning authority within its corporate limits, except where a county or the state grants the city the right to exercise land use planning authority beyond the city's corporate limits. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 35 Or LUBA 30 (1998).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where a hearings officer's decision on a previous application for design review on the subject property determined that no nonconforming use existed, but specifically left the door open for intervenors to establish such a legal use, the hearings officer in a subsequent proceeding is not bound by the earlier determination. Marquam Farms Corp. v. Multnomah County, 32 Or LUBA 240 (1996).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Local governing body may not determine an appeal to be moot and reinstate an earlier, rescinded decision, based on petitioner's collateral challenge to the authority of the planning director to rescind that earlier decision, when the rescission decision was not timely appealed. Petterson v. Klamath County, 31 Or LUBA 402 (1996).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. The absence of relevant or even essential information in an application does not preclude consideration by the city, although it may result in a denial of the application. Sullivan v. City of Woodburn, 31 Or LUBA 192 (1996).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Even if a local decision maker had no authority to make a land use decision, LUBA has jurisdiction over an appeal of that decision if it falls within the class of decisions over which LUBA has review authority. Caraher v. City of Klamath Falls, 30 Or LUBA 204 (1995).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Since a local appeal is not available from an ORS 197.825 administrative decision made without authority, a petitioner may appeal the decision directly to LUBA. Caraher v. City of Klamath Falls, 30 Or LUBA 204 (1995).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where local land use regulations permit the governing body to render its own formal interpretation of its zoning ordinance either in response to an interpretation made by the planning commission or upon its own motion, the delegation of initial interpretive authority is not total, and the governing body may render an interpretation in the first instance. East Lancaster Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Salem, 30 Or LUBA 147 (1995).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where the local code requires the governing body to review the planning commission's recommendation on a proposed comprehensive plan amendment, but does not limit the governing body's authority to adopt a plan amendment to instances where the planning commission recommendation is free from error, that there was an error in the procedures by which the planning commission arrived at its recommendation does not deprive the governing body of jurisdiction over the proposed plan amendment. O'Rourke v. Union County, 29 Or LUBA 303 (1995).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where the county code specifically authorizes the board of commissioners to make the initial determination on a land use application, the board of commissioners had jurisdiction to initially consider and approve a floodplain permit application, regardless of other code provisions stating the planning commission should make the initial determination on such applications. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 281 (1995).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. ORS 433.750 completely occupies the field of regulation of outdoor mass gatherings of less than 120 hours duration. There is no room for more restrictive local regulation of such gatherings. However, ORS 433.735(1) authorizes a county to adopt a more expansive definition of outdoor mass gatherings of less than 120 hours duration. Fence v. Jackson County, 29 Or LUBA 147 (1995).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where a challenged local government decision finds the subject property is entirely within the local government's boundaries, and those findings are supported by substantial evidence in the record, the local government did not exceed its jurisdiction in approving the subject development application. ONRC v. City of Seaside, 29 Or LUBA 39 (1995).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where the local code requires a local government to make a particular determination in acting on a partition application, the local government does not lack authority to make that determination. Hilderbrand v. Marion County, 28 Or LUBA 703 (1995).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where the local code gives the planning director authority to make an initial determination on the existence of a nonconforming use, that the planning director made a previous determination on the existence of the nonconforming use does not mean he lacks authority to adopt a subsequent determination, pursuant to an agreement of the parties. Huiras v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 667 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Limitations on a local government's authority over development applications must be specifically expressed in the local code. Lamm v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 468 (1995).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. With regard to siting a lot of record dwelling on high-value farmland, a county does not have authority to require that an Oregon Department of Agriculture hearings officer make determinations other than those specified in ORS 215.705(2)(c). DLCD v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 459 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where the local code provides for discretionary review of certain development applications by the planning director, and also provides a process for the planning director to refer questions concerning code interpretation to the governing body, the code does not divest the planning director of authority to interpret the code in carrying out his duties. Knee Deep Cattle Company v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 288 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A local government loses jurisdiction over an application for land use approval when the application is withdrawn before a final decision is rendered. Davis v. City of Bandon, 28 Or LUBA 38 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where a local code neither expressly allows a local appellant to withdraw his appeal of a planning commission decision to the governing body, nor expressly provides the governing body retains jurisdiction over such an appeal once filed, a local government acts within its interpretive discretion under ORS 197.829 in concluding that it retains jurisdiction over such an appeal notwithstanding the local appellant's attempt unilaterally to withdraw the appeal. Davis v. City of Bandon, 28 Or LUBA 38 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. ORS 197.835(8) applies only where LUBA determines a local government made a land use decision exceeding the local government's discretionary authority under applicable comprehensive plan and land use regulation provisions, not where LUBA determines the local government misconstrued its permissible scope of review on remand from a previous LUBA appeal. Louisiana Pacific v. Umatilla County, 28 Or LUBA 32 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. ORS 275.320 to 275.340 deal with a county's proprietary power to manage county-acquired land. The designation of county-acquired real property as "county forests, public parks or recreational areas" under ORS 275.320 does not supersede the comprehensive land use planning process established under ORS chapter 197. Sahagian v. Columbia County, 27 Or LUBA 592 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Absent other limitations, if a local code gives local decision makers authority to impose conditions of approval that protect the public from adverse effects associated with a proposed use, this authority to impose conditions is not limited to conditions required to establish compliance with a particular permit approval standard. McKenzie v. Multnomah County, 27 Or LUBA 523 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where a school district concludes a proposed school site complies with a city's comprehensive plan in a school district proceeding in which the city participates, the city council nevertheless may reach a contrary conclusion concerning the proposed site's compliance with the city comprehensive plan in a subsequent city proceeding. Salem-Keizer School Dist. 24-J v. City of Salem, 27 Or LUBA 351 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Neither ORS 222.173 nor ORS 222.115 purports to preempt local government use of consents to annexation in circumstances other than those identified in ORS 222.173(1). Statements by individual legislators during legislative proceedings leading to adoption of ORS 222.115 expressing general hostility towards involuntary annexation do not establish a legislative intent to preclude city or county legislation concerning consents to annexation. Bear Creek Valley San. Auth. v. City of Medford, 27 Or LUBA 328 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where LUBA has remanded a city decision annexing certain property, a subsequent city decision amending the comprehensive plan and zoning designations for that property, in reliance on the annexation, exceeds the city's authority. Roloff v. City of Milton-Freewater, 27 Or LUBA 256 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. That a county zoning ordinance authorizes imposition of "fines" for its violation, whereas a separate county compliance ordinance authorizes imposition of "civil penalties" in amounts determined under ORS 203.065(1) or the violated ordinance, does not prevent the county from imposing a civil penalty for violation of its zoning ordinance, based on the amount of the fines allowed by the zoning ordinance for violations. Watson v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 164 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Circuit court jurisdiction to grant declaratory relief does not include jurisdiction to make a land use decision in the process of granting declaratory relief. The appropriate local government must render any required land use decisions. DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Claim and issue preclusion may not be asserted against a petitioner in a LUBA appeal based on a prior circuit court proceeding where the circuit court proceeding ended in a stipulated judgment and where petitioner had no notice of and was not a party to the circuit court proceeding. DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A condition of permit approval prohibiting remonstrance against the formation of an LID does not violate ORS 260.665 (protecting voting rights) where petitioners are neither prevented from voting nor required to vote in any particular manner. Larsson v. City of Lake Oswego, 26 Or LUBA 515 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. The validity of a challenged city council decision that ratifies and affirms a letter written by a city manager is unaffected by arguments that the city manager lacked authority to write the letter. Poddar v. City of Cannon Beach, 26 Or LUBA 429 (1994).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A local government may interpret its code requirement for a "description" of the subject property showing "access" not to require a final legal determination concerning the existence of access adequate to serve the proposed use, where the subject property is served by a disputed easement. Only the circuit court can provide a final legal determination concerning the nature and scope of a disputed easement. Mohler v. Josephine County, 26 Or LUBA 1 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where a local governing body fails to initiate rehearing of a matter within the period provided in the local code, the governing body has no authority to conduct a rehearing proceeding. Rochlin v. Multnomah County, 25 Or LUBA 637 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Unless the local code specifically provides to the contrary, the local governing body may ratify the authority of a local official to act on the local government's behalf. Choban v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 572 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where the governing body ratifies an act of another local government official in the challenged decision, that aspect of the challenged decision is itself substantial evidence that the local official possessed authority to accomplish the disputed act. Choban v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 572 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where a challenged decision simply expresses a conclusion that the county court has discretion to act on a subdivision application without that application having first been acted on by the county planning commission, but does not identify the source of that discretion or interpret apparently relevant code provisions, the basis for the challenged decision is not sufficiently articulated for review, and the challenged decision must be remanded. Larson v. Wallowa County, 25 Or LUBA 537 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where petitioner fails to establish a false representation was made, and also fails to establish that the representation made was made by a person with authority to bind the local decision maker, petitioner has not adequately alleged estoppel against the local decision maker. DLCD v. Wasco County, 25 Or LUBA 529 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. After a mandamus proceeding has been initiated pursuant to ORS 215.428(7), a county retains jurisdiction to make a "land use decision" on a pending permit application at any time before the circuit court issues a final judgment in the mandamus proceeding. Although made while circuit court mandamus proceedings are pending, such a "land use decision" is reviewable by LUBA under ORS 197.825(1). Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 507 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where the evidence in the record is insufficient to establish a zoning inspector's representation concerning nonconforming use status was made with knowledge of the material facts that present and certain past commercial uses of the subject property occurred without required local government approvals, the local government is not estopped from denying petitioners' application for the establishment of a nonconforming use. Pesznecker v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 463 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. The use of land for a recreational parachuting center and for parachute landings is a "land use" subject to regulation by local land use ordinances. Skydive Oregon v. Clackamas County, 25 Or LUBA 294 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Federal preemption of local authority to regulate is not presumed. Rather it is necessary to determine whether preemption was the "clear and manifest purpose of Congress." Skydive Oregon v. Clackamas County, 25 Or LUBA 294 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Nothing in the federal regulatory scheme relating to the regulation of parachute jumping purports to foreclose state and local land use regulation of the ground based impacts of parachuting. Skydive Oregon v. Clackamas County, 25 Or LUBA 294 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where a condition of approval imposing a fine for a violating the terms of a conditional use permit, regardless of the amount of actual damage sustained due to the violation, is not specifically authorized by the local code, such condition is beyond the local government's authority to impose. Skydive Oregon v. Clackamas County, 25 Or LUBA 294 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Although ORS 459.017(1)(a) provides that the "planning, location, acquisition, development and operation of landfill disposal sites is a matter of statewide concern," ORS chapter 459 also contains numerous references to the power of local governments to enact legislation affecting solid waste landfills and, therefore, ORS chapter

459 does not preempt local regulation of landfill siting. Riverbend Landfill Company v. Yamhill County, 24 Or LUBA 466 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Claim preclusion applies to preclude relitigation of a claim that has been litigated. Where a party's claim of a vested right to residential use of certain property was determined in a circuit court judgment, to which the local government and other parties to the LUBA appeal were also parties, the local government is precluded from making a new determination on that vested right claim, even if it would otherwise have jurisdiction to do so. Joines v. Linn County, 24 Or LUBA 456 (1993).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A city ordinance rezoning property located outside the city's municipal boundaries exceeds the city's jurisdiction and must be reversed. Hofmann v. City of Seaside, 24 Or LUBA 183 (1992).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where local land use regulations delegate the authority to act initially on an application to a planning commission or hearings officer, and reserve to the governing body only the power to review the planning commission's or hearings officer's decision, the governing body exceeds its authority if it approves such an application without it having first been acted on by the planning commission or hearings officer. Larson v. Wallowa County, 23 Or LUBA 527 (1992).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Subsequent changes in county ordinances do not affect an energy facility for which a site certificate has been approved by EFSC. Under ORS 469.400(5), a county is required to issue the "appropriate permits" for such an energy facility, regardless of whether a subsequent change in county ordinances makes the "appropriate permit" a type different from that which was appropriate when the site certificate was approved. McDole v. Lane County, 23 Or LUBA 500 (1992).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A local ordinance which prohibits the short term rental use of dwellings in residential zones is not an unlawful rent control regulation under ORS 91.225. Cope v. City of Cannon Beach, 23 Or LUBA 233 (1992).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. In order to establish estoppel, petitioners must show (1) the local government made a false representation with knowledge of the facts, (2) petitioner was ignorant of the truth, (3) the local government intended that petitioner act upon the false representation, and (4) petitioner in fact acted upon the false representation. That a local government planner stated his opinion that an application is approvable is not adequate to establish estoppel. Schoppert v. Clackamas County, 23 Or LUBA 138 (1992).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A use which is industrial in nature, involving the processing of both logging debris and woody debris from other sources, does not constitute "forest practices on forest lands" and, therefore, is not subject to the prohibition of ORS 527.722(1) against regulation by local governments. Wastewood Recyclers v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 258 (1991).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where an applicant seeks approval for development outside of a "stream corridor area," but has already placed related development within the "stream corridor area" on the same property without obtaining necessary local permits, the local government has authority to impose conditions on approval of the applicant's proposed development requiring that the unauthorized development be removed or that necessary local permits be obtained for the unauthorized development. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 166 (1991).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where local land use regulations delegate the authority to act initially on an application to a hearings officer, and reserve to the governing body only the power to review the hearings officer's decision, the governing body exceeds its authority if it approves such an application without it having first been acted on by the hearings officer. Scott v. Josephine County, 22 Or LUBA 82 (1991).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A city is not prohibited from issuing a building permit pursuant to an unappealed planning commission decision, notwithstanding that a second application seeking to expand the scope of the project approved by the unappealed planning commission decision was denied by the city council. Townsend v. City of Newport, 21 Or LUBA 286 (1991).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A local government cannot deny building permits for approved conditional uses based on subsequent local code interpretations, where the subject conditional use permit remains effective and was not appealed locally or to LUBA. Townsend v. City of Newport, 21 Or LUBA 286 (1991).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. City charter requirement for a majority vote of the governing body (as opposed to a majority vote of a quorum) is to be given effect and may leave a quorum of the governing body unable to achieve the required majority vote. Strawn v. City of Albany, 20 Or LUBA 344 (1990).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. A county does not exceed its jurisdiction in taking final action on a permit application after the 120-day time limits established by ORS 215.428(1) and its code have elapsed; and its decision will be given effect. Forest Park Estate v. Multnomah County, 20 Or LUBA 319 (1990).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where the county charter and code grant the county administrator broad administrative powers, but do not explicitly grant the county administrator authority to determine whether decisions are appealable under the county code, LUBA will accept the county's interpretation of the charter and code as granting the administrator such authority, so long as that interpretation is not inconsistent with the charter and code. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 20 Or LUBA 208 (1990).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Even if the planning commission chairman's participation in the planning commission proceedings on a proposed comprehensive plan amendment were improper, and without his participation the planning commission would not have had a quorum, there would be no basis for reversal or remand of the city council decision approving the plan amendment, because no provisions of state statute or city plan or land use regulations make a planning commission recommendation on a proposed plan amendment a necessary prerequisite to action by the city council. Burk v. Umatilla County, 20 Or LUBA 54 (1990).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. If petitioners believe the assessor has not properly considered the restrictions the county's timber zone puts on their property, their remedy is with the county board of equalization. Petitioners cannot claim in an appeal to LUBA that the assessment of their property over the years constituted a "false representation," such that the county is estopped from denying their application for a nonforest dwelling. Sabin v. Clackamas County, 20 Or LUBA 23 (1990).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. Where city regulations governing applications for conditional use approval do not make all contiguous property owned by an applicant subject to the conditional use review, and an applicant files a conditional use application for only a portion of his property, the city does not have authority to impose conditions on contiguous property owned by the applicant which is not the subject of the application. Goodman v. City of Portland, 19 Or LUBA 289 (1990).

25.2 Local Government Procedures – Authority to Act. The local governing body has the authority to conduct either an evidentiary or on the record de novo review of planning commission decisions in circumstances where local ordinances are silent on the scope of review. Murphey v. City of Ashland, 19 Or LUBA 182 (1990).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Under ORS 197.610(6), if a proposed PAPA is altered to such an extent that the notice submitted to DLCD under ORS 197.610(1) and (3) no longer reasonably describes it, the local government must submit notice of the alterations to DLCD at least 10 days before the final evidentiary hearing, which DLCD thereafter provides to the public. The larger statutory scheme at ORS 197.610 to 197.625 is intended to expand notice and participatory options for DLCD and a broader audience that may not receive local notice. A local government's errors under ORS 197.610(6) require remand where they are of a kind or degree that calls into question whether the ORS 197.610 to 197.625 process nevertheless performed its function. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 422 (2019).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where notice under ORS 197.610(6) is sent to DLCD 17 days after the final evidentiary hearing occurred and describes the "date of first evidentiary hearing" and the "date of final hearing" but does not identify the date of the "final evidentiary hearing," where there is a disparity between the text of the notice and the text of an ordinance included with the notice regarding the subject acreage, and where the notice is sent during a time when the record is left open only for evidence that is responsive to evidence that was submitted earlier, the totality of the errors in the submission of the notice and in the notice itself are of a kind and degree that make it doubtful that the ORS 197.610 to 197.625 process performed its function, and remand is required. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 422 (2019).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where separate applications to partition two parcels under a single ownership into three parcels each receive final approval in the same calendar year, the resultant units of land are not "lawfully created" where state statute requires that divisions of "an area or tract of land into four or more lots within a calendar year when such area or tract of land exists as a unit or contiguous units of land under a single ownership" receive subdivision approval. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 79 Or LUBA 65 (2019).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where a county approves a "forest template dwelling" under ORS 215.750(1)(c), arguments that the county relied on units of land that were unlawfully created through partition approval, rather than subdivision approval, provide no basis for reversal or remand since any procedural error the county committed in approving the land division cannot be collaterally attacked in an appeal of a subsequent decision that depends on the prior approval. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 79 Or LUBA 65 (2019).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. The fact that an adopted local code amendment includes language which was not included in the notice to DLCD required by ORS 197.610(1) is not by itself sufficient to explain why the notice was inadequate so as to require reversal or remand of the amendment decision. McCaffree v. Coos County, 79 Or LUBA 512 (2019).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. The statute of limitations in ORS 131.125(8)(c) is inapplicable to a county's separate land use enforcement proceeding procedures pursuant to a county code that does not contain any time limitation for enforcement actions for violations of the county's land use code, because the county has authority over land use code enforcement matters independent from any statutorily derived authority in ORS Title 14 pursuant to county charter, and because ORS 153.030(4) expressly provides that "[n]othing in this chapter affects the ability of any other political subdivision of this state to provide for the administrative enforcement of the charter, ordinances, rules and regulations of the political subdivision, including enforcement through imposition of monetary penalties." A Walk on the Wild Side v. Washington County, 78 Or LUBA 356 (2018).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. When the city has a general track for requesting planned unit development (PUD) approval and a clear and objective track for requesting PUD approval, the city is not required to demonstrate that the applicant is able to gain approval for some development on the subject property under its needed housing track. ORS 197.307(6)(a) requires only that the city allow the applicant the "option of proceeding" under the needed housing track, and does not require a guarantee or demonstration of any kind that development is likely to be approved under the clear and objective approval standards in the needed housing track. Dreyer v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 391 (2018).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Senate Bill (SB) 1051 (2018), section 12 did not require cities to amend their land use regulations to implement SB 1051 by July 1, 2018. SB 1051 itself is silent regarding any requirement, much less a deadline for a city to amend its land use regulations to comply with its provisions. SB 1051, section 12 provides for a delayed "operative date" of July 1, 2018. That delayed operative date provides a grace period before which the provisions of SB 1051 did not apply, and after which, the statute applies directly and cities are required to "allow" accessory dwelling in areas required by the statue. But SB 1051 does not direct cities as to the mechanism by which to allow accessory dwellings. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 441 (2018).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. While ORS 197.646(1) requires the city to amend its land use regulations to implement SB 1051 (2018), ORS 197.646(2)(b) requires the Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) to establish by rule the time period within which a local government must amend its code to implement a new land use statute "if the legislation does not specify a time period for compliance[.]" LCDC has not adopted any rules specifying a time period for implementation of SB 1051, and SB 1051 itself does not require cities to adopt amendments to their codes that implement all of the provisions of SB 1051 by July 1, 2018. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 441 (2018).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where in evaluating petitioner's zone verification request pursuant to Eugene Code (EC) 9.2741(2), the city failed to consider the ORS 197.312(5) requirement that all accessory dwellings must be allowed "subject to reasonable local regulations relating to siting and design," the proper remedy is for LUBA to remand the decision to the city for the city to consider in the first instance whether EC 9.2741(2) is a "reasonable local regulation[] relating to siting and design" pursuant to ORS 197.312(5). Kamps-Hughes v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 457 (2018).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A city's rejection of petitioner's as-applied challenge of a city's appeal fee during the city's proceeding on intervenor's land use application, and legal challenges to the city's future assessment of actual attorney's fees is not excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction by the "fiscal" exception. However, to the extent petitioner challenges the amount of the actual attorney fees, that challenge is outside the Board's scope of review because that fee dispute arose after the city issued the fee invoice and after the city made a decision on petitioner's underlying appeal, and is therefore a "fiscal" decision. The fact that the local record includes the invoice for the actual attorney fees petitioner was charged for his local appeal does not convert the amount of the fees in that invoice into an issue that is reviewable by LUBA. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 78 Or LUBA 463 (2018).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. In an as-applied challenge, a petitioner cannot challenge the manner in which the city adopted its appeal fee structure. Instead, LUBA's inquiry regarding petitioner's as-applied challenge to the appeal fee charged by the city, is whether petitioner has produced a prima facie case that the fee that the city charged petitioner pursuant to the city's previously adopted fee schedule is "more than the average cost of such appeals or the actual cost of the appeal." ORS 227.180(1)(c). Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 78 Or LUBA 463 (2018).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A criterion that requires a county to determine whether a proposed short term rental home occupation will not "unreasonably interfere" with other uses permitted in the zone requires the exercise of discretion, and a decision applying that criterion is a decision on a permit as defined in ORS 215.402(4). A county errs in failing to process the short term rental home occupation application according to the procedures for permits in the local code. Hood River Valley Residents' Committee v. Hood River County, 77 Or LUBA 7 (2018).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Based on an ESEE consequences analysis regarding conflicting uses, under OAR 660-023-0040(4) and (5), a county must develop a program to achieve Goal 5, and determine whether to allow, limit, or prohibit conflicting uses. A local government errs in its ESEE analysis and in its ultimate decision to modify its acknowledged Goal 5 program to eliminate the prohibition on churches in the Wildlife Area Combining Zone, when it relied in part on the cost of defending its existing Goal 5 program against a hypothetical Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA) lawsuit to support its decision to achieve Goal 5 by allowing without limits a new conflicting use, without providing an analysis establishing the county's Goal 5 program would be legally vulnerable to losing a hypothetical RLUIPA lawsuit if one were brought. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 395 (2018).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. To allow a conflicting use without limit under OAR 660-023-0040(5)(c), a county's ESEE analysis must (1) demonstrate that the conflicting use is of sufficient importance relative to the resource site, and (2) must indicate why measures to protect the resource "to some extent should not be provided." OAR 660-023-0040(5)(c) does not prohibit the county from allowing a conflicting use without limit, if there is another option that would both fully protect the resource at issue and satisfy the motivations prompting the county to decide in favor of the conflicting use. Instead, OAR 660-023-0040(5)(c) requires the county to justify its choice to allow a conflicting use without limit, and that justification must include a demonstration that alternatives, such as imposing limits or measures to provide some protection for the resource consistent with OAR 660-023-0040(5)(b) should not be provided. Assuming that demonstration is made, OAR 660-023-0040(5) and Goal 5 do not compel the local government to choose alternatives that fully or partially protect the resource. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 395 (2018).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. In the context of a county's Goal 5 analysis, LUBA will reject the county's argument that there are no measures that the county could adopt to protect wildlife habitat from the negative impacts of churches without running afoul of a Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA) requirement–that governments not impose a "substantial burden" on religious exercise–where the county's ESEE analysis includes no evaluation of any measures or any findings on this point, and without actually evaluating any measures that would provide some protection to wildlife resources, it is difficult to understand how the county could reach a conclusion that no measures could be adopted to protect wildlife resources without also imposing a "substantial burden" on religious exercise. In such a circumstance, remand is necessary for the county to adopt an ESEE analysis that either does not rely on the mere threat of RLUIPA litigation, or that actually evaluates whether the county's existing Goal 5 program is inconsistent with the RLUIPA Equal Terms or Substantial Burden requirements, so that the county can consider whether there are measures it can adopt pursuant to OAR 660-023-0040(5)(b) and (c) to reduce impacts on wildlife resources and include those evaluations in the revised ESEE analysis. As part of that analysis, the county may consider, if necessary, whether identified measures would impose a "substantial burden" on the free exercise of religion. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 395 (2018).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 92.190(3) embodies a requirement that, where local governments choose to provide an alternative procedure for property line adjustments other than using replat procedures, that alternative procedure must include local government approval of some kind. However, ORS 197.190(3) does not specify any particular procedures or form of approval, and does not necessarily require that final approval be obtained prior to recordation of the adjustment deeds. Given the absence of more specific statutory requirements a county does not err in verifying property as a legal lot, notwithstanding that the property lines were adopted in 2007 without prior county approval, where following recordation of the deeds, the county preliminarily verified the adjustments as lawful and issued a final approval in 2017 when the property owner applied for, and the county approved, a development permit. This process, although partially post-hoc, is consistent with ORS 92.190(3). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 486 (2018).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Oregon Laws 2008, chapter 12, legislatively overruled the holding in Phillips v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 194, aff'd, 213 Or App 498, 162 P3d 338 (2007), which provided that it was unlawful to adjust property boundaries in a way that results in parcels that fail to comply with applicable minimum parcel sizes. Oregon Laws 2008, chapter 12, authorizes property line adjustments of substandard size lots and parcels, even if the resulting lots or parcels continue to fail to comply with applicable minimum parcel sizes. Oregon Laws 2008, chapter 12, section 6, made that legislation retroactive to "property line adjustments approved before, on or after the effective date of this 2008 Act." Therefore, Oregon Laws 2008, chapter 12, applies to a property line adjustment that took place in 2007, because the property line adjustment was "approved * * * before, on or after" the effective date of the 2008 Act. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 486 (2018).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 197.763 sets out a relatively structured process for conducting local government quasi-judicial land use proceedings. However, local governments frequently deviate slightly from those procedures and may do so provided the deviation from statutory procedures does not deny a party a substantial right the party is entitled to under the statute. Grahn v. City of Yamhill, 76 Or LUBA 258 (2017).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Under ORS 197.763(6)(a), prior to the close of the initial evidentiary hearing, a party is entitled to request an opportunity to submit additional evidence. If a party does so, a local government is obligated to either (1) continue the hearing or (2) leave the record open for at least seven days to allow "for additional written evidence, arguments or testimony[.]" But the right to submit additional testimony under ORS 197.763(6)(a) only exists until the close of the initial evidentiary hearing. After the close of the initial evidentiary hearing a local government may, but is not required to, grant a request for a continued hearing or open record period to submit additional evidence, and if it does so the local government is obligated to carry out the continued hearing in accordance with ORS 197.763(6)(b) or (c). Grahn v. City of Yamhill, 76 Or LUBA 258 (2017).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Any party may request an opportunity under ORS 197.763(6)(c) to respond to "additional written evidence" that was submitted during an open record period prior to the conclusion of the initial evidentiary hearing. But that response must be limited to responding to the "additional written evidence" that is submitted during the open record period. Grahn v. City of Yamhill, 76 Or LUBA 258 (2017).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where a party's evidentiary response to "additional written evidence" that was submitted during the initial open record period at the conclusion of the initial evidentiary hearing pursuant to ORS 197.763(6)(c) includes additional evidence that goes beyond responding to that "additional written evidence" that was submitted during the initial open record period, a local government must either reject the additional evidence or give all parties an opportunity to rebut the additional evidence. Grahn v. City of Yamhill, 76 Or LUBA 258 (2017).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Subsection (1) of ORS 215.427 imposes either a 120-day or a 150-day deadline for a local government to take final action on a permit or zone change application. Subsection (2) of that statute gives a county 30 days to advise permit applicants who submit incomplete applications what is needed to make the application complete, and also sets out the three ways an application may be deemed complete. Subsection (3) of that statute freezes the approval standards, as of the date the application was first submitted, if the application is complete when submitted or rendered complete "within 180 days of the date the application was first submitted." Subsection (4) of that statute renders the application "void" on the one hundred and eighty-first day after the application was "first * * * submitted," if the applicant has not by that time complied with one of the submittal requirements set out in that subsection or subsection (2) to make the application complete. Bora Architects, Inc. v. Tillamook County, 76 Or LUBA 330 (2017).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. The date a permit application was first submitted is important because new or modified permit criteria enacted after that date do not apply if the application was complete when submitted or is rendered complete in accordance with ORS 215.427(2). The date a permit application is first submitted is also important because on the one hundred and eighty-first day after it is submitted it becomes void if the applicant has been notified that additional information is needed to make the application complete and the applicant has not taken one of the three steps set out at ORS 215.427(4)(a) through (c). Bora Architects, Inc. v. Tillamook County, 76 Or LUBA 330 (2017).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A permit applicant initiates the permit approval process by advising the county what it seeks approval for and requesting that the county act to grant land use approval. ORS 215.427 clearly recognizes that when an application is first submitted it may be incomplete, and a permit application that does not include the required filing fee may be incomplete, but nevertheless be sufficient to initiate the permit approval process. Bora Architects, Inc. v. Tillamook County, 76 Or LUBA 330 (2017).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A permit application is not deemed complete under ORS 215.427(2) where the applicant never takes the position that the application was complete when submitted or deemed complete 30 days after it was submitted because the county did not advise the applicant that additional information was needed within 30 days after the application was first submitted. That is particularly the case where the county belatedly advises the applicant of the information that is needed for a complete application and the applicant thereafter provides that additional information, after expiration of the 30-day period. Bora Architects, Inc. v. Tillamook County, 76 Or LUBA 330 (2017).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A county decision that approves a permit application that has become void under ORS 215.427(4) is "prohibited as a matter of law" and must be reversed. Bora Architects, Inc. v. Tillamook County, 76 Or LUBA 330 (2017).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 215.050 and 215.060 require the county governing body to approve revisions to the comprehensive plan and to conduct at least one hearing on proposed revisions. A county violates ORS 215.050 and 215.060, where on remand of an initial governing body decision approving plan amendments, the governing body delegates to a hearings officer final decision-making authority and the conduct of the only hearing, and on remand the hearings officer approves new comprehensive plan amendments that the governing body did not consider in the governing body's initial decision leading to the appeal to LUBA. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A county governing body's consent agenda "ratification" of a hearings officer's decision approving comprehensive plan amendments is insufficient to comply with ORS 215.050 and 215.060, which require the county governing body to approve comprehensive plan amendments and to conduct at least one hearing on proposed amendments. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where a local government implements OAR 660-033-0120, Table 1, and OAR 660-033-0130(2)(c), by adopting land use regulations that expressly authorize the expansion of all of the "Parks/Public/Quasi-Public" uses listed in Table 1 except an ORS 197.770 existing firearms training facility in an EFU zone, the unmistakable conclusion is that the local government deliberately chose not to allow expansion of a firearms training facility in the EFU zone. H.T. Rea Farming Corp. v. Umatilla County, 71 Or LUBA 125 (2015).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where a local government implements OAR 660-033-0130(2)(c) by adopting land use regulations that expressly authorize the expansion of a number of uses in the EFU zone, but did not amend its regulations to provide for expansion of an ORS 197.770 firearms training facility in the EFU zone, the local government must apply its EFU zone regulations as adopted, and cannot directly apply the administrative rule to approve the expansion of an ORS 197.770 firearms training facility that its EFU zone does not authorize. H.T. Rea Farming Corp. v. Umatilla County, 71 Or LUBA 125 (2015).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 197.772(3) is silent regarding what procedure should be followed when a property owner requests removal of a property from a Goal 5 inventory of historic resources, pursuant to the statute. Because such removal constitutes a comprehensive plan amendment, the local government does not err in following the code procedures applicable for a comprehensive plan amendment, including local appeals to the governing body. Lake Oswego Preservation Society v. City of Lake Oswego, 70 Or LUBA 103 (2014).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 227.175(1), which authorizes cities to establish fees for processing permits at an amount no more than the actual or average cost of processing, is not violated by a pre-application requirement for an applicant to provide, at the applicant's expense, a peer-review analysis of impacts of a proposed major modification, and present that analysis at the required pre-application conference. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 197.763(8) provides that a property owner's failure to receive notice required under ORS 197.763(2) will not "invalidate [the city's] proceedings" if the city can produce an affidavit that notice was given. ORS 197.763(8) does not say a city's affidavit is sufficient to establish that the city in fact sent the required notice, where there is a factual dispute over whether the city actually sent the required notice. Aleali v. City of Sherwood, 68 Or LUBA 153 (2013).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Whatever difference there may be between the word "consistent" in a local standard that requires conditional use permits to be consistent with the comprehensive plan and the word "comply" as used in ORS 197.175(2)(d), which requires that land use decisions be adopted in compliance with the comprehensive plan, land use decisions must comply with both requirements. Friends of the Hood River Waterfront v. City of Hood River, 67 Or LUBA 179 (2013).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where a city consolidates three related applications pursuant to ORS 227.175(2), but suspends processing of two applications and proceeds to issue a decision approving the third application, absent language that defers its finality the decision on the third application is a final decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Consolidation of applications under ORS 227.175(2) is at the request of the applicant, and nothing in the statute prevents a city, with the applicant's consent, making a final decision on one application while separately processing other applications, or renders an otherwise final decision non-final until the city completes separate processing of the other applications. Save Downtown Canby v. City of Canby, 67 Or LUBA 385 (2013).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Failure to make a staff report available during the entire minimum period required by ORS 197.763(4)(b) is not a basis for remand, where petitioners had the opportunity during the subsequent hearing to adequately respond to any issues raised or evidence presented in the staff report. Poe v. City of Warrenton, 66 Or LUBA 108 (2012).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 215.030, which provides that no more than two voting members of a county planning commission can be principally engaged in real estate sales or development, does not specify that a planning commission decision is invalid or subject to reversal or remand because the planning commission membership violates the statute. ORS 215.030 is silent regarding the consequences and potential remedies for violation of the membership requirement. O'Brien v. Lincoln County, 65 Or LUBA 286 (2012).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where the decision before LUBA is a governing body decision based on the recommendation of a planning commission, that the planning commission membership may have violated the requirements of ORS 215.030 limiting the number of members principally engaged in real estate sales or development does not provide a basis to reverse or remand the governing body's decision. O'Brien v. Lincoln County, 65 Or LUBA 286 (2012).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Even if county code language could be interpreted to bar non-applicant parties who participated in the evidentiary phase of a local permit proceeding from participating in an on-the-record appeal filed by the applicant to challenge permit conditions of approval, such a local appeal procedure would violate ORS 197.763 and 215.422. Families for a Quarry Free Neighborhood v. Lane County, 64 Or LUBA 297 (2011).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. City council members are not required under ORS 227.180(3) to disclose receipt of an e-mail chain that was forwarded to them by one of the opponents to the application, where the substance of the e-mail chain was placed into the record and the only portion not placed in the record includes nothing related to any issue before the city council that could possibly be rebutted. Bundy v. City of West Linn, 63 Or LUBA 113 (2011).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Approval of a lot of record dwelling under the standards at ORS 215.705(1) constitutes the "discretionary approval of a proposed development of land" and is thus a "permit" decision subject to ORS 215.416, a conclusion made even clearer under ORS 215.417, which specifically describes dwellings provided under a number of statutes, including ORS 215.705(1), as permits approved under ORS 215.416. Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where one petitioner was an adjoining property owner and entitled to written notice of a permit decision under ORS 215.416, but was not provided the required notice, the deadline for filing an appeal of a decision approving the permit is within 21 days of "actual notice" of the decision, pursuant to ORS 197.830(3)(a). For other petitioners who were not entitled to notice of the decision, the deadline for filing the appeal is within 21 days of the date the petitioners "knew or should have known" of the decision, pursuant to ORS 197.830(3)(b). Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A city decision to charge a subdivision applicant the actual cost of processing his subdivision application is not a land use decision that is subject to review by LUBA, where the city's final decision demanding payment of the actual costs was not made as part of its decision on the merits of the subdivision application and instead postdates that decision on the merits by over one year. The city's later decision to demand payment of the actual cost of processing the subdivision application is a "fiscal" decision, and under the reasoning in Housing Council v. City of Lake Oswego, 48 Or App 525, 617 P2d 655 (1980), rev dismissed, 291 Or 878, 635 P2d 647 (1981), is not a land use decision subject to LUBA review. Montgomery v. City of Dunes City, 61 Or LUBA 123 (2010).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 227.173(1) requires that "[a]pproval or denial of a discretionary permit application shall be based on standards and criteria, which shall be set forth in the development ordinance." A development code that permits the city engineer to waive or modify city street and roadway improvement standards where "in his/her judgment special circumstances dictate such change" is sufficient to comply with the ORS 227.173(1) requirement for "standards and criteria." Zirker v. City of Bend, 59 Or LUBA 1 (2009).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Approving or denying a tentative subdivision plat within an urban growth boundary is a limited land use decision and therefore not a "permit" decision. Because the ORS 227.175(10)(a) directive that local appeal issues not be limited to those issues identified in the notice of appeal only applies to permit decisions, that statute does not apply to decisions involving the approval or denial of subdivisions. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 59 Or LUBA 23 (2009).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Even when an applicant forfeits the right to process a subdivision application under the limited land use provisions of a local code and processes the application under the procedures for permits, the decision approving or denying the subdivision is still a limited land use decision and the provisions of ORS 227.175(10)(a) do not apply. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 59 Or LUBA 23 (2009).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. There is a difference between an application having enough information to allow staff to begin review and having enough information and evidence needed to demonstrate that all applicable approval criteria are met. It is not inconsistent with ORS 227.178 to determine that there is enough information for an application to be complete, but still allow the submittal of additional information to demonstrate compliance with applicable approval criteria. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 59 Or LUBA 23 (2009).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A petitioner fails to establish a basis for reversal or remand under ORS 227.186 (Measure 56 Notice) where the notice of hearing that the local government gave was given within the time required by ORS 227.186, that notice appears to substantially comply with ORS 227.186 and petitioner merely states it is not clear from the record that the statutorily required notice was given. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 116 (2009).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A street connectivity requirement that development street systems not create "excessive travel lengths" is sufficient to qualify as a standard or criterion, and therefore does not violate the ORS 227.173(1) requirement that permit decisions must "be based on standards and criteria." Konrady v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 466 (2009).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 197.610(1) and OAR 660-018-0020(1)(c) and (2) require that a local government provide the Department of Land Conservation and Development with a copy of the proposed text of any post acknowledgment comprehensive plan or land use regulation amendment. Where a local government's notice of its post acknowledgment action does not include the proposed text, remand is required. SEIU v. City of Happy Valley, 58 Or LUBA 261 (2009).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where a party challenges a resolution adopting fees charged by the county for permits and appeals, the burden is on the county to include evidence in the record that demonstrates that the fees were set consistent with the statute's mandate that the fees that are subject to ORS 215.416(1) and ORS 215.422(1)(c) will not exceed average or actual costs of processing permits or appeals. Sommer v. Josephine County, 58 Or LUBA 505 (2009).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. The ORS 203.045(3) general requirement that county ordinances be fully read in an open meeting on two days at least 13 days apart does not apply in cases where the ordinance is authorized by another statute. Although ORS 215.050(1) does not expressly require or authorize counties to adopt comprehensive plans by ordinance, the statute is properly interpreted to authorize counties to do so. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. OAR 660-018-0020 does not require that the Department of Land Conservation and Development be provided a redlined version of a post-acknowledgment comprehensive plan amendment. In addition, OAR 660-018-0020 does not provide that any failure on a local government's part to adequately identify the text to be repealed or adopted by a post-acknowledgment comprehensive plan amendment has the legal consequence of requiring that the post-acknowledgment comprehensive plan amendment be viewed as an entirely new comprehensive plan such that unamended portions of the comprehensive plan must be shown to comply with the statewide planning goals. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. The ORS 203.045(3) general requirement that county ordinances be fully read in an open meeting on two days at least 13 days apart does not apply in cases where the ordinance is authorized by another statute. Although ORS 215.050(1) does not expressly require or authorize counties to adopt comprehensive plans by ordinance, the statute is properly interpreted to authorize counties to do so. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 215.060 provides that action regarding a comprehensive plan shall have no effect, unless 10 days' advance public notice of each hearing is published in a newspaper of general circulation. Where the required 10 days' notice is given, the county's subsequent decision to adopt different parts of the proposed comprehensive plan amendments by separate ordinances does not require new notice under ORS 215.060. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. An ordinance that is deemed acknowledged under ORS 197.625 is not immune from an as-applied challenge based on an alleged inconsistency with state law. Acknowledgement under ORS 197.625 means only that the ordinance complies with statewide planning goals. Porter v. Marion County, 56 Or LUBA 635 (2008).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Even if an expert testifies that property is in a high landslide risk area, if the property is not located in a "further review area" as defined by OAR 632-007-0010(1) ORS 215.260(1)(b) does not require that DOGAMI review a geotechnical report on the property. Boucot v. City of Corvallis, 56 Or LUBA 662 (2008).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 215.427(2) merely provides that a local government may request additional information before proceeding with a permit or rezoning application if it believes such information is necessary. The statute does not mean that once a local government indicates the application is complete that necessarily means the application includes substantial evidence that all applicable criteria are satisfied. Sperber v. Coos County, 56 Or LUBA 763 (2008).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A local government errs in finding that an appeal of a denial of a sign permit involves only a "request for interpretation" rather than a "permit" to which the provisions of ORS 227.175(10) applied to require a de novo hearing that is not limited to issues raised by the appellant in an appeal statement. Lamar Advertising Company v. City of Eugene, 54 Or LUBA 295 (2007).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A hearings officer errs in declining to review proposed flight instruction, scenic tours and forest patrol uses as "new uses" rather than "existing uses" under the Aviation Protection Act, ORS 836.608, and in requiring the applicant to submit a new application requesting approval for those "new uses," where the initial application sought approval of those uses under criteria that apply to new uses, county staff understood that the applicant sought approval as new uses and not existing uses, and the applicant requested that the hearings officer evaluate those uses as new uses if they did not qualify as existing uses. Applebee v. Washington County, 54 Or LUBA 364 (2007).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. OAR 660-041-0030, which requires notice to the Department of Land Conservation and Development (DLCD) of an application for or decision on a permit pursuant to a Ballot Measure 37 waiver, is not inconsistent with ORS 197.763(2)(c), which requires a local government if requested by the applicant to notify DLCD of a hearing on a land use application. DLCD v. Deschutes County, 54 Or LUBA 799 (2007).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A decision that merely relocates or eliminates a common property line between abutting properties is not a "permit" decision as that term is defined in ORS 227.160(2) and 215.402(4), even if the decision involves the exercise of discretion. South v. City of Portland, 53 Or LUBA 362 (2007).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A decision that relocates or eliminates a common boundary between two properties does not involve the "proposed development of land" and thus is not a "permit" as that term is defined in ORS 227.160(2) and 215.402(4). The statutory requirements for notice and hearing that govern "permit" decisions do not apply to a property line adjustment decision. South v. City of Portland, 53 Or LUBA 362 (2007).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Absent some explanation for why a building permit decision that modifies a condition of partition approval involves the kind and degree of discretion that distinguishes a statutory "permit" as that term is defined at ORS 215.402(4) from other kinds of permits, LUBA will not presume that challenged permit is an ORS 215.402(4) permit. Neelund v. Josephine County, 52 Or LUBA 683 (2006).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. While deviations from the post acknowledgment plan amendment notice requirements at ORS 197.610(1) may constitute procedural errors that will not provide a basis for remand absent prejudice to a petitioner's substantial rights, a complete failure to provide notice to the Department of Land Conservation and Development under ORS 197.610(1) is a substantive error and requires remand without regard to whether the failure prejudiced petitioner's substantial rights. Friends of Bull Mountain v. City of Tigard, 51 Or LUBA 759 (2006).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A resolution that adopts a fee schedule is not a zoning ordinance, land division ordinance or similar ordinance, and is therefore not a "land use regulation," the adoption of which requires compliance with the procedural requirements of ORS 197.610 to 197.615. Doty v. City of Bandon, 49 Or LUBA 411 (2005).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 227.178 and 227.179 envision three routes to final action on a permit application: (1) a final local government decision within 120 days; (2) a final local government decision in more than 120 days followed by a refund of one-half of the application fee; or (3) a failure to issue a final decision within 120 days followed by a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the local government to approve the permit or demonstrate to the circuit court that approval of the permit would violate a substantive provision of its comprehensive plan or land use regulations. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Central Point, 49 Or LUBA 697 (2005).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. If a city or county adopts a "spurious, bad faith" denial of a "permit, limited land use decision or zone change application" under ORS 215.427 or 227.178 for the purpose of avoiding one of the statutory consequences for failing to take timely action on an application, such a decision constitutes an "action * * * for the purpose of avoiding the requirements of ORS 215.427 or 227.178," within the meaning of ORS 197.835(10)(b)(B). Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Central Point, 49 Or LUBA 697 (2005).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A provision in a local subarea plan allowing submittal of master plan application without the consent of all owners of property subject to the application does not violate ORS 227.175(1). Lowery v. City of Keizer, 48 Or LUBA 568 (2005).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A zoning code amendment that purports to legalize lots or parcels that were created by deed or land sales contract in violation of the applicable local criteria at the time of creation is inconsistent with ORS 92.010 and ORS 215.010(1). Stevens v. Jackson County, 47 Or LUBA 381 (2004).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Oregon Laws 1993, chapter 590, section 6, allows counties to avoid implementing statutory changes to the destination resort requirements until no later than their next periodic review. Even if a county has not concluded its next periodic review, it cannot substantially amend its pre-1993 destination resort regulations without implementing those changes. Stevens v. Jackson County, 47 Or LUBA 381 (2004).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A use determination adopted pursuant to ORS 227.160(2)(b) may include a description of the procedures the city anticipates will be used to consider an application for that use. Boly v. City of Portland, 46 Or LUBA 197 (2004).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. An ordinance that allows an up-or-down vote by the county electorate on permit approval decisions is incompatible with, and therefore preempted by, ORS 215.402, which requires that approval or denial of permit applications be governed by standards and criteria set forth in the county's code and findings explaining why the proposal complies or fails to comply with those standards. Sievers v. Hood River County, 46 Or LUBA 635 (2004).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A building permit may also constitute a statutory "permit" as defined by ORS 227.160 or 215.402, and thus require a local government to provide notice and opportunity for hearing before taking action on that permit, where approval or denial of the permit requires a discretionary determination regarding whether the proposed use is allowed or not allowed under applicable land use regulations. Frymark v. Tillamook County, 45 Or LUBA 486 (2003).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Under ORS 227.178(2), even if a city believes that an application is incomplete or it needs more information to render a decision, the city must conduct a hearing and render a decision based on the information submitted, if the applicant insists. Wiper v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 127 (2003).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. It is inconsistent with the statutory scheme for processing permit applications at ORS 227.160 et seq. for city planning staff to reject a permit application because staff believes more information is necessary or because staff believes additional or different applications are necessary for approval. Wiper v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 127 (2003).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. While a city may deny a permit application if the applicant fails to submit information that is necessary for approval, under ORS 227.175 that decision must be made by a hearings officer or proper designate, after a hearing or other procedure that affords the applicant and others to present evidence and argument. Under the statute, planning staff may not effectively prejudge the merits of the application by rejecting an application that staff feels cannot be approved in the form submitted. Wiper v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 127 (2003).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A local government quasi-judicial land use decision maker is not legally required to verbally explain how all legal and evidentiary issues are resolved. It is the written decision that the decision maker ultimately adopts that is subject to LUBA's review on appeal. Lord v. City of Oregon City, 43 Or LUBA 361 (2002).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where a local government departs from the procedures for continuing a hearing set out in ORS 197.763(6)(a) to (c), the revised procedures must be clearly communicated to all parties and, preferably, reduced to writing. Hawman v. Umatilla County, 42 Or LUBA 223 (2002).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where the circumstances under which oral testimony would be allowed at a continued hearing are not clearly defined, and petitioners allege that they were prejudiced by being denied an opportunity to present oral testimony at the continued hearing based on the ambiguity of the procedures, remand is appropriate to ensure that petitioners receive an opportunity to present that oral testimony. Hawman v. Umatilla County, 42 Or LUBA 223 (2002).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A decision maker does not violate ORS 244.040(1)(a), which prohibits an elected official from using his or her official position to obtain a personal financial gain or avoid a financial detriment, where the decision maker is a member of a church congregation, the church is an applicant for a land use permit that is appealed to LUBA, and the decision maker joins in a request for a voluntary remand of the decision, in part to avoid the legal fees involved in defending the appeal. Friends of Jacksonville v. City of Jacksonville, 42 Or LUBA 137 (2002).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Approval of a building permit for a use that is unquestionably a permitted use in the applicable zone is not a "permit" as defined in ORS 227.160(2)(a) simply because, in issuing the permit, the local government interprets an ambiguous term in a land use regulation that applies to that permitted use. An interpretation of such a regulation in such circumstances is not the type of "discretionary approval" that results in a "permit" under ORS 227.160(2)(a). Tirumali v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 231 (2002).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A hearings officer's order that leaves the record open for seven weeks after a public hearing to allow the applicant to submit additional evidence and also allows opponents seven additional days to respond to any new evidence submitted by the applicant during that seven weeks provides the rights guaranteed by ORS 197.763(6)(c) even though the order does not precisely mirror the statute. Norway Development v. Clackamas County, 40 Or LUBA 276 (2001).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A city cannot rely on the existence of its urban growth boundary to provide the "annexation plan" required by Skourtes v. City of Tigard, 250 Or 537, 444 P2d 22 (1968), and ORS 222.175 as necessary for informed consent to annexation. Johnson v. City of La Grande, 39 Or LUBA 377 (2001).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 227.175(2) requires that a city provide the opportunity for a consolidated permit application and review process; the statute does not require that each ordinance that adopts a new land use permitting process must separately set out provisions for such consolidated review. Rest-Haven Memorial Park v. City of Eugene, 39 Or LUBA 282 (2001).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A Land Use Compatibility Statement requirement that a proposal to apply process water from a fruit processing operation to EFU-zoned land must "comply with all applicable local land use requirements" requires at a minimum that the county determine whether the proposal is a farm use and whether it is a utility facility. These determinations require the exercise of sufficient discretion that the county's decision is both a "land use decision" and a "permit," as those terms are defined by statute. Farrell v. Jackson County, 39 Or LUBA 149 (2000).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 368.361(4) requires a county to apply vacation procedures applicable to counties, even if the property to be vacated is inside a city. Even when a county applies city ordinances governing road vacations, it is not required to obtain the consent of all abutting property owners as would be required by the vacation procedures which are only applicable to cities. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lincoln County, 38 Or LUBA 699 (2000).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Even assuming ORS 467.136 allows local regulation of shooting ranges in certain situations, the statute preempts regulation of "normal and accepted activity" on shooting ranges. City of Sherwood v. Washington County, 38 Or LUBA 656 (2000).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. "Normal and accepted activity" on a shooting range refers to the activity itself, rather than the noise generated by the activity. Because target shooting is a normal and accepted shooting range activity, ORS 467.136 prohibits local governments from adopting or enforcing regulations that make such activity a nuisance or trespass, no matter how noisy the target shooting may be. City of Sherwood v. Washington County, 38 Or LUBA 656 (2000).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 215.416(2) does not obligate a county to follow a consolidated procedure in considering a request for a local land use approval. Rather, the statute provides that if an applicant chooses to submit a consolidated application, the county must have a procedure available to review the consolidated application as a whole. McKenney v. Deschutes County, 37 Or LUBA 685 (2000).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. The ORS 92.285 prohibition against adopting retroactive ordinances includes ordinances that allow retroactive application. Church v. Grant County, 37 Or LUBA 646 (2000).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. An ordinance allowing a county to revoke otherwise final and unreviewable partition approvals is a "retroactive ordinance" within the meaning of ORS 92.285. Church v. Grant County, 37 Or LUBA 646 (2000).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where LUBA rejects as a matter of law a county's erroneous interpretation of its comprehensive plan as imposing a 2.3-acre minimum residential density, procedural errors the county may have committed in considering evidence outside the record in reaching that erroneous interpretation provide no additional basis for remand. Columbia Hills Development Co. v. Columbia County, 36 Or LUBA 691 (1999).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A 3,500-square-foot memorial garden including nine-foot-high granite walls, landscaping and walkways causes a "material change in the use or appearance of land" and is thus "development" for purposes of determining whether approval of the proposed memorial is a permit as defined at ORS 227.160(2). Carlsen v. City of Portland, 36 Or LUBA 614 (1999).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A city errs in accepting new evidence from the applicant as part of the applicant's final written argument under ORS 197.763(6)(e), without offering other parties an opportunity to respond to that new evidence. Brome v. City of Corvallis, 36 Or LUBA 225 (1999).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. That a local government might in future quasi-judicial proceedings recognize that the procedures required by its amended zoning ordinance conflict with the procedures required by ORS 215.416(11) for permit decisions, and therefore follow the procedures required by the statute, does not make the procedures required by the amended zoning ordinance consistent with the statute and does not make a LUBA appeal challenging the zoning ordinance amendment premature. Rochlin v. Multnomah County, 35 Or LUBA 333 (1998).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 215.130(2) authorizes a city to process and approve a zone change contingent on future annexation to the city. Lodge v. City of West Linn, 35 Or LUBA 42 (1998).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. The permissive terms of ORS 215.750 do not prohibit a local government from adding forest template dwelling criteria that are more restrictive than statutory standards. Yontz v. Multnomah County, 34 Or LUBA 367 (1998).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A local government is not obligated by ORS 215.750(1) to allow the establishment of nonforest dwellings. If a local government chooses to allow nonforest dwellings, it is not obligated to allow nonforest dwellings under the alternative template test specified at ORS 215.750(5). Yontz v. Multnomah County, 34 Or LUBA 367 (1998).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 92.175 does not abrogate the requirement of ORS 92.014 that no instrument dedicating land for public use may be recorded without the prior approval of the city or county authorized to accept the dedication. Petersen v. Yamhill County, 33 Or LUBA 584 (1997).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 197.646 does not preclude a local government from imposing a regulation that is more restrictive than what is required by ORS 215.750 before that regulation is reviewed by DLCD. Evans v. Multnomah County, 33 Or LUBA 555 (1997).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Under ORS 227.215, the definition of "development" is sufficiently broad to encompass the removal of a tree for landscaping purposes, and a local government may regulate tree removal through the issuance of development permits. Lindstedt v. City of Cannon Beach, 33 Or LUBA 516 (1997).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where a city's motion to supplement the record with notice of adoption of ordinance will not supplement or complete the challenged decision in any way that is challenged by petitioner, the motion will be denied due to its lack of bearing on the merits of the appeal. Western PCS, Inc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 33 Or LUBA 369 (1997).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. In adopting land use regulations, including emergency and temporary land use regulations, a city is bound by the substantive and procedural requirements established by ORS 197.610 and Statewide Planning Goals 1 and 2. These statutory and Goal requirements must be followed notwithstanding contrary city charter provisions. Western PCS, Inc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 33 Or LUBA 369 (1997).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. The city's failure to comply with ORS 197.610(1) in not submitting proposed comprehensive plan amendments to LCDC or DLCD is a substantive error that requires remand. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A county was not required to apply the Statewide Planning Goals to minor partitions approved prior to LCDC acknowledgment of the county's comprehensive plan if the county did not regulate minor partitions under its subdivision ordinance. Joseph v. Baker County, 33 Or LUBA 38 (1997).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. The public meetings law, ORS 192.610 to 192.690, and a local ordinance that requires all evidence, deliberation, and decisions to be made before the public and on the record, do not prohibit the board of county commissioners from having an off-the-record consultation with legal counsel during the course of a public hearing. Collins v. Klamath County, 32 Or LUBA 338 (1997).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. In making a zoning classification determination, the city properly relied on the definition and review procedures set forth in ORS 227.160(2) and ORS 227.175(11), and was not required to follow the local procedural requirements for a Type I review. North Portland Citizens v. City of Portland, 32 Or LUBA 70 (1996).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 215.431(1) and (2) allow delegation by a county governing body to the county planning commission or hearings officer of the authority to conduct hearings and make decisions on applications for plan amendments, subject to appeal to the county governing body. However, under ORS 215.413(5)(a), ORS 215.431(1) and (2) do not apply to any plan amendment for which an exception to any of the Statewide Planning Goals is required. Young v. Douglas County, 31 Or LUBA 545 (1996).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Statute authorizing counties to establish local appeal fees and setting standards for the amount of fees does not require the county to evaluate each appeal to determine whether an appeal fee established by ordinance meets the statutory standard. ORS 215.422(1)(c). Cummings v. Tillamook County, 30 Or LUBA 17 (1995).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A local government violates a substantial right when it charges more than the maximum appeal fee allowed by ORS 227.175(10)(b) for a hearing requested under ORS 227.175(10)(a). Gensman v. City of Tigard, 29 Or LUBA 505 (1995).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. If a local government chooses to treat an application as one for a land use decision, rather than a limited land use decision, and a local appeal as one under ORS 227.175(10)(a), it may not charge more than the maximum appeal fee allowed by ORS 227.175(10)(b). Gensman v. City of Tigard, 29 Or LUBA 505 (1995).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Determining whether an advisory body, which submitted a recommendation to the local decision maker in a land use proceeding, violated provisions of the Public Meetings Law in the manner its meetings were held is beyond LUBA's scope of review. Champion v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 618 (1995).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Absent a local regulation to the contrary, where documents supporting a land use application are available for review in the local government planning office, a local government is not required to give copies of such documents to individuals free of charge. Bates v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 21 (1994).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where comprehensive plan and zoning map amendments simply change the designation and zone of a county park to ones that allow parks as a conditional use, the amendments are not inherently inconsistent with an existing dedication of the subject property for public use as a park. Therefore, that the amendments may not comply with statutory requirements for vacation of such a dedication provides no basis for reversal or remand. Sahagian v. Columbia County, 27 Or LUBA 592 (1994).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. An annexation of contiguous property with the written consent of the property owners, pursuant to ORS 222.125, is subject to the requirement of ORS 197.175(1) that the annexation be determined to be consistent with applicable land use requirements, and the recognized procedural requirements for such quasi-judicial land use decision making. Roloff v. City of Milton-Freewater, 27 Or LUBA 80 (1994).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. There is no prohibition against decision makers consulting with staff during quasi-judicial land use proceedings and no requirement that such consultation occur in the presence of other parties. Sorte v. City of Newport, 26 Or LUBA 236 (1993).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Absent some legal requirement to the contrary, a local government is not bound to assure that its final written decision conforms to its oral decision in all particulars. Louisiana Pacific v. Umatilla County, 26 Or LUBA 247 (1993).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. The exclusive forum for enforcement of public meetings laws is circuit court. That public meetings law violations may have occurred during the land use decision making process does not, of itself, provide a basis for reversal or remand. Sorte v. City of Newport, 26 Or LUBA 236 (1993).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Local regulations govern the determination of when a local government decision is final for purposes of LUBA review, so long as the local regulations do not conflict with applicable statutes or LUBA's rules. City of Grants Pass v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 722 (1993).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 215.283 establishes standards directly applicable to county land use decisions concerning nonfarm uses of EFU-zoned land. Regardless of whether a county adopts an exception to Goal 3 for EFU-zoned land, it cannot allow a nonfarm use not listed under ORS 215.283 on such land without changing the zone. Schrock Farms, Inc. v. Linn County, 25 Or LUBA 187 (1993).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 197.279(2) establishes the procedures required for adoption of a wetland conservation plan. A local government's failure to adopt a wetland conservation plan, provides no basis for reversal or remand of a challenged decision, because local governments are not required to adopt such plans. Clarke v. City of Hillsboro, 25 Or LUBA 195 (1993).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Under ORS 517.780(1), where a county surface mining ordinance in effect on July 1, 1972 has been amended, but not repealed, the county's surface mining ordinance and amendments thereto are not subject to the fee limitations established by ORS 517.780(4) and 517.800. Oregon City Leasing, Inc. v. Columbia County, 25 Or LUBA 129 (1993).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where a settlement agreement in a lawsuit previously filed by intervenor against a county simply says the county will consider a rezoning application for intervenor's property, as it is required to do under ORS 215.416(2) in any case, the settlement agreement is irrelevant to an application for a replacement dwelling on the subject property, and does not establish bias or prejudgment by the county decision maker. Heceta Water District v. Lane County, 24 Or LUBA 402 (1993).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A local ordinance which prohibits the short term rental use of dwellings in residential zones is not an unlawful rent control regulation under ORS 91.225. Cope v. City of Cannon Beach, 23 Or LUBA 233 (1992).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Where intervenors filed a conditional use permit application as an agent of the property owner, there is no violation of the provision in ORS 215.416(1) stating that an owner of property may apply for a permit. Silani v. Klamath County, 22 Or LUBA 735 (1992).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A board of county commissioners need not provide parties an opportunity to rebut a memorandum in which the county counsel provides legal advice concerning a pending local land use appeal. Such communications are not ex parte contacts. ORS 215.422(4). Toth v. Curry County, 22 Or LUBA 488 (1991).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A local governing body is required by ORS 197.175(2)(d) to apply applicable provisions of its comprehensive plan and land use regulations in determining whether a wrecking certificate should be approved, notwithstanding that it has not adopted regulations as authorized by ORS 822.140(3). Bradbury v. City of Independence, 22 Or LUBA 398 (1991).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. In the absence of a local or other regulation making provisions of ORS chapter 468, pertaining to pollution control, applicable to an application for a wrecking certificate as independent approval standards, that statute does not govern local approval of a wrecking certificate. Bradbury v. City of Independence, 22 Or LUBA 398 (1991).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. ORS 215.431 does not apply to designated forestlands and, therefore, comprehensive plan amendments concerning such forestlands must be adopted by the county governing body. Wickwire v. Clackamas County, 21 Or LUBA 278 (1991).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Although a decision rendered in violation of statutory public meeting law requirements may be voided, the circuit court for the county in which the governing body ordinarily meets has jurisdiction, not LUBA. ORS 192.680. Strawn v. City of Albany, 21 Or LUBA 172 (1991).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. A zoning clearance approval which requires determinations on whether a proposed use is incidental and subordinate to an existing use, and whether and the extent to which an existing use is a lawful nonconforming use, requires interpretation and the exercise of judgment within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) and (C) and, therefore, is a "permit" under ORS 215.402(4). Komning v. Grant County, 20 Or LUBA 481 (1990).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. The written notice of a decision on a permit application required by ORS 227.173(3) is written notice of the local government's final decision. Harvard Medical Park, Ltd. v. City of Roseburg, 19 Or LUBA 555 (1990).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. While a decision to approve a zone change does not approve a "permit," within the meaning of ORS 227.160(2), a decision which approves both a variance and a minor partition does approve a "permit." Harvard Medical Park, Ltd. v. City of Roseburg, 19 Or LUBA 555 (1990).

25.3.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Generally. Use of a process, established by county plan and ordinance provisions, which allows a county to refine its mapping of areas where destination resorts are permitted, with regard to prime farmland, through determination of compliance with the statutory and goal siting criteria on a case-by-case basis, is not precluded by the destination resort statute. Foland v. Jackson County, 18 Or LUBA 731 (1990).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. The goal-post rule at ORS 227.178(3) does not control the relevant date for ascertaining facts such as the amount of land needed for a particular use. Carson Property LUBA Appeal, Inc. v. City of Corvallis, 81 Or LUBA 175 (2020).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A county may not defer a determination of compliance with applicable approval criteria to a future proceeding that does not allow for public participation merely because the deferred criteria require no interpretation or judgment. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Traffic performance standards in the local government's transportation system plan (TSP) are not approval criteria applicable to a limited land use decision that were incorporated pursuant to ORS 197.195(1), where the applicable criteria either do not refer to the TSP at all or where they only generally "incorporate[] by reference the city's public facility master plans, including plans for domestic water, sanitary sewer, storm drainage, parks, and transportation." Oster v. City of Silverton, 79 Or LUBA 447 (2019).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Traffic performance standards in the local government's transportation system plan (TSP) are not approval criteria applicable to a limited land use decision that were incorporated pursuant to ORS 197.195(1), where the applicable criteria either do not refer to the TSP at all or where they only generally "incorporate[] by reference the city's public facility master plans, including plans for domestic water, sanitary sewer, storm drainage, parks, and transportation." Oster v. City of Silverton, 79 Or LUBA 447 (2019).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. When considering if a piece of property is "suitable for farm use" within the meaning of OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), the county must consider the parcel in full; it cannot exclude a portion of the property being constrained from farm use from consideration until it evaluates if a reasonable farmer would put the subject property to farm use and/or grazing using the applicable criteria. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 180 (2018).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. When deciding if a property is "suitable for farm use" the county must consider the adjacent or intermingled properties, and property lines or land ownership are not the sole deciding factors. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 180 (2018).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. When local code sets out independent grounds for granting a variance, and when only one of three rezoning criteria must be met in order to grant a rezoning, and the city adequately demonstrated that one criterion was satisfied, LUBA need not consider arguments relating to the other two criteria. American Tower Corp v. City of Tualatin, 78 Or LUBA 350 (2018).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. When the city has a general track for requesting planned unit development (PUD) approval and a clear and objective track for requesting PUD approval, the city is not required to demonstrate that the applicant is able to gain approval for some development on the subject property under its needed housing track. ORS 197.307(6)(a) requires only that the city allow the applicant the "option of proceeding" under the needed housing track, and does not require a guarantee or demonstration of any kind that development is likely to be approved under the clear and objective approval standards in the needed housing track. Dreyer v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 391 (2018).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Senate Bill (SB) 1051 (2018), section 12 did not require cities to amend their land use regulations to implement SB 1051 by July 1, 2018. SB 1051 itself is silent regarding any requirement, much less a deadline for a city to amend its land use regulations to comply with its provisions. SB 1051, section 12 provides for a delayed "operative date" of July 1, 2018. That delayed operative date provides a grace period before which the provisions of SB 1051 did not apply, and after which, the statute applies directly and cities are required to "allow" accessory dwelling in areas required by the statue. But SB 1051 does not direct cities as to the mechanism by which to allow accessory dwellings. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 441 (2018).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. While ORS 197.646(1) requires the city to amend its land use regulations to implement SB 1051 (2018), ORS 197.646(2)(b) requires the Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) to establish by rule the time period within which a local government must amend its code to implement a new land use statute "if the legislation does not specify a time period for compliance[.]" LCDC has not adopted any rules specifying a time period for implementation of SB 1051, and SB 1051 itself does not require cities to adopt amendments to their codes that implement all of the provisions of SB 1051 by July 1, 2018. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 441 (2018).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where in evaluating petitioner's zone verification request pursuant to Eugene Code (EC) 9.2741(2), the city failed to consider the ORS 197.312(5) requirement that all accessory dwellings must be allowed "subject to reasonable local regulations relating to siting and design," the proper remedy is for LUBA to remand the decision to the city for the city to consider in the first instance whether EC 9.2741(2) is a "reasonable local regulation[] relating to siting and design" pursuant to ORS 197.312(5). Kamps-Hughes v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 457 (2018).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Subsection (1) of ORS 215.427 imposes either a 120-day or a 150-day deadline for a local government to take final action on a permit or zone change application. Subsection (2) of that statute gives a county 30 days to advise permit applicants who submit incomplete applications what is needed to make the application complete, and also sets out the three ways an application may be deemed complete. Subsection (3) of that statute freezes the approval standards, as of the date the application was first submitted, if the application is complete when submitted or rendered complete "within 180 days of the date the application was first submitted." Subsection (4) of that statute renders the application "void" on the one hundred and eighty-first day after the application was "first * * * submitted," if the applicant has not by that time complied with one of the submittal requirements set out in that subsection or subsection (2) to make the application complete. Bora Architects, Inc. v. Tillamook County, 76 Or LUBA 330 (2017).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. The date a permit application was first submitted is important because new or modified permit criteria enacted after that date do not apply if the application was complete when submitted or is rendered complete in accordance with ORS 215.427(2). The date a permit application is first submitted is also important because on the one hundred and eighty-first day after it is submitted it becomes void if the applicant has been notified that additional information is needed to make the application complete and the applicant has not taken one of the three steps set out at ORS 215.427(4)(a) through (c). Bora Architects, Inc. v. Tillamook County, 76 Or LUBA 330 (2017).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A local government does not violate the "goalpost" rule at ORS 215.427(3)(a) when it applies a 1983 master plan to govern development within the master planned community, consistent with a code provision providing that a master plan stays in effect until repealed, and rejects arguments that the master plan had been impliedly repealed, notwithstanding that the local government had not previously applied the master plan as a source of development standards. Kine v. Deschutes County, 75 Or LUBA 419 (2017).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Code procedures and submittal requirements for a pre-application conference are not "applicable criteria" for purposes of ORS 197.835(4)(a), which allows a petitioner to raise new issues regarding applicable approval criteria that a local government omits from the notice of hearing, and the local government's failure to list pre-application conference code provisions in the notice of hearing does not allow a petitioner to avoid the raise it or waive it requirements of ORS 197.763(1). Knapp v. City of Jacksonville, 70 Or LUBA 259 (2014).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A local code provision that prohibits grading or development on portions of a site that exceed 20 percent is "clear enough for an applicant to know what [it] must show during the application process." Lee v. City of Portland, 57 Or App 798, 802, 646 P2d 662 (1982). Nothing in the language of ORS 227.173(1) requires that a method of measuring slope must be included in the provision in order to determine whether the 20 percent standard is met. SE Neighbors Neighborhood Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 68 Or LUBA 51 (2013).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A permit applicant may not insist that a permit application be reviewed based on the standards and criteria in effect on the date the permit application was submitted, if the application is later changed in a material way. Zirker v. City of Bend, 64 Or LUBA 114 (2011).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. After an application for permit approval is denied, ORS 227.178(3) does not preclude the permit applicant from filing a second application for permit approval of the same proposal under amended standards and criteria that are in effect when the second application is filed. Zirker v. City of Bend, 64 Or LUBA 114 (2011).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where the challenged decision approves (1) a comprehensive plan amendment adding a site to the county's Goal 5 inventory of significant sites, and (2) a zone change to allow mining of the site, because the zone change application is consolidated with, and dependent upon, the plan amendment, the goal-post rule at ORS 215.427(3) does not operate to "freeze" the standards that apply to the zone change to those applicable on the date the application was filed. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. The goal-post rule at ORS 215.427(3)(a) is concerned with preventing local governments from changing the substantive criteria that apply to permit applications after application is filed. That concern is not implicated where the applicant is contemporaneously seeking both (1) permit approval and (2) a zone change, and the only "new" standards being applied to the permit application are the standards under the requested new zone. Devin Oil Co., Inc. v. Morrow County, 62 Or LUBA 247 (2010).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 215.416(2) requires counties to provide for a consolidated procedure for processing permit applications and zone or plan changes necessary to authorize the permit. Where permit and zone change applications are subject to different procedures or deadlines or for some other reason the two applications cannot be entirely consolidated, it is consistent with the goal-post rule at ORS 215.427(3)(a) to process the different applications together on the same time-line as much as possible and, if necessary, impose conditions to ensure that permit decisions do not take effect prior to the date accompanying zone changes become final. Devin Oil Co., Inc. v. Morrow County, 62 Or LUBA 247 (2010).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Even if local ordinances do not incorporate state Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) noise control regulations, a local government may not authorize noise levels that violate the DEQ regulations. Scott v. City of Jacksonville, 60 Or LUBA 307 (2010).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Nothing in ORS 197.763(3) requires that the notice of a hearing on remand summarize LUBA's bases for remand, and such bases for remand are not "applicable criteria" that must be listed in the notice of remand hearing. Easterly v. Polk County, 59 Or LUBA 417 (2009).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. If a local government interprets its code to the effect that federal particulate matter standards supply the relevant test for compliance with local approval standards, articulates that interpretation for the first time in its final decision, and denies the application for failure to present evidence of compliance with the federal standards, remand would likely be necessary to give the applicant an opportunity to present evidence addressing the federal standards. However, remand is not warranted where the decision merely discusses federal standards, but ultimately concludes that those standards do not govern. Easterly v. Polk County, 59 Or LUBA 417 (2009).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A street connectivity requirement that development street systems not create "excessive travel lengths" is sufficient to qualify as a standard or criterion, and therefore does not violate the ORS 227.173(1) requirement that permit decisions must "be based on standards and criteria." Konrady v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 466 (2009).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. When an applicant files a consolidated set of applications for: (1) a comprehensive plan amendment; (2) a zone change that is dependent on that plan map amendment; and (3) a development permit that is dependent on that zone change, the goal post rule at ORS 197.427(3)(a) does not apply to "freeze" in place the standards and criteria that applied to that development permit as of the date the applications were filed. Instead the standards and criteria that apply are those supplied by the new plan and zoning designations. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 190 (2009).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 215.427(3)(a), which is referred to as the fixed goalpost rule, has the legal effect of fixing or freezing the law, as it existed on the date a complete permit application was received. ORS 215.427(3)(a) does not require that the county limit its evidentiary review to the facts as they existed on the date a complete permit application was submitted. Hegele v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 156 (2008).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. While the probable intent of the "goal-post" statute at ORS 215.427(3)(a) is to prevent local governments from approving or denying a permit based on legislative amendments that post-date the application, the statute is not expressly limited to legislative amendments. The goal-post statute arguably also operates to prevent local governments from approving or denying a permit application based on state or local regulations that were initially waived under Ballot Measure 37 (ORS 197.352) but later become "applicable" when the claimant dies, the property is transferred, and the right to seek development approval free of the waived regulations is lost. DLCD v. Jefferson County, 55 Or LUBA 625 (2008).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. The drafters of Ballot Measure 37 (ORS 197.352) limited development or use rights to the claimant, and that limitation is a central feature of the measure. LUBA will not presume that the voters intended that limitation to be avoided by operation of the goal-post statute at ORS 215.427(3)(a), which if given full effect would allow the local government to grant development approvals based on ORS 197.352 waivers to persons who are not the claimant. DLCD v. Jefferson County, 55 Or LUBA 625 (2008).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where Ballot Measure 37 (ORS 197.352) and the goal-post statute at ORS 215.427(3)(a) operate together, they come into conflict and cannot both be given full effect. DLCD v. Jefferson County, 55 Or LUBA 625 (2008).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. In circumstances where the goal-post statute at ORS 215.427(3)(a) conflicts with Ballot Measure 37 (ORS 197.352), the latter prevails, because ORS 197.352 is the more specific and later-adopted statute. DLCD v. Jefferson County, 55 Or LUBA 625 (2008).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 215.427(3) does not preclude the local government's compliance with OAR 660-041-0030, which requires notice to DLCD of an application for a permit pursuant to a Ballot Measure 37 waiver, because the rule is not an "approval standard or criteria" applicable to a permit application. DLCD v. Deschutes County, 54 Or LUBA 799 (2007).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Although local governments frequently attempt to advise permit applicants regarding the scope and nature of evidence that will be required to demonstrate that a proposal complies with applicable land use approval criteria, it is not the local government's burden to accurately predict in advance all of the evidence that may ultimately be needed to obtain approval of a land use application. Gillette v. Lane County, 52 Or LUBA 1 (2006).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. The fixed goal posts rule in ORS 215.427(3)(a) only applies where the county's comprehensive plan and land use regulations are acknowledged at the time the permit application is submitted. Niederhof v. Deschutes County, 48 Or LUBA 626 (2004).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. When neither the notice, nor the staff report, nor the local government's public discussion, nor the decision ever mentions the applicable criteria, a local government commits procedural errors that prejudice a petitioner's substantial rights. Naumes Properties, LLC v. City of Central Point, 46 Or LUBA 304 (2004).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. An ordinance that allows an up-or-down vote by the county electorate on permit approval decisions is incompatible with, and therefore preempted by, ORS 215.402, which requires that approval or denial of permit applications be governed by standards and criteria set forth in the county's code and findings explaining why the proposal complies or fails to comply with those standards. Sievers v. Hood River County, 46 Or LUBA 635 (2004).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 227.173(1) requires that permit approval standards must be included in a city's land use regulations, but that statute does not require that a city adopt standards to guide a permit applicant's evidentiary presentation. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Hillsboro, 46 Or LUBA 680 (2004).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A city's failure to identify standards that set out the elements of an easement that must be recorded to satisfy the city's access requirements does not provide a basis for reversal or remand where those standards are not approval criteria. Martin v. City of Dunes City, 45 Or LUBA 458 (2003).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Even if ORS 197.522 can be read to apply to a city decision to approve a partition and can be read to limit the types of conditions that may be imposed to "reasonable conditions," ORS 197.522 does not place a burden on a local government to demonstrate that its conditions are reasonably necessary to address particular circumstances presented in the proposed partition. Martin v. City of Dunes City, 45 Or LUBA 458 (2003).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Even if ORS 197.522 is applicable to a decision to approve a minor partition, ORS 197.522 does not require a city to modify its minimum right-of-way requirements to respond to arguments that the right-of-way requirements are excessive in a particular case. Martin v. City of Dunes City, 45 Or LUBA 458 (2003).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. The fixed goal post rule established by ORS 215.427(3) does not apply to an application for a zone change where (1) that application for a zone change is part of, or submitted contemporaneously with, an application for a comprehensive plan amendment, and (2) the zone change is requested to implement the requested comprehensive plan amendment rather than as a separate request that could be approved independently of the requested comprehensive plan map amendment. Friends of the Applegate v. Josephine County, 44 Or LUBA 786 (2003).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 197.685(3) and (4) allow local governments to adopt clear and objective approval criteria for seasonal farmworker housing that do not have the result of discouraging needed seasonal farmworker housing, but do not require local governments to adopt additional approval criteria, and do not make unrelated approval criteria applicable in the absence of legislation incorporating those criteria. Durig v. Washington County, 40 Or LUBA 1 (2001).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A city is allowed latitude under ORS 227.173(1) in adopting nonspecific and highly subjective criteria, and in explaining what such criteria require in particular cases. Design review criteria requiring that proposed signs enhance the character of historic districts are not impermissibly vague under ORS 227.173(1), where a reasonable applicant could discern from the criteria and the city's explanation of the district's character why the proposed sign violates the criteria. Multi-Light Sign Co. v. City of Portland, 39 Or LUBA 605 (2001).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss based on an argument that the challenged decision is a ministerial decision, where the decision interprets and applies a local land use ordinance adopted to implement a statute and that interpretation requires the exercise of discretion. Demlow v. City of Hillsboro, 39 Or LUBA 307 (2001).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A local ordinance that institutes a process to remove property from a Goal 5 historic resources inventory but fails to include a method to determine whether the historic designation was "imposed" on the property, within the meaning of ORS 197.772(3), is inconsistent with that statute. Demlow v. City of Hillsboro, 39 Or LUBA 307 (2001).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A local government may not apply only local code provisions to an application to remove property from a historic resources inventory, where the local code provisions are inconsistent with statutory provisions permitting removal of certain properties from a historic resources inventory. Demlow v. City of Hillsboro, 39 Or LUBA 307 (2001).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where a city code provision states that, following approval of a permit application, impacts of the proposal must be mitigated, a requirement that the city manager adopt rules to implement that code mitigation requirement does not violate ORS 227.173(1), which requires that the "standards and criteria" for approval or denial of a land use permit be included in the city's development ordinances. Rest-Haven Memorial Park v. City of Eugene, 39 Or LUBA 282 (2001).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. After a city has approved a permit application, the city may not apply code provisions to require that development occur within a particular time frame when the permit was initially approved without the application of those code provisions, and the city's past practice did not include the imposition of the development deadlines contained in those code provisions. Halvorson Mason Corp. v. City of Depoe Bay, 39 Or LUBA 193 (2000).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. When a variance approval is based on a specific finding that the proposed use is permitted in the underlying zone, the variance approval establishes a time frame for constructing the proposed use, and when the applicant applies for the building permit within the allotted time, the city is obligated by ORS 227.178(3) to apply the same "standards and criteria" that were applicable at the time the variance application was submitted. Gagnier v. City of Gladstone, 38 Or LUBA 858 (2000).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 227.178(3) implicitly requires that a city apply a consistent set of standards to the discretionary approval of the proposed development of land and the construction of that development in accordance with the discretionary approval. A city may not apply one set of standards to the discretionary approval of a proposed development of land and subsequently apply an amended standard to deny a building permit to construct the development in accordance with the discretionary permit. Gagnier v. City of Gladstone, 38 Or LUBA 858 (2000).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. The approval of a "permit" under ORS 227.160(2) and 227.178(3) carries with it the right to obtain the building permits that are necessary to build the approved proposed development of land, provided the applicant seeks and obtains those building permits within the time specified in the permit itself or in accordance with any applicable land use regulations that establish a deadline for seeking and obtaining required building permits. Gagnier v. City of Gladstone, 38 Or LUBA 858 (2000).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Even if the decision makers were persuaded to reverse their initial decision by a change in city policy that occurred after the subject application was filed, a local government may reinterpret the meaning of indisputably applicable approval standards. Anderson v. City of Medford, 38 Or LUBA 792 (2000).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where a permit authorizing residential use of a property is granted without specifically authorizing a dwelling of any particular height, and detailed building plans are submitted 10 months after the residential permit is approved, the city is not obligated to apply the building height limitation that was in effect when the residential permit was approved. Rivera v. City of Bandon, 38 Or LUBA 736 (2000).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A city's failure to provide notice that it considered a particular comprehensive plan goal to be an approval criterion is a procedural error, and where that failure denies the applicant an opportunity to present argument and evidence concerning that plan goal, the procedural error prejudices the applicant's substantial rights. Oregon Entertainment Corp. v. City of Beaverton, 38 Or LUBA 440 (2000).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A code criterion requiring that a proposal be shown to be compatible with the surrounding area and to not have more than a minimal impact on the livability and appropriate development of the surrounding area is not unconstitutionally vague and does not violate the ORS 227.173(1) requirement that permit approval criteria be included in the city's land use regulations. Oregon Entertainment Corp. v. City of Beaverton, 38 Or LUBA 440 (2000).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A city's decision violates ORS 227.173(1) where the city relies on "factors" or "considerations" that are unconnected to approval standards established in its land use regulations to deny a permit application. Ashley Manor Care Centers v. City of Grants Pass, 38 Or LUBA 308 (2000).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A permit application may be approved based on adopted standards and criteria that are not yet acknowledged. However, under ORS 197.625(3), if the standards and criteria are not ultimately acknowledged, any improvements that have been made in reliance on a permit issued under the unacknowledged standards and criteria may have to be removed. Western States v. Multnomah County, 37 Or LUBA 835 (2000).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A permit application may be approved based on adopted standards and criteria that are not yet acknowledged. However, under ORS 197.625(3), if the standards and criteria are not ultimately acknowledged, any improvements that have been made in reliance on a permit issued under the unacknowledged standards and criteria may have to be removed. Western States v. Multnomah County, 37 Or LUBA 835 (2000).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. An argument that a local government failed to provide adequate notice of evidence needed to satisfy applicable criteria will fail where the county's staff report interprets the code to require certain evidence and petitioner in fact provides evidence to show that the criterion, as interpreted, is satisfied. McKenney v. Deschutes County, 37 Or LUBA 685 (2000).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. To establish a challenge under ORS 227.173(1) or ORS 215.416(8), a petitioner must demonstrate that a standard is so vague that an applicant is unable to determine whether and how approval may be granted. McKenney v. Deschutes County, 37 Or LUBA 685 (2000).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 227.178(3) constrains a city's ability to change existing interpretations regarding the applicability of approval criteria during the course of proceedings on an application, but does not constrain a city's ability to reinterpret the meaning of indisputably applicable standards. Greer v. Josephine County, 37 Or LUBA 261 (1999).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 227.178(3) provides that the standards and criteria that are in effect when a subdivision application is submitted govern approval of the subdivision application, but ORS 227.178(3) does not limit a local government's authority to adopt construction or development standards that apply after the subdivision is approved. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. While petitioners may raise issues concerning compliance with approval criteria that are not identified in the local notice of hearing, petitioners must supply some explanation why they believe a "purpose statement" should be viewed as an approval criterion; petitioners may not simply assume that it is a criterion. Rouse v. Tillamook County, 34 Or LUBA 530 (1998).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where preliminary subdivision and PUD approval is not modified, approval of the final subdivision and PUD plans is governed by the standard in effect when the application for preliminary approval was submitted. Rochlin v. City of Portland, 34 Or LUBA 379 (1998).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Brentmar v. Jackson County, 321 Or 481, 900 P2d 1030 (1995), circumscribes a local government's authority under ORS 215.283(1) with respect to substantive standards, but it does not prescribe the procedure the county must use when considering whether a proposed use is permitted. Corp. of Presiding Bishop v. Klamath County, 34 Or LUBA 131 (1998).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A local government's failure to list a possible zoning restriction in the notice of hearing, as required by ORS 197.763, is harmless error, where the zoning restriction is a basis for imposing conditions rather than an approval standard. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where the notice of hearing contained an error in identifying the zoning map designation being requested, the error provides no basis for reversal or remand where the error had no effect on the approval standards the zone change request was subject to and therefore resulted in no prejudice to petitioner. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 227.178(3) does not prevent a city from adopting an interpretation of a comprehensive plan that is different than the interpretation that was in effect on the date the permit application was submitted, and applying that new interpretation to the permit application. Holland v. City of Cannon Beach, 34 Or LUBA 1 (1998).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Under ORS 215.284(3) a partition of EFU-zoned land must leave a remainder parcel that meets the applicable minimum parcel size. Lyle v. Wheeler County, 33 Or LUBA 746 (1997).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Under ORS 197.625, when a county code provision has not yet been acknowledged by LCDC, a land use application is subject to that provision, as well as to the applicable land use goal and its implementing rules. Evans v. Multnomah County, 33 Or LUBA 555 (1997).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Unless a specific process is followed to eliminate lot lines, under ORS 92.107 lots remain discrete lots. Koo v. Polk County, 33 Or LUBA 487 (1997).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Under ORS 215.428(3), petitioner's application is subject to the statutes and rules in effect at the time the application was first submitted. Still v. Marion County, 32 Or LUBA 40 (1996).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 258.036, which governs jurisdiction over election contests, does not apply to the election of members to a county citizen planning advisory committee (CPAC). Boom v. Columbia County, 31 Or LUBA 318 (1996).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. To grant approval for a replacement dwelling under ORS 215.283(1)(t), the county need only find that the original dwelling was lawfully established. Drake v. Polk County, 30 Or LUBA 199 (1995).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. To the extent parties were not properly apprised of the applicable criteria during the initial hearing, they must be provided the information required by ORS 197.763(3)(b) on remand. Noble v. City of Fairview, 30 Or LUBA 180 (1995).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 227.178(3), which requires that approval or denial of a land use application be based upon the standards and criteria that were applicable at the time the application was first submitted, would be frustrated if amendments to state regulations had the effect of changing the criteria affecting an application during the proceedings. East Lancaster Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Salem, 30 Or LUBA 147 (1995).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Provision in Transportation Planning Rule (OAR 660-12-055(3)) that requires direct application of certain provisions after a certain date does not override ORS 227.178(3), which requires that approval or denial of a land use application be based upon the standards and criteria that were in effect at the time the application was first submitted. East Lancaster Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Salem, 30 Or LUBA 147 (1995).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 215.428(3), which states that approval or denial of an application shall be based upon the standards and criteria that were applicable at the time the application was first submitted, does not require a local government processing a partition application to proceed as if factual circumstances existing at the time of application remain unchanged. Petree v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 449 (1995).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A code provision requiring that certain applications for changes to an approved planned development (PD) final development plan "shall be processed in the same manner as for a new PD" must be interpreted consistently with ORS 227.178(3) to mean that any standard which would be applicable to a new application for PD approval is applicable to such applications for changes to approved PDs. ONRC v. City of Oregon City, 29 Or LUBA 90 (1995).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A code definition of "nonconforming use," together with a code provision that a "nonconforming use may be continued," embody the standards applicable to determining the existence of a protected nonconforming use sufficiently to satisfy ORS 215.416(8). A county may consider relevant legal principles concerning the existence of nonconforming uses set out in the opinions of LUBA and the Oregon appellate courts, without having to adopt such principles as county regulations. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 417 (1994).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 197.763(3)(b) and (5)(a) require a local government to provide notice of the standards applicable to an application for a quasi-judicial land use decision, prior to its hearing on such an application. Laine v. City of Rockaway Beach. 27 Or LUBA 493 (1994).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A code requirement that a parking structure be "consistent with the City's short term parking strategy" does not, in itself, satisfy the requirement of ORS 227.173(1) that permit standards and criteria be set forth in development ordinances, because it explains nothing about the basis on which such an application will be approved or denied. BCT Partnership v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 278 (1994).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where consistency with the city's "short term parking strategy" is a code requirement, a city cannot determine its "short term parking strategy" is something that underlies various provisions of its plan and code and cannot announce that strategy for the first time in a decision on a permit application. This violates the requirement of ORS 227.173(1) that permit standards and criteria themselves must be set out in the city's development ordinances. BCT Partnership v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 278 (1994).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. The meaning of the term "standards and criteria" in ORS 227.178(3) is a question of state law, and a city's interpretation and application of this term does not bind LUBA. The role of the term "standards and criteria" in ORS 227.178(3) is to assure both proponents and opponents of an application that the substantive factors that are actually applied and that have a meaningful impact on a decision permitting or denying an application will remain constant throughout the proceedings. Forest Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 215 (1994).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where a city has created a two-stage (tentative plan and final plat) approval process for subdivision applications, under ORS 227.178(3), both subdivision tentative plan and final plat approvals must be based on the "standards and criteria" in effect when the subdivision application is initially filed. Forest Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 215 (1994).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 215.130(2) allows cities to adopt contingent plan and zoning designations for property to be annexed in the future, but it does not allow cities to grant contingent permits for property to be annexed in the future. Recht v. City of Newport, 26 Or LUBA 316 (1993).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Unless a county notifies the applicant that its permit application is incomplete, as required by ORS 215.428(2), and the deficiency is not remedied within 180 days, under ORS 215.428(3) the county must apply the standards and criteria in effect when the application was filed. Cummings v. Tillamook County, 26 OR LUBA 139 (1993).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A local code provision that imposes "compatibility" as a permit approval criterion adequately informs interested parties of the basis on which an application will be approved or denied and, therefore, complies with ORS 215.416(8). Spiering v. Yamhill County, 25 Or LUBA 695 (1993).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. The fact that a PUD proposal was altered in 1992 to eliminate a need for story variances, does not retroactively cause the underlying application, submitted in 1990, to be incomplete at the time it was submitted. Corbett/Terwilliger Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 601 (1993).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where a proposal is changed after the permit application is submitted, ORS 227.178(3) locks in the standards in effect at the time the application was first submitted, so long as the original proposal remains "fundamentally intact" after the change. Corbett/Terwilliger Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 601 (1993).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where a city's plan and land use regulations were unacknowledged at the time the subject permit application was initially filed, ORS 227.178(3) does not restrict the applicable standards to those in effect when the application was filed. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 25 Or LUBA 327 (1993).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. While ORS 215.416(9) does not require that findings include citations to, or verbatim quotes of, applicable approval standards, it does require that a reasonable person be able to determine from the local government's decision what it considered to be the relevant criteria and standards. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 312 (1993).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where a sign-permitting process involves two steps—obtaining a sign permit and architectural review approval—and each step requires the filing of an application and an application fee, and is subject to different standards which are intended to be applied in addition to the requirements of the other, under ORS 227.178(3) an application for sign permit or architectural review approval is subject to the standards in effect when that particular application is submitted. A Storage Place v. City of Tualatin, 25 Or LUBA 202 (1993).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Under ORS 215.428(1) to (3), an application for permit approval is considered complete when it is filed, unless the county notifies the permit applicant that information is missing. ORS 215.428(2). DLCD v. Crook County, 25 Or LUBA 98 (1993).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. LUBA will not assume changes in a PUD proposal between outline development plan approval and preliminary development plan approval constitute a new PUD application (requiring application of then existing approval standards), where there is nothing in the local code to support so characterizing the amended PUD proposal. DLCD v. Crook County, 25 Or LUBA 98 (1993).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. For purposes of identifying the "standards and criteria" that are "applicable at the time the application was first submitted" under ORS 227.178(3), the acknowledged comprehensive plan standards and criteria continue to apply, even after adoption of an ordinance repealing or amending those acknowledged standards and criteria, until the newly adopted plan standards and criteria are themselves deemed acknowledged. Davenport v. City of Tigard, 25 Or LUBA 67 (1993).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Under ORS 227.178(3), the quasi-judicial land use decision-making procedures of ORS 197.763 apply to an urban subdivision decision, where the subdivision application was submitted after ORS 197.763 became effective, but before the effective date of legislation exempting limited land use decisions from the requirements of ORS 197.763. Warren v. City of Aurora, 25 Or LUBA 11 (1993).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. While ORS 227.178(3) identifies the criteria that a city must apply to a permit application, it has no bearing on whether the city must, following reversal or remand of a permit decision by this Board, (1) accept an amended application reviewable against the criteria in effect when the original application was submitted, or (2) require a new application reviewable against the criteria in effect when the new application is submitted. Seitz v. City of Ashland, 24 Or LUBA 311 (1992).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where (1) a standard was deleted from the local comprehensive plan prior to the filing of a permit application, (2) the ordinance deleting the standard was remanded by LUBA while the permit application was pending, but (3) the local government made a second decision to delete the standard and that decision was deemed acknowledged prior to the local government's final decision on the permit application, the standard does not apply to the permit application. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 24 Or LUBA 271 (1992).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where a local government advised petitioners of the substance of an applicable requirement, but failed to identify the ordinance that is the source of the requirement, this is a procedural error which does not prejudice petitioners' substantial rights. Woosley v. Marion County, 24 Or LUBA 231 (1992).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where a "substantial construction" standard in a local code is clear enough for an applicant to know what he must show during the application process, such a standard is not impermissibly vague. Columbia River Television v. Multnomah County, 24 Or LUBA 82 (1992).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where a PUD amendment application is a separate and distinct application from the original PUD application previously approved, the standards in effect when the PUD amendment application was first filed apply. ORS 227.178(3). Gage v. City of Portland, 24 Or LUBA 47 (1992).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Under ORS 227.178(3), so long as additional information required by the city is submitted within 180 days of when a permit application was first submitted, the standards in effect when the application was first submitted apply to the application. Gage v. City of Portland, 24 Or LUBA 47 (1992).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. The standards in effect at the time a development application is filed are the standards applicable to approval of such development applications. Veach v. Wasco County, 23 Or LUBA 515 (1992).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Counties may adopt EFU zones that are more restrictive than statutory EFU zoning requirements, but may not adopt EFU zones that are less restrictive than the statutory requirements. Harris v. Polk County, 23 Or LUBA 152 (1992).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where a city's comprehensive plan and land use regulations were not acknowledged when a permit application was initially filed, ORS 227.178(3) does not restrict the standards applicable to that application to those in effect when the application was filed. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 23 Or LUBA 40 (1992).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where a local government held further evidentiary hearings on a permit application after issuance of an LCDC enforcement order, and made its final decision approximately four months after the enforcement order was issued, the local government was required to consider and comply with the enforcement order in adopting its decision. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 23 Or LUBA 40 (1992).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where the height limitation for the underlying zone is a standard applicable to approval of a PUD preliminary development plan, under ORS 227.178(3) the preliminary development plan must comply with the building height limitation in effect when the preliminary development plan application was first submitted. Gilson v. City of Portland, 22 Or LUBA 343 (1991).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where the standards upon which conceptual development approval was based are changed to disallow the use conceptually approved, and later decisions authorizing a building permit and final development approval for the use are adopted on the basis the prior standards continue to apply, a petitioner is entitled to challenge the later decisions notwithstanding petitioner's failure to challenge the conceptual development approval. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Nothing in ORS 215.428(3) requires a county to apply standards in effect at the time one development application is submitted to a distinct and subsequent development application. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where a "conceptual approval" decision requires that an applicant file a new application for final development approval, and the challenged decision is made on the basis of that new application, the second development approval request is an "application" as that term is used in ORS 215.428(3) and the code provisions in effect at the time the second development application was submitted are applicable to the second development application. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where petitioners contend that under ORS 215.428(3), the county erred by applying standards adopted after their permit application was initially filed, petitioners claim the county "improperly construed the applicable law." ORS 197.835(7)(a)(D). McCaw Communications, Inc. v. Polk County, 20 Or LUBA 456 (1991).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. If petitioners' letter to the county planning director constituted an "application" for the necessary permit for the proposed facility, the county (1) could not require petitioners to submit a different application after its subsequent adoption of additional standards, and (2) erred in applying the subsequently adopted standards to the initial "application." McCaw Communications, Inc. v. Polk County, 20 Or LUBA 456 (1991).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where a letter to the county planning director describes the proposed use and location and clearly requests the county to take action to grant land use approval, and it is at best unclear whether the local code required a conditional use application for such a proposal, petitioners' letter constitutes an "application" under ORS 215.428(3). McCaw Communications, Inc. v. Polk County, 20 Or LUBA 456 (1991).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Under ORS 215.428(3), the county flood standards in effect at the time the "application" was first submitted to the county apply. However, for the purpose of determining which county flood standards must be applied, the dispositive "application" is the one to which county flood standards are applicable. Komning v. Grant County, 20 Or LUBA 355 (1990).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Neither ORS 92.044(1) nor 227.173(1) requires that local governments set out the Statewide Planning Goals in their ordinances as approval standards applicable prior to acknowledgment. Knapp v. City of Jacksonville, 20 Or LUBA 189 (1990).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. ORS 215.428(3) does not preclude an applicant from submitting a new permit application, similar or identical to a previous permit application found inconsistent with applicable standards, for the purpose of obtaining review under amended approval standards in effect when the new application is filed. Eckis v. Linn County, 19 Or LUBA 15 (1990).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. Where permit approval standards are amended, ORS 227.178(3) does not preclude an applicant from submitting a new application, similar or identical to a previous application found inconsistent with the previous approval standards, for the purpose of obtaining review under the amended standards. Sunburst II Homeowners v. City of West Linn, 18 Or LUBA 695 (1990).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A "new" application was filed, within the meaning of ORS 227.178(3), where the record includes, in addition to documents filed in support of a prior application, a new application form signed by the applicant's employee, and the city conducted a full de novo review of the new application, after remand by LUBA of its decision on a prior identical application. Sunburst II Homeowners v. City of West Linn, 18 Or LUBA 695 (1990).

25.3.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Applicable Criteria. A petitioner does not waive its right under ORS 215.428(3) to have its application reviewed under the criteria in effect when the application was first submitted, where petitioner's statements in the proceedings to amend the criteria do not show petitioner was aware of such rights and petitioner did assert its rights before the planning commission and board of commissioners. Kirpal Light Satsang v. Douglas County, 18 Or LUBA 651 (1990).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. In general, a local government's failure to list some of the applicable approval criteria in its notice does not provide a basis for reversal or remand of the decision but may allow a party to raise issues related to missing approval criteria that were not raised prior to the conclusion of the initial evidentiary hearing. Marek v. City of Corvallis, 81 Or LUBA 91 (2020).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the staff reports that were available to the public accepted the applicant's premise that a proposed building is a "residential facility," as defined in the local code, and where the petitioners do not explain why they could not have raised the issue of whether the proposed building is a "residential facility" prior to the close of the initial evidentiary hearing, LUBA will refuse to allow that issue to be raised on appeal under ORS 197.835(4)(a), even assuming that the definitions section of the local code was an applicable approval criterion that the local government should have, but did not, identify in its notices. Eagle-Eye v. City of Veneta, 81 Or LUBA 1 (2020).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Arguments that the local government's notice failed to list the applicable criteria with sufficient specificity to allow parties to prepare for a hearing and that it was not clear from the notice what criteria the hearings officer intended to apply to an application do not establish that the notice prejudiced the petitioner's substantial rights to prepare and present its case to the hearings officer where the petitioner had sufficient opportunity to review the applicable criteria identified in a planning director decision and prepare its presentation in its local appeal to the hearings officer, where the petitioner does not identify any applicable criteria that the hearings officer failed to apply, and where the hearings officer did not apply any standards that were not raised by the parties. Buffalo-Bend Associates, LLC v. Clackamas County, 81 Or LUBA 66 (2020).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. That an alteration to a proposed PAPA is required by LUBA's decision in a prior appeal and reduces the subject acreage does not mean as a matter of law that the proposed PAPA is not "altered to such an extent that the materials submitted no longer reasonably describe the proposed change," thereby requiring notice of the alteration to DLCD pursuant to ORS 197.610(6). Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 422 (2019).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Under ORS 197.610(6), if a proposed PAPA is altered to such an extent that the notice submitted to DLCD under ORS 197.610(1) and (3) no longer reasonably describes it, the local government must submit notice of the alterations to DLCD at least 10 days before the final evidentiary hearing, which DLCD thereafter provides to the public. The larger statutory scheme at ORS 197.610 to 197.625 is intended to expand notice and participatory options for DLCD and a broader audience that may not receive local notice. A local government's errors under ORS 197.610(6) require remand where they are of a kind or degree that calls into question whether the ORS 197.610 to 197.625 process nevertheless performed its function. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 422 (2019).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where notice under ORS 197.610(6) is sent to DLCD 17 days after the final evidentiary hearing occurred and describes the "date of first evidentiary hearing" and the "date of final hearing" but does not identify the date of the "final evidentiary hearing," where there is a disparity between the text of the notice and the text of an ordinance included with the notice regarding the subject acreage, and where the notice is sent during a time when the record is left open only for evidence that is responsive to evidence that was submitted earlier, the totality of the errors in the submission of the notice and in the notice itself are of a kind and degree that make it doubtful that the ORS 197.610 to 197.625 process performed its function, and remand is required. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 422 (2019).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A zone verification is subject to LUBA's jurisdiction and a person adversely affected by the decision may appeal the decision to LUBA "[w]ithin 21 days of the date a person knew or should have known of the decision where no notice is required." ORS 197.830(5)(b). The city was not obligated to and did not provide notice of the zone verification decision to petitioner. Petitioner was put on inquiry notice of the zone verification decision when the city provided petitioner multiple notices of a subsequent land use application, review, and approval for site review, traffic impact analysis, and adjustment review for the same subject property and development described in the zone verification decision. The city invited petitioner to participate in that subsequent land use action and to review public planning documents at the planning division and online. The appeal was untimely filed and must be dismissed because petitioner failed to make such inquiries and the 21-day appeal period expired before petitioner filed the appeal. Leyden v. City of Eugene, 79 Or LUBA 151 (2019).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A zone verification is not a statutory land use "permit" as defined at ORS 227.160(2)(b), and the city is not required to provide notice of the decision or opportunity for a local appeal of the decision. However, a zone verification decision is subject to LUBA review and a 21-day appeal period. ORS 227.175(11); ORS 197.830(5)(b). Leyden v. City of Eugene, 79 Or LUBA 151 (2019).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The fact that an adopted local code amendment includes language which was not included in the notice to DLCD required by ORS 197.610(1) is not by itself sufficient to explain why the notice was inadequate so as to require reversal or remand of the amendment decision. McCaffree v. Coos County, 79 Or LUBA 512 (2019).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. When a county opts to approve a permit without a public hearing, any person who is adversely affected or aggrieved, or who is entitled to notice of the decision may appeal a decision made without a hearing. The county cannot require participation prior to a decision, either by attending a conference (that may or may not have occurred), or providing written comments, or in any other manner. Additionally, the county may not enact additional restrictions to prevent a person who is entitled to file an appeal under the ORS 215.416(11)(a)(A) right to file a local appeal. Hood River Valley Residents Comm. v. Hood River County, 78 Or LUBA 282 (2018).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Ballot Measure 56 (codified at ORS 215.503) requires a county to provide advance, individual, written notice by mail of the first hearing on an ordinance to property owners whose property could be "rezoned" by the proposed ordinance. Where an ordinance amending a county's land use and development code "limits" the size of, or in some cases "prohibits" entirely, a use – the growing of cannabis – that was previously allowed in the applicable zone, Measure 56 notice is required. Cossins v. Josephine County, 77 Or LUBA 240 (2018).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Ballot Measure 56 (codified at ORS 215.503) contains mandatory language and is specific regarding what is required to be included in the notice of a land use change. Where a county's notice does not: identify the date of the first hearing or even reference a hearing regarding the ordinance, reference any proposed ordinance or identify an ordinance by number, and was not sent at least 20 days but not more than 40 days before the date of the first hearing on the ordinance, the notice is defective. Cossins v. Josephine County, 77 Or LUBA 240 (2018).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a county failed to provide petitioners adequate Ballot Measure 56 (codified at ORS 215.503) notice of a proposed ordinance that proposed to limit the size of, or in some cases prohibit entirely, a use – the growing of cannabis – that was previously allowed in the applicable zone, causing some petitioners to only be able to participate at the final hearing before the board of county commissioners on the proposed ordinance by submitting written comments prior to the record closing, such last-minute participation at the last of many hearings is not "an adequate opportunity to prepare and submit their case and a full and fair hearing" and therefore "prejudiced the substantial rights" of the petitioners. ORS 197.835(9)(a)(B). Cossins v. Josephine County, 77 Or LUBA 240 (2018).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A county decision to approve a dwelling on forest land under local land use regulations that implement ORS 215.705, 215.740 or 215.750 is a "permit" decision as defined at ORS 215.402(4), because the local code and statutes impose discretionary approval standards on such development. To remove any doubt, ORS 215.402(4) defines "permit" to include approvals of development under ORS 215.700 to 215.780, a range which includes ORS 215.705, 215.740 and 215.750. Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a decision approving a dwelling does not approve, or mention, access to that dwelling, the fact that the petitioner's property is adjacent to the public road that will provide access to the dwelling does not mean that the county is required under ORS 197.763 or any other statute to provide notice of the decision to that petitioner, if petitioner's property lies outside the mandatory notice area. Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Under ORS 197.835(4), where a local government fails to list an applicable permit approval standard in its notice of hearing, a petitioner is generally entitled to raise issues for the first time at LUBA based on the standard omitted from the notice. But under the last sentence of ORS 197.835(4), LUBA may refuse to allow a petitioner to raise a new issue in that circumstance, where LUBA finds the omitted standard was discussed during the local proceedings and petitioner could have raised issues concerning that standard during the local proceedings. Rawson v. Hood River County, 75 Or LUBA 200 (2017).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A county fails to comply with ORS 215.060, which requires "the governing body" to (1) conduct at least one hearing; and (2) conduct those hearings after at least 10 days advance notice of "each of the hearings" is published in a newspaper of general circulation, where the county fails to publish in a newspaper of general circulation the notice of the public hearing before the board of county commissioners regarding proposed text amendments to a comprehensive plan. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Clatsop County, 75 Or LUBA 277 (2017).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. In Aleali v. City of Sherwood, 262 Or App 59, 325 P3d 747 (2014), the Court of Appeals held that the "local government makes a land use decision without providing a hearing" prong of ORS 197.830(3), which suspends the 21-day deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal until a petitioner receives actual notice of the decision, includes (1) cases where a local government held no hearing at all, and also (2) cases where the local government held a hearing but failed to provide the petitioner a notice of hearing that the petitioner was entitled to under state (as opposed to local) law. Phillips v. City of Corvallis, 75 Or LUBA 315 (2017).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. One prong of ORS 197.830(3) suspends the 21-day deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal, where "the local government makes a land use decision that is different from the proposal described in the notice of hearing to such a degree that the notice of the proposed action did not reasonably describe the local government's final actions." To take advantage of the delayed deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal under ORS 197.830(3)(b), which allows petitioner to file the notice of intent to appeal within 21 days of the date petitioner "knew or should have known of the decision," petitioner must establish that she was entitled to the defective notice of hearing under state (as opposed to local) law. Phillips v. City of Corvallis, 75 Or LUBA 315 (2017).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A petitioner's right to raise an issue concerning an applicable approval criterion that is not listed in the prehearing notice required by ORS 197.763(3) is a qualified right under ORS 197.835(4), and LUBA may refuse to consider that issue if LUBA finds that notwithstanding the notice failure "the issues could have been raised before the local government[.]"Long v. City of Tigard, 75 Or LUBA 390 (2017).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the Metro Code requires that a city give Metro notice 35 days before the first hearing on a comprehensive plan or land use regulation amendment, and a city fails to do so, but that hearing was continued twice and Metro was given notice more than 35 days before the continued hearing, any error was not prejudicial. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 74 Or LUBA 176 (2016).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A zoning classification decision described in ORS 227.160(2)(b) is not a statutory "permit" decision described in ORS 227.160(2), requiring notice and opportunity for a hearing, unless the decision goes beyond classifying a proposed use and applies discretionary standards to approve or deny the proposed use. Central Eastside Industrial Council v. City of Portland, 74 Or LUBA 221 (2016).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.763(7) prescribes the procedure for reopening the record and allowing new evidence after the record has closed, and does not prohibit a local government from reopening a record or require a local government to provide individual written notice when the local government decides to reopen a record that was previously closed. Trautman v. City of Eugene, 73 Or LUBA 209 (2016).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.830(3) does not require a local government to provide a second written notice to persons who were given pre-hearing written notice of a quasi-judicial land use hearing, when the local government decides to reopen the record. Trautman v. City of Eugene, 73 Or LUBA 209 (2016).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The 20-day notice period required by ORS 197.763(3)(f)(A) applies only when the local government provides a single evidentiary hearing. Nothing in ORS 197.763(3)(f) requires the local government to provide 20 days' notice of a second evidentiary hearing. Harrison v. City of Cannon Beach, 72 Or LUBA 182 (2015).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A mistaken reference to prior review and decision by the city's design review board, when in fact the city's planning commission actually conducted the prior review, is not reversible procedural error within the meaning of ORS 197.835(9)(a)(B), where the petitioner fails to establish that the mistake in the notice caused the petitioner to fail to prepare for and submit his case to the city council in person, and the evidence in the record demonstrates that previous commitments caused the petitioner to fail to attend the city council hearing in person. Harrison v. City of Cannon Beach, 72 Or LUBA 182 (2015).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a local government provides written prehearing notice to petitioner and in fact holds a hearing on a proposal to annex and rezone property, the part of ORS 197.830(3) that delays the deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal a decision that is rendered "without providing a hearing" until 21 days after a petitioner receives actual or constructive notice does not apply. Phillips v. City of Happy Valley, 71 Or LUBA 5 (2015).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a city's prehearing notice identifies the 10 properties to be annexed and rezoned, and identifies the city zoning to be applied to the 10 properties, and then after the hearing the city adopts an ordinance that annexes and applies the same zoning identified in the prehearing notice, the city does not make "a decision that is different from the proposal described in the notice of hearing to such a degree that the notice of the proposed action did not reasonably describe the local government's final action," within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3). In that circumstance, the 21-day deadline specified in ORS 197.830(9) for filing the notice of intent to appeal applies, not the delayed ORS 197.830(3) deadline. Phillips v. City of Happy Valley, 71 Or LUBA 5 (2015).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. While failures to comply with the notice requirements set out at ORS 197.763(3) could also be sufficient to constitute a failure to "reasonably describe the local government's final actions," within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3), it does not necessarily follow that any failure to comply with ORS 197.763(3) results in a failure to "reasonably describe the local government's final action." The inquiries under those two statutes are not the same. Phillips v. City of Happy Valley, 71 Or LUBA 5 (2015).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Identifying existing county zoning and proposed new city zoning to be applied to the annexed property using abbreviated references and acronyms for the zoning districts does not mean the city gave notice that "did not reasonably describe the local government's final actions," within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3). A reasonable person would be put on inquiry notice by such a notice and would not assume no substantive change was proposed through the annexation and rezoning. Phillips v. City of Happy Valley, 71 Or LUBA 5 (2015).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Under ORS 197.763(2)(a), a local government may rely on tax lot boundaries for the purposes of determining the exterior boundaries of the lots or parcels that make up the "property which is the subject of the notice" and thus the notice area, absent some reason to believe that the tax lot boundaries do not correspond to relevant lot or parcel boundaries. Mackenzie v. City of Portland, 71 Or LUBA 155 (2015).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.763(2)(a) does not require local governments to use the boundaries of all lots or parcels in common "ownership" as the basis for determining the notice area in circumstances where the proposed development does not involve all of the contiguous lots or parcels under common ownership. Mackenzie v. City of Portland, 71 Or LUBA 155 (2015).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A petitioner does not waive her right to assign error to a hearings officer's conclusion that a structure qualifies as a nonconforming use, and the hearings officer's approval of an alteration of that nonconforming use, where the applicant did not apply for verification of a nonconforming use or an alteration of a nonconforming use and the notices of hearing did not identify the county's nonconforming use regulations as applicable criteria for the decision. Kaimanu v. Washington County, 70 Or LUBA 217 (2014).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where an "Article" of the community development code includes 373 single spaced pages of land use regulations made up of 44 separate sections devoted to a variety of topics, a notice of hearing that identifies that article of the community development code as an applicable standard is not sufficient, under ORS 197.763(3), to provide notice of an eight-page section of that article devoted to nonconforming uses. Kaimanu v. Washington County, 70 Or LUBA 217 (2014).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.763(8) provides that a property owner's failure to receive notice required under ORS

197.763(2) will not "invalidate [the city's] proceedings" if the city can produce an affidavit that notice was given. ORS 197.763(8) does not say a city's affidavit is sufficient to establish that the city in fact sent the required notice, where there is a factual dispute over whether the city actually sent the required notice. Aleali v. City of Sherwood, 68 Or LUBA 153 (2013).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Whether a building permit also qualifies as a statutory "permit," as ORS 227.160(2) defines that term does not turn on the complexity of the applicable land use regulations. Whether the building permit qualifies as a statutory permit turns on whether the applicable land use regulations are ambiguous about (1) the nature of the proposed use or (2) whether the proposed use is among the uses that are identified in the land use regulation as permitted. Richmond Neighbors v. City of Portland, 67 Or LUBA 115 (2013).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where there is no question under applicable land use regulations that a proposed apartment building is permitted outright in the applicable zone, and the only ambiguities concern the development regulations that apply in approving the apartment use, those ambiguities mean the building permit approving the apartment building is a land use decision and that none of the ORS 197.015(10)(b) exclusions for nondiscretionary decisions apply. But that building permit is not a statutory "permit," as ORS 227.160(2) defines that term, since the use is permitted outright and the only ambiguities concern the development standards that apply to that permitted use. Richmond Neighbors v. City of Portland, 67 Or LUBA 115 (2013).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Whether a building permit also qualifies as a statutory "permit," as ORS 227.160(2) defines that term does not turn on the complexity of the applicable land use regulations. Whether the building permit qualifies as a statutory permit turns on whether the applicable land use regulations are ambiguous about (1) the nature of the proposed use or (2) whether the proposed use is among the uses that are identified in the land use regulation as permitted. Kerns Neighbors v. City of Portland, 67 Or LUBA 130 (2013).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where there is no question under applicable land use regulations that a proposed apartment building is permitted outright in the applicable zone, and the only ambiguities concern the development regulations that apply in approving the apartment use, those ambiguities mean the building permit approving the apartment building is a land use decision and that none of the ORS 197.015(10)(b) exclusions for nondiscretionary decisions apply. But that building permit is not a statutory "permit," as ORS 227.160(2) defines that term, since the use is permitted outright and the only ambiguities concern the development standards that apply to that permitted use. Kerns Neighbors v. City of Portland, 67 Or LUBA 130 (2013).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. To preserve the issue of whether the statewide planning goals apply to a rezoning decision and thus whether notice of hearing must be provided to DLCD under ORS 197.610, the issue must be raised during the proceedings below to avoid waiver under ORS 197.763(1) and, additionally, specified in the local notice of appeal to avoid waiver under the exhaustion/waiver principle in Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500 (2003). Conte v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 326 (2012).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.610(2) provides that a local government need not provide notice of hearing to DLCD if the local government concludes that no statewide planning goals apply. However, the failure to adopt in the final decision express findings that no goals apply is not a basis for remand, where no statute requires express findings that the goals do not apply and the petitioner fails to demonstrate that any goals in fact do apply. Conte v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 326 (2012).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a local government defers a finding of compliance with an applicable discretionary approval criterion to a future review proceeding, it must ensure, either in a condition of approval or by necessary operation of its code, that the second review proceeding is infused with the same participatory rights as those provided in the initial review proceeding. A condition of approval that simply provides that a geologic hazard analysis required for tentative plan approval will be provided "prior to any structural development" is insufficient to ensure that geologic hazard approval standards will be addressed in a proceeding that provides the same notice and hearing required of the initial proceeding on the tentative plan. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 63 Or LUBA 324 (2011).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where it is not clear under a county's code that the planning commission proceeding on a final master plan application for a destination resort will necessarily be conducted as an ORS 197.763 quasi-judicial hearing with notice, the final master plan proceedings appear to be ministerial under the code, and nothing in the tentative master plan approval requires hearing and notice, the county errs in deferring discretionary tentative master plan approval standards to the proceedings on the application for final master plan approval without ensuring that those proceedings will infused with the same participatory rights as the tentative master plan approval. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 63 Or LUBA 324 (2011).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A city's failure to provide adequate notice that it had recharacterized the application from an application to modify an existing permit to an application for a new permit might constitute procedural error, but that error does not prejudice the petitioner's substantial rights, where the recharacterization was in response to petitioner's arguments, the applicable criteria are the same whether it is a modification or new application, and petitioner had ample opportunity to submit evidence and argument after it became clear that the city was treating the application as one for a new permit. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 62 Or LUBA 329 (2010).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.830(3) tolls the 21-day appeal deadline in ORS 197.830(9) for persons who are misled by the differences between the proposal described in the notice of hearing and the proposal as approved, and due to that misleading notice failed to appear at the hearing and become entitled to the notice of decision. If a petitioner did not view the notice of hearing, then the petitioner could not have been misled by the notice. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 62 Or LUBA 471 (2010).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Applying the "notice of hearing did not reasonably describe the proposal" language in ORS 197.830(3) to a legislative decision is problematic, because generally no individual notice is required, and the only notice of hearing required for a legislative decision is the notice provided to the Department of Land Conservation and Development and any general publication notices in local newspapers. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 62 Or LUBA 471 (2010).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The "notice of hearing did not reasonably describe" the proposal language in ORS 197.830(3) focuses on the difference between the final action and the proposal described in the notice of hearing, not on differences between the final action and the proposal itself as it may be modified during the proceedings below. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 62 Or LUBA 471 (2010).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. That an intermediate draft of a proposed ordinance posted on the city's website differed from the city's final ordinance as adopted is not sufficient to toll the 21-day deadline to appeal the final ordinance under ORS 197.830(3), where the notice of hearing for the original draft of the proposed ordinance reasonably described the final ordinance. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 62 Or LUBA 471 (2010).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the comprehensive plan and land use regulation standards that a county relies on in its decision to deny an application for partition approval were not identified in the notice of hearing, in the planning staff report or in the hearing, the applicant's substantial rights were prejudiced by the county's error in failing to provide notice of relevant approval standards and remand is required. MEK Properties, LLC v. Coos County, 61 Or LUBA 360 (2010).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A notice of hearing that states that a proposed land use is a "mixed-use development" planned unit development with 82 residential dwelling units and includes a map that shows the proposed buildings and provides additional details is sufficient to "reasonably describe the local government's final actions," within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3), where the approved development is a mixed residential and commercial use. Duenweg v. City of Medford, 60 Or LUBA 1 (2009).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The failure of a notice of hearing for a mixed-use residential and commercial PUD to specifically mention that the PUD housing will be occupied by the families of recovering addicts and senior citizen mentors for those families does not result in a notice of hearing that does "not reasonably describe the local government's final actions," within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3). Duenweg v. City of Medford, 60 Or LUBA 1 (2009).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a petitioner was not entitled to receive written notice of a hearing on a mixed-use planned unit development and did not see the published notice of hearing, he could not have been misled by the notice of hearing. The deadline for filing the petition for review expired 21 days after the decision became final under ORS 197.830(9) and ORS 197.830(3) does not operate to delay the deadline for filing a petition for review to 21 days after petitioner knew or should have known of the decision. Duenweg v. City of Medford, 60 Or LUBA 1 (2009).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Under ORS 197.763(2)(a), property owners within certain distances of the property that is "the subject of the notice" must be provided with notice of hearing. The property that is the "subject of the notice" is only the property that is being developed, and does not include off site transportation mitigation improvements in which the applicant does not possess a property interest. Plaid Pantries, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 60 Or LUBA 441 (2010).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Fasano v. Washington County, 264 Or 574, 507 P2d 23 (1973), does not give a party an independent constitutional right to notice of a hearing in addition to a statutory or local code right to notice of a hearing. Plaid Pantries, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 60 Or LUBA 441 (2010).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. In order to appeal to LUBA under the "different notice/final action" language of ORS 197.830(3), the nature or scope of the proposed use as described in the notice of proposed action must differ to such a degree from the final action that the notice does not "reasonably describe" the final action. Where there is no difference between the nature and scope of the property line adjustment described in the notice of hearing and the property line adjustment described in the notice of decision, ORS 197.830(3) does not apply. Ebar v. Harney County, 59 Or LUBA 201 (2009).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The "different notice/final action" provisions of ORS 197.830(3) generally apply to persons who are misled by a deviation in substance between the notice of proposed action and the final action, and because of that deviation do not appear at the hearing and thereby become entitled to timely notice of the decision and hence notice of the opportunity to appeal the decision to LUBA. Ebar v. Harney County, 59 Or LUBA 201 (2009).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.610(1) and OAR 660-018-0020(1)(c) and (2) require that a local government provide the Department of Land Conservation and Development with a copy of the proposed text of any post acknowledgment comprehensive plan or land use regulation amendment. Where a local government's notice of its post acknowledgment action does not include the proposed text, remand is required. SEIU v. City of Happy Valley, 58 Or LUBA 261 (2009).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a city denies a partition application based on a code provision that was not listed as an approval standard in the notice of hearing and not discussed until late in the hearing, the petitioner's failure to raise issues below regarding application of that code provision does not preclude petitioner from challenging denial under that code provision before LUBA. Stewart v. City of Salem, 58 Or LUBA 605 (2009).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.610(1) requires that the Land Conservation and Development Commission be given notice at least 45 days before the first evidentiary hearing on adoption of a post-acknowledgment comprehensive plan amendment. Where the required notice is given, a second notice is not required under ORS 197.610(1) simply because the local government decides to adopt different parts of the proposed comprehensive plan amendment by separate ordinances. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Whether an ordinance adopting text amendments to zoning districts "rezones" property within the meaning of Ballot Measure 56, triggering the statutory obligation to provide notice to property owners, depends on whether the ordinance, on its face, restricts the range or extent of permissible uses of the property, compared to existing law. Murray v. Multnomah County, 56 Or LUBA 370 (2008).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the preexisting ordinance did not provide for consolidation of lots or parcels at all, a text amendment that provides for consolidation and replatting of lots and parcels in each zone as a new "use" does not "limit or prohibit land uses previously allowed in the affected zone" for purposes of Ballot Measure 56, and thus does not trigger the obligation to provide individual written notice to property owners. Murray v. Multnomah County, 56 Or LUBA 370 (2008).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. To the extent a petitioner may appeal a legislative decision to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3) and Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992), because the county failed to provide written notice to property owners as required under Ballot Measure 56, petitioner must establish that he or she is entitled to notice under the statute. Failure to provide notice to other persons, even petitioner's predecessor in interest, is insufficient to allow petitioner to file a belated appeal to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3). Murray v. Multnomah County, 56 Or LUBA 370 (2008).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Failure to provide publication notice as required by ORS 215.223 is not the kind of notice failure that can allow a petitioner to appeal a legislative decision to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3) and Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992). Murray v. Multnomah County, 56 Or LUBA 370 (2008).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Even if a local government violates ORS 197.830(5), which requires that the notice for a limited land use decision reasonably describe the decision that is made, the remedy for such a violation is a tolling of the 21-day deadline for appealing the decision to LUBA. Violation of ORS 197.830(5) does not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Boucot v. City of Corvallis, 56 Or LUBA 662 (2008).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Unlike quasi-judicial decisions, a local government is not required to provide a list of the approval criteria in its notice for legislative decisions. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 55 Or LUBA 181 (2007).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A notice of hearing does not "reasonably describe the final action" for purposes of tolling the appeal period under ORS 197.830(3) when the parties are misled by the deviation between the notice of the proposed action and the substance of the decision. Pacific Cascade Resources v. Columbia County, 55 Or LUBA 216 (2007).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A notice of hearing stating that the county will consider an application to renew a mining permit subject to approval criteria listed in the notice is a fair description of the final action for purposes of ORS 197.830(3), where the final action approves the application to renew a mining permit under the listed criteria. Pacific Cascade Resources v. Columbia County, 55 Or LUBA 216 (2007).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. That a notice of hearing does not list the conditions of approval the county might decide to impose or indicate that the county might impose conditions of approval does not mean that the notice fails to "reasonably describe the final action" for purposes of ORS 197.830(3), particularly where petitioner knew or should have known that the county intended to impose conditions of approval on petitioner's application. Pacific Cascade Resources v. Columbia County, 55 Or LUBA 216 (2007).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.763(6)(b) requires that if a quasi-judicial land use hearing is continued, "the hearing shall be continued to a date, time and place certain * * *." ORS 197.763(6)(b) does not apply where the final evidentiary hearing is closed and a later date is set for a public meeting at which the local government will adopt its decision in a quasi-judicial land use matter. Burgess v. City of Corvallis, 55 Or LUBA 482 (2008).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Published notice of a hearing to consider potential increased permit and planning fees, while vague, is not misleading, when the land use decision adopted increases land use appeal fees. Therefore, the exception to the 21-day deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal under ORS 197.830(3), when the land use decision made is sufficiently different from the notice of the proposed action, does not apply. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 54 Or LUBA 730 (2007).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. OAR 660-041-0030, which requires notice to the Department of Land Conservation and Development (DLCD) of an application for or decision on a permit pursuant to a Ballot Measure 37 waiver, is not inconsistent with ORS 197.763(2)(c), which requires a local government if requested by the applicant to notify DLCD of a hearing on a land use application. DLCD v. Deschutes County, 54 Or LUBA 799 (2007).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A land use compatibility statement that determines the appropriate zoning classification for a proposed use of land within an urban growth boundary may constitute a "zoning classification" decision as defined by ORS 227.160(2)(b), and thus not constitute a statutory "permit" that would require the city to provide notice and an opportunity for hearing. Hallowell v. City of Independence, 53 Or LUBA 165 (2006).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Absent some authority to the contrary, in approving a preliminary grading plan the local government is not required to determine what procedures will govern consideration of the final grading plan. Where the decision approving the preliminary grading plan does not determine and is not required to determine the procedures that govern the final grading plan, LUBA will reject arguments that the local government erred in failing to impose conditions requiring the county to provide notice and opportunity to request a hearing in considering the final grading plan. Angius v. Washington County, 52 Or LUBA 222 (2006).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.763 does not require local governments to treat staff-generated proposed findings that are submitted to the final decision maker for review and adoption at the final meeting as a "staff report" that must be made available to the public seven days prior to the meeting. Absent local provisions to the contrary, there is no right for parties to review or rebut proposed findings prior to their adoption. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 52 Or LUBA 518 (2006).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where neither the local government nor LUBA has jurisdiction to resolve the legality of a condition requiring necessary facilities to be constructed prior to obtaining final approval of a two-step subdivision approval process, the local government may (1) adopt findings establishing that fulfillment of the condition of approval is not precluded as a matter of law, and (2) ensure that the condition will be fulfilled prior to final subdivision approval or actual development. Butte Conservancy v. City of Gresham, 52 Or LUBA 550 (2006).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.830(3) and 197.620(2) are similarly worded and impose the same legal standard. Under those statutes there are certain legal consequences where the notice of hearing is inadequate to describe the local government's ultimate decision. Ettro v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 567 (2006).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.830(3) applies where the nature or scope of the proposed use that is described in the notice that precedes the local government's public hearing is later changed and the proposed use is approved as changed in the local government's decision. Ettro v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 567 (2006).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Any questions that may be raised regarding how a local government chooses to go about applying the approval criteria that are listed in a notice of hearing to the proposal described in the notice implicate the merits of this appeal; those questions do not implicate the adequacy of the city's notice under ORS 197.620(2) and 197.830(3). Ettro v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 567 (2006).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where petitioners fail to establish that any statute obligates a county to provide petitioners notice of a building permit decision that modifies a condition of partition approval, the "knew or should have known" standard at ORS 197.830(3)(b) applies rather than the "actual notice" standard at ORS 197.830(3)(a), in determining whether an appeal is timely filed under that statute. Neelund v. Josephine County, 52 Or LUBA 683 (2006).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Given the Department of Land Conservation and Development Commission's (DLCD's) critical role in the plan amendment review process, complete failure to provide notice of post-acknowledgment plan amendments to DLCD may be a "substantive" error that obviates the requirement to show that the procedural error prejudiced the petitioner's substantial rights. However, it does not follow that failure to provide other types of notice to other parties in other contexts is also a "substantive" error obviating the ORS 197.835(9) requirement that the petitioner show prejudice. Bollam v. Clackamas County, 52 Or LUBA 738 (2006).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. While ORS 215.223(3) requires a county to provide notice of the hearing on a "zone change," a proposal to correct the official zoning map to accurately reflect previously adopted ordinances is not a "zone change" within the meaning of ORS 215.223(3), and therefore the county's failure to provide notice of such a map correction does not violate the statute. Sullivan v. Polk County, 51 Or LUBA 107 (2006).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. While deviations from the post acknowledgment plan amendment notice requirements at ORS 197.610(1) may constitute procedural errors that will not provide a basis for remand absent prejudice to a petitioner's substantial rights, a complete failure to provide notice to the Department of Land Conservation and Development under ORS 197.610(1) is a substantive error and requires remand without regard to whether the failure prejudiced petitioner's substantial rights. Friends of Bull Mountain v. City of Tigard, 51 Or LUBA 759 (2006).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A petitioner's decision to rely on a city website that stated the city council meetings generally are held at 7 p.m. does not excuse the petitioner's failure to appear at a 6 p.m. hearing on a variance request where, although petitioner was not entitled to written notice of the hearing, the written notice of the variance hearing accurately stated the hearing would begin at 6 p.m. and was provided to all persons who were entitled to written notice of the hearing. Neighbors 4 Responsible Growth v. City of Veneta, 50 Or LUBA 745 (2005).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. To comply with ORS 197.763(3)(b), a notice of hearing must identify the applicable approval criteria by code number or similar means of identification sufficient to direct the recipient to the actual code or plan provisions that the city deems to be approval criteria. Reference to a code provision that itself merely requires "conformance with the comprehensive plan" is insufficient to provide effective notice of any comprehensive plan provisions. Kingsley v. City of Sutherlin, 49 Or LUBA 242 (2005).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The city's failure to list certain plan policies as approval criteria in the notice of hearing does not allow petitioner to raise new issues regarding those plan policies under ORS 197.835(4)(a), where two staff reports and a planning commission decision address the plan policies as approval criteria and petitioner is given ample constructive notice that the city believed the policies to be approval criteria. Kingsley v. City of Sutherlin, 49 Or LUBA 242 (2005).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. An issue regarding compliance with an approval criterion is waived if not raised below, unless the petitioner demonstrates that the local government failed to list the criterion in the notice of hearing under ORS 197.835(4). However, LUBA will not address an issue under ORS 197.835(4) where the petitioner fails to explain why the notice of hearing is defective. Staus v. City of Corvallis, 48 Or LUBA 254 (2004).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where statutory notice of hearing requirements are not jurisdictional, failure to comply with those statutory requirements is reviewed under ORS 197.835(9)(a)(B), which establishes LUBA's scope of review for procedural errors. Kneeland v. Douglas County, 48 Or LUBA 347 (2005).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a notice for the required second hearing on formation of a special district corrects certain errors in the notice of the first hearing, any defects in the first notice are cured. Kneeland v. Douglas County, 48 Or LUBA 347 (2005).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A planning commission permit approval can defer findings of compliance with a conditional use standard requiring that proposed structures "complement" the design of the area, by relying on subsequent review by an architectural review committee, where the committee's review provides the same notice and opportunity for hearing required by state law for the conditional use decision, and the committee will determine compliance with the deferred standard as part of its architectural review. McCulloh v. City of Jacksonville, 46 Or LUBA 267 (2004).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. For the purposes of ORS 197.830(3), a notice of hearing that explains that a county is considering the annexation of property to a sewer district adequately describes the proposed action to be taken by the county, even if the area described in the notice is later amended to delete one parcel. Miner v. Clatsop County, 46 Or LUBA 467 (2004).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Providing only 22 days' notice of hearing to DLCD of a post-acknowledgment plan amendment, rather than the full 45 days' notice required by ORS 196.610(1), is not reversible error, where both petitioner and DLCD participated in the proceedings, and there is no attempt to demonstrate that short notice prevented any other person that might rely on the notice from participating in the local government's proceedings. Bryant v. Umatilla County, 45 Or LUBA 653 (2003).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Providing notice and a copy of proposed zoning ordinance amendments to DLCD under ORS 197.610(1) and then adopting an additional zoning ordinance amendment that was not included with the notice without providing additional notice to DLCD is not error. OCAPA v. City of Mosier, 44 Or LUBA 452 (2003).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The broad notice and potential for participation by DLCD and others under ORS 197.610 is the quid pro quo for ORS 197.625, which deems post-acknowledgment land use regulation amendments to be consistent with the statewide planning goals as a matter of law, if the amendment is not appealed or is affirmed on appeal. Therefore, whether errors in a city's notice to DLCD under ORS 197.610 warrant remand depends upon whether the errors are of the kind or of a degree that calls into question whether the ORS 197.610 to 197.625 process nevertheless performed its function. If so, remand may be required, without regard to whether petitioners before LUBA can demonstrate prejudice to their substantial rights. OCAPA v. City of Mosier, 44 Or LUBA 452 (2003).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a city's notice to DLCD under ORS 197.610(1) states that the initial evidentiary hearing on a proposed zoning ordinance amendment will be held on November 7 and the hearing is actually held on November 6, and LUBA cannot determine whether persons who may have been depending on notice that DLCD subsequently provided of that initial evidentiary hearing may have been prejudiced by the city's error, LUBA will remand the city's decision. OCAPA v. City of Mosier, 44 Or LUBA 452 (2003).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Although a complete failure to provide advanced published notice pursuant to ORS 215.060 renders an ordinance of "no legal effect," if published notice is provided, challenges to the adequacy of that notice are analyzed as procedural errors and provide a basis for reversal or remand if such errors prejudice a petitioner's substantial rights. Ramsey v. Multnomah County, 44 Or LUBA 722 (2003).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 215.503 (2003) requires a county to provide mailed written notice of the first hearing on an ordinance to property owners whose property could be rezoned due to a comprehensive plan amendment, but it does not require additional public notice every time LUBA remands an ordinance. Ramsey v. Multnomah County, 44 Or LUBA 722 (2003).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Because ORS 215.060 specifically provides that a county's failure to provide notice of an action regarding its plan as required by the statute shall result in the county's action having "no legal effect," LUBA may not overlook a county's failure to provide the notice required by ORS 215.060, notwithstanding that the lack of notice did not prejudice petitioner's substantial rights. Ramsey v. Multnomah County, 43 Or LUBA 25 (2002).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Mailing individual notice of a proposed comprehensive plan amendment to affected property owners is not sufficient to meet the requirement under ORS 215.060 that a county publish notice of such action in a "newspaper of general circulation" or "in the territory * * * concerned." Ramsey v. Multnomah County, 43 Or LUBA 25 (2002).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 216.060 provides that a county may give notice of a plan amendment by mail, radio, television or other means in addition to publishing notice in a "newspaper of general circulation," but the statute does not allow a county to provide notice by such other means instead of by publication in a newspaper. Ramsey v. Multnomah County, 43 Or LUBA 25 (2002).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Absent a local code requirement to the contrary, ORS 197.763 does not require that every hearing notice given by a local government must provide an overview of local appeal procedures and how those procedures may affect an appeal at LUBA, as long as the notices inform participants of their obligation to raise issues regarding compliance with applicable criteria at the earliest opportunity. Scheyer v. City of Hood River, 43 Or LUBA 112 (2002).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Not every violation of the requirement at ORS 197.610(1) and its implementing rule that a local government provide notice of proposed post-acknowledgment plan amendments to the Department of Land Conservation and Development Commission (DLCD) more than 45 days before the initial public hearing is a substantive error that must result in remand. Failure to specify all of the proposed zone changes on the form provided to DLCD is, at most, procedural error that does not warrant remand absent a demonstration of prejudice to petitioner's substantial rights. Stallkamp v. City of King City, 43 Or LUBA 333 (2002).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A county commits no error in applying a zoning code requirement that a conditional use be found to be in harmony with the purpose and intent of the zone as a mandatory approval criterion where the provision expressly requires that determination. The county's identification in its notice of hearing of the chapter in which that zoning code requirement appears is sufficient to give the applicant notice of that approval criterion where the chapter is short and code requirement for a finding concerning that criterion is clear. Hick v. Marion County, 43 Or LUBA 483 (2003).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where petitioner argues the city erred by approving an expedited annexation while failing to "(1) publish public notice, (2) notify adjacent property owners, (3) post a notice on the properties, (4) notify property owners within created 'service islands,' or (5) notify the community in time for this issue to be included on public agendas to be discussed," but petitioner identifies no legal requirement for any of these kinds of notice, petitioner fails to provide a basis for reversal or remand. Cape v. City of Beaverton, 41 Or LUBA 515 (2002).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the local government adopts a finding of current compliance and imposes conditions to ensure compliance with an approval criterion, that those conditions require additional informal review by local government staff does not mean that the local government has impermissibly "deferred" a finding of compliance with that criterion to a later stage without notice or hearing. Friends of Collins View v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 261 (2002).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Under ORS 197.763(2)(a)(C), the owners of property that is located within specified distances of the "subject property" must be given notice of a hearing concerning a permit to allow development of the "subject property." In identifying the property owners who are entitled to notice of hearing under that statute, a newly proposed access road crossing federally owned property pursuant to a federal permit is properly viewed as part of the "subject property" to be developed. Shrader v. Deschutes County, 39 Or LUBA 782 (2001).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.047 imposes specified notice requirements where statutes or administrative rules "limit or prohibit otherwise permissible uses." A statute that expands the list of authorized uses does not implicate the ORS 197.047 notice requirements. Keicher v. Clackamas County, 39 Or LUBA 521 (2001).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a county fails to provide 45 days' advance notice to the Department of Land Conservation and Development prior to the first hearing on a post acknowledgment plan amendment, and provides no explanation for why emergency circumstances warrant shorter notice, the county's decision must be remanded. Donnell v. Union County, 39 Or LUBA 419 (2001).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.763(3)'s requirement that a notice of hearing shall provide "a general explanation of the requirements for submission of testimony and the procedure for conduct of hearings" does not require that the notice of hearing include notice of a contingent right under a city's code to conduct cross-examination of witnesses. Mitchell v. Washington County, 39 Or LUBA 240 (2000).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Failure to provide proper notice pursuant to ORS 197.763(3) is a procedural error and does not provide a basis for reversal or remand unless the error prejudices a party's substantial rights. Lange-Luttig v. City of Beaverton, 39 Or LUBA 80 (2000).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where petitioners appeared below and testified about the uses that would be authorized by a conditional use permit, petitioners may not claim that their substantial rights were prejudiced by a local government's failure to specifically identify all proposed uses in the notice of the hearing. Lange-Luttig v. City of Beaverton, 39 Or LUBA 80 (2000).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The notice of the date of final hearing required by ORS 197.610(1) (1997) and OAR 660-018-0020(1) safeguard the ability of the Department of Land Conservation and Development and other interested parties to participate in proceedings leading up to decisions amending comprehensive plan and code provisions. The failure of a local government to submit notice at least 45 days before the date stated as the final hearing obviates the appearance requirement of ORS 197.830(2) and ORS 197.610(2)(b), even if another hearing is conducted at least 45 days after the submission of notice. OTCNA v. City of Cornelius, 38 Or LUBA 921 (2000).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A city's failure to provide notice that it considered a particular comprehensive plan goal to be an approval criterion is a procedural error, and where that failure denies the applicant an opportunity to present argument and evidence concerning that plan goal, the procedural error prejudices the applicant's substantial rights. Oregon Entertainment Corp. v. City of Beaverton, 38 Or LUBA 440 (2000).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Because a local government's proceedings on remand from LUBA are a continuation of its original proceedings and not a new proceeding, a local government that has sent notice of a proposed post-acknowledgment plan amendment to DLCD as required by ORS 197.610 is not required under the statute or rules implementing the statute to send additional notice of the proposed amendment during the remand proceedings. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 38 Or LUBA 291 (2000).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The requirement at ORS 197.610(1) (1997) that local governments send notice of comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendments to the Department of Land Conservation and Development at least 45 days before the "final hearing on adoption" refers to the final evidentiary hearing, and does not refer to nonevidentiary proceedings where the local government actually adopts the amendment. Home Depot, Inc. v. City of Beaverton, 37 Or LUBA 1020 (2000).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a local government adopts plan or land use regulation amendments but fails to provide the Department of Land Conservation and Development with timely notice as required by ORS 197.610(1), the Department or any other person has standing to appeal the decision to LUBA notwithstanding failure to appear before the local government. Home Depot, Inc. v. City of Beaverton, 37 Or LUBA 1020 (2000).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where petitioner fails to allege that it was entitled to written notice of hearing under Ballot Measure 56, a local government's failure to provide written notice of hearing under Ballot Measure 56 did not prejudice petitioner's substantial rights and provides no basis for reversal or remand. Homebuilders Association v. City of Portland, 37 Or LUBA 707 (2000).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.830(3) authorizes the filing of a notice of intent to appeal after the 21-day deadline specified by ORS 197.830(8) where the approved proposal differs in some significant way from the proposal that is described in the notice of hearing, such that the notice "did not reasonably describe the local government's final action." A multifaceted zoo conditional use master plan with a permanent parking lot does not so differ from a multifaceted zoo conditional use master plan with a temporary parking lot that the notice of hearing "did not reasonably describe the local government's final action." Bigley v. City of Portland, 37 Or LUBA 544 (2000).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.763(3) requires only that applicable local comprehensive plan and ordinance provisions be listed in the notice of quasi-judicial proceedings. Failure to list applicable statutory criteria is not a basis for remand. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 297 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A notice of hearing that fails to describe any proposed uses that could be authorized by a decision to amend the zoning of property from residential to industrial is "different from the proposal described in the notice to such a degree" that the notice does not "reasonably describe the local government's final action" and thus petitioner may raise new issues pursuant to ORS 197.835(4)(b) notwithstanding petitioner's failure to raise those issues during the proceedings below. Mulford v. Town of Lakeview, 36 Or LUBA 715 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A city commits procedural error where it fails to identify the relevant approval criteria in its notice of hearing or in its oral statement at the beginning of the hearing on a conditional use request. The city also commits procedural error where the staff report that identifies the relevant approval criteria is not made available seven days before the hearing and the report is only provided to the city council at the hearing. Where these errors contribute to confusion about the nature of the use for which approval is requested and the city's legal theory for approving the request, petitioners' substantial rights are prejudiced by the city's procedural errors and remand is required. Latta v. City of Joseph, 36 Or LUBA 708 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Petitioner's failure to cite ORS 215.402 to 215.428 as authority for its position that the challenged decision required notice and an opportunity for a hearing does not require that LUBA reject the assignment of error where (1) it is clear from its brief that respondent was aware that ORS 215.402 to 215.428 require notice and an opportunity for a hearing for land use decisions that constitute "permits" under ORS 215.402(4), and (2) the city argues in its brief that the challenged decision does not constitute a "permit" decision, within the meaning of ORS 215.402(4). Friends of the Creek v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 562 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A decision authorizing construction of facilities necessary to apply sewage effluent to farm land constitutes the approval of a "proposed development of land" and thus is a "permit" within the meaning of ORS 215.215.402(4) if the decision involves the exercise of discretion. Friends of the Creek v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 562 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A decision authorizing construction of a lagoon on EFU-zoned land to store treated effluent constitutes the approval of a "proposed development of land" and thus constitutes a "permit" within the meaning of ORS 215.402(4) if the decision involves the exercise of discretion. Friends of Clean Living v. Polk County, 36 Or LUBA 544 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A city's procedural error in failing to send notice of a hearing at which zone changes affecting petitioner's property would be considered does not prejudice petitioner's substantial rights, where petitioner nonetheless participated in the hearing and the city continued the hearing to allow petitioner an adequate time to prepare. Herman v. City of Lincoln City, 36 Or LUBA 521 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A quasi-judicial plan and zone map amendment initiated by the city planning commission is an "application for a land use decision," for purposes of the notice requirements of ORS 197.763(3), and thus the city's notice of hearing must list the applicable criteria from its ordinance and plan. Herman v. City of Lincoln City, 36 Or LUBA 521 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Listing the "Comprehensive Plan goals, policies and land use map" as applicable criteria on the notice of hearing without listing specific applicable plan provisions is insufficient to satisfy ORS 197.763(3)(b), and such a general listing does not support a conclusion that petitioner could have raised issues regarding specific plan provisions below. Herman v. City of Lincoln City, 36 Or LUBA 521 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Although deficiencies in a hearings officer's notice of hearing may provide a basis for direct appeal of the hearings officer's decision to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3), where a local appeal is filed and the city council makes a decision in the appeal, the hearings officer's decision is not the city's final decision and is not subject to appeal to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3). Bigley v. City of Portland, 36 Or LUBA 517 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Petitioner may raise new issues before LUBA regarding plan provisions that were not considered by the county where the notice of hearing did not list any applicable comprehensive plan provisions. Petitioner is not obligated by ORS 197.835(4)(a) to comb through the entire comprehensive plan looking for applicable provisions omitted from the notice, in order to avoid a finding that issues regarding applicable plan provisions could have been raised below. City of Newberg v. Yamhill County, 36 Or LUBA 473 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A county's failure to explain in its notice of hearing that all evidence and the staff report would be available for review seven days before the hearing provides no basis for reversal or remand, where petitioner did not object to the adequacy of the notice, does not claim he was surprised by anything in the staff report and does not explain how his substantial rights were violated by the inadequate notice. Woods v. Grant County, 36 Or LUBA 456 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the county's notice of hearing failed to include notice of the procedures to be followed at the hearing, but petitioner did not object below to the inadequate notice and does not explain how his substantial rights were violated by the defective notice, the notice defect provides no basis for reversal or remand. Woods v. Grant County, 36 Or LUBA 456 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A petitioner does not waive his right to object to the county's failure to list the applicable criteria governing permit revocation in the notice of hearing by failing to object below, where it was not clear until the end of the hearing what criteria would be applied or that the decision makers intended to revoke petitioner's permit. Woods v. Grant County, 36 Or LUBA 456 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where petitioner was provided a local appeal and hearing before the county governing body, the failure of the planning commission to give notice before its hearing of the criteria that it intended to apply or that it intended to revoke petitioner's permit provides no basis for reversal or remand, where petitioner does not explain why the appeal to the governing body was inadequate to avoid any prejudice to his substantial rights. Woods v. Grant County, 36 Or LUBA 456 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a local government approves a preliminary planned unit development application based on findings of current compliance with applicable criteria, an argument that the local government impermissibly deferred findings of compliance with applicable criteria to a second stage of review where notice and hearing requirements are not observed is more appropriately framed as an inquiry into whether the findings of current compliance are adequate and supported by substantial evidence. Salo v. City of Oregon City, 36 Or LUBA 415 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The property that is the "subject of the notice," within the meaning of ORS 197.763(2)(a), depends on the proposal being considered. Where an applicant for subdivision approval proposes construction of a right-of-way across a parcel that adjoins the parcel to be subdivided, the notice must be given to the properties within the distances specified by ORS 197.763(2)(a) from both the adjoining parcel and the subdivided parcel. Warrick v. Josephine County, 36 Or LUBA 81 (1999).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A county procedure that does not require that all of the information required by ORS 215.416(11) and 197.763(3) be included in the notice of hearing on a local appeal of a permit decision violates the statutes. Rochlin v. Multnomah County, 35 Or LUBA 333 (1998).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A county procedure that does not require that notice of hearing be given to all of the persons who are entitled to notice of hearing on a permit under ORS 197.763(2) violates the statute. Rochlin v. Multnomah County, 35 Or LUBA 333 (1998).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the zoning ordinance requirements for giving notice of permit hearings are inconsistent with statutory requirements, the statutory conflict is not rendered harmless error by a zoning code requirement that the county give "any other notice required by law." Rochlin v. Multnomah County, 35 Or LUBA 333 (1998).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A pro forma declaration of "emergency circumstances," unaccompanied by stated reasons directed at the necessity for expedited review, is insufficient to satisfy ORS 197.610. Cited concerns about unregulated development in the floodplain constitute a sufficient declaration of emergency under ORS 197.610 to allow expedited adoption proceedings. Barnard Perkins Corp. v. City of Rivergrove, 34 Or LUBA 660 (1998).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Even if a local government's notice is not sufficiently specific to identify all approval criteria, petitioner fails to establish any prejudice to its substantial rights when the approval criteria are identified in a staff report and petitioner was in fact made aware of and addressed the criteria in the proceedings below. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 34 Or LUBA 498 (1998).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the notice of a hearing fails to list all of the criteria required for approval of an application, that procedural error does not prejudice petitioners' substantial rights where all of the applicable criteria were raised and addressed at the public hearing. Turrell v. Harney County, 34 Or LUBA 423 (1998).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. If the city committed a procedural error by approving final subdivision and PUD plans without providing a hearing or opportunity for local appeal, such error provides no basis for remand where the petitioner at LUBA was allowed to submit 65 pages of comments to the city prior to its decision. Rochlin v. City of Portland, 34 Or LUBA 379 (1998).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a local government provides no prehearing notice of a proposed amendment as required by statute, and thus fails to provide a reasonable description of the nature of the local government's proposed decision, the exception to the appearance requirement set forth in ORS 197.620(2) applies. Casey Jones Well Drilling, Inc. v. City of Lowell, 34 Or LUBA 263 (1998).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A local government's failure to list a possible zoning restriction in the notice of hearing, as required by ORS 197.763, is harmless error, where the zoning restriction is a basis for imposing conditions rather than an approval standard. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the notice of hearing contained an error in identifying the zoning map designation being requested, the error provides no basis for reversal or remand where the error had no effect on the approval standards the zone change request was subject to and therefore resulted in no prejudice to petitioner. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Identification of a development code section number is sufficient to provide notice of the applicable criteria in a notice of hearing. It is not necessary to interpret the development code section in the notice of hearing to identify the portions of the identified development code section that institute mandatory approval criteria. Fjarli v. City of Medford, 33 Or LUBA 451 (1997).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A local government's findings cannot defer a determination on discretionary approval criteria to a later stage without providing the same notice and comment period provided in the initial proceeding. Harcourt v. Marion County, 33 Or LUBA 400 (1997).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Under ORS 197.763(8) a local government has a duty to give notice of quasi-judicial land use hearings, but does not have a duty to ensure the notice is received. Epling v. Washington County, 33 Or LUBA 392 (1997).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A county's failure to use the most recent property tax assessment rolls in generating its notice mailing list is not error, where the county establishes by affidavit, as required by ORS 197.763(8), that it actually mailed notice to petitioner's residence. Epling v. Washington County, 33 Or LUBA 392 (1997).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the county's first notice to petitioner was faulty and was not received before the initial local hearing, but a second notice that complied with ORS 197.763(8) was sent before subsequent local hearings, a petitioner is not denied his right to a hearing and is not excused from his obligation to file a timely notice of intent to appeal with LUBA. Epling v. Washington County, 33 Or LUBA 392 (1997).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The provision of ORS 197.610(2) allowing "less than 45 days' notice" to the Director of DLCD of decisions adopting new land use regulations in emergency circumstances does not authorize not giving any notice at all. Western PCS, Inc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 33 Or LUBA 369 (1997).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 215.060, which requires notice and public hearings prior to action by the governing body of a county "regarding the plan," does not apply to a statement on a notice of adoption to DLCD that the Statewide Planning Goals do not apply to a newly adopted land use regulation. Petersen v. Columbia County, 33 Or LUBA 253 (1997).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. To defer making a necessary discretionary determination beyond the date that a UGB amendment becomes final creates a possibility the UGB will be amended before Goal 14 is satisfied. Either (1) a determination that all standards requiring discretion in their application are satisfied must be made prior to the amendment of the UGB itself; or (2) the UGB amendment must be conditioned on making the necessary determination at a time subsequent when the statutory notice and hearing requirements are observed. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a party receives notice of a decision and subsequent appeal, and the record contains no evidence that the party attempted to appear at the hearing, that party cannot claim that it was denied the opportunity to participate in the appeal hearing when it had no notice of the withdrawal of the appeal. DLCD v. Polk County, 33 Or LUBA 30 (1997).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the notice provided by the city does not indicate that an application will be processed as a limited land use decision, and the application is in fact processed as a quasi-judicial land use decision under the provisions of ORS 197.763, the city will be required to provide all of the procedural safeguards required for land use decisions. Wicks-Snodgrass v. City of Reedsport, 32 Or LUBA 292 (1997).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The city's failure to provide petitioner with the notice of hearing to which she was entitled under ORS 197.763(2) effectively denied petitioner the right to participate in the hearings process and to present evidence, thereby violating her substantial rights. Wicks-Snodgrass v. City of Reedsport, 32 Or LUBA 292 (1997).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the notice provided by the city of a proposed partition provides a complete street address, and includes an illustration of the property subject to the partition, that notice is not rendered inadequate by a failure to specify that the partition will involve two parcels. Thierolf v. City of Ashland, 32 Or LUBA 182 (1996).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The county's failure to provide adequate notice of a proposed goal exception under ORS 197.732(5) is a procedural error that will not result in reversal or remand where the record demonstrates that petitioners' substantial rights were not prejudiced. Middleton v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 423 (1996).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. At a minimum, ORS 197.732(5) requires that the county's notice of a proposed goal exception must include a brief summary of the issues involved in the proposed exception, in addition to the list of applicable criteria required by ORS 197.763(3)(b). Middleton v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 423 (1996).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the city's notice of hearing describes only a proposed zone change, and not the proposed general development plan or tentative plan for a subdivision, the city's notice violates ORS 197.763(3). Tucker v. City of Adair Village, 31 Or LUBA 382 (1996).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The "most recent county property tax assessment roll" to which ORS 197.763(2)(a) refers is the property tax assessment roll, whether printed out or not, that shows, as nearly as possible, the current ownership of each property in the county and that notes any property owner's change of address. Walz v. Polk County, 31 Or LUBA 363 (1996).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A county may not rely on its failure to update its tax rolls as soon as possible to defeat the purpose of the notice requirement stated in ORS 197.763. Walz v. Polk County, 31 Or LUBA 363 (1996).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 215.416(11)(a), which requires notice and an opportunity for appeal of a decision made without a hearing be provided to "those persons who would have had a right to notice if a hearing had been scheduled or who are adversely affected or aggrieved by the decision," establishes two categories of people to whom notice must be given. Walz v. Polk County, 31 Or LUBA 363 (1996).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.830(b), which allows appeals "within 21 days of the date a person knew or should have known of the decision where no notice is required," does not apply where city and county provide properly noticed hearings of proceedings to amend local zoning ordinances. Waite v. City of La Grande, 31 Or LUBA 77 (1996).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a local ordinance specifies that board of commissioner hearings are conducted on the record, and where petitioners establish no violation of any statutory notice requirement, petitioners establish no basis for relief in alleging that they relied on various notices, which appeared to petitioners to be contradictory, to conclude they were not required to present all evidence before the planning commission, but would be able to present their case de novo before the board of commissioners. Canfield v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 25 (1996).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A local government's violations of the notice provisions of ORS 197.763 in its original proceedings do not permit a petitioner who fails to raise certain issues during proceedings on remand to elude the waiver provisions of ORS 197.835 during a second appeal to LUBA. Noble v. City of Fairview, 30 Or LUBA 180 (1995).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. When petitioner was apprised by the local government of the applicable criteria, but failed to raise an issue before the local government during proceedings on remand, ORS 197.835(3) precludes petitioner from raising the issue on appeal to LUBA. Noble v. City of Fairview, 30 Or LUBA 180 (1995).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A local government that intends to process limited land use decisions differently from land use decisions must, under ORS 197.195(2)(c)(I), either make that intent clear in the initial notice or provide all of the ORS 197.763 procedural safeguards. Gensman v. City of Tigard, 29 Or LUBA 505 (1995).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a local government makes a permit decision without a hearing, pursuant to local procedures implementing ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10), the provisions of ORS 197.830(3) allowing a person to appeal a decision to LUBA if the local government does not provide a hearing do not apply, because the local government did not fail to provide a hearing or the notice of such hearing required by state or local law. Tarjoto v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 408 (1995).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. General notice of the applicability of a local government's mineral and aggregate code chapter does not provide adequate notice of the applicability of local floodplain permit requirements, when the mineral and aggregate code chapter does not clearly establish the applicability of the floodplain permit requirements. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 281 (1995).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A local government's failure to provide notice that it was considering a floodplain permit application was a procedural error which prejudiced petitioners' substantial rights because the error deprived petitioners of an adequate opportunity to address floodplain issues relevant to local floodplain permit requirements. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 281 (1995).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A local government's failure to provide notice of its hearings to persons other than petitioners is a procedural error that does not prejudice petitioners' substantial rights if petitioners received notice of the local government hearings and participated in them. Skrepetos v. Jackson County, 29 Or LUBA 193 (1995).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. If a local government fails to give a person an individual written notice of hearing to which that person is entitled under state or local law, the local government fails to provide a hearing with regard to that person, within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3). Orenco Neighborhood v. City of Hillsboro, 29 Or LUBA 186 (1995).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Listing an entire zoning ordinance as the applicable criteria in a local government's notice of its initial evidentiary hearing on a quasi-judicial land use application does not satisfy ORS 197.763(3)(b). Neither does listing entire chapters of the zoning ordinance, where such chapters contain criteria for several different types of applications. ONRC v. City of Oregon City, 29 Or LUBA 90 (1995).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the local government wishes to defer a determination of compliance with an applicable approval standard it must ensure that the later approval process provides any statutorily or locally required notice and an opportunity for input. Hilderbrand v. Marion County, 28 Or LUBA 703 (1995).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.763(8) applies only to a local government's notice of its initial evidentiary hearing. It does not apply to local hearings conducted after remand by LUBA. Collins v. Klamath County, 28 Or LUBA 553 (1995).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the local government's notice of its first evidentiary hearing before the planning commission failed to list the applicable standards, as required by ORS 197.763(3)(b), petitioners may raise issues at LUBA even though such issues may not have been raised during the local proceedings. However, this procedural error provides no basis for reversal or remand of the decision where petitioners fail to establish the error caused prejudice to their substantial rights. Shapiro v. City of Talent, 28 Or LUBA 542 (1995).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a local government fails to list a single applicable approval criterion in its notice of initial evidentiary hearing, issues may be raised at LUBA even though they were not raised during the local proceedings. Lamm v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 468 (1995).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the challenged decision includes a determination that a nonconforming use of the subject property exists, but the notice of hearing indicated the only issue to be addressed was an expansion of an existing nonconforming use, the notice of hearing failed to adequately describe the nature of the application, as required by ORS 197.763(3)(a), and failed to reasonably describe the county's final action under ORS 197.835(2)(b). Either of these deficiencies means petitioners may raise issues before LUBA regardless of whether they were raised below. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 417 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 215.416(5) and 197.763(3)(b) require a county to identify applicable approval standards in its notices of hearing. Where petitioner's right to participate in the local proceedings is impaired by the county's failure to identify relevant standards, the challenged decision must be remanded. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 274 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A statement that a list of applicable criteria will be available at City Hall seven days prior to the hearing does not satisfy the requirements of ORS 197.195(3)(b) that the notice of proposed action list the applicable criteria. ONRC v. City of Oregon City, 28 Or LUBA 263 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the notice of public hearing given by the local government is inadequate, such that it does not "reasonably describe the local government's final [decision]," ORS 197.830(3) potentially provides a person adversely affected by the inadequate notice a right to file an appeal at LUBA long after the local decision is reduced to writing, notice of the decision is given, and the decision otherwise becomes final. Kevedy, Inc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 227 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.830(3) imposes a requirement that a reasonable person be able to tell from the notice of public hearing that the local government might take the action that the local government ultimately takes. Kevedy, Inc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 227 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. While changes in the proposal described in a notice of public hearing can be of such a degree that the notice "did not reasonably describe the local government's final [decision]," not every change in the proposal described in the notice of public hearing necessarily implicates ORS 197.830(3). Kevedy, Inc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 227 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.763(3)(c) does not require that the addresses of all properties included within a proposal for quasi-judicial land use approval be set out in the notice of public hearing. An "easily understood geographical reference" may be provided instead. Kevedy, Inc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 227 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A notice of local hearing that includes a map showing all three tax lots included in a proposal is adequate to "reasonably describe the local governments final [decision]," within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3), notwithstanding the failure of the notice to list each tax lot's address and the attachment of other maps to the notice which show only a portion of the property. Kevedy, Inc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 227 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Absent local code provisions analogous to ORS 197.830(3), where a notice of local hearing in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding fails to adequately describe the action ultimately taken by the local government and the time for filing a local appeal has expired, an adversely affected person's exclusive route of appeal is directly to LUBA. Kevedy, Inc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 227 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A statement that the requested Willamette River Greenway permit is to allow placement of a dwelling on the identified subject property is sufficient to satisfy the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(a) that the notice of hearing "[e]xplain the nature of the application and the proposed use or uses which could be authorized." Reeves v. Yamhill County, 28 Or LUBA 123 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the relevant local government notices did not list the applicable approval criteria, as required by both ORS 197.763(3)(b) and 197.195(3)(c)(C), then regardless of whether the challenged decision is a land use decision or limited land use decision, issues may be raised before LUBA irrespective of whether they were raised during the proceedings below. Tri-County Metro. Trans. Dist. v. City of Beaverton, 28 Or LUBA 78 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. If a county implements ORS 215.418(1) by providing in its code that it will notify DSL of "developments" in wetlands identified on the State-wide Wetlands Inventory, it must interpret "developments" consistently with the types of development applications and approvals for which such notice is required by ORS 215.418(1)(a) to (e). Redland/Viola/Fischer's Mill CPO v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 560 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the record shows petitioner was aware of the applicable approval criteria in the comprehensive plan and participated effectively in the local hearing, a local government's failure to comply with the requirements of ORS 197.763(3)(b) and (j), regarding listing applicable criteria from the plan and explaining hearing procedures in its notice of hearing, does not prejudice petitioner's substantial rights or provide a basis for reversal or remand. Furler v. Curry County, 27 Or LUBA 546 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.763(3)(b) and (5)(a) require a local government to provide notice of the standards applicable to an application for a quasi-judicial land use decision, prior to its hearing on such an application. Laine v. City of Rockaway Beach. 27 Or LUBA 493 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where certain comprehensive plan and code provisions are mentioned in the local government's decision, but are not applied as approval criteria for the subject application, ORS 197.763(3)(b) does not require that those provisions be listed in the local government's notice of hearing. BCT Partnership v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 278 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where petitioners presented evidence and argument concerning the necessity for a solar height adjustment and argued the relevant standards were not met, the city's procedural error in not providing notice that it would consider approval of the solar height adjustment did not prejudice petitioners' substantial rights and provides no basis for reversal or remand. Edwards v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 262 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A local government's failure to make available all evidence in support of a quasi-judicial land use application at the time the notice of hearing is provided, as required by ORS 197.763(4)(a), is a procedural error. However, if such evidence is made available prior to or at the hearing and the hearing record is left open for seven days to allow time for additional written testimony from the parties, petitioners' substantial rights are not violated. Edwards v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 262 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the applicant submits a new application following remand by LUBA of a decision approving an earlier application, a local government is under no obligation to include the record of the prior application or to provide explicit notice that parties have to submit evidence from the previous record that they wish the local government to consider in reviewing the new application. Davenport v. City of Tigard, 27 Or LUBA 243 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.763(3)(b) requires a local government to identify, in its notice of hearing on a quasi-judicial land use application, which comprehensive plan goals and policies the local government considers to be "applicable" criteria for the subject application. Eppich v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 498 (1994).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Local government failure to comply with ORS 197.763(3) notice of hearing requirements (1) means that under ORS 197.835(2)(a), LUBA may consider issues that were not raised below; and (2) is a procedural error which, under ORS 197.835(7)(a)(B), provides a basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision only if such error prejudices petitioners' substantial rights. Mazeski v. Wasco County, 26 Or LUBA 226 (1993).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A statement in the local government notice of hearing required under ORS 197.763(3), to the effect that the applicable criteria can be reviewed at the local government planning office, does not constitute listing the applicable criteria, as is required by ORS 197.763(3)(b). Friends of Bryant Woods Park v. Lake Oswego, 26 Or LUBA 185 (1993).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The hearing notice content requirements of ORS 197.763(3) apply to the notice ORS 197.763(3)(f) requires to be given a certain number of days before the local government's evidentiary hearing on a quasi-judicial land use application. They do not apply to notice of a hearing by the governing body on such application, based on the record before a lower local body. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 312 (1993).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A statement that applicable criteria can be viewed at the local government planning office does not satisfy the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(b) that a local government hearing notice list the applicable criteria from the comprehensive plan and ordinances. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 312 (1993).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A statement that failure to raise an issue before the planning commission precludes appeal to the local governing body does not satisfy the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(e) that a local government hearing notice include a statement that failure to raise an issue precludes appeal to LUBA on that issue. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 312 (1993).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. While a showing of prejudice to substantial rights is generally required in order to secure a remand for procedural error, no such showing is required to secure a remand where the procedural requirements of ORS 215.060 are not followed. West Amazon Basin Landowners v. Lane County, 24 Or LUBA 508 (1993).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The notice of hearing required by ORS 215.060 must designate the property involved such that the recipients of the notice can reasonably ascertain from it that property in which they are interested may be affected by the proposed action. Fifth Avenue Corp. v. Washington Co., 282 Or 591, 581 P2d 50 (1978). West Amazon Basin Landowners v. Lane County, 24 Or LUBA 508 (1993).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the notice of a public hearing that preceded adoption of a comprehensive plan amendment did not clearly identify the geographic scope of the plan amendment, the notice nevertheless was adequate to comply with ORS 215.060 where the plan amendment was preceded by an extensive public participation process such that a reasonable person could have ascertained from the notice what property might be affected. West Amazon Basin Landowners v. Lane County, 24 Or LUBA 508 (1993).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A local government's failure to specifically state the location of a continued hearing on a comprehensive plan amendment when announcing the continuation is harmless error, where the continued hearing was held at the same place as the hearing from which it was continued and petitioners appeared at and participated in the continued hearing. West Amazon Basin Landowners v. Lane County, 24 Or LUBA 508 (1993).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a challenged decision does not purport to amend an acknowledged plan or land use regulation, the requirement of ORS 197.610(1) for notice to DLCD of a proposed post-acknowledgment amendment is not applicable. In such circumstances, a local government's failure to give DLCD the notice required by ORS 197.610(1) does not obviate the appearance requirement of ORS 197.830(6)(b) for intervention by DLCD in an appeal before LUBA. Heceta Water District v. Lane County, 24 Or LUBA 402 (1993).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. In rendering a decision on a permit, a city is required to hold at least one public hearing or provide notice of the decision and an opportunity for an appeal. A city's failure to do so requires that the decision be remanded. Hood River Sand v. City of Mosier, 24 Or LUBA 381 (1993).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A local government's failure to provide a person with a required individual written notice of hearing is not sufficient, by itself, to entitle that person to be given individual written notice of the decision or to toll the 21-day deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal with LUBA until individual written notice of the decision is provided. Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a local government fails to give a person an individual written notice of hearing to which the person is entitled, the local government fails to provide a hearing with regard to that person, within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3). Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. LUBA will only reverse or remand a challenged decision on procedural grounds where the error causes prejudice to petitioner's substantial rights. A local government's failure to list certain DEQ rules in the notice of hearing does not prejudice petitioner's substantial rights, where petitioner was provided an opportunity to respond to those DEQ rules during the local proceedings. Stockwell v. Clackamas County, 24 Or LUBA 358 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Even if petitioner were entitled under state statute to notice of local government hearings on comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendments and goal exceptions, and the local government failed to provide that notice, petitioner's notice of intent to appeal would only be timely if it was filed within 21 days after petitioner received actual notice of the challenged decision. Sparrows v. Clackamas County, 24 Or LUBA 318 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The requirement of ORS 197.830(6)(b) that a person wishing to intervene in an appeal at LUBA have appeared during the local government proceedings is obviated where a city fails to observe statutory notice and hearing requirements of ORS 227.173 and 227.175 prior to issuing the challenged decision granting approval for a permit. Hood River Sand v. City of Mosier, 24 Or LUBA 604 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A local government may, by imposing conditions or otherwise, defer a final determination concerning compliance with an applicable permit approval standard to a later stage. However, if the decision to be made at the later stage is itself discretionary, the approval process for the later stage must provide the statutorily required notice and opportunity for hearing, even though the code may not require such notice and hearing. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 24 Or LUBA 187 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where some of the notices preceding local government quasi-judicial hearings on a land use application failed to identify applicable approval criteria, but the notice of the first hearing identified the applicable approval criteria and the record shows all parties were aware of the applicable criteria, the notice errors are at most procedural errors which did not prejudice the parties' substantial rights. Such errors provide no basis for reversal or remand. Reeder v. Clackamas County, 23 Or LUBA 583 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the local government fails to identify the relevant plan and land use regulation standards in the notice of hearing, a petitioner is free to raise noncompliance with those standards in an appeal to LUBA, even though compliance with such standards was not raised as an issue below. Ruff v. Harney County, 23 Or LUBA 521 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. By statute, adjoining property owners within specified distances of property for which discretionary development approval is requested are entitled to notice of the local proceedings and an opportunity for a public hearing. Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a local government concludes a permit applicant has submitted insufficient evidence to demonstrate it is feasible to comply with an applicable approval criterion, it may defer the required determination of compliance with that standard to a later stage in the approval process, but must assure that statutory notice and hearing requirements are observed in that later stage of approval. Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Because OAR 660-12-060 is not part of a county's ordinances or comprehensive plan, it need not be listed as an applicable criterion under ORS 197.763(3)(b), and the county's failure to so list OAR 660-12-060 as an applicable criterion in its notice of hearing does not excuse petitioner from having to raise the issue of compliance with OAR 660-12-060 during the proceedings below in order to have it reviewed by LUBA. ODOT v. Clackamas County, 23 Or LUBA 370 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Even if a local government erred by failing to provide notice of local hearings following remand from LUBA to persons other than parties in the LUBA appeal, that failure results in no prejudice to the substantial rights of the parties who did receive notice of the local hearings on remand. Bartels v. City of Portland, 23 Or LUBA 182 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The failure of local notices of hearing to summarize the issues involved in a proposed goal exception, as required by ORS 197.732(5), constitutes procedural error and does not provide a basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision in the absence of prejudice to petitioner's substantial rights. Caine v. Tillamook County, 22 Or LUBA 687 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where no specific use is proposed in conjunction with a zone change, the notice of hearing is not required to indicate all of the possible uses of the property under the proposed new zone. However, where a reasons goal exception for a particular use is also proposed, ORS 197.763(3)(a) requires that the notice of hearing identify the particular use proposed to be made of the property. Caine v. Tillamook County, 22 Or LUBA 687 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Local government failure to comply with ORS 197.763(3) notice of hearing requirements (1) is a procedural error, which will result in reversal or remand of the challenged decision only if such error prejudices petitioner's substantial rights; and (2) under ORS 197.835(2)(a), allows LUBA to consider issues that were not raised below. Caine v. Tillamook County, 22 Or LUBA 687 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. A local government's failure to include notice of the right to request a continuance under ORS 197.763(4)(b) or that the record be held open under ORS 197.763(6) in the notice of hearing required by ORS 197.763(3) is procedural error, and the parties' substantial rights are violated where it is clear from the record that they would have exercised such rights if they had known about them. Reed v. Clatsop County, 22 Or LUBA 548 (1992).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where adoption of the challenged decision required the exercise of factual and legal judgment, the decision required the exercise of discretion and, consequently, approves a "permit." Under these circumstances, it is error for the local government to fail to provide petitioner with notice and opportunity for hearing, where at least some of petitioner's members were entitled to notice if a public hearing had been scheduled. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. ORS 197.763(3)(b) does not require a local government to list related code provisions as "applicable criteria" in its notice of a quasi-judicial land use hearing in order to be able to consider them in interpreting the central code provisions at issue consistently with such related code provisions. Ward v. City of Lake Oswego, 21 Or LUBA 470 (1991).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a local code standard which petitioners allege is violated by the challenged decision was not identified as an applicable standard in the local government's notices of hearing, as required by ORS 197.763(3)(b), petitioners may raise the issue of compliance with that local code standard in a LUBA appeal, even though they did not raise the issue during the local proceedings. ORS 197.835(2)(a). Southwood Homeowners Assoc. v. City of Philomath, 21 Or LUBA 260 (1991).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The notice of hearing to "other interested persons" required by ORS 227.175(5) requires that a city provide notice beyond that provided to the applicant. A city may not rely on its failure to provide in its code for notice to persons other than the applicant to argue no such notice is required by law. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 21 Or LUBA 515 (1991).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where there is no local appeal available and a local government fails to provide the notice of hearing or hearing required by ORS 227.175(3) and (5) or 215.416(3) and (5) before making a decision on a permit, such permit decisions may be appealed to LUBA within 21 days after a person receives actual notice of the permit decision. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 21 Or LUBA 515 (1991).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The failure of a local government to identify its general procedures for the conduct of hearings in its notice of hearing, as required by ORS 197.763(3)(j), is a procedural error, for which LUBA is empowered to reverse or remand the challenged decision only if such error "prejudiced the substantial rights of the petitioner." ORS 197.835(7)(a)(B). Stefan v. Yamhill County, 21 Or LUBA 18 (1991).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Generally, the failure to send notice of hearing to parties other than petitioner would not prejudice the substantial rights of petitioner, so long as petitioner received proper notice. Forest Park Estate v. Multnomah County, 20 Or LUBA 319 (1990).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where the record demonstrates that petitioner was fully aware of the criteria applicable to its land use application prior to the local hearing, local failure to comply with the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(b) that notice of hearing list applicable plan and code approval criteria did not prejudice petitioner's substantial rights. ORS 197.835(7)(a)(B). Forest Park Estate v. Multnomah County, 20 Or LUBA 319 (1990).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Under ORS 197.763(3)(j), a local government is required to provide in its notice of hearing a general explanation regarding the right under ORS 197.763(6) to request that the record of the initial evidentiary hearing remain open. A local government's failure to provide such notice is a procedural error which, if it prejudiced the parties' substantial rights, would require reversal or remand of the challenged decision. Wissusik v. Yamhill County, 20 Or LUBA 246 (1990).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. When there is no specific proposed use, as in the case of a simple zone change, the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(a) that notices of quasi-judicial land use hearings "explain the nature of * * * the proposed use or uses which could be authorized" does not apply, and it is sufficient if the notices of hearing explain that the application is for a change from one identified zoning district to another identified zoning district. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 19 Or LUBA 421 (1990).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. The provisions of ORS 197.763, which became effective October 3, 1989, concerning required notice of quasi-judicial hearings do not apply to hearings held before October 3, 1989. Torgeson v. City of Canby, 19 Or LUBA 623 (1990).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. If the notice of hearing required by ORS 227.175(5) fails to indicate the possibility of the final action actually taken by the city, a petitioner's notice of intent to appeal to LUBA is timely if filed within 21 days after petitioner received actual notice of the decision. Torgeson v. City of Canby, 19 Or LUBA 623 (1990).

25.3.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Hearing. Where a county finds applicable approval standards are or can be met and grants first stage PUD approval, but includes a condition that (1) final grading and drainage plans be submitted later, and (2) approval of such plans follow a procedure that does not provide notice or an opportunity for further public involvement, the proper way to challenge the county's decision to proceed in such a manner is to appeal the first stage PUD approval decision. Parties may not fail to challenge that decision and appeal the subsequent approval of the final grading and drainage plans, arguing that such approvals are permits subject to the notice and hearing requirements of ORS 215.416, and that their failure to "appear" or file an appeal of such approvals within 21 days is excused because of the county's failure to observe such notice and hearing requirements. J.P. Finley & Son v. Washington County, 19 Or LUBA 263 (1990).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. While ORS 197.763(6)(a) does not require "magic words" for a party to exercise their right to have either the record held open or the hearing continued, where the local government provides notice of that right at the beginning of the hearing, a process question about whether a request for a continuance or to keep the record open can be made is not sufficient to exercise that right. Norman v. Washington County, 80 Or LUBA 500 (2019).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where state statute requires that a local government provide either a public hearing before ruling on an application for a statutory permit or an opportunity for an appeal that includes a de novo public hearing, although the local government may require a notice of appeal that sets forth with reasonable particularity the issues that the appealing party will raise at the hearing, the local government may not, consistent with the statute, (1) make that notice requirement a jurisdictional bar to obtaining the hearing, (2) limit the issues specified to five types of issues, or (3) approve or reject requests for hearings based on a qualitative assessment of how well the appellant has explained the issues specified. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 79 Or LUBA 96 (2019).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a local code provision requires applicants for destination resorts to demonstrate that "[a]ny negative impact on fish and wildlife resources will be completely mitigated so that there is no net loss or net degradation of the resource," where a proposed resort's consumptive use of groundwater is anticipated to impact the quantity and quality of water in an offsite stream, and where the applicant's final master plan includes a mitigation plan requiring the applicant to replace the water consumed by the resort with a quantity and quality of water that will maintain fish habitat in the stream, the local government may not impose a condition of approval allowing the applicant to demonstrate that the source of the mitigation water provides the requisite quantity and quality of water at a later date without review or input by interested persons. Gould v. Deschutes County, 79 Or LUBA 561 (2019).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. When a county opts to approve a permit without a public hearing, any person who is adversely affected or aggrieved, or who is entitled to notice of the decision may appeal a decision made without a hearing. The county cannot require participation prior to a decision, either by attending a conference (that may or may not have occurred), or providing written comments, or in any other manner. Additionally, the county may not enact additional restrictions to prevent a person who is entitled to file an appeal under the ORS 215.416(11)(a)(A) right to file a local appeal. Hood River Valley Residents Comm. v. Hood River County, 78 Or LUBA 282 (2018).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A condition of planned unit development (PUD) approval that requires the applicant to obtain a city engineer's public works permit to improve the pavement of a city street does not represent a deferral of findings of compliance with a PUD approval standard requiring that the PUD be supported by a "safe and adequate transportation system," where the public works permit process will not evaluate compliance with the PUD approval standard, but consider only compliance with whatever standards apply to a city engineer public works permit. Conte v. City of Eugene, 77 Or LUBA 69 (2018).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A local government errs in imposing a condition of approval deferring consideration of compliance with a comprehensive plan policy requiring the applicant and county to undertake a process to consult and resolve differences with local Native American tribes before approving development in an estuary, where the deferral is to an ad hoc proceeding without any assurances that the deferred proceeding will actually occur, and the deferral is not supported by findings demonstrating that deferral is permissible under Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992), or Gould v. Deschutes County, 227 Or App 601, 206 P3d 1106 (2009). Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Deferral of compliance with an approval standard to a subsequent proceeding under Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992), or Gould v. Deschutes County, 227 Or App 601, 206 P3d 1106 (2009), may not be permissible at all where the approval standard at issue invokes a particular process that is explicitly linked to submittal of the development application, requiring consultation and dispute resolution between the applicant, the local government, and a sovereign Native American Tribe before development approval. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where during the hearing a party objects that a city councilor disclosed the existence, but not the substance, of ex parte communications, the objection is sufficient under ORS 197.763(1) to raise an issue regarding the adequacy of the disclosure. J4J Misc PAC v. City of Jefferson, 75 Or LUBA 120 (2017).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Remand is necessary where two city councilors disclose the existence, but not the substance, of an ex parte communication, and the record includes no basis to conclude that the substance of the communications was incidental or immaterial. J4J Misc PAC v. City of Jefferson, 75 Or LUBA 120 (2017).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A city councilor's social media communications with constituents regarding an application for an annexation pending before the city council are ex parte communications that must be disclosed under ORS 227.180(3). J4J Misc PAC v. City of Jefferson, 75 Or LUBA 120 (2017).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where LUBA sustains an assignment of error that a city councilor failed to disclose ex parte communications, but the city councilor is no longer on the city council, and the decision must be remanded for other reasons which will require a new decision adopted by a new city council, LUBA will decline to expand the scope of remand to require the former councilor to disclose the substance of the ex parte communications. J4J Misc PAC v. City of Jefferson, 75 Or LUBA 120 (2017).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where during deliberations on an application for an annexation under a new state statute, a city councilor mentions a city attorney letter discussing the costs of joining litigation to challenge the statute, the letter is exempt from disclosure as an ex parte communication under ORS 227.180(4), and the city commits no procedural error in failing to include the letter in the record of the annexation proceeding. J4J Misc PAC v. City of Jefferson, 75 Or LUBA 120 (2017).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where city procedure on an annexation proposal provides a first evidentiary hearing before the planning commission, followed by a second evidentiary hearing before the city council, the planning commission hearing is the "initial evidentiary hearing" for purposes of ORS 197.763(6)(a), which requires the local government to grant a request for a continuance or open record period that is made prior to the conclusion of the initial evidentiary hearing. The local government is not required to grant such a request made at subsequent evidentiary hearings. J4J Misc PAC v. City of Jefferson, 75 Or LUBA 120 (2017).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Under ORS 197.763(6)(b) or (c), where a party requests in writing the opportunity to respond to new evidence submitted at a continued hearing or during an open record period, any such opportunity is limited to responses to new evidence submitted during the continued hearing or the first open record period. A hearings officer is not compelled by ORS 197.763(6)(b) or (c) to allow a party to submit, during a second open record period, responses to evidence submitted during the initial evidentiary hearing. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 75 Or LUBA 302 (2017).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A zoning classification decision described in ORS 227.160(2)(b) is not a statutory "permit" decision described in ORS 227.160(2), requiring notice and opportunity for a hearing, unless the decision goes beyond classifying a proposed use and applies discretionary standards to approve or deny the proposed use. Central Eastside Industrial Council v. City of Portland, 74 Or LUBA 221 (2016).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Under ORS 197.763(6)(a) through (c), prior to the conclusion of the initial evidentiary hearing any party may request an opportunity to present additional evidence. In that event, the hearing body must either continue the hearing or leave the record open to receive the additional evidence, and failure to do so is a procedural error. However, where the party making the request appeals and is given a de novo hearing before the local appellate body at which it is allowed to submit additional evidence, the hearings body's error did not result in prejudice to the party's substantial rights and therefore provides no basis for LUBA to remand. Pinnacle Alliance Group, LLC v. City of Sisters, 73 Or LUBA 169 (2016).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a local government provides written prehearing notice to petitioner and in fact holds a hearing on a proposal to annex and rezone property, the part of ORS 197.830(3) that delays the deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal a decision that is rendered "without providing a hearing" until 21 days after a petitioner receives actual or constructive notice does not apply. Phillips v. City of Happy Valley, 71 Or LUBA 5 (2015).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Modifying a condition of approval to change the source of water used for irrigating landscaping does not obligate the local government to also review and approve a landscaping plan as part of the hearing on the modification, where an unmodified condition provides for review and approval of the landscaping plan as an administrative decision to be issued prior to building permits, and the petitioner's argument that review of the landscaping plan will be discretionary and must be made under proceedings providing notice and hearing is a collateral attack on the unmodified condition. Foland v. Jackson County, 70 Or LUBA 247 (2014).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Failure to provide hearing participants an adequate opportunity to rebut an ex parte communication may not warrant remand, if the communication includes no factual or legal assertions relating to a basis for approval or denial. However, remand is necessary to provide an adequate opportunity for rebuttal where the ex parte communication concerns disputed testimony regarding whether and how many neighborhood associations oppose the project, and the decision makers believe such testimony to be relevant to an approval criterion that requires the project to meet the overall needs of the community. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 360 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. To provide a meaningful opportunity for hearings participants to rebut a disclosed ex parte communication, the decision-maker must (1) consider any objections that the initial disclosure was inadequate and (2) make some response to specific requests for additional information or clarifications that are reasonably necessary for participants to develop rebuttal to material factual and legal assertions in the communication. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 360 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Communications between a staff person and the decision maker, and between a staff person and a party, are not ex parte contacts. However, a decision maker could potentially receive an ex parte contact where a staff person conveys a communication from a party to the decision maker that concerns the land use decision under consideration. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 539 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. An affidavit indicating that one week after issuing the final decision a decision maker knew that the applicant had agreed to the proposed conditions is an insufficient showing that an ex parte contact might have occurred during the hearing to warrant depositions under OAR 661-010-0045, where there is no indication when or how the decision maker acquired that knowledge. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 539 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Even assuming that a staff member conveyed to a decision maker during the proceedings below that the applicant had agreed to proposed conditions, that communication is not the kind of communication that requires the decision maker to disclose and offer other parties the opportunity to rebut. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 539 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. To constitute an ex parte communication that obligates a local government to provide an opportunity for rebuttal, the content of the communication must include something concerning the land use decision at issue that is capable of rebuttal. Where the only content of the alleged communication is that the applicant has agreed to city-proposed conditions, there is simply nothing to rebut or respond to. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 539 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The requirements for continuances and open record periods in ORS 197.763(6)(a), (b) and (c) only apply to the initial evidentiary hearing and do not apply to subsequently continued hearings or open record periods. Warren v. Josephine County, 67 Or LUBA 74 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A local government does not err by granting additional seven-day open record periods following the conclusion of an initial seven-day open record period, where the local government's code specifically authorizes additional continuances and open record periods. Warren v. Josephine County, 67 Or LUBA 74 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Whether a building permit also qualifies as a statutory "permit," as ORS 227.160(2) defines that term does not turn on the complexity of the applicable land use regulations. Whether the building permit qualifies as a statutory permit turns on whether the applicable land use regulations are ambiguous about (1) the nature of the proposed use or (2) whether the proposed use is among the uses that are identified in the land use regulation as permitted. Richmond Neighbors v. City of Portland, 67 Or LUBA 115 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where there is no question under applicable land use regulations that a proposed apartment building is permitted outright in the applicable zone, and the only ambiguities concern the development regulations that apply in approving the apartment use, those ambiguities mean the building permit approving the apartment building is a land use decision and that none of the ORS 197.015(10)(b) exclusions for nondiscretionary decisions apply. But that building permit is not a statutory "permit," as ORS 227.160(2) defines that term, since the use is permitted outright and the only ambiguities concern the development standards that apply to that permitted use. Richmond Neighbors v. City of Portland, 67 Or LUBA 115 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Whether a building permit also qualifies as a statutory "permit," as ORS 227.160(2) defines that term does not turn on the complexity of the applicable land use regulations. Whether the building permit qualifies as a statutory permit turns on whether the applicable land use regulations are ambiguous about (1) the nature of the proposed use or (2) whether the proposed use is among the uses that are identified in the land use regulation as permitted. Kerns Neighbors v. City of Portland, 67 Or LUBA 130 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where there is no question under applicable land use regulations that a proposed apartment building is permitted outright in the applicable zone, and the only ambiguities concern the development regulations that apply in approving the apartment use, those ambiguities mean the building permit approving the apartment building is a land use decision and that none of the ORS 197.015(10)(b) exclusions for nondiscretionary decisions apply. But that building permit is not a statutory "permit," as ORS 227.160(2) defines that term, since the use is permitted outright and the only ambiguities concern the development standards that apply to that permitted use. Kerns Neighbors v. City of Portland, 67 Or LUBA 130 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Following closure of a quasi-judicial land use hearing following an open record period under ORS 197.763(6)(c), that statute authorizes any participant to request an opportunity "to respond to" any new evidence submitted during the open record period. If such a request is made, "the hearings authority shall reopen the record pursuant to [ORS 197.763(7)]." A city council may not refuse to reopen the record, based on an assumption that the evidence a permit opponent will submit will not "respond" to new evidence, and it may not limit the requesting participant to "rebuttal" of party opponents. Friends of the Hood River Waterfront v. City of Hood River, 67 Or LUBA 179 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A hearings officer's failure to clearly explain to petitioner that the applicable procedures limit final written argument to the applicant does not constitute procedural error; indeed, allowing petitioner to submit final written argument as petitioner requested would violate the applicable procedures. Purtzer v. Jackson County, 67 Or LUBA 205 (2013).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The fact that a city believed it was making a decision on the last day allowed by the ORS 227.181 for a decision after remand does not absolve the city from following the procedures applicable to quasi-judicial hearings, including giving all parties the opportunity to respond to new evidence submitted at the hearing. The city could have rejected the new evidence and avoided the procedural conundrum that it apparently believed it faced or could have left the record open to respond to the new evidence under ORS 197.763(4)(b). Poe v. City of Warrenton, 66 Or LUBA 108 (2012).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where an applicant's final written argument rebuts evidence submitted by opponents regarding three mining sites by discussing information about the three sites from the county's inventory of mining sites already in the record, that rebuttal does not introduce "new evidence" into the record contrary to ORS 197.763(6)(e). Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a local government defers a finding of compliance with an applicable discretionary approval criterion to a future review proceeding, it must ensure, either in a condition of approval or by necessary operation of its code, that the second review proceeding is infused with the same participatory rights as those provided in the initial review proceeding. A condition of approval that simply provides that a geologic hazard analysis required for tentative plan approval will be provided "prior to any structural development" is insufficient to ensure that geologic hazard approval standards will be addressed in a proceeding that provides the same notice and hearing required of the initial proceeding on the tentative plan. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 63 Or LUBA 324 (2011).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where it is not clear under a county's code that the planning commission proceeding on a final master plan application for a destination resort will necessarily be conducted as an ORS 197.763 quasi-judicial hearing with notice, the final master plan proceedings appear to be ministerial under the code, and nothing in the tentative master plan approval requires hearing and notice, the county errs in deferring discretionary tentative master plan approval standards to the proceedings on the application for final master plan approval without ensuring that those proceedings will infused with the same participatory rights as the tentative master plan approval. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 63 Or LUBA 324 (2011).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. An argument that the county erred in accepting "new evidence" in the applicant's final written argument contrary to ORS 197.763(6)(e) does not provide a basis for reversal or remand, where the petitioner makes no effort to demonstrate that the alleged new evidence is in fact new evidence, or challenge the county's findings that the final written argument included no new evidence. Burness v. Douglas County, 62 Or LUBA 182 (2010).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A petitioner fails to establish a basis for reversal or remand under ORS 227.186 (Measure 56 Notice) where the notice of hearing that the local government gave was given within the time required by ORS 227.186, that notice appears to substantially comply with ORS 227.186 and petitioner merely states it is not clear from the record that the statutorily required notice was given. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 116 (2009).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The obligation to conduct a "hearing at least for argument" under ORS 227.180(1)(a)(B) only applies when a city council conducts a review of a lower body's decision. The obligation does not apply when the city council declines review thereby making the lower body's decision the city's final determination. Mazorol v. City of Bend, 59 Or LUBA 260 (2009).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The provisions of ORS 197.763(6), dealing with when and how hearings may be continued or the record left open for additional evidence, only apply to the initial evidentiary hearing in a proceeding. Any evidentiary hearing on remand from LUBA is not the initial evidentiary hearing and ORS 197.763(6) does not apply. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 56 Or LUBA 120 (2008).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. If a hearing is not the initial evidentiary hearing as is usually the case on remand, when a party submits new evidence as part of its rebuttal to another's party's evidence, as long as that new evidence is limited to rebutting the other party's evidence the other party has no right to surrebuttal. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 56 Or LUBA 120 (2008).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. ORS 215.416(11)(a)(E)(ii) prohibits local governments from limiting issues that can be raised in an appeal of a permit decision made without a prior hearing to those issues specified in the local notice of appeal. A local government cannot avoid that prohibition by allowing parties to raise the issue at the appeal hearing, and then summarily dismissing the local appeal for failure to specify the basis for the appeal in the local notice of appeal. Woodard v. Yamhill County, 56 Or LUBA 141 (2008).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Because a city council meeting to deliberate on a land use application is a "hearing" for purposes of ORS 227.180(3) and code provisions requiring declaration of ex parte contacts at a hearing and the right of the participants to rebut the substance of such contacts, it is also a "hearing" for purposes of a code provision allowing the participants to challenge the qualifications of any city councilor for bias. Gooley v. City of Mt. Angel, 56 Or LUBA 319 (2008).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The ORS 215.422(3)(b) requirement that the governing body make a public announcement of the content of an ex parte communication and offer the parties the right to rebut the substance of the communication at the first hearing following the communication is not satisfied by entering the communication into the record of the land use proceeding at an irregular meeting for which participants to the land use proceeding have no notice or reasonable opportunity to attend. Gardener v. Marion County, 56 Or LUBA 583 (2008).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a local government re-opens the record to accept "new evidence, arguments or testimony" from the applicant, ORS 197.763(7) requires the local government to do so at a hearing or meeting that is a previously announced or noticed continuation of earlier evidentiary proceedings, or otherwise provide reasonable notice to the participants of earlier evidentiary proceedings that the decision maker intends to re-open the evidentiary record. Gardener v. Marion County, 56 Or LUBA 583 (2008).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a local government re-opens the record under ORS 197.763(7) to accept new evidence, argument or testimony, it must offer any participant who requests it an opportunity to "raise new issues" regarding the new evidence, argument or testimony. Gardener v. Marion County, 56 Or LUBA 583 (2008).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a city approves a floodplain permit to construct a driveway within a floodplain, the city does not err in conditioning approval on obtaining a separate encroachment permit from the city to authorize encroachment of a portion of the driveway into a public right-of-way. Such a condition does not impermissibly "defer" any determination of compliance with the floodplain permit before the city. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 55 Or LUBA 350 (2007).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where the preliminary subdivision plat approval appears to defer a determination of compliance with a discretionary subdivision approval standard to the final plat decision, but does not explain why the standard does not apply at the time of preliminary plat approval, LUBA will remand the decision to the county to determine when the standard applies and, if it applies at the time of final plat approval, whether the proceedings that govern final plat approval are consistent with the county's statutory obligation to address discretionary land use standards as part of a public process that affords notice and opportunity for public input. Reeves v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 452 (2007).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A local government impermissibly defers a finding of compliance with an approval standard requiring that the proposed use will not impose an undue burden on the transportation system, where the local government makes no findings of compliance with respect to a disputed intersection, but instead imposes conditions of approval requiring the applicant to submit a traffic study to determine impacts on the intersection, and to execute a development agreement determining the applicant's contribution to improve the intersection, under a process that does not provide for a hearing or public participation. Western Express v. Umatilla County, 54 Or LUBA 571 (2007).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The first of three options under Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992), is to find that "feasible solutions to identified problems exist" and impose necessary conditions to ensure compliance with approval standards. LUBA will reject a claim that a local government has implicitly exercised the first option under Rhyne, where there is no evidence in the record that the proposed use complies with a particular approval standard, and no findings of compliance or feasibility of compliance. Western Express v. Umatilla County, 54 Or LUBA 571 (2007).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where the local government on remand allows the permit applicant an opportunity to rebut the permit opponent's response to the new evidence, it must allow other parties an opportunity to rebut the permit opponent's response; but the local government is not obligated on remand to allow other permit opponents an additional opportunity to enhance their evidentiary presentation. Rice v. City of Monmouth, 53 Or LUBA 55 (2006).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A land use compatibility statement that determines the appropriate zoning classification for a proposed use of land within an urban growth boundary may constitute a "zoning classification" decision as defined by ORS 227.160(2)(b), and thus not constitute a statutory "permit" that would require the city to provide notice and an opportunity for hearing. Hallowell v. City of Independence, 53 Or LUBA 165 (2006).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A local government errs in accepting new information into the record after the public hearing on a matter is closed without allowing other parties an adequate opportunity to respond to the new evidence. Gunzel v. City of Silverton, 53 Or LUBA 174 (2006).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A local government errs in deferring a requirement for submission of a geotechnical analysis to a later stage of the proceedings that does not provide for notice or hearing. Township 13 Homeowners Assoc. v. City of Waldport, 53 Or LUBA 250 (2007).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A planning director decision not to refer a revocation request to the planning commission for a hearing is not a "permit" decision as that term is defined at ORS 227.160(2), because it does not constitute the "discretionary approval of a proposed development of land." Emami v. City of Lake Oswego, 52 Or LUBA 18 (2006).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A proceeding to revoke a permit is more analogous to an enforcement action than to a permit proceeding under ORS 227.175, and thus is not subject to the statutory procedural and other requirements applicable to permit proceedings. Emami v. City of Lake Oswego, 52 Or LUBA 18 (2006).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Under a preliminary subdivision approval standard requiring a finding, based on the preliminary grading plan, that it is feasible for the final grading plan to comply with code standards governing final grading plans, a finding to that effect is not a deferral of findings of compliance with the standards governing final grading plans. Angius v. Washington County, 52 Or LUBA 222 (2006).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Absent some authority to the contrary, in approving a preliminary grading plan the local government is not required to determine what procedures will govern consideration of the final grading plan. Where the decision approving the preliminary grading plan does not determine and is not required to determine the procedures that govern the final grading plan, LUBA will reject arguments that the local government erred in failing to impose conditions requiring the county to provide notice and opportunity to request a hearing in considering the final grading plan. Angius v. Washington County, 52 Or LUBA 222 (2006).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Although a local government is obligated to open the evidentiary record to allow the parties to address any new criteria that may be applied on remand from LUBA, where a local government applies the same criterion on remand that it did in its initial decision and merely cites different comprehensive plan policies to explain how it interprets that criterion, the local government is not obligated to reopen the evidentiary record. Neighbors 4 Responsible Growth v. City of Veneta, 52 Or LUBA 325 (2006).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. When on remand a local government conducts an evidentiary hearing regarding a modified application, the local government may not restrict participation in the public hearing to parties to the original LUBA appeal. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 52 Or LUBA 509 (2006).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where neither the local government nor LUBA has jurisdiction to resolve the legality of a condition requiring necessary facilities to be constructed prior to obtaining final approval of a two-step subdivision approval process, the local government may (1) adopt findings establishing that fulfillment of the condition of approval is not precluded as a matter of law, and (2) ensure that the condition will be fulfilled prior to final subdivision approval or actual development. Butte Conservancy v. City of Gresham, 52 Or LUBA 550 (2006).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Technical revisions to a tentative subdivision plan need not be decided with public participation, and a condition of tentative subdivision plan approval requiring that, prior to submittal of the final plat, county staff will "red-line" the plat and return to applicant's surveyor for corrections is not an impermissible deferral of findings to the second step of a two-step process. Angius v. Washington County, 50 Or LUBA 33 (2005).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Limiting issues addressed in a decision following a de novo hearing under ORS 214.416 to issues specifically raised in the local notice of appeal is inconsistent with ORS 215.416(11)(a)(E), which provides that the "testimony, argument and evidence shall not be limited to issues raised in a notice of appeal[.]" Sisters Forest Planning Comm. v. Deschutes County, 48 Or LUBA 78 (2004).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A local government errs in deferring a determination of compliance with a discretionary permit criterion requiring that development protect riparian vegetation and aesthetic resources to a subsequent staff review that does not provide for notice or hearing. Moreland v. City of Depoe Bay, 48 Or LUBA 136 (2004).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a city is required to apply discretionary criteria in issuing a temporary approval decision, and that temporary approval decision is the only effective city decision that authorizes a broadcast tower and sets the stage for issuance of building permits to construct the tower, that temporary approval decision constitutes "discretionary approval of a proposed development of land" and is therefore a "permit," within the meaning of ORS 227.160(2). The city must either provide a public hearing before issuing an ORS 227.160(2) permit, or provide the opportunity for a local de novo appeal of that permit decision after it is issued. Curl v. City of Bend, 48 Or LUBA 530 (2005).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The ORS 197.763(6)(b) right to request that a hearing be continued must be exercised prior to the close of the initial evidentiary hearing. Where the initial evidentiary hearing was held before the planning commission, a party has no right under ORS 197.763(6)(b) to request a continuance in a subsequent hearing before the city council, notwithstanding that the planning commission was evenly divided and could not reach a majority vote to approve or to deny an application for subdivision approval. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 47 Or LUBA 331 (2004).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A city's decision to follow quasi-judicial procedures in adopting a decision concerning a two-mile long highway project affecting a large portion of the city does not convert a legislative decision into a quasi-judicial decision. A city need not require that parties in a legislative land use proceeding follow any particular order in presenting evidence. Ramsey v. City of Philomath, 46 Or LUBA 241 (2004).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Nothing in the ORS 197.763 statutory procedures for quasi-judicial land use decisions prohibits an applicant from reserving its entire presentation at a continued hearing to its final rebuttal. If an applicant submits new evidence at that continued hearing, ORS 197.763(6) allows a party to request an opportunity to submit additional written evidence to respond to that new evidence. Ramsey v. City of Philomath, 46 Or LUBA 241 (2004).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A planning commission permit approval can defer findings of compliance with a conditional use standard requiring that proposed structures "complement" the design of the area, by relying on subsequent review by an architectural review committee, where the committee's review provides the same notice and opportunity for hearing required by state law for the conditional use decision, and the committee will determine compliance with the deferred standard as part of its architectural review. McCulloh v. City of Jacksonville, 46 Or LUBA 267 (2004).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Once an administrative permit approval decision is appealed locally, ORS 227.175(10)(a)(A) and (D) require that a city provide a de novo appeal and a decision on that appeal. A city fails to provide the statutorily required de novo appeal when it relies on a committee rule that is not part of the zoning ordinance and was not adopted by the city council to decide that a 2-2 vote of the committee results in denial of the appeal. Hayden Island, Ltd. v. City of Portland, 46 Or LUBA 439 (2004).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. That comprehensive plan policies apply to a challenged grading permit, and thus the permit is a "land use decision" as defined by ORS 197.015(10), does not necessarily mean that the city is obligated to provide a hearing on the grading permit. Not all permits that are land use decisions are also statutory "permits" as defined by ORS 215.402 and 227.160 and subject to statutory requirements to provide a hearing or opportunity for a hearing. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 566 (2004).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A city commits no error by processing a lot line adjustment as a quasi-judicial land use matter before the planning commission rather than as a ministerial matter before the planning department, where the lot line adjustment decision requires that the city exercise significant legal and factual judgment. Smith v. City of St. Paul, 45 Or LUBA 281 (2003).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Under ORS 227.178(2), even if a city believes that an application is incomplete or it needs more information to render a decision, the city must conduct a hearing and render a decision based on the information submitted, if the applicant insists. Wiper v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 127 (2003).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. It is inconsistent with the statutory scheme for processing permit applications at ORS 227.160 et seq. for city planning staff to reject a permit application because staff believes more information is necessary or because staff believes additional or different applications are necessary for approval. Wiper v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 127 (2003).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. While a city may deny a permit application if the applicant fails to submit information that is necessary for approval, under ORS 227.175 that decision must be made by a hearings officer or proper designate, after a hearing or other procedure that affords the applicant and others to present evidence and argument. Under the statute, planning staff may not effectively prejudge the merits of the application by rejecting an application that staff feels cannot be approved in the form submitted. Wiper v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 127 (2003).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. ORS 227.180 does not require that a city council hold a de novo hearing on appeal of a land use decision after a de novo hearing by the city planning commission. Scheyer v. City of Hood River, 43 Or LUBA 112 (2002).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a county order establishes a fee of $700 to, among other things, request a hearing on a permit application or file a local appeal of a permit decision rendered without a hearing, LUBA will remand the order where the $700 fee appears to violate the $250 maximum fee established by ORS 215.416(11)(b), and the county offers no defense of the order. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 43 Or LUBA 270 (2002).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a county holds the record open to permit opponents of an application to submit additional evidence and allows additional time for the applicant to respond to any new evidence submitted, in the absence of a request by the opponents for an opportunity to submit surrebuttal evidence, ORS 197.763(6)(c) does not require that the county provide such an opportunity and the county's failure to provide such an opportunity is not error. Van Nalts v. Benton County, 42 Or LUBA 497 (2002).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A local government's decision to request that an applicant prepare revised findings to respond to a LUBA remand does not, by itself, obligate the local government to provide a hearing following LUBA's remand. Arlington Heights Homeowners v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 185 (2001).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Parties that seek to demonstrate that a local government erred by adopting an interpretation of local land use legislation after the opportunity for argument and evidentiary presentations closes must demonstrate (1) that the interpretation was unforeseeable, and (2) that the party can produce new evidence that is different from evidence in the record and is directly responsive to the unanticipated interpretation. Gutoski v. Lane County, 155 Or App 369, 963 P2d 145 (1998). Arlington Heights Homeowners v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 185 (2001).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where LUBA remands a land use decision for inadequate findings, parties have no unqualified right to demand a hearing to present additional argument or evidence under Morrison v. City of Portland, 70 Or App 437, 689 P2d 1027 (1984). Arlington Heights Homeowners v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 185 (2001).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where an applicant's final legal rebuttal under ORS 197.763(6)(e) is not limited to legal arguments and includes factual assertions, but petitioner fails to demonstrate that the factual assertions concerned a legally relevant issue, such factual assertions provide no basis for reversal or remand. Donnell v. Union County, 40 Or LUBA 455.

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. ORS 215.060 provides that a county governing body's actions regarding its comprehensive plan are without legal effect unless the governing body conducts one or more public hearings with advance public notice. However, ORS 215.060 does not impose any explicit requirements for the required public hearings. Waibel v. Crook County, 40 Or LUBA 67.

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A county governing body's decision to enter a settlement agreement that includes an agreement that the governing body will adopt certain ordinances does not render the public hearings that are subsequently held prior to adopting such ordinances something other than the kind of public hearing required by ORS 215.060, where the county counsel advised the governing body that it was free not to adopt the settlement ordinances and a transcript of the local proceedings shows the governing body did not believe it was legally bound to adopt the settlement ordinances without modification. Waibel v. Crook County, 40 Or LUBA 67 (2001).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The requirement imposed by Fasano v. Washington Co. Comm., 264 Or 574, 507 P2d 23 (1973), for a fair and impartial tribunal does not apply to legislative land use proceedings. Waibel v. Crook County, 40 Or LUBA 67 (2001).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance With Statutes – Hearings. ORS 227.175 sets forth certain minimum procedural requirements for processing permit applications, but does not prohibit or regulate informal, nonbinding proceedings for preliminary approvals of PUDs that may precede the public hearing(s) required by statute. Neighbors for Sensible Dev. v. City of Sweet Home, 40 Or LUBA 21 (2001).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. When a local government accepts and relies on evidence submitted after the close of the record, without offering participants an opportunity for rebuttal, the decision will be remanded even though a petitioner mistakenly characterizes the procedural error as improper ex parte contact. DLCD v. Umatilla County, 39 Or LUBA 715 (2001).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The ORS 227.175(10)(a)(D) requirement that an appeal with a de novo hearing be provided where permit decisions are initially made without a hearing is not violated where the reviewing body is permitted to review the decision on appeal fully, but is limited to remanding the decision to the initial local decision maker. ORS 227.175(10)(a)(D) addresses the nature of the required hearing and does not address the nature of the local remedies on appeal that the city must provide. Rest-Haven Memorial Park v. City of Eugene, 39 Or LUBA 282 (2001).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Even though petitioners may have obtained a continuance or caused the record to be left open had they made either request, a local government is not required to provide a continuance or leave the record open unless it is requested. Lange-Luttig v. City of Beaverton, 39 Or LUBA 80 (2000).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A condition of approval that is suggested by the applicant after the close of the evidentiary hearing in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding is not "new evidence," within the meaning of ORS 197.763(6)(e), and there is no legal requirement that parties be given a right to rebut such a proposed condition of approval. Marine Street LLC v. City of Astoria, 37 Or LUBA 587 (2000).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A governing body's refusal to admit audio tapes of the planning commission proceedings into the record on appeal is not reversible error, where the party seeking to enter the tapes into the record fails to demonstrate that the refusal to admit the audio tapes in some way prejudiced the party's participation in the local proceedings. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 297 (1999).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a partial transcript of a planning commission hearing contains relevant testimony, a local governing body errs by refusing to accept that partial transcript during its de novo appeal hearing. That the local governing body's review is de novo does not mean the local governing body may refuse to accept relevant evidence simply because the evidence was also submitted to a lower level decision maker. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 280 (1999).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Under ORS 215.416(11)(a), a hearings officer is obligated to conduct a de novo hearing that allows the introduction and consideration of all relevant evidence notwithstanding that the evidence could have been presented to the initial decision maker, but was not. Johnson v. Clackamas County, 37 Or LUBA 73 (1999).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where the city does not dispute petitioners' allegations that city council members are honorary members of the applicant's organization and that the council members received and failed to disclose the existence and substance of ex parte communications during the proceedings below, LUBA will remand the decision for disclosure and an opportunity to rebut those communications. Carlsen v. City of Portland, 36 Or LUBA 614 (1999).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Petitioner's failure to cite ORS 215.402 to 215.428 as authority for its position that the challenged decision required notice and an opportunity for a hearing does not require that LUBA reject the assignment of error where (1) it is clear from its brief that respondent was aware that ORS 215.402 to 215.428 require notice and an opportunity for a hearing for land use decisions that constitute "permits" under ORS 215.402(4), and (2) the city argues in its brief that the challenged decision does not constitute a "permit" decision, within the meaning of ORS 215.402(4). Friends of the Creek v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 562 (1999).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a city improperly accepts evidence submitted into the record as part of the final written argument allowed by ORS 197.763(6), that submission is not an "ex parte" communication within the meaning of ORS 227.180(3). Brome v. City of Corvallis, 36 Or LUBA 225 (1999).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A staff recommendation regarding appropriate conditions of approval that is submitted after the close of the evidentiary hearing is not new "evidence" that might, if submitted by one of the parties, trigger an obligation to reopen the record for rebuttal. Hunt v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 467 (1999).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a local government refuses to consider petitioner's letters and refuses petitioner's requests to present testimony during the local proceedings, the appearance requirement of ORS 197.830(2) is obviated. Hugo v. Columbia County, 34 Or LUBA 577 (1998).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where the procedure followed by the county to approve a permit only provided the applicant a right to participate or appeal, the county may not rely on ORS 215.416(11)(a) to contend petitioner lacks standing to appeal because petitioner is not "adversely affected." Hugo v. Columbia County, 34 Or LUBA 577 (1998).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. If the city committed a procedural error by approving final subdivision and PUD plans without providing a hearing or opportunity for local appeal, such error provides no basis for remand where the petitioner at LUBA was allowed to submit 65 pages of comments to the city prior to its decision. Rochlin v. City of Portland, 34 Or LUBA 379 (1998).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The local government may be required to reopen the evidentiary hearing where the local government (1) changes to a significant degree an established interpretation of an approval standard; (2) the change makes relevant a different type of evidence that was irrelevant under the old interpretation; and (3) the party seeking to submit evidence responsive to the new interpretation identifies what evidence not already in the record it seeks to submit. Gutoski v. Lane County, 34 Or LUBA 219 (1998).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Presenting evidence that petitioner knew a final hearing was scheduled for a certain date would not establish that a petitioner knew that a final decision was actually adopted on that date. Casey Jones Well Drilling, Inc. v. City of Lowell, 33 Or LUBA 845 (1997).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A local government's findings cannot defer a determination on discretionary approval criteria to a later stage without providing the same notice and comment period provided in the initial proceeding. Harcourt v. Marion County, 33 Or LUBA 400 (1997).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. ORS 197.763(6)(c) requires a participant to file a written request with the local government for an opportunity to respond to new evidence submitted during the period after a hearing that the record is left open. Brown v. City of Ontario, 33 Or LUBA 180 (1997).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. ORS 197.763(6)(e) allows an applicant seven days after the record is closed to all other parties to submit final written arguments in support of the application. Brown v. City of Ontario, 33 Or LUBA 180 (1997).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. To defer making a necessary discretionary determination beyond the date that a UGB amendment becomes final creates a possibility the UGB will be amended before Goal 14 is satisfied. Either (1) a determination that all standards requiring discretion in their application are satisfied must be made prior to the amendment of the UGB itself; or (2) the UGB amendment must be conditioned on making the necessary determination at a time subsequent when the statutory notice and hearing requirements are observed. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a local government is not required to conduct a hearing, ORS 197.830(3) does not apply, nor does that statute operate to allow a party's lack of notice of a decision to toll the time limit for appeal. DLCD v. Polk County, 33 Or LUBA 30 (1997).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Under ORS 197.835(4)(a), petitioners may raise new issues before LUBA if the city failed to follow applicable local procedures as required by ORS 197.195(3)(a). If the local code requires a public hearing as an applicable procedure, the city's failure to follow that procedure would allow petitioners to raise the issue before LUBA. Venable v. City of Albany, 33 Or LUBA 1 (1997).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The provisions of ORS 197.763(6)(c) only apply to the "initial evidentiary hearing," and therefore do not require the city council to reopen the record for rebuttal upon the request of a participant in a subsequent evidentiary hearing. Wicks-Snodgrass v. City of Reedsport, 32 Or LUBA 292 (1997).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The county violates ORS 215.422 when it reopens the record to accept a report received by a commissioner from intervenor, but does not provide an opportunity for other parties to rebut the substance of the ex parte communication. Brown v. Union County, 32 Or LUBA 168 (1996).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Because the county's violation of ORS 215.422 is not a procedural error, petitioner is not required to show that his substantial rights were prejudiced by the county's error in order to obtain a remand. Brown v. Union County, 32 Or LUBA 168 (1996).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Under ORS 197.763(6), the local government is only obligated to leave the record open for seven days after the initial evidentiary hearing; language in a local hearing notice to the contrary cannot create additional requirements under that statute. Gross v. City of Tigard, 32 Or LUBA 93 (1996).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where intervenors submit a memorandum to the city council after the closing of the record, but before a final decision is adopted, ORS 197.763(6) requires the city to provide petitioners an opportunity to respond to such material. Tucker v. City of Adair Village, 31 Or LUBA 382 (1996).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The requirement of ORS 197.763(4)(b) that a staff report be available seven days prior to a land use hearing is a procedural requirement; under ORS 197.835(9)(c), its violation is ground for reversal or remand only if petitioner demonstrates that his substantial rights were prejudiced. Simonds v. Hood River County, 31 Or LUBA 305 (1996).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. If a city makes a land use decision without providing a required hearing, ORS 197.830(3) extends the LUBA appeal period. However, ORS 197.830(5) limits the extension to three years unless petitioners establish that the required notice was not provided. Caraher v. City of Klamath Falls, 30 Or LUBA 204 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. When county provides a hearing on appeal of a planning director's decision made without a hearing, but the hearings officer concludes she lacks jurisdiction over the appeal, the county has not provided a hearing on the decision, and petitioner may appeal to LUBA pursuant to ORS 197.830(3). Franklin v. Deschutes County, 30 Or LUBA 33 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. When the city zoning ordinance makes final approval of a tentative subdivision plan a limited land use decision appealable to LUBA, a decision applying the ordinance is not a "tentative decision" that can be appealed locally at a hearing pursuant to ORS 227.175(10). Azevedo v. City of Albany, 29 Or LUBA 516 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A local government violates a substantial right when it charges more than the maximum appeal fee allowed by ORS 227.175(10)(b) for a hearing requested under ORS 227.175(10)(a). Gensman v. City of Tigard, 29 Or LUBA 505 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. If a local government chooses to treat an application as one for a land use decision, rather than a limited land use decision, and a local appeal as one under ORS 227.175(10)(a), it may not charge more than the maximum appeal fee allowed by ORS 227.175(10)(b). Gensman v. City of Tigard, 29 Or LUBA 505 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. While ORS 215.416(11) allows a county to make land use permit decisions without a hearing, it protects an individual's right to participate in a local hearing by requiring that notice of the decision be given to affected persons and that the opportunity for a de novo local appeal be provided. Tarjoto v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 408 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a local government makes a permit decision without a hearing, pursuant to local procedures implementing ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10), the provisions of ORS 197.830(3) allowing a person to appeal a decision to LUBA if the local government does not provide a hearing do not apply, because the local government did not fail to provide a hearing or the notice of such hearing required by state or local law. Tarjoto v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 408 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. ORS 197.763 governs how a quasi-judicial land use hearing is conducted, not whether one is required. ORS 197.763 does not confer a right to a quasi-judicial land use hearing where such a right does not otherwise exist. Save Amazon Coalition v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 335 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Under ORS 215.422(4), a communication between a member of the board of commissioners and county staff is not an ex parte contact required to be disclosed pursuant to ORS 215.422(3). Therefore, that the board chairman did not disclose in the local record the contents of his conversation with the county code compliance officer is not error. Nehoda v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 251 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. If a local government fails to give a person an individual written notice of hearing to which that person is entitled under state or local law, the local government fails to provide a hearing with regard to that person, within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3). Orenco Neighborhood v. City of Hillsboro, 29 Or LUBA 186 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where new information in support of an application is received by a local government on the last day the record is left open, pursuant to a request that the record be left open under ORS 197.763(6), an opposing party is entitled to a continuance under ORS 197.763(4)(b), if it requests a continuance. A request for a continuance under ORS 197.763(4)(b) is not specifically required to be made before the evidentiary record closes. ONRC v. City of Seaside, 29 Or LUBA 39 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. In a quasi-judicial hearing on a land use application, an applicant has a right to rebut evidence submitted by opponents. However, if the applicant's rebuttal includes "additional documents or evidence * * * in support of the application," ORS 197.763(4)(b) gives opponents a right to request a continuance. ONRC v. City of Seaside, 29 Or LUBA 39 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where the local government wishes to defer a determination of compliance with an applicable approval standard it must ensure that the later approval process provides any statutorily or locally required notice and an opportunity for input. Hilderbrand v. Marion County, 28 Or LUBA 703 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where during the local proceedings petitioners affirmatively waived their right to request a continuance, petitioners cannot raise the local government's failure to provide such a continuance as a basis for reversal or remand in an appeal to LUBA. Shapiro v. City of Talent, 28 Or LUBA 542 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A local government commits error by approving a modified partition application after the local evidentiary hearing is closed and refusing petitioner an opportunity to comment on the modified application before approving it. Tognoli v. Crook County, 28 Or LUBA 527 (1995).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Under ORS 215.422(3), parties in county permit proceedings are entitled to disclosure on the record of the substance of any ex parte communications and an opportunity to rebut the substance of the ex parte communication at the first hearing following the communication. Cole v. Columbia County, 28 Or LUBA 62 (1994).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. ORS 197.763(4)(b) establishes a remedy for failure to comply with ORS 197.763(4)(a). Where a document supporting a land use application was not available for review prior to the initial local evidentiary hearing, as required by ORS 197.763(4)(a), but the local government continued the hearing to a later date and made a copy of the document available for review in its planning office prior to the continued hearing, the local government complied with ORS 197.763(4)(b). Bates v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 21 (1994).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. ORS 197.195, which establishes minimum procedural requirements for making limited land use decisions, does not require that local governments provide either a public hearing or a local appeal. ORS 227.175(3) and (10) do not apply to limited land use decisions, because they are not "permits," as defined in ORS 227.160(2). Forest Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 215 (1994).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Although it is uncertain whether ORS 203.810 concerning prosecution of county offenses applies to a county zoning ordinance enforcement proceeding, that the county is represented in such proceedings by a non-attorney planning staff member does not violate ORS 203.810(2), if a county ordinance provides for county representation in such proceedings by county staff members other than the district attorney or county counsel. Watson v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 164 (1994).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. ORS 197.763(5)(a) requires that a statement listing the applicable substantive criteria from the local government comprehensive plan and code be made at the beginning of a quasi-judicial land use hearing. Where such a statement is not made, or other requirements of ORS 197.763 are not met, petitioners may raise new issues in an appeal to LUBA. Eppich v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 498 (1994).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Allegations that the local decision maker failed to disclose ex parte contacts, as required by ORS 215.422(3), provide no basis for reversal or remand where there is no admission by the decision maker or other evidence, either in the record or offered through a motion for evidentiary hearing pursuant to ORS 197.830(13)(b), that an ex parte contact occurred. Eppich v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 498 (1994).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a permit applicant receives a public hearing and decision from a local government and, under the local code, an appeal to the governing body may be decided without further public hearing, the governing body commits no error by denying the applicant's appeal at a public meeting without further notice or public hearing. Van Veldhuizen v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 468 (1994).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where the local code provides a possibility of, but not a right to, a second public hearing on appeal of a hearings officer's decision, the appeal may be denied without providing an additional public hearing, and the code need not include standards for determining whether to grant an additional public hearing. Van Veldhuizen v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 468 (1994).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a local hearing is provided and a party is entitled to written notice of the decision under ORS 215.416(10), ORS 197.830(8) rather than ORS 197.830(3) establishes the deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal. Under ORS 197.830(8), a notice of intent to appeal must be filed within 21 days after a decision becomes final. DLCD v. Crook County, 25 Or LUBA 826 (1993).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. If the contents of an ex parte communication are not publicly announced and placed in the record, as required by ORS 227.180(3), a city official's request for responses to the ex parte communication does not provide the opportunity for rebuttal required by ORS 227.180(3)(b). Horizon Construction, Inc. v. City of Newberg, 25 Or LUBA 656 (1993).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a city decision maker receives an ex parte contact, failure to follow the procedures required by ORS 227.180(3) constitutes a basis for remand by LUBA, regardless of whether the party seeking remand objected during the proceedings below. Horizon Construction, Inc. v. City of Newberg, 25 Or LUBA 656 (1993).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. That a local governing body ultimately adopts an interpretation of an applicable code standard that is different from that adopted by the hearings officer, and declines to reopen the evidentiary record, does not provide a basis for reversal or remand where (1) there was no "established" local interpretation of the code standard, (2) the governing body's interpretation does not make relevant any new type of evidence, and (3) petitioner does not identify any evidence it wishes to submit if the evidentiary hearing is reopened. Heceta Water District v. Lane County, 24 Or LUBA 402 (1993).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a local government fails to give a person an individual written notice of hearing to which the person is entitled, the local government fails to provide a hearing with regard to that person, within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3). Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Under ORS 197.830(3), where a local government renders a decision without providing a hearing, an appeal to LUBA must be filed within 21 days of actual notice of the decision, where notice of the decision is required, or within 21 days of the date a person knew or should have known of the decision, where no notice of the decision is required. Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The requirement of ORS 197.830(6)(b) that a person wishing to intervene in an appeal at LUBA have appeared during the local government proceedings is obviated where a city fails to observe statutory notice and hearing requirements of ORS 227.173 and 227.175 prior to issuing the challenged decision granting approval for a permit. Hood River Sand v. City of Mosier, 24 Or LUBA 604 (1992).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A local government may, by imposing conditions or otherwise, defer a final determination concerning compliance with an applicable permit approval standard to a later stage. However, if the decision to be made at the later stage is itself discretionary, the approval process for the later stage must provide the statutorily required notice and opportunity for hearing, even though the code may not require such notice and hearing. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 24 Or LUBA 187 (1992).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. By statute, adjoining property owners within specified distances of property for which discretionary development approval is requested are entitled to notice of the local proceedings and an opportunity for a public hearing. Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a local government concludes a permit applicant has submitted insufficient evidence to demonstrate it is feasible to comply with an applicable approval criterion, it may defer the required determination of compliance with that standard to a later stage in the approval process, but must assure that statutory notice and hearing requirements are observed in that later stage of approval. Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where additional evidence in support of an application is received after the notice of hearing required by ORS 197.763(3) is provided, the parties are entitled to request a continuance under ORS 197.763(4)(b), but a continuance need not be granted unless it is requested. Reed v. Clatsop County, 22 Or LUBA 548 (1992).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where parties are entitled to a continuance following the introduction of new evidence in support of an application under ORS 197.763(4)(b), and make it clear they wish to present additional evidence at a later hearing, a local government commits error in not continuing the evidentiary hearing, even though a continuance under ORS 197.763(4)(b) was never explicitly requested. Reed v. Clatsop County, 22 Or LUBA 548 (1992).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where a city approves a permit without providing the public hearing or notice of decision and opportunity for a local appeal required by ORS 227.175(3) and (10), a notice of intent to appeal at LUBA is timely filed if it is filed within 21 days after petitioners received actual notice of the permit decision. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 22 Or LUBA 390 (1991).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where adoption of the challenged decision required the exercise of factual and legal judgment, the decision required the exercise of discretion and, consequently, approves a "permit." Under these circumstances, it is error for the local government to fail to provide petitioner with notice and opportunity for hearing, where at least some of petitioner's members were entitled to notice if a public hearing had been scheduled. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. A city attorney's statement at the beginning of the city council hearing, to the effect that parties are welcome to rebut ex parte communications, satisfies the requirement of ORS 227.180(3)(b) that a public announcement of the parties' right to rebut the substance of an ex parte communication be made at the first hearing following the communication. Brown & Cole, Inc. v. City of Estacada, 21 Or LUBA 392 (1991).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Pursuant to 215.406(1) and 215.422(2), a county governing body may designate a hearings officer to conduct hearings on permit applications and may provide that the hearings officer's decision is the final county decision. Wickwire v. Clackamas County, 21 Or LUBA 278 (1991).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. Where there is no local appeal available and a local government fails to provide the notice of hearing or hearing required by ORS 227.175(3) and (5) or 215.416(3) and (5) before making a decision on a permit, such permit decisions may be appealed to LUBA within 21 days after a person receives actual notice of the permit decision. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 21 Or LUBA 515 (1991).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. The requirements of ORS 197.763(4)(b) and the local code that staff reports be available a certain number of days prior to land use hearings are procedural requirements; their violation is grounds for reversal or remand of the local government's decision only if petitioner demonstrates prejudice to its substantial rights. ORS 197.835(7)(a)(B). Forest Park Estate v. Multnomah County, 20 Or LUBA 319 (1990).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. ORS 227.175(10), allowing city approval or denial without a hearing, if notice of the decision is given and an opportunity for an appeal at the city level provided, applies only to permit applications, not to zone changes. Torgeson v. City of Canby, 19 Or LUBA 623 (1990).

25.3.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Hearings. If a county neither (1) holds a public hearing before making a decision on an application for a "permit," as defined in ORS 215.402(4), nor (2) provides an opportunity to appeal that decision at the county level, it fails to comply with the requirements of ORS 215.416(3), (5) and (11). Flowers v. Klamath County, 18 Or LUBA 647 (1990).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Subsection (1) of ORS 215.427 imposes either a 120-day or a 150-day deadline for a local government to take final action on a permit or zone change application. Subsection (2) of that statute gives a county 30 days to advise permit applicants who submit incomplete applications what is needed to make the application complete, and also sets out the three ways an application may be deemed complete. Subsection (3) of that statute freezes the approval standards, as of the date the application was first submitted, if the application is complete when submitted or rendered complete "within 180 days of the date the application was first submitted." Subsection (4) of that statute renders the application "void" on the one hundred and eighty-first day after the application was "first * * * submitted," if the applicant has not by that time complied with one of the submittal requirements set out in that subsection or subsection (2) to make the application complete. Bora Architects, Inc. v. Tillamook County, 76 Or LUBA 330 (2017).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Where a petition for writ of mandamus to compel a decision approving a permit application was filed with the circuit court before the earliest date on which the county took action to reduce its final decision to writing, the circuit court has exclusive jurisdiction regarding the permit application. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 73 Or LUBA 98 (2016).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Where a petitioner's notice of intent to appeal a decision was filed at LUBA after the board of county commissioners was unable to take action on a local appeal of a planning director's decision that approved a permit application, but before the board of county commissioners reduced its decision to writing, the notice of intent to appeal was filed prematurely. Where the permit applicant files a petition for writ of mandamus more than 14 days after the board of commissioners' hearing at which they failed to take action, and before the board of commissioners approved the minutes of that hearing, the circuit court has exclusive jurisdiction regarding the permit application, and LUBA does not have jurisdiction over the appeal. ORS 215.429(2) and (4). Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 73 Or LUBA 98 (2016).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. An application is not void under ORS 227.178(4) where the city does not identify any missing information, and the petitioner provided a clear statement that no additional information will be provided, resulting in the application being deemed complete under ORS 227.178(2). Smith v. City of Gearhart, 71 Or LUBA 184 (2015).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. ORS 227.178, the "120-Day Rule," requires cities to take final action on a permit application within 120 days after the application is deemed complete. If the city does not take final action within 120 days, then ORS 227.179(1) provides a remedy for applicants: the right to seek a writ of mandamus in circuit court to compel the city to approve the permit application. Leathers Oil Company v. City of Newberg, 63 Or LUBA 176 (2011).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. ORS 227.178(5) allows an applicant to extend the 120-day deadline for a final decision on a permit application for a specified period of time up to 245 days, and potentially gives the city up to one year to take final action. Only the applicant can seek to extend the 120-day deadline, and such a request or requests must be made in writing. Leathers Oil Company v. City of Newberg, 63 Or LUBA 176 (2011).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Where an applicant voluntarily and completely waives the 120-day deadline and the associated right to seek mandamus if the city exceeds that deadline, nothing in ORS 227.178(5) divests a city of jurisdiction to act and rely upon such a waiver in making a decision on an application more than 365 days after the application is deemed complete. Leathers Oil Company v. City of Newberg, 63 Or LUBA 176 (2011).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. A written request for more time to correct land use violation on property that arose under a previously issued permit does not constitute a "written request" under ORS 215.427(5) to extend the 120-day deadline for the county to take final action on a subsequent application to partition the property. Sperber v. Coos County, 61 Or LUBA 477 (2010).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Under ORS 215.427(8), when a county fails to take timely action on a permit application, a permit applicant is entitled to a refund of "either the unexpended portion of any application fees or deposits previously paid or 50 percent of the total amount of such fees or deposits, whichever is greater," and ORS 215.427(8) further provides that in that circumstance "[t]he applicant is not liable for additional governmental fees incurred subsequent to the payment of such fees or deposits." Under ORS 215.427(8), when a county is required to refund initial permit application fees, it may not require the permit applicant to pay additional fees for any additional proceedings that may be required to respond to a LUBA remand of the county's permit decision. Sperber v. Coos County, 61 Or LUBA 477 (2010).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Under ORS 215.427 and 215.429, where a county does not issue a final decision within the applicable 120 or 150-day deadline, the consequence is that the applicant may either elect to continue with the application process or file a petition for writ of mandamus to compel the county to approve the application. Where the applicant elects to continue with the application process after the deadline, a subsequent county decision approving or denying the application is not void or moot because it is issued after the applicable deadline. Davis v. Polk County, 58 Or LUBA 1 (2008).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Where a city discovers late in a proceeding on a partition application that its code may require application of certain subdivision approval standards, the city should identify any applicable subdivision standards and give the applicant the opportunity to demonstrate compliance with them, even if that would require the city to make its decision after the statutory deadline for taking final action on the application has passed. However, it is inconsistent with ORS 227.178(3) for the city to summarily deny the partition and effectively force the applicant to submit a new application, where that denial is not based on any applicable standard or criteria. Stewart v. City of Salem, 58 Or LUBA 605 (2009).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Reversal is not warranted under ORS 197.835(10)(a)(A) where a city denies a partition application three weeks prior to expiration of the 120-day deadline based on the city's belief that the proposed partition must be processed as a subdivision, where the city mistakenly believed that its only option was to deny the application and effectively require the applicant to submit a new application, but there is no indication in the record that the city denied the application to avoid the 120-day rule. Stewart v. City of Salem, 58 Or LUBA 605 (2009).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Under ORS 227.178(4), an incomplete application becomes automatically void on the one hundred and eighty-first day after it is submitted unless the applicant takes one of the steps enumerated in the statute to preserve the application from becoming void. Painter v. City of Redmond, 56 Or LUBA 311 (2008).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Although a city may not take procedural short-cuts that it knows or reasonably should know will prejudice one or more party's substantial rights and thereby provide a reasonably certain basis for an appeal to and remand by LUBA, ORS 197.835(10)(a)(B) or ORS 227.178 do not prohibit a city from expediting its local review process to meet the 120-day deadline, provided that expedited process does not require one or more parties to sacrifice their substantial right to fully and fairly present their position on the merits of the application. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Central Point, 49 Or LUBA 472 (2005).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. The ORS 227.178(1) requirement that a city render a final decision on a permit application within 120 days is not satisfied by a pro forma denial. To comply with ORS 227.178(1) and comply with the ORS 197.835(10)(a)(B) requirement that the city not take action to avoid the requirements of ORS 227.178, the city's decision must be a real decision that is made in good faith, in the sense that the decision is supported by findings and is based on an evidentiary record that the city could reasonably believe are adequate to allow that decision to be defended in the event of an appeal to LUBA. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Central Point, 49 Or LUBA 472 (2005).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Neither the text of ORS 197.835(10)(a)(B) nor contextual statutes dictate that any deviation by a city from its procedures to render a timely final decision within the 120-day deadline imposed by ORS 227.178(1) necessarily constitutes an "action [taken] to avoid the requirements of ORS * * * 227.178," within the meaning of ORS 197.835(10)(a)(B). Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Central Point, 49 Or LUBA 472 (2005).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. The actions taken to avoid the requirements of ORS 227.178, which may provide a basis for reversal by LUBA under ORS 197.835(10)(a)(B), are not limited to a city's final action. Actions the city takes before adopting its final decision may also violate the statute. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Central Point, 49 Or LUBA 472 (2005).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. LUBA may consider extra-record evidence where there are disputed allegations regarding whether a city took action for the purpose of avoiding the ORS 227.178 requirement that the city take final action on certain permit applications within 120 days. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Central Point, 49 Or LUBA 697 (2005).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. ORS 227.178 and 227.179 envision three routes to final action on a permit application: (1) a final local government decision within 120 days; (2) a final local government decision in more than 120 days followed by a refund of one-half of the application fee; or (3) a failure to issue a final decision within 120 days followed by a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the local government to approve the permit or demonstrate to the circuit court that approval of the permit would violate a substantive provision of its comprehensive plan or land use regulations. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Central Point, 49 Or LUBA 697 (2005).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. If a city or county adopts a "spurious, bad faith" denial of a "permit, limited land use decision or zone change application" under ORS 215.427 or 227.178 for the purpose of avoiding one of the statutory consequences for failing to take timely action on an application, such a decision constitutes an "action * * * for the purpose of avoiding the requirements of ORS 215.427 or 227.178," within the meaning of ORS 197.835(10)(b)(B). Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Central Point, 49 Or LUBA 697 (2005).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Generally, where a civil statute of limitation is changed to shorten the limitation period, the change is applied prospectively only. But where the statute is changed to lengthen the limitation period, the change applies both prospectively and retroactively. Applying that principle to ORS 215.417, forest template dwelling permits with a two-year duration that were issued before ORS 215.417 took effect, but which had not yet expired on the date ORS 215.417 took effect, must be honored for four years. Butori v. Clatsop County, 45 Or LUBA 553 (2003).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. An assignment of error that alleges a planning commission may only make recommendations to the city council and may not make a final decision on an application for a conditional use permit for a home occupation is without merit where (1) ORS 227.090(h) specifically authorizes planning commissions to carry out the statutory provisions governing land use permits and (2) the city's zoning code specifically authorizes the planning commission to make decisions on conditional use permits. Roe v. City of Union, 45 Or LUBA 660 (2003).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Petitioners may not argue that a city's decision to deny its application was for the purpose of avoiding the 120-day decision deadline set out at ORS 227.178, when the challenged decision was rendered five days after that deadline. Oregon Child Devel. Coalition v. City of Madras, 43 Or LUBA 184 (2002).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Where a county has a unified zoning map and comprehensive plan map, any application for a zoning map amendment is by necessity also an application for a comprehensive plan map amendment. A combined zoning and comprehensive plan map amendment application is not one of the three kinds of land use applications described in ORS 215.427(1), and for that reason the fixed goal post rule at ORS 215.427(3) does not apply. Rutigliano v. Jackson County, 42 Or LUBA 565 (2002).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. That the city council declined to hear petitioner's local appeal of a planning commission site design approval does not provide a basis to reverse the city's decision or award attorney fees to petitioner under ORS 197.835(10), even if the city council's decision was motivated by a desire to avoid violating the ORS 227.178(1) requirement that the city issue a final decision on an application for a limited land use decision within 120 days. ORS 197.835(10) applies where the local government denies an application in a bad faith attempt to avoid the requirements of ORS 227.178. It does not apply to a decision approving an application. Elliott v. City of Redmond, 40 Or LUBA 242 (2001).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. For purposes of ORS 215.428(1), a decision is not "final" at the time the oral decision is made where the local code provides the decision becomes final 10 days after the written decision is filed unless the county board grants a rehearing on its own motion. Miller v. Multnomah County, 33 Or LUBA 644 (1997).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. ORS 197.835(10)(a)(B), which allows LUBA to reverse a local government's decision and order development approval when denial of the application was for the purpose of avoiding the 120-day limit of ORS 215.428, does not apply to good faith denials on the merits of the application, whether timely or untimely. Miller v. Multnomah County, 33 Or LUBA 644 (1997).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Backdating of a final written decision to correspond to the date of an earlier oral decision denying an application does not constitute an action taken to avoid the 120-day rule established by ORS 215.428, within the meaning of ORS 197.835(10)(a)(B), when the denial was made on the merits and not for the purpose of avoiding the 120-day rule. Miller v. Multnomah County, 33 Or LUBA 644 (1997).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. The 120-day time limit for local government action stated in ORS 215.428 applies by its terms only to initial local proceedings on an application, not to proceedings on remand. Fraley v. Deschutes County, 31 Or LUBA 566 (1996).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Where a local ordinance requires the city to act on an application within 36 days after filing, LUBA will read that ordinance consistently with state statute to require the city to act within 36 days of the date the application is deemed complete. Thornton v. City of St. Helens, 31 Or LUBA 287 (1996).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. The existence of a writ of mandamus remedy in circuit court under ORS 227.178(7) for delay in processing an application does not affect either the city's review of the application or LUBA's jurisdiction if the remedy is not exercised. Sullivan v. City of Woodburn, 31 Or LUBA 192 (1996).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. Where a county's approval of a permit is mandated by an order of the circuit court issued pursuant to a writ of mandamus under ORS 215.428(7), the county's decision approving the permit is not a "land use decision," as defined in ORS 197.015(10), because the county was not required to apply its comprehensive plan or land use regulations in adopting that decision. Gearhard v. Klamath County, 22 Or LUBA 377 (1991).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. An applicant for development approval has the burden of establishing compliance with all relevant approval criteria during the local proceedings, regardless of whether the 120-day period referred to in ORS 215.428(7) expires. Adams v. Jackson County, 20 Or LUBA 398 (1991).

25.3.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Time Limit for Final Action. A county does not exceed its jurisdiction in taking final action on a permit application after the 120-day time limits established by ORS 215.428(1) and its code have elapsed; and its decision will be given effect. Forest Park Estate v. Multnomah County, 20 Or LUBA 319 (1990).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. A condition of approval requiring that an applicant construct a proposed fence between a proposed trail and adjoining farms; specifying only that the proposed fence must be "capable of preventing dogs and people from entering adjacent farm fields"; punting all determinations regarding fence design, materials, construction, etc. to a subsequent master planning process that offers no opportunity for a public hearing or other public input; and allowing adjacent landowners to opt out of installing a fence on their property line is inadequate where the county relies on the proposed fence to address a wide variety of different potential impacts, which might require different fence designs, materials, construction techniques, and maintenance routines in order to ensure that the trail will not cause significant impacts on farm practices for purposes of the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1). Such a condition is also not clear and objective for purposes of ORS 215.296(2). Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 348 (2019).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Where a county determines that a property qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750 because at least three dwellings existed on surrounding lots or parcels on January 1, 1993, based on a statement of the applicant, a recollection of the prior owner of one of the surrounding dwellings, an email from a contractor who worked on one of the surrounding dwellings, and a statement by the tax assessor that its records showed a dwelling in place on January 1, 1993, but where LUBA concludes that the county erred in accepting the email, where LUBA cannot determine whether the county would have reached the same conclusion without the email, and where the county's findings failed to address evidence that the tax rolls indicate existence of the dwelling as of July 1993 rather than January 1993, LUBA will remand for the county to adopt adequate findings. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Absent a legal definition for how the center point of a property must be established for purposes of determining whether it qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750, a county errs by not explaining the basis for its conclusion that its chosen method is the most appropriate and by not addressing opponents' arguments challenging that method. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Where a county determines that a property qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750 because at least three dwellings existed on surrounding lots or parcels on January 1, 1993, based on a statement of the applicant, a recollection of the prior owner of one of the surrounding dwellings, an email from a contractor who worked on one of the surrounding dwellings, and a statement by the tax assessor that its records showed a dwelling in place on January 1, 1993, but where LUBA concludes that the county erred in accepting the email, where LUBA cannot determine whether the county would have reached the same conclusion without the email, and where the county's findings failed to address evidence that the tax rolls indicate existence of the dwelling as of July 1993 rather than January 1993, LUBA will remand for the county to adopt adequate findings. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Absent a legal definition for how the center point of a property must be established for purposes of determining whether it qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750, a county errs by not explaining the basis for its conclusion that its chosen method is the most appropriate and by not addressing opponents' arguments challenging that method. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. When and if a board of county commissioners adopts a revised staff report as its findings, it must identify the applicable standards, the facts used to meet those standards and explain how those facts led to the conclusion that the applicable criteria has been met. Simply adopting the report or incorporating the applicant's burden of proof statement is not sufficient to serve as support for adequate findings. VanSickle v. Klamath County, 78 Or LUBA 56 (2018).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. When a county has evaluated facts, evidence, and argument in the record in reaching its decision and adopted findings in support of its decision, it is not necessary for the county to incorporate specific documents as findings. Wachal v. Linn County, 78 Or LUBA 227 (2018).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. When comprehensive plan policies are not mandatory approval standards for a land use application, but the application must be evaluated for consistency with applicable plan policies, the evaluation may require some weighing and balancing of competing policy directions embodied in the applicable plan provisions. The local government's evaluation, weighing and balancing of competing interests as well as ambiguous comprehensive plan provisions are entitled to a deferential standard of review under ORS 197.829(1)(a)–(c) and Siporen v. City of Medford, 349 Or 247, 243 P3d 776 (2010). Yamhill Creek Solar, LLC v. Yamhill County, 78 Or LUBA 245 (2018).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. When the decision maker has determined that the application must be denied based on findings of noncompliance with one or more approval standards, the decision maker is not obligated to adopt findings of compliance or noncompliance with all approval standards. LUBA has no reason to remand a decision it would otherwise affirm to require the decision maker to adopt such findings. Yamhill Creek Solar, LLC v. Yamhill County, 78 Or LUBA 245 (2018).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. When a city modifies a condition of approval in lieu of citing specific evidence and findings, the decision will be remanded for the city to adopt more adequate findings based on substantial evidence regarding compliance with local code. If the city cannot determine based on substantial evidence in the record that local codes are complied with, and the city chooses to defer that issue to a subsequent proceeding, that subsequent proceeding must provide notice and opportunity for public participation. Dreyer v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 391 (2018).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. LUBA will reject a petitioner's challenges to a local government's conclusion that evidence of mere intent and capability to provide training or issue certifications is sufficient to demonstrate that the facility qualifies as a "firearms training facility" under ORS 197.770, where the petitioner does not acknowledge or challenge the local government's alternative findings that the facility had in fact provided training and issued certification sufficient to demonstrate that the facility qualifies as a "firearms training facility." H.T. Rea Farming Corp. v. Umatilla County, 71 Or LUBA 125 (2015).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Where the final decision consists of a single page stating that the application is "approved with conditions" and an attached staff report, which includes findings of compliance with approval standards and recommended conditions of approval, LUBA will conclude that the final decision adopts the staff report as incorporated findings and conditions. Knapp v. City of Jacksonville, 70 Or LUBA 259 (2014).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Remand is necessary where the decision fails to adopt any findings addressing an applicable standard that limits fill to 20 feet of the "edge of the shoulder of driveways," even if the city implicitly adopted the applicant's position that the edge of a parking lot constitutes the edge of the shoulder of a "driveway," where the site plan appears to show fill placement more than 20 feet from the edge of the parking lot. Knapp v. City of Jacksonville, 70 Or LUBA 259 (2014).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. ORS 197.610(2) provides that a local government need not provide notice of hearing to DLCD if the local government concludes that no statewide planning goals apply. However, the failure to adopt in the final decision express findings that no goals apply is not a basis for remand, where no statute requires express findings that the goals do not apply and the petitioner fails to demonstrate that any goals in fact do apply. Conte v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 326 (2012).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Remand is necessary where a traffic manual requires that "local data" should be used to generate traffic counts when a proposed large format store falls outside the size range for that type of use, but the local government does not require that traffic counts be derived from local data, or adopt reviewable findings or an interpretation that explain why that requirement can be ignored. Keep Keizer Livable v. City of Keizer, 64 Or LUBA 53 (2011).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. A permit decision consisting of a checklist with marginal notations that approval criteria are "Satisfied" or "Conditionally Satisfied" falls short of providing the findings and explanation why the evidence shows that the criteria are satisfied that is required by ORS 215.416(9). Olstedt v. Clatsop County, 62 Or LUBA 131 (2010).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. A county errs in failing to address whether a mitigation plan for a destination resort is consistent with applicable comprehensive plan policies governing wildlife protection, and instead finding that issues raised regarding compliance with those policies will be addressed by requiring the applicant to obtain approval of the plan from the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Arguments that in approving a tentative subdivision plat a city is required to adopt findings addressing ORS

195.250 to 197.260 do not provide a basis for reversal or remand, where the statutes simply authorize local governments to require a geotechnical report before issuing a building permit for properties located in landslide hazard "further review areas," and the challenged decision does not approve a building permit for property located in a "further review area." Papadopoulos v. City of Corvallis, 59 Or LUBA 384 (2009).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Because ORS 197.763(6)(e) allows an applicant the opportunity to submit final written argument, which may include proposed findings, it is consistent with the statutory scheme to allow an applicant to submit revised proposed findings or conditions of approval and arguments in favor of those revised findings or conditions of approval after the decision maker's tentative oral decision in circumstances where planning staff has objected to some proposed findings or conditions and suggested modified findings or conditions. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 190 (2009).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. ORS 197.763 does not require local governments to treat staff-generated proposed findings that are submitted to the final decision maker for review and adoption at the final meeting as a "staff report" that must be made available to the public seven days prior to the meeting. Absent local provisions to the contrary, there is no right for parties to review or rebut proposed findings prior to their adoption. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 52 Or LUBA 518 (2006).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. A local government may not avoid the obligation to adopt findings addressing whether a proposed plan amendment complies with the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) by relying on subsequent permit approvals to address traffic impacts of uses allowed by the amendment, where the criteria governing permit approvals do not require compliance with the TPR or include standards similar to TPR standards. Staus v. City of Corvallis, 48 Or LUBA 254 (2004).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Because ORS 227.175(10) specifies that a de novo hearing on a permit application is not limited to the issues raised in the local notice of appeal, a city errs in failing to address an issue raised before the local appeal body on the grounds that the issue was not raised in the notice of local appeal. Cotter v. City of Portland, 46 Or LUBA 612 (2004).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. An ordinance that allows an up-or-down vote by the county electorate on permit approval decisions is incompatible with, and therefore preempted by, ORS 215.402, which requires that approval or denial of permit applications be governed by standards and criteria set forth in the county's code and findings explaining why the proposal complies or fails to comply with those standards. Sievers v. Hood River County, 46 Or LUBA 635 (2004).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. ORS 836.623(1) requires explanatory findings addressing evidence that public safety requires a higher level of protection than the minimum set forth under the Airport Transportation Planning rule, even if the local government rejects that evidence and concludes that existing standards are sufficient to protect public safety. Graham Oil Co. v. City of North Bend, 44 Or LUBA 18 (2003).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. It is inconsistent with a county's findings obligation under ORS 215.416(9) for the county to simply declare, without explanation, that it prefers the staff count of existing dwellings in the area and is not persuaded by petitioners' evidence of fewer dwellings, where petitioners provided specific, direct evidence supporting their dwelling count, and the staff figure is conclusory and based on evidence not in the record. Matiaco v. Columbia County, 42 Or LUBA 277 (2002).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. A local government may find compliance with approval criteria by finding that the proposed means to achieve compliance is feasible, and imposing conditions of approval to ensure that the criteria are met. In the alternative, a local government may defer finding compliance with the criteria, but only by observing statutory notice and hearing requirements when making the deferred finding of compliance. Stockwell v. Benton County, 38 Or LUBA 621 (2000).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. A city's finding that it is feasible to comply with an approval standard requiring that public facilities can accommodate the proposed use is supported by substantial evidence, where the city conditions approval on the applicant making improvements to an intersection, including improvements that ODOT had imposed on a previous application for a more traffic-intensive use on the subject property. Terra v. City of Newport, 36 Or LUBA 582 (1999).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. The practice of incorporating other documents as findings runs the risk of adopting inconsistent findings. However, where a decision expressly incorporates other documents as findings, such an express incorporation is sufficient to adopt the other document as findings. Hannah v. City of Eugene, 35 Or LUBA 1 (1998).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Under ORS 215.296(1), a local government must identify farm and forest uses on land surrounding the subject parcel and examine the practices necessary to continue those uses. The absence of findings sufficient to demonstrate compliance with ORS 215.296(1) undermines the conclusion that there will be no conflicts with surrounding farm or forest uses under Goal 5. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. A local government misconstrues the meaning of "intensively developed recreational uses" under OAR 660-06-025(4)(e) when it assesses intensity as a product of the relative density of the proposed use with respect to the undeveloped portions of the parcel. Donnelly v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 624 (1997).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. For purposes of determining whether an RV camp is "intensively developed" and hence inappropriate "for a forest environment" under the Goal 4 Rule, a local government must compare the proposed use to other campgrounds on forest lands, or establish why it is appropriate to compare the proposed use with RV parks on nonresource lands. Donnelly v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 624 (1997).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. To comply with OAR 660-06-025(5)(a), a local government's findings must describe the farm or forest practices on adjacent and nearby forest lands, as well as explain why the proposed use does not significantly affect those practices. Findings that do not address all nearby lands and that simply refer to an adjacent property as a "woodlot" where a "small flock of sheep" is raised are inadequate. Donnelly v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 624 (1997).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Comments made by city council members during the course of their deliberations that are not reflected in the county's final written findings are not relevant in determining whether the county complied with ORS 227.173(2). Miller v. City of Joseph, 31 Or LUBA 472 (1996).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Absent local code provisions extending such a right, parties have no right to rebut proposed findings. Sorte v. City of Newport, 26 Or LUBA 236 (1993).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. A party's submission of proposed findings to a local decision maker does not constitute an ex parte contact warranting reversal or remand. In the absence of a local code provision to the contrary, there is no error in a local government's utilization of such a process. Caine v. Tillamook County, 25 Or LUBA 209 (1993).

25.3.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Findings. Where a local government concludes a permit applicant has submitted insufficient evidence to demonstrate it is feasible to comply with an applicable approval criterion, it may defer the required determination of compliance with that standard to a later stage in the approval process, but must assure that statutory notice and hearing requirements are observed in that later stage of approval. Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. A zone verification is not a statutory land use "permit" as defined at ORS 227.160(2)(b), and the city is not required to provide notice of the decision or opportunity for a local appeal of the decision. However, a zone verification decision is subject to LUBA review and a 21-day appeal period. ORS 227.175(11); ORS 197.830(5)(b). Leyden v. City of Eugene, 79 Or LUBA 151 (2019).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a county's notice described a proposed project as a bed and breakfast inn and campground, but the county only approved the bed and breakfast inn but not the campground, petitioners had an inadequate opportunity to object to the alleged procedural error because they could not know until the county issued its decision that the final decision would approve something different than the proposal that was noticed. Elenes v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 483 (2018).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. ORS 197.830(3) operates to potentially allow a petitioner a delayed period of time to file a LUBA appeal, but it is not a source of procedural requirements that a local government approved development that differs from the development described in the notice of hearing is not procedural error. Elenes v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 483 (2018).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Nothing in LUBA's rules requires that returned mail envelopes be included in the record. Returned mail documentation does not fall within the description of "[n]otices of * * * adoption of a final decision * * * mailed during the course of the land use proceeding" at OAR 661-010-0025(1)(d). Conte v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 1001 (2018).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a decision approving a dwelling does not approve, or mention, access to that dwelling, the fact that the petitioner's property is adjacent to the public road that will provide access to the dwelling does not mean that the county is required under ORS 197.763 or any other statute to provide notice of the decision to that petitioner, if petitioner's property lies outside the mandatory notice area. Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Under ORS 197.830(3)(a) where a land use decision was rendered "without providing a hearing," a petitioner with standing may appeal that decision to LUBA "[w]ithin 21 days of actual notice, where notice is required[.]" The actual notice of a disputed property line adjustment decision that is required by ORS 197.830(3)(a) is not provided by notice of a subsequent forest template dwelling decision that includes a reference to the property line adjustment decision. Bowerman v. Lane County, 73 Or LUBA 399 (2016).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. A city errs when it accepts an appeal of a decision to deny a permit, holds an appeal hearing, and fails to issue a written decision on the appeal. ORS 227.173(3) requires the city to issue a written decision. Smith v. City of Gearhart, 71 Or LUBA 184 (2015).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a local government has rendered a permit decision without recognizing that its decision was a permit decision and without providing notice of that decision as required by ORS 215.416(11), ORS 197.830(3)(a) applies, and the "actual notice" that the statute requires is provided only when the local government provides the written notice of the decision that is required by law or a copy of the decision itself. Keith v. Washington County, 66 Or LUBA 80 (2012).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. The deadline to appeal a post-acknowledgment plan amendment to LUBA is 21 days from the date notice is mailed to parties entitled to notice under ORS 197.615. A party entitled to notice under ORS 197.615(4) who receives that notice must appeal within 21 days of the date notice is mailed, and that deadline is not tolled simply because the local government failed to submit a copy of the decision to DLCD as required by ORS 197.615(1). Hatley v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 265 (2012).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. A petitioner receives "actual notice" of a decision for purposes of ORS 197.830(3)(a) on the date the local government mails a letter to petitioner informing petitioner of the decision, not on the date that the petitioner obtains a copy of the decision from the local government's files. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 66 Or LUBA 369 (2012).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. LUBA will deny a motion to take evidence to consider e-mails between the petitioner and the local government to establish that the local government was aware following the proceedings below that it had failed to provide timely notice of hearing and notice of the decision to DLCD, where there is no factual dispute that the local government did not provide the notice of hearing or that the local government failed to provide timely notice of the decision, only a legal dispute as to whether such notices were required and if so the consequences of failure to provide them. Conte v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 326 (2012).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. LUBA will accept a reply brief that responds to a local government's argument that the petition for review failed to assign error to the local government's failure to provide DLCD with post-adoption notice of the decision as required by ORS 197.610(1). However, to the extent the reply brief includes arguments that purport to advance a new assignment of error or new basis for reversal or remand, LUBA will not consider such arguments. Conte v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 326 (2012).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where one petitioner was an adjoining property owner and entitled to written notice of a permit decision under ORS 215.416, but was not provided the required notice, the deadline for filing an appeal of a decision approving the permit is within 21 days of "actual notice" of the decision, pursuant to ORS 197.830(3)(a). For other petitioners who were not entitled to notice of the decision, the deadline for filing the appeal is within 21 days of the date the petitioners "knew or should have known" of the decision, pursuant to ORS 197.830(3)(b). Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Because ORS 197.830(3)(a) applies in circumstances where written notice of the decision is required, but not provided, "actual notice" of the decision corresponds to (1) actual written notice of the decision or (2) a copy of the decision, or similar method of notice that is equally authoritative and informative as the written notice of the decision. Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. When a local government is processing a post-acknowledgement plan amendment pursuant to ORS 197.610 to 197.625 and a person requests in writing that he or she be provided notice of the decision, the deadline for appealing that decision to LUBA begins to run when that person is provided notice of the decision. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 62 Or LUBA 493 (2010).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where the relevant approval criteria for a variance to allow a 120-foot-tall wind turbine require evaluation of the adverse effects of the variance on the neighborhood and neighboring residences, a reasonably accurate description of the location of the proposed turbine is an integral part of the "nature of the decision" under ORS 197.830(4). Where the notice of decision describes the wind turbine as being located "near the center of [a 35-acre] property" but the decision approves the location of the wind turbine near the property line 190 feet from petitioners' residence, the notice of the decision does not reasonably describe the nature of the decision. Wright v. Marion County, 62 Or LUBA 542 (2010).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a local government considering an application for a zone change defers consideration of compliance with OAR 660-012-0060 to a later review process that does not involve a comprehensive plan amendment or zone change, the local government must ensure that the Department of Land Conservation and Development (DLCD) receives notice of the subsequent review process by imposing an overlay zone or a condition of approval on the zone change that requires such notice to DLCD. Willamette Oaks, LLC v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 60 (2009).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a party appeals a decision on a permit and that party was not entitled to notice of the permit, the appeal to LUBA must be filed within 21 days after the expiration of the period for filing a local appeal of the decision established by the local government under ORS 215.416(11). ORS 197.830(4)(b). Where the appeal is filed approximately 18 months after the expiration of the period for filing a local appeal, the appeal must be dismissed. Thalman v. Marion County, 58 Or LUBA 23 (2008).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. ORS 215.060 provides that action regarding a comprehensive plan shall have no effect, unless 10 days' advance public notice of each hearing is published in a newspaper of general circulation. Where the required 10 days' notice is given, the county's subsequent decision to adopt different parts of the proposed comprehensive plan amendments by separate ordinances does not require new notice under ORS 215.060. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where an urban renewal plan does not establish standards for implementing a city's comprehensive plan, the urban renewal plan is not a new "land use regulation" requiring notice to DLCD under ORS 197.610. Granada Land Co. v. City of Albany, 56 Or LUBA 475 (2008).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Petitioners' arguments to LUBA that a local government failed to give notice of its annexation decision within the deadlines specified by statute and by a regional government provide no basis for reversal or remand, where petitioners raised no issue below concerning the adequacy of the notice and petitioners do not allege that the claimed late notice prejudiced petitioners' substantial rights. Graser-Lindsey v. City of Oregon City, 56 Or LUBA 504 (2008).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. An ambiguous finding that is included in a 23-page findings document supporting a subdivision approval decision is not sufficient to provide actual or constructive notice of a prior county decision that approved a land use compatibility statement concerning grading related to that subdivision. Wolfgram v. Douglas County, 52 Or LUBA 536 (2006).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. A mistake in a city notice of decision regarding the number of days the notice recipient has to file an appeal with LUBA will not extend the statutory deadline for filing an appeal with LUBA. However, where a city does not clearly state that its notice of a post-acknowledgment land use regulation amendment is a "courtesy notice," rather than notice the city is required to send under ORS 197.615(2), the notice recipient is entitled to 21 days from the date the post-acknowledgment plan amendment notice is provided to file an appeal with LUBA under ORS 197.830(9). Dobson v. City of Newport, 47 Or LUBA 267 (2004).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Under ORS 197.615(2)(a), a petitioner's appearance during the local proceedings that led to city adoption of post acknowledgment land use regulation amendments is not sufficient, by itself, to obligate the city to provide individual written notice of its post acknowledgment decision to petitioner. Under ORS 197.615(2)(a), the person making an appearance during such post acknowledgment proceedings must make a written request that the city provide such notice. Dobson v. City of Newport, 47 Or LUBA 589 (2004).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Under the second sentence of ORS 197.830(1), the 21-day deadline for filing an appeal with LUBA does not begin to run until the city gives individual written notice of its post acknowledgment land use regulation amendment to persons who are entitled to receive such notice. Even if the Department of Land Conservation and Development is the only person entitled to receive written notice of the city's decision, the agency is always entitled to such notice and all other persons with standing to appeal to LUBA have 21 days from the date notice is given to the Department of Land Conservation and Development to file an appeal. Dobson v. City of Newport, 47 Or LUBA 589 (2004).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. If a city wishes to send courtesy notices that post-date the notices that the city is required to send under ORS 197.615, it must make it clear that the later courtesy notice is not notice that the city is required to send under ORS 197.615. If the city fails to do so, the persons who receive the later courtesy notice are entitled to treat that notice as though it is notice that is required under ORS 197.615, and therefore notice that starts the 21-day period for appealing to LUBA on the date the notice was mailed. Dobson v. City of Newport, 47 Or LUBA 589 (2004).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Contrary to dicta in Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 38 Or LUBA 375 (2000), "actual notice" of a decision is provided under ORS 197.830(3)(a) only when the local government provides the written notice of decision required by law. Other circumstances that would lead a reasonable person to know that the local government has made a decision, or that would be sufficient to impute such knowledge, may trigger the 21-day appeal period in ORS 197.830(3)(b) for persons who are not entitled to notice of the decision, but such circumstances are not sufficient to trigger the 21-day deadline in ORS 197.830(3)(a) for persons who are entitled to actual notice of the decision. Frymark v. Tillamook County, 45 Or LUBA 685 (2003).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. That petitioners signed a petition to the local governing body expressing concern regarding the height of a dwelling is not sufficient to demonstrate knowledge of a building permit to construct that dwelling or the interpretation concerning the proper method of measuring building height contained in that building permit, for purposes of beginning the 21-day deadline for appealing the building permit to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3). Tirumali v. City of Portland, 40 Or LUBA 565 (2001).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. A 1995 decision denying a request for a variance to build a house that exceeds zoning height limits by 6.5 feet does not constitute a decision approving construction of a house that is 6.5 feet shorter. An appeal challenging a subsequent building permit that approves construction of a house that is reduced in height is not a collateral attack on the 1995 variance decision and will not be dismissed as untimely filed. Tirumali v. City of Portland, 40 Or LUBA 565 (2001).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. The mailing of notice of a conditional use permit decision pursuant to OAR 661-010-0010(3)(b) necessarily requires that notice be sent to the address that was provided by a person entitled to notice. Norway Development v. Clackamas County, 40 Or LUBA 276 (2001).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Although a local government cannot be required to provide notice of a land use decision to the correct address when the correct address has not been provided, when the local government has clearly been informed of the correct address, the notice must be sent to the correct address. Norway Development v. Clackamas County, 40 Or LUBA 276 (2001).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Any procedural error by a local government in failing to provide written notice of a proposed annexation decision to persons other than petitioner resulted in no prejudice to petitioner's substantial rights, and therefore provides no basis for reversal or remand of the annexation decision, where petitioner learned of the proposal and made a written appearance opposing the proposal. Cape v. City of Beaverton, 40 Or LUBA 78 (2001).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Reference to "a portion of Sunset Highway" in a notice of proposed annexation decision is likely insufficient to provide reasonable notice of the decision under applicable code and statutory requirements. However, where a petitioner nevertheless was able to determine the nature and scope of the proposal and submit written opposition to the proposal, the petitioner may not successfully assert possible injury to other persons' substantial rights as a basis for reversal or remand. Cape v. City of Beaverton, 40 Or LUBA 78 (2001).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a local government fails to recognize that it is rendering a permit decision without providing a hearing or the opportunity for a local appeal as required by ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10), ORS 197.830(4) provides the applicable deadline for filing an appeal with LUBA. Neighbors for Sensible Dev. v. City of Sweet Home, 39 Or LUBA 766 (2001).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. The "actual notice" standard of ORS 197.830(4)(a) is identical to the "actual notice" standard of ORS 197.830(3)(a). A petitioner receives "actual notice" of a decision when the petitioner is: (1) provided a copy of the decision; (2) provided written notice of the decision; or (3) circumstances exist that are sufficient to inform the petitioner of both the existence and substance of the decision. Neighbors for Sensible Dev. v. City of Sweet Home, 39 Or LUBA 766 (2001).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. The brief mention in a staff report that an application was "approved in principle" is not sufficient to provide a petitioner with "actual notice" of a final, appealable land use decision pursuant to ORS 197.830(4)(a). Neighbors for Sensible Dev. v. City of Sweet Home, 39 Or LUBA 766 (2001).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. The "actual notice" requirement of ORS 197.830(5) does not necessarily require receipt of a limited land use decision. "Actual notice" is achieved when a person is informed of both the existence and substance of the decision. Robinson v. City of Silverton, 38 Or LUBA 785 (2000).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. ORS 197.830(3)(a) (1997) applies, and a notice of intent to appeal must be filed with LUBA within 21 days after a petitioner receives "actual notice" of a decision, where (1) the city mistakenly fails to realize it should be proceeding under ORS 227.175(10)(a) (1997); (2) the city therefore fails to provide notice to persons who are entitled to receive notice of the decision under ORS 227.175(10)(a) (1997); and (3) no local appeal is available that must be exhausted before appealing to LUBA. Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 38 Or LUBA 375 (2000).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Under ORS 197.830(3)(a) (1997), a petitioner receives "actual notice" of the decision when the petitioner is provided (1) a copy of the decision; (2) written notice of the decision; or (3) information that is equivalent to written notice or a copy of the decision. Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 38 Or LUBA 375 (2000).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where the events a petitioner observed were not sufficient, in and of themselves, to provide "actual notice" of a land use decision more than 21 days before petitioner filed his notice of intent to appeal, the notice of intent to appeal is timely filed under the "actual notice" standard of ORS 197.830(3)(a). That those events may have been sufficient to obligate petitioner to make inquires with the city if the deadline for filing the notice of intent to appeal were governed by the "knew or should have known of the decision" standard in ORS 197.830(3)(b) is irrelevant. Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 38 Or LUBA 375 (2000).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. ORS 197.615(1) and OAR 660-018-0040 require that a local government send a copy of an ordinance amending local land use regulations and the findings supporting the ordinance, "accompanied by appropriate forms provided by" DLCD. Failure to submit the appropriate form with the decision and findings tolls the time to file a notice of intent to appeal with LUBA until 21 days after the proper notice is given. Craig Realty Group v. City of Woodburn, 37 Or LUBA 1041 (2000).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Under ORS 197.830(8), the time for appealing an amendment to an acknowledged plan or land use regulation is measured from the time the decision was mailed in accordance with ORS 197.615 and OAR 660-018-0040. Where a party files a notice of intent to appeal within 21 days of the date the decision was mailed in accordance with the statute and rule, the notice of intent to appeal is timely filed. Craig Realty Group v. City of Woodburn, 37 Or LUBA 1041 (2000).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. ORS 197.763(2)(b) and 215.416(11) require counties to provide notice and an opportunity for local appeal to "recognized" neighborhood associations; the county cannot apply its code in a manner that limits notice and appeal rights extended by statute. McKy v. Josephine County, 37 Or LUBA 554 (2000).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where the county's legislation is ambiguous with respect to whether the county "recognizes" a neighborhood association for purposes of statutory notice and local appeal requirements, LUBA will remand to the county for interpretation in the first instance. McKy v. Josephine County, 37 Or LUBA 554 (2000).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where the county administratively approves development under ORS 215.416(11), but fails to provide an adjacent landowner with either the notice or the opportunity for local appeal required by statute, the time to file an appeal of that approval to LUBA is tolled until the landowner receives actual notice, pursuant to ORS 197.830(3). Bowlin v. Grant County, 35 Or LUBA 776 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Whether petitioner had "actual notice" of the decision under ORS 197.830(3)(a) depends on whether petitioner has received written notice of the decision. That petitioner knew or should have known of the challenged decision more than 21 days before filing the notice of intent to appeal is a dispositive consideration under ORS 197.830(3)(b), but not under ORS 197.830(3)(a). Bowlin v. Grant County, 35 Or LUBA 776 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. An evidentiary hearing is not warranted to establish that the county orally advised petitioner that the county had approved the challenged application more than 21 days before petitioner filed the notice of intent to appeal, when the relevant issue under ORS 197.830(3)(a) is when the petitioner received actual written notice of the decision. Bowlin v. Grant County, 35 Or LUBA 776 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. A local government's notice of a post-acknowledgment decision is not sufficient to start the 21-day appeal period in ORS 197.830(8) where the post-acknowledgment decision is not yet final. Schaffer v. City of Turner, 35 Or LUBA 744 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Even if no one requests notice of a post-acknowledgment plan amendment decision under ORS 197.615(2), the local government is required to mail notice of the decision to DLCD, thus there is always a mailing requirement under ORS 197.615 from which the period for appealing post-acknowledgment plan amendments is measured. City of Hillsboro v. Metro, 34 Or LUBA 775 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. The appeal period provided in the second sentence of ORS 197.830(8) applies to any person with standing to appeal, and not only to the person or persons who are entitled to notice under ORS 197.615. City of Hillsboro v. Metro, 34 Or LUBA 775 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Whether a person is "adversely affected" within the meaning of ORS 215.416(11)(a) is a fact-specific inquiry that depends upon the nature of the development and its externalities, the proximity of the person's property to the development, and any factors regarding the person's property or activities thereon that render the property more or less susceptible to impacts from the development. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 634 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Merely because a person owns property from which he can see or hear a proposed development does not necessarily render that person adversely affected by the decision. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 634 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Petitioners demonstrate they are adversely affected by a sewage treatment facility, where there is no attempt to rebut petitioners' allegations that they are adversely affected because they are within "sight and smell" of the facility and petitioners also allege "direct, specific, tangible and negative impacts" from the proposed facility. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 634 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a county makes a permit decision without a hearing and fails to send the notice of decision required by ORS 215.416(11)(a) to persons "adversely affected" by the decision, such adversely affected persons have standing to appeal to LUBA within 21 days of actual notice of the decision. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 634 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where notice of a permit decision rendered without a hearing is not provided to persons "adversely affected" by the decision, such adversely affected persons' right to a local appeal is denied and their substantial rights are prejudiced. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 634 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where the procedure followed by the county to approve a permit only provided the applicant a right to participate or appeal, the county may not rely on ORS 215.416(11)(a) to contend petitioner lacks standing to appeal because petitioner is not "adversely affected." Hugo v. Columbia County, 34 Or LUBA 577 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. A local government fails to comply with the notice of decision requirement of ORS 215.416(11)(a) when it fails to send notice to a tribal government's registered agent, where the tribal government has no tax address or other address for receipt of land use notices and the county has for over a decade provided notice to the registered agent. Confederated Tribes v. Jefferson County, 34 Or LUBA 565 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Providing a copy of the decision constitutes the notice of the decision and opportunity for appeal required by ORS 215.416(11)(a) if it unambiguously states that a particular decision has been made and provides sufficient information concerning the opportunity for a local appeal. Confederated Tribes v. Jefferson County, 34 Or LUBA 565 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Whether notice of decision is "required" under ORS 197.830(3) is determined by the procedure the local government followed, not by the procedure the local government should have followed. Fechtig v. City of Albany, 34 Or LUBA 561 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Petitioners' appeal was timely filed pursuant to the second sentence of ORS 197.830(8) where the city failed to provide notice of the decision to petitioners pursuant to ORS 197.615(2). Petitioners were entitled to notice under ORS 197.615(2) notwithstanding that they requested notice of a limited land use decision rather than a land use decision. Casey Jones Well Drilling, Inc. v. City of Lowell, 34 Or LUBA 263 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. The statutory appeal period under ORS 197.830(8), which provides that the 21-day deadline to appeal to LUBA does not begin until required notice of the decision is given, applies notwithstanding the failure of a local government to correctly process a comprehensive plan or land use regulation amendment under ORS 197.610 to 197.625, and, accordingly, to provide the notice of decision as required by ORS 197.615. ODOT v. City of Oregon City, 34 Or LUBA 57 (1998).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. When amendments to a county's comprehensive plan are processed according to post-acknowledgment procedures, the second sentence of ORS 197.830(8) governs, and appeals may be filed within 21 days of the date the decision is mailed, rather than the date the decision becomes final. DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 728 (1997).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. A plan and land use regulation amendment processed pursuant to post-acknowledgment procedures may be appealed within 21 days of the date the decision is mailed, as provided in ORS 197.830(8), notwithstanding a local government's failure to comply with all required post-acknowledgment procedures. DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 728 (1997).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. A notice of intent to appeal to LUBA must be filed within 21 days of the date the decision becomes final, and misleading or outdated information regarding appeals to LUBA provided in a local government's notice of final decision does not affect that deadline. Elinski v. City of Lincoln City, 33 Or LUBA 670 (1997).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Petitioners are not entitled to notice of a permit decision and an opportunity for a local appeal as a party adversely affected or aggrieved under ORS 215.416(11)(a), where petitioners only allege they will be adversely affected by solid waste disposal, but the challenged decision approves a waste treatment facility and does not establish, control or limit where the treated waste will be disposed. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 33 Or LUBA 412 (1997).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. A county's delay in providing petitioner with notice of decision does not toll the 21-day appeal period set forth in ORS 197.830(8), and under Wicks-Snodgrass v. City of Reedsport, 148 Or App 217, 939 P2d 625 (1997), LUBA has no jurisdiction over an appeal filed more than 21 days after the county's decision became final. Michael-Mark v. Yamhill County, 33 Or LUBA 409 (1997).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Under ORS 197.610 to ORS 197.625, only state notice requirements must be followed to avoid tolling, under ORS 197.830(3), the 21-day appeal period provided in ORS 197.830(8). Petersen v. Columbia County, 33 Or LUBA 253 (1997).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a secretarial processing sheet does not list names of persons who testified at a hearing, a notation on the sheet that "Person testifying/submitting comments" was sent notice of decision is insufficient to demonstrate that petitioner actually was sent the required notice of decision. Shaffer v. City of Salem, 33 Or LUBA 57 (1997).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. A party cannot claim an exception to the appearance requirement of ORS 197.830(2)(b) when that party is not entitled to notice of a decision, even where the local decision maker has sent to that party notice of related previous decisions. DLCD v. Polk County, 33 Or LUBA 30 (1997).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. A decision becomes final for purposes of an appeal to LUBA when the prescribed written notice of decision is mailed or personally delivered to the party seeking to appeal. J.C Reeves Corp. v. Washington County, 32 Or LUBA 263 (1996).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. If statutory and local code requirements are satisfied, the failure of certain affected persons to receive notice of a zoning ordinance amendment does not make notice of the amendment legally inadequate. Waite v. City of La Grande, 31 Or LUBA 77 (1996).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. If a city makes a land use decision without providing a required hearing, ORS 197.830(3) extends the LUBA appeal period. However, ORS 197.830(5) limits the extension to three years unless petitioners establish that the required notice was not provided. Caraher v. City of Klamath Falls, 30 Or LUBA 204 (1995).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. If petitioners do not establish they were entitled to notice of a decision, the fact that they did not receive such notice is not evidence that the notice required of the city was not provided. Caraher v. City of Klamath Falls, 30 Or LUBA 204 (1995).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. The existence of procedural error resulting from defects in a notice of final decision fails to establish prejudice to substantial rights in the absence of a causal relationship between the defects and petitioner's failure to participate in the process. Thomas v. Wasco County, 30 Or LUBA 142 (1995).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. When the city does not deliver notice of a comprehensive plan map amendment and facilities plan amendment to DLCD, as required by ORS 197.615(1), the amendments will not be deemed acknowledged under ORS 197.625(1) by the passage of time. DLCD v. City of St. Helens, 29 Or LUBA 485 (1995).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. While ORS 215.416(11) allows a county to make land use permit decisions without a hearing, it protects an individual's right to participate in a local hearing by requiring that notice of the decision be given to affected persons and that the opportunity for a de novo local appeal be provided. Tarjoto v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 408 (1995).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. If a local government fails to provide the notice of a permit decision made without a hearing required by ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10), the time for filing a local appeal does not begin to run until an appellant is provided the notice of decision to which he or she is entitled. Because a local appeal is available to such an individual, under ORS 197.825(2)(a) that local appeal must be exhausted before appealing to LUBA. Tarjoto v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 408 (1995).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. When a party is entitled to notice of a post-acknowledgment plan or land use regulation amendment under ORS 197.615(2)(a)(A) and (B), ORS 197.830(8) provides that the local government decision becomes final as to that party on the date the notice of the decision is mailed, rather than on the date the notice of the decision is received. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Columbia County, 29 Or LUBA 597 (1995).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where ORS 227.173(3) requires a city to give written notice of its final decision to petitioner, the 21-day period provided by ORS 197.830(8) for filing a notice of intent to appeal to LUBA cannot expire before petitioner receives the notice to which she is entitled. Where such required written notice is not given, a notice of intent to appeal filed after a city planner orally informs petitioner that the city considers certain city council minutes to be its final decision is timely filed. Noble v. City of Fairview, 27 Or LUBA 649 (1994).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. If a local government does not provide notice to DLCD of a post-acknowledgment comprehensive plan or land use regulation amendment, as required by ORS 197.610 and 197.615, it improperly construes substantive provisions of applicable law and, under ORS 197.835(7)(a)(D), the challenged post-acknowledgment amendment decision must be remanded. Oregon City Leasing, Inc. v. Columbia County, 26 Or LUBA 203 (1993).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a local hearing is provided and a party is entitled to written notice of the decision under ORS 215.416(10), ORS 197.830(8) rather than ORS 197.830(3) establishes the deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal. Under ORS 197.830(8), a notice of intent to appeal must be filed within 21 days after a decision becomes final. DLCD v. Crook County, 25 Or LUBA 826 (1993).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Under ORS 197.830(8) and 215.416(10), a decision becomes final for purposes of appealing to LUBA "only after the required written notice of the decision is mailed or personally delivered to the party seeking to appeal." League of Women Voters v. Coos County, 82 Or App 673, 729 P2d 588 (1986). DLCD v. Crook County, 25 Or LUBA 826 (1993).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. If a notice of intent to appeal a post-acknowledgment zone change is filed more than 21 days after petitioner was given the notice of decision it is entitled to under ORS 197.615, the appeal must be dismissed. City of Grants Pass v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 722 (1993).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. The purpose of the notice of decision required by ORS 227.173(3) is to inform the parties that a city has made a final, appealable decision on a permit application. A notice that identifies the application to which it relates, states the city council made a decision denying the application on a particular date and provides that the city council's decision may be appealed to LUBA, satisfies ORS 227.173(3). Horizon Construction, Inc. v. City of Newberg, 25 Or LUBA 656 (1993).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where the challenged decision approves a "permit," and the petitioner was entitled to written notice of the decision under ORS 227.173(3), the petitioner has 21 days from the date the notice was mailed to him to appeal the challenged decision to LUBA. A Storage Place v. City of Tualatin, 24 Or LUBA 637 (1993).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. In rendering a decision on a permit, a city is required to hold at least one public hearing or provide notice of the decision and an opportunity for an appeal. A city's failure to do so requires that the decision be remanded. Hood River Sand v. City of Mosier, 24 Or LUBA 381 (1993).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. A local government's failure to provide a person with a required individual written notice of hearing is not sufficient, by itself, to entitle that person to be given individual written notice of the decision or to toll the 21-day deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal with LUBA until individual written notice of the decision is provided. Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Under ORS 197.830(3), where a local government renders a decision without providing a hearing, an appeal to LUBA must be filed within 21 days of actual notice of the decision, where notice of the decision is required, or within 21 days of the date a person knew or should have known of the decision, where no notice of the decision is required. Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a person participated in the legislative proceedings that led to the challenged decision and also participated in a related land use proceeding where the challenged decision was discussed, that person knew or should have known of the challenged decision as early as the date the discussion of the challenged decision occurred. Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. The 21-day period for filing a notice of intent to appeal established by ORS 197.830(8) begins to run only after the party seeking to appeal is given notice of the local government decision to which he is entitled by statute. Sparrows v. Clackamas County, 24 Or LUBA 318 (1992).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. ORS 197.830(8) tolls the running of the time for filing a notice of intent to appeal a post-acknowledgment comprehensive plan or land use regulation amendment for a petitioner who did not receive notice to which that petitioner is entitled under ORS 197.615. It does not toll the time for the filing of all notices of intent to appeal post-acknowledgment amendments simply because DLCD, or any other person entitled to notice under ORS 197.615, was not given such notice. Sparrows v. Clackamas County, 24 Or LUBA 318 (1992).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. By statute, adjoining property owners within specified distances of property for which discretionary development approval is requested are entitled to notice of the local proceedings and an opportunity for a public hearing. Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. That a local government is required to provide particular individuals with written notice of a land use decision has no bearing on the requirement that available local administrative remedies be exhausted before appealing to LUBA. Pautler v. City of Lake Oswego, 23 Or LUBA 339 (1992).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a city approves a permit without providing the public hearing or notice of decision and opportunity for a local appeal required by ORS 227.175(3) and (10), a notice of intent to appeal at LUBA is timely filed if it is filed within 21 days after petitioners received actual notice of the permit decision. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 22 Or LUBA 390 (1991).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Individual written notice of decision is not required for a county to make a legislative land use decision. Crone v. Clackamas County, 21 Or LUBA 102 (1991).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a local government provides neither notice of the decision nor an opportunity to appeal a decision rendered without a public hearing, to anyone other than the applicant, it does not comply with ORS 227.175(10). Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 21 Or LUBA 515 (1991).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a local government fails to provide the statutorily required written notice of decision to a party entitled to receive such notice, the 21-day deadline for filing an appeal with LUBA does not begin to run until the required written notice of decision is provided. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 21 Or LUBA 515 (1991).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a local government fails to provided the statutorily required notice of hearing and hearing prior to making a decision on a permit, a person does not thereby become entitled to written notice of the decision simply because that person might have appeared and become a party entitled to written notice of the decision had the statutorily required notice of hearing and hearing been provided. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 21 Or LUBA 515 (1991).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where petitioners were entitled under ORS 215.416(11) to written notice of a local permit decision made without a hearing, and such written notice was not given, the time for filing petitioners' local appeal did not begin to run and, therefore, their subsequent appeal to the planning commission was timely filed. Komning v. Grant County, 20 Or LUBA 481 (1990).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. ORS 197.615(2)(a) requires that a local government give notice of decisions amending its acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations to persons who participate during the local proceedings and request such notice in writing. Club Wholesale v. City of Salem, 19 Or LUBA 576 (1990).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a local government has no rules establishing specific procedures or forms for persons participating in post-acknowledgment plan and land use regulation amendment proceedings to utilize in making a written request for notice under ORS 197.615(2)(a)(B), and has no rules establishing to whom requests for such notice must be directed, a request for a copy of the city's final decision directed to the city attorney is sufficient to satisfy ORS 197.615(2)(a)(B). Club Wholesale v. City of Salem, 19 Or LUBA 576 (1990).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a local government provides a party with a copy of the decision amending its comprehensive plan and land use regulations, but fails to advise the party of the date the challenged decision became final or of the requirements for appealing the decision to LUBA, the notice requirements of ORS 197.615(2)(b)(B) and (D), applicable to post-acknowledgment plan and land use regulation amendments, are not satisfied. Club Wholesale v. City of Salem, 19 Or LUBA 576 (1990).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where a county finds applicable approval standards are or can be met and grants first stage PUD approval, but includes a condition that (1) final grading and drainage plans be submitted later, and (2) approval of such plans follow a procedure that does not provide notice or an opportunity for further public involvement, the proper way to challenge the county's decision to proceed in such a manner is to appeal the first stage PUD approval decision. Parties may not fail to challenge that decision and appeal the subsequent approval of the final grading and drainage plans, arguing that such approvals are permits subject to the notice and hearing requirements of ORS 215.416, and that their failure to "appear" or file an appeal of such approvals within 21 days is excused because of the county's failure to observe such notice and hearing requirements. J.P. Finley & Son v. Washington County, 19 Or LUBA 263 (1990).

25.3.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Notice of Decision. Where the petitioner was never provided the written notice to which it was entitled under ORS 227.173(3), the 21-day period for the petitioner to appeal to LUBA did not expire. Harvard Medical Park, Ltd. v. City of Roseburg, 19 Or LUBA 555 (1990).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where state statute requires that a local government provide either a public hearing before ruling on an application for a statutory permit or an opportunity for an appeal that includes a de novo public hearing, although the local government may require a notice of appeal that sets forth with reasonable particularity the issues that the appealing party will raise at the hearing, the local government may not, consistent with the statute, (1) make that notice requirement a jurisdictional bar to obtaining the hearing, (2) limit the issues specified to five types of issues, or (3) approve or reject requests for hearings based on a qualitative assessment of how well the appellant has explained the issues specified. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 79 Or LUBA 96 (2019).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A city's rejection of petitioner's as-applied challenge of a city's appeal fee during the city's proceeding on intervenor's land use application, and legal challenges to the city's future assessment of actual attorney's fees is not excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction by the "fiscal" exception. However, to the extent petitioner challenges the amount of the actual attorney fees, that challenge is outside the Board's scope of review because that fee dispute arose after the city issued the fee invoice and after the city made a decision on petitioner's underlying appeal, and is therefore a "fiscal" decision. The fact that the local record includes the invoice for the actual attorney fees petitioner was charged for his local appeal does not convert the amount of the fees in that invoice into an issue that is reviewable by LUBA. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 78 Or LUBA 463 (2018).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. In an as-applied challenge, a petitioner cannot challenge the manner in which the city adopted its appeal fee structure. Instead, LUBA's inquiry regarding petitioner's as-applied challenge to the appeal fee charged by the city, is whether petitioner has produced a prima facie case that the fee that the city charged petitioner pursuant to the city's previously adopted fee schedule is "more than the average cost of such appeals or the actual cost of the appeal." ORS 227.180(1)(c). Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 78 Or LUBA 463 (2018).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A county is not required to evaluate a petitioner's standing to file a local appeal based on the presumption that the petitioner was entitled to notice of the decision, where there is no dispute that the petitioner did not live within the notice area and was not entitled to notice of the decision at the time the decision was made. That the petitioner now lives within the notice area does not establish entitlement under state or local law to notice of the decision or to file a local appeal. Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. The exhaustion/waiver principle articulated in Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500 (2003), requires the petitioner to identify issues in the local appeal to the local appeal body, regardless of whether the appeal body conducts a hearing or whether the local appeal proceeding is on the record or de novo. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 540 (2016).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. ORS 215.422(1) authorizes a county to impose a local appeal fee to defray the costs of "acting upon an appeal," but that authorization is not limited to local appeal processes where the county conducts a full local appeal, and does not exclude local appeal processes where the county initially makes a determination whether to hear the full appeal and declines to do so. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 540 (2016).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a county's local appeal regulations provide an opportunity to request a de novo evidentiary hearing, in order to preserve the ability to challenge the reasonableness of the local appeal fee before LUBA, the petitioner must at a minimum request a de novo evidentiary hearing before the final decision maker at which the petitioner can submit evidence to establish a prima facie case that the fee is unreasonable. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 540 (2016).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A petitioner's challenge to a city's local appeal fee, on the grounds that the record does not include evidence establishing that the fee is consistent with ORS 227.180(1)(c), is not a basis for reversal or remand, where the city's final decision maker lacks authority under the city code to develop an evidentiary record regarding the appeal fee. Treadmill Joint Venture v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 213 (2012).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Even if county code language could be interpreted to bar non-applicant parties who participated in the evidentiary phase of a local permit proceeding from participating in an on-the-record appeal filed by the applicant to challenge permit conditions of approval, such a local appeal procedure would violate ORS 197.763 and 215.422. Families for a Quarry Free Neighborhood v. Lane County, 64 Or LUBA 297 (2011).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. In order to allow effective review of an as-applied appeal fee challenge in circumstances where, due to local regulations, the delegated local final decision maker does not have authority to accept new evidence or to consider appeal fee challenges, the local final decision maker must allow the fee challenger to submit argument and evidence into the record so that LUBA can perform its review function. Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 63 Or LUBA 75 (2011).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. In Ramsey v. City of Portland, 29 Or LUBA 139 (1995), LUBA held the city's land use appeal fees were "an integral part of the zoning code provisions governing the processing and review of land use applications." LUBA has relied on that holding in a number of subsequent appeals to reject jurisdictional challenges to appeals of local government decisions that adopt or amend application or appeal fee schedules. Montgomery v. City of Dunes City, 61 Or LUBA 123 (2010).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. LUBA has relied on Ramsey v. City of Portland, 29 Or LUBA 139 (1995) in a number of decisions to reject jurisdictional challenges to appeals that assert "as-applied" challenges to previously adopted land use permit and appeal fee schedules. Montgomery v. City of Dunes City, 61 Or LUBA 123 (2010).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A city decision to charge a subdivision applicant the actual cost of processing his subdivision application is not a land use decision that is subject to review by LUBA, where the city's final decision demanding payment of the actual costs was not made as part of its decision on the merits of the subdivision application and instead postdates that decision on the merits by over one year. The city's later decision to demand payment of the actual cost of processing the subdivision application is a "fiscal" decision, and under the reasoning in Housing Council v. City of Lake Oswego, 48 Or App 525, 617 P2d 655 (1980), rev dismissed, 291 Or 878, 635 P2d 647 (1981), is not a land use decision subject to LUBA review. Montgomery v. City of Dunes City, 61 Or LUBA 123 (2010).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. An approval standard requiring a finding that a proposed boardwalk in a natural resource area will not "seriously interfere with the preservation of fish and wildlife habitat areas and habitat" appears to involve the "discretionary approval of a proposed development of land," and is therefore a "permit" as defined at ORS 215.402(4). If so, ORS 215.416(11)(b) limits to $250 the local appeal fee the county can charge for the initial hearing on the appeal. Jensen Properties v. Washington County, 61 Or LUBA 155 (2010).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. ORS 215.422(1)(c) allows counties to set fees to defray the costs of local appeals. Determining the "average cost of such appeals" for purposes of ORS 215.422(1)(c) requires some kind of arithmetic calculation of the average of a set of numbers. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Crook County, 60 Or LUBA 232 (2009).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. To reliably determine the "average" costs of an appeal under ORS 215.422(1)(c), the set of numbers used to generate the required average must be broadly representative or reflective of the range of appeal costs that the county is likely to experience. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Crook County, 60 Or LUBA 232 (2009).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. ORS 215.422(1)(c) does not require a county to calculate appeal costs based on a contemporaneous accounting of actual staff time and costs in past appeals, or provide that appeal costs derived solely from estimates of costs cannot constitute substantial evidence for purposes of establishing an appeal fee under the statute. Any evaluation of appeal costs will involve some estimation, even if the county bases that evaluation as much as possible on records of actual costs incurred in prior appeals. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Crook County, 60 Or LUBA 232 (2009).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. The principal regulatory concern of ORS 215.422(1)(c) is to place limitations on the maximum amounts a county can charge for processing a local appeal. That concern is not implicated by adoption of multiple appeal fees that apply to different types of appeals, as long as the fees so adopted are consistent with the statute's limitations within each different type of appeal. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Crook County, 60 Or LUBA 232 (2009).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A county may define different categories of appeals that tend to have similar levels of appeal costs, and within a specific category determine a set of costs for processing that type of appeal. Based on that set of costs, the county can calculate the arithmetic average of the set, and determine the average cost of appeals in that category. Having determined the relevant average, the county can then establish an appeal fee applicable only to that category of appeals that does not exceed the average cost of appeals in that category. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Crook County, 60 Or LUBA 232 (2009).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Under ORS 215.422(c), if a county chooses not to require a county-produced transcript and fee, it may instead allow appellants to submit a transcript of those "portions" of the media recording of one or more hearings that are deemed "relevant." 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Crook County, 60 Or LUBA 232 (2009).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. As-applied challenges to previously adopted fee schedules are permissible, overruling Maxwell v. Lane County, 39 Or LUBA 556, rev'd and rem'd on other grounds, 178 Or App 210, 35 P3d 1128 (2001), and Cummings v. Tillamook County, 30 Or LUBA 17 (1995). Mazorol v. City of Bend, 59 Or LUBA 260 (2009).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A petitioner establishes a prima facie case that a city appeal fee schedule may violate ORS 227.180(1)(c) when the city has a two-tiered review system where the city council can either review a lower decision on the merits or decline review and the city refunds 75 percent of the appeal when the city council declines review except when an appellant appeals to LUBA, in which case the city does not refund any of the appeal fee. Once a petitioner has established a prima facie case, the burden shifts to the city to demonstrate that the appeal fee schedule does not violate ORS 227.180(1)(c). Mazorol v. City of Bend, 59 Or LUBA 260 (2009).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A county erred by dismissing a local appeal of a building permit where (1) the county's land use regulations provided a right of local appeal to challenge decisions that required the exercise of significant discretion, (2) the county was required to determine if the dwelling that was the subject of the building permit was lawfully established, and (3) the history of the development of the property required the county to exercise considerable discretion to determine if the dwelling was lawfully established. Kuhn v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 483 (2009).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a party challenges a resolution adopting fees charged by the county for permits and appeals, the burden is on the county to include evidence in the record that demonstrates that the fees were set consistent with the statute's mandate that the fees that are subject to ORS 215.416(1) and ORS 215.422(1)(c) will not exceed average or actual costs of processing permits or appeals. Sommer v. Josephine County, 58 Or LUBA 505 (2009).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. ORS 215.416(11)(a)(E)(ii) prohibits local governments from limiting issues that can be raised in an appeal of a permit decision made without a prior hearing to those issues specified in the local notice of appeal. A local government cannot avoid that prohibition by allowing parties to raise the issue at the appeal hearing, and then summarily dismissing the local appeal for failure to specify the basis for the appeal in the local notice of appeal. Woodard v. Yamhill County, 56 Or LUBA 141 (2008).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a county provides two rounds of appeals to the governing body, both rounds of appeals constitute as single proceeding, and the fact that the county did not require that petitioner pay a second appeal fee for the second appeal does not preclude petitioner from challenging imposition of the first appeal fee. Young v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 704 (2008).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. While acknowledged comprehensive plans and regulations are not reviewable for compliance with statewide planning goals and rules, quasi-judicial land use decisions that apply local regulations that were adopted in an earlier, unappealed legislative decision are not generally immune from an as-applied challenge for compliance with applicable statutes. Young v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 704 (2008).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A county is not required to produce evidence during the hearing on a local appeal that the appeal fee charged to the petitioner is "more than the average cost of such appeals or the actual cost of the appeal" under ORS 215.422(1), where the petitioner merely asserts that the appeal fee does not comply with the statute but there is no evidence in the record supporting that assertion. Young v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 704 (2008).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A planning director decision not to refer a revocation request to the planning commission for a hearing is not a "permit" decision as that term is defined at ORS 227.160(2), because it does not constitute the "discretionary approval of a proposed development of land." Emami v. City of Lake Oswego, 52 Or LUBA 18 (2006).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A proceeding to revoke a permit is more analogous to an enforcement action than to a permit proceeding under ORS 227.175, and thus is not subject to the statutory procedural and other requirements applicable to permit proceedings. Emami v. City of Lake Oswego, 52 Or LUBA 18 (2006).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Because ORS 215.422(1)(c) explicitly limits the appeal fee that counties can charge for certain land use appeals, evidence that total annual revenues produced by over 200 county fees fall short of total planning department annual expenses is not sufficient to demonstrate that the fees collected for three types of appeals comply with ORS 215.422(1)(c). A more particularized evidentiary effort to focus on the costs and expenses associated with the three types of appeals subject to ORS 215.422(1)(c) is required. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 52 Or LUBA 140 (2006).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Absent any contravening evidence or need for more detailed analysis, staff testimony that proposed application fee increases accurately reflect increased costs and are less than the maximum amount that cities may charge under ORS 227.175(1) is substantial evidence supporting a finding of compliance with the statute. Doty v. City of Bandon, 49 Or LUBA 411 (2005).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Limiting issues addressed in a decision following a de novo hearing under ORS 214.416 to issues specifically raised in the local notice of appeal is inconsistent with ORS 215.416(11)(a)(E), which provides that the "testimony, argument and evidence shall not be limited to issues raised in a notice of appeal[.]" Sisters Forest Planning Comm. v. Deschutes County, 48 Or LUBA 78 (2004).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a local code appeal requirement merely requires that the local appellant include a "statement of interest of the person seeking review," the local government may not dismiss the local appeal because the local appellant does not demonstrate in the notice of local appeal that the appellant is "adversely affected or aggrieved." If a local appellant is going to be required to demonstrate he or she is adversely affected in the local notice of appeal, and is not going to be allowed an opportunity to make that demonstration at the statutorily required de novo hearing, the local code must make that requirement clear. Crowley v. City of Bandon, 48 Or LUBA 545 (2005).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. By statute, an opportunity for a de novo appeal must be provided where a permit decision is made without first providing a hearing. ORS 227.175(10)(a)(E)(ii) provides that at the required de novo hearing "[t]he presentation of testimony, arguments and evidence shall not be limited to issues raised in a notice of appeal[.]" Under these statutes it is highly unlikely that the legislature could have intended that a city may dismiss a local appeal, without first providing a de novo hearing, simply because the appellant's local notice of appeal did not sufficiently identify the issues to be asserted on appeal. Crowley v. City of Bandon, 48 Or LUBA 545 (2005).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Once an administrative permit approval decision is appealed locally, ORS 227.175(10)(a)(A) and (D) require that a city provide a de novo appeal and a decision on that appeal. A city fails to provide the statutorily required de novo appeal when it relies on a committee rule that is not part of the zoning ordinance and was not adopted by the city council to decide that a 2-2 vote of the committee results in denial of the appeal. Hayden Island, Ltd. v. City of Portland, 46 Or LUBA 439 (2004).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Under ORS 227.180(1)(c), the question of whether local appeal fees are "reasonable" is not separable from the question of whether the appeal fees are not more than the average or actual cost of such appeals, absent evidence that the local government spends an unreasonable amount of time or incurs unreasonable expenses in processing appeals. Friends of Linn County, 45 Or LUBA 408 (2003).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. That the legislature has capped local fees for providing a hearing under ORS 215.416(11)(b) and 227.175(10)(b) at $250 does not demonstrate that a $500 fee to appeal a planning commission decision to the governing body is unreasonable, for purposes of ORS 227.180(1)(c). Friends of Linn County, 45 Or LUBA 408 (2003).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Land use decisions appealed to LUBA pursuant to ORS 197.830(3) or (4) are not subject to the ORS 197.825(2)(a) exhaustion of remedies requirement absent circumstances where the local government voluntarily grants a local appeal, while decisions appealed pursuant to ORS 197.830(9) are subject to the exhaustion of remedies requirement. Comrie v. City of Pendleton, 45 Or LUBA 758 (2003).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a local government conducts a hearing but fails to provide notice of the decision to a petitioner who appeared at the hearing, that failure of process does not obviate the requirement that the petitioner exhaust all administrative remedies below before appealing to LUBA. In such circumstances, the local government must accept a properly filed local appeal from the petitioner and cannot reject that local appeal on the basis of an imperfection that is caused by the local government's own procedural error. Comrie v. City of Pendleton, 45 Or LUBA 758 (2003).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a county order establishes a fee of $700 to, among other things, request a hearing on a permit application or file a local appeal of a permit decision rendered without a hearing, LUBA will remand the order where the $700 fee appears to violate the $250 maximum fee established by ORS 215.416(11)(b), and the county offers no defense of the order. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 43 Or LUBA 270 (2002).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a timely request is filed to locally appeal a decision made without a hearing under ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10), the local government must conduct a de novo hearing and render a final decision approving or denying the permit application. Where the local government conducts a de novo hearing and renders a final decision, the decision made without a hearing is not and cannot become a final decision, and cannot be appealed to LUBA under ORS 197.830(4) or any other provision of law. Dead Indian Memorial Rd. Neigh. v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 597 (2002).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a timely request is filed to locally appeal a decision made without a hearing under ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10) and a de novo hearing is held, but the request is withdrawn and the local appeal dismissed prior to reaching a final decision on the local appeal, the underlying decision made without a hearing becomes the county's final land use decision on the permit application. Dead Indian Memorial Rd. Neigh. v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 597 (2002).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where the de novo hearing provided under ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10) is dismissed without reaching a decision on the permit application, the underlying decision made without a hearing becomes the final land use decision on the permit application, as of the date of the order dismissing the local appeal. The underlying decision does not become final retroactively back to the date the local appeal period expired. Dead Indian Memorial Rd. Neigh. v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 597 (2002).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A local code providing that the scope of review for an appeal of a planning commission decision to the city council is a "Record Hearing," and defining a "Record Hearing" as a hearing limited to review of the existing record or evidence previously submitted, does not limit the legal issues or arguments that may be presented on appeal; only the evidence that may be considered. Haug v. City of Newberg, 42 Or LUBA 411 (2002).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A local appellate body may, on its own, raise issues that are not presented in the notice of local appeal, where the local code does not specifically limit the scope of review on appeal to the issues identified in the notice of local appeal. Haug v. City of Newberg, 42 Or LUBA 411 (2002).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where new evidence is improperly submitted as part of an applicant's final legal arguments, but that evidence has no bearing on the relevant approval criteria, the error in accepting the new evidence results in no prejudice to other parties' substantial rights and provides no basis for reversal or remand. Farrell v. Jackson County, 41 Or LUBA 1 (2001).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. That the city council declined to hear petitioner's local appeal of a planning commission site design approval does not provide a basis to reverse the city's decision or award attorney fees to petitioner under ORS 197.835(10), even if the city council's decision was motivated by a desire to avoid violating the ORS 227.178(1) requirement that the city issue a final decision on an application for a limited land use decision within 120 days. ORS 197.835(10) applies where the local government denies an application in a bad faith attempt to avoid the requirements of ORS 227.178. It does not apply to a decision approving an application. Elliott v. City of Redmond, 40 Or LUBA 242 (2001).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A local government may not separate an otherwise unitary land use decision into separate components, remand some components for further local proceedings and designate some components as immediately appealable to LUBA. Besseling v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 177 (2000).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A county's code cannot define which participants in a land use proceeding are "aggrieved" by a land use decision, within the meaning of ORS 215.416, more restrictively than the statute. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 156 (2000).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A county errs in denying the opportunity for local appeal of a permit approval on the grounds that the petitioner is not "aggrieved" by the county's decision within the meaning of ORS 215.416(11), where petitioner is an organization interested in the correct application of the county's land use laws and it appeared before the county to oppose the county's approval. That petitioner is a recently formed organization and appears for the first time before the county is not a basis to conclude that petitioner is not aggrieved by the county's decision. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 156 (2000).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. ORS 197.763(2)(b) and 215.416(11) require counties to provide notice and an opportunity for local appeal to "recognized" neighborhood associations; the county cannot apply its code in a manner that limits notice and appeal rights extended by statute. McKy v. Josephine County, 37 Or LUBA 554 (2000).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where the county's legislation is ambiguous with respect to whether the county "recognizes" a neighborhood association for purposes of statutory notice and local appeal requirements, LUBA will remand to the county for interpretation in the first instance. McKy v. Josephine County, 37 Or LUBA 554 (2000).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a local government refuses to consider petitioner's letters and refuses petitioner's requests to present testimony during the local proceedings, the appearance requirement of ORS 197.830(2) is obviated. Hugo v. Columbia County, 34 Or LUBA 577 (1998).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Providing a copy of the decision constitutes the notice of the decision and opportunity for appeal required by ORS 215.416(11)(a) if it unambiguously states that a particular decision has been made and provides sufficient information concerning the opportunity for a local appeal. Confederated Tribes v. Jefferson County, 34 Or LUBA 565 (1998).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Neither ORS 215.416(11)(a) nor 197.763 provides any requirements regarding what constitutes "filing" a local appeal. Nothing in those statutes precludes a local government from requiring that a local appeal be physically delivered to the county within the appeal period. Confederated Tribes v. Jefferson County, 34 Or LUBA 565 (1998).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. There is no basis for applying the doctrine of unique circumstances to local land use decisions. If local regulations make failure to timely file an appeal a jurisdictional defect, LUBA has no authority to develop an equitable remedy that overcomes such a defect. Mountain Gate Homeowners v. Washington County, 34 Or LUBA 169 (1998).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Although a local government may narrow its own scope of review in local appeals, it cannot narrow LUBA's scope of review over issues raised at any time below. Laurance v. Douglas County, 33 Or LUBA 292 (1997).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a party receives notice of a decision and subsequent appeal, and the record contains no evidence that the party attempted to appear at the hearing, that party cannot claim that it was denied the opportunity to participate in the appeal hearing when it had no notice of the withdrawal of the appeal. DLCD v. Polk County, 33 Or LUBA 30 (1997).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a local government is not required to conduct a hearing, ORS 197.830(3) does not apply, nor does that statute operate to allow a party's lack of notice of a decision to toll the time limit for appeal. DLCD v. Polk County, 33 Or LUBA 30 (1997).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A pro forma review by the county board of commissioners that must result in approval of a planning commission decision does not satisfy the requirement stated in ORS 197.050 and 197.060 that exceptions to the Statewide Planning Goals be adopted by the county governing body. Young v. Douglas County, 31 Or LUBA 545 (1996).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A petitioner is not required to go through the process of appealing from the county planning commission to the county board of commissioners to obtain a review the board of commissioners is already required by statute to give. Young v. Douglas County, 31 Or LUBA 545 (1996).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. The local appeal from an administrative decision provided by ORS 227.175(10) must be exhausted prior to an appeal to LUBA, which otherwise lacks jurisdiction under ORS 197.825(2)(a). Caraher v. City of Klamath Falls, 30 Or LUBA 204 (1995).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. When petitioners fail to satisfy the county's jurisdictional appeal provision requiring local appellants to state the basis of their standing, the county is not at liberty to take notice of petitioners' standing or to excuse their failure satisfy the requirement as "harmless error." Tipton v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 474 (1995).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. When a county zoning ordinance provision states that a local appeal will be dismissed if the requirements of the provision are not satisfied, the provision is jurisdictional. An appellant's failure to satisfy a jurisdictional requirement results in dismissal of the appeal. Tipton v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 474 (1995).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. While ORS 215.416(11) allows a county to make land use permit decisions without a hearing, it protects an individual's right to participate in a local hearing by requiring that notice of the decision be given to affected persons and that the opportunity for a de novo local appeal be provided. Tarjoto v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 408 (1995).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a local appeal is available, the purpose of the exhaustion requirement of ORS 197.825(2)(a) is to assure that the local government decision is reviewed by the highest level local decision making body the local code makes available, before an appeal to LUBA is pursued. Tarjoto v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 408 (1995).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. If a local government fails to provide the notice of a permit decision made without a hearing required by ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10), the time for filing a local appeal does not begin to run until an appellant is provided the notice of decision to which he or she is entitled. Because a local appeal is available to such an individual, under ORS 197.825(2)(a) that local appeal must be exhausted before appealing to LUBA. Tarjoto v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 408 (1995).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. ORS 227.180(1) prescribes procedures only for appeals from a hearings officer's decision to a planning commission or city council, not for appeals from a planning commission decision to a city council. Jackman v. City of Tillamook, 29 Or LUBA 391 (1995).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Petitioner's contention that the fee charged for a local appeal violates ORS 227.180(1)(c) must fail where there is no evidence in the record establishing that the local appeal fee is unreasonable or that it exceeds the average or actual cost of such an appeal, and petitioner does not move for an evidentiary hearing to submit such evidence. Ramsey v. City of Portland, 29 Or LUBA 139 (1995).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where petitioner appeals a decision by a local governing body not to accept petitioner's appeal of a planning commission decision, LUBA's scope of review is limited to whether the governing body correctly decided not to accept petitioner's local appeal. LUBA will not review the merits of the planning commission decision. Cummings v. Tillamook County, 29 Or LUBA 550 (1995).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a county code allows a "permit" decision to be made without a hearing, but provides for a local appeal only by the permit applicant, ORS 215.416(11) nevertheless requires the county to provide an opportunity to obtain a hearing through an appeal to persons who would have had a right to notice if a hearing had been scheduled and who are adversely affected or aggrieved by the decision. In these circumstances, a county does not err by allowing such persons to pursue a local appeal. McKenzie v. Multnomah County, 27 Or LUBA 523 (1994).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where the local code provides for an initial decision on a permit application without a hearing, subject to obtaining a hearing through a de novo local appeal, regardless of a code requirement that the bases for appeal be specified in the local notice of appeal, the local appellant is entitled to raise any relevant issue during the local appeal. McKenzie v. Multnomah County, 27 Or LUBA 523 (1994).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where ORS 215.416(3) and (11) require a county to provide an opportunity for a local appeal of a design review decision made by the planning director without a hearing, the county cannot interpret a code provision requiring that "final design review approval" has been granted to be satisfied when a local appeal of the planning director's design review approval decision is pending. McKenzie v. Multnomah County, 27 Or LUBA 523 (1994).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. ORS 197.195, which establishes minimum procedural requirements for making limited land use decisions, does not require that local governments provide either a public hearing or a local appeal. ORS 227.175(3) and (10) do not apply to limited land use decisions, because they are not "permits," as defined in ORS 227.160(2). Forest Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 215 (1994).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A statement that failure to raise an issue before the planning commission precludes appeal to the local governing body does not satisfy the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(e) that a local government hearing notice include a statement that failure to raise an issue precludes appeal to LUBA on that issue. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 312 (1993).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Even where a governing body's review of the decision of a lower level decision maker is limited to the evidentiary record below, the governing body must either make its own decision and findings regarding compliance with applicable approval standards, adopt by reference the decision and findings of the lower level decision maker, or in some other way take action such that a decision regarding compliance with applicable approval standards becomes final and subject to appeal to LUBA as part of the governing body's decision. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 312 (1993).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Local government provisions narrowing the scope of review during local appeals do not similarly narrow LUBA's scope of review under ORS 197.763(1) and 197.835(2). Davenport v. City of Tigard, 25 Or LUBA 67 (1993).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where neither the local code nor or any statute creates a "duty" on the part of a local government to advise local appellants of local appeal requirements stated in the local code itself, that the county provided petitioners with a detailed information sheet concerning local appeals which did not indicate the existence of the county's "jurisdictional" requirement that a local appeal document be signed, provides no basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision. Breivogel v. Washington County, 24 Or LUBA 63 (1992).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Pursuant to 215.406(1) and 215.422(2), a county governing body may designate a hearings officer to conduct hearings on permit applications and may provide that the hearings officer's decision is the final county decision. Wickwire v. Clackamas County, 21 Or LUBA 278 (1991).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. ORS 215.416 and 215.422 do not prohibit a county from establishing a fee requirement for appeals of decisions on permit applications made by the planning director without a hearing. DLCD v. Jackson County, 21 Or LUBA 93 (1991).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a local government provides neither notice of the decision nor an opportunity to appeal a decision rendered without a public hearing, to anyone other than the applicant, it does not comply with ORS 227.175(10). Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 21 Or LUBA 515 (1991).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Local government requirements that an appeal be filed and that a fee be paid before a second evidentiary hearing is held do not violate the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(f)(B) that two or more evidentiary hearings be "allowed," where only 10 days notice of the first hearing is provided. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Benton County, 20 Or LUBA 7 (1990).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Where a local government elects to give only 10 days notice of the initial evidentiary hearing, subject to a right to a second evidentiary hearing on appeal, ORS 197.763(3)(f)(B) requires that a participant be allowed to raise new issues during the second evidentiary hearing. A local government could not, consistent with ORS 197.763(1), (3)(f)(B), and (5)(b) cut off that right prematurely by requiring that all issues to be raised in the second hearing be identified in the notice of appeal. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Benton County, 20 Or LUBA 7 (1990).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. A city's failure to adopt ordinances specifying the city council's scope of review in appeals of planning commission decisions and providing procedures for hearings on such appeals, as required by ORS 227.170, is a procedural error. Murphey v. City of Ashland, 19 Or LUBA 182 (1990).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. If a county neither (1) holds a public hearing before making a decision on an application for a "permit," as defined in ORS 215.402(4), nor (2) provides an opportunity to appeal that decision at the county level, it fails to comply with the requirements of ORS 215.416(3), (5) and (11). Flowers v. Klamath County, 18 Or LUBA 647 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Failure to meet the preservation requirement of ORS 197.763(1) and ORS 197.835(3) and the exhaustion requirement of ORS 197.825(2)(a) and Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 79 P3d 382 (2003), rev den, 336 Or 615 (2004), removes issues from the scope of LUBA's review; it does not deprive LUBA of jurisdiction to review final land use decisions. Nehmzow v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 571 (2020).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a petitioner cites over one hundred pages of the record in its preservation of error statement, but the respondents do not argue that the issues were not raised during the local proceeding and the petitioner provides more focused record citations in their reply brief, and where it is evident from the challenged decision itself that the issues were raised during the local proceeding, such failure to adequately specify in the petition for review where the issues were preserved is a technical violation that does not prejudice the respondents' substantial rights. Nehmzow v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 571 (2020).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Under ORS 197.763(1) and ORS 197.835(3), a member of a decision-making body is not a participant in a local proceeding and, while planning staff may be participants in a land use proceeding, any issue that is raised in a staff response to decision-maker questions that is provided to the decision-making body after the record has closed may not be raised for the first time at LUBA. Marek v. City of Corvallis, 81 Or LUBA 91 (2020).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). An argument below that a proposed building was similar to an industrial building and an inappropriate size, and that the area would need to be rezoned, does not fairly raise any issue regarding whether the proposed use meets the definition of "residential facility" in the local code for purposes of ORS 197.763(1) and ORS 197.835(3). Eagle-Eye v. City of Veneta, 81 Or LUBA 1 (2020).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where the staff reports that were available to the public accepted the applicant's premise that a proposed building is a "residential facility," as defined in the local code, and where the petitioners do not explain why they could not have raised the issue of whether the proposed building is a "residential facility" prior to the close of the initial evidentiary hearing, LUBA will refuse to allow that issue to be raised on appeal under ORS 197.835(4)(a), even assuming that the definitions section of the local code was an applicable approval criterion that the local government should have, but did not, identify in its notices. Eagle-Eye v. City of Veneta, 81 Or LUBA 1 (2020).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where an applicant generally argued below that the local government could apply only clear and objective standards, and where the applicant more specifically argued that the local government could not apply certain local safety standards regulating roads and connectivity because the term "safety" is subjective and undefined in the local code, argued that the local government could not apply certain ODOT standards referenced in the local safety standards because they are undefined and not clear and objective, and opposed a proposed ODOT condition of approval as not clear and objective, LUBA will conclude that an argument that the local government erred by refusing to analyze whether the applicable criteria are "clear and objective" under ORS 197.307(4) was sufficiently raised for purposes of ORS 197.835(3), ORS 197.195(3)(c)(B), and ORS 197.763(1). Buffalo-Bend Associates, LLC v. Clackamas County, 81 Or LUBA 66 (2020).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A petitioner fails to satisfy OAR 661-010-0030(4)(d) or to establish that the issues raised in its six assignments of error were raised as required by ORS 197.763(1) and ORS 197.835(3) where the petitioner broadly cites its submittals into the record during the proceedings before the local government. Such a broad citation is not a technical violation where it interferes with the substantial rights of the parties by improperly shifting the burden to the respondents to review over one hundred pages of the record to determine whether the issues raised in six assignments of error in an overlength, 68-page petition for review have been preserved. H2D2 Properties, LLC v. Deschutes County, 80 Or LUBA 528 (2019).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A county errs in accepting with the applicant's final written argument, for purposes of determining whether at least three dwellings existed on surrounding lots or parcels on January 1, 1993, and therefore whether the subject property qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750, an email from a contractor who worked on one of the surrounding dwellings , even where the email is intended to provide context for evidence submitted by opponents, and thereby rebut opponents' arguments concerning that evidence. Under ORS 197.763(6)(e), new evidence may not be submitted with an applicant's final written argument and, under ORS 197.763(9), such an email is evidence rather than argument. In addition, opponents are not precluded from raising a county's admission of new evidence with the applicant's final written argument as procedural error on appeal to LUBA merely because they failed to object during the local proceedings, where the opportunity to object was provided after the county had already considered evidence, deliberated, and made its oral decision, and where the record was closed and no further testimony was allowed. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A county errs in accepting with the applicant's final written argument, for purposes of determining whether at least three dwellings existed on surrounding lots or parcels on January 1, 1993, and therefore whether the subject property qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750, an email from a contractor who worked on one of the surrounding dwellings , even where the email is intended to provide context for evidence submitted by opponents, and thereby rebut opponents' arguments concerning that evidence. Under ORS 197.763(6)(e), new evidence may not be submitted with an applicant's final written argument and, under ORS 197.763(9), such an email is evidence rather than argument. In addition, opponents are not precluded from raising a county's admission of new evidence with the applicant's final written argument as procedural error on appeal to LUBA merely because they failed to object during the local proceedings, where the opportunity to object was provided after the county had already considered evidence, deliberated, and made its oral decision, and where the record was closed and no further testimony was allowed. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). While the "raise it or waive it" requirement of ORS 197.763(1) and 197.835(3) does not apply to legislative proceedings, where a party has an opportunity to object to a procedural error during a legislative proceeding, the party must do so in order to seek remand based on that error. McCaffree v. Coos County, 79 Or LUBA 512 (2019).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where petitioner had the opportunity to object to the use of the 2017 USGS report and requested more time to respond but did not use that opportunity to raise the issue of which report's data to use. The right to raise the issue under ORS 197.763 was waived. Gould v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 118 (2018).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a county's notice described a proposed project as a bed and breakfast inn and campground, but the county only approved the bed and breakfast inn but not the campground, petitioners had an inadequate opportunity to object to the alleged procedural error because they could not know until the county issued its decision that the final decision would approve something different than the proposal that was noticed. Elenes v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 483 (2018).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.830(3) operates to potentially allow a petitioner a delayed period of time to file a LUBA appeal, but it is not a source of procedural requirements that a local government approved development that differs from the development described in the notice of hearing is not procedural error. Elenes v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 483 (2018).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Even if a motion to take evidence outside the record under OAR 661-010-0045(1) were otherwise proper, LUBA will deny such motion where petitioners have failed to demonstrate that the issue the proffered evidence goes to was raised with the specificity required by ORS 197.763(1), and even if LUBA viewed petitioners' arguments as one particular "argument" toward the general issue, that issue does not appear to have raised even in a most general way. Because the proffered evidence goes to an issue that is not within the Board's scope of review, petitioners have not established a basis under OAR 661-010-0045(1) to grant the motion to consider the evidence for any purpose, and such motion will be denied. Renken v. City of Oregon City, 78 Or LUBA 1070 (2018).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statute – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). An argument that the issue raised in an assignment of error is waived is not a basis to dismiss the appeal as moot. If LUBA agrees with that argument, the appropriate disposition would be to deny the assignment of error and affirm the local government's decision, not to dismiss the appeal as moot. McNichols v. City of Canby, 78 Or LUBA 1090 (2018).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Under ORS 197.763(6)(c), if a party requests in writing an opportunity to respond to new evidence submitted during an open record period, the hearings authority must allow that opportunity. But nothing in the statute requires the hearings authority to expand this second open record period to include submittal of any evidence, arguments and testimony a person desires to submit. Martucci v. Jackson County, 77 Or LUBA 252 (2018).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Principles of preservation that would govern a quasi-judicial decision, e.g., the "raise it or waive it" requirements of ORS 197.763(1), do not apply to an appeal of a legislative decision. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 76 Or LUBA 15 (2017).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A petitioner does not waive her right to assign error to a hearings officer's conclusion that a structure qualifies as a nonconforming use, and the hearings officer's approval of an alteration of that nonconforming use, where the applicant did not apply for verification of a nonconforming use or an alteration of a nonconforming use and the notices of hearing did not identify the county's nonconforming use regulations as applicable criteria for the decision. Kaimanu v. Washington County, 70 Or LUBA 217 (2014).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where an "Article" of the community development code includes 373 single spaced pages of land use regulations made up of 44 separate sections devoted to a variety of topics, a notice of hearing that identifies that article of the community development code as an applicable standard is not sufficient, under ORS 197.763(3), to provide notice of an eight-page section of that article devoted to nonconforming uses. Kaimanu v. Washington County, 70 Or LUBA 217 (2014).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). In circumstances where the local government makes a decision without holding a hearing, ORS 197.835(3) does not apply to limit the issues that LUBA may consider in an appeal of that decision. Devin Oil Co. Inc. v. Morrow County, 70 Or LUBA 420 (2014).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where issues regarding compliance with approval criteria were raised below, petitioners may challenge the adequacy of findings that are ultimately adopted regarding those approval criteria. League of Women Voters v. City of Corvallis, 63 Or LUBA 432 (2011).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). The "raise it or waive it" rule does not apply outside of the context of a quasi-judicial proceeding. ORS 197.763(1). Santiam Water Control District v. City of Stayton, 62 Or LUBA 149 (2010).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). When the state administrative rules applicable to a comprehensive plan amendment are amended during the local proceedings, raising the issue of compliance with the old administrative rules is not sufficient under ORS 197.763(1) and ORS 197.835(3) to raise the issue of whether the application complies with the new provisions of the amended rules. Walker v. Josephine County, 60 Or LUBA 186 (2009).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Although ORS 197.835(4) provides an exception to the "raise it or waive it" rule, it only allows a petitioner to raise new issues based upon applicable criteria that were omitted from the notice. A local provision that tentative approval will expire if not completed and the ORS 227.178(5) limit on the number of days an applicant may extend the deadline for a local government to make a final decision on an application are not "applicable criteria." Therefore, a petitioner may not raise issues concerning the statutes and local provision for the first time at LUBA, even though they were not listed in the notice. Oh v. City of Gold Beach, 60 Or LUBA 356 (2010).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Even though an issue is raised below, if only one point of view on that issue is raised and the local government is not asked to consider alternative points of view, a petitioner may not argue an alternative point of view at LUBA. Boucot v. City of Corvallis, 56 Or LUBA 662 (2008).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). To comply with ORS 197.763(3)(b), a notice of hearing must identify the applicable approval criteria by code number or similar means of identification sufficient to direct the recipient to the actual code or plan provisions that the city deems to be approval criteria. Reference to a code provision that itself merely requires "conformance with the comprehensive plan" is insufficient to provide effective notice of any comprehensive plan provisions. Kingsley v. City of Sutherlin, 49 Or LUBA 242 (2005).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). The city's failure to list certain plan policies as approval criteria in the notice of hearing does not allow petitioner to raise new issues regarding those plan policies under ORS 197.835(4)(a), where two staff reports and a planning commission decision address the plan policies as approval criteria and petitioner is given ample constructive notice that the city believed the policies to be approval criteria. Kingsley v. City of Sutherlin, 49 Or LUBA 242 (2005).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). An issue regarding compliance with an approval criterion is waived if not raised below, unless the petitioner demonstrates that the local government failed to list the criterion in the notice of hearing under ORS 197.835(4). However, LUBA will not address an issue under ORS 197.835(4) where the petitioner fails to explain why the notice of hearing is defective. Staus v. City of Corvallis, 48 Or LUBA 254 (2004).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Language in a subarea plan that allows submittal of master plan application with fewer than all of the owners of affected property and requires a particular planning focus for property not controlled by the applicant is a mandatory approval criterion that must be listed in the hearing notice because the city could deny or require modification of the application based on that language. Lowery v. City of Keizer, 48 Or LUBA 568 (2005).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where language in master plan that is a mandatory approval criterion was not listed in the hearing notice, no criterion listed in the notice reasonably would have led petitioners to that language, and petitioners otherwise could not have anticipated the issue because the city's final decision was the first notice petitioners had that the master plan language applied, petitioners did not waive the issue by failing to raise it at the local level. Lowery v. City of Keizer, 48 Or LUBA 568 (2005).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). The ORS 197.763(6)(b) right to request that a hearing be continued must be exercised prior to the close of the initial evidentiary hearing. Where the initial evidentiary hearing was held before the planning commission, a party has no right under ORS 197.763(6)(b) to request a continuance in a subsequent hearing before the city council, notwithstanding that the planning commission was evenly divided and could not reach a majority vote to approve or to deny an application for subdivision approval. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 47 Or LUBA 331 (2004).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Any right that a party may have to rebut new evidence under Fasano or ORS 197.763(6)(b) requires that the party contemporaneously assert that right of rebuttal at the time the new evidence is submitted, so that the local government can rule on the merits of the request and allow an appropriate opportunity for rebuttal where such an opportunity is warranted. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 47 Or LUBA 331 (2004).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). In order to preserve the right before LUBA to challenge the adequacy of findings addressing an approval criterion and the supporting evidence, a petitioner must demonstrate that the proposal's compliance with that criterion was raised below accompanied by statements or evidence sufficient to afford other parties an adequate opportunity to respond. Bruce Packing Company v. City of Silverton, 45 Or LUBA 334 (2003).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Absent a local code requirement to the contrary, ORS 197.763 does not require that every hearing notice given by a local government must provide an overview of local appeal procedures and how those procedures may affect an appeal at LUBA, as long as the notices inform participants of their obligation to raise issues regarding compliance with applicable criteria at the earliest opportunity. Scheyer v. City of Hood River, 43 Or LUBA 112 (2002).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a hearings officer concludes that a local code provision setting out seven potential methods of creating a parcel applies in determining whether a parcel was lawfully created, the hearings officer is obligated to consider each of the arguably applicable methods, notwithstanding that the applicant below did not specifically raise issues regarding which of the arguably applicable methods applies. DeBoer v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 219 (2002).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). The raise it or waive it provisions of ORS 197.763(1) apply only where the local government provides a hearing at which issues may be raised. Where the county did not provide a hearing where petitioners could raise issues, petitioners may raise issues before LUBA in the first instance. Dead Indian Memorial Rd. Neigh. v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 511 (2003).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). An ambiguous assertion that a driveway providing access to a proposed flag lot does not qualify as a street is insufficient to raise an issue that the proposed minor partition creates a street and therefore must be approved as a major partition and comply with the criteria applicable to major partitions. Webb v. City of Bandon, 39 Or LUBA 584 (2001).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). The predicate to application of the "raise it or waive it" principle in ORS 197.835(3) is a local proceeding pursuant to ORS 197.195 or 197.763. That principle does not apply to proceedings to vacate county roads under ORS 368.346. Mekkers v. Yamhill County, 39 Or LUBA 367 (2001).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a city determines that revisions to easements within a previously approved subdivision require a replat, verbal testimony and a letter submitted by the applicants' attorney noting that the applicants will comply with the city's determination but consider a replat unnecessary under the statutes cited by the city are sufficient to preserve the issue for appeal to LUBA, notwithstanding that the applicants did not expressly submit the disputed replat application under protest. Haber v. City of Gates, 39 Or LUBA 137 (2000).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Even though petitioners may have obtained a continuance or caused the record to be left open had they made either request, a local government is not required to provide a continuance or leave the record open unless it is requested. Lange-Luttig v. City of Beaverton, 39 Or LUBA 80 (2000).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Failure to list applicable criteria in a pre-hearing notice in violation of ORS 197.763(3)(a) allows petitioner to raise issues at LUBA relating to the omitted criteria without having raised those issues before the local government. However, failure to list applicable criteria does not, in itself, provide a basis for reversal or remand. Ashley Manor Care Centers v. City of Grants Pass, 38 Or LUBA 308 (2000).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). After the petition for review is filed, petitioner must respond to allegations that issues that are raised in the petition for review were not raised during the local proceedings. If petitioner fails to do so, those issues are waived. However, petitioner is not initially obligated to specify in the petition for review where the issues that are raised in the petition for review were raised below. Robinson v. City of Silverton, 37 Or LUBA 521 (2000).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). An issue that could have, but was not, raised in the initial petition for review before LUBA in an appeal that was voluntarily remanded, may not be included in an assignment of error in a later appeal of a decision following remand. Riggs v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 432 (1999).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Listing the "Comprehensive Plan goals, policies and land use map" as applicable criteria on the notice of hearing without listing specific applicable plan provisions is insufficient to satisfy ORS 197.763(3)(b), and such a general listing does not support a conclusion that petitioner could have raised issues regarding specific plan provisions below. Herman v. City of Lincoln City, 36 Or LUBA 521 (1999).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763(3)(b) only requires that the notice of hearing list the applicable criteria from the local government's ordinance and comprehensive plan. The failure of the notice to list applicable statutory provisions is not a violation of ORS 197.763(3), and does not excuse petitioner from the obligation to raise the issue of compliance with those statutes during the local proceedings. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 35 Or LUBA 676 (1999).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where the record shows petitioner knew or should have known of the existence and potential applicability of criteria in the county ordinance and comprehensive plan that were omitted from the notice of hearing, LUBA will conclude pursuant to ORS 197.835(4)(a) that petitioner could have raised the applicability of those criteria during the local proceedings below, and thus petitioner cannot raise new issues before LUBA regarding those criteria. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 35 Or LUBA 676 (1999).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A petitioner would not likely have noticed an arguably relevant plan provision where the plan provision was located in a different section of the plan from the plan provisions identified as relevant by the local government in their notice of hearing. Petitioner is therefore not barred by ORS 197.835(4)(a) from raising an issue concerning compliance with the plan provision. Visher v. City of Cannon Beach, 35 Or LUBA 74 (1998).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.835(3) and 197.763 require that petitioners at LUBA have raised the issues they wish to raise at LUBA during the local proceeding. However, this statutory restriction does not apply to individual arguments regarding those issues. DLCD v. Tillamook County, 34 Or LUBA 586 (1998).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where an issue is adequately raised below, ORS 197.763 does not limit particular arguments related to that issue on appeal. DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 728 (1997).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Under ORS 197.763(1) and ORS 197.835(3), all petitioner must do is raise the issue before the final evidentiary hearing record is closed to enable petitioner to raise an issue before LUBA. Central Bethany Dev. Co. v. Washington County, 33 Or LUBA 463 (1997).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A petitioner failing to respond to a local government's request to make his general objections more detailed fails to afford the city an opportunity to respond, may not make those objections more detailed for the first time at LUBA and waives the right to appeal based on those objections. Arnett v. City of Lake Oswego, 33 Or LUBA 384 (1997).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where the city's application form requests a written narrative, but petitioner does not identify an applicable legal standard or criterion that requires its submission, petitioner may not raise new issues as a result of the city's failure to include such a criterion on the notice of hearings. Design Home Construction v. City of Silverton, 32 Or LUBA 452 (1997).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a local government limits discussion of an ordinance not identified in the hearing notice as an applicable criterion, and then adopts findings based on that ordinance, petitioners had no opportunity to address or rebut the ordinance, and their failure to do so does not waive their right to appeal its application. Nicholson v. Clatsop County, 32 Or LUBA 399 (1997).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). The provisions of ORS 197.763(6)(c) only apply to the "initial evidentiary hearing," and therefore do not require the city council to reopen the record for rebuttal upon the request of a participant in a subsequent evidentiary hearing. Wicks-Snodgrass v. City of Reedsport, 32 Or LUBA 292 (1997).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where petitioners contend a decision fails to address an applicable approval criterion that was not identified in the local government's hearing notice as required by ORS 197.763(3)(b), and respondents contend petitioners cannot raise this issue because they failed to raise it below, LUBA must decide whether the provision in question establishes an approval criterion for the subject application, in which case petitioners may raise the new issue before LUBA pursuant to ORS 197.835(4)(b). Wicks-Snodgrass v. City of Reedsport, 32 Or LUBA 292 (1997).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). The 1995 amendment to ORS 197.763(1) adds a requirement that issues not only be raised, but also be accompanied by statements or evidence sufficient to afford the local decision maker an opportunity to respond. What is "sufficient" still depends upon whether the governing body, planning commission, hearings body or hearings officer, and the parties are afforded an adequate opportunity to respond to each issue. Lett v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 98 (1996).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where defining the relevant area is an essential, stated component of the stability standard for nonfarm dwellings, petitioner must object below to the area selected by the county in order to avoid waiving the objection on appeal. Lett v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 98 (1996).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Under ORS 197.835(4)(b), petitioners may raise an issue for the first time on appeal only if it relates to an applicable criterion that was omitted from the notice provided by the local government in violation of ORS 197.763(3)(b). Friends of Indian Ford v. Deschutes County, 31 Or LUBA 248 (1996).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where petitioners contend a local government's notice of hearing on a conditional use permit application did not comply with the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(a) to explain the nature of the application and the uses that could be authorized, but do not contend their substantial rights were prejudiced by the alleged error, petitioners provide no basis for reversal or remand. ORS 197.835(7)(a)(B). Jackman v. City of Tillamook, 29 Or LUBA 391 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A local government's failure to comply with the requirements of ORS 197.763(3)(h) and (i) that its notice of hearing state the staff report and applicant's materials are available for inspection and that copies will be provided at reasonable cost is a procedural error, and does not provide a basis for reversal or remand unless petitioners explain how their substantial rights were prejudiced by the error. Jackman v. City of Tillamook, 29 Or LUBA 391 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where petitioners do not move for an evidentiary hearing, and the only undisputed fact alleged by petitioners is that a petitioner was required to pay 14 dollars for the local government's 14-page staff report, petitioners fail to establish the local government's failure to provide a copy of the staff report at a reasonable cost, as required by ORS 197.763(3)(i), violated petitioners' substantial rights. Jackman v. City of Tillamook, 29 Or LUBA 391 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). If the local government did not hold a land use hearing, subject to the requirements of ORS 197.763, before making the challenged decision, petitioners cannot waive the right to raise issues for the first time on appeal to LUBA, because they were not provided the forum in which to raise such issues at the local level. Leathers v. Washington County, 29 Or LUBA 343 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763 governs how a quasi-judicial land use hearing is conducted, not whether one is required. ORS 197.763 does not confer a right to a quasi-judicial land use hearing where such a right does not otherwise exist. Save Amazon Coalition v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 335 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a local government's "initial evidentiary hearing" on a quasi-judicial land use application was held before the planning commission, the local government does not violate ORS 197.763(6) by denying petitioner's request to leave open the record of a subsequent evidentiary hearing before the governing body. ONRC v. City of Oregon City, 29 Or LUBA 90 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Listing an entire zoning ordinance as the applicable criteria in a local government's notice of its initial evidentiary hearing on a quasi-judicial land use application does not satisfy ORS 197.763(3)(b). Neither does listing entire chapters of the zoning ordinance, where such chapters contain criteria for several different types of applications. ONRC v. City of Oregon City, 29 Or LUBA 90 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where petitioner submits detailed argument to the local government regarding the applicability of a particular code provision and whether that code provision is satisfied by the subject application, the local government's failure to list that code provision as an applicable criterion in the notice of its initial evidentiary hearing, as required by ORS 197.763(3)(b), did not prejudice petitioner's substantial rights. ONRC v. City of Oregon City, 29 Or LUBA 90 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where new information in support of an application is received by a local government on the last day the record is left open, pursuant to a request that the record be left open under ORS 197.763(6), an opposing party is entitled to a continuance under ORS 197.763(4)(b), if it requests a continuance. A request for a continuance under ORS 197.763(4)(b) is not specifically required to be made before the evidentiary record closes. ONRC v. City of Seaside, 29 Or LUBA 39 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). In a quasi-judicial hearing on a land use application, an applicant has a right to rebut evidence submitted by opponents. However, if the applicant's rebuttal includes "additional documents or evidence * * * in support of the application," ORS 197.763(4)(b) gives opponents a right to request a continuance. ONRC v. City of Seaside, 29 Or LUBA 39 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Because a local code enforcement proceeding does not involve an "application" or an "applicant" in the sense those terms are used in ORS 197.763, the "raise it or waive it" provisions of ORS 197.763 and 197.835(2) do not apply to such proceedings. Sanchez v. Clatsop County, 29 Or LUBA 26 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where petitioners do not argue the challenged decision violates any criterion which they failed to raise below because that criterion was not listed in the local government's notice of initial hearing or proposed action, as required by ORS 197.763(3)(b) or ORS 197.195(3)(c)(C), petitioners fail to show their substantial rights were prejudiced by the error and establish no basis for reversal or remand. Wicks v. City of Reedsport, 29 Or LUBA 8 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763(8) applies only to a local government's notice of its initial evidentiary hearing. It does not apply to local hearings conducted after remand by LUBA. Collins v. Klamath County, 28 Or LUBA 553 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where the local government's notice of its first evidentiary hearing before the planning commission failed to list the applicable standards, as required by ORS 197.763(3)(b), petitioners may raise issues at LUBA even though such issues may not have been raised during the local proceedings. However, this procedural error provides no basis for reversal or remand of the decision where petitioners fail to establish the error caused prejudice to their substantial rights. Shapiro v. City of Talent, 28 Or LUBA 542 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where during the local proceedings petitioners affirmatively waived their right to request a continuance, petitioners cannot raise the local government's failure to provide such a continuance as a basis for reversal or remand in an appeal to LUBA. Shapiro v. City of Talent, 28 Or LUBA 542 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a local government fails to list a single applicable approval criterion in its notice of initial evidentiary hearing, issues may be raised at LUBA even though they were not raised during the local proceedings. Lamm v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 468 (1995).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where the challenged decision includes a determination that a nonconforming use of the subject property exists, but the notice of hearing indicated the only issue to be addressed was an expansion of an existing nonconforming use, the notice of hearing failed to adequately describe the nature of the application, as required by ORS 197.763(3)(a), and failed to reasonably describe the county's final action under ORS 197.835(2)(b). Either of these deficiencies means petitioners may raise issues before LUBA regardless of whether they were raised below. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 417 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 215.416(5) and 197.763(3)(b) require a county to identify applicable approval standards in its notices of hearing. Where petitioner's right to participate in the local proceedings is impaired by the county's failure to identify relevant standards, the challenged decision must be remanded. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 274 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763(3)(c) does not require that the addresses of all properties included within a proposal for quasi-judicial land use approval be set out in the notice of public hearing. An "easily understood geographical reference" may be provided instead. Kevedy, Inc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 227 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A statement that the requested Willamette River Greenway permit is to allow placement of a dwelling on the identified subject property is sufficient to satisfy the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(a) that the notice of hearing "[e]xplain the nature of the application and the proposed use or uses which could be authorized." Reeves v. Yamhill County, 28 Or LUBA 123 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Under ORS 197.830(10) and 197.835(2), LUBA's review of both land use decisions and limited land use decisions is limited to issues raised below, unless (1) the local government did not satisfy the procedural requirements of ORS 197.763 or ORS 197.195, or (2) the land use decision or limited land use decision adopted differs significantly from what was described in the local government's notice. Tri-County Metro. Trans. Dist. v. City of Beaverton, 28 Or LUBA 78 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where the relevant local government notices did not list the applicable approval criteria, as required by both ORS 197.763(3)(b) and 197.195(3)(c)(C), then regardless of whether the challenged decision is a land use decision or limited land use decision, issues may be raised before LUBA irrespective of whether they were raised during the proceedings below. Tri-County Metro. Trans. Dist. v. City of Beaverton, 28 Or LUBA 78 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763(4)(b) establishes a remedy for failure to comply with ORS 197.763(4)(a). Where a document supporting a land use application was not available for review prior to the initial local evidentiary hearing, as required by ORS 197.763(4)(a), but the local government continued the hearing to a later date and made a copy of the document available for review in its planning office prior to the continued hearing, the local government complied with ORS 197.763(4)(b). Bates v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 21 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a party is entitled to and requests a continuance under ORS 197.763(4), and the local government decision maker does not respond to the request or grant a continuance prior to the close of the evidentiary hearing portion of a quasi-judicial land use proceeding, the party does not waive its right to allege failure to grant the continuance as error in a LUBA appeal by failing to repeat the continuance request at subsequent local government meetings held to adopt a final written decision. Historical Development Advocates v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 617 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where the record shows petitioner was aware of the applicable approval criteria in the comprehensive plan and participated effectively in the local hearing, a local government's failure to comply with the requirements of ORS 197.763(3)(b) and (j), regarding listing applicable criteria from the plan and explaining hearing procedures in its notice of hearing, does not prejudice petitioner's substantial rights or provide a basis for reversal or remand. Furler v. Curry County, 27 Or LUBA 546 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763(3)(b) and (5)(a) require a local government to provide notice of the standards applicable to an application for a quasi-judicial land use decision, prior to its hearing on such an application. Laine v. City of Rockaway Beach. 27 Or LUBA 493 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a local government mistakenly believes it is adopting a limited land use decision, and for that reason fails to follow the notice and hearing requirements of ORS 197.763, no issues petitioner wishes to raise at LUBA were waived because they were not raised below. ORS 197.835(2)(a). Fechtig v. City of Albany, 27 Or LUBA 480 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A local government's failure to follow the notice and hearing requirements of ORS 197.763 provides no basis for reversal or remand, where petitioner neither assigns that failure as error nor explains how his substantial rights were prejudiced by that failure. Fechtig v. City of Albany, 27 Or LUBA 480 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where certain comprehensive plan and code provisions are mentioned in the local government's decision, but are not applied as approval criteria for the subject application, ORS 197.763(3)(b) does not require that those provisions be listed in the local government's notice of hearing. BCT Partnership v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 278 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763(3)(b) requires a local government to identify, in its notice of hearing on a quasi-judicial land use application, which comprehensive plan goals and policies the local government considers to be "applicable" criteria for the subject application. Eppich v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 498 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763(5)(a) requires that a statement listing the applicable substantive criteria from the local government comprehensive plan and code be made at the beginning of a quasi-judicial land use hearing. Where such a statement is not made, or other requirements of ORS 197.763 are not met, petitioners may raise new issues in an appeal to LUBA. Eppich v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 498 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Under ORS 197.763, absent consideration of a new development application, local proceedings after remand by LUBA are part of a single, continuous land use process. Citizens for Resp. Growth v. City of Seaside, 26 Or LUBA 458 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763(6), concerning requests by participants to leave the local evidentiary record open, applies only to the "initial evidentiary hearing" and not to local proceedings after remand by LUBA. Citizens for Resp. Growth v. City of Seaside, 26 Or LUBA 458 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). It is unclear whether the provisions of ORS 197.763(4) entitling parties to a continuance of a local government quasi-judicial land use hearing if additional evidence is provided in support of the application, applies to local remand proceedings. Nevertheless, to trigger the requirement of ORS 197.763(4) to continue the hearing, a party must request a continuance. Citizens for Resp. Growth v. City of Seaside, 26 Or LUBA 458 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A local government's failure to list a comprehensive plan provision establishing different standards for comprehensive plan map and text amendments as an applicable approval criterion constitutes a failure to follow the procedures required by ORS 197.763. Nathan v. City of Turner, 26 Or LUBA 382 (1994).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763(7) does not preclude a local government from reopening an evidentiary record for limited purposes after it has been closed. It simply provides that if the record is reopened, new issues may be raised in an appeal to LUBA with regard to the evidence accepted after the record is reopened. Sorte v. City of Newport, 26 Or LUBA 236 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Local government failure to comply with ORS 197.763(3) notice of hearing requirements (1) means that under ORS 197.835(2)(a), LUBA may consider issues that were not raised below; and (2) is a procedural error which, under ORS 197.835(7)(a)(B), provides a basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision only if such error prejudices petitioners' substantial rights. Mazeski v. Wasco County, 26 Or LUBA 226 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A statement in the local government notice of hearing required under ORS 197.763(3), to the effect that the applicable criteria can be reviewed at the local government planning office, does not constitute listing the applicable criteria, as is required by ORS 197.763(3)(b). Friends of Bryant Woods Park v. Lake Oswego, 26 Or LUBA 185 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where petitioners contend that under ORS 197.835(2)(a), they may raise new issues before LUBA because the local government failed to comply with ORS 197.763, and petitioners allege specific respects in which the local government failed to follow the procedural requirements of ORS 197.763, the local government or other respondents must demonstrate that the local government complied with the relevant requirements of ORS 197.763. Cummings v. Tillamook County, 26 OR LUBA 139 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where the local government's notice of hearing did not include the list of applicable criteria or the explanation of the rights to request a continuance and to keep the record open that are required by ORS 197.763(3)(b) and (j), petitioners may raise issues in their appeal to LUBA irrespective of whether they were raised during the proceedings below. Cummings v. Tillamook County, 26 OR LUBA 139 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where ORS 197.763 was not in effect at the time the subject application was submitted to the local government, LUBA's scope of review is not limited to issues raised during the local proceedings. Choban v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 572 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Under the "raise it or waive it" provisions of ORS 197.763 and ORS 197.835(2), a local government's failure to list a single relevant criterion means petitioner need not have raised an issue locally as a prerequisite for raising that issue before LUBA, even where the issue pertains to plan or land use regulation criteria that were listed in the notice required by ORS 197.763(3)(b). Weuster v. Clackamas County, 25 Or LUBA 425 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). LUBA's scope of review is limited by ORS 197.835(2) and 197.763(1) to issues raised during the local government proceedings, only where the local government complies with the requirements of ORS 197.763. Friends of the Metolius v. Jefferson County, 25 Or LUBA 411 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where (1) the local government's plan and land use regulations were unacknowledged when the original development application was submitted, (2) there has been no proceeding in which the local government identified the applicable standards after limited acknowledgment and enforcement orders were issued by LCDC, and (3) a prior LUBA opinion specifically required the local government to identify the applicable standards, the requirements of ORS 197.763 must be applied to the local proceedings on remand. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 25 Or LUBA 327 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). The hearing notice content requirements of ORS 197.763(3) apply to the notice ORS 197.763(3)(f) requires to be given a certain number of days before the local government's evidentiary hearing on a quasi-judicial land use application. They do not apply to notice of a hearing by the governing body on such application, based on the record before a lower local body. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 312 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A statement that applicable criteria can be viewed at the local government planning office does not satisfy the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(b) that a local government hearing notice list the applicable criteria from the comprehensive plan and ordinances. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 312 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A statement that failure to raise an issue before the planning commission precludes appeal to the local governing body does not satisfy the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(e) that a local government hearing notice include a statement that failure to raise an issue precludes appeal to LUBA on that issue. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 312 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where petitioner failed to object to the board of commissioners concerning the county's failure to comply with the procedural requirements of ORS 197.763 in the notice of, and announcement at, a planning commission hearing, petitioner cannot assign those errors as a basis for reversing or remanding the county's decision. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 312 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A local government is required to provide parties with an opportunity to rebut evidence submitted during local proceedings on remand from this Board under either ORS 197.763(4)(b) or Fasano. A local government's failure to provide petitioner with such opportunity is a procedural error that prejudices petitioner's substantial rights. Caine v. Tillamook County, 25 Or LUBA 209 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A local government's failure to comply with procedural requirements of ORS 197.763 on remand from LUBA does not allow a petitioner to raise issues in a second appeal to LUBA that are otherwise barred by the doctrine of waiver articulated in Mill Creek Glen Protection Assoc. v. Umatilla County, 88 Or App 522, 527, 746 P2d 728 (1987). Caine v. Tillamook County, 25 Or LUBA 209 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where petitioners contend a decision fails to address an applicable approval criterion that was not identified in the local government's hearing notice as required by ORS 197.763(3)(b), and respondents contend petitioners cannot raise this issue because they failed to raise it below, LUBA must decide whether the provision in question establishes an approval criterion for the subject application, in which case petitioners may raise the new issue before LUBA pursuant to ORS 197.835(2)(a). O'Mara v. Douglas County, 25 Or LUBA 25 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). While a local government is not obliged to respond to a taking claim raised during the local proceedings, the local government should, in the first instance, have an opportunity to respond to a taking issue during the local proceedings. Where there is more than one possible interpretation of the local approval standards, the local government should have the opportunity to adopt an interpretation that is constitutional. Larson v. Multnomah County, 25 Or LUBA 18 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Under ORS 227.178(3), the quasi-judicial land use decision-making procedures of ORS 197.763 apply to an urban subdivision decision, where the subdivision application was submitted after ORS 197.763 became effective, but before the effective date of legislation exempting limited land use decisions from the requirements of ORS 197.763. Warren v. City of Aurora, 25 Or LUBA 11 (1993).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where some of the notices preceding local government quasi-judicial hearings on a land use application failed to identify applicable approval criteria, but the notice of the first hearing identified the applicable approval criteria and the record shows all parties were aware of the applicable criteria, the notice errors are at most procedural errors which did not prejudice the parties' substantial rights. Such errors provide no basis for reversal or remand. Reeder v. Clackamas County, 23 Or LUBA 583 (1992).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where the local government fails to identify the relevant plan and land use regulation standards in the notice of hearing, a petitioner is free to raise noncompliance with those standards in an appeal to LUBA, even though compliance with such standards was not raised as an issue below. Ruff v. Harney County, 23 Or LUBA 521 (1992).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Because OAR 660-12-060 is not part of a county's ordinances or comprehensive plan, it need not be listed as an applicable criterion under ORS 197.763(3)(b), and the county's failure to so list OAR 660-12-060 as an applicable criterion in its notice of hearing does not excuse petitioner from having to raise the issue of compliance with OAR 660-12-060 during the proceedings below in order to have it reviewed by LUBA. ODOT v. Clackamas County, 23 Or LUBA 370 (1992).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a local government's notice of hearing does not comply with ORS 197.763(3)(b) because it fails to identify an applicable statewide planning goal as an approval criterion, petitioners may raise the local government's failure either to comply with or to adopt an exception from that goal as an issue in a LUBA appeal proceeding. Murray v. Marion County, 23 Or LUBA 269 (1992).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where petitioners argued below that in view of the outside storage of automobiles, a major portion of a home occupation is conducted outside of the dwelling, in violation of local code requirements, petitioners may argue at LUBA that the outside storage of automobiles violates the local code, regardless of whether the outside storage of automobiles constitutes a major portion of the home occupation. Stevenson v. Douglas County, 23 Or LUBA 227 (1992).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a local government contends an issue was not raised below, and the petitioner fails to cite any portions of the record which he contends demonstrate that he raised the issue during the local proceedings, under ORS 197.763(1) and 197.835(2) that issue may not be raised in an appeal to LUBA. Coyner v. City of Portland, 23 Or LUBA 79 (1992).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where no specific use is proposed in conjunction with a zone change, the notice of hearing is not required to indicate all of the possible uses of the property under the proposed new zone. However, where a reasons goal exception for a particular use is also proposed, ORS 197.763(3)(a) requires that the notice of hearing identify the particular use proposed to be made of the property. Caine v. Tillamook County, 22 Or LUBA 687 (1992).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Local government failure to comply with ORS 197.763(3) notice of hearing requirements (1) is a procedural error, which will result in reversal or remand of the challenged decision only if such error prejudices petitioner's substantial rights; and (2) under ORS 197.835(2)(a), allows LUBA to consider issues that were not raised below. Caine v. Tillamook County, 22 Or LUBA 687 (1992).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763(1) does not require that arguments identical to those in the petition for review were presented during the local proceedings, but it does require that the argument presented in the local proceedings sufficiently raise an issue sought to be raised in the petition for review, so that the local government and other parties had a chance to respond to that issue in the local proceedings. Schellenberg v. Polk County, 22 Or LUBA 673 (1992).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where additional evidence in support of an application is received after the notice of hearing required by ORS 197.763(3) is provided, the parties are entitled to request a continuance under ORS 197.763(4)(b), but a continuance need not be granted unless it is requested. Reed v. Clatsop County, 22 Or LUBA 548 (1992).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where parties are entitled to a continuance following the introduction of new evidence in support of an application under ORS 197.763(4)(b), and make it clear they wish to present additional evidence at a later hearing, a local government commits error in not continuing the evidentiary hearing, even though a continuance under ORS 197.763(4)(b) was never explicitly requested. Reed v. Clatsop County, 22 Or LUBA 548 (1992).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). A local government's failure to include notice of the right to request a continuance under ORS 197.763(4)(b) or that the record be held open under ORS 197.763(6) in the notice of hearing required by ORS 197.763(3) is procedural error, and the parties' substantial rights are violated where it is clear from the record that they would have exercised such rights if they had known about them. Reed v. Clatsop County, 22 Or LUBA 548 (1992).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763(3)(b) and (5)(a) require a local government to identify the standards it believes to be applicable to an application for quasi-judicial land use approval prior to conducting hearings on the application. LUBA is required to reverse or remand a local government's decision if it failed to follow applicable procedures in a manner that prejudiced petitioner's substantial rights, which include "rights to an adequate opportunity to prepare and submit their case and a full and fair hearing." Bradbury v. City of Independence, 22 Or LUBA 783 (1991).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). The statutory procedural requirements of ORS 197.763 are limited to quasi-judicial land use hearings and do not apply to local government legislative land use decision making. Parmenter v. Wallowa County, 21 Or LUBA 490 (1991).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763(3)(b) does not require a local government to list related code provisions as "applicable criteria" in its notice of a quasi-judicial land use hearing in order to be able to consider them in interpreting the central code provisions at issue consistently with such related code provisions. Ward v. City of Lake Oswego, 21 Or LUBA 470 (1991).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a party alleges petitioner failed to raise an issue during local proceedings, and petitioner neither contends he raised the issue below nor claims the local government failed to follow the procedures required by ORS 197.763, petitioner may not raise the issue for the first time at LUBA. ORS 197.763(1); 197.835(2). Wethers v. City of Portland, 21 Or LUBA 78 (1991).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). The failure of a local government to identify its general procedures for the conduct of hearings in its notice of hearing, as required by ORS 197.763(3)(j), is a procedural error, for which LUBA is empowered to reverse or remand the challenged decision only if such error "prejudiced the substantial rights of the petitioner." ORS 197.835(7)(a)(B). Stefan v. Yamhill County, 21 Or LUBA 18 (1991).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Regardless of whether a local government informed participants of their right under ORS 197.763(6) to request that the record remain open after the close of the initial evidentiary hearing, if the local government did not leave the record open, it was not obliged to accept a subsequently offered letter as part of the local record. Wissusik v. Yamhill County, 20 Or LUBA 246 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Under ORS 197.763(3)(j), a local government is required to provide in its notice of hearing a general explanation regarding the right under ORS 197.763(6) to request that the record of the initial evidentiary hearing remain open. A local government's failure to provide such notice is a procedural error which, if it prejudiced the parties' substantial rights, would require reversal or remand of the challenged decision. Wissusik v. Yamhill County, 20 Or LUBA 246 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where petitioners allege the local government violated the procedural requirements of ORS 197.763, but do not contend that violation is a basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision, and respondents do not argue that petitioners are precluded from raising any issue raised in the petition for review, LUBA need not determine whether the local government committed a procedural error. Wissusik v. Yamhill County, 20 Or LUBA 246 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a local government's notice of hearing, rather than listing applicable approval criteria, states the applicable criteria "are attached to this notice," but the record does not include any such attachment, LUBA will conclude the notice does not comply with the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(b) to list applicable criteria and will review issues raised by petitioners regardless of whether they were raised below. Thormahlen v. City of Ashland, 20 Or LUBA 218 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a local government's notice of hearing did not comply with ORS 197.763(3)(b), in that it failed to identify an approval criterion relevant to the proposed development, petitioners may raise the local government's failure to require compliance with that approval criterion as an issue in a LUBA appeal proceeding. ORS 197.835(2)(a). Neuenschwander v. City of Ashland, 20 Or LUBA 144 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763 and 197.835(2) represent a quid pro quo, whereby local governments are required to give broader and more detailed notice of quasi-judicial land use hearings and make staff reports available in advance of such hearings, in exchange for participants being required to raise an issue during the local proceedings in order to be able to raise that issue before LUBA. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Benton County, 20 Or LUBA 7 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Nothing in the language of ORS 197.763(3)(f) or the overall statutory purpose of ORS 197.763 requires that in order for the mailing of notice 10 days before the first evidentiary hearing to be sufficient under ORS 197.763(3)(f)(B), the "two or more evidentiary hearings * * * allowed" must be held at the same level of local government. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Benton County, 20 Or LUBA 7 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Local governments may not impose unreasonable conditions or restrictions on persons seeking to exercise their right under ORS 197.763(3)(f)(B) to two evidentiary hearings, where only 10 days notice of the first hearing is provided. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Benton County, 20 Or LUBA 7 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Local government requirements that an appeal be filed and that a fee be paid before a second evidentiary hearing is held do not violate the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(f)(B) that two or more evidentiary hearings be "allowed," where only 10 days notice of the first hearing is provided. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Benton County, 20 Or LUBA 7 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). Where a local government elects to give only 10 days notice of the initial evidentiary hearing, subject to a right to a second evidentiary hearing on appeal, ORS 197.763(3)(f)(B) requires that a participant be allowed to raise new issues during the second evidentiary hearing. A local government could not, consistent with ORS 197.763(1), (3)(f)(B), and (5)(b) cut off that right prematurely by requiring that all issues to be raised in the second hearing be identified in the notice of appeal. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Benton County, 20 Or LUBA 7 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). When there is no specific proposed use, as in the case of a simple zone change, the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(a) that notices of quasi-judicial land use hearings "explain the nature of * * * the proposed use or uses which could be authorized" does not apply, and it is sufficient if the notices of hearing explain that the application is for a change from one identified zoning district to another identified zoning district. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 19 Or LUBA 421 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). The requirement of ORS 197.763 that the procedures for the conduct of quasi-judicial land use hearings set out therein "shall be incorporated into [local government] comprehensive plan[s] and land use regulations" is not satisfied by local government land use regulations which set out procedures inconsistent with ORS 197.763, but include a general statement that those procedures apply unless state law mandates different procedures. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 19 Or LUBA 421 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763, interpreted as a whole and considering its legislative history, expresses an intent to provide participants in quasi-judicial land use hearings with an adequate opportunity to prepare and submit evidence for such hearings. While ORS 197.763 does not guarantee participants in such hearings 20 days between mailing of notice of the hearing and the date evidence is required to be submitted to the local government, a local ordinance requirement that certain written evidence be submitted within 10 days of when notice is mailed is not consistent with ORS 197.763. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Lane County, 18 Or LUBA 858 (1990).

25.3.9 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Raise It/Waive It (ORS 197.763). ORS 197.763(3)(f)(A) and (4)(a) provide an applicant must submit all evidence relied on in support of an application to the local government at least 20 days before the evidentiary hearing. However, under ORS 197.763(4)(b), if the applicant does submit additional evidence in support of the application after that deadline, the appropriate local government response is to continue the evidentiary hearing in order to provide participants sufficient time to prepare for the evidentiary hearing. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Lane County, 18 Or LUBA 858 (1990).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. When a county is evaluating an application for housing, including needed housing, ORS 197.307(4) (2017) prohibits the county from applying any standards, conditions and procedures that are not clear and objective to the application to develop a residential project, without regard to whether applicant's property is "buildable land" within the meaning of ORS 197.295(1). Warren v. Washington County, 78 Or LUBA 375 (2018).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. A limited land use decision may be approved through a notice and comment process, and a local government may provide a right of local appeal. ORS 197.195(5). In such an appeal, the appeal hearing may be based on the existing administrative record or new evidence may be allowed. Should an appeal hearing allow the introduction of new evidence, the hearing is subject to the quasi-judicial hearing procedures set forth in ORS 197.763. In such a situation, a hearings officer may properly consider new evidence and analysis offered by the local government, as well as a petitioner's response, and LUBA's review includes the hearings officer's consideration of that evidence and those issues. Hill v. City of Portland, 77 Or LUBA 317 (2018).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. LUBA will reject an argument that because a city's discretionary site review standards apply to proposed development, the city's approval is thus a "permit" as defined at ORS 227.160(2) (discretionary approval of the development of land), where even if the city's site review standards apply, the result would be a limited land use decision as defined at ORS 197.015(12), which is excluded from the ORS 227.160(2) definition of permit. McCollough v. City of Eugene, 74 Or LUBA 573 (2016).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. A decision that approves an application for site plan and design review within a city falls squarely within the definition of "limited land use decision" at ORS 197.015(12)(a)(B), and the fact that the city applied the procedural protections of ORS 197.763 to the hearings on the applications does not convert the challenged decision into something other than a limited land use decision. Truth in Site Coalition v. City of Bend, 71 Or LUBA 348 (2015).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. A decision to "incorporate" comprehensive plan policies into a local government's land use regulations, to make those policies criteria directly applicable to a limited land use decision, must be accomplished by as post-acknowledgment plan amendment that expressly makes specific policies applicable approval criteria for limited land use decisions. The mere adoption of land use regulations to implement comprehensive policies does not "incorporate" such policies into land use regulations as directly applicable criteria. SCAN v. City of Salem, 70 Or LUBA 468 (2014).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Approving or denying a tentative subdivision plat within an urban growth boundary is a limited land use decision and therefore not a "permit" decision. Because the ORS 227.175(10)(a) directive that local appeal issues not be limited to those issues identified in the notice of appeal only applies to permit decisions, that statute does not apply to decisions involving the approval or denial of subdivisions. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 59 Or LUBA 23 (2009).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Even when an applicant forfeits the right to process a subdivision application under the limited land use provisions of a local code and processes the application under the procedures for permits, the decision approving or denying the subdivision is still a limited land use decision and the provisions of ORS 227.175(10)(a) do not apply. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 59 Or LUBA 23 (2009).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. If a decision falls within the ORS 197.015(13) definition of "limited land use decision," a local government must ensure that the minimum procedures required by ORS 197.195 are observed. Zirker v. City of Bend, 55 Or LUBA 188 (2007).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. A decision that denies an application based on a determination that the proposed use is not permitted and is not processed under a procedure to make limited land use decisions is not a "limited land use decision" under ORS 197.015(13). Lamar Advertising Company v. City of Eugene, 54 Or LUBA 295 (2007).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. The fact that procedures for making limited land use decisions are used for making a decision to approve or deny a final partition plat does not convert that decision into a limited land use decision or override the language of ORS 92.100(7) providing that decisions to approve or deny a final partition plat are not limited land use decisions. Ehle v. City of Salem, 54 Or LUBA 688 (2007).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Local governments that intend to use statutory procedures for limited land use decisions must make an initial effort to identify in their plan or land use regulations which kinds of uses they view as qualifying for approval as a limited land use decision. Papst v. Clackamas County, 53 Or LUBA 344 (2007).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. In making limited land use decisions, it is error for local governments to consider evidence submitted after the close of the comment period. By requesting and accepting a mini traffic study from the applicant that the decision maker relied upon after the close of the comment period, without giving petitioners an opportunity to review and respond to the study, the local government violates petitioners' substantial rights. Delk v. City of Salem, 51 Or LUBA 123 (2006).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Failure to provide notice of withdrawal of a permit application required by local ordinance is not a failure to provide the "notice of decision" required by the statutes governing limited land use decisions at ORS 197.195, for purposes of the statute of ultimate repose at ORS 197.830(6), where it is undisputed that the subject property is not within an urban growth boundary and for that reason alone a decision with respect to the application cannot be a limited land use decision. Kamp v. Washington County, 51 Or LUBA 670 (2006).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. In making limited land use decisions, local governments may not consider evidence submitted after the close of the comment period, no matter the source of the new evidence. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Oregon City, 50 Or LUBA 87 (2005).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. When new evidence is submitted after the close of the comment period during limited land use proceedings, as with land use decisions, the local government must either (1) reopen the record to allow participants an opportunity to respond to the new evidence or (2) reject the new evidence as untimely. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Oregon City, 50 Or LUBA 87 (2005).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. In order to "incorporate" a comprehensive plan standard into a local government's land use regulations within the meaning of ORS 197.195(1) and thus apply that plan standard to a limited land use decision as an approval criterion, the local government must at least amend its land use regulation to identify specific plan policies or provisions that apply to a limited land use decision as approval criteria. A code requirement to "comply with the comprehensive plan" is insufficient to incorporate any comprehensive plan standard under ORS 197.195(1). Paterson v. City of Bend, 49 Or LUBA 160 (2005).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Where a challenged decision approving a subdivision does not purport to adopt a zone change, grant a variance or grant conditional use approval, the county's failure to grant such approvals, even if required, does not convert the decision from a "limited land use decision" into a "land use decision." Nez Perce Tribe v. Wallowa County, 47 Or LUBA 419 (2004).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. A local government cannot assign review of an application for a limited land use decision to two separate review bodies, without ensuring that the proceedings before both review bodies comply with statutory procedures for limited land use decisions, including notice to property owners within 100 feet of the subject property. McCulloh v. City of Jacksonville, 46 Or LUBA 462 (2004).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Goals 9 and 10 do not prohibit increases in regulatory burdens or require local governments to refrain from imposing any particular level of regulatory burden. Therefore, incorporation of comprehensive plan policies into the zoning code pursuant to ORS 197.195, in order to apply those policies as approval criteria to limited land use decisions, does not violate Goals 9 and 10 even if application of such policies as approval criteria would impose additional regulatory burdens on development of Goal 9 and 10 lands. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Whatever prejudice to petitioners' substantial rights might have occurred before the initial decision maker, when the city arguably failed to provide petitioners an adequate opportunity to comment before the planning commission on whether a proposed design complied with applicable criteria, was cured by providing petitioners an opportunity to present testimony directed at applicable criteria in a subsequent appeal to the city council. Crowley v. City of Bandon, 41 Or LUBA 87 (2001).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. The "actual notice" requirement of ORS 197.830(5) does not necessarily require receipt of a limited land use decision. "Actual notice" is achieved when a person is informed of both the existence and substance of the decision. Robinson v. City of Silverton, 38 Or LUBA 785 (2000).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. A local government violates ORS 197.195(3)(c) if it accepts evidence into the record after the statutory period for comments has run, even if the opposing party was generally aware of the issues discussed in the evidence and did not raise arguments regarding those issues below. Johnston v. City of Albany, 34 Or LUBA 32 (1998).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Where the notice provided by the city does not indicate that an application will be processed as a limited land use decision, and the application is in fact processed as a quasi-judicial land use decision under the provisions of ORS 197.763, the city will be required to provide all of the procedural safeguards required for land use decisions. Wicks-Snodgrass v. City of Reedsport, 32 Or LUBA 292 (1997).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. When the city closed the comment period required by ORS 197.195(3)(c)(A) prior to making a limited land use decision, but continued to accept new evidence from the applicant over a six-month period, the city violated ORS 197.195(3)(c)(F), which requires that all evidence relied upon by the applicant be available for review during the comment period. Azevedo v. City of Albany, 29 Or LUBA 516 (1995).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. When the city zoning ordinance makes final approval of a tentative subdivision plan a limited land use decision appealable to LUBA, a decision applying the ordinance is not a "tentative decision" that can be appealed locally at a hearing pursuant to ORS 227.175(10). Azevedo v. City of Albany, 29 Or LUBA 516 (1995).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. If a local government chooses to treat an application as one for a land use decision, rather than a limited land use decision, and a local appeal as one under ORS 227.175(10)(a), it may not charge more than the maximum appeal fee allowed by ORS 227.175(10)(b). Gensman v. City of Tigard, 29 Or LUBA 505 (1995).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. A local government that intends to process limited land use decisions differently from land use decisions must, under ORS 197.195(2)(c)(I), either make that intent clear in the initial notice or provide all of the ORS 197.763 procedural safeguards. Gensman v. City of Tigard, 29 Or LUBA 505 (1995).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. ORS 197.195(3)(c)(B) does not require an applicant, at risk of waiver, to comment in writing on conditions a local government imposes as part of approval, since the application itself states what the applicant will accept without objection. Clark v. City of Albany, 29 Or LUBA 325 (1995).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. OAR 661-10-021, which allows a local government to withdraw a limited land use decision for reconsideration, does not impose an obligation on the parties to make or waive additional objections after the 14-day period for comment allowed under ORS 197.195(3)(c)(A). Clark v. City of Albany, 29 Or LUBA 325 (1995).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Where petitioners do not argue the challenged decision violates any criterion which they failed to raise below because that criterion was not listed in the local government's notice of initial hearing or proposed action, as required by ORS 197.763(3)(b) or ORS 197.195(3)(c)(C), petitioners fail to show their substantial rights were prejudiced by the error and establish no basis for reversal or remand. Wicks v. City of Reedsport, 29 Or LUBA 8 (1995).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Where a local government provides public hearings before the planning commission and city council before making a limited land use decision, petitioner's allegations that the notice preceding the city council hearing fails to comply the requirements of ORS 197.195(3)(b) for notice of the application provide no basis for reversal or remand where petitioner fails to challenge the adequacy of the notice of hearing that preceded the planning commission hearing. Andrews v. City of Prineville, 28 Or LUBA 653 (1995).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. LUBA's review of limited land use decisions is limited to issues raised before the local government, unless (1) the local government did not satisfy the procedural requirements of ORS 197.195, or (2) the limited land use decision adopted differs significantly from the proposal described in the local notice of proposed action. ONRC v. City of Oregon City, 28 Or LUBA 263 (1994).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. A statement that a list of applicable criteria will be available at City Hall seven days prior to the hearing does not satisfy the requirements of ORS 197.195(3)(b) that the notice of proposed action list the applicable criteria. ONRC v. City of Oregon City, 28 Or LUBA 263 (1994).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Under ORS 197.830(10) and 197.835(2), LUBA's review of both land use decisions and limited land use decisions is limited to issues raised below, unless (1) the local government did not satisfy the procedural requirements of ORS 197.763 or ORS 197.195, or (2) the land use decision or limited land use decision adopted differs significantly from what was described in the local government's notice. Tri-County Metro. Trans. Dist. v. City of Beaverton, 28 Or LUBA 78 (1994).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Where the relevant local government notices did not list the applicable approval criteria, as required by both ORS 197.763(3)(b) and 197.195(3)(c)(C), then regardless of whether the challenged decision is a land use decision or limited land use decision, issues may be raised before LUBA irrespective of whether they were raised during the proceedings below. Tri-County Metro. Trans. Dist. v. City of Beaverton, 28 Or LUBA 78 (1994).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. A local government wishing to identify in its plan or land use regulations uses qualifying for approval as limited land use decisions under ORS 197.015(12)(b) must make it clear the discretionary approval standards applied to such uses may only be applied to regulate the use's physical characteristics and may not be used to deny approval of the use altogether. Fechtig v. City of Albany, 27 Or LUBA 480 (1994).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. The ORS 197.195(3)(c)(B) provision that only issues raised "with sufficient specificity" below may be raised before LUBA in an appeal of a limited land use decision requires only that an issue be raised sufficiently to afford the local government and other parties an opportunity to respond. Barrick v. City of Salem, 27 Or LUBA 417 (1994).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. A city's failure to incorporate comprehensive plan provisions applicable to limited land use decisions into its land use regulations, as required by ORS 197.195(1), means only that applicable plan provisions continue to apply to limited land use decisions. It has no bearing on whether a development proposal meets the ORS 197.015(12) definition of "limited land use decision." Shelter Resources, Inc. v. City of Cannon Beach, 27 Or LUBA 229 (1994).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Where the applicability of certain comprehensive plan policies was debated during the local proceedings, and petitioners had opportunities to and did present argument concerning these policies, the local government's failure to list the policies as applicable approval standards, as required by ORS 197.195(3)(c)(C), is harmless and provides no basis for reversal or remand. Shelter Resources, Inc. v. City of Cannon Beach, 27 Or LUBA 229 (1994).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. ORS 197.195, which establishes minimum procedural requirements for making limited land use decisions, does not require that local governments provide either a public hearing or a local appeal. ORS 227.175(3) and (10) do not apply to limited land use decisions, because they are not "permits," as defined in ORS 227.160(2). Forest Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 215 (1994).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. The 21-day period provided by ORS 197.830(8) for appealing a limited land use decision to LUBA does not begin to run until a petitioner has been given the explanation of appeal rights to which it is entitled under ORS 197.195(3)(c)(H). Forest Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 215 (1994).

25.3.10 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Limited Land Use Decisions. Under ORS 227.178(3), the quasi-judicial land use decision-making procedures of ORS 197.763 apply to an urban subdivision decision, where the subdivision application was submitted after ORS 197.763 became effective, but before the effective date of legislation exempting limited land use decisions from the requirements of ORS 197.763. Warren v. City of Aurora, 25 Or LUBA 11 (1993).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A petitioner is not required to anticipate erroneous findings or interpretations in a final decision in order to challenge them at LUBA. Where petitioner raised an issue before the city council regarding fees and argued that the local appeal was invalid because of an allegedly invalid fee waiver decision, petitioner could not have anticipated the city's decision along with its attendant findings and interpretations, until the city issued its final decision. Accordingly, petitioner did not have the opportunity to raise specific challenges to the city's decision regarding the fee waiver during the local proceeding and therefore may raise them for the first time on appeal to LUBA. Riverview Abbey Mausoleum Company v. City of Portland, 79 Or LUBA 38 (2019).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where a city's interpretation of its former version of a city code requirement that required that an appeal request include either the appeal fee or a fee waiver that had been approved by the planning director prior to the appeal deadline, and LUBA affirmed the city's interpretation, but the city code has since been amended and the city's code no longer requires a fee waiver be approved prior to the appeal deadline, and instead allows a local appellant to submit a fee waiver request and appeal request together, the city is not bound by its prior code, nor its interpretation of its prior code, and prior LUBA case law applying prior city code is no longer controlling. Riverview Abbey Mausoleum Company v. City of Portland, 79 Or LUBA 38 (2019).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A hearings officer does not misconstrue a development code requirement that a project applicant must demonstrate that environmental impacts have been "minimized to the extent practicable," in finding that the project applicant is not required to propose a smaller sized dwelling. McAndrew v. Washington County, 78 Or LUBA 21 (2018).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. LUBA will affirm a city governing body's code interpretation where a prohibition on adjustment "[t]o allow an increase in density in the [low density residential] RL zone" does not specify what denominator should be used to determine whether a proposed adjustment increases the density in the RL zone, or explain how "density in the RL zone" is measured, and the city used as the denominator the gross acreage of a subdivision as a whole, rather than the acreage of individual properties. Hunt v. City of the Dalles, 78 Or LUBA 509 (2018).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. The city's comprehensive plan housing goal, Goal 10, and its policies and implementing measures, provide further contextual support for the city's interpretation of its code regarding a prohibition on lot size adjustment "[t]o allow an increase in density in the [low density residential] RL zone" by using as the denominator the gross acreage of a subdivision as a whole, rather than the acreage of individual properties. One of the Goal 10 housing goals is to "[p]romote the efficient use of vacant land by encouraging infill development which is sensitive to existing neighborhoods, and by encouraging new development which achieves the density allowed by the comprehensive plan." The city's interpretation is consistent with Goal 10 and the policies and implementing measures because it interprets "density" and "acre" to allow new infill development of vacant land to achieve a density that is allowed by the comprehensive plan. Hunt v. City of the Dalles, 78 Or LUBA 509 (2018).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where petitioner argues the city governing body's finding regarding the applicability of a zoning ordinance was erroneous, and the city concedes the finding is erroneous, but when the error is not critical to the city council's interpretation or ultimate conclusions, the error does not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Hunt v. City of the Dalles, 78 Or LUBA 509 (2018).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A city is not required to defer to a permit applicant's characterization of its proposal to remove up to 500,000 cubic yards of rock from a five-acre site as mere site preparation that is necessary for a possible future proposal for residential development. S. St. Helens LLC v. City of St. Helens, 71 Or LUBA 30 (2015).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A land use regulation that assigns the burden of proof to the permit "applicant" does not require that "only the applicant" carry the burden of proof. Assigning the burden of proof to the applicant does not preclude other parties from presenting evidence and legal positions or preclude the decision maker from relying on such evidence. Pacificorp v. Deschutes County, 70 Or LUBA 89 (2014).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A letter objecting that a county commissioner is biased and should not participate in the appeal is not an ex parte contact, where county code does not require that documents submitted in the land use matter be served on the other parties in the appeal and the letter is submitted to the board of county commissioners in the same way many other documents in the appeal were submitted. Warren v. Josephine County, 67 Or LUBA 74 (2013).

25.3.8 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Statutes – Appeals. Even if county code language could be interpreted to bar non-applicant parties who participated in the evidentiary phase of a local permit proceeding from participating in an on-the-record appeal filed by the applicant to challenge permit conditions of approval, such a local appeal procedure would violate ORS 197.763 and 215.422. Families for a Quarry Free Neighborhood v. Lane County, 64 Or LUBA 297 (2011).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. The procedure a city is bound to follow in its land use public hearings is dictated in part by the notice of hearing that it gives. Where the notice of hearing represents that written evidence may be submitted for the first time at the hearing and makes no mention of the city council's general rules and guidelines that state written evidence may not be considered if not submitted at least 10 days before the public hearing, it is error for the city to rely on the general rules and guidelines to refuse to accept written testimony that is submitted for the first time at the public hearing. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 5 (2010).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. The issue of compliance with a local procedural rule requiring the local government to offer participants the opportunity to request a continuance of a hearing that is not the initial evidentiary hearing was not raised below with sufficient specificity, where the petitioner did not cite the local rule to the decision maker, but instead requested a continuance only under ORS 197.763(6), which applies only to the initial evidentiary hearing. Pliska v. Umatilla County, 61 Or LUBA 429 (2010).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Under ORS 215.427(8), when a county fails to take timely action on a permit application, a permit applicant is entitled to a refund of "either the unexpended portion of any application fees or deposits previously paid or 50 percent of the total amount of such fees or deposits, whichever is greater," and ORS 215.427(8) further provides that in that circumstance "[t]he applicant is not liable for additional governmental fees incurred subsequent to the payment of such fees or deposits." Under ORS 215.427(8), when a county is required to refund initial permit application fees, it may not require the permit applicant to pay additional fees for any additional proceedings that may be required to respond to a LUBA remand of the county's permit decision. Sperber v. Coos County, 61 Or LUBA 477 (2010).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where a local code only requires that subdivision applicants provide a traffic study if the local government requests one, a cryptic statement in a letter that a subdivision applicant planned to provide a traffic study was not sufficient to trigger a requirement under the code that the applicant provide a traffic study or make it unnecessary for the local government to request a traffic study before denying the application for subdivision approval for failure to provide a traffic study. Montgomery v. City of Dunes City, 60 Or LUBA 274 (2010).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. In determining that an increase from a 32 to 60 bed homeless shelter would not have significant additional impacts on surrounding properties, that there is a justifiable change in circumstances, and that a previous condition of approval is satisfied—the city exercised significant discretion and was required under its code to provide notice and the opportunity for a hearing. Allan Donald Bruckner Trust v. City of Bend, 56 Or LUBA 699 (2008).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A county does not commit error in approving a reduced minimum lot or parcel size in a portion of its exclusive farm use zone simply because it did not require the applicant to supply an accurate map of the affected area, where the record includes an accurate metes and bounds description of the affected area and an assessors map that shows the affected tax lots. Thompson v. Umatilla County, 54 Or LUBA 531 (2007).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. ORS 215.750 does not prohibit a local government from applying a local code provision requiring an applicant for a forest template dwelling to demonstrate that the dwelling is "necessary for and accessory to" the forest use. Greenhalgh v. Columbia County, 54 Or LUBA 626 (2007).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where petitioner does not challenge a city's findings that invoke a development code provision that allows the city community development director to change the review procedure that would otherwise apply where there is a "compelling public interest," LUBA will deny an assignment of error that challenges the community development director's decision to apply a different procedure that causes an appeal to go directly to the city council rather than to the planning commission. The development code provision need not be interpreted to prohibit a change the applicable review procedure after the city's deliberations on an application have begun. Wickham v. City of Grants Pass, 53 Or LUBA 261 (2007).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. LUBA will reject a petitioner's argument that a city adjustment committee erred by failing to find that the zoning of a property reverted to its prior zoning because a rezoning condition of approval was violated, where petitioner fails to cite any authority to contradict the city's position that the adjustment committee lacks authority to question the zoning shown on the city's official zoning map. O'Brien v. City of Portland, 52 Or LUBA 113 (2006).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Any prejudice to petitioners' substantial rights that might have resulted from late filing of a staff report and late evidentiary submissions prior to a final hearing was avoided by providing petitioners an opportunity to submit additional evidence and testimony after that hearing. McCulloh v. City of Jacksonville, 46 Or LUBA 267 (2004).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A local government may defer a determination that an application to site a dwelling in a forest zone complies with certain siting criteria, provided the local government allows petitioner and other interested parties an opportunity to participate in the proceedings where that determination is made. Hodge Oregon Properties, LLC v. Lincoln County, 46 Or LUBA 290 (2004).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where a local code neither expressly authorizes a city council on appeal to reconsider a city's engineer's assessment of a traffic impact report and needed transportation improvements nor expressly prohibits such reconsideration, LUBA will defer to the city council's interpretation of the local code to allow reconsideration of the adequacy of the engineer's assessment. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Hillsboro, 46 Or LUBA 680 (2004).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A planning commission is not precluded from voting on a new motion to approve a conditional use permit when the first motion fails, where applicable procedures do not prohibit the planning commission from making and voting on a new motion. Gumtow-Farrior v. Crook County, 45 Or LUBA 612 (2003).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A city subarea plan that includes policies that may affect land development outside that subarea's boundaries does not violate a city code provision that limits the applicability of subarea development regulations to that subarea alone. No Tram to OHSU v. City of Portland, 44 Or LUBA 647 (2003).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where a city code provision regarding the siting of a telecommunication tower does not require a showing that a particular tower height at a specific location is the only way an applicant for the telecommunication tower can achieve its coverage objectives, a city decision that does not require an alternatives analysis is not inadequate, in the absence of evidence that feasible alternatives exist. Johnson v. City of Eugene, 42 Or LUBA 353 (2002).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. In applying a zoning code process that permits ministerial correction of zoning maps to conform to the map or legal description that was adopted by or referenced in the enacting ordinance, the first step is to locate the relevant map or legal description, and the second step is to determine whether a nondiscretionary correction is possible based on that map or legal description. 6710 LLC v. City of Portland, 40 Or LUBA 389 (2001).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A city decision to approve a one-story building addition rather than a two-story addition will be affirmed where the petitioner fails to demonstrate that general comprehensive plan policies that advocate a compact urban form (1) apply to the challenged application, and (2) are violated by the city's decision. Thompson v. City of Ashland, 40 Or LUBA 298 (2001).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A letter that is addressed to and received by a local decision maker may not be omitted from the record of a variance proceeding because the letter did not specifically include a request that it be included in the local record, where there is no local code requirement that the letter include such a specific request and it is obvious that the letter concerns the requested variance. Reagan v. City of Oregon City, 39 Or LUBA 738 (2000).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A city does not err in failing to provide a local appeal of a design review decision under design review procedures, where the subject property is within an historic district and the city's code specifies that design review proposals in historic districts are governed by historic design procedures that provide no right of local appeal. Multi-Light Sign Co. v. City of Portland, 39 Or LUBA 605 (2001).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. An assignment of error that a city erred by approving a floodplain permit in the absence of a valid conditional use permit for the proposed use provides no basis for reversal or remand where petitioner fails to demonstrate that a conditional use permit for the proposed use must be obtained prior to obtaining a floodplain permit. Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 39 Or LUBA 353 (2001).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. After a city has approved a permit application, the city may not apply code provisions to require that development occur within a particular time frame when the permit was initially approved without the application of those code provisions, and the city's past practice did not include the imposition of the development deadlines contained in those code provisions. Halvorson Mason Corp. v. City of Depoe Bay, 39 Or LUBA 193 (2000).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A county has authority or jurisdiction to deny a permit application on its merits, where the permit applicant fails to demonstrate he was authorized to submit the permit application but the code limitations on who can submit permit applications do not impose a "jurisdictional" requirement. Base Enterprises, Inc. v. Clackamas County, 38 Or LUBA 614 (2000).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where a local plan provision requires that the local government enter into a memorandum of understanding with a neighboring municipality, that requirement is not satisfied by the local government's determination that a letter from the municipality is the equivalent of a memorandum of understanding, where the letter does not address the plan policy's requirements, is not signed by both governments, and does not set out what the parties mutually agreed to. Cedar Mill Creek Corr. Comm. v. Washington County, 38 Or LUBA 333 (2000).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Unless a local code requires the governing body to remand a decision to the planning commission if it finds that the decision is unsupported by findings, the governing body's decision to modify the planning commission's decision rather than remand it provides no basis for reversal or remand. Dutchuk v. City of Prineville, 38 Or LUBA 323 (2000).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A local government is not required to adopt conditions of approval for a conditional use permit that replicate conditions of approval for a tentative subdivision plat that covers a portion of the same property. Dutchuk v. City of Prineville, 38 Or LUBA 323 (2000).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. When the scope of a "planning action," as that term is used in the city's code, is uncertain and subject to multiple interpretations, LUBA will remand to allow the city to decide the scope in the first instance. Davis v. City of Ashland, 37 Or LUBA 224 (1999).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where an intergovernmental agreement requires that parties to the agreement must approve amendments to the agreement in writing, a local government errs in invoking a dispute resolution process that allows it to effectively amend the agreement without the agreement of the other parties. City of Salem/Marion County v. City of Keizer, 36 Or LUBA 262 (1999).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Consideration of a legislative action more than once within a 12-month period despite a code requirement that such actions be considered only once in a 12-month period provides no basis for reversal or remand, where all parties were given a full opportunity to participate in the proceedings and there was no prejudice to a party's substantial rights. Barnard Perkins Corp. v. City of Rivergrove, 34 Or LUBA 660 (1998).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A local government has not deferred compliance with mandatory approval criteria where it grants tentative subdivision approval with the condition that development plans be reviewed by a geotechnical engineer prior to the issuance of construction permits. Once a local government has determined that compliance with a mandatory criterion is feasible, it may impose conditions of approval to ensure compliance with that criterion. No hearing on the geotechnical report is required. Property Rights and Owners, Ltd. v. City of Salem, 34 Or LUBA 258 (1998).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Absent a specific local requirement that the governing body formally adopt the written decision and findings before the decision becomes final, failure to formally adopt the written findings and decision does not mean the decision is not final. North Park Annex Bus. Trust v. City of Independence, 33 Or LUBA 695 (1997).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Under ORS 197.625, when a county code provision has not yet been acknowledged by LCDC, a land use application is subject to that provision, as well as to the applicable land use goal and its implementing rules. Evans v. Multnomah County, 33 Or LUBA 555 (1997).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A local decision is final for purposes of appeal at the time that it meets the requirements of OAR 661-10-010. That a local ordinance requires that the decision be recorded before it becomes "effective" does not affect the date upon which the decision becomes "final" for purposes of appeal. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 33 Or LUBA 530 (1997).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A city's denial of an application to develop a legally transferable lot has no bearing on the city's obligation to recognize that lot as legally transferable under ORS 92.017. Eagle Point Development v. City of Shady Cove, 33 Or LUBA 509 (1997).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. That a parcel may be separately transferable under ORS 92.017 does not determine whether the parcel may be separately developed. Eagle Point Development v. City of Shady Cove, 33 Or LUBA 509 (1997).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A city does not err by adopting an alternative decision on the merits in addition to dismissing a local appeal, where petitioner is not prejudiced by the alternative decision. Shaffer v. City of Salem, 33 Or LUBA 57 (1997).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. The county is not bound by a hearings officer's previous legal interpretation of a local ordinance where the county determines that the earlier interpretation is incorrect. Marquam Farms Corp. v. Multnomah County, 32 Or LUBA 240 (1996).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where a local ordinance requires the city to act on an application within 36 days after filing, LUBA will read that ordinance consistently with state statute to require the city to act within 36 days of the date the application is deemed complete. Thornton v. City of St. Helens, 31 Or LUBA 287 (1996).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A local government decision may not defer compliance with discretionary standards without ensuring the full opportunity for public involvement provided in the initial stage of the review process. Marcott Holdings, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 30 Or LUBA 101 (1995).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. An appeal to LUBA challenging the amount of a local appeal fee established by ordinance adopted under ORS 215.422(1)(c) amounts to an impermissible collateral attack on the fee ordinance. Cummings v. Tillamook County, 30 Or LUBA 17 (1995).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. When the city's comprehensive plan states it is the city's policy to participate in a joint review procedure of proposed annexations involving the county planning commission, the citizens' planning advisory committee, and the city planning commission, the city may not disregard the policy. DLCD v. City of St. Helens, 29 Or LUBA 485 (1995).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where petitioners contend the governing body failed to follow procedures arguably required by the local code for making the challenged legislative land use decision, LUBA must defer to the governing body's interpretation of the code and cannot interpret the code provisions in the first instance. Central Eastside Industrial Council v. Portland, 29 Or LUBA 429 (1995).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Neither ORS 197.830(12) nor OAR 661-10-021 establishes any requirements regarding the nature of the local government proceedings conducted after withdrawal. However, the local government must follow any applicable requirements its own land use regulations impose for making a new final decision. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 417 (1994).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A code provision that prohibits taking "notice of any communications * * * or other materials prepared in connection with the particular case unless the parties are afforded an opportunity to contest the material" prohibits a hearings officer from considering communications from the local government counsel, or proposed findings submitted by a party, without providing other parties an opportunity for rebuttal. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 417 (1994).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where a local code provides that a planning commission decision becomes final 10 days after "submittal" of the written decision to the clerk of the governing body, the local government is not clearly wrong in interpreting "submittal" to the clerk to mean "receipt" by the clerk, and its interpretation will be sustained. McKenzie v. Multnomah County, 27 Or LUBA 523 (1994).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. That a county zoning ordinance authorizes imposition of "fines" for its violation, whereas a separate county compliance ordinance authorizes imposition of "civil penalties" in amounts determined under ORS 203.065(1) or the violated ordinance, does not prevent the county from imposing a civil penalty for violation of its zoning ordinance, based on the amount of the fines allowed by the zoning ordinance for violations. Watson v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 164 (1994).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. The fact that a local zoning ordinance describes the financial penalties that may be imposed for violations as "fines" is not, of itself, a sufficient basis for determining that proceedings to enforce that zoning ordinance are criminal in nature. Watson v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 164 (1994).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A county can establish procedures for determinations concerning nonconforming uses as part of its zoning ordinance and, if it does so, can require parties to seek a determination regarding the existence or expansion of a nonconforming use through such zoning ordinance procedures, rather than allowing such issues to be initially determined in the county's code enforcement process. Watson v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 164 (1994).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. It is questionable whether a local government could ever be equitably estopped from requiring compliance with applicable comprehensive plan and land use regulation requirements. DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Even if misstatement of material fact can provide a basis for equitable estoppel against a local government requiring compliance with applicable comprehensive plan and land use regulation requirements, an erroneous legal conclusion cannot provide a basis for such an equitable estoppel. DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Absent some legal requirement to the contrary, a local government is not bound to assure that its final written decision conforms to its oral decision in all particulars. Louisiana Pacific v. Umatilla County, 26 Or LUBA 247 (1993).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Absent local code provisions extending such a right, parties have no right to rebut proposed findings. Sorte v. City of Newport, 26 Or LUBA 236 (1993).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where petitioners fail to cite any applicable standard prohibiting the cutting of trees in a comprehensive plan "Distinctive Natural Area," their assertion that cutting trees is inconsistent with the subject parcels' Distinctive Natural Area designation provides no basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision. Forest Highlands Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 24 Or LUBA 215 (1992).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where the local code requires that the decision maker give an oral statement at the beginning of a local hearing to the effect that any party may request that the record remain open for a period of seven days, and where such oral statement is not given, petitioners' substantial right to submit their case is thereby prejudiced and this error provides a basis for remanding the challenged decision. Adler v. City of Portland, 24 Or LUBA 1 (1992).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A local government satisfies plan coordination requirements where it provides notice of proposed plan amendments to affected governmental units, the applicant contacts those governments by telephone shortly before the plan amendment hearing and the affected governmental units either express support or show no interest in participating in the proceedings. Davenport v. City of Tigard, 23 Or LUBA 565 (1992).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A local government must determine compliance with a code standard requiring that a proposed golf course will have no significant adverse impact on wildlife. The local government may not leave a determination of compliance with a code approval standard to a state agency. Kaye v. Marion County, 23 Or LUBA 452 (1992).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where a challenged decision defers consideration of certain code mandatory approval standards until a later stage, but fails to provide that such later stage will include the full opportunity for public involvement provided at the initial stage, and where nothing in the local code requires such opportunity to be provided in any subsequent proceedings, the decision to defer consideration of such mandatory standards constitutes a basis for remand of the challenged decision. Citizens for Resp. Growth v. City of Seaside, 23 Or LUBA 100 (1992).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. An ordinance governing comprehensive plan amendment procedures does not apply to a local proceeding where no comprehensive plan amendment application was filed, no notice of a proposed comprehensive plan amendment was given, and no comprehensive plan amendment was adopted. Schrock Farms, Inc. v. Linn County, 22 Or LUBA 836 (1992).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A local code provision requiring that only members of the board of commissioners reviewing the entire record may act on a matter under review does not impose an affirmative obligation on each county commissioner to demonstrate he or she reviewed the entire record. Absent some indication in the record to the contrary, LUBA will assume a county commissioner performed her duties in accordance with the local code provision. Toth v. Curry County, 22 Or LUBA 488 (1991).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Where an applicant seeks approval for development outside of a "stream corridor area," but has already placed related development within the "stream corridor area" on the same property without obtaining necessary local permits, the local government has authority to impose conditions on approval of the applicant's proposed development requiring that the unauthorized development be removed or that necessary local permits be obtained for the unauthorized development. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 166 (1991).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. Even where the local code provides for the type of de novo review in which the governing body develops its own evidentiary record and renders its decision based on that new record, the code may require that the planning commission record be included as part of the evidentiary record before the governing body in its de novo review proceeding. Union Gospel Ministries, 21 Or LUBA 580 (1991).

25.4.1 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Generally. A city commits no error where it reviews an entire land development application, portions of which are subject to different types of local review procedures, utilizing the type of review procedure requiring the greatest notice and opportunity to participate. J.K. Land Corporation v. City of Gresham, 19 Or LUBA 66 (1990).

Local Government Procedure – Compliance with Rules and Ordinances. That the subject lots are the only lots in the vicinity which fail to meet an ordinance access requirement does not describe conditions inherent in the land which constitute exceptional or extraordinary circumstances justifying a variance from that access requirement. Cope v. Cannon Beach, 15 Or LUBA 546 (1986).

Local Government Procedure – Compliance with Rules and Ordinances. Circumstances which do not affect a lot's ability to comply with an ordinance access requirement do not constitute exceptional or extraordinary circumstances justifying a variance from that access requirement. Cope v. Cannon Beach, 15 Or LUBA 546 (1986).

Local Government Procedure – Compliance with Rules and Ordinances. A city's involvement policy giving residents "the opportunity to be involved in all phases of the planning efforts of the city" does not grant citizens the right to go upon private property over the objection of the landowner to gather information regarding land use proceedings. Cope v. Cannon Beach, 15 Or LUBA 546 (1986).

Local Government Procedure – Compliance with Rules and Ordinances. City comprehensive plan policy requiring conformity with slope and density guidelines and calling for geologic sit3e investigation under certain circumstances is satisfied by findings regarding slope and relying on a geologist's report conclusion that geologic hazards would not be increased as a result of the proposed development. Cope v. Cannon Beach, 15 Or LUBA 546 (1986).

Local Government Procedure – Compliance with Rules and Ordinances. Comprehensive plan requirement calling for a geologist's site inve3stigation is satisfied by the report of a registered geologist. Cope v. Cannon Beach, 15 Or LUBA 546 (1986).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where the local code provides that certain applications (1) must be "submitted on a form provided by the [Planning] Director," (2) "must be reviewed" pursuant to Type II procedures, (3) "may be reviewed" pursuant to Type I procedures in certain circumstances, and (3) "shall not be considered accepted solely because of having been received," the planning director has discretion to reject an application filed on an incorrect form. Mattson v. Lane County, 81 Or LUBA 526 (2020).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A permit applicant initiates the permit approval process by advising the county what it seeks approval for and requesting that the county act to grant land use approval. ORS 215.427 clearly recognizes that when an application is first submitted it may be incomplete, and a permit application that does not include the required filing fee may be incomplete, but nevertheless be sufficient to initiate the permit approval process. Bora Architects, Inc. v. Tillamook County, 76 Or LUBA 330 (2017).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. An applicant may file an application to modify a planned unit development (PUD), while also objecting to the need to file a PUD modification application, without thereby waiving the objection. Recovery House VI v. City of Eugene, 150 Or App 382, 946 P2d 242 (1997). Tokarski v. City of Salem, 74 Or LUBA 124 (2016).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where an applicant seeking to remove property from a city's Goal 5 inventory of historic resources withdraws the request based on city code standards, but continues to request removal under ORS 197.772(3), the city correctly continues to process the application, notwithstanding a local code standard providing that the proceeding shall terminate on the date the application is withdrawn, where the city correctly concludes that the standard refers to complete withdrawal of the application, not withdrawal of one requested basis for the application. Lake Oswego Preservation Society v. City of Lake Oswego, 70 Or LUBA 103 (2014).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Even if application requirements have not been satisfied, that failure does not provide a basis for reversal or remand of the decision where the alleged failure to comply with the application requirements has not resulted in noncompliance with any approval standards. Hess v. City of Corvallis, 70 Or LUBA 283 (2014).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A local code provision that provides that where a proposal will have significant impacts on an area, the proponent of the proposal may be required to submit more detailed and reliable evidence that the proposal will comply with applicable approval criteria than would otherwise be required in order for the county to approve an application with fewer impacts is consistent with Fasano v. Washington Co. Comm., 264 Or 574, 586, 507 P2d 23 (1973), regarding the burden of proof in a quasi-judicial application for rezoning. Tidewater Contractors v. Curry County, 65 Or LUBA 424 (2012).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where the county code requires the signature of all owners of the property, and to ensure compliance with respect to a proposed pipeline crossing multiple properties the county imposes a condition requiring that the approval becomes effective only when the utility provider supplies all required signatures, an ambiguity in the condition regarding whether all signatures of all property owners are required for the approval to become effective is not a basis to remand the decision, where it is reasonably clear from the condition and findings that the county intended that all signatures of all owners be obtained before the approval becomes effective and building permits for any part of the pipeline can be obtained. Citizens Against LNG v. Coos County, 63 Or LUBA 162 (2011).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A county errs in deferring a county code requirement to obtain the signatures of all property owners to a subsequent administrative proceeding that does not provide notice or opportunity for public input, in which staff is granted the discretion to determine whether a circuit court order condemning an easement or less-than-fee interest in property "obviates" the need to obtain the signature of the fee owner. Citizens Against LNG v. Coos County, 63 Or LUBA 162 (2011).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A county errs in deferring the requirement to obtain the signatures of all property owners to a subsequent administrative proceeding, in which staff are granted the discretion to determine whether the county signature requirement is preempted or rendered invalid under federal law. Citizens Against LNG v. Coos County, 63 Or LUBA 162 (2011).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where a petitioner assigns error to a county's failure to require an applicant for destination resort approval to pay the required $20,000 application fee, but the record shows that (1) the applicant paid the required $20,000 application fee for a previous application for destination resort approval that was withdrawn and replaced by the destination resort application on appeal and (2) the county applied the prior application fee to the second application for destination resort approval, petitioner's assignment of error will be denied. Eder v. Crook County, 60 Or LUBA 204 (2009).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where a city's code requires that the applicant submit a geotechnical report addressing hazards on the subject property, but does not require the report to address off-site hazards or conditions, the city does not err in relying on a geotechnical report that does not include data or soil tests from adjoining properties. Papadopoulos v. City of Corvallis, 59 Or LUBA 384 (2009).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. The mere fact that a plat or an application is modified does not automatically require a new application to be filed where the original application remains fundamentally intact. Welch v. Yamhill County, 56 Or LUBA 166 (2008).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A local government does not err in failing to require an easement holder to sign or authorize the landowner's permit application, where the code requires only the "owner" to sign and the code defines "owner" to refer only to the owner of record, not easement holders. Kane v. City of Beaverton, 56 Or LUBA 240 (2008).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. When local approval criteria are amended after an application is filed and the local ordinance requires that the notice state the applicable criteria, it is not a procedural error for the local government to list the older approval criteria that are applicable to the application rather than the amended approval criteria that are not applicable. Painter v. City of Redmond, 56 Or LUBA 264 (2008).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. There is no prejudice to a party's substantial rights when a notice of a hearing does not list the applicable criteria if the staff report that was available before the hearing lists the applicable criteria, the party was aware of the applicable criteria, and the party had an adequate opportunity to address the applicable criteria. Painter v. City of Redmond, 56 Or LUBA 264 (2008).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. When a local code provision prevents the filing of the same or "substantially similar" application within a certain time period after a previous application is denied, the plain ordinary meaning of "substantially similar" means that a second application is barred only when there is a high degree of similarity. Henkel v. Clackamas County, 56 Or LUBA 495 (2008).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. When a local code provision prevents the filing of substantially similar applications after the denial of a previous application, a home occupation permit application that proposes the same general construction contracting activity as the first application is nonetheless not substantially similar to the first application when it significantly reduces the scope and intensity of the proposed use. Henkel v. Clackamas County, 56 Or LUBA 495 (2008).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Failure to submit required information in the application materials is not necessarily a basis for remand, if the respondent identifies other evidence in the record that is sufficient to support a finding of compliance with the approval criteria, or at least explains why required information is not necessary to support the decision. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 55 Or LUBA 350 (2007).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where the purpose of a zoning code requirement that a permit application be initiated in one of six specified ways is to ensure that the current property owner or purchaser of the affected property knows about and agrees with the application, and the record establishes that the current property owner agrees with the application, the county's procedural error in allowing the permit application to be initiated in other than one of the six ways specified in the zoning code could not prejudice a permit opponent's rights and provides no basis for reversal or remand. Womble v. Wasco County, 54 Or LUBA 68 (2007).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. The applicant's failure to provide a survey of individual trees on property to be subdivided is not a basis for reversal or remand, where the applicable approval standards do not require preservation of individual trees, and the information necessary to show compliance with those standards need not include that level of detail. Broken Top Community Assoc. v. Deschutes County, 54 Or LUBA 84 (2007).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Under ORS 227.178(4), where a city has notified a conditional use permit applicant that the application requires additional supporting information, and the applicant fails to provide the information and fails to provide the city notice that the applicant will not provide the requested information, the city may treat the application as void. Caster v. City of Silverton, 54 Or LUBA 441 (2007).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Although a city may deny a conditional use permit application on the basis that there is not substantial evidence to support findings that all applicable approval criteria are met, a city may not simply deny a conditional use permit application that has already been deemed complete under ORS 227.178(2) for failure to provide requested information. Caster v. City of Silverton, 54 Or LUBA 441 (2007).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. If a city gives notice that additional information is required in support of a conditional use permit application, but nevertheless continues to review and make a decision on that application despite the permit applicant's failure to provide the requested additional information, the local government may not simply cite that failure to provide the requested information as the basis for denying the permit application. Caster v. City of Silverton, 54 Or LUBA 441 (2007).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. That a conditional use permit application is deemed complete under ORS 227.178 does not necessarily mean that the application is supported by substantial evidence that demonstrates compliance with all applicable approval criteria. Caster v. City of Silverton, 54 Or LUBA 441 (2007).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where a tentative plan omits information required to determine if the plan complies with approval criteria, and the omitted information is not contained in the record, the failure to provide the required information provides a basis for remand. Township 13 Homeowners Assoc. v. City of Waldport, 53 Or LUBA 250 (2007).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. The purpose and intent of ORS 227.175(2) is to facilitate the processing of development proposals that require multiple applications by consolidating permit reviews that will apply existing laws with zone changes that will alter existing laws. NE Medford Neighborhood Coalition v. City of Medford, 53 Or LUBA 277 (2007).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A failure to comply with a submittal requirement does not automatically require that the city reject an application if other evidence in the record can be relied on to find that applicable approval criteria are met. Douglas v. City of Salem, 53 Or LUBA 567 (2007).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Absent local code provisions that prohibit re-submittal of denied land use applications, nothing prohibits an applicant from re-submitting, or the local government from accepting, a previously denied application supported by the same or additional evidence. Gordon v. Polk County, 50 Or LUBA 502 (2005).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A code provision requiring that where the applicant is not the owner of the subject property the owner be provided a copy of the application prior to approval is satisfied, where there are only two potential owners and both are notified of the application. Moreland v. City of Depoe Bay, 48 Or LUBA 136 (2004).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where the applicable area plan specifically allows submittal of a master plan application without the signatures of all owners of the property subject to the application, petitioners cannot collaterally attack that provision when a master plan application is filed, and city's interpretation that the provision in area plan controls over a more general code provision requiring the consent of all owners is supportable under Clark v. Jackson County, 313 Or 508, 836 P2d 710 (1992). Lowery v. City of Keizer, 48 Or LUBA 568 (2005).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A land use regulation requiring a city to consider all related applications in one proceeding does not require the applicant to submit all applications necessary for development at the same time, or prevent the city from approving those applications before it, notwithstanding that further applications may be necessary. Nielson v. City of Stayton, 47 Or LUBA 52 (2004).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Any error in a hearings officer's conclusion that the terms of an easement allow a public utility to file a land use application without the property owner's signature is harmless, where the code allows a public utility with condemnation authority to sign land use applications, and there is no dispute that the applicant is a public utility with condemnation powers under applicable statutes. Cyrus v. Deschutes County, 46 Or LUBA 703 (2004).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. An assignment of error that alleges that petitioners' substantial rights were prejudiced by a city's failure to provide notice of an applicable approval criterion provides no basis for reversal or remand, where (1) the record shows that the criterion was identified at a public hearing as being applicable; (2) petitioners had an opportunity to respond to the assertion that the criterion was applicable; and (3) petitioners' attorney responded to the assertion by contending that the criterion was not applicable. Martin v. City of Dunes City, 45 Or LUBA 458 (2003).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A standard that imposes both an analytical requirement and an ultimate legal standard that public services be adequate to accommodate a proposed zone change is not satisfied by a conclusion that the ultimate legal standard is met, if the required analysis has not been conducted. Fay v. City of Portland, 43 Or LUBA 390 (2002).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A city code requirement that multiple requests for adjustments must cumulatively comply with the overall purpose of the zone does not require the city to consider potential future adjustment requests that are not before it. The city's interpretation that limiting its consideration and approval to the adjustment request before it does not preclude the possibility of future adjustments is reasonable and correct. Lee v. City of Portland, 40 Or LUBA 498 (2001).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where a zoning ordinance includes no provisions specifying how a zoning map amendment application must be withdrawn, a local government commits no error in continuing to process a zoning map amendment request after the applicant attempts to withdraw the application and commits no error in failing to require a new application fee. Swyter v. Clackamas County, 40 Or LUBA 166 (2001).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. The omission of required information from an application does not necessarily constitute error if the information is later submitted and included in the record. McNern v. City of Corvallis, 39 Or LUBA 591 (2001).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where a permit application omits required information, the omitted information is not contained elsewhere in the record, and the omitted information is necessary to demonstrate compliance with an applicable approval standard, the failure to provide the required information is not harmless procedural error and provides a basis for reversal or remand. Hausam v. City of Salem, 39 Or LUBA 51 (2000).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A lack of supporting information in an application does not provide a basis for reversal or remand when the missing information is not necessary to determine compliance with a specific approval standard. Roth v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 894 (2000).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A school district that obtained title to property through a circuit court condemnation proceeding judgment is an "owner" within the meaning of a code provision defining an owner as a person with a legal interest in property, notwithstanding the Court of Appeals' issuance of a stay pending resolution of an appeal of the circuit court's order denying a motion to intervene in the condemnation proceedings. Lodge v. City of West Linn, 35 Or LUBA 42 (1998).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A code requirement that an application be accompanied by a complete site plan is not satisfied by an application that includes a site plan for only four of 15 lots. Deal v. City of Hermiston, 35 Or LUBA 16 (1998).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A city cannot find it is feasible to comply with all approval criteria based on a site plan for only four of the total 15 lots and defer submission of a complete site plan, and the record does not clearly support a determination of compliance with the approval criteria where the complete site plan is not included in the record. Deal v. City of Hermiston, 35 Or LUBA 16 (1998).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where a local code provision requires the consent of all property owners affected by a land use application, a present owner must sign the application, notwithstanding an agreement obligating the present owner to convey the property in the future to a party who signed the application. Johnston v. City of Albany, 34 Or LUBA 32 (1998).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. In the absence of a code prohibition or some other obstacle identified by petitioner, a city may find a proposal that is substantially modified on remand from LUBA to be a continuation of the original application. Sullivan v. City of Woodburn, 33 Or LUBA 356 (1997).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A county errs in not requiring a scaled drawing of a proposed dwelling as required by local code, where the drawing is necessary to determine that the proposed dwelling complies with applicable height and roof pitch standards, and the missing information is not otherwise in the record. Pekarek v. Wallowa County, 33 Or LUBA 225 (1997).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. The omission of information required by a local code from a development application is harmless procedural error if the required information is located elsewhere in the record. Brown v. City of Ontario, 33 Or LUBA 180 (1997).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Omission of required information from an application is a procedural error that does not prejudice petitioners' substantial rights if the information is not necessary to determine compliance with applicable approval standards. Venable v. City of Albany, 33 Or LUBA 1 (1997).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. The county's application requirements for a conditional use permit are not approval criteria; the fact that application requirements may not have been satisfied provides no basis for remand absent a showing that the failure to satisfy the requirements resulted in non-compliance with at least one mandatory approval criterion. Le Roux v. Malheur County, 32 Or LUBA 124 (1996).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. If a code provision simply provides the decision maker "may require" an applicant to submit a traffic capacity analysis, but petitioners identify no legal standard arguably requiring such an analysis in the instant case or establishing standards for local government decisions on whether to require such an analysis, the local government's failure to require such an analysis does not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Jackman v. City of Tillamook, 29 Or LUBA 391 (1995).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Whether certain persons are "applicants" for destination resort preliminary development plan approval, as defined in the local code, requires an interpretation by the local governing body in the first instance. Skrepetos v. Jackson County, 29 Or LUBA 193 (1995).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. To obtain reversal or remand of a decision because information required by the local code is missing from the application, petitioner must explain why the missing information is necessary to determine compliance of the proposed development with applicable approval standards, and the missing information must not be found elsewhere in the record. Champion v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 618 (1995).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Code provisions which simply require a land use application to contain certain information, and explain the burden is on the applicant to establish compliance with relevant approval criteria, do not impose an affirmative requirement on the applicant to disclose a dispute the applicant may have with another jurisdiction concerning another permit. Salem Golf Club v. City of Salem, 28 Or LUBA 561 (1995).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Limitations on a local government's authority over development applications must be specifically expressed in the local code. Lamm v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 468 (1995).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Absent a statutory or local code provision to the contrary, a local government may recognize a property owner who signs a permit application as an applicant, or allow a change in the applicants for a permit. Reeves v. Yamhill County, 28 Or LUBA 123 (1994).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. In order for a petitioner to obtain reversal or remand of a decision because information required by the local code is missing from the application, petitioner must explain why the missing information is necessary to determine compliance of the proposed development with applicable approval standards, and the missing information must not be found elsewhere in the record. Furler v. Curry County, 27 Or LUBA 497 (1994).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where a local code provision does not explicitly state the requirements listed thereunder for a complete development application are "jurisdictional," the local government's interpretation of the code provision as imposing procedural rather than jurisdictional requirements is not inconsistent with the express words, purpose or policy of the code and, therefore, must be affirmed. BCT Partnership v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 278 (1994).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where the applicant is a general partnership, a code requirement that the application bear the signature of the applicant is satisfied if the record indicates the person who signed the application is a general partner. BCT Partnership v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 278 (1994).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A local government acts within the interpretive discretion afforded by ORS 197.829 in finding a code requirement for a statement of the nature of the applicant's interest in the subject property is satisfied where the application states the applicant is the "future property owner" and there is evidence in the record that the applicant has acquired or will acquire the property. BCT Partnership v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 278 (1994).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. An applicant's failure to include particular information required by the local code on a permit application provides no basis for reversal or remand, unless petitioner explains why the missing information is necessary to determine compliance with specific applicable approval standards. Wissusik v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 94 (1994).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. The fact that a PUD proposal was altered in 1992 to eliminate a need for story variances, does not retroactively cause the underlying application, submitted in 1990, to be incomplete at the time it was submitted. Corbett/Terwilliger Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 601 (1993).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where a proposal is changed after the permit application is submitted, ORS 227.178(3) locks in the standards in effect at the time the application was first submitted, so long as the original proposal remains "fundamentally intact" after the change. Corbett/Terwilliger Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 601 (1993).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where a local government's interpretation of its own code, that a county department manager may initiate an application for development approval on behalf of the local government, is not clearly contrary to the express words, policy or context of the local code, LUBA will defer to it. Choban v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 572 (1993).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where LUBA's decision on petitioners' first appeal found the local government erred by failing to interpret and apply certain code provisions to the subject application, and petitioners did not appeal that LUBA decision, petitioners have waived the argument that a separate application is required to give the local government jurisdiction to apply the code provisions in question. Gage v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 449 (1993).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. In the absence of a code provision to the contrary, a local government is not required to allow modifications to a subdivision application to enable its approval. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 25 Or LUBA 327 (1993).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. In order for a petitioner to obtain reversal or remand by LUBA of a challenged decision because information required by the local code is missing from the subject land development application, petitioner must argue that the missing information is not found elsewhere in the record and explain why the missing information is necessary to determine compliance of the proposed development with applicable approval standards. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 312 (1993).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where local subdivision approval standards adopted pursuant to ORS 92.044(1) specifically provide that a subdivision application may be approved with modifications, the local government may accept a modified application for subdivision approval following submittal of the initial application without requiring that the entire approval process be repeated. Miller v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 169 (1993).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Following LUBA reversal of a city decision approving a permit application, the choice between whether to allow the permit application to be amended or to require that a new permit application be submitted is within the city's discretion, provided any local code requirements governing that choice are followed. Seitz v. City of Ashland, 24 Or LUBA 311 (1992).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where an applicant's attorney represents that the applicant is acting as the agent of the property owner, the application for land use approval is initiated by the authorized agent of the record owner, as required by the local code. Columbia River Television v. Multnomah County, 24 Or LUBA 82 (1992).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where intervenors filed a conditional use permit application as an agent of the property owner, there is no violation of the provision in ORS 215.416(1) stating that an owner of property may apply for a permit. Silani v. Klamath County, 22 Or LUBA 735 (1992).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. A local code requirement that a review body may not consider a request for a conditional use permit within one year following a previous denial of "such" request, prohibits submission of a conditional use permit application for the same use on the same property as previously denied. It does not prohibit the submission of a conditional use permit application for a different use of the property. Silani v. Klamath County, 22 Or LUBA 735 (1992).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Although the party initiating a challenged zoning ordinance amendment was not clearly identified on the application and notices of local public hearings as required by the local code, such procedural errors provide no basis for reversal or remand where petitioners' substantial rights were not prejudiced. Parmenter v. Wallowa County, 21 Or LUBA 490 (1991).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where the local code provides that a property owner may file a conditional use application, a property owner has standing to file an application for approval of a home occupation, even though the property owner does not propose to reside in the dwelling and conduct the home occupation. Tarbell v. Jefferson County, 21 Or LUBA 294 (1991).

25.4.2 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Application Requirements. Where the local code allows a property owner's agent to file a land use application "provided the application is accompanied by proof of the agent's authority," but proof of the agent's authority was not submitted until after the application was filed, the local government at most committed a procedural error, not grounds for reversal or remand unless petitioners were prejudiced by the delay in submitting the authorization. Bridges v. City of Salem, 19 Or LUBA 373 (1990).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where a local ordinance requires the county to notify property owners within 500 feet of any application for a similar use determination for a specific property, failure to issue such individualized notice when the application includes the address of a specific property and the signature of the property owner constitutes a procedural error that prejudices the substantial rights of the neighboring property owners, requiring remand. Jones v. Clackamas County, 81 Or LUBA 438 (2020).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. When a county opts to approve a permit without a public hearing, any person who is adversely affected or aggrieved, or who is entitled to notice of the decision may appeal a decision made without a hearing. The county cannot require participation prior to a decision, either by attending a conference (that may or may not have occurred), or providing written comments, or in any other manner. Additionally, the county may not enact additional restrictions to prevent a person who is entitled to file an appeal under the ORS 215.416(11)(a)(A) right to file a local appeal. Hood River Valley Residents Comm. v. Hood River County, 78 Or LUBA 282 (2018).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where a county code limits administrative review to applications that do not require interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment, and requires quasi-judicial review with notice to nearby property owners for all other applications, the county commits procedural error that is prejudicial to property owners within the notice area by administratively processing without notice an application for a floodplain development permit that requires the exercise of legal judgment. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 77 Or LUBA 181 (2018).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where petitioner alleges a local government failed to meet its obligations under ORS 227.186 to provide notice of a comprehensive plan amendment, a zone change, or a change in a land use regulation that may affect the permissible uses of property to be mailed to the owner of each lot or parcel that the ordinance proposes to rezone or that would be affected by a change in the permissible uses of the property, petitioner fails to allege a basis for reversal or remand when petitioner fails to allege the "procedural error" prejudiced petitioner's "substantial rights." Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. ORS 197.763(3)(b) does not require the local government to list all potentially applicable state statutes in its notice of hearing, and therefore any failure to list applicable state statutes is not a procedural error. Talbott v. City of Happy Valley, 74 Or LUBA 143 (2016).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where no statute or local code provision requires that a city council, in making the city's final decision on a request for a zoning classification as described in ORS 227.160(2)(b), conduct the city council meeting pursuant to quasi-judicial land use procedures requiring notice and an evidentiary hearing, the city council does not err in conducting the meeting pursuant only to the procedures governing a public meeting. Central Eastside Industrial Council v. City of Portland, 74 Or LUBA 221 (2016).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A county's failure to give written notice to a party is not rendered harmless error simply because the governing body is given discretion under the code not to allow that party to participate at the hearing. ODFW v. Crook County, 72 Or LUBA 316 (2015).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where a party would have had at least 10 days to prepare for a hearing, giving that party the right to share 30 minutes with two other persons to present evidence at the end of the hearing is not sufficient to avoid prejudice to the party's substantial rights. ODFW v. Crook County, 72 Or LUBA 316 (2015).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A city's failure to provide a party who is entitled to notice under the city's code with notice of (1) a hearings officer's decision and (2) an appeal hearing on another party's appeal of the hearings officer's decision prejudices the party's right to participate in the planning commission appeal hearing and remand is required. Oakleigh-McClure Neighbors v. City of Eugene, 71 Or LUBA 317 (2015).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. ORS 197.763(3)(b) requires a local government's notice of quasi-judicial land use hearing "[l]ist the applicable criteria from the ordinance and the plan that apply to the application at issue." The transportation planning rule (TPR) is not part of a local government's "ordinance" or "plan" and a local government's failure to list the TPR in its notice of hearing does not excuse petitioner's failure to preserve her issue concerning the TPR for LUBA review by raising it before the local government. Savage v. City of Astoria, 68 Or LUBA 225 (2013).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. If a planning commission relies on a comprehensive plan policy as a separate and independent basis for its decision to deny a permit application, and the permit applicant fails to challenge the planning commission's reliance on the comprehensive plan policy in its notice of local appeal, the board of county commissioners could affirm the planning commission's decision based on that failure alone, without regard to the merits of the permit applicant's challenge to other bases for the planning commission's decision. WKN Chopin LLC v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 1 (2012).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where a zoning ordinance requires that a notice of local appeal "include" "a clear and distinct identification of the specific grounds" for appeal and that compliance with that requirement is "jurisdictional," a local government may insist on strict compliance with the zoning ordinance requirements of a local notice of appeal. It is not inconsistent with the text of the zoning ordinance to conclude that a local appeal should be dismissed where the notice of intent to appeal includes no grounds for appeal and instead attempts to incorporate by reference legal issues stated in a different document that was created for a different reason, without attaching a copy of that document. Lang v. City of Ashland, 64 Or LUBA 250 (2011).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A person filing a notice of local appeal to seek a local appeal of a land use decision may not shift to the local government the burden for ensuring that a local appeal fully complies with all jurisdictional requirements. Lang v. City of Ashland, 64 Or LUBA 250 (2011).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where a local government is uncertain whether its decision to dismiss a local appeal for failure to comply with zoning ordinance requirements for filing a local notice of appeal will be affirmed by LUBA, it may adopt alternative decisions to dismiss the appeal and to proceed with the appeal. In doing so, a local government does not waive its right to argue at LUBA that the local government correctly dismissed the local appeal. Lang v. City of Ashland, 64 Or LUBA 250 (2011).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. The procedure a city is bound to follow in its land use public hearings is dictated in part by the notice of hearing that it gives. Where the notice of hearing represents that written evidence may be submitted for the first time at the hearing and makes no mention of the city council's general rules and guidelines that state written evidence may not be considered if not submitted at least 10 days before the public hearing, it is error for the city to rely on the general rules and guidelines to refuse to accept written testimony that is submitted for the first time at the public hearing. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 5 (2010).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Although ORS 197.835(4) provides an exception to the "raise it or waive it" rule, it only allows a petitioner to raise new issues based upon applicable criteria that were omitted from the notice. A local provision that tentative approval will expire if not completed and the ORS 227.178(5) limit on the number of days an applicant may extend the deadline for a local government to make a final decision on an application are not "applicable criteria." Therefore, a petitioner may not raise issues concerning the statutes and local provision for the first time at LUBA, even though they were not listed in the notice. Oh v. City of Gold Beach, 60 Or LUBA 356 (2010).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where a petitioner is only entitled to notice of a hearing under local provisions, and is not entitled to such notice under state statutes, under Orenco Neighborhood v. City of Hillsboro, 135 Or App 428, 899 P2d 720 (1995), any failure to provide notice of a hearing does not toll the 21-day appeal deadline under ORS 197.830(9), pursuant to ORS 197.830(3). Plaid Pantries, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 60 Or LUBA 441 (2010).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Fasano v. Washington County, 264 Or 574, 507 P2d 23 (1973), does not give a party an independent constitutional right to notice of a hearing in addition to a statutory or local code right to notice of a hearing. Plaid Pantries, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 60 Or LUBA 441 (2010).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where the applicable process for review of an application requires notice and an opportunity for a hearing, the local government fails to provide such notice and provides no opportunity for a hearing, and those failures prejudice a party's substantial rights, including the right to participate in the decision, those failures constitute a procedural error that provides a basis for remand. Johnson v. Jackson County, 59 Or LUBA 94 (2009).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. ORS 197.835(4) allows a petitioner at LUBA to raise issues that were not raised below and that a petitioner would otherwise be precluded from raising under ORS 197.763(1) regarding applicable criteria that were omitted from the notice. A mere allegation that the notice omitted applicable criteria does not, in itself, provide a basis to reverse or remand a decision absent an allegation that the failure to list all applicable criteria in the notice resulted in prejudice to the petitioner's substantial rights. Knapp v. City of Corvallis, 59 Or LUBA 285 (2009).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where the underlying approval that is being extended is a permit, the extension of that permit is also a permit. Thalman v. Marion County, 58 Or LUBA 23 (2008).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. ORS 197.830(5) gives additional appeal rights to parties where a local government makes a decision that is different from the proposal described in the notice. That statute does not require notice of a change to an application. Welch v. Yamhill County, 56 Or LUBA 166 (2008).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. When local approval criteria are amended after an application is filed and the local ordinance requires that the notice state the applicable criteria, it is not a procedural error for the local government to list the older approval criteria that are applicable to the application rather than the amended approval criteria that are not applicable. Painter v. City of Redmond, 56 Or LUBA 264 (2008).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. There is no prejudice to a party's substantial rights when a notice of a hearing does not list the applicable criteria if the staff report that was available before the hearing lists the applicable criteria, the party was aware of the applicable criteria, and the party had an adequate opportunity to address the applicable criteria. Painter v. City of Redmond, 56 Or LUBA 264 (2008).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where written notice is given 12 days in advance of a rezoning hearing, instead of 20 days before the hearing as required by local law, but the local government continues the initial hearing to a date 25 days after the initial notice, and provides a second notice of that continued hearing, neither notice technically complies with the 20-days prior notice requirement. However, where petitioners make no attempt to challenge the adequacy of the two notices other than to challenge their timing, the local government's action to continue the initial hearing until a date 25 days after the initial notice was sufficient to avoid any prejudice, and the timing of those notices provides no basis for reversal or remand. Citizens Against Annexation v. City of Florence, 55 Or LUBA 407 (2007).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A local government does not err in interpreting a local requirement that a notice of land use hearing be published three times in the newspaper to be satisfied where the notice was published twice in one newspaper and once in a second newspaper. Citizens Against Annexation v. City of Florence, 55 Or LUBA 407 (2007).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Assuming a local government is legally obligated to provide participants in a quasi-judicial land use hearing notice of the date and time of the meeting at which it will adopt its decision in a quasi-judicial land use matter, where the local government provides such notice orally immediately after the conclusion of the final evidentiary hearing it satisfies that legal requirement. Burgess v. City of Corvallis, 55 Or LUBA 482 (2008).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A county's procedural error in providing a permit opponent notice of a planning commission decision on the permit rather than a copy of the permit decision itself could result in prejudice to the opponent's substantial rights, where it prevented the opponent from being able to file a timely appeal to the board of county commissioners. However, where the opponent was nevertheless able to file a timely local appeal, there was no prejudice to the opponent's substantial rights, and the county's failure provides no basis for reversal or remand at LUBA. Womble v. Wasco County, 54 Or LUBA 68 (2007).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Local governments are generally required to provide notice of proceedings on remand to the parties before LUBA, even if those parties would not otherwise be entitled to notice under the code. However, such notice is not necessarily required where, following remand, the local government elects to proceed on what is essentially a new and different application involving the same property, under code procedures that do not require notice. Sullivan v. Polk County, 51 Or LUBA 107 (2006).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A city's failure to make a staff report available 15 days prior to a hearing as required by the local code prejudices a petitioner's substantial rights where the staff report is made available only 7 days before the hearing and the application is particularly complex. Hammons v. City of Happy Valley, 49 Or LUBA 38 (2005).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A code provision requiring that where the applicant is not the owner of the subject property the owner be provided a copy of the application prior to approval is satisfied, where there are only two potential owners and both are notified of the application. Moreland v. City of Depoe Bay, 48 Or LUBA 136 (2004).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Absent a local code requirement to the contrary, ORS 197.763 does not require that every hearing notice given by a local government must provide an overview of local appeal procedures and how those procedures may affect an appeal at LUBA, as long as the notices inform participants of their obligation to raise issues regarding compliance with applicable criteria at the earliest opportunity. Scheyer v. City of Hood River, 43 Or LUBA 112 (2002).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. ORS 197.830(4) comprehensively addresses the situation where a local government makes a permit decision without a hearing pursuant to ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10). Warf v. Coos County, 42 Or LUBA 84 (2002).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where petitioner argues the city erred by approving an expedited annexation while failing to "(1) publish public notice, (2) notify adjacent property owners, (3) post a notice on the properties, (4) notify property owners within created 'service islands,' or (5) notify the community in time for this issue to be included on public agendas to be discussed," but petitioner identifies no legal requirement for any of these kinds of notice, petitioner fails to provide a basis for reversal or remand. Cape v. City of Beaverton, 41 Or LUBA 515 (2002).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A county's error in providing notice of a planning commission hearing to property owners within 500 feet of the subject property, rather than to those within 750 feet of the subject property as required by local legislation, is a procedural error and provides no basis for reversal or remand unless petitioner's substantial rights are violated by the error. Where petitioner received notice of the planning commission hearing and the proper notice was given prior to a subsequent hearing by the board of county commissioners, there was no prejudice to petitioner's substantial rights. Donnell v. Union County, 39 Or LUBA 419 (2001).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. ORS 197.763(3)'s requirement that a notice of hearing shall provide "a general explanation of the requirements for submission of testimony and the procedure for conduct of hearings" does not require that the notice of hearing include notice of a contingent right under a city's code to conduct cross-examination of witnesses. Mitchell v. Washington County, 39 Or LUBA 240 (2000).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A newspaper insert that describes a proposed legislative plan amendment, sets out a timetable for future proceedings and instructs citizens how to obtain more information is sufficient to satisfy the citizen involvement element of the city's plan, which grants the city considerable discretion to determine whether and how to notify the public of proposed legislation. OTCNA v. City of Cornelius, 39 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A county's notice of a permit revocation hearing was adequate to comply with a code requirement that the notice be "reasonably calculated to give notice of [the property's] actual location" notwithstanding the notice's reference to the wrong tax lot, where the correct tax lot adjoined the tax lot listed in the notice and both tax lots were owned by the permit holder. Woods v. Grant County, 36 Or LUBA 456 (1999).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A county's failure to explain in its notice of hearing that all evidence and the staff report would be available for review seven days before the hearing provides no basis for reversal or remand, where petitioner did not object to the adequacy of the notice, does not claim he was surprised by anything in the staff report and does not explain how his substantial rights were violated by the inadequate notice. Woods v. Grant County, 36 Or LUBA 456 (1999).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where the county's notice of hearing failed to include notice of the procedures to be followed at the hearing, but petitioner did not object below to the inadequate notice and does not explain how his substantial rights were violated by the defective notice, the notice defect provides no basis for reversal or remand. Woods v. Grant County, 36 Or LUBA 456 (1999).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A petitioner does not waive his right to object to the county's failure to list the applicable criteria governing permit revocation in the notice of hearing by failing to object below, where it was not clear until the end of the hearing what criteria would be applied or that the decision makers intended to revoke petitioner's permit. Woods v. Grant County, 36 Or LUBA 456 (1999).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where petitioner was provided a local appeal and hearing before the county governing body, the failure of the planning commission to give notice before its hearing of the criteria that it intended to apply or that it intended to revoke petitioner's permit provides no basis for reversal or remand, where petitioner does not explain why the appeal to the governing body was inadequate to avoid any prejudice to his substantial rights. Woods v. Grant County, 36 Or LUBA 456 (1999).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where the county followed the wrong local procedure under its code in approving a proposed forest template dwelling and failed to provide required notice of the decision to an adjoining landowner, the county's action resulted in prejudice to the adjoining landowner's substantial rights. Krieger v. Wallowa County, 35 Or LUBA 305 (1998).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A local government fails to comply with a local code provision requiring that notice of decision be provided to persons commenting on the application where it sends notice directly to a tribal government, rather than to its registered agent who commented on the application. Confederated Tribes v. Jefferson County, 34 Or LUBA 565 (1998).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. The city's failure to provide any notice of the hearing at which the challenged ordinance was adopted was procedural error that prejudiced petitioners' substantial rights to participate in the process, notwithstanding that petitioners had participated in earlier proceedings leading to the challenged decision. Casey Jones Well Drilling, Inc. v. City of Lowell, 34 Or LUBA 263 (1998).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. The failure of the notices of the city and county planning commission hearings to include a listing of applicable review criteria from the city and county zoning ordinances and plans is not an error justifying remand where the criteria were listed in the staff report, the parties were provided an opportunity to comment on the staff report at the hearing at which it was presented, the parties were provided almost two weeks to submit written comments on the staff report and petitioners have not demonstrated substantial prejudice. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where the city code requires public hearings before the planning commission and the city council prior to the adoption of a legislative amendment to the city's comprehensive plan, the failure to hold any hearings is a substantive violation of the city code which affects the rights of anyone who might have appeared and commented. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A party cannot claim an exception to the appearance requirement of ORS 197.830(2)(b) when that party is not entitled to notice of a decision, even where the local decision maker has sent to that party notice of related previous decisions. DLCD v. Polk County, 33 Or LUBA 30 (1997).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. If a notice of hearing does not mention a potentially applicable code provision and the participants below were therefore unaware of its existence or possible applicability, petitioners may raise new issues associated with that provision before LUBA. DeBates v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 276 (1997).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where the notice provided by the city of a proposed partition provides a complete street address, and includes an illustration of the property subject to the partition, that notice is not rendered inadequate by a failure to specify that the partition will involve two parcels. Thierolf v. City of Ashland, 32 Or LUBA 182 (1996).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where the challenged decision includes a separate sheet providing detailed information regarding how to appeal an administrative decision to the planning commission, the county has satisfied a local ordinance requiring that the notice of decision must inform interested persons that they "may appeal the decision." Fletcher v. Douglas County, 31 Or LUBA 204 (1996).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. The county has made a "good faith attempt" to provide notice where it provides the requisite notice to the petitioners, but inadvertently neglects to mail the notice to the petitioners' attorney as requested. Fletcher v. Douglas County, 31 Or LUBA 204 (1996).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. The essence of a "good faith" requirement in a county's notice provisions is the requirement for honesty. Fletcher v. Douglas County, 31 Or LUBA 204 (1996).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. If statutory and local code requirements are satisfied, the failure of certain affected persons to receive notice of a zoning ordinance amendment does not make notice of the amendment legally inadequate. Waite v. City of La Grande, 31 Or LUBA 77 (1996).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where a local ordinance specifies that board of commissioner hearings are conducted on the record, and where petitioners establish no violation of any statutory notice requirement, petitioners establish no basis for relief in alleging that they relied on various notices, which appeared to petitioners to be contradictory, to conclude they were not required to present all evidence before the planning commission, but would be able to present their case de novo before the board of commissioners. Canfield v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 25 (1996).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. LUBA may reverse or remand a local decision based on a local government's failure to comply with applicable notice requirements only if the defect prejudices a petitioner's substantial rights. Thomas v. Wasco County, 30 Or LUBA 142 (1995).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A decision of the city planning commission has no legal effect where the city failed to provide notice of the public proceeding, did not reduce the decision to writing, and did not provide notice of the decision as required by local ordinance. Sparks v. City of Bandon, 30 Or LUBA 69 (1995).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Petitioners fail to demonstrate prejudice to their substantial rights arising out of an inaccurate notice published by the city when the mayor correctly stated the applicable criteria prior to the hearing. Sparks v. City of Bandon, 30 Or LUBA 69 (1995).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. When the mailed notice of a local government decision expressly, but erroneously, stated the deadline for filing a local appeal and also provided a formula that could be used to calculate the correct deadline, the local government acted properly in processing a local appeal that was filed by the date expressly stated. Gensman v. City of Tigard, 29 Or LUBA 505 (1995).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Under ORS 197.835(7)(a)(B), LUBA may reverse or remand a challenged decision because the decision maker failed to follow applicable procedural requirements, including notice requirements, only if that failure prejudiced the substantial rights of the petitioner. Moore v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 372 (1995).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A local government's failure to provide notice of its hearings to persons other than petitioners is a procedural error that does not prejudice petitioners' substantial rights if petitioners received notice of the local government hearings and participated in them. Skrepetos v. Jackson County, 29 Or LUBA 193 (1995).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. If a local government fails to give a person an individual written notice of hearing to which that person is entitled under state or local law, the local government fails to provide a hearing with regard to that person, within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3). Orenco Neighborhood v. City of Hillsboro, 29 Or LUBA 186 (1995).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where an ordinance amends the text of a zoning ordinance by adding a temporary overlay district, identifies a map showing where the overlay district applies an "attachment to" the zoning map and does not purport to amend the section of the zoning ordinance under which the zoning map is adopted, it is reasonable and correct to interpret a code notice of hearing provision governing amendments to the text of the zoning ordinance, rather than another provision governing amendments to the "zoning map," as applicable. Orenco Neighborhood v. City of Hillsboro, 29 Or LUBA 186 (1995).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where petitioner alleges the local government's notice of public hearing violates local code requirements, but petitioner fails to provide LUBA with the local code requirements allegedly violated, LUBA will deny the assignment of error. Andrews v. City of Prineville, 28 Or LUBA 653 (1995).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where a code provision governing notice of decisions on a certain type of land use action does not expressly provide it applies only to a decision by the planning director, LUBA will defer to a local government's interpretation that the code provision also applies to a decision by the hearings officer on appeal from a decision by the planning director. Reusser v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 252 (1993).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Even though a local code requirement for publication of notice 10 days prior to hearing is mandatory, it is a procedural requirement, and any error in failing to provide the required notice provides a basis for reversal or remand only if petitioner's substantial rights were prejudiced by the error. West Amazon Basin Landowners v. Lane County, 24 Or LUBA 508 (1993).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where the petitioner is a neighborhood association that did not come into existence until after the local government committed an alleged procedural error, and petitioner and its members participated in hearings held after the alleged procedural error, the error did not prejudice petitioner's substantial rights and provides no basis for reversal or remand. West Amazon Basin Landowners v. Lane County, 24 Or LUBA 508 (1993).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where a local code requirement for notice of hearing on plan and land use regulation amendments makes no distinction between legislative and quasi-judicial land use decisions, the code notice of hearing requirements apply to all plan and land use regulation amendments, without regard to whether they are legislative or quasi-judicial. Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A local government's failure to provide a person with a required individual written notice of hearing is not sufficient, by itself, to entitle that person to be given individual written notice of the decision or to toll the 21-day deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal with LUBA until individual written notice of the decision is provided. Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where a local government fails to give a person an individual written notice of hearing to which the person is entitled, the local government fails to provide a hearing with regard to that person, within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3). Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Under ORS 197.830(3), where a local government renders a decision without providing a hearing, an appeal to LUBA must be filed within 21 days of actual notice of the decision, where notice of the decision is required, or within 21 days of the date a person knew or should have known of the decision, where no notice of the decision is required. Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where the local code requires that the decision maker give an oral statement at the beginning of a local hearing to the effect that any party may request that the record remain open for a period of seven days, and where such oral statement is not given, petitioners' substantial right to submit their case is thereby prejudiced and this error provides a basis for remanding the challenged decision. Adler v. City of Portland, 24 Or LUBA 1 (1992).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. A local government satisfies plan coordination requirements where it provides notice of proposed plan amendments to affected governmental units, the applicant contacts those governments by telephone shortly before the plan amendment hearing and the affected governmental units either express support or show no interest in participating in the proceedings. Davenport v. City of Tigard, 23 Or LUBA 565 (1992).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Petitioners' allegation that the local government failed to provide required notice of local proceedings following LUBA's remand of a land use decision provides no basis for remand, where petitioners do not contend they were in any way prejudiced by the alleged failure to provide the required notice of the local proceedings. Wentland v. City of Portland, 23 Or LUBA 321 (1992).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Where adoption of the challenged decision required the exercise of factual and legal judgment, the decision required the exercise of discretion and, consequently, approves a "permit." Under these circumstances, it is error for the local government to fail to provide petitioner with notice and opportunity for hearing, where at least some of petitioner's members were entitled to notice if a public hearing had been scheduled. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

25.4.3 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Notice Requirements. Although the party initiating a challenged zoning ordinance amendment was not clearly identified on the application and notices of local public hearings as required by the local code, such procedural errors provide no basis for reversal or remand where petitioners' substantial rights were not prejudiced. Parmenter v. Wallowa County, 21 Or LUBA 490 (1991).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. The undefined phrase "youth activity center" is too indefinite to constitute a criterion and, thus, violates the codification requirement at ORS 215.416(8)(a) and cannot be applied, even where the local government would rely on a list of factors derived from quasi-judicial decisions that are not contained in the local code to assist in determining whether a specific use is a "youth activity center." Waveseer of Oregon, LLC v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 583 (2020).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. A county violates the goal-post rule at ORS 215.427(3)(a) by relying on a list of factors derived from quasi-judicial decisions that are not contained in the local code to assist in interpreting an applicable criterion and determining whether the criterion is met where the quasi-judicial decisions were not issued until after the subject application was deemed complete. Waveseer of Oregon, LLC v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 583 (2020).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. A board of county commissioners' broad interpretation of "youth activity center" that could encompass any swimming pool or basketball court where children play is unreasonable under ORS 475B.486. Nehmzow v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 571 (2020).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. The undefined phrase "youth activity center" is too indefinite to constitute a criterion and, thus, violates the codification requirement at ORS 215.416(8)(a) and cannot be applied. Nehmzow v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 571 (2020).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Under the codification requirement at ORS 215.416(8)(a), permit approval standards and criteria must inform interested parties of the basis on which an application will be approved or denied. Waveseer of Oregon, LLC v. Deschutes County, 80 Or LUBA 435 (2019).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. A board of county commissioners' broad interpretation of "youth activity center" that encompasses a wide variety of youth-oriented activities that may occur outdoors or in a farm structure as part of an existing farm use or that may occur in and around a residence as accessory to a residential use is unreasonable under ORS 475B.486 and violates the codification requirement at ORS 215.416(8)(a). Waveseer of Oregon, LLC v. Deschutes County, 80 Or LUBA 435 (2019).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where an applicant proposes to vacate an existing right-of-way and construct a replacement, and where approval criteria require that the vacation "not create an access configuration which violates present development standards," arguments that the proposed replacement (1) is adjacent to a private street which is in noncompliance with development standards requiring curbs and sidewalks, a planter strip with trees, and on-street parking, or (2) connects to an existing sidewalk and crosses an existing driveway which are in noncompliance with development standards regulating their width and the length, provide no basis for reversal or remand because neither the vacation nor the proposed replacement cause or create the noncompliance. Similarly, arguments that the proposed replacement violates development standards regulating fencing and requiring that certain pedestrian connections be identified by more than striping alone provide no basis for reversal or remand because those standards have nothing to do with access configurations. Neighbors for Smart Growth v. Washington County, 79 Or LUBA 1 (2019).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where a city's code lists a number of "factors" to be considered in approving an annexation, including "[a]dequacy and availability of public facilities and services to service potential development," but the city's code does not require that the city identify how infrastructure will be paid for, or by whom, as part of an annexation decision, and the city's findings suggest the city's capital improvement program (CIP) will be amended prior to development to list the new water main as a public facility, although the city does not intend to rely upon the CIP as a source of funding or authority for the new water main, petitioners have not established a CIP amendment must be required as a condition of approval or that the city otherwise erred in assigning a positive value to this factor in approving the proposed annexation. Renken v. City of Oregon City, 79 Or LUBA 82 (2019).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where a city rezones a portion of a property designated mixed use corridor (MUC) on the city's comprehensive plan, from FU-10 (future urban 10-acre) to NC (neighborhood commercial), and petitioners argue that the NC zone is inconsistent with the city's comprehensive plan which directs the city to "[f]ocus transit-oriented, higher intensity, mixed-use development along selected transit corridors," because the subject property is not near a transit corridor, petitioners' premise—that the MUC plan designation is used only where the city intends to promote transit-oriented development along transit corridors—is incorrect. The MUC plan designation is implemented by four commercial zoning districts: one of which is the NC zone, which is not a transit-oriented zone, and is clearly not intended to be placed along transit corridors. Therefore, the city's decision to rezone its property to NC is not inconsistent with the property's MUC comprehensive plan designation. Renken v. City of Oregon City, 79 Or LUBA 82 (2019).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Petitioners fail to establish that the city erred in concluding that rezoning a property to neighborhood commercial is consistent with Statewide Planning Goal 5 when the rezoning the subject property constitutes a PAPA for purposes of applying Goal 5, which provides that local governments are not required to apply Goal 5 in consideration of a PAPA unless the PAPA affects a Goal 5 resource by allowing new uses that "could be conflicting uses with a particular significant Goal 5 resource site on an acknowledged resource list." The city's PAPA is a very limited one, that in relevant part simply applies the zones implementing the city's comprehensive plan designations that the acknowledged comprehensive plan has already designated for the corresponding uses. Because the challenged PAPA simply implements that acknowledged plan designation choice with the exercise of little or no discretion, the PAPA does not authorize any "new uses" for purposes of OAR 660-023-0250(3) and Goal 5. Renken v. City of Oregon City, 79 Or LUBA 82 (2019).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where the city code defines "net density" to mean "the number of dwelling units per acre of land in actual residential use and reserved for the exclusive use of the residents in the development," and excludes public and private streets, the city did not err in including in the net density acreage calculation parking drives designed primarily to provide vehicular circulation to parking spaces in the apartment complex for resident and visitor parking and a leasing office and maintenance building. Hulme v. City of Eugene, 79 Or LUBA 218 (2019).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where the county planning director processed a similar use determination under the county's Type II review to determine whether an electrical transmission line is allowed in a particular zone, the board of county commissioners reviewed the director's similar use determination in a consolidated appeal under a Type III process, and petitioners argue that the county erred by not providing an intermediate decision by a decisionmaker other than the county governing body, that alleged procedural error provides no basis for reversal or remand because that alleged error does not prejudice petitioner's substantial rights. Tilla-Bay Farms, Inc. v. Tillamook County, 79 Or LUBA 235 (2019).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where a county determines an electrical transmission line is a "similar use" authorized in a particular zone pursuant to the county's "similar use determination" process, which allows a similar use "[w]here a proposed use is not specifically identified by [the code], or [the code] is unclear as to whether the use is allowed in a particular zone," petitioners' argument that the county may make a similar use determination only if the proposed use is not specifically identified anywhere in the county's code is without merit. A similar use determination is not necessary or appropriate where the use is specifically permitted or prohibited in the subject zone. In adopting the similar use determination process, the county contemplated instances where a use is specifically identified as an allowed use in some zones but not specifically identified as an allowed use in the subject zone. Tilla-Bay Farms, Inc. v. Tillamook County, 79 Or LUBA 235 (2019).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Traffic performance standards in the local government's transportation system plan (TSP) are not approval criteria applicable to a limited land use decision that were incorporated pursuant to ORS 197.195(1), where the applicable criteria either do not refer to the TSP at all or where they only generally "incorporate[] by reference the city's public facility master plans, including plans for domestic water, sanitary sewer, storm drainage, parks, and transportation." Oster v. City of Silverton, 79 Or LUBA 447 (2019).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Traffic performance standards in the local government's transportation system plan (TSP) are not approval criteria applicable to a limited land use decision that were incorporated pursuant to ORS 197.195(1), where the applicable criteria either do not refer to the TSP at all or where they only generally "incorporate[] by reference the city's public facility master plans, including plans for domestic water, sanitary sewer, storm drainage, parks, and transportation." Oster v. City of Silverton, 79 Or LUBA 447 (2019).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. A hearings officer does not misconstrue a development code requirement that a project applicant must demonstrate that environmental impacts have been "minimized to the extent practicable," in finding that the project applicant is not required to propose a smaller sized dwelling. McAndrew v. Washington County, 78 Or LUBA 21 (2018).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where a county's development ordinance provides that the county shall not approve a minor partition unless the proposal complies with the county's zoning ordinance that specifies that minimum parcel size for all new parcels in designated big game habitat "shall be 160 acres or larger if required by the underlying zone," the zoning ordinance does not provide any exceptions to the minimum parcel size requirement, and there is no dispute that the subject property is located within designated big game habitat, "considerations" such as existence of a farm dwelling, other structures, and intense farm use do not provide a legally sufficient basis for deviating from the minimum parcel size requirement, and such a partition is prohibited as a matter of law. ODFW v. Lake County, 78 Or 53 (2018).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. When a hearings officer's findings are based on substantial evidence that the proposed instream mitigation is likely and reasonably certain to succeed in mitigating any adverse impacts caused by increased summer pumping, the hearings officer did not misconstrue the code requirement that any negative impact on fish resources be completely mitigated so that there is no net loss or net degradation of the resource. Gould v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 118 (2018).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Petitioners did not demonstrate that the county hearings officer erred where local county standards apply to development in "areas designated as floodways [as found on Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) maps] or by methods described" elsewhere in the code, and the county hearings officer determined that because the development was not located within the "floodway," those standards did not apply. This is so, even where petitioners argue the FEMA maps are inaccurate and another section of code authorizes the county floodplain administrator to determine where the floodway is currently located based on "actual field conditions," but the county administrator has chosen not to exercise the authority granted in that section. Meyer v. Jackson County, 78 Or LUBA 150 (2018).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where the county hearings officer agreed that the proposed project involved "the alteration of a watercourse" and that therefore standards applied which required the project applicant to show that the development "will not diminish the carrying capacity of a watercourse" by submitting "certification by an Oregon registered professional engineer," that in the engineer's opinion the watercourse "will not be diminished," the applicant has met those requirements by submitting the certification by a licensed engineer, even though another section of the county's code requires the applicant to "submit technical data" and a "Conditional Letter of Map Revision" from FEMA "when an alteration of a watercourse results in the expansion, relocation or elimination of the special flood hazard area [SFHA]" because the engineer certified that the project has not resulted in the expansion, relocation or elimination of the SFHA. Meyer v. Jackson County, 78 Or LUBA 150 (2018).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. When local code sets out independent grounds for granting a variance, and when only one of three rezoning criteria must be met in order to grant a rezoning, and the city adequately demonstrated that one criterion was satisfied, LUBA need not consider arguments relating to the other two criteria. American Tower Corp v. City of Tualatin, 78 Or LUBA 350 (2018).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. When a city modifies a condition of approval in lieu of citing specific evidence and findings, the decision will be remanded for the city to adopt more adequate findings based on substantial evidence regarding compliance with local code. If the city cannot determine based on substantial evidence in the record that local codes are complied with, and the city chooses to defer that issue to a subsequent proceeding, that subsequent proceeding must provide notice and opportunity for public participation. Dreyer v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 391 (2018).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. That a county's amended Transportation System Plan (TSP) includes language recommending that the county acquire property to develop a transportation facility does not mean that whatever land use permits are required to actually construct the facility under the local code or state law are thereby waived. The county could choose to approve whatever land use permits are required under law at the same time it approves an amendment to its TSP, but the latter is not a substitute for the former, or vice versa. VanDyke v. Yamhill County, 78 Or LUBA 530 (2018).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. A project applicant is not required to file and win a quiet title action in circuit court as a condition precedent to filing the application simply because another party disputes the applicant's title to the property on which the proposed development is to occur. When a party disputes the applicant's title under a legal theory that can only be resolved in circuit court, neither the county nor LUBA is in a position to resolve the legal dispute over whether the applicant/deed owner's title is good. For that reason, the county is also not obligated to adopt findings resolving the title dispute. In circumstances where consent or lack of ownership has a bearing on an approval criteria, we have held that the decision maker may be required to impose conditions to ensure that the required consent is obtained prior to construction. However, where ownership of the subject property is not an approval criterion, we have never held that the applicant has the obligation to quiet title in the subject property where some doubt is raised during the proceedings below as to the legality of that title, or that the decision maker is obliged to adopt findings addressing the likelihood that the applicant will prevail in a quiet title action. VanDyke v. Yamhill County, 78 Or LUBA 530 (2018).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. A city council errs in concluding that a city council-devised future modification to a submitted but unsatisfactory drainage and grading plan that will be reviewed in a future non-public proceeding can satisfy a requirement that the storm drainage plan "maintain[s] pre-existing levels and meet[s] planning and engineering requirements." Pursuant to Gould v. Deschutes County, 216 Or App 150, 171 P3d 1017 (2007), the city council must determine whether the submitted drainage and grading plan complies with the approval criteria or must consider the modifications to the drainage plan identified by the city council in a proceeding that allows public participation. Dodds v. City of West Linn, 75 Or LUBA 24 (2017).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where a city code requires that the city find that "[t]he granting of the proposal will provide for a facility that is consistent with the overall needs of the community," the city did not err by concluding that the "needs of the community" to preserve more mature Douglas fir trees in the location of a proposed stormwater facility are met by a requirement to preserve at least seven more mature trees, and imposing a condition of approval requiring that the trees be preserved. Dodds v. City of West Linn, 75 Or LUBA 24 (2017).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Under the Court of Appeals' reasoning in Davenport v. City of Tigard, 121 Or App 135, 141, 854 P2d 483 (1993), the statutory term "standards and criteria" is sufficiently malleable to encompass a two-step code requirement that first requires that an applicant submit sufficient information to allow the local government to determine whether mitigation conditions of approval are needed for the proposed mining use, and second requires that the local government determine if conditions of approval are needed and develop and impose those conditions if they are needed. Tidewater Contractors v. Curry County, 65 Or LUBA 424 (2012).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. A code provision stating that when it appears that the area of a proposed partition is to be ultimately divided into four or more lots or parcels the code provisions pertaining to subdivisions apply simply authorizes the city to apply subdivision procedures and standards to a partition application, and does not itself constitute "standard" or "criteria" under which the city could deny the partition application. Stewart v. City of Salem, 58 Or LUBA 605 (2009).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where the local code does not provide procedures or standards governing a specific decision, the local government may, consistent with the federal due process clause, borrow and apply procedures and standards applicable to other types of decisions. Emami v. City of Lake Oswego, 52 Or LUBA 18 (2006).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where a local government has no procedures governing a particular type of decision, it is consistent with the federal due process clause to adopt a written set of procedures and standards that significantly cabin the local government's discretion and that offer all participants a reasonable opportunity to present evidence and argument. That such procedures are one-time and temporary in nature, rather than permanent code provisions does not offend the due process clause. Emami v. City of Lake Oswego, 52 Or LUBA 18 (2006).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. An applicants' engineer's discussion of national traffic safety standards as an illustration of why proposed road design is safe does not have the legal effect of making those national safety standards local mandatory approval criteria where they have not been adopted as such. McCulloh v. City of Jacksonville, 49 Or LUBA 345 (2005).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where a permit authorizing residential use of a property is granted without specifically authorizing a dwelling of any particular height, and detailed building plans are submitted 10 months after the residential permit is approved, the city is not obligated to apply the building height limitation that was in effect when the residential permit was approved. Rivera v. City of Bandon, 38 Or LUBA 736 (2000).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. A city's decision violates ORS 227.173(1) where the city relies on "factors" or "considerations" that are unconnected to approval standards established in its land use regulations to deny a permit application. Ashley Manor Care Centers v. City of Grants Pass, 38 Or LUBA 308 (2000).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where the existence or extent of an access is disputed, and an approval criterion requires demonstration of access, that criterion may be satisfied by a condition of approval that access be confirmed by an agreement of the parties or circuit court declaratory relief. Such a condition is not an impermissible delegation of authority. Highland Condominium Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 37 Or LUBA 13 (1999).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. LUBA will defer to a local government's broad interpretation of the term "transportation terminal" as including "airports" and "airport related uses" where the interpretation is not inconsistent with the text, purpose or policy of the zoning ordinance. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 34 Or LUBA 498 (1998).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. The failure of the notices of the city and county planning commission hearings to include a listing of applicable review criteria from the city and county zoning ordinances and plans is not an error justifying remand where the criteria were listed in the staff report, the parties were provided an opportunity to comment on the staff report at the hearing at which it was presented, the parties were provided almost two weeks to submit written comments on the staff report and petitioners have not demonstrated substantial prejudice. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where a local subdivision ordinance requires compliance with both the comprehensive plan policies and the ordinance provisions, and petitioner was provided with notice of the applicable approval criteria, including both comprehensive plan and local ordinance criteria, petitioner was adequately informed of the standards upon which the application would be evaluated. Holland v. City of Cannon Beach, 30 Or LUBA 85 (1995).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where the local code requires that a proposed driving range not alter the character of the surrounding area "in a manner which substantially limits, impairs or precludes the use of surrounding properties" for listed permitted uses, and findings acknowledge safety as a relevant consideration but simply rely upon the striking areas being more than 300 yards from adjacent properties to satisfy that safety consideration, the findings are inadequate to explain how the code standard is satisfied. Moore v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 40 (1993).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. A county does not improperly rely on unadopted, unofficial criteria where its findings make it sufficiently clear that the county is simply relying on material submitted by the Oregon Department of Forestry as expert testimony in determining whether a code "necessary for and accessory to" standard for approval of forest management dwellings is met. Lardy v. Washington County, 24 Or LUBA 567 (1993).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. Where a local code requires that a stream corridor and buffer zone be established prior to development of property, once the corridor and buffer zone are established by the local government as part of a minor partition decision, it is unnecessary for the local government to reexamine those boundaries in order to issue building and tree cutting permits for parcels created by the partition. Forest Highlands Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 24 Or LUBA 215 (1992).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. In the absence of a local code requirement to the contrary, a local government has no legal obligation to impose conditions of approval in lieu of denying an application for conditional use approval. Adler v. City of Portland, 24 Or LUBA 1 (1992).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. That a city code standard for requiring that a land use application be subject to a public hearing before the planning commission, rather than being initially decided by the planning director, is subjective is not a basis for reversal or remand of the city's decision. J.K. Land Corporation v. City of Gresham, 19 Or LUBA 66 (1990).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. A plan standard delegating to city staff the authority to determine the level of detail required in reports supporting the development application is not improperly vague, where the city interprets that standard to require the ultimate decision maker to determine whether sufficient detail is provided in the supporting reports. Where the city council obtains expert assessment of the subject property and provides in its findings detailed reasons why the report submitted by the applicant is inadequate, there is no basis for remand. J.K. Land Corporation v. City of Gresham, 19 Or LUBA 66 (1990).

25.4.4 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Requirements for Standards/Criteria. A plan standard requiring a development to be designed so that "as many trees as possible can be preserved" is not impermissibly vague. J.K. Land Corporation v. City of Gresham, 19 Or LUBA 66 (1990).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. When a city modifies a condition of approval in lieu of citing specific evidence and findings, the decision will be remanded for the city to adopt more adequate findings based on substantial evidence regarding compliance with local code. If the city cannot determine based on substantial evidence in the record that local codes are complied with, and the city chooses to defer that issue to a subsequent proceeding, that subsequent proceeding must provide notice and opportunity for public participation. Dreyer v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 391 (2018).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. A petitioner's argument that the city erred in processing the application as a minor rather than major site plan modification does not provide a basis for remand, where the city adopted findings that the only difference between a major and minor modification is procedural, and the petitioner does not argue that the procedures the city provided, including a hearing that petitioner attended, prejudiced petitioner's substantial rights. Aboud v. City of Stayton, 77 Or LUBA 300 (2018).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. A code requirement that the planning commission hold a hearing on a local appeal at the next regular planning commission meeting is not a jurisdictional requirement, and the planning commission does not lose jurisdiction over the appeal when it holds the hearing at a later regular planning commission meeting. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 62 Or LUBA 329 (2010).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. A hearings officer does not err in approving development notwithstanding that the applicant failed to comply with a code requirement to determine levels of service based on existing intersection signal timing, where the code contemplates that the city may vary from the strict letter of the code to address unusual situations, based on expert recommendations, and the hearings officer agreed with the applicant's experts that due to ongoing transportation construction in the area it would serve no purpose to consider existing signal timing. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Gresham, 54 Or LUBA 16 (2007).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Where petitioner does not challenge a city's findings that invoke a development code provision that allows the city community development director to change the review procedure that would otherwise apply where there is a "compelling public interest," LUBA will deny an assignment of error that challenges the community development director's decision to apply a different procedure that causes an appeal to go directly to the city council rather than to the planning commission. The development code provision need not be interpreted to prohibit a change the applicable review procedure after the city's deliberations on an application have begun. Wickham v. City of Grants Pass, 53 Or LUBA 261 (2007).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Where a planning commission recommendation to correct the zoning map is a condition precedent to the governing body's correction of the zoning map under the local code, the governing body cannot "substitute" for the required recommendation a planning commission recommendation to rezone the subject property under a different code provision. Sullivan v. Polk County, 51 Or LUBA 107 (2006).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Where the evidentiary record has closed and a party believes a local government has improperly allowed legal argument that includes new testimonial evidence, a party arguing that such an impropriety warrants remand by LUBA must (1) adequately identify the objectionable testimony, (2) explain why that testimony goes beyond legal argument or commentary on evidence that is already in the record or for some other reason constitutes new evidence and (3) offer some substantial reason to believe the objectionable testimony had some effect on the ultimate decision. City of Damascus v. Metro, 51 Or LUBA 210 (2006).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Where a local code provision limits a city council's scope of review on appeal from a planning commission to "determining whether there is substantial evidence to support the findings" and whether "errors of law were committed," the city council violates its limited scope of review where it makes its own findings of fact and determines on its own that the applicant failed to establish compliance with the applicable criteria. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Medford, 49 Or LUBA 52 (2005).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. A citizen participation requirement for appointment of a three-person citizens' advisory committee when considering major land use regulation amendments is a procedural requirement. A petitioner who wishes to assign error to the local government's failure to appoint such a committee must have objected to that failure during the proceedings below. Dobson v. City of Newport, 47 Or LUBA 267 (2004).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Where a planning commission fails to formally appoint a three-person citizens' advisory committee from the community at large when considering major land use regulation amendment, as required by an applicable citizen involvement comprehensive plan requirement, that failure does not constitute reversible error where the planning commission in fact seeks the advice of four members of the city's design review committee who are citizens of the community. Where no party disputes that the design review committee members are members of the community at large, the planning commission's decision to seek input from the design review committee either constitutes de facto compliance with the citizen involvement requirement or renders any failure to formally appoint a citizens advisory committee a procedural error that resulted in no prejudice to the petitioner or other citizens of the community. Dobson v. City of Newport, 47 Or LUBA 267 (2004).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Where a local code neither expressly authorizes a city council on appeal to reconsider a city's engineer's assessment of a traffic impact report and needed transportation improvements nor expressly prohibits such reconsideration, LUBA will defer to the city council's interpretation of the local code to allow reconsideration of the adequacy of the engineer's assessment. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Hillsboro, 46 Or LUBA 680 (2004).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Absent some explanation by the county as to why it has the authority to deviate from local regulations establishing the time at which a use is considered abandoned, a county errs in adopting a decision imposing a condition of approval that is flatly inconsistent with those regulations. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 45 Or LUBA 297 (2003).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. LUBA will not remand a decision based on an allegation that the decision maker failed to follow the consultation and coordination requirements of OAR 340-252-0060, where the record makes clear that all parties required by the rule to be consulted were aware of and actively participated in the process leading to the challenged decision, and any failure to follow the procedures set out by the rule was attributable to someone other than the decision maker. Witham Parts and Equipment Co. v. ODOT, 42 Or LUBA 435 (2002).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Citizen involvement guidelines that recommend certain types of advisory committees for large transportation improvement projects, subject to the discretion of the county transportation director, are not mandatory in the circumstances for which they are recommended, nor do they require findings justifying the director's exercise of the discretion granted by the guidelines. Paulson v. Washington County, 40 Or LUBA 345 (2001).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Where a zoning ordinance includes no provisions specifying how a zoning map amendment application must be withdrawn, a local government commits no error in continuing to process a zoning map amendment request after the applicant attempts to withdraw the application and commits no error in failing to require a new application fee. Swyter v. Clackamas County, 40 Or LUBA 166 (2001).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Consideration of a legislative action more than once within a 12-month period despite a code requirement that such actions be considered only once in a 12-month period provides no basis for reversal or remand, where all parties were given a full opportunity to participate in the proceedings and there was no prejudice to a party's substantial rights. Barnard Perkins Corp. v. City of Rivergrove, 34 Or LUBA 660 (1998).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. A local government may approve a partition and defer determination of an applicable approval criterion, provided the subsequent approval process provides the same notice and opportunity for public input as the original proceeding and the approval criteria are not so dependent on each other that they must be applied together. Sunningdale-Case Heights Assoc. v. Washington Co., 34 Or LUBA 549 (1998).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Where the comprehensive plan requires that the planning commission forward findings and a report to the city council for consideration with a proposed plan amendment, the planning commission commits a procedural error by not forwarding the required findings and report. Fogarty v. City of Gresham, 34 Or LUBA 309 (1998).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Where a local code requires that manufactured home parks "which contain land within the floodplain district" be subject to a "Type III" review, Type III review is required to approve a proposed manufactured home park, notwithstanding that no "development" is proposed for the portion of the park located in the floodplain district. Johnston v. City of Albany, 34 Or LUBA 32 (1998).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. A county impermissibly defers a finding that a proposed dwelling complies with applicable land use design standards when, in the absence of substantial evidence supporting a finding of compliance, the county imposes a condition that the dwelling's compliance with design standards be reviewed at a later building permit stage. Pekarek v. Wallowa County, 33 Or LUBA 225 (1997).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. A city council may not convert an on-the-record quasi-judicial appeal of a planning commission decision into a de novo legislative hearing where the city code: (1) provides that legislative proceedings may only be commenced by the planning commission or city council, and the subject proceeding was initiated by an individual; (2) includes no provisions for converting a quasi-judicial appeal proceeding into a legislative proceeding; and (3) requires that appeals of planning commission quasi-judicial decisions be heard on the record. Anderson v. City of Shady Cove, 33 Or LUBA 173 (1997).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Where a local governing body has not adopted regulations providing for reconsideration of its decisions, the governing body commits no error by denying a request to reconsider a decision, where the request was received after the final written order is entered. Van Veldhuizen v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 468 (1994).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From.A zoning ordinance requirement may be jurisdictional, in the sense that failure to comply with the requirement may not be waived by the local government or cured by later performance of the requirement. Simonson v. Marion County, 21 Or LUBA 313 (1991).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Although the existence of an agency relationship between the applicant for land use approval and the property owner on the date the application was filed may be a jurisdictional requirement, the manner of creating and disclosing that agency relationship is not jurisdictional where the code language does not clearly so provide. Simonson v. Marion County, 21 Or LUBA 313 (1991).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. Where the local code requires physical constraints review to be conducted simultaneously with site review, and approval of a physical constraints review permit requires application of substantive criteria which could result in denial of the proposed development, the city's failure to require a proposed development to obtain a required physical constraints review permit at the time of site review approval is not a mere procedural error. Neuenschwander v. City of Ashland, 20 Or LUBA 144 (1990).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From.A hearings officer's acceptance of evidence submitted after the deadline established by local code provides no basis for reversal or remand where petitioner did not request a continuance, and petitioner fails to explain how he was prejudiced by the hearings officer's action. Reed v. Lane County, 19 Or LUBA 276 (1990).

25.4.5 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Deviations From. The requirement to comply with ordinance criteria applicable to the resolution/conceptual site plan stage of the destination resort review process cannot be avoided by deferring those determinations to the preliminary development plan stage of the review process, through restatement of the first stage approval criteria as conditions of approval for the second stage. Foland v. Jackson County, 18 Or LUBA 731 (1990).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. Where both the hearings officer and planning commission declined to address an argument regarding the standards and criteria that might apply to a hypothetical future building permit application for approved housing, and where petitioner points to nothing in the local government's code that requires the hearings officer or planning commission to address petitioner's argument, LUBA will decline to issue what is in essence an advisory opinion regarding that argument. Wiper v. City of Eugene, 75 Or LUBA 109 (2017).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. In Pete's Mountain Homeowners Assn. v. Clackamas Cty., 227 Or App 140, 204 P3d 802, rev den, 346 Or 589, 214 P3d 821 (2009), the Court of Appeals held that Ballot Measure 49, which was approved to replace previously approved Ballot Measure 37, must be given effect and replaces Ballot Measure 37 which would otherwise apply to a particular permit application, notwithstanding the ORS 215.427(3)(a) goal post statute that requires that a permit application be subject to the standards in effect when the permit application was filed. The holding in Pete's Mountain does not mean that new county cell tower regulations apply to a permit application that was submitted before the new cell tower regulations were adopted. In that circumstance the goal post statute applies and the new cell tower regulations do not apply, because there is no statutory conflict. Rawson v. Hood River County, 75 Or LUBA 200 (2017).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. When the state administrative rules applicable to a comprehensive plan amendment are amended during the local proceedings, raising the issue of compliance with the old administrative rules is not sufficient under ORS 197.763(1) and ORS 197.835(3) to raise the issue of whether the application complies with the new provisions of the amended rules. Walker v. Josephine County, 60 Or LUBA 186 (2009).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. ORS 215.750 does not prohibit a local government from applying a local code provision requiring an applicant for a forest template dwelling to demonstrate that the dwelling is "necessary for and accessory to" the forest use. Greenhalgh v. Columbia County, 54 Or LUBA 626 (2007).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. The purpose and intent of ORS 227.175(2) is to facilitate the processing of development proposals that require multiple applications by consolidating permit reviews that will apply existing laws with zone changes that will alter existing laws. NE Medford Neighborhood Coalition v. City of Medford, 53 Or LUBA 277 (2007).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. A 1979 board of county commissioners decision directing the county planning department to issue septic and building permits for a single-family dwelling does not necessarily confer a continuing right to construct a dwelling where no permits were ever issued, no steps have been taken to construct the approved development, and county approval standards have changed in the years since the 1979 decision such that the proposed development no longer complies with applicable criteria. PJT, Inc. v. Jackson County, 42 Or LUBA 536 (2002).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. Where a county has adopted specific ordinances to shield certain land use permits from subsequent changes in law without regard to whether the permit holder has a vested right to complete construction of the use based on substantial construction of the authorized use prior to the change in law, uses approved by land use permits that are not shielded from subsequent changes in law by the ordinances are not similarly shielded from those changes in law and must comply with existing law. PJT, Inc. v. Jackson County, 42 Or LUBA 536 (2002).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. When a variance approval is based on a specific finding that the proposed use is permitted in the underlying zone, the variance approval establishes a time frame for constructing the proposed use, and when the applicant applies for the building permit within the allotted time, the city is obligated by ORS 227.178(3) to apply the same "standards and criteria" that were applicable at the time the variance application was submitted. Gagnier v. City of Gladstone, 38 Or LUBA 858 (2000).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. ORS 227.178(3) implicitly requires that a city apply a consistent set of standards to the discretionary approval of the proposed development of land and the construction of that development in accordance with the discretionary approval. A city may not apply one set of standards to the discretionary approval of a proposed development of land and subsequently apply an amended standard to deny a building permit to construct the development in accordance with the discretionary permit. Gagnier v. City of Gladstone, 38 Or LUBA 858 (2000).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. The approval of a "permit" under ORS 227.160(2) and 227.178(3) carries with it the right to obtain the building permits that are necessary to build the approved proposed development of land, provided the applicant seeks and obtains those building permits within the time specified in the permit itself or in accordance with any applicable land use regulations that establish a deadline for seeking and obtaining required building permits. Gagnier v. City of Gladstone, 38 Or LUBA 858 (2000).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. Where a permit authorizing residential use of a property is granted without specifically authorizing a dwelling of any particular height, and detailed building plans are submitted 10 months after the residential permit is approved, the city is not obligated to apply the building height limitation that was in effect when the residential permit was approved. Rivera v. City of Bandon, 38 Or LUBA 736 (2000).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. A local government may change a prior interpretation that a plan provision is not an approval criterion and apply that plan provision as an approval criterion to a request for permit approval. Holland v. City of Cannon Beach, 34 Or LUBA 1 (1998).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. The commencement of proceedings to amend a local code provision cannot justify a variance; a variance cannot be granted without reference to variance standards existing at the time the application is submitted. Krieger v. Wallowa County, 31 Or LUBA 96 (1996).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. ORS 215.428(3), which states that approval or denial of an application shall be based upon the standards and criteria that were applicable at the time the application was first submitted, does not require a local government processing a partition application to proceed as if factual circumstances existing at the time of application remain unchanged. Petree v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 449 (1995).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. Where the standards upon which conceptual development approval was based are changed to disallow the use conceptually approved, and later decisions authorizing a building permit and final development approval for the use are adopted on the basis that the prior standards continue to apply, a petitioner is entitled to challenge the later decisions notwithstanding petitioner's failure to challenge the conceptual development approval. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. Nothing in ORS 215.428(3) requires a county to apply standards in effect at the time one development application is submitted to a distinct and subsequent development application. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

25.4.6 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Changes in Law. Where a "conceptual approval" decision requires that an applicant file a new application for final development approval, and the challenged decision is made on the basis of that new application, the second development approval request is an "application" as that term is used in ORS 215.428(3) and the code provisions in effect at the time the second development application was submitted are applicable to the second development application. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where state statute requires that a local government provide either a public hearing before ruling on an application for a statutory permit or an opportunity for an appeal that includes a de novo public hearing, although the local government may require a notice of appeal that sets forth with reasonable particularity the issues that the appealing party will raise at the hearing, the local government may not, consistent with the statute, (1) make that notice requirement a jurisdictional bar to obtaining the hearing, (2) limit the issues specified to five types of issues, or (3) approve or reject requests for hearings based on a qualitative assessment of how well the appellant has explained the issues specified. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 79 Or LUBA 96 (2019).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. When a county opts to approve a permit without a public hearing, any person who is adversely affected or aggrieved, or who is entitled to notice of the decision may appeal a decision made without a hearing. The county cannot require participation prior to a decision, either by attending a conference (that may or may not have occurred), or providing written comments, or in any other manner. Additionally, the county may not enact additional restrictions to prevent a person who is entitled to file an appeal under the ORS 215.416(11)(a)(A) right to file a local appeal. Hood River Valley Residents Comm. v. Hood River County, 78 Or LUBA 282 (2018).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. In an as-applied challenge, a petitioner cannot challenge the manner in which the city adopted its appeal fee structure. Instead, LUBA's inquiry regarding petitioner's as-applied challenge to the appeal fee charged by the city, is whether petitioner has produced a prima facie case that the fee that the city charged petitioner pursuant to the city's previously adopted fee schedule is "more than the average cost of such appeals or the actual cost of the appeal." ORS 227.180(1)(c). Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 78 Or LUBA 463 (2018).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Any error in a planning commission's finding that the petitioner lacked standing to file a local appeal is harmless, where on appeal to the board of commissioners the board disposed of petitioner's appeal on the merits and did not rely on standing as a basis to deny the appeal. Richards v. Jefferson County, 77 Or LUBA 152 (2018).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A county cannot apply more rigorous standing or timely appeal requirements on (1) local appeals of permit decisions than are authorized under ORS 215.416(11) or (2) local appeals of permit decisions under circumstances where, but for the county choosing to provide a local appeal, the petitioner would have the right to appeal the permit decision directly to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3). Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A county is not required to evaluate a petitioner's standing to file a local appeal based on the presumption that the petitioner was entitled to notice of the decision, where there is no dispute that the petitioner did not live within the notice area and was not entitled to notice of the decision at the time the decision was made. That the petitioner now lives within the notice area does not establish entitlement under state or local law to notice of the decision or to file a local appeal. Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A petitioner's actual knowledge that the applicant has applied to the county for a dwelling permit and that the county intends to approve it, and that a well dug on the property is to perfect the permit for a dwelling, is more than sufficient knowledge to place the petitioner on "inquiry notice" that the county has approved a dwelling on the applicant's property. Where the petitioner waits more than a year after being placed on "inquiry notice" that the county had approved a dwelling to actually discover the permit decision and file a local appeal, the local appeal is untimely filed, under local appeal provisions based on ORS 197.830(3)(b). Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Unless some exclusion applies, LUBA has jurisdiction over the appeal of a land use compatibility statement concluding that no local appeal is available to petitioner, if the decision applies a land use regulation. Arguments that the local government correctly concluded that no local appeal is available go to the merits of the appeal, and does nothing to demonstrate that LUBA lacks jurisdiction over the decision. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 75 Or LUBA 504 (2017).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A party fails to establish "party status" within the meaning of a local code provision requiring such a demonstration in order to file a local appeal of a planning commission decision, when that party does not provide oral or written testimony prior to the close of the evidentiary record before the planning commission. Oral testimony given (1) after the record was closed and (2) during the public comment portion of a planning commission meeting does not provide testimony prior to the close of the evidentiary record. Dilley v. City of North Bend, 71 Or LUBA 56 (2015).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. When a party provides her name and address on a public comment sign-in sheet for a planning commission meeting and the city subsequently sends her notice of the planning commission's decision based on that sign-in sheet request for notice, a party has established that she requested notice of a planning commission decision within the meaning of the local code, and demonstrates "party status" to file a local appeal on that basis. Dilley v. City of North Bend, 71 Or LUBA 56 (2015).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A statement that a person merely "endorses" or "supports" a party's appeal does not confer co-appellant status on that person, where no local or statutory standards are cited that would authorize persons who may or may not have party status, to join an appeal that is filed by someone who has party status. Dilley v. City of North Bend, 71 Or LUBA 56 (2015).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a city's code provides that the city administrator's actions may be appealed to the planning commission, and the planning commission's decision on that local appeal may be appealed to the city council, but the city council agrees to bypass the planning commission and hear a petitioner's appeal, the city may not argue at LUBA that that petitioner failed to exhaust her administrative remedies in bypassing the planning commission. Smith v. City of Gearhart, 71 Or LUBA 184 (2015).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. If a planning commission relies on a comprehensive plan policy as a separate and independent basis for its decision to deny a permit application, and the permit applicant fails to challenge the planning commission's reliance on the comprehensive plan policy in its notice of local appeal, the board of county commissioners could affirm the planning commission's decision based on that failure alone, without regard to the merits of the permit applicant's challenge to other bases for the planning commission's decision. WKN Chopin LLC v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 1 (2012).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a planning commission almost entirely relied on the EFU zoning statutes to find that a permit applicant inadequately considered alternatives to a proposed EFU-zoned site for a transmission line, and only belatedly and obscurely relied on a comprehensive plan policy to impose a similar alternatives analysis, the permit applicant's general challenge to the planning commission's legal analysis on cited pages of the planning commission's decision where the comprehensive plan policy was mentioned is sufficient to preserve the permit applicant's right to challenge the planning commission's reliance on the plan policy in its appeal to the board of commissioners. WKN Chopin LLC v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 1 (2012).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the applicant appeals a hearings officer's decision, challenging a condition of approval under a local appeal standard that limits the planning commission's review to the issues raised in the appeal, the planning commission's authority to impose new conditions is limited to conditions necessary to ensure that the application, with the challenged condition eliminated, continues to comply with applicable approval criteria. Treadmill Joint Venture v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 213 (2012).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the applicant appeals a hearings officer's decision challenging a condition of approval limiting building height, under a local appeal standard that limits the planning commission's review to the issues raised in the appeal, the planning commission errs in imposing a new condition requiring additional setbacks, where the condition requiring additional setback is unrelated to the building height condition. Treadmill Joint Venture v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 213 (2012).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A notice of local appeal requirement that the bases for appeal be specified in detail is satisfied by the statement that the local appellant disagreed with the decision, where the appealed local decision was a planning commission decision denying permit approval and that denial was based on a single criterion. Johnson v. City of Gladstone, 65 Or LUBA 225 (2012).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A city's interpretation of a local code provision governing appeals that determines that the consequence for underpayment of an appeal fee is not to dismiss the local appeal but rather to notify the appellant of the underpayment and request prompt payment of the remaining amount due is correct, where nothing in the applicable code section specifies that the consequence for an underpayment of an appeal fee based on misinformation from planning staff is dismissal of a local appeal. Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 63 Or LUBA 75 (2011).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A code requirement that the planning commission hold a hearing on a local appeal at the next regular planning commission meeting is not a jurisdictional requirement, and the planning commission does not lose jurisdiction over the appeal when it holds the hearing at a later regular planning commission meeting. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 62 Or LUBA 329 (2010).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local code requires the appellant to pay the local appeal fee "specified in the Notice of Decision," but instead the notice simply directs recipients to contact planning staff to find out the amount of the appeal fee, the failure to specify an appeal fee in the notice does not mean that the local government is precluded from charging an appeal fee or that the local government must provide a free local appeal. Jensen Properties v. Washington County, 61 Or LUBA 155 (2010).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Under ORS 215.427(8), when a county fails to take timely action on a permit application, a permit applicant is entitled to a refund of "either the unexpended portion of any application fees or deposits previously paid or 50 percent of the total amount of such fees or deposits, whichever is greater," and ORS 215.427(8) further provides that in that circumstance "[t]he applicant is not liable for additional governmental fees incurred subsequent to the payment of such fees or deposits." Under ORS 215.427(8), when a county is required to refund initial permit application fees, it may not require the permit applicant to pay additional fees for any additional proceedings that may be required to respond to a LUBA remand of the county's permit decision. Sperber v. Coos County, 61 Or LUBA 477 (2010).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Approving or denying a tentative subdivision plat within an urban growth boundary is a limited land use decision and therefore not a "permit" decision. Because the ORS 227.175(10)(a) directive that local appeal issues not be limited to those issues identified in the notice of appeal only applies to permit decisions, that statute does not apply to decisions involving the approval or denial of subdivisions. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 59 Or LUBA 23 (2009).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Even when an applicant forfeits the right to process a subdivision application under the limited land use provisions of a local code and processes the application under the procedures for permits, the decision approving or denying the subdivision is still a limited land use decision and the provisions of ORS 227.175(10)(a) do not apply. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 59 Or LUBA 23 (2009).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local code requires a notice of review to contain "the specific grounds relied on in the petition request for review," and petitioners challenged a planning commission decision on the grounds that the county failed to identify other available industrially zoned properties throughout the county, petitioners may not on appeal to LUBA challenge the decision on different grounds that the county did not properly identify available industrially zoned lands within the specific rural community in which the applicant proposes the plan amendment. Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 506-507, 79 P3d 382 (2003). Kinnett v. Douglas County, 59 Or LUBA 293 (2009).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the underlying approval that is being extended is a permit, the extension of that permit is also a permit. Thalman v. Marion County, 58 Or LUBA 23 (2008).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. When an appellant asks a local government to either approve or deny a building permit application and the local government ignores the request, the local government's actions may constitute a de facto denial. That the local government declines to reduce its de facto denial to writing does not mean that the applicant's attempt to file a local appeal of that de facto denial was untimely filed. Huessy v. Tillamook County, 58 Or LUBA 172 (2009).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Dismissal of a local appeal for failure to comply with an informational requirement like specifying the date of the appealed decision in the local notice of appeal is a sufficiently harsh sanction that a local government may only dismiss the appeal if its code expressly provides that dismissal is the sanction for not complying with the informational requirement. Golden v. City of Silverton, 58 Or LUBA 399 (2009).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A county erred by dismissing a local appeal of a building permit where (1) the county's land use regulations provided a right of local appeal to challenge decisions that required the exercise of significant discretion, (2) the county was required to determine if the dwelling that was the subject of the building permit was lawfully established, and (3) the history of the development of the property required the county to exercise considerable discretion to determine if the dwelling was lawfully established. Kuhn v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 483 (2009).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a planning department is authorized to treat nondiscretionary building permit applications as discretionary permits for which there is a right of local appeal, and the planning department gives notice that a local appeal is available and accepts and processes petitioner's local appeal, a hearings officer errs by later dismissing the appeal. In that circumstance, LUBA will assume the planning department intended to exercise its authority to treat the nondiscretionary application as a discretionary application. Kuhn v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 483 (2009).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local ordinance allows for a de novo hearing on appeal where new evidence and testimony may be presented, it does not mean that a local government also intends to allow new issues to be raised that were not specified in the notice of appeal, when the local ordinance requires issues on appeal to be specified. Stricklin v. City of Astoria, 56 Or LUBA 535 (2008).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a county provides two rounds of appeals to the governing body, both rounds of appeals constitute as single proceeding, and the fact that the county did not require that petitioner pay a second appeal fee for the second appeal does not preclude petitioner from challenging imposition of the first appeal fee. Young v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 704 (2008).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where nothing in the county's code supports a claim that payment of a local appeal fee is a jurisdictional requirement, failure to pay the appeal fee is not grounds for dismissal of the appeal at the local level. Ratzlaff v. Polk County, 56 Or LUBA 740 (2008).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A local government correctly concludes that no timely local appeal of a building permit was filed where nothing in two letters sent to the city after the permit was granted indicated that the letters were intended to constitute appeals of the building permit. Ortman v. City of Forest Grove, 55 Or LUBA 426 (2007).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local government's adopted appeal procedure requires the city council to conduct a de novo hearing on appeal, the city council's interpretation of that provision to allow it to decide for itself whether the land use application that is the subject of the appeal complies with applicable standards must be affirmed. Contextual provisions that refer to city council review of the appealed decision are not sufficient to require that the city council limit its review to a review of the planning commission's decision on appeal. Burgess v. City of Corvallis, 55 Or LUBA 482 (2008).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 510, 79 P3d 382 (2003), does not hold that a requirement under local law that the issues to be considered in a local land use appeal must be specified in the notice of local appeal has the legal effect of limiting the local appellate body's authority to raise and consider issues sua sponte that are not specified in the notice of local appeal. The question of the legal effect of such a provision on the local appellate body's authority to raise and consider issues that go beyond the issues specified in the notice of local appeal sua sponte was specifically left open in Johns v. City of Lincoln City, 146 Or App 594, 602 n 1, 933 P2d 978 (1997), and was not addressed further in Miles. Burgess v. City of Corvallis, 55 Or LUBA 482 (2008).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A local government's interpretation of its code provisions governing appeals to require co-appellants to either submit the same appeal form and sign in the spaces provided on that form for "appellant" and "co-appellant," or file separate appeal fees, is reasonable. Yantis v. Josephine County, 55 Or LUBA 619 (2008).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. The general grant of authority in ORS 215.422(1)(c) does not impose a specific limit on local land use appeal fees, but ORS 215.416(11)(b) imposes a specific $250 dollar limit on local appeal fees that counties can charge for local appeal of a permit decision that is rendered initially without a hearing. For such appeals, the $250 dollar limit applies in place of the higher appeal fee that might otherwise be permissible under ORS 215.422(1)(c). Meadow Neighborhood Assoc. v. Washington County, 54 Or LUBA 124 (2007).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A local government errs in finding that an appeal of a denial of a sign permit involves only a "request for interpretation" rather than a "permit" to which the provisions of ORS 227.175(10) applied to require a de novo hearing that is not limited to issues raised by the appellant in an appeal statement. Lamar Advertising Company v. City of Eugene, 54 Or LUBA 295 (2007).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where petitioner does not challenge a city's findings that invoke a development code provision that allows the city community development director to change the review procedure that would otherwise apply where there is a "compelling public interest," LUBA will deny an assignment of error that challenges the community development director's decision to apply a different procedure that causes an appeal to go directly to the city council rather than to the planning commission. The development code provision need not be interpreted to prohibit a change the applicable review procedure after the city's deliberations on an application have begun. Wickham v. City of Grants Pass, 53 Or LUBA 261 (2007).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A city errs in dismissing as moot a local appeal of a decision revoking a conditional use permit after the permit holder informed the city that he no longer owns the subject property. While the revocation decision may or may not be enforceable against the new owner, dismissal of the local appeal leaves the revocation decision in effect. Merton v. City of Jefferson, 53 Or LUBA 559 (2007).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Absent a local provision or other authority that limits standing to appeal a permit revocation decision only to current owners of the property to which the permit applies, a city errs in dismissing the permit holder's local appeal of a permit revocation decision for lack of standing, solely because the permit holder informs the city that the property has been sold to a third party. Merton v. City of Jefferson, 53 Or LUBA 559 (2007).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the standard to refer a permit revocation request to a hearing is whether the petitioner has shown a "reasonable suspicion" to believe that a misrepresentation in the permit application was the "sole basis" for approval, because the ultimate standard (sole basis for approval) is so difficult to satisfy, application of the threshold "reasonable suspicion" standard to that ultimate standard makes it relatively difficult to obtain referral of a revocation request to a hearing. Emami v. City of Lake Oswego, 52 Or LUBA 18 (2006).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where no statute or other authority provides otherwise, a code provision that limits local appeal issues to those issues raised in the notice of local appeal also limits the issues that can be raised before LUBA. Ray v. Josephine County, 51 Or LUBA 443 (2006).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local appeal deadline is a mandatory standard, and planning staff provides erroneous information to petitioner regarding the local appeal deadline, petitioner's reliance on that information does not excuse petitioner's untimely filing of the local appeal. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 51 Or LUBA 602 (2006).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A local government's rejection of a local appeal may be a land use decision even if the underlying decision sought to be appealed would not itself be a land use decision. Wells v. Yamhill County, 51 Or LUBA 659 (2006).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A local government correctly interprets its zoning code only to allow local appeals of decisions that will constitute land use decisions when they become final. Wells v. Yamhill County, 51 Or LUBA 659 (2006).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. LUBA will not review an assignment of error alleging that a county improperly retained part of the petitioner's local appeal fee, where the county's alleged actions in retaining the fee postdate the challenged decision before LUBA and are embodied in a different decision that is not before LUBA. Sisters Forest Planning Comm. v. Deschutes County, 48 Or LUBA 78 (2004).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local government's code makes certain local appeal requirements "jurisdictional," or mandatory prerequisites to filing or maintaining an appeal, such code provisions authorize planning staff to reject or dismiss a local appeal that does not satisfy those requirements. Siuslaw Rod and Gun Club v. City of Florence, 48 Or LUBA 163 (2004).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local government code provides that failures to comply with three specified appeal requirements are "jurisdictional," i.e., will result in rejection or dismissal of the local appeal, but does not so provide with respect to other appeal requirements, the authority of planning staff to reject or dismiss the appeal for failure to comply with such "non-jurisdictional" appeal requirements is limited. Siuslaw Rod and Gun Club v. City of Florence, 48 Or LUBA 163 (2004).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local government code provides that the planning director will review "petitions" for missing information or fees, and give the petitioner written notice of the missing information or fees and an opportunity to cure, the planning director lacks authority to summarily dismiss a petition for local appeal for failure to provide required information or to pay required fees, without providing written notice and an opportunity to cure. Siuslaw Rod and Gun Club v. City of Florence, 48 Or LUBA 163 (2004).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local code appeal requirement merely requires that the local appellant include a "statement of interest of the person seeking review," the local government may not dismiss the local appeal because the local appellant does not demonstrate in the notice of local appeal that the appellant is "adversely affected or aggrieved." If a local appellant is going to be required to demonstrate he or she is adversely affected in the local notice of appeal, and is not going to be allowed an opportunity to make that demonstration at the statutorily required de novo hearing, the local code must make that requirement clear. Crowley v. City of Bandon, 48 Or LUBA 545 (2005).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local code requires that a local appellant state "specific grounds" for review, and the local appellant specifies some grounds for review, the local government errs in dismissing the local appeal. If the local government finds the stated grounds for review do not provide a basis for sustaining the appeal, it may deny the appeal, but it must first provide the statutorily required de novo appeal hearing. Crowley v. City of Bandon, 48 Or LUBA 545 (2005).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. By statute, an opportunity for a de novo appeal must be provided where a permit decision is made without first providing a hearing. ORS 227.175(10)(a)(E)(ii) provides that at the required de novo hearing "[t]he presentation of testimony, arguments and evidence shall not be limited to issues raised in a notice of appeal[.]" Under these statutes it is highly unlikely that the legislature could have intended that a city may dismiss a local appeal, without first providing a de novo hearing, simply because the appellant's local notice of appeal did not sufficiently identify the issues to be asserted on appeal. Crowley v. City of Bandon, 48 Or LUBA 545 (2005).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local government regulation requires the local appellate body to review the record of the decision under appeal and additionally consider any new evidence submitted into the record at the appeal hearing, the record of decision on appeal becomes part of the appellate body's record as a matter of law. Papadopoulos v. Benton County, 48 Or LUBA 634 (2004).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. The logic of the exhaustion requirement at ORS 197.825(2)(a) dictates that, where the local government determines that the petitioner failed to perfect an otherwise available local remedy, LUBA has no jurisdiction over an appeal of the underlying decision. Under such circumstances, petitioner's only recourse is to appeal the decision rejecting the local appeal and demonstrate to LUBA that the local government erred in determining that petitioner failed to perfect the local appeal. Siuslaw Rod and Gun Club v. City of Florence, 47 Or LUBA 615 (2004).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where two pages of legal argument are attached to a local appellant's jurisdictional statement of the grounds for local appeal, and the county refuses to consider those two pages simply because they are unsigned and include a non-appellant's fax header, the county commits error. Burke v. Crook County, 46 Or LUBA 413 (2004).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where local appellants (1) sign a local appeal form, (2) indicate "see attached" in the part of the appeal form where the grounds for the local appeal are to be specified, and (3) attach two pages that identify alleged legal errors in the decision, it is error for the county to refuse to consider the attached pages simply because there is no signature at the bottom of those pages and the pages include the fax header of a non-appellant. Burke v. Crook County, 46 Or LUBA 413 (2004).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. LUBA will not assume a county rejected a local appeal, where petitioner and the county dispute whether the county rejected petitioner's attempted local appeal or whether petitioner voluntarily withdrew his local appeal to correct identified deficiencies and later failed to refile the local appeal, and the record does not establish that the county rejected the local appeal. Burke v. Crook County, 46 Or LUBA 413 (2004).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a county's local appeal form invites five local appellants to utilize a single local appeal form and attach documents in support of the appeal to that local appeal form, the county may not impose additional signature and express incorporation requirements that are not reflected in the form to limit the right of individual local appellants to rely on attached documents to support their local appeal. Burke v. Crook County, 46 Or LUBA 413 (2004).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Once an administrative permit approval decision is appealed locally, ORS 227.175(10)(a)(A) and (D) require that a city provide a de novo appeal and a decision on that appeal. A city fails to provide the statutorily required de novo appeal when it relies on a committee rule that is not part of the zoning ordinance and was not adopted by the city council to decide that a 2-2 vote of the committee results in denial of the appeal. Hayden Island, Ltd. v. City of Portland, 46 Or LUBA 439 (2004).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a land use decision is rendered without a hearing and parties belatedly learn of the decision, ORS 197.830(3) provides a right of direct appeal to LUBA except where petitioners also seek and are granted a local appeal. Warf v. Coos County, 42 Or LUBA 84 (2002).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. ORS 197.830(4) applies where a local government is attempting to render a permit decision without a prior hearing pursuant to ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10). ORS 197.830(3) applies in all other cases where a local government adopts a decision without providing a hearing, including where the local government mistakenly believes its decision is not a discretionary "permit" decision and for that reason does not provide the required notice and opportunity for a local appeal. Warf v. Coos County, 42 Or LUBA 84 (2002).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a code criterion can be interpreted to impermissibly shift the burden of proof from an applicant to an appellant in a local land use appeal, but it is reasonably clear that the county did not apply the code criterion to shift the burden in that manner, petitioner's assignment of error that the county improperly shifted the burden of proof will be denied. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Grant County, 42 Or LUBA 9 (2002).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a board of commissioners declares that it is biased, recuses itself from an appeal of a hearings officer's land use decision, and designates a hearings officer's decision as the county's final decision, the hearings officer's decision may be appealed to LUBA, notwithstanding local code provisions that grant a party a right to a local appeal before the board of commissioners. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 41 Or LUBA 316 (2002).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. The right to an impartial tribunal will supersede petitioners' right to a local appeal, where denying the local appeal will not deprive petitioners of an opportunity to have a local decision reviewed on the merits. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 41 Or LUBA 316 (2002).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Local appeal provisions that require an appellant to specify issues in its notice of appeal to the city council have a preclusive effect on subsequent review only where the council recognizes and imposes that effect. Where the governing body appears to view petitioners' failure to specify an issue in the notice of appeal as giving the governing body the option to address or reject the issue, and the issue is then addressed, LUBA will not presume that the governing body assigned preclusive effect to petitioners' violation of the issue-specification provision. Pearl District Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 40 Or LUBA 436 (2001).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A determination that there is no further local appeal under a local government's code is a land use decision that may be challenged at LUBA. Robinson v. City of Silverton, 39 Or LUBA 792 (2001).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. LUBA will not dismiss an appeal for failure to exhaust local administrative remedies where the local code provisions regarding appeals are ambiguous and petitioner followed a directive in a planning commission notice of decision that appeals from its decision would be directly to LUBA. Mountain West Investment v. City of Silverton, 39 Or LUBA 788 (2001).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A local notice of appeal is inadequate to preserve a specific issue on appeal when the notice of appeal does not identify that issue, and the local ordinance requires that appeal issues be raised in the notice of appeal. Hausam v. City of Salem, 39 Or LUBA 51 (2000).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the city council is legally obligated to review the planning commission's legislative recommendation to adopt proposed land use regulations, petitioner is not required to perform the redundant task of appealing the planning commission's decision to the city council. Home Depot, Inc. v. City of Beaverton, 37 Or LUBA 1020 (2000).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the city council's review of a planning commission decision is limited to whether the lower decision is supported by substantial evidence, and petitioner argues that the city council exceeded its review authority by reweighing the evidence, LUBA will deny the assignment of error where it concludes that the city council understood and applied the substantial evidence standard correctly. Ontrack, Inc. v. City of Medford, 37 Or LUBA 472 (2000).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A local government is not estopped from following the appeal procedure that is required by its code where it is unclear whether county staff (1) made any false statements to the applicant concerning appeal procedures, (2) were aware that any of their representations were incorrect, or (3) intended that the applicant take any action based on such representations; and the applicant does not identify how she was induced to act differently by the county's representations. Lawrence v. Clackamas County, 36 Or LUBA 273 (1999).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a county code provision requires a de novo review and a hearings officer's decision includes language that suggests the hearings officer erroneously believed a de novo review was not required, there is no basis for reversal or remand where record makes it clear that the hearings officer nevertheless conducted the requisite de novo review. Lawrence v. Clackamas County, 36 Or LUBA 273 (1999).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A notice of local appeal is inadequate to raise an issue concerning a particular code provision where the code provision is not identified in the notice of local appeal. The fact that the notice uses some of the same words that are used in a document in the record that addresses that code criterion is not sufficient, in itself, to raise an issue concerning the code criterion. Johns v. City of Lincoln City, 35 Or LUBA 421 (1999).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where no code provision prohibits a planning commission from raising an issue on its own motion during a local appeal hearing and petitioner was aware of the issue prior to the hearing, the planning commission may raise the issue on its own motion. Johns v. City of Lincoln City, 35 Or LUBA 421 (1999).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. The applicant retains the burden of proof throughout the local process to demonstrate compliance with all applicable approval criteria. Rochlin v. Multnomah County, 35 Or LUBA 333 (1998).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local notice of appeal is sufficient to invoke the issue of compliance with a code criterion, the local notice of appeal is not required to also describe the precise ways in which the code criterion is allegedly violated. Johns v. City of Lincoln City, 34 Or LUBA 594 (1998).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local government decision maker commits a procedural error by failing to require a transcript of the proceedings below, but petitioner fails to demonstrate that failure prejudiced his substantial rights, the procedural error provides no basis for remand. Johns v. City of Lincoln City, 34 Or LUBA 594 (1998).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A city council's procedural error in failing to require preparation of a transcript of proceedings on remand before the planning commission cannot have any bearing on whether the challenged decision is supported by substantial evidence, where the proceedings on remand were on the record. Johns v. City of Lincoln City, 34 Or LUBA 594 (1998).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A county does not commit a procedural error where local ordinances allow the county to call up a hearings officer decision and refer it back for reconsideration without first providing an opportunity for a hearing. A party is not prejudiced by such a summary procedure where it is provided an opportunity to appeal the hearings officer's decision on reconsideration. R/C Pilots Association v. Marion County, 33 Or LUBA 532 (1997).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A city council may not convert an on-the-record quasi-judicial appeal of a planning commission decision into a de novo legislative hearing where the city code: (1) provides that legislative proceedings may only be commenced by the planning commission or city council, and the subject proceeding was initiated by an individual; (2) includes no provisions for converting a quasi-judicial appeal proceeding into a legislative proceeding; and (3) requires that appeals of planning commission quasi-judicial decisions be heard on the record. Anderson v. City of Shady Cove, 33 Or LUBA 173 (1997).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Because petitioners failed to demonstrate the county's announcement of a higher appeal fee two hours before the deadline for filing a local appeal precluded them from exercising their local appeal rights, they failed to show they exhausted their local administrative remedies, and LUBA must dismiss. Westall v. Polk County, 32 Or LUBA 443 (1997).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A petitioner is not required to go through the process of appealing from the county planning commission to the county board of commissioners to obtain a review the board of commissioners is already required by statute to give. Young v. Douglas County, 31 Or LUBA 545 (1996).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A county is not estopped from applying a provision providing that appeals to the board of commissioners are conducted on the record by a county employee's representation that the county has not consistently applied the provision. Canfield v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 25 (1996).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. If a city hearings officer issues an amended decision and the amendments are so integrated into the decision that a page-by-page review is required to locate them, petitioners may file a local appeal of the entire amended decision within the period allowed by local ordinance. Wilmington Neighbors v. City of Bend, 30 Or LUBA 415 (1996).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. When the city council did not attempt to limit the issues addressed by petitioner at a city council hearing on appeal from the planning commission, petitioner may raise at LUBA any issues raised before the city council. Thompson v. City of St. Helens, 30 Or LUBA 415 (1996).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A local government must make clear prior to the commencement of a local appeal period that a local appeal is available or it cannot contend that a petitioner who fails to appeal locally has not exhausted all local remedies. New v. Clackamas County, 30 Or LUBA 453 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. When county ordinance is unclear and county decision maker's remarks were self-contradictory and confusing as to whether a local appeal was available, a local appeal was not an available local remedy that petitioner was required to exhaust prior to appealing to LUBA. New v. Clackamas County, 30 Or LUBA 453 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where two separate ordinance provisions arguably establish two different deadlines for the filing of a local appeal, the more general ordinance provision is controlled by the more specific provision. Sparks v. City of Bandon, 30 Or LUBA 69 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Statute authorizing counties to establish local appeal fees and setting standards for the amount of fees does not require the county to evaluate each appeal to determine whether an appeal fee established by ordinance meets the statutory standard. ORS 215.422(1)(c). Cummings v. Tillamook County, 30 Or LUBA 17 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. An appeal to LUBA challenging the amount of a local appeal fee established by ordinance adopted under ORS 215.422(1)(c) amounts to an impermissible collateral attack on the fee ordinance. Cummings v. Tillamook County, 30 Or LUBA 17 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local regulation allows certain development applicants to apply for a waiver of their application fees, no interpretation of that regulation would allow a development opponent to qualify for a waiver of appeal fees, and to remand for such findings would be devoid of substantive purpose. Cummings v. Tillamook County, 30 Or LUBA 17 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. In the absence of county regulations under which petitioner could be granted an appeal fee waiver, the county was not required to accept petitioner's appeal without payment of required fees notwithstanding that the appeal was accompanied by a request for a waiver of fees. Cummings v. Tillamook County, 30 Or LUBA 17 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where petitioner challenges the method of calculating appeal fees as provided in the county's regulations and not the accuracy of the calculation or conformity with the regulations, the challenge constitutes an impermissible collateral attack on the regulation. Cummings v. Tillamook County, 30 Or LUBA 17 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Failure to waive a local appeal fee violates no federal constitutional rights of due process or access to the courts; ORS 215.422(1)(c) does not create a right to a free appeal. Cummings v. Tillamook County, 30 Or LUBA 17 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Under ORS 215.422(1)(a), a county is not required to accept a local appeal if it is filed after the deadline stated in the county ordinance. Hick v. Marion County, 30 Or LUBA 1 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. When the city zoning ordinance makes final approval of a tentative subdivision plan a limited land use decision appealable to LUBA, a decision applying the ordinance is not a "tentative decision" that can be appealed locally at a hearing pursuant to ORS 227.175(10). Azevedo v. City of Albany, 29 Or LUBA 516 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. The purpose of ORS 197.825(2)(a) is to assure a local government decision is reviewed by the highest-level local decision-making body that the local code makes available, and a party's failure to exercise a right to a local appeal is grounds for dismissal of that party's appeal to LUBA. Shaffer v. City of Salem, 29 Or LUBA 479 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A party's fear that a local appeal would be futile does not excuse the party's failure to make the appeal, for purposes of determining whether local remedies have been exhausted. Shaffer v. City of Salem, 29 Or LUBA 479 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. When the city planning manager rejects a local appeal without a hearing, adversely affecting a party's interests, and the local zoning ordinance establishes a procedure for appeals to the city council of land use decisions for which the ordinance provides no right to notice of a hearing, the party has an unqualified right to appeal the planning manager's decision to the city council. Shaffer v. City of Salem, 29 Or LUBA 479 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. When petitioners fail to satisfy the county's jurisdictional appeal provision requiring local appellants to state the basis of their standing, the county is not at liberty to take notice of petitioners' standing or to excuse their failure satisfy the requirement as "harmless error." Tipton v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 474 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. When a county zoning ordinance provision states that a local appeal will be dismissed if the requirements of the provision are not satisfied, the provision is jurisdictional. An appellant's failure to satisfy a jurisdictional requirement results in dismissal of the appeal. Tipton v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 474 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. LUBA will defer to the local governing body's interpretation that under its code provisions governing permits for the demolition of historic properties, the planning director's determination regarding compliance with pre-application requirements is not reviewable by the historic review board or appealable to the governing body. Save Amazon Coalition v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 238 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Although ORS 197.825(2)(a) requires that local appeals be exhausted, the fact that the local code may limit the scope of review of a local appellate body in considering a local appeal does not similarly limit LUBA's scope of review. Save Amazon Coalition v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 238 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local governing body improperly accepts potentially relevant new evidence while conducting an on-the-record review of a lower level decision maker's decision, and does not provide petitioners an opportunity to rebut that new evidence, petitioners' substantial rights are prejudiced, and the local government's decision must be remanded. Penland v. Josephine County, 29 Or LUBA 213 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A hearings officer's decision to approve a zone change and planned unit development is a land use decision. Therefore, a planning department decision not to accept petitioner's local appeal of that decision is not subject to the ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) exception to LUBA's jurisdiction for "ministerial" decisions. Ramsey v. City of Portland, 29 Or LUBA 139 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A local government may interpret relevant code provisions to require that either (1) the required appeal fee, or (2) a fee waiver previously approved by the planning director, be included in a local appeal when it is filed. In such circumstance, it is a local appellant's responsibility to obtain approval of a fee waiver request prior to submitting an appeal. Ramsey v. City of Portland, 29 Or LUBA 139 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Petitioner's contention that the fee charged for a local appeal violates ORS 227.180(1)(c) must fail where there is no evidence in the record establishing that the local appeal fee is unreasonable or that it exceeds the average or actual cost of such an appeal, and petitioner does not move for an evidentiary hearing to submit such evidence. Ramsey v. City of Portland, 29 Or LUBA 139 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where petitioner appeals a decision by a local governing body not to accept petitioner's appeal of a planning commission decision, LUBA's scope of review is limited to whether the governing body correctly decided not to accept petitioner's local appeal. LUBA will not review the merits of the planning commission decision. Cummings v. Tillamook County, 29 Or LUBA 550 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. The city council must provide an appeal of a planning commission decision to approve a building permit, regardless of whether the planning commission was the proper body to approve a building permit, where the planning commission in fact approves the building permit and the zoning code provides that "any action of the planning commission pursuant to [the zoning code] may be appealed to the city council." Mills v. City of Yachats, 29 Or LUBA 1 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. The exception to LUBA's jurisdiction in ORS 197.015(10)(b) does not apply where applicable local code standards concerning the timely filing of a local appeal require interpretation and the exercise of legal judgment. Hick v. Marion County, 28 Or LUBA 782 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local governing body is authorized to limit issues on appeal to issues raised before the planning commission but the local government failed to keep an adequate record of the planning commission proceedings, and LUBA cannot determine whether the governing body correctly limited its review to two particular issues, LUBA will remand the governing body's decision. Andrews v. City of Prineville, 28 Or LUBA 653 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A local governing body may interpret a code requirement that "[b]efore granting any appeal, [the governing body] shall make findings of fact, setting forth wherein the planning commission's findings were in error," to allow the governing body to substitute its judgment for that of the planning commission on questions of fact or law, and to find the planning commission erred because it relied on different evidence or reached a different conclusion than did the governing body. Horizon Construction, Inc. v. City of Newberg, 28 Or LUBA 632 (1995).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Although a local government is free to adopt local code provisions narrowing the scope of review in local appeal proceedings, such local code provisions do not have the legal effect of limiting LUBA's scope of review. ONRC v. City of Oregon City, 28 Or LUBA 263 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a planning director exercises discretion in applying the local code and correctly rejecting an attempted local appeal as untimely filed, the decision to reject the attempted local appeal is a land use decision, and the proper disposition of a LUBA appeal challenging that decision is to affirm the decision rather than to dismiss the LUBA appeal. Kevedy, Inc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 227 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local code explicitly provides that a tie vote of the decision making body means the appealed decision of a lower level decision maker stands, the general rule that a tie vote of a decision maker amounts to a failure of the applicant to carry the burden of proof does not apply. Derry v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 212 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local code neither expressly allows a local appellant to withdraw his appeal of a planning commission decision to the governing body, nor expressly provides the governing body retains jurisdiction over such an appeal once filed, a local government acts within its interpretive discretion under ORS 197.829 in concluding that it retains jurisdiction over such an appeal notwithstanding the local appellant's attempt unilaterally to withdraw the appeal. Davis v. City of Bandon, 28 Or LUBA 38 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. The record of a challenged local governing body decision includes the record of the planning commission proceeding on the subject application if either (1) the planning commission record was actually placed before the governing body, or (2) local code provisions require that the planning commission record be made part of the record before the governing body as a matter of law. Salem Golf Club v. City of Salem, 27 Or LUBA 715 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a county code allows a "permit" decision to be made without a hearing, but provides for a local appeal only by the permit applicant, ORS 215.416(11) nevertheless requires the county to provide an opportunity to obtain a hearing through an appeal to persons who would have had a right to notice if a hearing had been scheduled and who are adversely affected or aggrieved by the decision. In these circumstances, a county does not err by allowing such persons to pursue a local appeal. McKenzie v. Multnomah County, 27 Or LUBA 523 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local code makes payment of a local appeal fee, "as specified by the Planning Director," a jurisdictional requirement, so long as the local appellant pays the fee specified by the director there is no jurisdictional defect, regardless of whether the director made a mistake in calculating the amount of the appeal fee. McKenzie v. Multnomah County, 27 Or LUBA 523 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local code provides for an initial decision on a permit application without a hearing, subject to obtaining a hearing through a de novo local appeal, regardless of a code requirement that the bases for appeal be specified in the local notice of appeal, the local appellant is entitled to raise any relevant issue during the local appeal. McKenzie v. Multnomah County, 27 Or LUBA 523 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Even after an initial local government decision is made approving a permit application, and a local appeal is filed, the applicant has the burden of establishing that the proposal satisfies relevant approval standards. McKenzie v. Multnomah County, 27 Or LUBA 523 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Although a local governing body may be authorized to conduct a de novo review of a development application, its refusal to allow petitioner to submit the planning commission decision and staff report on the subject application into the record as relevant evidence prejudices petitioner's substantial right to submit evidence. Furler v. Curry County, 27 Or LUBA 497 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local code explicitly establishes a right to a local appeal only for decisions made pursuant to certain procedures set out in the code, a the local government's interpretation that no local appeal is available if the decision sought to be appealed was not made through those procedures is not clearly wrong, and LUBA will defer to it. Forest Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 215 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a permit applicant receives a public hearing and decision from a local government and, under the local code, an appeal to the governing body may be decided without further public hearing, the governing body commits no error by denying the applicant's appeal at a public meeting without further notice or public hearing. Van Veldhuizen v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 468 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local code provides a possibility of, but not a right to, a second public hearing on appeal of a hearings officer's decision, the appeal may be denied without providing an additional public hearing, and the code need not include standards for determining whether to grant an additional public hearing. Van Veldhuizen v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 468 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local governing body has not adopted regulations providing for reconsideration of its decisions, the governing body commits no error by denying a request to reconsider a decision, where the request was received after the final written order is entered. Van Veldhuizen v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 468 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local code makes filing a transcript of the initial local hearing an essential part of perfecting a local appeal, and contains no provision providing procedures or standards for granting an extension of time to file such transcript, LUBA will affirm a local government's decision to dismiss a local appeal because the transcript was not filed within the required time. Bjerk v. Deschutes County, 26 Or LUBA 439 (1994).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. LUBA's scope of review is determined by ORS 197.835 and 197.763(1). That local government regulations may allow or require the local governing body's scope of review to be narrowed during local appeals does not similarly narrow LUBA's scope of review. Cummings v. Tillamook County, 26 Or LUBA 139 (1993).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Although a local appellant may have the burden under local code provisions of demonstrating error in a lower local decision maker's decision, the applicant for permit approval retains the burden of proof concerning compliance with all applicable approval criteria throughout the local appeals process. Mohler v. Josephine County, 26 Or LUBA 1 (1993).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. The failure to initiate a timely local rehearing process is not a procedural defect which LUBA may overlook if no prejudice is shown. Rochlin v. Multnomah County, 25 Or LUBA 637 (1993).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. An interpretation of local code provisions, that the local appeal time runs from the date the decision is mailed to parties, is not clearly wrong, and LUBA will defer to it. Choban v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 572 (1993).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local code states that "failure to comply with this subsection shall be a jurisdictional defect," and a local appellant fails to establish compliance with that subsection, the local government is free to interpret its code to require dismissal of the local appeal, and LUBA will defer to that interpretation. DLCD v. Wasco County, 25 Or LUBA 529 (1993).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local code does not either specifically prohibit or allow the filing of appeals and appeal fees by facsimile, it is not "clearly wrong" for the local government to determine that a local appeal is not properly filed under the local code where both appeal fees and the appeal document itself are filed by facsimile. DLCD v. Wasco County, 25 Or LUBA 529 (1993).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A permit approval condition that amendments to the approved master plan must be approved by the planning department is not inconsistent with, and does not eliminate, the right established by the local code to appeal a decision by the planning director on such an administrative action to the planning commission. Frankton Neigh. Assoc. v. Hood River County, 25 Or LUBA 386 (1993).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where one code provision requires a local government's notice of decision to identify the local appeal fee, and another provision states that failure to pay the proper local appeal fee prior to expiration of the period for filing an appeal constitutes a "jurisdictional" defect, the local government may interpret the two code provisions together to mean that the period for filing an appeal does not begin to run until the required notice of decision, identifying the proper appeal fee, is provided to the appealing party. Reusser v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 252 (1993).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where parties object that petitioner failed to properly perfect its local appeal, but the local government nevertheless allows the local appeal, petitioner satisfies the requirement that it exhaust available administrative remedies, as ORS 197.825(2)(a) requires. Although the local government may have committed reversible error in considering the local appeal, LUBA has jurisdiction to review the local government's final decision. Miller v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 169 (1993).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where an applicant neither files its own appeal of the local governing body's decision granting the requested development approval nor files a cross-petition for review in the LUBA appeal filed by the opponents, the question of whether a local appeal by the opponents should have been dismissed by the governing body is not properly presented to LUBA. Miller v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 169 (1993).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local code provides that a conditional use permit expires one year after it is approved, unless construction occurs demonstrating the CUP has been "used," and where the code also prohibits the local government from issuing building or other permits required for construction until appeals have been "completed," the running of the one-year period for "using" a conditional use permit is tolled during those periods of time when a building or other permit necessary to "use" the conditional use permit cannot properly be issued due to an appeal. Weeks v. City of Tillamook, 24 Or LUBA 155 (1992).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local planning official refuses to accept petitioner's local appeal of a hearings officer's decision on a permit application, but another local appeal of the same decision is processed, the refusal is either (1) a final land use decision, in which case a NITA must be timely filed with LUBA; or (2) part of the ongoing local proceedings on the subject application, in which case in an appeal of the local government's final decision, LUBA can only consider issues concerning the refusal to accept petitioner's appeal if those issues were raised below. Wilson Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 24 Or LUBA 98 (1992).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local code provision clearly requires that in the event a decision maker's initial decision is modified by a subsequent decision after an appeal of the initial decision is filed, the appellant must file an appeal of the modified decision; an appellant may not simply rely upon the previously filed appeal of the initial decision. Breivogel v. Washington County, 24 Or LUBA 63 (1992).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where neither the local code nor or any statute creates a "duty" on the part of a local government to advise local appellants of local appeal requirements stated in the local code itself, that the county provided petitioners with a detailed information sheet concerning local appeals which did not indicate the existence of the county's "jurisdictional" requirement that a local appeal document be signed, provides no basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision. Breivogel v. Washington County, 24 Or LUBA 63 (1992).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Even though petitioners may have complied with the "spirit" of a local jurisdictional signature requirement by having identified the local appellants in the appeal document, LUBA may not disregard petitioners' failure to comply with the jurisdictional signature requirement. Breivogel v. Washington County, 24 Or LUBA 63 (1992).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where local code provisions governing appeals state the governing body may "affirm, reverse or modify in whole or in part, any decision * * * of the planning commission," the code does not limit the governing body's scope of review to issues raised in the notice of appeal of a planning commission decision. Horizon Construction, Inc. v. City of Newberg, 23 Or LUBA 159 (1992).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. A local code jurisdictional requirement that the local appeal document, which under the code includes the required appeal fee, be "signed" but which does not state where such signature must be located, is satisfied by the local appellant's signature on his personal check submitted as the filing fee. Breivogel v. Washington County, 23 Or LUBA 143 (1992).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. In a local appeal of an initial local decision maker's decision approving an application for land use approval, the applicant retains the burden of proof. However, the opponents of the application also have a burden in the local appeal, in that unless they are able to convince the appellate decision maker that the initial decision maker erred, the appellate decision maker may affirm that earlier decision or adopt it as its own. Coonse v. Crook County, 22 Or LUBA 138 (1991).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Persons within sight and sound of a development proposal are presumed to be adversely affected by it. Kamppi v. City of Salem, 21 Or LUBA 498 (1991).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Even where the local code provides for the type of de novo review in which the governing body develops its own evidentiary record and renders its decision based on that new record, the code may require that the planning commission record be included as part of the evidentiary record before the governing body in its de novo review proceeding. Union Gospel Ministries, 21 Or LUBA 580 (1991).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local code gives "aggrieved parties" the right to appeal a decision, but does not require notice and a hearing prior to making that decision, petitioners were not given an opportunity to become "aggrieved parties" and therefore had no local remedies to exhaust. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 21 Or LUBA 515 (1991).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local code vests total discretion to refuse to reconsider a decision with the local decision maker, it is not error for the decision maker to refuse to reconsider a disputed decision. West v. Clackamas County, 20 Or LUBA 433 (1991).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. If the local code states that certain provisions are applicable where the governing body assumes jurisdiction, on its own motion, to review a decision of a lower body, those provisions do not apply to appeals of such decisions initiated by persons other than the governing body. Adams v. Jackson County, 20 Or LUBA 398 (1991).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. In a de novo local appeal of an inferior tribunal's decision granting land use approval, the applicant retains its burden of proof before the appellate tribunal. Strawn v. City of Albany, 20 Or LUBA 344 (1990).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local government provides for de novo review of an inferior tribunal's decision, the applicant must carry the burden of proof before the appellate tribunal. If the appellate tribunal is unable to agree on a decision, the applicant is deemed to have failed to carry its burden of proof, whether or not the applicant prevailed before the inferior tribunal. Strawn v. City of Albany, 20 Or LUBA 344 (1990).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where a local code provides that (1) planning commission decisions become final 10 days after they are filed with the clerk, unless the governing body orders review; and (2) a governing body order for review must be made at the governing body's next meeting concerning land use matters; then a planning commission decision is not final if the governing body adopts an order for review at such meeting, even if the order is adopted more than 10 days after the planning commission's decision was filed. Forest Park Estate v. Multnomah County, 20 Or LUBA 319 (1990).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the county charter and code grant the county administrator broad administrative powers, but do not explicitly grant the county administrator authority to determine whether decisions are appealable under the county code, LUBA will accept the county's interpretation of the charter and code as granting the administrator such authority, so long as that interpretation is not inconsistent with the charter and code. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 20 Or LUBA 208 (1990).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. The applicant for land use approval has the burden of proof that applicable approval standards are met; an opponent is not obligated to prove such standards are not met. Local code provisions which require that an appellant identify the reasons for an appeal, and alter the order in which parties present argument and evidence, do not impermissibly alter the burden of proof regarding compliance with applicable approval standards. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Benton County, 20 Or LUBA 7 (1990).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where petitioners' local notice of review specifically identifies as the subject of the appeal a building permit (the only local government decision concerning the proposed use of which petitioners were aware), but also indicated an intent to request review of any local decision authorizing the proposed use, LUBA will interpret petitioners' local notice of review to appeal both the building permit and an earlier zoning clearance decision required for issuance of the building permit. Komning v. Grant County, 20 Or LUBA 481 (1990).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local code states that a person may appeal to the planning commission from "a decision" made pursuant to the code by the planning director, all decisions made by the planning director, whether ministerial or discretionary, are appealable to the planning commission. Komning v. Grant County, 20 Or LUBA 481 (1990).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where petitioners were entitled under ORS 215.416(11) to written notice of a local permit decision made without a hearing, and such written notice was not given, the time for filing petitioners' local appeal did not begin to run and, therefore, their subsequent appeal to the planning commission was timely filed. Komning v. Grant County, 20 Or LUBA 481 (1990).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where the local code requires that the governing body remand an appeal to the planning commission if evidence is presented which could not have been presented to the planning commission, and parties offer to the governing body relevant evidence that the planning commission refused to consider, it is error for the governing body not to remand the appeal to the planning commission to consider such evidence. Bloomer v. Baker County, 19 Or LUBA 319 (1990).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. The local governing body has the authority to conduct either an evidentiary or on the record de novo review of planning commission decisions in circumstances where local ordinances are silent on the scope of review. Murphey v. City of Ashland, 19 Or LUBA 182 (1990).

25.4.7 Local Government Procedures – Compliance with Local Ordinances/Regs – Appeal Requirements. Where petitioner was not given notice of the city council's de novo scope of review in appeals of planning commission decisions, but the city council continued its hearing to provide an opportunity for parties to submit evidence, petitioner's substantial rights were not prejudiced by the procedural error. Murphey v. City of Ashland, 19 Or LUBA 182 (1990).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A condition of approval requiring that an applicant construct a proposed fence between a proposed trail and adjoining farms; specifying only that the proposed fence must be "capable of preventing dogs and people from entering adjacent farm fields"; punting all determinations regarding fence design, materials, construction, etc. to a subsequent master planning process that offers no opportunity for a public hearing or other public input; and allowing adjacent landowners to opt out of installing a fence on their property line is inadequate where the county relies on the proposed fence to address a wide variety of different potential impacts, which might require different fence designs, materials, construction techniques, and maintenance routines in order to ensure that the trail will not cause significant impacts on farm practices for purposes of the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1). Such a condition is also not clear and objective for purposes of ORS 215.296(2). Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 348 (2019).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where a local code provision requires a finding that "[t]he proposed use is appropriate, considering the adequacy of public facilities and services existing or planned for the area affected by the use," and where the record includes undisputed expert testimony that fire and emergency access are inadequate unless a proposed trail and its bridges are built to certain standards, it is insufficient for the local government to state, without any supporting evidence, that it is "feasible" to design the trail and bridges to provide adequate fire and emergency access and then punt all determinations regarding trail and bridge design to a subsequent master planning process. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 348 (2019).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A county may not defer a determination of compliance with applicable approval criteria to a future proceeding that does not allow for public participation merely because the deferred criteria require no interpretation or judgment. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A county may not defer a determination of compliance with applicable approval criteria to a future proceeding that does not allow for public participation merely because the deferred criteria require no interpretation or judgment. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where a local code provision requires applicants for destination resorts to demonstrate that "[a]ny negative impact on fish and wildlife resources will be completely mitigated so that there is no net loss or net degradation of the resource," where a proposed resort's consumptive use of groundwater is anticipated to impact the quantity and quality of water in an offsite stream, and where the applicant's final master plan includes a mitigation plan requiring the applicant to replace the water consumed by the resort with a quantity and quality of water that will maintain fish habitat in the stream, the local government may not impose a condition of approval allowing the applicant to demonstrate that the source of the mitigation water provides the requisite quantity and quality of water at a later date without review or input by interested persons. Gould v. Deschutes County, 79 Or LUBA 561 (2019).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. LUBA will reject a county's interpretation of its code—that a code provision which sets forth approval criteria regarding an application for a variance to the minimum lot size requirements within the county's urban growth area may not apply to the county's decision because it only applies to decisions made by the county's planning director but not to decisions made by the planning commission or board of county commissioners—that was made for the first time in its response brief, because that interpretation is not reflected in the decision and is therefore not an interpretation by the local government. City of Albany v. Linn County, 78 Or LUBA 1 (2018).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. ORS 215.050 and 215.060 require the county governing body to approve revisions to the comprehensive plan and to conduct at least one hearing on proposed revisions. A county violates ORS 215.050 and 215.060, where on remand of an initial governing body decision approving plan amendments, the governing body delegates to a hearings officer final decision-making authority and the conduct of the only hearing, and on remand the hearings officer approves new comprehensive plan amendments that the governing body did not consider in the governing body's initial decision leading to the appeal to LUBA. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A county governing body's consent agenda "ratification" of a hearings officer's decision approving comprehensive plan amendments is insufficient to comply with ORS 215.050 and 215.060, which require the county governing body to approve comprehensive plan amendments and to conduct at least one hearing on proposed amendments. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where a county code provides a methodology for interpreting ambiguous code provisions, and provides that the "Planning Official shall interpret the meaning of the term," that provision does not operate as a delegation of exclusive interpretative authority to the Planning Official, or require the county governing body to defer to the Planning Official's interpretation. Stevens v. City of Island City, 71 Or LUBA 275 (2015).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where the city code makes the planning commission the city's final decision maker, but limits the planning commission's review on appeal to errors committed by the hearings officer, the planning commission lacks authority to consider legal challenges to the city's appeal fee. In that circumstance, LUBA lacks authority to reverse or remand the planning commission decision to the planning commission based on a legal challenge to the city's local appeal fee. Treadmill Joint Venture v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 213 (2012).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where a city zoning ordinance delegates authority to a hearings official to "interpret" the zoning ordinance, the hearings official does not err by interpreting that delegation not to authorize the hearings official to declare city land use legislation ineffective to achieve the purpose it was clearly adopted to accomplish. Such a request is not a request for an "interpretation." Goodpasture Partners LLC v. City of Eugene, 64 Or LUBA 258 (2011).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where a city zoning ordinance delegates authority to a hearings official to "interpret" the zoning ordinance, without expressly limiting such interpretations to ambiguous zoning text, that delegation nevertheless does not authorize the hearings official to interpret unambiguous zoning text to say what it does not say. Goodpasture Partners LLC v. City of Eugene, 64 Or LUBA 258 (2011).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. An ordinance does not improperly delegate legislative responsibility to a city manager to exercise in administrative rulemaking, where that delegation was accomplished by an earlier unappealed ordinance. Any allegedly improper adoption of legislation via rulemaking in a future action by the city manager may be challenged at the time that future rulemaking occurs. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 116 (2009).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A county errs in failing to address whether a mitigation plan for a destination resort is consistent with applicable comprehensive plan policies governing wildlife protection, and instead finding that issues raised regarding compliance with those policies will be addressed by requiring the applicant to obtain approval of the plan from the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Absent a code provision to the contrary, a governing body does not exceed its authority in an appeal of a planning commission decision by approving a modification of the development application that the planning commission did not consider, and does not commit procedural error in doing so if all participants were provided an opportunity to present argument and evidence on the proposed modification. O'Rourke v. Union County, 54 Or LUBA 614 (2007).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where planning staff prepare a final written decision based on an oral decision by the governing body, the far better practice is to have the governing body review and approve the final written decision prior to its issuance, rather than have staff sign and issue the written decision, to avoid potential inconsistencies between the oral decision and the final written decision. O'Rourke v. Union County, 54 Or LUBA 614 (2007).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A local government errs in deferring a requirement for submission of a geotechnical analysis to a later stage of the proceedings that does not provide for notice or hearing. Township 13 Homeowners Assoc. v. City of Waldport, 53 Or LUBA 250 (2007).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. LUBA will reject a petitioner's argument that a city adjustment committee erred by failing to find that the zoning of a property reverted to its prior zoning because a rezoning condition of approval was violated, where petitioner fails to cite any authority to contradict the city's position that the adjustment committee lacks authority to question the zoning shown on the city's official zoning map. O'Brien v. City of Portland, 52 Or LUBA 113 (2006).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. When a city steps into the shoes of a county to make land use decisions pursuant to an intergovernmental agreement, unless some controlling authority specifies otherwise, the resulting decision on behalf of the county is subject to the statutes applicable to counties rather than those applicable to cities. Stoloff v. City of Portland, 51 Or LUBA 560 (2006).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where a county code requires the "development proposal" to include a survey and assessment of archaeological sites and, if indicated, a management plan, a condition requiring that a management plan be completed prior to final plat approval is not permissible where neither the code nor the condition provides an opportunity for public participation in final plat approvals. Nez Perce Tribe v. Wallowa County, 47 Or LUBA 419 (2004).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A local government may defer a determination that an application to site a dwelling in a forest zone complies with certain siting criteria, provided the local government allows petitioner and other interested parties an opportunity to participate in the proceedings where that determination is made. Hodge Oregon Properties, LLC v. Lincoln County, 46 Or LUBA 290 (2004).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A local government's decision that it is feasible to satisfy an approval criterion that a private road can be dedicated to the public, by imposing conditions of approval, is supported by substantial evidence where: (1) the underlying easement requires a public dedication upon request; (2) the ownership of all property underlying the proposed road is demonstrated; and (3) all owners are bound by the public dedication request. Sisters Forest Planning Comm. v. Deschutes County, 45 Or LUBA 145 (2003).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Even though a local government may be in a position to require a modified application, that does not mean it must do so, when a condition of approval requiring submission of a revised plat neither constitutes procedural error nor prejudices a party's substantial rights. Sisters Forest Planning Comm. v. Deschutes County, 45 Or LUBA 145 (2003).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A prerequisite for application of the deferential standard of review under ORS 197.829(1) is, at a minimum, a written decision or document adopted by the governing body that contains an express or implicit interpretation of a local provision that is adequate for review. A city attorney's interpretation of a local provision is not entitled to deference under that standard, even assuming that the city council informally directed the city attorney to apply that interpretation in denying the challenged building permits. West Coast Media v. City of Gladstone, 44 Or LUBA 503 (2003).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where a hearings officer finds that it is feasible to comply with an approval standard, and imposes conditions to ensure compliance, the issue becomes whether that finding is adequate and supported by substantial evidence, not whether the hearings officer improperly deferred a finding of compliance to a later review stage. The fact that the hearings officer addresses the possibility that the solution found to be feasible might not work, and finds that if so DEQ would require that the project be scaled back, does not mean that the hearings officer deferred a finding of compliance with the approval standard or impermissibly delegated that finding to DEQ. Baker v. Lane County, 43 Or LUBA 493 (2003).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where a board of commissioners declares that it is biased, recuses itself from an appeal of a hearings officer's land use decision, and designates a hearings officer's decision as the county's final decision, the hearings officer's decision may be appealed to LUBA, notwithstanding local code provisions that grant a party a right to a local appeal before the board of commissioners. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 41 Or LUBA 316 (2002).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where the local government adopts a finding of current compliance and imposes conditions to ensure compliance with an approval criterion, that those conditions require additional informal review by local government staff does not mean that the local government has impermissibly "deferred" a finding of compliance with that criterion to a later stage without notice or hearing. Friends of Collins View v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 261 (2002).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A city rezoning decision conditioned on the applicant providing a geotechnical report and allowing the city to retain an independent engineer to ensure adequate monitoring and mitigation of environmental hazards during construction as part of the site development permit process, which does not provide for public hearings, does not defer discretionary decision making to a later stage of review. In that circumstance, the conditions are properly viewed as being designed to support the city's threshold finding that environmental hazards on the subject property do not impact adjoining properties in violation of comprehensive plan objectives. Neighbors for Livability v. City of Beaverton, 40 Or LUBA 52 (2001).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A planned unit development (PUD) condition of approval that requires a future variance for a long cul-de-sac does not constitute an improper deferral of decision making to a later stage where the applicable variance procedures will provide substantially the same full opportunity for public involvement that would have been provided had the variance been adopted prior to or as part of the challenged PUD decision. Dept. of Transportation v. City of Eugene, 38 Or LUBA 814 (2000).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Under ORS 215.406, which authorizes a county governing body to appoint a hearings officer, the county governing body may use a planning commission or itself as the hearings officer. Crook v. Curry County, 38 Or LUBA 677 (2000).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A finding of feasibility of compliance with a code standard requiring adequate fire protection, conditioned on the fire marshal's written approval of a proposed emergency turnaround, does not impermissibly defer a finding of compliance with that standard to a second stage of review that fails to provide notice and opportunity for hearing, where the finding of feasibility of compliance is based on evidence that the proposed emergency turnaround is acceptable to the fire marshal. Mitchell v. Washington County, 37 Or LUBA 452 (2000).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where the existence or extent of an access is disputed, and an approval criterion requires demonstration of access, that criterion may be satisfied by a condition of approval that access be confirmed by an agreement of the parties or circuit court declaratory relief. Such a condition is not an impermissible delegation of authority. Highland Condominium Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 37 Or LUBA 13 (1999).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A county governing body does not exceed its interpretive discretion in interpreting a zoning ordinance provision that delegates responsibility to the planning director to interpret the zoning ordinance as not preventing the governing body from interpreting the comprehensive plan in the first instance following an appeal of a planning director decision to the planning commission and the county governing body. Columbia Hills Development Co. v. Columbia County, 36 Or LUBA 691 (1999).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where a local government approves a preliminary planned unit development application based on findings of current compliance with applicable criteria, an argument that the local government impermissibly deferred findings of compliance with applicable criteria to a second stage of review where notice and hearing requirements are not observed is more appropriately framed as an inquiry into whether the findings of current compliance are adequate and supported by substantial evidence. Salo v. City of Oregon City, 36 Or LUBA 415 (1999).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Approval of a 15-lot, multi-family dwelling development based on a site plan for only four of the 15 lots with a condition that the complete site plan be submitted later, impermissibly defers findings of compliance with approval criteria to a later stage without an opportunity for a hearing or a current finding that compliance with approval criteria is feasible. Deal v. City of Hermiston, 35 Or LUBA 16 (1998).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A local government may approve a partition and defer determination of an applicable approval criterion, provided the subsequent approval process provides the same notice and opportunity for public input as the original proceeding and the approval criteria are not so dependent on each other that they must be applied together. Sunningdale-Case Heights Assoc. v. Washington Co., 34 Or LUBA 549 (1998).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where an applicable approval criterion requires storm drainage plans that meet certain standards, the local government may not approve a land division without such storm drainage plans, or without finding that such plans are feasible and delegating the required evaluation to a sewerage agency. Sunningdale-Case Heights Assoc. v. Washington Co., 34 Or LUBA 549 (1998).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A local code provision requiring an "adequate turnaround" is not satisfied by deferring the decision concerning the design of the turnaround to the fire district where (1) there will be no opportunity for public comment or a hearing, and (2) designs required by the fire district will require adjustments to or elimination of one or more lots. Tenly Properties Corp. v. Washington County, 34 Or LUBA 352 (1998).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. In order for a county to find it is feasible to comply with a code requirement for an "adequate turnaround," it must have a proposed turnaround to review. The county may not defer development and approval of a proposed turnaround to a later stage where there is no opportunity for public hearing. Tenly Properties Corp. v. Washington County, 34 Or LUBA 352 (1998).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Because a county's interpretation of its code to allow deferral of compliance with an approval criterion to a later stage with no opportunity for public hearing is contrary to ORS 197.763(2) and 215.416, LUBA owes that interpretation no deference under ORS 197.829(1). Tenly Properties Corp. v. Washington County, 34 Or LUBA 352 (1998).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. Where the county code specifically authorizes the board of commissioners to make the initial determination on a land use application, the board of commissioners had jurisdiction to initially consider and approve a floodplain permit application, regardless of other code provisions stating the planning commission should make the initial determination on such applications. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 281 (1995).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. A city may not delegate the responsibilities associated with the administration and collection of assessments to improve streets to the city's public street standards to private parties. Beck v. City of Happy Valley, 27 Or LUBA 631 (1994).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. ORS 197.190(1) and 268.285(1) both require that a Metropolitan Service District decision to coordinate be an action taken "through its governing body." Where the product of a Metro sponsored mediation is not formally adopted by the Metro governing body, it does not constitute an exercise of Metro's coordination obligation under those statutes. City of Portland v. Washington County, 27 Or LUBA 176 (1994).

25.5 Local Government Procedures – Delegation of Authority. When conducting a multi-stage permit approval process, if a local government finds compliance, or feasibility of compliance, with all approval criteria during the first stage (where statutory notice and public hearing requirements are observed), it is entirely appropriate to impose conditions of approval to assure those criteria are met and to defer responsibility for assuring compliance with those conditions to planning and engineering staff as part of a later stage. Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where a local government requires opponents to be represented at a hearing by one spokesperson, their attorney, and prohibits oral testimony from the opponents themselves, and where the local government makes express and repeated findings that the opponents' written testimony is not credible or not supported when viewed through the "obscured" lens of the local government's judgement of the opponents' attorney's credibility, LUBA will conclude that the local government's procedure prejudiced the opponents' substantial rights to submit their case and to receive a full and fair hearing. Schrepel v. Yamhill County, 81 Or LUBA 895 (2020).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. While ORS 197.763(6)(a) does not require "magic words" for a party to exercise their right to have either the record held open or the hearing continued, where the local government provides notice of that right at the beginning of the hearing, a process question about whether a request for a continuance or to keep the record open can be made is not sufficient to exercise that right. Norman v. Washington County, 80 Or LUBA 500 (2019).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Any party may request an opportunity under ORS 197.763(6)(c) to respond to "additional written evidence" that was submitted during an open record period prior to the conclusion of the initial evidentiary hearing. But that response must be limited to responding to the "additional written evidence" that is submitted during the open record period. Grahn v. City of Yamhill, 76 Or LUBA 258 (2017).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where a party's evidentiary response to "additional written evidence" that was submitted during the initial open record period at the conclusion of the initial evidentiary hearing pursuant to ORS 197.763(6)(c) includes additional evidence that goes beyond responding to that "additional written evidence" that was submitted during the initial open record period, a local government must either reject the additional evidence or give all parties an opportunity to rebut the additional evidence. Grahn v. City of Yamhill, 76 Or LUBA 258 (2017).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Under ORS 197.763(6)(a) through (c), prior to the conclusion of the initial evidentiary hearing any party may request an opportunity to present additional evidence. In that event, the hearing body must either continue the hearing or leave the record open to receive the additional evidence, and failure to do so is a procedural error. However, where the party making the request appeals and is given a de novo hearing before the local appellate body at which it is allowed to submit additional evidence, the hearings body's error did not result in prejudice to the party's substantial rights and therefore provides no basis for LUBA to remand. Pinnacle Alliance Group, LLC v. City of Sisters, 73 Or LUBA 169 (2016).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. The requirements for continuances and open record periods in ORS 197.763(6)(a), (b) and (c) only apply to the initial evidentiary hearing and do not apply to subsequently continued hearings or open record periods. Warren v. Josephine County, 67 Or LUBA 74 (2013).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. A local government does not err by granting additional seven-day open record periods following the conclusion of an initial seven-day open record period, where the local government's code specifically authorizes additional continuances and open record periods. Warren v. Josephine County, 67 Or LUBA 74 (2013).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where a local government accepts opponent evidence that goes beyond the stated scope of a seven-day open record period, but grants the applicant final argument and evidentiary rebuttal, the applicant's substantial rights are not prejudiced and the local government's error in accepting the opponent evidence does not provide a basis for remand. Warren v. Josephine County, 67 Or LUBA 74 (2013).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where petitioners' were allowed to present evidence during the hearings on a decision that is appealed to LUBA and remanded, the city need not allow petitioners a second opportunity to enhance their evidentiary presentation following LUBA's remand where neither the city's regulations nor LUBA's remand require a further evidentiary hearing. Rosenzweig v. City of McMinnville, 66 Or LUBA 164 (2012).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Parties to a land use proceeding have the right to review and respond to substantive changes in the application that occur during the proceedings. If such a change occurs after the close of the record or hearing, the local government may be required to re-open the record to allow other parties a reasonable opportunity to submit responsive testimony and evidence. Failure to do so can be procedural error and a basis for remand, if the petitioners demonstrate the error prejudiced their substantial rights. Conte v. City of Eugene, 66 Or LUBA 334 (2012).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. ORS 197.763 sets out the minimum procedures the county is required to follow in the conduct of quasi-judicial land use hearings under ORS chapter 215, and ORS 197.763 does not require that the county provide an applicant with prior copies or notice of the evidence that the county submits at the initial evidentiary hearing on a permit application. Emmert v. Clackamas County, 65 Or LUBA 1 (2012).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Absent any allegation that the city council is required by its development code, other provisions of the city's code or charter, or state law to adhere to Robert's Rules of Order in voting on matters before it, failure to adhere to Robert's Rules does not amount to a procedural error under ORS 197.835(9)(a)(B). Jones v. City of Grants Pass, 64 Or LUBA 103 (2011).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. A county's alleged failure to process a permit application under "Type II" procedures, which provide for a de novo hearing on appeal of an administrative decision, does not provide a basis for remand, where the county initially processed the application under "Type I" procedures that provide for a hearing limited to the issues raised in the appeal petition, but in fact the county provided a de novo hearing on the appeal not limited to the issues raised in the appeal petition. Jensen Properties v. Washington County, 61 Or LUBA 155 (2010).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. When a local code provision limits participation at a public hearing on remand from LUBA to persons who obtained "party" status at the initial hearing and excludes persons who had "witness" status, the local government may properly prevent persons who were "witnesses" at the initial hearing from participating on remand. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 60 Or LUBA 131 (2009).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where a local ordinance allows for a de novo hearing on appeal where new evidence and testimony may be presented, it does not mean that a local government also intends to allow new issues to be raised that were not specified in the notice of appeal, when the local ordinance requires issues on appeal to be specified. Stricklin v. City of Astoria, 56 Or LUBA 535 (2008).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Oral statements made by a decision maker in a public hearing that may conflict with a later vote do not provide a basis for reversal or remand. LUBA reviews the written findings made in support of a decision not statements made during public hearings. Sommer v. Josephine County, 52 Or LUBA 209 (2006).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. A member of the governing body, who was absent from the meeting at which a land use application was orally approved, but who otherwise participated throughout the local proceedings, may properly sign the final written decision. Sommer v. Josephine County, 49 Or LUBA 134 (2005).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. A city council does not err in denying an applicant's request for a de novo appeal hearing before the city council, where the city code provides that local appeals are limited to the record before the planning commission and a zoning ordinance provision that permits the city council to hear appeals de novo does not limit the city council's discretion in determining whether it will do so. Smith v. City of St. Paul, 45 Or LUBA 281 (2003).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. ORS 227.180 does not require that a city council hold a de novo hearing on appeal of a land use decision after a de novo hearing by the city planning commission. Scheyer v. City of Hood River, 43 Or LUBA 112 (2002).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Pursuant to ORS 197.830(3), a city decision maker must disclose all ex parte contacts at the first opportunity and must inform participants of their right to rebut the substance of the disclosure. However, a city's failure to inform a petitioner of his right to rebut the substance of an ex parte disclosure will not result in reversal or remand where (1) the disclosure of the ex parte contact was promptly made; (2) petitioner had more than one opportunity to object to the adequacy and the content of the disclosure; and (3) no party appears to dispute the facts alleged in the disclosure. DLCD v. City of Gold Beach, 43 Or LUBA 319 (2002).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. In considering a request to continue a quasi-judicial land use hearing, a local government must evaluate the particular circumstances of the request, and balance the due process rights of the moving party against the potential prejudice to the other parties involved, including the local jurisdiction. Reeder v. City of Oregon City, 37 Or LUBA 794 (2000).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where a local appeal is on the record, and the issues to be considered are limited to those raised in the notice of appeal, and there is likely to be a significant delay in the resolution of the appeal if a hearing is continued, a city does not abuse its discretion by denying an applicant's request for a continuance. Reeder v. City of Oregon City, 37 Or LUBA 794 (2000).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where a county code provision requires a de novo review and a hearings officer's decision includes language that suggests the hearings officer erroneously believed a de novo review was not required, there is no basis for reversal or remand where record makes it clear that the hearings officer nevertheless conducted the requisite de novo review. Lawrence v. Clackamas County, 36 Or LUBA 273 (1999).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. An opportunity to rebut undisclosed evidence obtained on a site visit is not required when that evidence is not the sole basis for a finding, but merely provides a context for integrating other evidence into findings. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. The provisions of ORS 197.763(6)(c) only apply to the "initial evidentiary hearing," and therefore do not require the city council to reopen the record for rebuttal upon the request of a participant in a subsequent evidentiary hearing. Wicks-Snodgrass v. City of Reedsport, 32 Or LUBA 292 (1997).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Statements made by individual decision makers during local government hearings that express erroneous interpretations of law or legally improper reasons for adopting a land use decision provide no basis for reversal or remand unless such statements are adopted in the final written decision or findings supporting the written decision. Fraley v. Deschutes County, 31 Or LUBA 566 (1996).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Petitioners fail to demonstrate prejudice to their substantial rights arising out of an inaccurate notice published by the city when the mayor correctly stated the applicable criteria prior to the hearing. Sparks v. City of Bandon, 30 Or LUBA 69 (1995).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where a local government decision includes a determination that an existing use of the subject property is lawful, it was improper for the local government to refuse to accept evidence or argument on this issue during the local proceedings. Penland v. Josephine County, 29 Or LUBA 213 (1995).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where a local government's "initial evidentiary hearing" on a quasi-judicial land use application was held before the planning commission, the local government does not violate ORS 197.763(6) by denying petitioner's request to leave open the record of a subsequent evidentiary hearing before the governing body. ONRC v. City of Oregon City, 29 Or LUBA 90 (1995).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where petitioner submitted evidence and argument to the city council during its de novo review of a decision of the city landmarks commission, even if procedural errors were made in the proceeding before the landmarks commission, petitioner's substantial rights were not prejudiced. Champion v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 618 (1995).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where the local government gives notice of a hearing before two different hearings bodies on a development application, and those hearings are continued to another time, both hearings bodies must continue the hearing to avoid having to repeat the original notice process. Collins v. Klamath County, 28 Or LUBA 553 (1995).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. In order to defer determinations of compliance with mandatory approval standards to a later stage where no public hearing is contemplated, the local government must first determine that compliance with those standards is possible. Welch v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 439 (1994).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. A code provision that prohibits taking "notice of any communications * * * or other materials prepared in connection with the particular case unless the parties are afforded an opportunity to contest the material" prohibits a hearings officer from considering communications from the local government counsel, or proposed findings submitted by a party, without providing other parties an opportunity for rebuttal. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 417 (1994).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where petitioner had notice that the applicant revised his subdivision proposal to include cluster housing, and had an opportunity to present and rebut evidence regarding the proposed cluster housing in a de novo evidentiary hearing before the city council, petitioner's substantial rights were not prejudiced simply because the cluster housing proposal was not referred to the hearings officer for hearing. Woodstock Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 146 (1994).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. It is reasonable to expect that a local government, in applying subjective comprehensive plan and code provisions, will include interpretive findings in its final decision. The parties to such local proceedings should know to include arguments concerning proper interpretation of such provisions in their presentations. Salem-Keizer School Dist. 24-J v. City of Salem, 27 Or LUBA 351 (1994).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Although a party to a quasi-judicial land use proceeding has the right to rebut new evidence, a request for the record to remain open so that a party can "complete her report" is not a request to rebut new evidence. Citizens for Resp. Growth v. City of Seaside, 26 Or LUBA 458 (1994).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where a local government fails to give a person an individual written notice of hearing to which the person is entitled, the local government fails to provide a hearing with regard to that person, within the meaning of ORS 197.830(3). Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Poor quality tape recordings of local land use proceedings provide no basis for reversal or remand where petitioner fails to demonstrate that any properly submitted evidence was not considered by the local decision makers. Reed v. Benton County, 23 Or LUBA 486 (1992).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where there are oral statements during local proceedings suggesting confusion about who has the burden of proof in a local appeal, but there is nothing in the written decision to suggest the local government made an erroneous allocation of the burden of proof, LUBA will not assume the burden of proof was erroneously assigned to the opponents of the application. Coonse v. Crook County, 22 Or LUBA 138 (1991).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. The right to rebut evidence placed before the local decision maker in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding extends to requiring disclosure of and opportunity to rebut the substance of ex parte communications to and personal site observations by the local decision maker. Angel v. City of Portland, 21 Or LUBA 1 (1991).

25.6.1 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Generally. Where a city is not required under its code to allow surrebuttal if rebuttal is limited to nonevidentiary testimony and evidence already in the local record, parties asserting city denial of surrebuttal as reversible error must show that the rebuttal included new evidence and that denial of an opportunity to rebut such evidence prejudices their substantial rights. Walker v. City of Beaverton, 18 Or LUBA 712 (1990).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where a local government requires opponents to be represented at a hearing by one spokesperson, their attorney, and prohibits oral testimony from the opponents themselves, and where the local government makes express and repeated findings that the opponents' written testimony is not credible or not supported when viewed through the "obscured" lens of the local government's judgement of the opponents' attorney's credibility, LUBA will conclude that the local government's procedure prejudiced the opponents' substantial rights to submit their case and to receive a full and fair hearing. Schrepel v. Yamhill County, 81 Or LUBA 895 (2020).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Any party may request an opportunity under ORS 197.763(6)(c) to respond to "additional written evidence" that was submitted during an open record period prior to the conclusion of the initial evidentiary hearing. But that response must be limited to responding to the "additional written evidence" that is submitted during the open record period. Grahn v. City of Yamhill, 76 Or LUBA 258 (2017).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where a party's evidentiary response to "additional written evidence" that was submitted during the initial open record period at the conclusion of the initial evidentiary hearing pursuant to ORS 197.763(6)(c) includes additional evidence that goes beyond responding to that "additional written evidence" that was submitted during the initial open record period, a local government must either reject the additional evidence or give all parties an opportunity to rebut the additional evidence. Grahn v. City of Yamhill, 76 Or LUBA 258 (2017).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Neither ORS 197.830(13)(b) nor OAR 661-010-0021 dictate the scope of the issues that must be addressed when a local government withdraws a decision for reconsideration after it has been appealed to LUBA. The statute and rule also do not dictate how a local government must address offers of additional evidence at a reconsideration hearing. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 76 Or LUBA 396 (2017).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Under ORS 197.763(6)(a) through (c), prior to the conclusion of the initial evidentiary hearing any party may request an opportunity to present additional evidence. In that event, the hearing body must either continue the hearing or leave the record open to receive the additional evidence, and failure to do so is a procedural error. However, where the party making the request appeals and is given a de novo hearing before the local appellate body at which it is allowed to submit additional evidence, the hearings body's error did not result in prejudice to the party's substantial rights and therefore provides no basis for LUBA to remand. Pinnacle Alliance Group, LLC v. City of Sisters, 73 Or LUBA 169 (2016).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A local government does not err in rejecting as "new evidence" annotated site plans and calculations that were submitted after the close of the record in order to rebut the applicant's testimony that the proposed development complies with lot coverage standards. Knapp v. City of Jacksonville, 70 Or LUBA 259 (2014).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. The requirements for continuances and open record periods in ORS 197.763(6)(a), (b) and (c) only apply to the initial evidentiary hearing and do not apply to subsequently continued hearings or open record periods. Warren v. Josephine County, 67 Or LUBA 74 (2013).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A hearings officer's failure to clearly explain to petitioner that the applicable procedures limit final written argument to the applicant does not constitute procedural error; indeed, allowing petitioner to submit final written argument as petitioner requested would violate the applicable procedures. Purtzer v. Jackson County, 67 Or LUBA 205 (2013).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where a city councilor at first announces that she will not participate in a land use appeal but later elects to participate, she must (1) disclose the substance of any ex parte communications she had in the matter as soon as possible after that election, and (2) give all parties an opportunity to respond to and rebut the substance of those communications. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Hood River, 67 Or LUBA 332 (2013).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where a quasi-judicial land use decision maker fails to disclose any ex parte contacts, a petitioner does not waive its right to assign error to that failure at LUBA by failing to object below to the failure to disclose ex parte contacts. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Hood River, 67 Or LUBA 332 (2013).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A city councilor cannot claim to be unbiased and participate as a decision maker in a quasi-judicial land use appeal where that city councilor initially declared she would not participate as a decision maker due to bias or potential bias, and thereafter submitted documents as a party opposing the application. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Hood River, 67 Or LUBA 332 (2013).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Although there are LUBA decisions that have found a decision maker was biased because the decision maker exhibited an "emotional commitment" for or against a land use application, an "emotional commitment" is not required for disqualifying bias. A decision make who, while acting as a party in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding, expresses opposition to a proposal in focused, unemotional and analytical terms can be just as biased as a decision maker who does so in emotional terms. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Hood River, 67 Or LUBA 332 (2013).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where the record suggests that a deadlocked city council might have broken that deadlock with continued deliberations and thereby avoided the need to invoke the "rule of necessity" to permit a biased city councilor to vote and break the tie, the city council invoked the rule of necessity prematurely. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Hood River, 67 Or LUBA 332 (2013).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where the rule of necessity is properly invoked, because the votes necessary to break a tie and take action on a land use appeal cannot be achieved through further deliberation and there is no other body that can render the decision, the rule of necessity may be invoked and a decision maker who previously withdrew from participation due to bias or potential bias may participate as a decision maker to break the tie and allow the city council to take action. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Hood River, 67 Or LUBA 332 (2013).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Parties to a land use proceeding have the right to review and respond to substantive changes in the application that occur during the proceedings. If such a change occurs after the close of the record or hearing, the local government may be required to re-open the record to allow other parties a reasonable opportunity to submit responsive testimony and evidence. Failure to do so can be procedural error and a basis for remand, if the petitioners demonstrate the error prejudiced their substantial rights. Conte v. City of Eugene, 66 Or LUBA 334 (2012).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Remand is warranted, where a city's procedural error in rejecting the petitioner's request to submit evidence to respond to a substantive change in the application after the close of the record prejudiced the petitioner's substantial rights to respond to the changed application. Conte v. City of Eugene, 66 Or LUBA 334 (2012).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. LUBA will deny a motion to consider petitioner's affidavit regarding how his testimony to the planning commission would have been different if he had not been misinformed regarding the time limits, where the decision before LUBA is the city council decision conducted after an evidentiary hearing, and petitioner does not explain why any error committed by the planning commission was not cured by the proceedings before the city council. Buel-McIntire v. City of Yachats, 63 Or LUBA 452 (2011).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A petitioner's allegations that the city mayor cut off his oral testimony to censor the content of petitioner's testimony is not supported by the record, where the mayor gave the petitioner the same amount of time to speak as other participants and there is no indication in the record that the mayor's attempt to hold petitioner to the announced three-minute time limit was based on the content of petitioner's testimony. Claus v. City of Sherwood, 62 Or LUBA 67 (2010).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A city council hearing on a planning commission recommendation to approve a planned unit development application is not a "continued" evidentiary hearing for purposes of a code provision implementing ORS 197.763(6) that allows participants to request the opportunity to respond to new evidence submitted at a continued hearing. Claus v. City of Sherwood, 62 Or LUBA 67 (2010).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Limiting a party to 10 minutes for oral testimony in a quasi-judicial land use hearing before a design review board, while allowing unlimited written testimony, and limiting an appeal of the design review board to the city council to an on-the-record review does not violate the party's right to due process. Reeves v. City of Wilsonville, 62 Or LUBA 142 (2010).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. When during the proceedings on remand from LUBA, the local government allows additional argument but no new evidence, and the local government redacts written testimony that it considers new evidence, the unredacted documents are not properly part of the record. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 60 Or LUBA 454 (2009).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. When during the proceedings on remand from LUBA, the local government allows additional argument but no new evidence, the local government is not required to erase oral testimony that contains new evidence from the recordings of meetings submitted to LUBA. OAR 661-010-0025(1)(b) only applies to written documents, not oral testimony. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 60 Or LUBA 454 (2009).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A local government that accepts a letter on the last day of the rebuttal period does not err in accepting a signed version of the same letter one day later after the rebuttal period has ended. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. City of Brookings, 58 Or LUBA 421 (2009).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A local government may allow public testimony and materials to be submitted into the record for the limited purpose of determining whether the proposed decision properly describes a prior oral decision, even if that testimony and materials relate to the merits of the underlying decision, if the local government makes clear that the scope of the hearing is limited to that narrow issue. Thompson v. Jackson County, 53 Or LUBA 317 (2007).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A hearings officer's refusal to leave the record open to allow the petitioners to respond to alleged "new evidence" that was submitted during the final evidentiary hearing is not a basis to reverse or remand the decision, where petitioners fail to establish that in fact "new evidence" was submitted or that there is anything to rebut under the hearings officer's unchallenged interpretation of the applicable code provision. Angius v. Washington County, 52 Or LUBA 222 (2006).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A city council does not err in denying an applicant's request for a de novo appeal hearing before the city council, where the city code provides that local appeals are limited to the record before the planning commission and a zoning ordinance provision that permits the city council to hear appeals de novo does not limit the city council's discretion in determining whether it will do so. Smith v. City of St. Paul, 45 Or LUBA 281 (2003).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. If a county rejects evidence that was submitted after the close of the record, and does not consider that evidence in making its decision, the county's refusal to permit rebuttal of that late submittal does not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Sheppard v. Clackamas County, 45 Or LUBA 507 (2003).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where it is clear that a decision maker considered evidence that was submitted after the close of the record, and that the decision maker may have relied on that evidence in making its decision, the decision maker errs in refusing to allow rebuttal to that evidence, notwithstanding a statement in the final decision document that the disputed evidence was rejected. Sheppard v. Clackamas County, 45 Or LUBA 507 (2003).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A local government properly rejects evidence submitted after the close of the evidentiary record, where the proponent of the evidence did not adequately request or preserve the opportunity to submit additional evidence. Doty v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 34 (2002).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Even where no specific statutory or local provisions govern limits on presentation of evidence on remand from LUBA, the parties have a fundamental right during an evidentiary proceeding to present and rebut evidence. An evidentiary proceeding on remand that fails to offer any opportunity to rebut new evidence submitted on remand is inconsistent with Fasano v. Washington Co. Comm., 264 Or 574, 503 P2d 23 (1973). Crowley v. City of Bandon, 43 Or LUBA 79 (2002).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A local government does not commit reversible error by limiting a party to two minutes of testimonial rebuttal where (1) the party agreed to the two-minute limit, (2) there is no legal obligation for the city to hold the record open or continue the evidentiary hearing to allow written rebuttal, and (3) the party does not demonstrate to LUBA that the evidence the party wishes to rebut is relevant. Lord v. City of Oregon City, 43 Or LUBA 361 (2002).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where a party and the party's attorney are given an adequate opportunity to rebut the substance of a short letter, the local government commits no error in refusing to provide an additional hearing for the party to offer further rebuttal of the letter. Lord v. City of Oregon City, 43 Or LUBA 361 (2002).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A local code providing that the scope of review for an appeal of a planning commission decision to the city council is a "Record Hearing," and defining a "Record Hearing" as a hearing limited to review of the existing record or evidence previously submitted, does not limit the legal issues or arguments that may be presented on appeal; only the evidence that may be considered. Haug v. City of Newberg, 42 Or LUBA 411 (2002).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A local appellate body may, on its own, raise issues that are not presented in the notice of local appeal, where the local code does not specifically limit the scope of review on appeal to the issues identified in the notice of local appeal. Haug v. City of Newberg, 42 Or LUBA 411 (2002).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where a local government departs from the procedures for continuing a hearing set out in ORS 197.763(6)(a) to (c), the revised procedures must be clearly communicated to all parties and, preferably, reduced to writing. Hawman v. Umatilla County, 42 Or LUBA 223 (2002).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where the circumstances under which oral testimony would be allowed at a continued hearing are not clearly defined, and petitioners allege that they were prejudiced by being denied an opportunity to present oral testimony at the continued hearing based on the ambiguity of the procedures, remand is appropriate to ensure that petitioners receive an opportunity to present that oral testimony. Hawman v. Umatilla County, 42 Or LUBA 223 (2002).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where, on remand from LUBA, the local government adopts a procedure that is proposed by the parties and that allows all sides to submit written evidence and written rebuttals, but limits oral testimony at the evidentiary hearing before the local government to summaries and explanations of previous submittals, the procedure is not correctly interpreted to prohibit an oral explanation of previously submitted evidence that includes additional supportive facts in response to the previously submitted written rebuttal. Terra v. City of Newport, 40 Or LUBA 286 (2001).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Under ORS 197.763(6)(e), a local government may consider final written legal argument. However, a local government may not consider new factual allegations, as part of legal arguments submitted under ORS 197.763(6)(a), without providing an opportunity for rebuttal. Dept. of Transportation v. City of Eugene, 38 Or LUBA 814 (2000).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where a city allows one party more time to present oral testimony during a land use hearing than is allowed another party, the unequal allocation of time will not constitute error so long as the city's decision explains the reason for the differentiation, there is an unlimited opportunity to submit written testimony, and the unequal allocation of time does not cause substantial prejudice. Kane v. City of Beaverton, 38 Or LUBA 183 (2000).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A local government may limit oral testimony if adequate opportunity is provided for the submission of written testimony. Wild Rose Ranch Enterprises v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 368 (1999).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Under ORS 215.416(11)(a), a hearings officer is obligated to conduct a de novo hearing that allows the introduction and consideration of all relevant evidence notwithstanding that the evidence could have been presented to the initial decision maker, but was not. *Johnson v. Clackamas Count*y, 37 Or LUBA 73 (1999).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Absent land use regulations that specify a particular procedure when a decision is withdrawn for reconsideration pursuant to OAR 661-010-0021, the procedures that govern depend on what stage in the process the local government returns to on reconsideration. Procedures governing evidentiary hearings are not applicable when the local government does not reopen the evidentiary record during the reconsideration proceedings. McElroy v. City of Corvallis, 36 Or LUBA 185 (1999).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A staff recommendation regarding appropriate conditions of approval that is submitted after the close of the evidentiary hearing is not new "evidence" that might, if submitted by one of the parties, trigger an obligation to reopen the record for rebuttal. Hunt v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 467 (1999).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. ORS 197.763(6)(c) requires a participant to file a written request with the local government for an opportunity to respond to new evidence submitted during the period after a hearing that the record is left open. Brown v. City of Ontario, 33 Or LUBA 180 (1997).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. ORS 197.763(6)(e) allows an applicant seven days after the record is closed to all other parties to submit final written arguments in support of the application. Brown v. City of Ontario, 33 Or LUBA 180 (1997).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where a continuance required by ORS 197.753(4)(b) to allow opponents to respond to new evidence was not granted before the city and county planning commissions made their recommendation to the city council and county commissioners, a procedural error occurred, but that error is no basis for remand when the opponents submitted a detailed rebuttal during the year-long interim between the date of the recommendation and the decision of the governing bodies, who considered additional evidence and testimony as part of a de novo review of the applications. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A local government commits procedural error when it does not allow petitioners the opportunity to address the applicability of an ordinance that had not been identified as an applicable criterion, and then adopts findings based on that ordinance. If the ordinance is extrinsic to the applicable criteria, then it is evidence which the parties have the right to rebut; if the ordinance is an applicable criterion, then it must be identified in the hearing notice with greater specificity than "all other adopted county ordinances." Nicholson v. Clatsop County, 32 Or LUBA 399 (1997).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where petitioners are qualified participants in a local appeal, but are denied the opportunity to respond to issues raised in the local appeal, their substantial rights are prejudiced and the challenged decision must be remanded. Spencer Creek Neighbors v. Lane County, 32 Or LUBA 349 (1997).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Under ORS 197.763(6), the local government is only obligated to leave the record open for seven days after the initial evidentiary hearing; language in a local hearing notice to the contrary cannot create additional requirements under that statute. Gross v. City of Tigard, 32 Or LUBA 93 (1996).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. The city council's notice of hearing stating that any participant "may request" that the record remain open for seven days after the hearing does not bind the city to grant such a request when it is not otherwise required by statute, and petitioner is not deprived of procedural due process rights where the city denies his request that the record be left open. Gross v. City of Tigard, 32 Or LUBA 93 (1996).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Although the county's refusal to permit a party below to participate in a hearing on remand prejudiced that party's substantial rights, ORS 197.835(9)(a)(B) permits remand only where the failure to satisfy applicable procedural requirements prejudiced the substantial rights of the petitioner. Fraley v. Deschutes County, 32 Or LUBA 27 (1996).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Statements by city staff at a local appeal hearing regarding evidence already in the record do not give petitioner a right to rebuttal. Thornton v. City of St. Helens, 31 Or LUBA 287 (1996).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where a local ordinance specifies that board of commissioner hearings are conducted on the record, and where petitioners establish no violation of any statutory notice requirement, petitioners establish no basis for relief in alleging that they relied on various notices, which appeared to petitioners to be contradictory, to conclude they were not required to present all evidence before the planning commission, but would be able to present their case de novo before the board of commissioners. Canfield v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 25 (1996).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. When the city council did not attempt to limit the issues addressed by petitioner at a city council hearing on appeal from the planning commission, petitioner may raise at LUBA any issues raised before the city council. Thompson v. City of St. Helens, 30 Or LUBA 339 (1996).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where a local governing body is authorized to limit issues on appeal to issues raised before the planning commission but the local government failed to keep an adequate record of the planning commission proceedings, and LUBA cannot determine whether the governing body correctly limited its review to two particular issues, LUBA will remand the governing body's decision. Andrews v. City of Prineville, 28 Or LUBA 653 (1995).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A local government commits error by approving a modified partition application after the local evidentiary hearing is closed and refusing petitioner an opportunity to comment on the modified application before approving it. Tognoli v. Crook County, 28 Or LUBA 527 (1995).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where a decision maker improperly refuses to allow relevant testimony, and it is not clear whether the decision maker's later allowance of expanded oral and written testimony rendered the initial error harmless, the decision will be remanded. Salem-Keizer School Dist. 24-J v. City of Salem, 27 Or LUBA 351 (1994).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. ORS 197.763(7) does not preclude a local government from reopening an evidentiary record for limited purposes after it has been closed. It simply provides that if the record is reopened, new issues may be raised in an appeal to LUBA with regard to the evidence accepted after the record is reopened. Sorte v. City of Newport, 26 Or LUBA 236 (1993).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where a local government denies a person the right to present testimony on her own behalf, that person "appeared" within the meaning of ORS 197.830(6) and OAR 661-10-050(1), at least for the purpose of challenging the local government's decision to limit testimony. Sorte v. City of Newport, 25 Or LUBA 828 (1993).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A local government decision maker is entitled to consult with its attorney regarding evidence submitted during the evidentiary phase of the local proceeding and interpretive issues. Parties have no right to rebut the substance of a local government attorney's advice to the local government decision maker. Linebarger v. City of The Dalles, 24 Or LUBA 91 (1992).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A local government may limit its proceedings on remand from LUBA to correcting the deficiencies that led to the remand and, unless the local code so requires, need not repeat the entire process it followed in making the initial decision. Bartels v. City of Portland, 23 Or LUBA 182 (1992).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. An uncontroverted allegation that a party was provided no opportunity to rebut evidence placed before the decision maker through ex parte contacts and site observations is sufficient to demonstrate prejudice to that party's substantial rights. Angel v. City of Portland, 21 Or LUBA 1 (1991).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where the local record indicates a petitioner was not allowed to speak at a hearing because his testimony would include new evidence, the acceptance of which would indisputably have been improper, and petitioners do not claim that his testimony would not have included new evidence, petitioners fail to identify a basis upon which LUBA may grant relief. White v. City of Oregon City, 20 Or LUBA 470 (1991).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where petitioners have adequate notice of hearing, and are not surprised by a modified application or by newly applicable standards, the right to rebut evidence does not require the county to continue its hearings to provide petitioners more time to develop a rebuttal. Stefan v. Yamhill County, 18 Or LUBA 820 (1990).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. Where a city is not required under its code to allow surrebuttal if rebuttal is limited to nonevidentiary testimony and evidence already in the local record, parties asserting city denial of surrebuttal as reversible error must show that the rebuttal included new evidence and that denial of an opportunity to rebut such evidence prejudices their substantial rights. Walker v. City of Beaverton, 18 Or LUBA 712 (1990).

25.6.2 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Limitations on Presentation. A city does not commit error in refusing to accept irrelevant evidence. A petitioner challenging a city's refusal to accept evidence on the basis of irrelevancy must demonstrate that the offered evidence is relevant to the approval criteria. Walker v. City of Beaverton, 18 Or LUBA 712 (1990).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where "new evidence" enters the record during a non-evidentiary remand proceeding but plays no role in the decision, such procedural error provides no basis for reversal or remand pursuant to ORS 197.835(9)(a)(B) because it could not possibly have "prejudiced the substantial rights of the petitioner." Neighbors for Smart Growth v. Washington County, 79 Or LUBA 1 (2019).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A county errs in accepting with the applicant's final written argument, for purposes of determining whether at least three dwellings existed on surrounding lots or parcels on January 1, 1993, and therefore whether the subject property qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750, an email from a contractor who worked on one of the surrounding dwellings , even where the email is intended to provide context for evidence submitted by opponents, and thereby rebut opponents' arguments concerning that evidence. Under ORS 197.763(6)(e), new evidence may not be submitted with an applicant's final written argument and, under ORS 197.763(9), such an email is evidence rather than argument. In addition, opponents are not precluded from raising a county's admission of new evidence with the applicant's final written argument as procedural error on appeal to LUBA merely because they failed to object during the local proceedings, where the opportunity to object was provided after the county had already considered evidence, deliberated, and made its oral decision, and where the record was closed and no further testimony was allowed. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A county errs in accepting with the applicant's final written argument, for purposes of determining whether at least three dwellings existed on surrounding lots or parcels on January 1, 1993, and therefore whether the subject property qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750, an email from a contractor who worked on one of the surrounding dwellings , even where the email is intended to provide context for evidence submitted by opponents, and thereby rebut opponents' arguments concerning that evidence. Under ORS 197.763(6)(e), new evidence may not be submitted with an applicant's final written argument and, under ORS 197.763(9), such an email is evidence rather than argument. In addition, opponents are not precluded from raising a county's admission of new evidence with the applicant's final written argument as procedural error on appeal to LUBA merely because they failed to object during the local proceedings, where the opportunity to object was provided after the county had already considered evidence, deliberated, and made its oral decision, and where the record was closed and no further testimony was allowed. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A party asserting a procedural error must demonstrate that the procedural error was objected to during the proceedings below, if there was an opportunity to lodge an objection. Accordingly, where a dispute may exist regarding whether petitioners objected to the county's process during the proceedings below, LUBA will allow a motion to take evidence outside the record to consider a document for the limited purpose of allowing petitioners to cite to that document to establish, if the point is disputed in a response brief, that petitioners attempted to lodge objections to the county's process. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 1024 (2019).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. When a hearings officer weighs the testimony of several experts and articulates how and why he came to his decision based on the experience and findings of the experts, petitioner needs to provide adequate reason before LUBA will second-guess the hearings officer's decision. Without reason to review the hearings officer's decision LUBA will conclude that the findings are adequate and supported by substantial evidence. Gould v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 118 (2018).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. When petitioner disputes the findings of a hearings officer, the burden of providing sufficient evidence and showing the law was improperly applied lies with the petitioner. If the petitioner does not show the hearings officer erred, the decision will be affirmed. Johnson v. City of Portland, 78 Or LUBA 158 (2018).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. When a county acknowledges that no evidence in the record supports a determination that an adequate flow of water exists, and essentially follows the third Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992), option, it must comply with all of the third Rhyne option and defer its decision making to a proceeding that provides the statutorily required notice and hearing. Wachal v. Linn County, 78 Or LUBA 227 (2018).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A limited land use decision may be approved through a notice and comment process, and a local government may provide a right of local appeal. ORS 197.195(5). In such an appeal, the appeal hearing may be based on the existing administrative record or new evidence may be allowed. Should an appeal hearing allow the introduction of new evidence, the hearing is subject to the quasi-judicial hearing procedures set forth in ORS 197.763. In such a situation, a hearings officer may properly consider new evidence and analysis offered by the local government, as well as a petitioner's response, and LUBA's review includes the hearings officer's consideration of that evidence and those issues. Hill v. City of Portland, 77 Or LUBA 317 (2018).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Any party may request an opportunity under ORS 197.763(6)(c) to respond to "additional written evidence" that was submitted during an open record period prior to the conclusion of the initial evidentiary hearing. But that response must be limited to responding to the "additional written evidence" that is submitted during the open record period. Grahn v. City of Yamhill, 76 Or LUBA 258 (2017).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where a party's evidentiary response to "additional written evidence" that was submitted during the initial open record period at the conclusion of the initial evidentiary hearing pursuant to ORS 197.763(6)(c) includes additional evidence that goes beyond responding to that "additional written evidence" that was submitted during the initial open record period, a local government must either reject the additional evidence or give all parties an opportunity to rebut the additional evidence. Grahn v. City of Yamhill, 76 Or LUBA 258 (2017).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A city may err in introducing a copy of the application into the record after the close of the evidentiary record before the city council, the final decision maker. However, the procedural error does not provide a basis for remand under ORS 197.835(9)(a)(B) where the petitioner does not demonstrate that the procedural error played a role in the final decision, or otherwise prejudiced the petitioner's substantial rights. J4J Misc PAC v. City of Jefferson, 75 Or LUBA 120 (2017).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where during deliberations on an application for an annexation under a new state statute, a city councilor mentions a city attorney letter discussing the costs of joining litigation to challenge the statute, the letter is exempt from disclosure as an ex parte communication under ORS 227.180(4), and the city commits no procedural error in failing to include the letter in the record of the annexation proceeding. J4J Misc PAC v. City of Jefferson, 75 Or LUBA 120 (2017).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. While it might constitute procedural error for a local government to accept new evidence late in the proceedings without providing other parties a reasonable opportunity to respond to that new evidence, no error occurs where the alleged new evidence was introduced early in the final hearing, and the petitioner had an opportunity to respond to that evidence during the hearing. J4J Misc PAC v. City of Jefferson, 75 Or LUBA 120 (2017).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Under ORS 197.763(6)(b) or (c), where a party requests in writing the opportunity to respond to new evidence submitted at a continued hearing or during an open record period, any such opportunity is limited to responses to new evidence submitted during the continued hearing or the first open record period. A hearings officer is not compelled by ORS 197.763(6)(b) or (c) to allow a party to submit, during a second open record period, responses to evidence submitted during the initial evidentiary hearing. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 75 Or LUBA 302 (2017).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A local government does not run afoul of ORS 197.763(6)(e) when it allows an applicant to present as part of its final argument an argument that the needed housing statutes at ORS 197.303 prohibit the city from applying criteria that are not "clear and objective," because the argument is not "evidence" within the meaning of ORS 197.763(9)(b). Talbott v. City of Happy Valley, 74 Or LUBA 143 (2016).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where on remand a planning commission elects to reopen the record and accept new evidence, arguments, and testimony, and persons subsequently provide evidence, arguments, and testimony that is accepted into the record and not rejected, pursuant to ORS 197.763(7), any party may raise new issues related to that new evidence, testimony, and argument and criteria for decision-making which apply to the matter at issue. Trautman v. City of Eugene, 73 Or LUBA 209 (2016).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where as part of final written argument the applicant submits five letters from experts that include new evidence, a general objection that the five letters include new evidence is sufficient to preserve that objection before LUBA. Because expert testimony almost always includes new professional opinion, even if limited to commenting on other evidence already in the record, an opponent need not specify which portions of the expert testimony the opponent believes constitutes new evidence, in order to satisfy the "raise it or waive it" requirement of ORS 197.763(1). Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 72 Or LUBA 275 (2015).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A land use regulation that assigns the burden of proof to the permit "applicant" does not require that "only the applicant" carry the burden of proof. Assigning the burden of proof to the applicant does not preclude other parties from presenting evidence and legal positions or preclude the decision maker from relying on such evidence. Pacificorp v. Deschutes County, 70 Or LUBA 89 (2014).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A local government does not err in rejecting as "new evidence" annotated site plans and calculations that were submitted after the close of the record in order to rebut the applicant's testimony that the proposed development complies with lot coverage standards. Knapp v. City of Jacksonville, 70 Or LUBA 259 (2014).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A governing body errs in relying upon the personal knowledge of its members who are farmers to resolve a disputed issue regarding whether proposed disturbances to topsoil would render the subject property unfit for future agricultural use. The effect of topsoil disturbance on agricultural productivity is an arcane subject, and even if the farmer/commissioners have expert personal knowledge of that subject, it is inappropriate to approve or deny an application based on the decision-makers' personal knowledge of disputed facts rather than on the evidence submitted during the evidentiary proceeding. Hood River Valley PRD v. Hood River County, 67 Or LUBA 314 (2013).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. The fact that a city believed it was making a decision on the last day allowed by the ORS 227.181 for a decision after remand does not absolve the city from following the procedures applicable to quasi-judicial hearings, including giving all parties the opportunity to respond to new evidence submitted at the hearing. The city could have rejected the new evidence and avoided the procedural conundrum that it apparently believed it faced or could have left the record open to respond to the new evidence under ORS 197.763(4)(b). Poe v. City of Warrenton, 66 Or LUBA 108 (2012).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A letter from the applicant that simply requests withdrawal of a request to vacate a portion of a right-of-way does not constitute "evidence" as defined at ORS 197.763(9)(b), because it does not constitute facts or information offered to demonstrate compliance or noncompliance with the standards believed to be relevant to the decision. Conte v. City of Eugene, 66 Or LUBA 334 (2012).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. ORS 197.763 sets out the minimum procedures the county is required to follow in the conduct of quasi-judicial land use hearings under ORS Chapter 215, and ORS 197.763 does not require that the county provide an applicant with prior copies or notice of the evidence that the county submits at the initial evidentiary hearing on a permit application. Emmert v. Clackamas County, 65 Or LUBA 1 (2012).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A petitioner waives an assignment of error arguing that the hearings officer committed procedural error in accepting new evidence after the close of the evidentiary record, where the petitioner could have objected to the alleged error in the appeal of the hearings officer's decision to the planning commission, but did not. Conte v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 326 (2012).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where an applicant's final written argument rebuts evidence submitted by opponents regarding three mining sites by discussing information about the three sites from the county's inventory of mining sites already in the record, that rebuttal does not introduce "new evidence" into the record contrary to ORS 197.763(6)(e). Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A city council hearing on a planning commission recommendation to approve a planned unit development application is not a "continued" evidentiary hearing for purposes of a code provision implementing ORS 197.763(6) that allows participants to request the opportunity to respond to new evidence submitted at a continued hearing. Claus v. City of Sherwood, 62 Or LUBA 67 (2010).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. An argument that the county erred in accepting "new evidence" in the applicant's final written argument contrary to ORS 197.763(6)(e) does not provide a basis for reversal or remand, where the petitioner makes no effort to demonstrate that the alleged new evidence is in fact new evidence, or challenge the county's findings that the final written argument included no new evidence. Burness v. Douglas County, 62 Or LUBA 182 (2010).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Because ORS 197.763(6)(e) allows an applicant the opportunity to submit final written argument, which may include proposed findings, it is consistent with the statutory scheme to allow an applicant to submit revised proposed findings or conditions of approval and arguments in favor of those revised findings or conditions of approval after the decision maker's tentative oral decision in circumstances where planning staff has objected to some proposed findings or conditions and suggested modified findings or conditions. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 190 (2009).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A staff memorandum submitted after the close of the evidentiary proceedings that includes only staff advice regarding what conclusions the city council could reach based on the evidence in the record is not itself "new evidence" that might trigger the obligation to re-open the record to allow other participants an opportunity to respond. Gooley v. City of Mt. Angel, 56 Or LUBA 319 (2008).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. In resolving an evidentiary challenge, LUBA will not consider evidence supporting the application (1) that was submitted as part of final legal argument after the evidentiary record closed, and (2) that the hearings officer declined to consider for that reason. Lenox v. Jackson County, 54 Or LUBA 272 (2007).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where the local government on remand allows the permit applicant an opportunity to rebut the permit opponent's response to the new evidence, it must allow other parties an opportunity to rebut the permit opponent's response; but the local government is not obligated on remand to allow other permit opponents an additional opportunity to enhance their evidentiary presentation. Rice v. City of Monmouth, 53 Or LUBA 55 (2006).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A local government errs in accepting new information into the record after the public hearing on a matter is closed without allowing other parties an adequate opportunity to respond to the new evidence. Gunzel v. City of Silverton, 53 Or LUBA 174 (2006).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A hearings officer's refusal to leave the record open to allow the petitioners to respond to alleged "new evidence" that was submitted during the final evidentiary hearing is not a basis to reverse or remand the decision, where petitioners fail to establish that in fact "new evidence" was submitted or that there is anything to rebut under the hearings officer's unchallenged interpretation of the applicable code provision. Angius v. Washington County, 52 Or LUBA 222 (2006).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where the evidentiary record has closed and a party believes a local government has improperly allowed legal argument that includes new testimonial evidence, a party arguing that such an impropriety warrants remand by LUBA must (1) adequately identify the objectionable testimony, (2) explain why that testimony goes beyond legal argument or commentary on evidence that is already in the record or for some other reason constitutes new evidence and (3) offer some substantial reason to believe the objectionable testimony had some effect on the ultimate decision. City of Damascus v. Metro, 51 Or LUBA 210 (2006).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Remand is necessary where a decision maker engages in a conversation with the applicant during a site visit regarding a fact in dispute, and later discloses the conversation but does not disclose its content or allow petitioner an opportunity for rebuttal. Gordon v. Polk County, 50 Or LUBA 502 (2005).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. The time to reject or accept new evidence that is submitted after the close of the evidentiary record is before the decision maker deliberates and reaches a tentative decision. A local government cannot accept such untimely evidence, reach a tentative decision based on the entire record, and then adopt a final written decision that belatedly rejects or purports not to rely on the evidence. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 50 Or LUBA 608 (2005).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Petitioners are in no position to fault the city for accepting new evidence during a non-evidentiary hearing, where petitioners were the only persons who testified and were the persons who submitted the new evidence. That the city accepted petitioners' evidence did not convert the hearing into an evidentiary hearing, or require the city to renotice the hearing and provide additional opportunities to present evidence. Patterson v. City of Independence, 49 Or LUBA 589 (2005).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A site visit is not in itself an ex parte contact subject to ORS 227.180(3) or ORS 215.422(3), unless it involves communication between a decision maker and a party or other interested person. Carrigg v. City of Enterprise, 48 Or LUBA 328 (2004).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. The case law requirement that a decision maker disclose information gained from a site visit and offer an opportunity to rebut that information serves a similar purpose to the statutory requirements regarding ex parte contacts: to ensure that land use decisions are based on information received during the public process, and not based on information received outside the public process. Carrigg v. City of Enterprise, 48 Or LUBA 328 (2004).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Any right that a party may have to rebut new evidence under Fasano or ORS 197.763(6)(b) requires that the party contemporaneously assert that right of rebuttal at the time the new evidence is submitted, so that the local government can rule on the merits of the request and allow an appropriate opportunity for rebuttal where such an opportunity is warranted. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 47 Or LUBA 331 (2004).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. LUBA is unable to perform its review function and remand is required where the county rejects, without any explanation, evidence that is arguably relevant to an applicable criterion. Nez Perce Tribe v. Wallowa County, 47 Or LUBA 419 (2004).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. ORS 215.422(4), which excludes certain contacts between planning staff and the local decision maker from the definition of ex parte contacts, does not authorize a decision maker to rely on evidence provided by planning staff that it specifically refuses to include in the record, after the close of the record, without providing an opportunity for rebuttal. Nez Perce Tribe v. Wallowa County, 47 Or LUBA 419 (2004).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A city council does not err in denying an applicant's request for a de novo appeal hearing before the city council, where the city code provides that local appeals are limited to the record before the planning commission and a zoning ordinance provision that permits the city council to hear appeals de novo does not limit the city council's discretion in determining whether it will do so. Smith v. City of St. Paul, 45 Or LUBA 281 (2003).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where a staff report and evidentiary hearings focus on an area within 500 feet of the subject property as the relevant "impact area" for purposes of conducting the conflicts identification and ESEE analysis required by OAR 660-016-0005 and 660-016-0010, the county may not deny an application under Goal 5 based on conflicts in a 15-square-mile area that is identified for the first time in its final decision, without offering the applicant an opportunity to submit evidence and argument responsive to the larger impact area. Hegele v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 357 (2003).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A blanket request to leave the record open in the event new evidence is submitted sometime in the future is insufficient to invoke any right to a continued evidentiary proceeding. To adequately assert such a right, a party must identify the alleged new evidence and request that the record be left open to respond to that identified evidence. Doty v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 34 (2002).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A local government properly rejects evidence submitted after the close of the evidentiary record, where the proponent of the evidence did not adequately request or preserve the opportunity to submit additional evidence. Doty v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 34 (2002).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. That certain documents may not have been provided to the planning commission provides no basis for remand, where the planning commission decision was appealed to the city governing body, the governing body adopted the city's final decision and there is no contention that the disputed documents were provided to the city governing body. Lord v. City of Oregon City, 43 Or LUBA 361 (2002).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where a party and the party's attorney are given an adequate opportunity to rebut the substance of a short letter, the local government commits no error in refusing to provide an additional hearing for the party to offer further rebuttal of the letter. Lord v. City of Oregon City, 43 Or LUBA 361 (2002).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Petitioners fail to establish that they are entitled to a new evidentiary hearing to respond to an interpretation setting an unanticipated evidentiary standard, where petitioners do not describe what additional evidence responsive to the unanticipated interpretation they would produce, or how that evidence differs in substance from evidence already in the record. Stahl v. Tillamook County, 43 Or LUBA 518 (2003).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where a county holds the record open to permit opponents of an application to submit additional evidence and allows additional time for the applicant to respond to any new evidence submitted, in the absence of a request by the opponents for an opportunity to submit surrebuttal evidence, ORS 197.763(6)(c) does not require that the county provide such an opportunity and the county's failure to provide such an opportunity is not error. Van Nalts v. Benton County, 42 Or LUBA 497 (2002).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A county errs to the extent it declares that the county's rural address map is the only source of evidence it will consider in determining the number of existing dwellings in the relevant area. A county may not refuse to consider petitioners' evidence that fewer dwellings exist in the area than shown on the rural address map. Matiaco v. Columbia County, 42 Or LUBA 277 (2002).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where, on remand from LUBA, the local government adopts a procedure that is proposed by the parties and that allows all sides to submit written evidence and written rebuttals, but limits oral testimony at the evidentiary hearing before the local government to summaries and explanations of previous submittals, the procedure is not correctly interpreted to prohibit an oral explanation of previously submitted evidence that includes additional supportive facts in response to the previously submitted written rebuttal. Terra v. City of Newport, 40 Or LUBA 286 (2001).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. When a local government accepts and relies on evidence submitted after the close of the record, without offering participants an opportunity for rebuttal, the decision will be remanded even though a petitioner mistakenly characterizes the procedural error as improper ex parte contact. DLCD v. Umatilla County, 39 Or LUBA 715 (2001).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A city governing body is not required to apply the Oregon Rules of Evidence in its land use proceedings and may rely on hearsay evidence in a planning staff report to reach a conclusion regarding representations that were made to a permit applicant. Reagan v. City of Oregon City, 39 Or LUBA 672 (2001).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Under ORS 197.763(6)(e), a local government may consider final written legal argument. However, a local government may not consider new factual allegations, as part of legal arguments submitted under ORS 197.763(6)(a), without providing an opportunity for rebuttal. Dept. of Transportation v. City of Eugene, 38 Or LUBA 814 (2000).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Absent a state or local provision to the contrary, once the local record is closed to new evidence the local government is not compelled to reopen the record to accept new evidence, no matter how relevant that evidence is to the local government's decision. Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A governing body's refusal to admit audio tapes of the planning commission proceedings into the record on appeal is not reversible error, where the party seeking to enter the tapes into the record fails to demonstrate that the refusal to admit the audio tapes in some way prejudiced the party's participation in the local proceedings. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 297 (1999).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where a partial transcript of a planning commission hearing contains relevant testimony, a local governing body errs by refusing to accept that partial transcript during its de novo appeal hearing. That the local governing body's review is de novo does not mean the local governing body may refuse to accept relevant evidence simply because the evidence was also submitted to a lower level decision maker. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 280 (1999).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Under ORS 215.416(11)(a), a hearings officer is obligated to conduct a de novo hearing that allows the introduction and consideration of all relevant evidence notwithstanding that the evidence could have been presented to the initial decision maker, but was not. Johnson v. Clackamas County, 37 Or LUBA 73 (1999).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A city errs in accepting new evidence from the applicant as part of the applicant's final written argument under ORS 197.763(6)(e), without offering other parties an opportunity to respond to that new evidence. Brome v. City of Corvallis, 36 Or LUBA 225 (1999).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A local government does not violate any statutory or local procedural requirement by allowing an engineer to testify on behalf of the applicant, notwithstanding that the notice of hearing limited the presentation of evidence to applicant and petitioners. DeShazer v. Columbia County, 35 Or LUBA 689 (1999).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Even though the county's admission of evidence may have violated the procedures described in its written notice of hearing, that procedural error does not prejudice petitioners' substantial rights where petitioners had ample opportunity to rebut or object to the admission of that evidence but failed to do so. DeShazer v. Columbia County, 35 Or LUBA 689 (1999).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A local government commits procedural error when it does not allow petitioners the opportunity to address the applicability of an ordinance that had not been identified as an applicable criterion, and then adopts findings based on that ordinance. If the ordinance is extrinsic to the applicable criteria, then it is evidence which the parties have the right to rebut; if the ordinance is an applicable criterion, then it must be identified in the hearing notice with greater specificity than "all other adopted county ordinances." Nicholson v. Clatsop County, 32 Or LUBA 399 (1997).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. The county violates ORS 215.422 when it reopens the record to accept a report received by a commissioner from intervenor, but does not provide an opportunity for other parties to rebut the substance of the ex parte communication. Brown v. Union County, 32 Or LUBA 168 (1996).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where petitioners are denied the opportunity to rebut evidence that is potentially relevant to applicable approval standards in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding, their substantial rights are prejudiced and the challenged decision must be remanded. Jackman v. City of Tillamook, 29 Or LUBA 391 (1995).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where petitioners allege the planning commission denied them an opportunity to submit evidence relevant to a proposed comprehensive plan amendment, but petitioners were able to submit the evidence during a de novo hearing on the proposed plan amendment before the governing body, the alleged error in the planning commission proceedings was cured by the governing body's de novo review. O'Rourke v. Union County, 29 Or LUBA 303 (1995).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where a local government decision includes a determination that an existing use of the subject property is lawful, it was improper for the local government to refuse to accept evidence or argument on this issue during the local proceedings. Penland v. Josephine County, 29 Or LUBA 213 (1995).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where a local governing body improperly accepts potentially relevant new evidence while conducting an on-the-record review of a lower level decision maker's decision, and does not provide petitioners an opportunity to rebut that new evidence, petitioners' substantial rights are prejudiced, and the local government's decision must be remanded. Penland v. Josephine County, 29 Or LUBA 213 (1995).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where petitioners were allowed to submit evidence to the planning commission, and do not identify any additional evidence they tried to submit which was refused by the governing body, any error by the governing body in conducting its hearing "on the record" did not prejudice petitioners' substantial rights. Skrepetos v. Jackson County, 29 Or LUBA 193 (1995).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where petitioners submitted an additional proposal after the local evidentiary record was closed, but petitioners' proposal was nevertheless accepted into the local record, the decision maker did not err by also accepting a staff response to petitioners' proposal. Neuman v. Benton County, 29 Or LUBA 172 (1995).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Petitioner's argument that it was denied a meaningful opportunity to rebut evidence presented at a local government hearing does not provide a basis for remand, if petitioner does not identify any evidence relevant to applicable approval standards that was submitted at the hearing and which petitioner was denied an opportunity to rebut. ONRC v. City of Oregon City, 29 Or LUBA 90 (1995).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. The improper exclusion of evidence relevant to an arguably applicable approval standard is a prejudicial procedural error, where LUBA is unable to determine the improperly excluded evidence could not have affected the decision reached. Wicks v. City of Reedsport, 29 Or LUBA 8 (1995).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where the local governing body improperly accepts new evidence while conducting an on-the-record review of a lower level decision maker's decision, and does not provide petitioners an opportunity to rebut that new evidence, petitioners' substantial rights are prejudiced. Wicks v. City of Reedsport, 29 Or LUBA 8 (1995).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where petitioners do not identify any code, statute or regulation provision requiring a local government to allow parties in land use proceedings to incorporate items into the local record by reference, the local government's refusal to do so is not error. Salem Golf Club v. City of Salem, 28 Or LUBA 561 (1995).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where (1) a local decision maker makes a procedural error in allowing new evidence to be submitted during an on-the-record review; (2) petitioners object to receipt of that new evidence; and (3) the local decision maker does not provide petitioners with an opportunity to rebut the new evidence; LUBA will remand the challenged decision for the local decision maker to provide the required opportunity for rebuttal. Tucker v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 134 (1994).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. If the applicant presented new evidence relevant to the applicable approval standards during the rebuttal period of the local government hearing, and petitioner was denied an opportunity to rebut that evidence, petitioner's substantial rights were prejudiced. Woodstock Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 146 (1994).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A local government may specify the methodology for making documents that are not submitted at the local hearings part of the local record in the local code, or may identify the methodology during the course of the local proceedings. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 725 (1994).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. ORS 197.763(4)(b) establishes a remedy for failure to comply with ORS 197.763(4)(a). Where a document supporting a land use application was not available for review prior to the initial local evidentiary hearing, as required by ORS 197.763(4)(a), but the local government continued the hearing to a later date and made a copy of the document available for review in its planning office prior to the continued hearing, the local government complied with ORS 197.763(4)(b). Bates v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 21 (1994).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Although a local governing body may be authorized to conduct a de novo review of a development application, its refusal to allow petitioner to submit the planning commission decision and staff report on the subject application into the record as relevant evidence prejudices petitioner's substantial right to submit evidence. Furler v. Curry County, 27 Or LUBA 497 (1994).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A local government's failure to make available all evidence in support of a quasi-judicial land use application at the time the notice of hearing is provided, as required by ORS 197.763(4)(a), is a procedural error. However, if such evidence is made available prior to or at the hearing and the hearing record is left open for seven days to allow time for additional written testimony from the parties, petitioners' substantial rights are not violated. Edwards v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 262 (1994).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where petitioners are denied the opportunity to rebut evidence that is relevant to applicable approval standards in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding, their substantial rights are prejudiced and the challenged decision must be remanded. ORS 197.835(7)(a)(B). Mazeski v. Wasco County, 26 Or LUBA 226 (1993).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. There is no basis for the application of the "exclusionary rule," which applies to criminal proceedings, to local land use proceedings. Choban v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 572 (1993).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. In the absence of a local code requirement to the contrary, a local government is not required to allow parties to rebut staff summaries of evidence in the record. McInnis v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 376 (1993).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A local government is free to disregard or give little weight to a party's allegations concerning the substance of a telephone conversation between that party and another person not present at the local hearing. Decuman v. Clackamas County, 25 Or LUBA 152 (1993).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Even though a city may have committed error in accepting evidence concerning traffic impacts, if the issue of traffic impacts was not properly before the city, such a procedural error would provide no basis for reversal or remand. Westlake Homeowners Assoc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 25 Or LUBA 145 (1993).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. LUBA will not look past the written decision to determine whether local government decision makers were influenced by improperly accepted evidence, where the written decision takes the position that the issue to which the disputed evidence relates was not subject to review and that determination concerning the local scope of review is not dependent on the disputed evidence. Westlake Homeowners Assoc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 25 Or LUBA 145 (1993).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where petitioners identify no provision of state statute or local ordinance requiring parties to a quasi-judicial land use proceeding to serve documents they submit to the local government on other parties, another party's failure to serve such documents on petitioners does not violate petitioners' Fasano right to rebut evidence. Chauncey v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 599 (1992).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Rejection of relevant evidence by a local decision maker is, at most, a procedural error. Where a planning commission improperly rejected relevant evidence offered by petitioner, but the governing body conducted a de novo evidentiary hearing and petitioner did not attempt to submit the evidence to the governing body, petitioner's substantial right to submit evidence was not prejudiced. Heiller v. Josephine County, 23 Or LUBA 551 (1992).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where a local code provision prohibits submission of an application for a conditional use permit for a use previously denied within one year of denial, it is error for the local government to refuse to accept evidence concerning whether a proposed conditional use is the same as the conditional use previously denied. Silani v. Klamath County, 22 Or LUBA 735 (1992).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where a local government improperly rejected relevant evidence during its proceeding below, LUBA must remand the challenged decision. Silani v. Klamath County, 22 Or LUBA 735 (1992).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where petitioners failed to take advantage of an opportunity to rebut evidence presented in proceedings below, they did not establish how the local decision maker's alleged procedural error in admitting such evidence caused harm to their substantial rights. ORS 197.835(7)(a)(B). White v. City of Oregon City, 20 Or LUBA 470 (1991).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Regardless of whether a local government informed participants of their right under ORS 197.763(6) to request that the record remain open after the close of the initial evidentiary hearing, if the local government did not leave the record open, it was not obliged to accept a subsequently offered letter as part of the local record. Wissusik v. Yamhill County, 20 Or LUBA 246 (1990).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Petitioner's delivery of evidence to the county counsel's office is adequate to place those materials before the county decision maker and make them part of the local record subject to LUBA review, where (1) the procedures for submitting evidence at times other than during county hearings are not specified in the county code or regulations and were not identified during the course of the proceedings below, (2) the county failed to respond to petitioners' previous request for information regarding the proper procedure for submitting evidence, and (3) petitioner had previously submitted evidence to the county counsel's office, and that material was included in the local record. Wade v. Lane County, 20 Or LUBA 499 (1990).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. Where the local code requires that the governing body remand an appeal to the planning commission if evidence is presented which could not have been presented to the planning commission, and parties offer to the governing body relevant evidence that the planning commission refused to consider, it is error for the governing body not to remand the appeal to the planning commission to consider such evidence. Bloomer v. Baker County, 19 Or LUBA 319 (1990).

25.6.3 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Evidence. A hearings officer's acceptance of evidence submitted after the deadline established by local code provides no basis for reversal or remand where petitioner did not request a continuance, and petitioner fails to explain how he was prejudiced by the hearings officer's action. Reed v. Lane County, 19 Or LUBA 276 (1990).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. LUBA will affirm a governing body's interpretation of a code provision requiring notice to all parties to a land use proceeding that the members of the governing body intend to conduct a site visit "with any party or his representative," as requiring notice only when the members of the governing body expect to conduct the site visit with a party, and not to require notice where a safety escort is unexpectedly provided during the site visit. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. A site visit is not in itself an ex parte contact subject to ORS 227.180(3) or ORS 215.422(3), unless it involves communication between a decision maker and a party or other interested person. Carrigg v. City of Enterprise, 48 Or LUBA 328 (2004).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. The case law requirement that a decision maker disclose information gained from a site visit and offer an opportunity to rebut that information serves a similar purpose to the statutory requirements regarding ex parte contacts: to ensure that land use decisions are based on information received during the public process, and not based on information received outside the public process. Carrigg v. City of Enterprise, 48 Or LUBA 328 (2004).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. A petitioner's failure to object to untimely disclosure of a site visit and to request the opportunity to rebut the site visit precludes assigning error to that disclosure, where the disclosure was made 10 days prior to the hearing at which the local government adopted the final decision, and petitioner could have entered an objection at any time during those 10 days or during the final hearing, but did not. Carrigg v. City of Enterprise, 48 Or LUBA 328 (2004).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. Where a party is present at a rezoning hearing where a county commissioner discloses that he and a county planner made a site visit to the subject property, and that party testifies after the disclosure without objecting to the site visit, the planner's attendance at the site visit or the adequacy of the county commissioner's disclosure of the site visit, that party waives his right to assign error based on the site visit in an appeal at LUBA. Mattson v. Clackamas County, 46 Or LUBA 552 (2004).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. An opportunity to rebut undisclosed evidence obtained on a site visit is not required when that evidence is not the sole basis for a finding, but merely provides a context for integrating other evidence into findings. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. Where members of a local decision making body disclose, at the beginning of the initial evidentiary hearing, that they made site visits to the subject property, and petitioners fail to object to the adequacy of that disclosure, insufficiency of the disclosure cannot be assigned as grounds for reversal or remand. Wicks v. City of Reedsport, 29 Or LUBA 8 (1995).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. Where the local governing body is the final decision maker, after a de novo review of a planning commission decision, failure of members of the planning commission to disclose the substance of observations made during a site visit provides no basis for reversal or remand. Wicks v. City of Reedsport, 29 Or LUBA 8 (1995).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. Where the local decision maker conducted a site view, but failed to place on the record the substance of its site observations and failed to provide the parties any opportunity to rebut the evidence obtained from the site view, the decision maker committed procedural errors that prejudiced petitioners' substantial rights. McNamara v. Union County, 28 Or LUBA 396 (1994).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. Where a hearings officer improperly conducted a site visit without providing prior notice and an opportunity for rebuttal, a governing body decision that relies on findings of the hearings officer based on that improper site visit is subject to reversal or remand. Wilson Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 24 Or LUBA 98 (1992).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. That a hearings officer committed procedural error by conducting a site visit without providing prior notice to the parties, disclosing his observations and providing an opportunity to rebut such observations, does not prejudice petitioners' substantial rights where the final decision on the subject application was made by the governing body, after a de novo review. Wilson Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 23 Or LUBA 708 (1992).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. A hearings officer commits error in conducting a site visit after the public hearing in the local proceeding is closed and without prior notice to the parties of the site visit or an opportunity for the parties to rebut observations that were made during the site visit and relied upon in the decision. Waker Assoc., Inc. v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 233 (1991).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. Where a hearings officer conducts a site visit without giving notice to the parties or providing an opportunity to attend, and states in the decision that his observations during the site visit influenced his analysis of previously submitted evidence, the observations constitute evidence the parties were entitled to know about and to have an opportunity to rebut. Waker Associates, Inc. v. Clackamas County, 21 Or LUBA 588 (1991).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. The right to rebut evidence placed before the local decision maker in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding extends to requiring disclosure of and opportunity to rebut the substance of ex parte communications to and personal site observations by the local decision maker. Angel v. City of Portland, 21 Or LUBA 1 (1991).

25.6.4 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Site Visits. If a decision which relies on evidence from site observations by local decision makers is appealed to LUBA and challenged on substantial evidence grounds, LUBA will review the evidentiary support for that decision, including evidence from such site observations and rebuttal evidence, to determine whether it would be reasonable to rely upon it. Angel v. City of Portland, 21 Or LUBA 1 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. For purposes of taking evidence not in the record under OAR 661-010-0045, a petitioner cannot establish that a person who is not a member of the decision-making body engaged in undisclosed ex parte contacts in violation of ORS 227.180(3), and there can be no legally significant or reversible bias on the part of such a person. Carroll v. City of Malin, 80 Or LUBA 1001 (2019).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. For purposes of taking evidence not in the record under OAR 661-010-0045, where a local government denies an application to rezone property, mere allegations that (1) a decision-maker "habitually engaged in ex parte contacts" that they did not then disclose in compliance with ORS 227.180(3), (2) the decision-maker previously moved to rezone a neighboring property, (3) the local government rezoned the neighboring property "by using procedures and requirements that paled in comparison" to those used in evaluating the subject application, and (4) the decision-maker voted against the subject application are insufficient to establish that the decision-maker may have engaged in ex parte contacts or been motivated by improper biased. Carroll v. City of Malin, 80 Or LUBA 1001 (2019).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. For purposes of taking evidence not in the record under OAR 661-010-0045, allegations that a decision-maker is related to (1) individuals who own property close to the subject property and who oppose the application and (2) the city recorder are insufficient to establish that the decision-maker may have engaged in ex parte contacts or that the decision-maker's vote denying the application may have been motivated by improper bias. Carroll v. City of Malin, 80 Or LUBA 1001 (2019).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A city councilor's statement at the public hearing that he had "made up" his mind to approve the application after reading the materials in the record may be some evidence of bias, viewed in isolation, but where the city councilor subsequently stated that he misspoke, and clarified that he would consider all evidence in the record, including testimony at the hearing, the city councilor's statements, viewed as a whole, are insufficient to demonstrate bias under Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 267 Or App 578, 341 P3d 790 (2014). Aboud v. City of Stayton, 77 Or LUBA 300 (2018).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Speculation by the non-prevailing party in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding that there may have been ex parte contact between the prevailing party's attorney and the local governing body which may have resulted in bias, based solely on the fact that prevailing party's attorney prepared drafts of the decision and findings as well as the final decision and findings that the local governing body adopted falls considerably short of establishing a substantial reason to believe that the prevailing party's attorney had ex parte contacts with the local governing body. Rawson v. Hood River County, 77 Or LUBA 571 (2018).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Statements by a county commissioner that express no more than general appreciation for the economic benefits of a large development proposal fall short of demonstrating that the commissioner is biased or incapable of rendering a decision on the proposal based on the evidence and arguments of the parties. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A letter sent by a county commission chair to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission providing comments in favor of a proposed liquefied natural gas facility is not an "ex parte contact" for purposes of ORS 215.422(3)(a), because it is a not a communication "receiv[ed]" by the county commissioner. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A hearings officer's expressed preference for hearing arguments from the lawyers for represented parties, rather than arguments from unrepresented parties, is insufficient to demonstrate that the hearings officer was biased for or against the application. Further, because the hearings officer was not the final decision-maker, any potential bias on the part of the hearings officer provides a basis for reversal or remand only if that bias tainted the proceedings before the final decision-maker. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. While ORS 215.422(4) exempts communication between staff and decision-makers from the scope of ex parte contacts that must be disclosed under that statute, nonetheless, a county can commit procedural error if a staff communication to a decision-maker includes new evidence outside the record that is relied upon to approve or deny the application. However, a petitioner must offer more than speculation that staff communications with a local decision-maker included new evidence outside the record to establish procedural error requiring remand. Kine v. Deschutes County, 75 Or LUBA 419 (2017).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. LUBA will reject arguments that planning staff exhibited bias in favor of the applicant by requesting the applicant submit additional evidence to address concerns raised at the public hearing before the hearings officer, where nothing in the code or elsewhere prohibits such a request and, in any case, the hearings officer, not planning staff, was the final decision maker. Frewing v. City of Portland, 74 Or LUBA 59 (2016).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Whether a city commissioner's reference to "banana" as an acronym for "build absolutely nothing anywhere near anything" was intended as a criticism of opponents' request for a continuance or was intended as a broader criticism of opponents, it does not demonstrate that the city commissioner was biased against opponents. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 74 Or LUBA 176 (2016).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Read in context, the ORS 227.180(3) requirement for local decision makers to disclose ex parte contacts is limited to proceedings on applications for a permit or zone change, and does not extend to decisions on a zoning classification decision described at ORS 227.160(2)(b). Central Eastside Industrial Council v. City of Portland, 74 Or LUBA 221 (2016).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. LUBA will deny an assignment of error seeking remand for additional disclosures of ex parte communications between citizens and elected commissioners regarding a controversial landfill, where during the proceedings below the county re-opened the record to allow additional disclosures and opportunity for rebuttal, and adopted findings concluding that the county had done everything possible to place into the record the content of ex parte contacts, and the petitioner does not establish that remand for additional disclosures would provide any more detail regarding the content of ex parte communications. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. LUBA will deny a record objection asserting that a newspaper clipping in the record was not placed before the city council, where the minutes of the city council hearing reflect that a city council member read from the clipping as part of her disclosure of ex parte communications, which supports the city's position that the clipping was placed into the record. Port of Umatilla v. City of Umatilla, 70 Or LUBA 527 (2014).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Failure to provide hearing participants an adequate opportunity to rebut an ex parte communication may not warrant remand, if the communication includes no factual or legal assertions relating to a basis for approval or denial. However, remand is necessary to provide an adequate opportunity for rebuttal where the ex parte communication concerns disputed testimony regarding whether and how many neighborhood associations oppose the project, and the decision makers believe such testimony to be relevant to an approval criterion that requires the project to meet the overall needs of the community. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 360 (2013).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. To provide a meaningful opportunity for hearings participants to rebut a disclosed ex parte communication, the decision-maker must (1) consider any objections that the initial disclosure was inadequate and (2) make some response to specific requests for additional information or clarifications that are reasonably necessary for participants to develop rebuttal to material factual and legal assertions in the communication. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 360 (2013).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Remand is necessary where a city's code requires that the city council "shall" vote on a valid challenge to the impartiality of a council member, but the city council ignores a valid challenge and does not vote. That the code provisions governing the required vote state that the city council "may" disqualify the challenged member is properly read in context as authorizing disqualification, and not as granting the city council the discretion to vote or not, as it sees fit. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 360 (2013).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Failure of a city council to vote on a valid challenge to the impartiality of a city council member, as required by city code, prejudices the substantial rights of the challenger, regardless of whether the vote would result in the disqualification of the city council member or whether the member's alleged bias influenced other decision makers. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 360 (2013).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Communications between a staff person and the decision maker, and between a staff person and a party, are not ex parte contacts. However, a decision maker could potentially receive an ex parte contact where a staff person conveys a communication from a party to the decision maker that concerns the land use decision under consideration. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 539 (2013).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. An affidavit indicating that one week after issuing the final decision a decision maker knew that the applicant had agreed to the proposed conditions is an insufficient showing that an ex parte contact might have occurred during the hearing to warrant depositions under OAR 661-010-0045, where there is no indication when or how the decision maker acquired that knowledge. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 539 (2013).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Even assuming that a staff member conveyed to a decision maker during the proceedings below that the applicant had agreed to proposed conditions, that communication is not the kind of communication that requires the decision maker to disclose and offer other parties the opportunity to rebut. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 539 (2013).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. To constitute an ex parte communication that obligates a local government to provide an opportunity for rebuttal, the content of the communication must include something concerning the land use decision at issue that is capable of rebuttal. Where the only content of the alleged communication is that the applicant has agreed to city-proposed conditions, there is simply nothing to rebut or respond to. STOP Tigard Oswego Project, LLC v. City of West Linn, 68 Or LUBA 539 (2013).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A letter objecting that a county commissioner is biased and should not participate in the appeal is not an ex parte contact, where county code does not require that documents submitted in the land use matter be served on the other parties in the appeal and the letter is submitted to the board of county commissioners in the same way many other documents in the appeal were submitted. Warren v. Josephine County, 67 Or LUBA 74 (2013).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a county code requires that bias challenges be filed at least 48 hours before the public hearing on a quasi-judicial matter, and there is no reason why the challenge could not have been filed before or during that hearing, petitioner's challenge filed three days before board of commissioners meeting where the board approved the written decision and findings comes too late. Warren v. Josephine County, 67 Or LUBA 74 (2013).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Bias on the part of a decision maker in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding may be a basis for remand. However, in a LUBA appeal of a city council decision that followed de novo review of a planning commission decision, allegations of bias on the part of a single planning commissioner will provide a basis for remand only if the petitioner shows the alleged bias of the planning commissioner tainted the record that was reviewed by the city council. Friends of the Hood River Waterfront v. City of Hood River, 66 Or LUBA 474 (2012).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A petitioner's motion for an evidentiary hearing to establish bias on the part of a planning commissioner will be denied where (1) the decision on review is a city council decision that followed a de novo review of a planning commission decision, (2) the only claim of impropriety on the part of the planning commission that might have tainted the record on review was a planning commission majority vote to refuse to consider evidence offered by petitioner, and (3) the allegedly biased planning commissioner voted with the planning commission minority to accept the evidence offered by petitioner. Friends of the Hood River Waterfront v. City of Hood River, 66 Or LUBA 474 (2012).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a county commissioner writes a newspaper editorial criticizing petitioner as a "terrorist" because petitioner appeals a land use decision before the county commission, the editorial is evidence of a strong emotional bias that obligates the commissioner to recuse himself. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 65 Or LUBA 246 (2012).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a county commissioner who is biased against the petitioner correctly recuses himself from participating in the decision, but nonetheless makes brief comments in favor of denying petitioner's appeal during the commissioners' deliberations, remand may be necessary if it is impossible for LUBA to determine whether or not the biased commissioner's limited participation influenced the votes or deliberations of the other decision makers. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 65 Or LUBA 246 (2012).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The failure by a member of the decision making body to disclose ex parte contacts that occurred after the hearing at which the decision making body initially voted to deny an application and before the next meeting at which the decision making body adopted the order denying the application violates ORS 227.180(3). Housing Authority of Jackson County v. City of Medford, 65 Or LUBA 295 (2012).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The remedy for violation of ORS 227.180 is not to require an entire rehearing on an application. An adequate remedy is a remand to the city that allows interested persons the opportunity to prepare and present evidence and argument in response to the substance of the ex parte contact. Housing Authority of Jackson County v. City of Medford, 65 Or LUBA 295 (2012).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A hearings officer's existing contractual relationship as an independent part time hearings officer for a local government who is an applicant for a permit from a different jurisdiction, and his participation as an independent hearings officer for the decision-making jurisdiction does not create an appearance that he was biased in the proceedings on the applications. Newell v. Clackamas County, 65 Or LUBA 384 (2012).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. LUBA will not infer bias based on an argument that a hearings officer's decision did not modify any conditions of approval that the county's planning staff suggested or add any additional conditions. Newell v. Clackamas County, 65 Or LUBA 384 (2012).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. An ex parte contact provides no basis for reversal or remand where the contact is disclosed as soon as possible after the contact occurs, the record is reopened, the parties are given an opportunity to request an opportunity to rebut or further explore the contact, and no one takes advantage of that opportunity. Rosenzweig v. City of McMinnville, 64 Or LUBA 402 (2011).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A local government decision maker only has a "conflict of interest," as ORS 244.020(1) defines that term, if the decision would result in a "pecuniary benefit" to the decision maker. Any economic benefit a decision maker might indirectly realize for her accounting and financial planning business by voting in favor of a non-profit organization's permit application to curry favor among the organization's members is too indirect to constitute a "pecuniary benefit," as that term is used in ORS 244.020(1). Rosenzweig v. City of McMinnville, 64 Or LUBA 402 (2011).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. To establish that a land use decision maker is biased, petitioners must establish that the decision maker's decision was a product of positive or negative bias rather than a product of independent view of the facts and law. Any inferences that might be drawn from the fact that a decision maker previously served on a permit applicant non-profit organization's board of directors falls substantially short of establishing the decision maker is biased. Rosenzweig v. City of McMinnville, 64 Or LUBA 402 (2011).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. City council members are not required under ORS 227.180(3) to disclose receipt of an e-mail chain that was forwarded to them by one of the opponents to the application, where the substance of the e-mail chain was placed into the record and the only portion not placed in the record includes nothing related to any issue before the city council that could possibly be rebutted. Bundy v. City of West Linn, 63 Or LUBA 113 (2011).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Even though the challenged decision did not involve an application, similar to ex parte communications before an application is filed, any communications that occurred before a county initiated proceedings to sell park property under ORS 275.330 are not ex parte communications that may run afoul of ORS 215.422(3). Kaye v. Marion County, 62 Or LUBA 57 (2010).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Failure of city council members to disclose that they sit on the board of the city's urban renewal agency, an independent body that earlier had approved modifications to a land sale contract between the agency and the applicant for a planned unit development on the same property sold to the applicant is not a basis for remand under ORS 227.180(3), where the petitioner identifies no "ex parte" communications that occurred between the applicant and city council members sitting on the urban renewal agency board. Claus v. City of Sherwood, 62 Or LUBA 67 (2010).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A mayor's pre-hearing statements of general support for a proposed planned unit development are not sufficient to demonstrate bias in favor of the proposal or that the mayor was unable to engage in the necessary fact-finding and application of law to the facts. Claus v. City of Sherwood, 62 Or LUBA 67 (2010).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Claiming that a hearings officer is biased because he is paid by the local government is far from sufficient to demonstrate that the hearings officer is biased. West v. City of Salem, 61 Or LUBA 166 (2010).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A hearings officer's reference to a separate enforcement proceeding against petitioner for conducting wedding events on his property is not sufficient to demonstrate bias on the part of the hearing s officer. Reed v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 253 (2010).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. LUBA will deny a motion to consider extra-record evidence of the minutes of an urban renewal agency meeting at which the agency's board of directors, made up of the city council members, considered amendments to a sale agreement between the urban renewal agency and the applicant for a land use application then pending before the city planning commission, where the petitioner fails to demonstrate that the minutes include anything that constitutes evidence of bias or an ex parte communication between the applicant and city council members concerning the land use application. Claus v. City of Sherwood, 61 Or LUBA 520 (2010).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Allegations that the planning staff, who were not the final decision makers, were biased in favor of an application are insufficient, even if true, to demonstrate that the final decision makers were biased. Hoskinson v. City of Corvallis, 60 Or LUBA 93 (2009).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A one-way communication from a decision maker to a party is probably not an ex parte communication requiring disclosure under ORS 215.422(3). While such a communication might be some evidence of bias or predisposition, and might be an indication that a meeting subsequently occurred at which ex parte communications were made, the communication itself is not an ex parte communication that requires disclosure. Grubaugh v. Gilliam County, 60 Or LUBA 124 (2009).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. When ex parte contacts are not disclosed until after the close of the record and public hearing, the failure to object to the ex parte contacts does not preclude a petitioner from raising an issue concerning the ex parte contact at LUBA. Grubaugh v. Gilliam County, 60 Or LUBA 124 (2009).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A county commissioner's ownership of nearby property and a residence 1.2 miles away from a proposed church office, without more, is not enough to establish an actual conflict of interest. Catholic Diocese of Baker v. Crook County, 60 Or LUBA 157 (2009).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A county commissioner's attendance at a planning commission hearing with his wife who opposed an application for a church office falls far short of the evidence that LUBA has required to support an allegation of bias. To establish bias, LUBA has generally required evidence of a strong emotional commitment by a decision maker to approve or to defeat an application for land use approval. Catholic Diocese of Baker v. Crook County, 60 Or LUBA 157 (2009).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Parties in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding have a right to a decision by a "tribunal which is impartial in the matter * * *." Fasano v. Washington Co. Comm., 264 Or 574, 588, 507 P2d 23 (1973). However, there is no authority for the propositions that planning staff may not assist applicants for land use permit approval or that planning staff—as opposed to the ultimate local government decision maker—must be impartial in their dealings with applicants for land use permit approval and opponents of such permits. Lulay v. Linn County, 60 Or LUBA 432 (2010).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Failure to disclose ex parte communications that have no bearing on applicable approval criteria or to issues material to approving or denying a land use application does not necessarily warrant remand. Link v. City of Florence, 58 Or LUBA 348 (2009).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. General expressions of support or opposition to a proposed annexation are not ex parte contacts within the meaning of ORS 227.180(3), because they include no factual or legal assertions that bear on approval criteria or on any issue material to approval of the annexation that could possibly be rebutted. Link v. City of Florence, 58 Or LUBA 348 (2009).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. When a petitioner is able to submit all of her evidence into the record and discuss the evidence with the decision maker, the fact that the hearing was contentious and some decision makers were hostile to the petitioner does not mean that the petitioner was denied the opportunity to present her case or failed to receive a full and fair hearing. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 56 Or LUBA 120 (2008).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Because a city council meeting to deliberate on a land use application is a "hearing" for purposes of ORS 227.180(3) and code provisions requiring declaration of ex parte contacts at a hearing and the right of the participants to rebut the substance of such contacts, it is also a "hearing" for purposes of a code provision allowing the participants to challenge the qualifications of any city councilor for bias. Gooley v. City of Mt. Angel, 56 Or LUBA 319 (2008).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A city's position that bias challenges can be made under the city code only at ORS 197.763 evidentiary hearings and cannot be advanced at deliberative meetings is inconsistent with the purpose of that code provision, to ensure that the city's quasi-judicial decision-making is as free from bias as possible. Gooley v. City of Mt. Angel, 56 Or LUBA 319 (2008).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Allegations that two city councilors were biased because their close relatives were parties to the land use proceeding were sufficient to invoke city procedures to resolve bias challenges, and the city's failure to follow those procedures requires remand. Gooley v. City of Mt. Angel, 56 Or LUBA 319 (2008).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. An isolated statement by a design review commission member that an application is "a poster-child for floor-area transfer" is not sufficient to show he prejudged an application for permit approval. And even if it was, it would provide no basis for reversal or remand where (1) the design review commissioner did not participate in the decision on the permit, and (2) the decision on appeal to LUBA is a city council decision that affirmed the design review commission decision and there is no basis for imputing any prejudgment by the design review commissioner to the city council. Trinkaus v. City of Portland, 56 Or LUBA 771 (2008).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where evidence was introduced at a city council hearing by the mayor and a city councilor, but that evidence was not directed at any approval criterion and the city did not deny the application on any grounds that were based on or related to the improperly generated evidence, their actions did not demonstrate that they were incapable of making a decision based on the evidence before them. Taylor v. City of Canyonville, 55 Or LUBA 658 (2008).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Actions or statements by a city council member supporting a land use application pending before the county is not indication of bias with respect to a related land use proposal that later comes before the city council, because the council member's earlier actions and statements occurred when the councilor was not constrained by the obligation of a quasi-judicial decision maker. Woodard v. City of Cottage Grove, 54 Or LUBA 176 (2007).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Comments made by city council members during proceedings on an earlier application may be considered in determining whether the council members exhibited bias in a later, closely related application. Woodard v. City of Cottage Grove, 54 Or LUBA 176 (2007).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. City council members impermissibly departed from their roles as impartial quasi-judicial decision makers and exhibited animus towards opponents where the council members independently acted to obtain evidence outside the record that was inflammatory towards the opponents and where one council member co-signed a letter personally attacking one of the opponents. Woodard v. City of Cottage Grove, 54 Or LUBA 176 (2007).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Bias sufficient to disqualify a quasi-judicial decision maker was not shown where a mayor was present at but did not participate in the biased actions of other council members and further demonstrated the ability to decide the matter based on applicable laws and evidence properly before the decision maker. Woodard v. City of Cottage Grove, 54 Or LUBA 176 (2007).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Oral statements made by a decision maker in a public hearing that may conflict with a later vote do not provide a basis for reversal or remand. LUBA reviews the written findings made in support of a decision not statements made during public hearings. Sommer v. Josephine County, 52 Or LUBA 209 (2006).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Arguments that a planning commission member was biased do not provide a basis to reverse or remand a city council's decision, at least where the city council conducted its own evidentiary hearing, adopted its own written order and findings, and was the final decision maker on the application. Krishchenko v. City of Canby, 52 Or LUBA 290 (2006).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Under a code provision prohibiting ex parte contacts "in connection with any issue involved in the hearing," petitioner fails to demonstrate that communication between staff and the decision maker involving potential donation of land on the property is an indirect ex parte contact with the developer, where the remand hearing is limited to a single issue, and potential donation of land has nothing to do with that remand issue. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 52 Or LUBA 518 (2006).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A petitioner fails to demonstrate that the decision maker is biased or improperly influenced to approve a subdivision by the possibility that the developer may donate open space land to the city, where the decision maker twice voted to approve the subdivision prior to learning that the developer and staff had discussed donation. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 52 Or LUBA 518 (2006).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. An elected decision maker's desire to please the voters by approving development that may lead to a donation of open space land to the city, combined with receipt of a stipend for service as an elected official, does not constitute a potential or actual financial conflict of interest that would prevent the decision maker from participating in a land use decision. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 52 Or LUBA 518 (2006).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where petitioner appeals the city council's determination that a local appeal of a planning commission decision was untimely filed, petitioner's allegation that members of the planning commission are biased does not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 51 Or LUBA 602 (2006).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Petitioner fails to demonstrate bias on the part of the decision maker where a member of county board of commissioners acknowledges that he has "some issues and conflicts" with petitioner, but then expresses his belief that those issues will not affect his ability to make a neutral decision. The Board member's failure to address petitioner's bias challenge in detail is not, in itself, sufficient to demonstrate bias. Heiller v. Josephine County, 50 Or LUBA 562 (2005).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Statements by city officials that they would prefer a privately funded convention center rather than a publicly financed one, do not demonstrate that the city decision makers are biased and incapable of making a decision on the merits. O'Shea v. City of Bend, 49 Or LUBA 498 (2005).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Local quasi-judicial decision makers are not expected to be free of bias but they are expected to (1) put whatever bias they may have aside when deciding individual permit applications and (2) engage in the necessary fact finding and attempt to interpret and apply the law to the facts as they find them so that the ultimate decision is a reflection of their view of the facts and law rather than a product of any positive or negative bias the decision maker may bring to the process. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Central Point, 49 Or LUBA 697 (2005).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The ORS 227.178(3) prohibition on "shifting the goal posts" and the prohibition described in Alexanderson v. Clackamas County, 126 Or App 549, 869 P2d 873 (1994), on reinterpretations of local provisions that are a "product of a design to act arbitrarily and inconsistently from case to case" are distinct and independent prohibitions, although both may be invoked in particular circumstances. Bemis v. City of Ashland, 48 Or LUBA 42 (2004).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Comments by city council members expressing frustration at being placed in a position of either having to reinterpret a code provision or apply a preexisting interpretation that the city council believed to be erroneous fall short of demonstrating that the city council's decision to reinterpret the code provision and apply the new interpretation is a "product of a design to act arbitrarily and inconsistently from case to case," where the record as a whole indicates that the city council was primarily motivated to make a legally correct decision rather than to act arbitrarily or inconsistently from case to case. Bemis v. City of Ashland, 48 Or LUBA 42 (2004).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A site visit is not in itself an ex parte contact subject to ORS 227.180(3) or ORS 215.422(3), unless it involves communication between a decision maker and a party or other interested person. Carrigg v. City of Enterprise, 48 Or LUBA 328 (2004).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The case law requirement that a decision maker disclose information gained from a site visit and offer an opportunity to rebut that information serves a similar purpose to the statutory requirements regarding ex parte contacts: to ensure that land use decisions are based on information received during the public process, and not based on information received outside the public process. Carrigg v. City of Enterprise, 48 Or LUBA 328 (2004).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Ex parte contacts between the hearings officer and planning staff are likely to constitute reversible error, for purposes of determining whether evidentiary proceedings under OAR 661-010-0045 are warranted, only if those contacts involve discussion of the substance or merits of the decision. Grabhorn v. Washington County, 48 Or LUBA 657 (2005).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A deposition of the decision maker to determine the content of ex parte contacts is warranted under OAR 661-010-0045, where the record and affidavits submitted by the parties demonstrate that such contacts occurred and may have involved discussion of the merits of the decision, but the record and affidavits do not include information necessary for LUBA to resolve anticipated assignments of error seeking to reverse the decision based on those ex parte contacts. Grabhorn v. Washington County, 48 Or LUBA 657 (2005).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. An ambiguous statement that could be understood to refer to ex parte contacts, but could also be understood to refer to contacts that were not ex parte contacts might be sufficient to warrant an evidentiary hearing to clarify the meaning of the reference, but is not sufficient to support a conclusion that there were improper undisclosed ex parte contacts. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 47 Or LUBA 331 (2004).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. ORS 215.422(4), which excludes certain contacts between planning staff and the local decision maker from the definition of ex parte contacts, does not authorize a decision maker to rely on evidence provided by planning staff that it specifically refuses to include in the record, after the close of the record, without providing an opportunity for rebuttal. Nez Perce Tribe v. Wallowa County, 47 Or LUBA 419 (2004).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where petitioner alleges bias of a planning commissioner who was not the final decision maker, petitioner must show that the record before the final decision is somehow tainted by the involvement of the allegedly biased planning commissioner. Nez Perce Tribe v. Wallowa County, 47 Or LUBA 419 (2004).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a decision maker discloses that he had participated in a newspaper interview that dealt with development on marginal farmland in general, but that he had not made up his mind with respect to a pending application for a partition and nonfarm dwellings on allegedly marginal farmland, that disclosure does not demonstrate that the decision maker could not make a decision based on the facts and applicable approval standards and, therefore, the decision maker was not obliged to recuse himself from participating in the decision regarding the pending application. Knoche v. Crook County, 46 Or LUBA 85 (2003).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Viewed in context with other evidence of tension between a city councilor and an applicant, the councilor's refusal to withdraw her motion to deny the applicant's appeal of a planning commission decision that denied a request for lot line adjustment, after the city attorney explained that the motion was premature because the city council had not yet conducted the required hearing on the appeal, makes the issue of the city councilor's impartiality an exceedingly close one. However, LUBA will not conclude the city councilor was biased against the applicant, where the councilor's statements suggest it is possible that the city councilor made her premature motion based on her review of the planning commission record and did not understand that an on-the-record hearing was required before the city council could make its final decision. Smith v. City of St. Paul, 45 Or LUBA 281 (2003).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Alleged statements made by a decision maker at a social function that the decision maker would listen to the evidence and testimony regarding an application for a plan amendment and zone change, but would nevertheless vote to approve the application are not sufficient to establish prejudgment bias where the accuracy of those statements were disputed and the decision maker stated that he had considered the testimony and evidence and was prepared to make a decision based on that testimony and evidence. Roberts v. Clatsop County, 44 Or LUBA 178 (2003).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. LUBA will deny an assignment of error alleging a subdivision approval should be remanded because a decision maker had a potential conflict of interest where (1) the statements that petitioners rely on to establish a potential conflict do not appear to do so, and (2) the petitioner made no attempt to question the decision maker below about the statements. McFall v. City of Sherwood, 44 Or LUBA 493 (2003).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Contacts between a local government and its attorney regarding a pending rezoning proceeding are not ex parte contacts, even where the local government is the applicant. Dimone v. City of Hillsboro, 44 Or LUBA 805 (2003).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where evidence relating to an approved application for a Head Start program might lend support to petitioners' allegation that denial of their subsequent application for a migrant worker Head Start program was based on improper discrimination, LUBA will grant a motion to take evidence not in the record to compare the two applications. Oregon Child Devel. Coalition v. City of Madras, 43 Or LUBA 567 (2002).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Newspaper articles reflecting community members' bias against an application for a migrant worker Head Start program are not properly attributable to the decision makers, and LUBA will deny a motion to consider the newspaper articles in an appeal of the denial of the Head Start application. Oregon Child Devel. Coalition v. City of Madras, 43 Or LUBA 567 (2002).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A proposed city comprehensive plan amendment that could have the effect of preventing the establishment of a Head Start program in the proposed amendment area does not demonstrate that the city's denial of an earlier, unrelated application for a migrant worker Head Start program in that area was based on racial prejudice or discrimination, and LUBA will deny a motion to take evidence related to the comprehensive plan amendment in an appeal of the denial of the Head Start application. Oregon Child Devel. Coalition v. City of Madras, 43 Or LUBA 567 (2002).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The fact that an application for a migrant worker Head Start program was hotly debated at the local level does not demonstrate that the decision makers engaged in undisclosed ex parte contacts, and LUBA will deny a motion to take evidence relating to the local debate in an appeal of the denial of the Head Start application. Oregon Child Devel. Coalition v. City of Madras, 43 Or LUBA 567 (2002).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Decision maker bias in a land use matter must be deduced from the totality of the circumstances. Where a decision maker is a member of a church congregation and the church is an applicant for a land use permit, the decision maker's church membership does not, in itself, require the decision maker's recusal for bias. Friends of Jacksonville v. City of Jacksonville, 42 Or LUBA 137 (2002).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a land use decision maker is a member of a church congregation and the church has applied for a land use permit, and the decision maker has expressed concern regarding the impact proposed conditions of approval would have on church operations but nevertheless declares that she is able to render a decision regarding the church's application based on the facts and law before her, that decision maker has not impermissibly prejudged the application. Friends of Jacksonville v. City of Jacksonville, 42 Or LUBA 137 (2002).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a land use decision maker is a member of a church congregation and the church has applied for a land use permit, and the decision maker has (1) testified as an individual in favor of the application prior to his election to the decision making body; and (2) stated that he did not believe he had to be objective regarding the application and would support the application "all the way to the Supreme Court," the decision maker has impermissibly prejudged the church's application and, absent some need for his participation in order to reach a decision, recusal is required. Friends of Jacksonville v. City of Jacksonville, 42 Or LUBA 137 (2002).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Statements by a decision maker that he is "kinda prejudiced" are insufficient to demonstrate bias or prejudgment where, read in context, it is clear that the decision maker was capable of and did make his decision based on the evidence and argument before him. Potts v. Clackamas County, 42 Or LUBA 1 (2002).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. LUBA will deny a motion to take evidence not in the record to consider the affidavits of three county commissioners explaining that they are biased against the applicant and cannot impartially hear a local appeal involving the applicant, where the commissioners' declaration of bias is stated in the challenged decision, the assignment of error directed at the commissioners' bias presents a legal question not dependent on the facts stated in the affidavits, and the proponent fails to demonstrate to LUBA that the affidavits are necessary to resolve that assignment of error. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 41 Or LUBA 573 (2001).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a board of commissioners declares that it is biased, recuses itself from an appeal of a hearings officer's land use decision, and designates a hearings officer's decision as the county's final decision, the hearings officer's decision may be appealed to LUBA, notwithstanding local code provisions that grant a party a right to a local appeal before the board of commissioners. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 41 Or LUBA 316 (2002).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The right to an impartial tribunal in quasi-judicial land use proceedings, as first articulated in Fasano v. Washington Co. Comm., 264 Or 574, 588, 507 P2d 23 (1973), permits a board of commissioners to refuse to hear an appeal where the board of commissioners determines it is biased and there is a hearings officer decision that may be designated as the final decision of the county on the merits. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 41 Or LUBA 316 (2002).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The right to an impartial tribunal will supersede petitioners' right to a local appeal, where denying the local appeal will not deprive petitioners of an opportunity to have a local decision reviewed on the merits. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 41 Or LUBA 316 (2002).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where the only evidence of decision maker bias is a transcript of a recorded telephone conversation between petitioner and a former city councilor 10 months after the challenged decision was made, and the context and content of the conversation make it relatively clear that the councilor based his decision on the evidence and testimony provided during the proceedings leading up to the challenged decision, petitioner fails to demonstrate that the councilor prejudged petitioner's application merely because the councilor did not make any comments during the city proceedings, and made the motion to deny petitioner's appeal. Howard v. City of Madras, 41 Or LUBA 122 (2001).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. An allegation that a city councilor told a city planning commissioner that he "did not want any new service stations" in the city is not sufficient to establish a reasonable basis to believe that the city councilor was biased, and a motion to take evidence not in the record will be denied. Space Age Fuels, Inc. v. City of Sherwood, 40 Or LUBA 577 (2001).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Evidence that a county has approved all prior applications for telecommunications towers does not, by itself, demonstrate that the county is biased in favor of siting telecommunications towers. Jordan v. Douglas County, 40 Or LUBA 192 (2001).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A county governing body's decision to enter a settlement agreement that includes an agreement that the governing body will adopt certain ordinances does not render the public hearings that are subsequently held prior to adopting such ordinances something other than the kind of public hearing required by ORS 215.060, where the county counsel advised the governing body that it was free not to adopt the settlement ordinances and a transcript of the local proceedings shows the governing body did not believe it was legally bound to adopt the settlement ordinances without modification. Waibel v. Crook County, 40 Or LUBA 67 (2001).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The requirement imposed by Fasano v. Washington Co. Comm., 264 Or 574, 507 P2d 23 (1973), for a fair and impartial tribunal does not apply to legislative land use proceedings. Waibel v. Crook County, 40 Or LUBA 67 (2001).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A city councilor has prejudged an application and must recuse himself from participating in a decision on the application where the councilor, prior to the time a land use matter came before the city council, actively opposed an application, and sent correspondence to the other city councilors in which he advocated in opposition to the application, stating that the law and evidence point to denial of the application. Halvorson Mason Corp. v. City of Depoe Bay, 39 Or LUBA 702 (2001).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The bias of one decision maker may warrant reversal or remand of a land use decision pursuant to ORS 197.835(9)(a)(B), where participation of that decision maker prevented petitioner from receiving a full and fair hearing, one of petitioner's substantial rights. Halvorson Mason Corp. v. City of Depoe Bay, 39 Or LUBA 702 (2001).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. It is error for a member of a local governing body to announce that he is close friends with the parties and will not participate in the decision on a variance request, but nevertheless later make the motion to approve the written decision and vote on the written decision. However, the error is harmless where the member of the governing body does not participate in the evidentiary hearing or the 4-0 oral vote at the conclusion of the evidentiary hearing to approve the variance. Reagan v. City of Oregon City, 39 Or LUBA 672 (2001).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The speculative possibility that a part-time hearings officer with a private legal practice might, in the future, represent developers of a lot within a subdivision approved by that hearings officer does not constitute a potential conflict of interest that would preclude that hearings officer from approving or denying the application. Mitchell v. Washington County, 39 Or LUBA 240 (2000).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. That a local government is both the applicant and decision maker does not, in itself, mean the local government decision maker is biased, and does not preclude the local government from making a decision on its own application. Crook v. Curry County, 38 Or LUBA 677 (2000).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. An ex parte communication must be disclosed only if it concerns the decision or action at issue in a land use decision. When the complaint about contact with the local government does not contain an assertion that the contact concerned issues material to the land use proceeding, the alleged communication does not provide a basis for invalidating the decision. Crook v. Curry County, 38 Or LUBA 677 (2000).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A mayor's and city councilor's statements that they personally disliked an applicant's business are not sufficient to demonstrate the city council was biased or denied the applicant a fair and impartial hearing, where other statements by the mayor and city council make it clear that they put aside their personal feelings about the applicant's business in making their decision. Oregon Entertainment Corp. v. City of Beaverton, 38 Or LUBA 440 (2000).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Debatable reasoning in a land use decision is not sufficient to demonstrate the decision maker is biased. Oregon Entertainment Corp. v. City of Beaverton, 38 Or LUBA 440 (2000).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A local government decision on an application for land use approval that is made without disclosing or offering an opportunity to rebut an ex parte communication must be remanded for a plenary rehearing on the application. Opp v. City of Portland, 38 Or LUBA 251 (2000).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Because ORS 227.180(3) protects participants' right to a decision free of undisclosed ex parte contacts, redressing a violation of the statute on remand requires more than reopening the record to disclose and offer an opportunity to rebut the substance of those communications. Although the city need not repeat the evidentiary proceedings leading up to the initial decision, the city must adopt a new decision approving or denying the application based on the record as a whole, including any evidence submitted in rebuttal. Opp v. City of Portland, 38 Or LUBA 251 (2000).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a decision maker discloses ex parte contacts at the beginning of the local proceedings, petitioners must request clarification of the ex parte contacts or otherwise object to the adequacy of the disclosure during the local proceedings. Because petitioner failed to object below, petitioner's assignment of error does not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Wild Rose Ranch Enterprises v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 368 (1999).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A petitioner moving to present evidence of ex parte contacts or bias must offer some substantial reason to believe that evidence of such ex parte contacts or bias can be established and that such ex parte contacts or bias would lead to reversal or remand. This burden is not carried where petitioner simply speculates that the decision maker's and a local opponent's membership in an animal rights organization may have led to improper ex parte contacts or bias during local proceedings on petitioner's dog kennel. Tri-River Investment Co. v. Clatsop County, 36 Or LUBA 743 (1999).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Council members have a duty to disclose whether the proximity of their residences to the subject property causes a potential or actual conflict of interest. ODOT v. City of Mosier, 36 Or LUBA 666 (1999).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Bias or prejudgment sufficient to disqualify a public official must be demonstrated by clear and unmistakable evidence. Evidence that the city council adopted a resolution reserving a site for a proposed memorial and comments by one city council member that he intended to take into account the applicant's reliance on the resolution fails to demonstrate in a clear and unmistakable manner that the city council's subsequent decision to approve the memorial was biased or the result of prejudgment. Carlsen v. City of Portland, 36 Or LUBA 614 (1999).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Petitioner's speculations that ex parte communications regarding a proposed rezoning might have occurred between a local decision maker and the decision maker's spouse, who was a proponent of the rezoning, are insufficient to establish that such communications occurred, or that the decision maker has a personal interest in the proposal. Herman v. City of Lincoln City, 36 Or LUBA 521 (1999).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Failure by a hearings officer to comment on certain opposition testimony or adopt the legal interpretations offered in that testimony does not establish bias. Cotter v. Clackamas County, 36 Or LUBA 172 (1999).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. An evidentiary hearing to establish decision makers' "personal interest" in a proposal due to their ownership of proximate property is not warranted because, even if true, such a "personal interest" could not provide a basis for reversing or remanding the decision. ODOT v. City of Mosier, 34 Or LUBA 797 (1998).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Communication between a local governing body or its staff and its insurance carrier are not ex parte contacts requiring disclosure under ORS 227.180(3). Marshall v. City of Yachats, 34 Or LUBA 724 (1998).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a challenged decision is a legislative decision, the statutory provision requiring disclosure of ex parte contacts does not apply. Casey Jones Well Drilling, Inc. v. City of Lowell, 34 Or LUBA 263 (1998).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Petitioner must show, in a clear and unmistakable manner, that a decision maker was incapable of reaching a decision based on the evidence and argument in order to establish a claim of personal bias against the decision maker. St. Johns Neighborhood v. City of Portland, 34 Or LUBA 46 (1998).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a local code prohibits ex parte contacts between a decision maker and a "person interested in the outcome of the proceeding," a party moving for an evidentiary hearing to prove such ex parte contacts occurred must provide specific reasoning why that person qualifies as such an "interested" party. Merely describing the person as a professional land developer or community leader is not specific enough. Opp v. City of Portland, 33 Or LUBA 820 (1997).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. If a local government determines an ex parte contact that is prohibited by local code occurred during local proceedings, other parties must be allowed the opportunity to rebut the substance of the ex parte contact. Opp v. City of Portland, 33 Or LUBA 654 (1997).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The public meetings law, ORS 192.610 to 192.690, and a local ordinance that requires all evidence, deliberation, and decisions to be made before the public and on the record, do not prohibit the board of county commissioners from having an off-the-record consultation with legal counsel during the course of a public hearing. Collins v. Klamath County, 32 Or LUBA 338 (1997).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The county violates ORS 215.422 when it reopens the record to accept a report received by a commissioner from intervenor, but does not provide an opportunity for other parties to rebut the substance of the ex parte communication. Brown v. Union County, 32 Or LUBA 168 (1996).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Because the county's violation of ORS 215.422 is not a procedural error, petitioner is not required to show that his substantial rights were prejudiced by the county's error in order to obtain a remand. Brown v. Union County, 32 Or LUBA 168 (1996).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Petitioners' speculation concerning contacts that could have occurred between county staff and the board of commissioners and postulation regarding bias fails to establish that the city commissioners were incapable of making a decision based on the evidence and arguments before them due to bias or that the commissioners prejudged the application. Richards-Kreitzberg v. Marion County, 32 Or LUBA 76 (1996).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A single, unexplained reference to an earlier use in a nonconforming use determination hearing is not a reasonable basis for a belief that an undisclosed ex parte contact took place and would not justify granting a motion for an evidentiary hearing. Fraley v. Deschutes County, 32 Or LUBA 27 (1996).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Waiver of fees, expressions of sympathy for the plight of the applicant and the postponement of a vote resulting in continuance of a hearing do not establish that the county commission did not reach its decision by applying relevant standards based on the evidence and arguments presented. Moore v. Coos County, 31 Or LUBA 347 (1996).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A memorandum from planning staff to the city council concerning interpretation of the city code is not evidence. Therefore, that petitioners had no opportunity to rebut the substance of staff's memorandum at a continued hearing provides no basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision. Sullivan v. City of Woodburn, 31 Or LUBA 192 (1996).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Under ORS 197.763(6)(b), oral evidence submitted at a continued hearing provides no basis for a request that the record be left open for a response. Therefore, that petitioners had no opportunity to rebut the substance of testimony given at a continued hearing provides no basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision. Sullivan v. City of Woodburn, 31 Or LUBA 192 (1996).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A motion for evidentiary hearing will be denied where petitioners do not make the requisite threshold showing that there is a reasonable basis to believe that ex parte contacts probably took place, and offer no supporting legal authority indicating that such contacts would warrant reversal or remand of the county's decision. Richards-Kreitzberg v. Marion County, 31 Or LUBA 540 (1996).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A site visit attended by several of the petitioners, the applicant, and one of the county commissioners that occurred a month prior to the filing of the conditional use application at issue was not an ex parte contact between the applicant and the decision maker. Richards-Kreitzberg v. Marion County, 31 Or LUBA 540 (1996).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Because communication between a county commissioner and an attorney representing the county regarding a pending conditional use application is not an ex parte contact required to be disclosed under ORS 215.422(4), an evidentiary hearing is not warranted to determine if such communication occurred. Richards-Kreitzberg v. Marion County, 31 Or LUBA 540 (1996).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. To establish bias, petitioners must establish that the decision maker was incapable of making a decision based on the evidence and arguments of the parties; petitioners' assertions and conjecture regarding the conclusions of one or more city councilors do not meet this standard. Sparks v. City of Bandon, 30 Or LUBA 69 (1995).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. In contending their right to an impartial tribunal was denied, petitioners have the burden of showing the local decision maker was biased or prejudged the application and did not reach a decision by applying relevant standards based on the evidence and argument presented. Jackman v. City of Tillamook, 29 Or LUBA 391 (1995).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. To establish bias, petitioner must show that the decision makers were either unable or unwilling to make a decision by applying relevant standards to the evidence and arguments before them. Pend-Air Citizen's Comm. v. City of Pendleton, 29 Or LUBA 362 (1995).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Under ORS 215.422(4), a communication between a member of the board of commissioners and county staff is not an ex parte contact required to be disclosed pursuant to ORS 215.422(3). Therefore, that the board chairman did not disclose in the local record the contents of his conversation with the county code compliance officer is not error. Nehoda v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 251 (1995).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. To establish bias, petitioners must establish the decision maker was incapable of making a decision based on the evidence and arguments of the parties. Nalette v. City of Klamath Falls, 28 Or LUBA 709 (1995).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. To demonstrate a decision maker is biased, petitioners must establish the decision maker was incapable of making a fair decision in the matter, considering all of the evidence and arguments presented. Shapiro v. City of Talent, 28 Or LUBA 542 (1995).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A letter signed by three of seven city councilors requesting that the planning commission expedite its consideration of a permit, which was never given to the planning commission, is not an ex parte contact and does not show the city council was biased. Smith v. City of Phoenix, 28 Or LUBA 517 (1995).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where the record demonstrates that two city council members had numerous ex parte contacts with the applicant and failed to disclose those contacts and provide an opportunity for rebuttal, as required by ORS 227.180(3), remand is required. Smith v. City of Phoenix, 28 Or LUBA 517 (1995).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. That a hearings officer, after withdrawal of the challenged decision pursuant to ORS 197.830(12)(b), accepted proposed findings from intervenors without notice to petitioners, and subsequently adopted those findings as his own, is insufficient to establish bias or prejudgment. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 417 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A petitioner may not assert his own ex parte contacts with the decision maker as a basis for reversal or remand, where the contacts were disclosed and petitioner did not object to the adequacy or completeness of the disclosure. Jones v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 193 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A hearings officer's failure to disclose that his father and petitioner were teaching colleagues at the same junior high school and the hearings officer attended that junior high school as a student does not provide a basis for questioning the hearings officer's impartiality. Jones v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 193 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Neither language in a hearings officer's decision rejecting petitioners arguments as "groundless" or "without merit," nor the hearings officer's knowledge of county civil penalty proceedings against petitioner and petitioner's pending legal action against the county concerning the civil penalty proceedings, demonstrates the hearings officer lacked the requisite impartiality in reaching a decision. Jones v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 193 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Under ORS 215.422(3), parties in county permit proceedings are entitled to disclosure on the record of the substance of any ex parte communications and an opportunity to rebut the substance of the ex parte communication at the first hearing following the communication. Cole v. Columbia County, 28 Or LUBA 62 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. That a local decision maker's two separate disclosures of an ex parte contact are inconsistent to some degree, does not mean they are insufficient to constitute the "public announcement of the content of the [ex parte] communication" required by ORS 215.422(3). Cole v. Columbia County, 28 Or LUBA 62 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where an ex parte contact occurs after close of the evidentiary hearing in a county permit proceeding, and the county reopens the evidentiary hearing, announces the ex parte contacts and allows the parties to rebut those ex parte contacts, the county's action satisfies the ORS 215.422(3) requirement that the "announcement of the content of the communication and of the parties' right to rebut the substance of the communication [be] made at the first hearing following the communication where the action will be considered[.]" Cole v. Columbia County, 28 Or LUBA 62 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. That a local government owns certain property and is the applicant for plan and zone map amendments for that property does not, in itself, mean the local government decision maker is biased, and does not preclude the local government decision maker from making a decision on its own application. Sahagian v. Columbia County, 27 Or LUBA 592 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Correspondence and conversations between parties to a local land use proceeding and local government staff are not unlawful ex parte contacts. McKenzie v. Multnomah County, 27 Or LUBA 523 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The existence of a "potential" conflict of interest does not disqualify an elected local government official from voting on a legislative land use decision. Rea v. City of Seaside, 27 Or LUBA 443 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. An adjustment committee's vote to adopt a tentative decision on an application for an adjustment prior to close of the evidentiary record does not demonstrate bias, where the adjustment committee subsequently considered, and its final decision addresses, evidence and arguments submitted after its tentative decision was adopted. Edwards v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 262 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. To demonstrate the local government decision maker was biased, petitioner must establish the decision maker exhibited personal bias or was incapable of making a decision by applying relevant standards to the facts and argument presented. Stern v. City of Portland, 26 Or LUBA 544 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Allegations that the local decision maker failed to disclose ex parte contacts, as required by ORS 215.422(3), provide no basis for reversal or remand where there is no admission by the decision maker or other evidence, either in the record or offered through a motion for evidentiary hearing pursuant to ORS 197.830(13)(b), that an ex parte contact occurred. Eppich v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 498 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. To establish actual bias or prejudgment on the part of a local decision maker, petitioners have the burden of showing the decision maker was biased or prejudged the application and did not reach a decision by applying relevant standards based on the evidence and argument presented. Eppich v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 498 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. LUBA will not presume that a letter influenced subsequent decisions of a local decision maker. In order to support a claim of bias, petitioner must establish that the decision maker was incapable of making a decision based on the evidence and argument presented. Poddar v. City of Cannon Beach, 26 Or LUBA 429 (1994).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. There is no prohibition against decision makers consulting with staff during quasi-judicial land use proceedings and no requirement that such consultation occur in the presence of other parties. Sorte v. City of Newport, 26 Or LUBA 236 (1993).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a member of a decision making body fails to disclose an ex parte contact until after the evidentiary record is closed, ORS 227.180(3) is violated, and LUBA must remand the decision. Derry v. Douglas County, 26 Or LUBA 25 (1993).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a local decision maker discloses an ex parte contact during local deliberations on a proposal, and provides no opportunity for rebuttal, LUBA will remand the decision for the local government to provide petitioner with an opportunity to explore the nature of the contact and to provide rebuttal. Garrigus v. City of Lincoln City, 25 Or LUBA 754 (1993).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Local decision makers in quasi-judicial land use proceedings are not required to maintain the "appearance of impartiality" required of judges, but rather to have "actual impartiality," the ability to make a decision based on the argument and evidence before them, rather than on prejudgment or personal interest. Spiering v. Yamhill County, 25 Or LUBA 695 (1993).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. To establish actual bias or prejudgment on the part of a local decision maker, the petitioner has the burden of showing the decision maker was biased or prejudged the application and did not reach a decision by applying relevant standards based on the evidence and argument presented. Spiering v. Yamhill County, 25 Or LUBA 695 (1993).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. If the contents of an ex parte communication are not publicly announced and placed in the record, as required by ORS 227.180(3), a city official's request for responses to the ex parte communication does not provide the opportunity for rebuttal required by ORS 227.180(3)(b). Horizon Construction, Inc. v. City of Newberg, 25 Or LUBA 656 (1993).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A general objection to the record requesting that speakers in a transcript be identified, because it would be easier to prepare the petition for review, does not provide a sufficient basis to sustain the objection. A request that a particular speaker in a transcript in the record be identified, because that speaker was a decision maker below and his dialogue establishes the existence of impermissible ex parte contacts, provides a sufficient basis to sustain that aspect of the record objection. Derry v. Douglas County, 25 Or LUBA 790 (1993).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a local government's staff briefs an absentee decision maker concerning matters in the record and does not impermissibly advocate denial of the application, but rather simply provides administrative support to the decision maker, the fact that petitioners had no opportunity to rebut the substance of that staff briefing provides no basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision. McInnis v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 376 (1993).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A party's submission of proposed findings to a local decision maker does not constitute an ex parte contact warranting reversal or remand. In the absence of a local code provision to the contrary, there is no error in a local government's utilization of such a process. Caine v. Tillamook County, 25 Or LUBA 209 (1993).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a settlement agreement in a lawsuit previously filed by intervenor against a county simply says the county will consider a rezoning application for intervenor's property, as it is required to do under ORS 215.416(2) in any case, the settlement agreement is irrelevant to an application for a replacement dwelling on the subject property, and does not establish bias or prejudgment by the county decision maker. Heceta Water District v. Lane County, 24 Or LUBA 402 (1993).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A local government decision maker is entitled to consult with its attorney regarding evidence submitted during the evidentiary phase of the local proceeding and interpretive issues. Parties have no right to rebut the substance of a local government attorney's advice to the local government decision maker. Linebarger v. City of The Dalles, 24 Or LUBA 91 (1992).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. In establishing actual bias or prejudgment on the part of a local decision maker, the burden is on petitioner to show the decision maker was biased or prejudged the application and did not reach its decision by applying applicable standards based on the evidence and argument presented. Heiller v. Josephine County, 23 Or LUBA 551 (1992).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. To establish actual bias or prejudgment on the part of a local government decision maker, the burden is on petitioners to establish that the decision maker was biased or prejudged the application and did not reach its decision by applying applicable standards based on the evidence and argument presented. Rath v. Hood River County, 23 Or LUBA 200 (1992).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Delay in disclosing an ex parte contact until after the close of the public hearing, and failure to make an announcement of the right to rebut the substance of the ex parte communication, as required by ORS

227.180(3)(b), are at most procedural errors. Horizon Construction, Inc. v. City of Newberg, 23 Or LUBA 159 (1992).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a new city councilor discloses his prior participation in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding and declares that he can render an unbiased decision on the matter following a remand from LUBA, that the city councilor is a realtor who might benefit through sale of lots in the subdivision in the future is too speculative to support a determination that his decision is influenced by bias or self interest. Southwood Homeowners Assoc. v. City of Philomath, 22 Or LUBA 742 (1992).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where the planning department is not the decision maker, contacts between the planning department and neighbors of the applicant need not be disclosed by the decision maker under ORS 215.422(3). Marson v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 497 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Although under ORS 215.422(3) it may be error for a hearings officer to fail to disclose prior contacts with the planning department, it is a procedural error. LUBA may not reverse or remand on the basis of procedural error unless such error prejudices petitioner's substantial rights. Petitioner's substantial rights are not prejudiced by such error where petitioner was aware of and had an opportunity to respond to the substance of the contacts with the planning department. Marson v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 497 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A board of county commissioners need not provide parties an opportunity to rebut a memorandum in which the county counsel provides legal advice concerning a pending local land use appeal. Such communications are not ex parte contacts. ORS 215.422(4). Toth v. Curry County, 22 Or LUBA 488 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A petitioner may not assert the occurrence of his own ex parte contacts with the decision maker as a basis for reversal or remand, where the contacts were disclosed and petitioner did not object to the adequacy or completeness of the disclosure of such ex parte contacts. Toth v. Curry County, 22 Or LUBA 488 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. LUBA will not presume a local government decision maker is partial simply because the local government is the applicant for land use approval. Oregon Worsted Company v. City of Portland, 22 Or LUBA 452 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. In establishing actual bias or prejudgment on the part of a local government decision maker, the burden is on petitioner to show the decision maker was biased or prejudged the application and did not reach its decision by applying applicable standards based on the evidence and argument presented. Oregon Worsted Company v. City of Portland, 22 Or LUBA 452 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. That the initial administrative decision maker was not impartial would be insufficient grounds to reverse or remand a challenged decision, where petitioner was afforded a de novo review of the administrative decision, including a public hearing, by a hearings officer. Oregon Worsted Company v. City of Portland, 22 Or LUBA 452 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. To establish a claim of bias sufficient to result in reversal or remand of a challenged decision, a petitioner is required to clearly demonstrate that the public officials charged with bias are incapable of making a decision on the basis of the evidence and argument presented. Cummins v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 129 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Personal bias sufficiently strong to disqualify a public official must be clearly demonstrated. A petitioner has the burden of demonstrating that the public official was incapable of making a decision based on the evidence and argument before him. Schmaltz v. City of Hood River, 22 Or LUBA 115 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Contacts between city decision makers and planning staff are by definition not ex parte contacts. ORS 227.180(3) and (4). Holladay Investors, Ltd. v. City of Portland, 22 Or LUBA 90 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. While the requirement that local governments carrying out public land development projects grant land use approvals to themselves presents inherent appearance of bias problems, such appearance problems, in and of themselves, present no basis for reversal or remand. Holladay Investors, Ltd. v. City of Portland, 22 Or LUBA 90 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A city attorney's statement at the beginning of the city council hearing, to the effect that parties are welcome to rebut ex parte communications, satisfies the requirement of ORS 227.180(3)(b) that a public announcement of the parties' right to rebut the substance of an ex parte communication be made at the first hearing following the communication. Brown & Cole, Inc. v. City of Estacada, 21 Or LUBA 392 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. That a decision maker may have interpreted the local plan and code incorrectly in some respects does not establish that the decision maker was biased or had undisclosed ex parte contacts. Waker Associates, Inc. v. Clackamas County, 21 Or LUBA 588 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Read in context, a hearings officer's findings and conclusions describing a commercial development as "garish" do not demonstrate bias or prejudgment. Carsey v. Deschutes County, 21 Or LUBA 118 (1991).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. In order to establish bias on the part of the decision maker, petitioner must show that the decision maker either has a personal stake in the outcome of the proceeding or has prejudged the matter. LUBA will not infer the existence of bias on the part of a decision maker. Kittleson v. Lane County, 20 Or LUBA 286 (1990).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where the city council conducted a de novo review of the planning commission's decision, only the city council members are the decision makers, and actions by the city planner and planning commission members do not demonstrate bias on the part of the city decision makers. Knapp v. City of Jacksonville, 20 Or LUBA 189 (1990).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Allegations that the city council misinterpreted plan and code provisions and overlooked items in the record, even if true, would simply demonstrate error in the decision made by the city council, not that the council members had prejudged the matter and were incapable of making an objective decision on petitioners' subdivision application based on the evidence and argument before them. Knapp v. City of Jacksonville, 20 Or LUBA 189 (1990).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. It is not error for a governing body to provide a lower local tribunal with a memorandum in the nature of a declaratory ruling interpreting certain code provisions while an application to which those code provisions apply is pending before the lower tribunal. Even if it were a procedural error, there would be no prejudice if petitioners had an adequate opportunity in a local appeal to address the interpretation and applicability of the code provisions in question before the governing body. Hoffman v. City of Lake Oswego, 20 Or LUBA 64 (1990).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Even if the planning commission chairman's participation in the planning commission proceedings on a proposed comprehensive plan amendment were improper, de novo review of the proposed plan amendment by the city council cured any such impropriety. Burk v. Umatilla County, 20 Or LUBA 54 (1990).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. That a member of the county counsel's office acts as hearings officer does not, itself, deny the petitioner an unbiased decision maker, nor does it necessarily imply that improper ex parte contacts occurred between the hearings officer and the board of commissioners. McNulty v. Marion County, 19 Or LUBA 367 (1990).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. The planning commission's error in failing to consider the propriety of a commissioner's participation in the decision on the subject application, where the issue was raised before the commission, is procedural and, therefore, petitioner must establish the error caused prejudice to his substantial rights. Murphey v. City of Ashland, 19 Or LUBA 182 (1990).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. If the governing body holds a de novo hearing on an appeal of the planning commission's decision on the subject application, such hearing cures any prejudice due to a planning commissioner's allegedly improper participation in the planning commission proceedings. Murphey v. City of Ashland, 19 Or LUBA 182 (1990).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where a mayor's ex parte contacts were completely disclosed, although late in the deliberations and after an incomplete disclosure earlier in the proceedings, and the mayor invited challenges and inquiries, the remedial purpose of ORS 227.180(3) is nevertheless served. Where petitioners did not object to the timing and manner of the disclosure, and do not show their substantial rights were violated, there is no basis for remand. Walker v. City of Beaverton, 18 Or LUBA 712 (1990).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A mayor's disclosure of ex parte contacts with former associates and political supporters at most creates an appearance of impropriety and does not show actual bias. Walker v. City of Beaverton, 18 Or LUBA 712 (1990).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Where the record shows the ex parte contacts alleged by petitioner were disclosed during local hearings, such ex parte contacts provide no basis for reversal or remand. Douglas v. Multnomah County, 18 Or LUBA 607 (1990).

25.6.5 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. Standing alone, the fact that a city council approved a federal block grant for a homeless shelter does not disqualify the city council on the basis of bias from considering a subsequent land use application for the homeless shelter. Beck v. City of Tillamook, 18 Or LUBA 587 (1990).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where state statute requires that a local government provide either a public hearing before ruling on an application for a statutory permit or an opportunity for an appeal that includes a de novo public hearing, although the local government may require a notice of appeal that sets forth with reasonable particularity the issues that the appealing party will raise at the hearing, the local government may not, consistent with the statute, (1) make that notice requirement a jurisdictional bar to obtaining the hearing, (2) limit the issues specified to five types of issues, or (3) approve or reject requests for hearings based on a qualitative assessment of how well the appellant has explained the issues specified. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 79 Or LUBA 96 (2019).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – Impartial Tribunal. A city councilor's statement in the comment section of an online blog article that a specific application should be approved in order to "get[] this particular monkey off of [the applicant's] back" is sufficient to demonstrate both actual bias and that the councilor has so prejudged the matter as to be incapable of determining its merits based on the evidence and arguments presented, and any subsequent decision on the application in which the biased councilor participates will be remanded, to allow the council to consider the application without the biased councilor's participation. A statement made by the biased councilor during a public hearing on the application that he will render an impartial decision does not cure his demonstrated actual bias. Niederer v. City of Albany, 79 Or LUBA 305 (2019).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. When a county opts to approve a permit without a public hearing, any person who is adversely affected or aggrieved, or who is entitled to notice of the decision may appeal a decision made without a hearing. The county cannot require participation prior to a decision, either by attending a conference (that may or may not have occurred), or providing written comments, or in any other manner. Additionally, the county may not enact additional restrictions to prevent a person who is entitled to file an appeal under the ORS 215.416(11)(a)(A) right to file a local appeal. Hood River Valley Residents Comm. v. Hood River County, 78 Or LUBA 282 (2018).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Deferral of compliance with an approval standard to a subsequent proceeding under Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992), or Gould v. Deschutes County, 227 Or App 601, 206 P3d 1106 (2009), may not be permissible at all where the approval standard at issue invokes a particular process that is explicitly linked to submittal of the development application, requiring consultation and dispute resolution between the applicant, the local government, and a sovereign Native American Tribe before development approval. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. A local government errs in imposing a condition of approval deferring consideration of compliance with a comprehensive plan policy requiring the applicant and county to undertake a process to consult and resolve differences with local Native American tribes before approving development in an estuary, where the deferral is to an ad hoc proceeding without any assurances that the deferred proceeding will actually occur, and the deferral is not supported by findings demonstrating that deferral is permissible under Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992), or Gould v. Deschutes

County, 227 Or App 601, 206 P3d 1106 (2009). Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where no statute or local code provision requires that a city council, in making the city's final decision on a request for a zoning classification as described in ORS 227.160(2)(b), conduct the city council meeting pursuant to quasi-judicial land use procedures requiring notice and an evidentiary hearing, the city council does not err in conducting the meeting pursuant only to the procedures governing a public meeting. Central Eastside Industrial Council v. City of Portland, 74 Or LUBA 221 (2016).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. If a local government in granting planned development approval wishes to defer a finding that is required at the time of planned development approval to a subsequent, future proceeding, it must ensure that the public will be provided the same participatory rights at the future proceeding that they have at the time of planned development approval. Rosenzweig v. City of McMinnville, 64 Or LUBA 402 (2011).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. A tentative subdivision approval decision that imposes a condition of approval that the applicant must submit a revised tentative subdivision plat to reflect an amendment to the application that was submitted before the local government adopted its decision is not accurately characterized as an improper requirement for a replat without public participation. Rosenzweig v. City of McMinnville, 64 Or LUBA 402 (2011).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. When approving a subdivision where approval criteria must be applied in a proceeding where the public has participatory rights, a city may defer findings on a required approval criterion to a later proceeding, so long as that later proceeding is one in which the public has participatory rights. Boucot v. City of Corvallis, 61 Or LUBA 459 (2010).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. The obligation to conduct a "hearing at least for argument" under ORS 227.180(1)(a)(B) only applies when a city council conducts a review of a lower body's decision. The obligation does not apply when the city council declines review thereby making the lower body's decision the city's final determination. Mazorol v. City of Bend, 59 Or LUBA 260 (2009).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Code procedures that distinguish between "Type II" permit decisions that can be made without an initial hearing, with an opportunity for affected persons to appeal to a de novo hearing, and "Type III" permit decisions that require an initial hearing, do not violate the privileges and immunities clause by granting "privileges" to participants of Type III proceedings that are denied Type II participants. Kane v. City of Beaverton, 56 Or LUBA 240 (2008).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Although a local government is obligated to open the evidentiary record to allow the parties to address any new criteria that may be applied on remand from LUBA, where a local government applies the same criterion on remand that it did in its initial decision and merely cites different comprehensive plan policies to explain how it interprets that criterion, the local government is not obligated to reopen the evidentiary record. Neighbors 4 Responsible Growth v. City of Veneta, 52 Or LUBA 325 (2006).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. A local government errs in deferring a determination of compliance with a discretionary permit criterion requiring that development protect riparian vegetation and aesthetic resources to a subsequent staff review that does not provide for notice or hearing. Moreland v. City of Depoe Bay, 48 Or LUBA 136 (2004).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. That comprehensive plan policies apply to a challenged grading permit, and thus the permit is a "land use decision" as defined by ORS 197.015(10), does not necessarily mean that the city is obligated to provide a hearing on the grading permit. Not all permits that are land use decisions are also statutory "permits" as defined by ORS 215.402 and 227.160 and subject to statutory requirements to provide a hearing or opportunity for a hearing. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 566 (2004).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. A local government does not err in failing to provide an evidentiary hearing on remand to accept updated information regarding the current status of petitioner's property, where LUBA's remand did not require the local government to conduct additional evidentiary hearings, and petitioner fails to identify any authority that requires the local government to conduct an additional evidentiary hearing to accept updated information. Manning v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 1 (2003).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. A city denial of petitioners' request for an evidentiary hearing after remand from LUBA is not error, where (1) petitioners had an opportunity to present evidence and argument during the city's initial proceedings; (2) the city did not apply new approval criteria or consider new evidence in making its decision on remand; and (3) petitioners do not provide a reason why the initial evidentiary proceedings were inadequate to address petitioners' application. Martin v. City of Dunes City, 45 Or LUBA 458 (2003).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where a hearings officer finds that it is feasible to comply with an approval standard, and imposes conditions to ensure compliance, the issue becomes whether that finding is adequate and supported by substantial evidence, not whether the hearings officer improperly deferred a finding of compliance to a later review stage. The fact that the hearings officer addresses the possibility that the solution found to be feasible might not work, and finds that if so DEQ would require that the project be scaled back, does not mean that the hearings officer deferred a finding of compliance with the approval standard or impermissibly delegated that finding to DEQ. Baker v. Lane County, 43 Or LUBA 493 (2003).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. A local government's decision to request that an applicant prepare revised findings to respond to a LUBA remand does not, by itself, obligate the local government to provide a hearing following LUBA's remand. Arlington Heights Homeowners v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 185 (2001).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Parties that seek to demonstrate that a local government erred by adopting an interpretation of local land use legislation after the opportunity for argument and evidentiary presentations closes must demonstrate (1) that the interpretation was unforeseeable, and (2) that the party can produce new evidence that is different from evidence in the record and is directly responsive to the unanticipated interpretation. Gutoski v. Lane County, 155 Or App 369, 963 P2d 145 (1998). Arlington Heights Homeowners v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 185 (2001).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where LUBA remands a land use decision for inadequate findings, parties have no unqualified right to demand a hearing to present additional argument or evidence under Morrison v. City of Portland, 70 Or App 437, 689 P2d 1027 (1984). Arlington Heights Homeowners v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 185 (2001).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. A city rezoning decision conditioned on the applicant providing a geotechnical report and allowing the city to retain an independent engineer to ensure adequate monitoring and mitigation of environmental hazards during construction as part of the site development permit process, which does not provide for public hearings, does not defer discretionary decision making to a later stage of review. In that circumstance, the conditions are properly viewed as being designed to support the city's threshold finding that environmental hazards on the subject property do not impact adjoining properties in violation of comprehensive plan objectives. Neighbors for Livability v. City of Beaverton, 40 Or LUBA 52 (2001).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. A nonbinding preliminary PUD approval is equivalent to a tentative decision following a pre-application conference or review, and therefore does not trigger the statutory requirement under ORS 227.175(3) for a public hearing or the right of local appeal to challenge a permit decision rendered without a prior public hearing. Neighbors for Sensible Dev. v. City of Sweet Home, 40 Or LUBA 21 (2001).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. A finding of feasibility of compliance with a code standard requiring adequate fire protection, conditioned on the fire marshal's written approval of a proposed emergency turnaround, does not impermissibly defer a finding of compliance with that standard to a second stage of review that fails to provide notice and opportunity for hearing, where the finding of feasibility of compliance is based on evidence that the proposed emergency turnaround is acceptable to the fire marshal. Mitchell v. Washington County, 37 Or LUBA 452 (2000).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. A local code provision requiring an "adequate turnaround" is not satisfied by deferring the decision concerning the design of the turnaround to the fire district where (1) there will be no opportunity for public comment or a hearing, and (2) designs required by the fire district will require adjustments to or elimination of one or more lots. Tenly Properties Corp. v. Washington County, 34 Or LUBA 352 (1998).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. In order for a county to find it is feasible to comply with a code requirement for an "adequate turnaround," it must have a proposed turnaround to review. The county may not defer development and approval of a proposed turnaround to a later stage where there is no opportunity for public hearing. Tenly Properties Corp. v. Washington County, 34 Or LUBA 352 (1998).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. A local government has not deferred compliance with mandatory approval criteria where it grants tentative subdivision approval with the condition that development plans be reviewed by a geotechnical engineer prior to the issuance of construction permits. Once a local government has determined that compliance with a mandatory criterion is feasible, it may impose conditions of approval to ensure compliance with that criterion. No hearing on the geotechnical report is required. Property Rights and Owners, Ltd. v. City of Salem, 34 Or LUBA 258 (1998).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where a local code requires that manufactured home parks "which contain land within the floodplain district" be subject to a "Type III" review, Type III review is required to approve a proposed manufactured home park, notwithstanding that no "development" is proposed for the portion of the park located in the floodplain district. Johnston v. City of Albany, 34 Or LUBA 32 (1998).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. A county does not commit a procedural error where local ordinances allow the county to call up a hearings officer decision and refer it back for reconsideration without first providing an opportunity for a hearing. A party is not prejudiced by such a summary procedure where it is provided an opportunity to appeal the hearings officer's decision on reconsideration. R/C Pilots Association v. Marion County, 33 Or LUBA 532 (1997).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. ORS 197.175(10)(a) requires the city to provide, on appeal from a decision made without a hearing, at least one hearing at which any issue may be raised. Johns v. City of Lincoln City, 32 Or LUBA 195 (1996).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where, on remand from LUBA, the county corrects an error in its decision, it is not required to follow the procedures that were required during the initial proceeding. Richards-Kreitzberg v. Marion County, 32 Or LUBA 76 (1996).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. When the city zoning ordinance makes final approval of a tentative subdivision plan a limited land use decision appealable to LUBA, a decision applying the ordinance is not a "tentative decision" that can be appealed locally at a hearing pursuant to ORS 227.175(10). Azevedo v. City of Albany, 29 Or LUBA 516 (1995).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. ORS 197.763 governs how a quasi-judicial land use hearing is conducted, not whether one is required. ORS 197.763 does not confer a right to a quasi-judicial land use hearing where such a right does not otherwise exist. Save Amazon Coalition v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 335 (1995).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Fasano v. Washington Co. Comm., 264 Or 574, 507 P2d 23 (1973), does not independently confer a right to a hearing prior to a local government determination on compliance with particular code requirements, where none is conferred by the statutes or local regulations governing such land use decisions. Save Amazon Coalition v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 335 (1995).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where LUBA remands a decision because the local decision maker failed to adopt findings explaining its determination of compliance with relevant approval standards, and the local decision maker was not required to hold a hearing before making its initial decision, the local decision maker is not required to hold a hearing on remand. Save Amazon Coalition v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 335 (1995).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where LUBA remands a local government decision because it lacks findings of compliance with relevant approval standards, the local government must, at a minimum, conduct a hearing on remand to allow the parties an opportunity to present argument based on the possible interpretations to be adopted by the local government on remand. Friends of the Metolius v. Jefferson County, 28 Or LUBA 591 (1995).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where a local government is required to adopt a new decision on remand, it must conduct a hearing and provide notice of that hearing, at least for the purpose of allowing argument on the proposal's compliance with the standards to be addressed on remand. Collins v. Klamath County, 28 Or LUBA 553 (1995).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. If a "permit" decision is erroneously is processed as a limited land use decision, without a public hearing or an opportunity to request a hearing through a local appeal, then the challenged decision is a "land use decision" made without providing a hearing, and the deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal with LUBA is governed by ORS 197.830(3). Fechtig v. City of Albany, 27 Or LUBA 666 (1994).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Decisions concerning development of property applying the elements of equitable estoppel require the exercise of factual and legal judgment and, therefore, are permits. Where a local government fails to provide a local public hearing or opportunity for appeal of such a permit decision, the deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal the decision to LUBA is governed by ORS 197.830(3). DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where a permit applicant receives a public hearing and decision from a local government and, under the local code, an appeal to the governing body may be decided without further public hearing, the governing body commits no error by denying the applicant's appeal at a public meeting without further notice or public hearing. Van Veldhuizen v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 468 (1994).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where the local code provides a possibility of, but not a right to, a second public hearing on appeal of a hearings officer's decision, the appeal may be denied without providing an additional public hearing, and the code need not include standards for determining whether to grant an additional public hearing. Van Veldhuizen v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 468 (1994).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where adoption of the challenged decision required the exercise of factual and legal judgment, the decision required the exercise of discretion and, consequently, approves a "permit." Under these circumstances, it is error for the local government to fail to provide petitioner with notice and opportunity for hearing, where at least some of petitioner's members were entitled to notice if a public hearing had been scheduled. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where the local code establishes procedures and notice requirements for hearings on administrative actions, but does not require that determinations of compliance with conditions imposed on administrative action approvals themselves be processed as administrative actions, proceedings to determine compliance with such conditions are not required to follow the hearing and notice procedures for administrative actions. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 20 Or LUBA 208 (1990).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where LUBA determined in a previous appeal that a local government properly found compliance with applicable code standards and, through conditions, deferred responsibility for developing particular technical solutions to the planning commission, and LUBA's decision was not appealed, the local government is entitled to determine compliance with the conditions of approval administratively, without notice and public hearing. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 20 Or LUBA 208 (1990).

25.6.6 Local Government Procedures – Hearings – When Required. Where an amended code provides discretionary criteria for approval of minor land divisions, it is error for the code to fail to require or provide for notice and hearing before the local government makes a final decision concerning a proposed minor land division. Nicolai v. City of Portland, 19 Or LUBA 142 (1990).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Although balancing competing comprehensive plan policies is permissible in the quasi-judicial context only when the standards themselves are incompatible, local governments have more flexibility to balance policies in the legislative context. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 81 Or LUBA 683 (2020).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A proposed land use that requires a conditional land use permit must be processed under quasi-judicial, rather than legislative, procedures where the applicable county code provision specifies that conditional uses in the exclusive farm use zone are subject to conditional use criteria and "shall be reviewed" according to the county's quasi-judicial review procedures. Further, according to Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers v. Board of Comm., 287 Or 591, 602-03, 601 P2d 769 (1979), the Oregon Supreme Court established a three-factor test to determine whether a land use matter is quasi-judicial or legislative, and where all three factors indicate that the county's action is quasi-judicial in nature, the county also erred in processing the application under its legislative rather than its quasi-judicial procedures. VanDyke v. Yamhill County, 78 Or LUBA 530 (2018).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Where a county code provision governing the conduct of proceedings on remand is not limited by text or context to remands of quasi-judicial decisions, a county does not err in applying those provisions to govern the conduct of proceedings on remand of a legislative decision. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. An ordinance that amends the width and features of a buffer area between urban and rural lands is properly viewed as a legislative rather than quasi-judicial decision, where the ordinance was adopted as part of a legislative process that was not bound to result in a decision, the modified buffer affects over 135 acres of land that stretch over one mile in length, and the amendments potentially affect hundreds of property owners. Forest Park Neighborhood Assoc. v. Washington County, 73 Or LUBA 193 (2016).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. That a comprehensive plan map amendment may be quasi-judicial, and therefore potentially approvable by a planning commission, does not mean relevant statutes may not require that action be taken by the governing body before the map amendment can become final and effective. Housing Land Advocates v. City of Happy Valley, 73 Or LUBA 405 (2016).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A hearings officer's decision on a property owner's request for an interpretation as to whether approving a floating home development in a zone that allows such development requires an exception to Goal 14 is a quasi-judicial decision rather than a legislative decision. Consequently, the "raise it or waive it" provisions of ORS 197.763(1) apply. Squier v. Multnomah County, 71 Or LUBA 98 (2015).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. The fact that some changes to uses allowed in a zoning district that are adopted by a legislative land use regulation amendment could also have been accomplished through a quasi-judicial rezoning decision does not provide a basis for recharacterizing a legislative land use decision as a quasi-judicial land use decision. Stevens v. Clackamas County, 68 Or LUBA 490 (2013).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A notice of decision's characterization of a decision as legislative when it is actually a quasi-judicial decision does not, in itself, warrant remand so long as the relevant criteria were applied and there were no procedural errors that prejudiced petitioner's substantial rights. Warren v. Josephine County, 67 Or LUBA 74 (2013).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Where a right-of-way vacation process was initiated by a city council and could be abandoned at any time after initiation, the first Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 601 P2d 769 (1979), factor, which is whether the process is bound to result in a decision, suggests the decision is legislative rather than quasi-judicial. Heitsch v. City of Salem, 65 Or LUBA 187 (2012).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Where a right-of-way vacation decision was bound to "apply preexisting criteria to concrete facts,' the second Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 601 P2d 769 (1979), factor suggests the decision is quasi-judicial rather than legislative. Heitsch v. City of Salem, 65 Or LUBA 187 (2012).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. The third Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 601 P2d 769 (1979), factor is whether the action is directed at a closely circumscribed factual situation or a relatively small number of persons. Where a decision vacates a vacant alley right-of-way over a small, 673-square-foot area with a handful of adjoining property owners, the third Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers factor suggests the decision is quasi-judicial rather than legislative. Heitsch v. City of Salem, 65 Or LUBA 187 (2012).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. The Strawberry Hills 4 Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 602-03, 601 P2d 769 (1979), factors for distinguishing between legislative and quasi-judicial decisions are difficult to apply to distinguish between legislative and quasi-judicial decisions in the land use context, since almost all land use decisions that are initiated by an application require that the decision making body reach a decision, and in almost all cases a land use decision maker is bound to apply some sort of "preexisting criteria to concrete facts." That leaves the third inquiry, "closely circumscribed factual situation," which the Court of Appeals has said is less important than the other inquiries. Weber Coastal Bells v. Metro, 64 Or LUBA 221 (2011).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Where the "preexisting criteria" that must be applied in approving a regional light rail facility are more in the nature of a delegation of authority to site the facility where the approving body prefers, the second of the Strawberry Hills 4 Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 602-03, 601 P2d 769 (1979), factors does not require that the decision be viewed as quasi-judicial. Weber Coastal Bells v. Metro, 64 Or LUBA 221 (2011).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. ORS 227.186(2), which requires that legislative acts be adopted by ordinance, does not apply retroactively to invalidate neighborhood boundaries that were established by resolution before ORS 227.186(2) took effect in 1998. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 116 (2009).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A quasi-judicial decision on an application for a property line adjustment is not transformed into a de facto legislative zoning code amendment simply because the property line adjustment is arguably inconsistent with an approval criterion. Such a decision is at most an erroneous quasi-judicial decision that may be subject to reversal or remand if timely appealed, but it does not abrogate or amend the zoning code. Ebar v. Harney County, 59 Or LUBA 201 (2009).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Where a petitioner alleges a county erred by adopting a land use decision as a legislative decision rather than a quasi-judicial decision, but petitioner identifies no error that resulted from adopting the decision as a legislative decision rather than a quasi-judicial decision, petitioner's allegations provide no basis for reversal or remand. Carver v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A land use decision that amends comprehensive plan and zoning ordinance text to create a new plan map and zoning map district, without applying that new district to any property, is properly viewed as a legislative decision rather than a quasi-judicial decision. Carver v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Under Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 602-603, 601 P2d 769 (1979), three factors are considered to distinguish between quasi-judicial and legislative decisions. The "apply existing criteria to concrete facts" factor is less important than the other two, particularly where the decision adopts new land use laws and does not apply those new laws or existing land use laws to grant land use approval for a single property or a small number of properties. Carver v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. While respondents may supply argument and record citations in support of a local governments' legislative decision to supplement any adopted findings, respondents cannot recharacterize or change a legislative decision's stated decision-making rationale to be something that is at odds with the decision-making rationale that is expressed in the legislative decision itself. Friends of French Prairie v. Marion County, 58 Or LUBA 387 (2009).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A decision that adds an aggregate mining site to the county's comprehensive plan inventory of significant mineral and aggregate resources and adopts background documents to the comprehensive plan, is a plan text amendment rather than a plan map amendment, and therefore under the county's code the decision is subject to procedures and standards applicable to legislative plan amendments. Rickreall Community Water Assoc. v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 76 (2006).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A decision that amends the comprehensive plan and zoning maps for a 20-acre parcel in single ownership is properly viewed as a quasi-judicial decision under Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers, and therefore the county erred in conducting the hearing and adopting the decision under legislative procedures, which do not provide written notice to adjoining landowners. Sullivan v. Polk County, 49 Or LUBA 543 (2005).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Annexation of a portion of road with one owner, though not required to result in a decision, is quasi-judicial, and therefore must be supported by findings addressing applicable standards. Patterson v. City of Independence, 48 Or LUBA 155 (2004).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A city-initiated annexation involving an area of 310 acres consisting of 97 parcels that is neither bound to result in a decision, nor an action directed at a closely circumscribed factual situation or relatively small number of persons is a legislative rather than quasi-judicial decision under Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 601 P2d 769 (1979). Cutsforth v. City of Albany, 48 Or LUBA 304 (2004).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A decision that repeals comprehensive plan text, adopts new plan text to allow for mixed-use development throughout the city, and applies newly adopted plan and zoning designations to a 275-acre property is a legislative "major plan change" rather than a quasi-judicial "minor plan change," where the local code definition limits "minor plan changes" to plan map changes. Citizens for Protection of Neighborhoods v. City of Salem, 47 Or LUBA 111 (2004).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Where a decision includes discrete determinations that, viewed in isolation, would constitute quasi-judicial decisions, whether the decision is viewed as legislative or quasi-judicial depends on the character of the whole decision. The entire decision will either be legislative or quasi-judicial, not a hybrid of both. NWDA v. City of Portland, 47 Or LUBA 533 (2004).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Assuming, without deciding, that it is reversible error to combine a unitary legislative proceeding with a geographically and otherwise unrelated site-specific proposal, a city decision that applies a height bonus to a particular property that is within a 535-acre study area subject to a number of legislative plan and land use regulation amendments is not geographically or otherwise unrelated to the legislative proceeding. NWDA v. City of Portland, 47 Or LUBA 533 (2004).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A city's decision to follow quasi-judicial procedures in adopting a decision concerning a two-mile long highway project affecting a large portion of the city does not convert a legislative decision into a quasi-judicial decision. A city need not require that parties in a legislative land use proceeding follow any particular order in presenting evidence. Ramsey v. City of Philomath, 46 Or LUBA 241 (2004).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendments that affect two tax lots and 6.4 acres are correctly characterized as a "circumscribed factual situation" and "a relatively small number of persons" are affected, thus satisfying the third step of the three-step inquiry in Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 602-03, 601 P2d 769 (1979), for determining whether a proceeding is quasi-judicial rather than legislative in nature. Thomas v. City of Veneta, 44 Or LUBA 5 (2003).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Where an ordinance amends a number of different sections of zoning ordinance text, the ordinance is a legislative land use decision. That one of those zoning ordinance amendments may be directed at a small number of persons does not make the ordinance a quasi-judicial/legislative hybrid and does not obligate the city that enacted the ordinance to follow the quasi-judicial land use decision making procedures at ORS 197.763. OCAPA v. City of Mosier, 44 Or LUBA 452 (2003).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A decision that annexes property into city limits using quasi-judicial land use processes set out in the local code for such annexation decisions is reviewable as a quasi-judicial land use decision. West Side Rural F.P.D v. City of Hood River, 43 Or LUBA 546 (2003).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. As used in OAR 661-010-0025(1)(b), the term "placed before" is a term of art and does not merely describe the act of setting documents in front of the decision maker. Legislative decision making often involves less precisely defined procedures for compiling an evidentiary record than quasi-judicial decision making. Witham Parts and Equipment Co. v. ODOT, 42 Or LUBA 589 (2002).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Given that ORS 197.299 requires Metro to review the supply of residential land within the Metro UGB at least every five years, Metro is not obligated to provide a quasi-judicial UGB amendment process, in addition to a legislative process, to ensure that the Metro UGB as a whole maintains an adequate supply of residential land. Homebuilders Assoc. v. Metro, 42 Or LUBA 176 (2002).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. The speculative possibility that a subregional housing shortage will arise in the interim between the five-year UGB reviews required by ORS 197.299, and that Metro will decline to initiate a legislative proceeding to address that interim shortage, is an insufficient basis to establish that a quasi-judicial UGB amendment process is essential to ensure continued compliance with Goals 10 and 14. Homebuilders Assoc. v. Metro, 42 Or LUBA 176 (2002).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Even assuming that the ORS 197.307(6) prohibition against procedures that "discourage needed housing through unreasonable cost or delay" applies to Metro, which does not process applications for development of needed housing, petitioner's speculation that Metro will delay initiating a legislative UGB amendment for housing needs is insufficient to establish that Metro's failure to also provide for a quasi-judicial UGB amendment process for housing need will result in "unreasonable delay." Homebuilders Assoc. v. Metro, 42 Or LUBA 176 (2002).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. ORS 197.620(1), which states that a decision not to adopt a legislative amendment or new land use regulation is not appealable to LUBA, does not explicitly or implicitly limit a local government's authority to define what matters it will consider on a quasi-judicial or legislative basis. Homebuilders Assoc. v. Metro, 42 Or LUBA 176 (2002).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. The requirement imposed by Fasano v. Washington Co. Comm., 264 Or 574, 507 P2d 23 (1973) for a fair and impartial tribunal does not apply to legislative land use proceedings. Waibel v. Crook County, 40 Or LUBA 67 (2001).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A county decision to amend a property description of a significant aggregate site in its comprehensive plan to mirror the property description contained in its mineral sites inventory, along with other, unrelated policy and housekeeping amendments, is a legislative, and not a quasi-judicial, decision. DeBell v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 695 (2001).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. The Portland City Code does not require that the city adopt findings of fact to support its legislative decisions. Therefore, on appeal to LUBA, the city may rely upon citations to the comprehensive plan, code, the record and arguments in its brief to demonstrate that the legislative decision is consistent with applicable plan and code provisions. Home Depot, Inc. v. City of Portland, 37 Or LUBA 870 (2000).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. An annexation is a quasi-judicial decision if (1) the initiation of the annexation is bound to result in a decision; (2) the local government is bound to apply pre-existing criteria to concrete facts; and (3) the action is directed at a closely circumscribed factual situation or a relatively small number of persons. Johnson v. City of La Grande, 37 Or LUBA 380 (1999).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. An annexation decision is not a quasi-judicial decision when the initiation of the annexation does not require that the city complete the process, and where the annexation applies to 155 parcels owned by 127 different persons. Johnson v. City of La Grande, 37 Or LUBA 380 (1999).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A citywide zone change affecting only petitioners' proposed mobile home park is not directed at a closely circumscribed factual situation or a relatively small number of persons for purposes of the third factor described in Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 601 P2d 769 (1979), where the decision does not address or hinge on details of petitioners' proposal, but rather on broader policies regarding regulation of mobile home parks. Casey Jones Well Drilling, Inc. v. City of Lowell, 34 Or LUBA 263 (1998).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Even if local policy allows a proposed amendment to be referred for further study and provides no express time requirement to make a final decision, the local decision maker is bound to reach a decision on a proposed plan amendment if a natural reading of local policy requires a final decision at some point in time. Dean v. City of Oakland, 33 Or LUBA 806 (1997).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Although evidence suggests that a local decision maker's deliberation of a proposed plan amendment was bound to result in a final decision, this fact does not conclusively establish that the decision was quasi-judicial. Dean v. City of Oakland, 33 Or LUBA 806 (1997).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. When the specific facts of a proposal drive the evaluation, and the final decision applies preexisting criteria to concrete facts, the decision satisfies the second of the Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers factors, even if the local decision maker considers policy arguments in the decision's findings and conclusions. Dean v. City of Oakland, 33 Or LUBA 806 (1997).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A decision that affects an entire zone is more likely to be legislative. However, when the decision focuses primarily on specific provisions of a proposal and the characteristics of the land owned by the person making the proposal, the decision satisfies the third of the Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers factors and may be quasi-judicial rather than legislative. Dean v. City of Oakland, 33 Or LUBA 806 (1997).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Where a local land use decision-making process is not bound to result in a decision and affects a large area with many owners, the resulting decision is a legislative decision. Valerio v. Union County, 33 Or LUBA 604 (1997).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. There is no legal requirement that decision makers disclose the substance of their site observations and provide an opportunity for rebuttal where the decision is legislative rather than quasi-judicial. Valerio v. Union County, 33 Or LUBA 604 (1997).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A city council may not convert an on-the-record quasi-judicial appeal of a planning commission decision into a de novo legislative hearing where the city code: (1) provides that legislative proceedings may only be commenced by the planning commission or city council, and the subject proceeding was initiated by an individual; (2) includes no provisions for converting a quasi-judicial appeal proceeding into a legislative proceeding; and (3) requires that appeals of planning commission quasi-judicial decisions be heard on the record. Anderson v. City of Shady Cove, 33 Or LUBA 173 (1997).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Even when an application involves a UGB amendment that would double the size of the city's urbanizable land, where the amendment is prompted by one development proposal, the city and county decisions to approve are "directed at a closely circumscribed factual situation," and under Strawberry Hill 4

Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 601 P2d 769 (1979), the decisions are therefore quasi-judicial. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. When a proposal to amend the city and county zoning ordinances is bound to apply preexisting criteria to concrete facts, but is neither bound to result in a decision nor directed at a closely circumscribed factual situation or a relatively small number of persons, the decision to amend is a legislative land use decision. Waite v. City of La Grande, 31 Or LUBA 77 (1996).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A county decision concerning a 2,400-foot section of a minor arterial which will affect more than 40 properties, accommodate 18,000 trips per day and is shown on a regional transportation plan as an arterial of regional significance is not a decision involving "a closely circumscribed factual situation or a relatively small number of persons," under Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 601 P2d 769 (1979). Friends of Cedar Mill v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 477 (1995).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Even if a local government committed a procedural error in following legislative rather quasi-judicial procedures, if the only claimed prejudice to petitioner's substantial rights is inadequate time to prepare its case and LUBA concludes the local government provided petitioner ample time to prepare its case, there is no basis for reversal or remand. Friends of Cedar Mill v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 477 (1995).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. ORS 215.503(2)(a), requiring all legislative acts related to comprehensive plans or zoning adopted by a county governing body to be by ordinance, applies to legislative decisions adopting or amending comprehensive plans and zoning ordinances, not to quasi-judicial plan or zone changes. Sahagian v. Columbia County, 27 Or LUBA 592 (1994).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A comprehensive plan amendment is quasi-judicial in nature if it results from a private development application, must comply with criteria in the Statewide Planning Goals and the plan itself, and affects a specific area, involving one property owner and a single property. Graville Properties, Ltd. v. City of Eugene, 27 Or LUBA 583 (1994).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Applying the three-factor analysis used by the Oregon Supreme Court in Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 601 P2d 769 (1979), a city council-initiated ordinance amending the city code to list non-profit rehabilitation training centers as a conditional use in several of the city's residential zones is legislative in nature. Andrews v. City of Brookings, 27 Or LUBA 39 (1994).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. There is no legal requirement that local governments adopt findings in support of legislative land use decisions. Where a local government does not adopt findings explaining why a challenged legislative land use decision complies with applicable approval criteria, LUBA relies on the responding parties to provide argument and citations to the record to assist in the resolution of petitioners' allegations. Andrews v. City of Brookings, 27 Or LUBA 39 (1994).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. That a local government subsequently readopted a challenged decision changing the plan and zone designations of many properties, minus the plan and zone designation change affecting petitioner's property, is irrelevant to the question of whether the original decision itself is legislative or quasi-judicial. McInnis v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 1 (1994).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Testimony and discussion concerning specific properties, presented during the course of legislative proceedings concerning many thousands of acres, owned and occupied by many thousands of people, does not convert such legislative proceedings into a collection of many quasi-judicial proceedings. McInnis v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 1 (1994).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. In determining whether a decision is legislative or quasi-judicial, that the decision is "bound to apply preexisting criteria to concrete facts" should be given lesser weight where the decision also establishes new policy objectives. McInnis v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 1 (1994).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. The proper test for determining whether a decision is quasi-judicial or legislative is set out in Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 602-03, 601 P2d 769 (1979). However, no one of the three criteria set out in Strawberry Hill is determinative. ODOT v. Klamath County, 25 Or LUBA 761 (1993).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A local government decision not to adopt proposed plan and land use regulation amendments designating a single 10.5-acre property as a Goal 5 resource site is quasi-judicial, rather than legislative. ODOT v. Klamath County, 25 Or LUBA 761 (1993).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. ORS 215.130(1) indicates the legislature contemplated that legislative land use decisions could be adopted by the electorate. However, nothing exempts legislative land use decisions from the procedural and substantive requirements applicable to the enactment of legislation affecting land use. Therefore, a decision adopted by the electorate is subject to the requirements governing legislative land use decisions. Riverbend Landfill Company v. Yamhill County, 24 Or LUBA 466 (1993).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. While nothing requires that all legislative land use decisions be supported by findings, in order for LUBA to perform its review function, it is necessary either that legislative land use decisions be accompanied by findings of compliance with relevant legal standards or that respondents explain in their briefs how the legislative decision complies with applicable legal standards. Riverbend Landfill Company v. Yamhill County, 24 Or LUBA 466 (1993).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. There is no statutory requirement that legislative decisions be supported by substantial evidence. Riverbend Landfill Company v. Yamhill County, 24 Or LUBA 466 (1993).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A decision adopting an aggregate study, plan and zoning text amendments, and new zoning and plan map designations for six separate properties comprising 227 acres, and making recommendations for future action regarding one of the six properties, is correctly viewed as a whole and, so viewed, is legislative rather than quasi-judicial. Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. A general plan policy concerning transportation safety does not require that findings supporting a legislative comprehensive plan transportation map amendment negate every potential safety problem that might result from future implementation of the improvements authorized by the plan amendment. Davenport v. City of Tigard, 23 Or LUBA 565 (1992).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. ORS 197.835(7)(a)(C) does not require a legislative land use decision to be supported by substantial evidence. Where petitioners cite no independent basis for a requirement that the challenged legislative land use decision be supported by substantial evidence, petitioners provide no basis for reversal or remand. Cope v. City of Cannon Beach, 23 Or LUBA 233 (1992).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. ORS 197.835(7)(a)(C) does not impose a substantive requirement that legislative land use decisions be supported by substantial evidence in the whole record. Alexiou v. Curry County, 22 Or LUBA 639 (1992).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. The factors which must be considered in determining whether a local government decision is quasi-judicial in nature are whether (1) the process is bound to result in a decision, (2) the decision is bound to apply preexisting criteria to concrete facts, and (3) the action is directed at a closely circumscribed factual situation or a relatively small number of persons. Alexiou v. Curry County, 22 Or LUBA 639 (1992).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. In determining whether a plan map amendment is quasi-judicial rather than legislative, the third of three factors to be considered under Strawberry Hill 4 Wheelers v. Benton Co. Bd. of Comm., 287 Or 591, 601 P2d 769 (1979), is whether the decision is "directed at a closely circumscribed factual situation or a relatively small number of persons." A decision directed at a variety of transportation planning issues for a study area encompassing a large area of the city does not satisfy that factor. Davenport v. City of Tigard, 22 Or LUBA 577 (1992).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. That a plan map amendment is legislative rather than quasi-judicial does not mean that the statewide planning goals or comprehensive plan or code provisions do not apply to the decision. Neither does it necessarily mean findings in support of the decision are not required. Davenport v. City of Tigard, 22 Or LUBA 577 (1992).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Where substantive approval standards are the same, a local government error in characterizing a plan map amendment as legislative, rather than quasi-judicial, is procedural in nature and warrants reversal or remand only if petitioners demonstrate their substantial rights were prejudiced because of failure to provide the procedural safeguards required in a quasi-judicial proceeding. Gray v. Clatsop County, 22 Or LUBA 270 (1991).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Individual written notice of decision is not required for a county to make a legislative land use decision. Crone v. Clackamas County, 21 Or LUBA 102 (1991).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Both legislative and quasi-judicial land use decisions must comply with applicable land use standards, including the statewide planning goals. Jentzsch v. City of Sherwood, 20 Or LUBA 575 (1991).

25.7 Local Government Procedures – Legislative/Quasi-judicial Distinction. Findings addressing land use standards may or may not be required to support a legislative land use decision. However, the absence of such findings has no bearing on whether a decision actually is a land use decision. Jentzsch v. City of Sherwood, 20 Or LUBA 575 (1991).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. A county may not defer a determination of compliance with applicable approval criteria to a future proceeding that does not allow for public participation merely because the deferred criteria require no interpretation or judgment. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. Where issuing a floodplain review permit requires calculating whether the cumulative effect of a proposed development in a designated floodplain increases the base flood elevation more than one foot, and that calculation can require either interpretation or the exercise of legal judgment, a decision to issue the permit is a land use decision. Johnson v. Jackson County, 59 Or LUBA 94 (2009).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. In determining that an increase from a 32 to 60 bed homeless shelter would not have significant additional impacts on surrounding properties, that there is a justifiable change in circumstances, and that a previous condition of approval is satisfied – the city exercised significant discretion and was required under its code to provide notice and the opportunity for a hearing. Allan Donald Bruckner Trust v. City of Bend, 56 Or LUBA 699 (2008).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. In applying a zoning code process that permits ministerial correction of zoning maps to conform to the map or legal description that was adopted by or referenced in the enacting ordinance, the first step is to locate the relevant map or legal description, and the second step is to determine whether a nondiscretionary correction is possible based on that map or legal description. 6710 LLC v. City of Portland, 40 Or LUBA 389 (2001).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. A Land Use Compatibility Statement requirement that a proposal to apply process water from a fruit processing operation to EFU-zoned land must "comply with all applicable local land use requirements" requires at a minimum that the county determine whether the proposal is a farm use and whether it is a utility facility. These determinations require the exercise of sufficient discretion that the county's decision is both a "land use decision" and a "permit," as those terms are defined by statute. Farrell v. Jackson County, 39 Or LUBA 149 (2000).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. A decision that disposal of sewage effluent by applying it to farm land constitutes a "utility facility necessary for public service" within the meaning of ORS 215.283(1)(d) requires the exercise of policy or legal judgment and for that reason the decision does not qualify for the exception to the statutory definition of land use decision provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for certain ministerial decisions. Friends of the Creek v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 562 (1999).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. A decision that disposal of sewage effluent by applying it to farm land constitutes a "farm use" within the meaning of ORS 215.203 requires the exercise of policy or legal judgment and for that reason the decision does not qualify for the exception to the statutory definition of "land use decision" provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for certain ministerial decisions. Friends of the Creek v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 562 (1999).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. A decision authorizing construction of facilities necessary to apply sewage effluent to farm land constitutes the approval of a "proposed development of land" and thus is a "permit" within the meaning of ORS 215.215.402(4) if the decision involves the exercise of discretion. Friends of the Creek v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 562 (1999).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. A decision that a proposal to transport treated effluent to an EFU-zoned parcel and apply that effluent to poplar trees constitutes a "farm use" within the meaning of ORS 215.283(1)(d) requires the exercise of policy or legal judgment and for that reason the decision does not qualify for the exception to the statutory definition of land use decision provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for certain ministerial decisions. Friends of Clean Living v. Polk County, 36 Or LUBA 544 (1999).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. A decision authorizing construction of a lagoon on EFU-zoned land to store treated effluent constitutes the approval of a "proposed development of land" and thus constitutes a "permit" within the meaning of ORS 215.402(4) if the decision involves the exercise of discretion. Friends of Clean Living v. Polk County, 36 Or LUBA 544 (1999).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. The calculation of the amount of a tree preservation performance bond is ministerial, and does not require further city council review. Squires v. City of Portland, 31 Or LUBA 335 (1996).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. Decisions concerning development of property applying the elements of equitable estoppel require the exercise of factual and legal judgment and, therefore, are permits. Where a local government fails to provide a local public hearing or opportunity for appeal of such a permit decision, the deadline for filing a notice of intent to appeal the decision to LUBA is governed by ORS 197.830(3). DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. Where determining whether an existing quarry qualifies as a nonconforming use under applicable city code provisions requires a city to determine whether the existing quarry lawfully existed at the time the existing zoning was last amended and whether the use has been discontinued for a year, the nonconforming use determination involves the exercise of significant legal and factual judgment and is a "permit" as that term is used in ORS 227.160(2). Hood River Sand v. City of Mosier, 24 Or LUBA 381 (1993).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. Where an amended code provides discretionary criteria for approval of minor land divisions, it is error for the code to fail to require or provide for notice and hearing before the local government makes a final decision concerning a proposed minor land division. Nicolai v. City of Portland, 19 Or LUBA 142 (1990).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. Code provisions requiring that existing streets will not be "partially or fully blocked" and "[a]ccess to adjacent property from streets * * * will not be partially or fully eliminated," do not require the exercise of interpretation or judgment. Nicolai v. City of Portland, 19 Or LUBA 142 (1990).

25.8 Local Government Procedures – Discretionary/Ministerial Distinction. A code provision requiring that "[a]ll requirements of the City Engineer must be met" is discretionary where there are no standards to guide the planning director in choosing between (1) denying the application because the engineer's requirements are not met, or (2) determining it is feasible to satisfy the city engineer's requirements and imposing conditions requiring the engineer's criteria be met. Nicolai v. City of Portland, 19 Or LUBA 142 (1990).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Where a prior decision approved a plan amendment and zone change for the subject property and included a condition of approval limiting the type of future development to a "retail shopping center" and the size of future development to a certain square footage of gross leasable area, but where the prior decision approved no specific development, voluntary descriptions, statements, or representations made by the applicant during the prior proceeding regarding the particular store with which the shopping center would be developed are not binding on the applicant in a subsequent site plan review proceeding unless they were memorialized in conditions of approval for the prior decision. M & T Partners, Inc. v. City of Salem, 80 Or LUBA 221 (2019).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Just as the non-prevailing party in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding has no right to object to or rebut a proposed written final decision and supporting findings that are prepared by the prevailing party in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding, the non-prevailing party has no right to participate in that process and no right to notice that the prevailing party is working with planning staff to prepare a proposed final decision and supporting findings for the local decision maker to adopt. Rawson v. Hood River County, 77 Or LUBA 571 (2018).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Where a hearings officer denies an application on multiple grounds, it may be prudent and appropriate for governing body, when affirming one basis for denial, to address all other bases for denial. However, absent authority that requires the governing body to address all issues raised on local appeal, or to address and resolve all bases for denial, the governing body commits no error in failing to address all bases for denial identified in the hearings officer's decision. Kine v. Deschutes County, 75 Or LUBA 407 (2017).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Where two county commissioners are disqualified from participating in a decision on a local appeal of a permit approval decision, the final written decision reflecting that action would look somewhat different from a decision on the merits of the local appeal. But the requirement in OAR 661-010-0010(3) that a decision must be reduced to writing before it can become final does not depend on the nature of the decision. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 73 Or LUBA 98 (2016).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H) is silent regarding what procedures a local government may apply to a request for a land use compatibility statement (LUCS). LUBA's conclusion that a LUCS decision is excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction does not mean that the county lacked "land use jurisdiction" to process the LUCS request pursuant to land use procedures that provide for local appeal. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 103 (2015).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. A city errs when it accepts an appeal of a decision to deny a permit, holds an appeal hearing, and fails to issue a written decision on the appeal. ORS 227.173(3) requires the city to issue a written decision. Smith v. City of Gearhart, 71 Or LUBA 184 (2015).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. That a planning staff decision is initialed but not signed, and does not take the form of an "order," does not render that decision void or otherwise constitute reversible error, where the petitioner does not identify any code provision or other authority that requires a planning staff decision to take the form of a signed order. Kane v. City of Beaverton, 64 Or LUBA 351 (2011).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. That a planning commission deliberated only briefly in making a land use decision does not violate ORS 192.620, which states a policy that the "Oregon form of government requires an informed public aware of deliberations and decisions by governing bodies[.]" Assuming ORS 192.620 applies to a planning commission decision, the statute does not require deliberations of any particular duration or quality. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 62 Or LUBA 329 (2010).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. The ORS 203.045(3) general requirement that county ordinances be fully read in an open meeting on two days at least 13 days apart does not apply in cases where the ordinance is authorized by another statute. Although ORS 215.050(1) does not expressly require or authorize counties to adopt comprehensive plans by ordinance, the statute is properly interpreted to authorize counties to do so. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. The ORS 203.045(3) general requirement that county ordinances be fully read in an open meeting on two days at least 13 days apart does not apply in cases where the ordinance is authorized by another statute. Although ORS 215.050(1) does not expressly require or authorize counties to adopt comprehensive plans by ordinance, the statute is properly interpreted to authorize counties to do so. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. An alleged inconsistency between the oral decision by the governing body and the final written decision signed on the governing body's behalf by the planning director is at most harmless error and is not itself a basis for remand, where the governing body's decision must be remanded for additional findings in any case, and the decision on remand will supersede the challenged decision, rendering any error moot. O'Rourke v. Union County, 54 Or LUBA 614 (2007).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. A member of the governing body, who was absent from the meeting at which a land use application was orally approved, but who otherwise participated throughout the local proceedings, may properly sign the final written decision. Sommer v. Josephine County, 49 Or LUBA 134 (2005).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. City planning staff cannot informally modify or void two earlier final, written decisions issued pursuant to code-required procedures that altered the deadlines for filing a final plat approval application. At a minimum, modification or revocation of those final, written decisions to restore the original deadline must be accomplished by a final, written decision. Butte Conservancy v. City of Gresham, 47 Or LUBA 282 (2004).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. A final, written decision that effectively, if implicitly, restores the original deadline for filing the final subdivision plat application, and then extends that deadline, is properly viewed as a modification or revocation of an earlier decision that places the tentative plat approval on inactive status, subject to a different final plat application deadline. Butte Conservancy v. City of Gresham, 47 Or LUBA 282 (2004).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions A petitioner's substantial rights include the right to a final written decision by the final decision maker on petitioner's local appeal. An allegation that the city council failed to adopt a final written decision on petitioner's appeal is sufficient to allege prejudice to petitioner's substantial rights. Shaffer v. City of Happy Valley, 44 Or LUBA 536 (2003).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. A notice of decision and a set of findings drafted by the city planning director are not part of the city council's final decision, where the documents are not signed or approved by the city council, and nothing in the record indicates that the city council adopted or otherwise incorporated those documents into its decision. petitioner's appeal is sufficient to allege prejudice to petitioner's substantial rights. Shaffer v. City of Happy Valley, 44 Or LUBA 536 (2003).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Once a planning commission decision is appealed to the city council, the planning commission decision cannot become the city's final decision on the application, although it may be adopted or incorporated as part of the city council's final decision. petitioner's appeal is sufficient to allege prejudice to petitioner's substantial rights. Shaffer v. City of Happy Valley, 44 Or LUBA 536 (2003).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Where a city council fails to adopt any document as its written decision on a local appeal, the city council action as reflected in minutes adopted by the city council may constitute the city council's final written decision on the appeal, although defects or inadequacies that flow from adopting a written decision in that form may be a basis for reversal or remand. petitioner's appeal is sufficient to allege prejudice to petitioner's substantial rights. Shaffer v. City of Happy Valley, 44 Or LUBA 536 (2003).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. A city council decision approving a subdivision with modifications for required road access must be remanded where it is unclear which documents if any the city council adopted as part of its decision, and the city council decision includes no findings explaining the modification, or reducing the required road access to a condition of approval. petitioner's appeal is sufficient to allege prejudice to petitioner's substantial rights. Shaffer v. City of Happy Valley, 44 Or LUBA 536 (2003).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. In an appeal to LUBA of a county decision that a 6.67-acre portion of a 10-acre parcel is not a legally created developable parcel, preclusive legal effect need not be given to separate 1989 and 1993 decisions recognizing the legality of the remaining 3.33-acre parcel, where the 1989 decision was essentially no more than the county's acquiescence to the property owner's desire to have the property recognized as a separate parcel and the 1993 decision includes a finding that the decision maker was bound by the 1989 decision. DeBoer v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 219 (2002).

25. 9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Draft minutes that are prepared after a notice of a land use decision has been mailed and the 21-day deadline for filing appeals at LUBA has ended may not be used by a local government as the written final decision. Martin v. City of Dunes City, 43 Or LUBA 354 (2002).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. A local government quasi-judicial land use decision maker is not legally required to verbally explain how all legal and evidentiary issues are resolved. It is the written decision that the decision maker ultimately adopts that is subject to LUBA's review on appeal. Lord v. City of Oregon City, 43 Or LUBA 361 (2002).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. The practice of incorporating other documents as findings runs the risk of adopting inconsistent findings. However, where a decision expressly incorporates other documents as findings, such an express incorporation is sufficient to adopt the other document as findings. Hannah v. City of Eugene, 35 Or LUBA 1 (1998).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Where more than one site plan appears in the record, a local government errs if its decision does not adequately identify which site plan is approved. Brown v. City of Portland, 33 Or LUBA 700 (1997).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. For purposes of ORS 215.428(1), a decision is not "final" at the time the oral decision is made where the local code provides the decision becomes final 10 days after the written decision is filed unless the county board grants a rehearing on its own motion. Miller v. Multnomah County, 33 Or LUBA 644 (1997).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Backdating of a final written decision to correspond to the date of an earlier oral decision denying an application does not constitute an action taken to avoid the 120-day rule established by ORS 215.428, within the meaning of ORS 197.835(10)(a)(B), when the denial was made on the merits and not for the purpose of avoiding the 120-day rule. Miller v. Multnomah County, 33 Or LUBA 644 (1997).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Where a local code does not specify a date upon which a decision becomes final, OAR 661-10-010(3) specifies that the decision becomes final on the date it is reduced to writing and signed by the decision maker. Adams v. City of Ashland, 33 Or LUBA 552 (1997).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Erroneous information provided by the county to the petitioner does not change the date upon which a decision becomes final. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 33 Or LUBA 530 (1997).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. If local ordinance does not define when a decision becomes final, it becomes final under OAR 661-10-010(3) when it is reduced to writing and bears the necessary signatures of the decision makers, regardless of the date notice of the decision is sent or erroneous information provided in that notice. DeBates v. Yamhill County, 33 Or LUBA 526 (1997).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. The failure of a city council expressly to consider denial of an application is not a basis for reversal or remand when the city council concluded the record supported approval. Brown v. City of Ontario, 33 Or LUBA 180 (1997).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. While a local government can make a de facto land use decision without satisfying procedural or substantive requirements for a land use decision, a county does not make a de facto land use decision by merely acquiescing to a property owner's desired characterization of his property. Higgins v. Marion County, 30 Or LUBA 426 (1996).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Under OAR 661-10-010(3), a document containing findings of fact and conclusions of law that is signed by the mayor and attested by the city recorder is a final decision, but if the city has no authority to take the action reflected in the decision, the final decision is not a land use decision. Subsequent adoption with authority is a land use decision appealable to LUBA. DLCD v. City of St. Helens, 29 Or LUBA 485 (1995).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Where the challenged decision is that of the governing body, made on appeal from a planning commission decision, allegations of procedural error in the manner in which the planning commission adopted its order and findings do not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Jackman v. City of Tillamook, 29 Or LUBA 391 (1995).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Because petitioners do not have a right to seek a referendum on a quasi-judicial land use decision, a local government error in adopting such a decision as an emergency ordinance provides no basis for reversal or remand. Neuman v. City of Albany, 28 Or LUBA 337 (1994).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Where a local code provides that a planning commission decision becomes final 10 days after "submittal" of the written decision to the clerk of the governing body, the local government is not clearly wrong in interpreting "submittal" to the clerk to mean "receipt" by the clerk, and its interpretation will be sustained. McKenzie v. Multnomah County, 27 Or LUBA 523 (1994).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. That a local government's final written order may not accurately reflect oral comments made by the local decision maker during its deliberations provides no basis for reversal or remand of a challenged decision. Barrick v. City of Salem, 27 Or LUBA 417 (1994).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. ORS 197.190(1) and 268.285(1) both require that a Metropolitan Service District decision to coordinate be an action taken "through its governing body." Where the product of a Metro sponsored mediation is not formally adopted by the Metro governing body, it does not constitute an exercise of Metro's coordination obligation under those statutes. City of Portland v. Washington County, 27 Or LUBA 176 (1994).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. That a stipulation concerning the applicability of a local government's land use regulations to certain property is entered into by the local government and a property owner outside the confines of a land use proceeding and without following the procedures required for land use decision making does not make the decision any less a land use decision. DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Where a local governing body has not adopted regulations providing for reconsideration of its decisions, the governing body commits no error by denying a request to reconsider a decision, where the request was received after the final written order is entered. Van Veldhuizen v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 468 (1994).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Absent some legal requirement to the contrary, a local government is not bound to assure that its final written decision conforms to its oral decision in all particulars. Louisiana Pacific v. Umatilla County, 26 Or LUBA 247 (1993).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. LUBA reviews the local government's final written order. That the final written order may not accurately reflect oral comments made by the local decision maker during its deliberations provides no basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision. Derry v. Douglas County, 26 Or LUBA 25 (1993).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. It is a local government's final written decision that is subject to LUBA's review. That conditions imposed in the local government's final written decision were not discussed in the decision maker's deliberations does not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Terra v. City of Newport, 24 Or LUBA 438 (1993).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. In determining the nature and scope of the challenged decision, the language of (1) a prior and related determination, (2) an earlier major partition application pertaining to the subject land, and (3) the challenged decision itself, are instructive. Woosley v. Marion County, 24 Or LUBA 231 (1992).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Where nothing in the caption, findings or decision itself suggests that the challenged decision approves a lot line adjustment, a lot line adjustment was not approved. Barker v. City of Cannon Beach, 24 Or LUBA 221 (1992).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Alleged errors in the manner in which the findings of a lower level local decision maker were adopted, are harmless if the final decision was properly adopted by the final decision maker. Rath v. Hood River County, 23 Or LUBA 200 (1992).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. Where a challenged decision defers consideration of certain code mandatory approval standards until a later stage, but fails to provide that such later stage will include the full opportunity for public involvement provided at the initial stage, and where nothing in the local code requires such opportunity to be provided in any subsequent proceedings, the decision to defer consideration of such mandatory standards constitutes a basis for remand of the challenged decision. Citizens for Resp. Growth v. City of Seaside, 23 Or LUBA 100 (1992).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. There is no prohibition against a local government making a tentative oral decision on a permit application, followed by adoption of a final written decision containing its supporting findings. Citizens for Resp. Growth v. City of Seaside, 23 Or LUBA 100 (1992).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. LUBA reviews the decision maker's final written decision, not statements made during the proceedings leading to adoption of the challenged decision. Such statements are preliminary and subject to change in the final decision. Toth v. Curry County, 22 Or LUBA 488 (1991).

25.9 Local Government Procedures – Formalities of Decisions. A statement in the challenged decision that all oral and written information received during the local proceedings are "incorporate[d] by reference" is not sufficiently specific to adopt particular documents in the local record as findings in support of the decision. Cecil v. City of Jacksonville, 19 Or LUBA 446 (1990).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. A county errs in accepting with the applicant's final written argument, for purposes of determining whether at least three dwellings existed on surrounding lots or parcels on January 1, 1993, and therefore whether the subject property qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750, an email from a contractor who worked on one of the surrounding dwellings , even where the email is intended to provide context for evidence submitted by opponents, and thereby rebut opponents' arguments concerning that evidence. Under ORS 197.763(6)(e), new evidence may not be submitted with an applicant's final written argument and, under ORS 197.763(9), such an email is evidence rather than argument. In addition, opponents are not precluded from raising a county's admission of new evidence with the applicant's final written argument as procedural error on appeal to LUBA merely because they failed to object during the local proceedings, where the opportunity to object was provided after the county had already considered evidence, deliberated, and made its oral decision, and where the record was closed and no further testimony was allowed. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. While the "raise it or waive it" requirement of ORS 197.763(1) and 197.835(3) does not apply to legislative proceedings, where a party has an opportunity to object to a procedural error during a legislative proceeding, the party must do so in order to seek remand based on that error. McCaffree v. Coos County, 79 Or LUBA 512 (2019).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. A party asserting a procedural error must demonstrate that the procedural error was objected to during the proceedings below, if there was an opportunity to lodge an objection. Accordingly, where a dispute may exist regarding whether petitioners objected to the county's process during the proceedings below, LUBA will allow a motion to take evidence outside the record to consider a document for the limited purpose of allowing petitioners to cite to that document to establish, if the point is disputed in a response brief, that petitioners attempted to lodge objections to the county's process. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 1024 (2019).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where a county's notice described a proposed project as a bed and breakfast inn and campground, but the county only approved the bed and breakfast inn but not the campground, petitioners had an inadequate opportunity to object to the alleged procedural error because they could not know until the county issued its decision that the final decision would approve something different than the proposal that was noticed. Elenes v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 483 (2018).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. ORS 197.830(3) operates to potentially allow a petitioner a delayed period of time to file a LUBA appeal, but it is not a source of procedural requirements that a local government approved development that differs from the development described in the notice of hearing is not procedural error. Elenes v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 483 (2018).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where a petitioner did not raise the issue in its filed statement of appeal before the hearings officer that street tree planting is required only when a new street is created, a planning commission exceeds its authority by considering the issue under the local code provisions governing the scope of appeals to the planning commission. Rockbridge Capital v. City of Eugene, 75 Or LUBA 364 (2017).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. A local government's failure to inquire whether any hearing participants wish to submit a written request for a continued hearing, as required by its local procedural rules, does not provide a basis for remand, where the petitioner's representative was present at the hearing, had the opportunity to object to the decision-maker's failure to make the inquiry, but failed to object. Pliska v. Umatilla County, 61 Or LUBA 429 (2010).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. A petitioner's failure to object to untimely disclosure of a site visit and to request the opportunity to rebut the site visit precludes assigning error to that disclosure, where the disclosure was made 10 days prior to the hearing at which the local government adopted the final decision, and petitioner could have entered an objection at any time during those 10 days or during the final hearing, but did not. Carrigg v. City of Enterprise, 48 Or LUBA 328 (2004).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where the petitioner has an opportunity to object to an alleged procedural error in referring a decision to the planning commission, but fails to object, that alleged error cannot be assigned as a reason for reversal or remand. Nelson v. Curry County, 47 Or LUBA 196 (2004).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Any right that a party may have to rebut new evidence under Fasano or ORS 197.763(6)(b) requires that the party contemporaneously assert that right of rebuttal at the time the new evidence is submitted, so that the local government can rule on the merits of the request and allow an appropriate opportunity for rebuttal where such an opportunity is warranted. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 47 Or LUBA 331 (2004).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. A party may not wait until the local government concludes an evidentiary hearing, closes the record, deliberates and adopts its oral decision, and convenes a final hearing to review the written decision, before objecting to an alleged procedural error in failing to respond to that party's non-specific request to continue the evidentiary hearing. Such an objection is untimely. Doty v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 34 (2002).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where the applicants were aware that the local government's schedule failed to include time for the submission of written legal arguments as provided for by ORS 197.763(6)(e) and the applicants informed the local government that if they had objections to the process, they would "file" objections with the county counsel, the county could assume that the applicants waived their right to submit final written arguments, when the applicants failed to file objections. Wild Rose Ranch Enterprises v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 368 (1999).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where a decision maker discloses the existence but not the substance of ex parte communications at the beginning of the public hearing, and despite being given an opportunity to do so petitioner fails to object to the inadequacy of the decision maker's disclosure, petitioner has waived the right to raise the decision maker's inadequate disclosure of ex parte communications before LUBA as a basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision. Mulford v. Town of Lakeview, 36 Or LUBA 715 (1999).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where a revised site plan is introduced after the close of the record, and evidence exists that petitioner was aware of the addition but did not object below, that procedural error does not justify reversal or remand by LUBA. Brown v. City of Portland, 33 Or LUBA 700 (1997).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where a party has the opportunity to object to a procedural error before the local government, but fails to do so, that error cannot be assigned as grounds for reversal or remand of the local government's decision in an appeal to LUBA. Wicks-Snodgrass v. City of Reedsport, 32 Or LUBA 292 (1997).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where a party has the opportunity to object to a procedural error before a local government, but fails to do so, that error cannot be assigned as grounds for reversal or remand of the local government decision in an appeal to LUBA. Skrepetos v. Jackson County, 29 Or LUBA 193 (1995).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where members of a local decision making body disclose, at the beginning of the initial evidentiary hearing, that they made site visits to the subject property, and petitioners fail to object to the adequacy of that disclosure, insufficiency of the disclosure cannot be assigned as grounds for reversal or remand. Wicks v. City of Reedsport, 29 Or LUBA 8 (1995).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. A petitioner may not assert his own ex parte contacts with the decision maker as a basis for reversal or remand, where the contacts were disclosed and petitioner did not object to the adequacy or completeness of the disclosure. Jones v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 193 (1994).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where (1) a local decision maker makes a procedural error in allowing new evidence to be submitted during an on-the-record review; (2) petitioners object to receipt of that new evidence; and (3) the local decision maker does not provide petitioners with an opportunity to rebut the new evidence; LUBA will remand the challenged decision for the local decision maker to provide the required opportunity for rebuttal. Tucker v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 134 (1994).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where a party has the opportunity to object to a procedural error before the local government, but fails to do so, that error cannot be assigned as grounds for reversal or remand of a local government decision in an appeal to LUBA. Woodstock Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 146 (1994).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where petitioner had an opportunity during the local proceedings to object to the completeness of a hearings officer's disclosure of ex parte contacts, but failed to do so, petitioner's motion for an evidentiary hearing at LUBA to present evidence concerning those ex parte contacts will be denied. Jones v. Lane County, 27 Or LUBA 654 (1994).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. ORS 197.763(1) and 197.835(2) do not supersede LUBA's prior rulings that where a party has an opportunity locally to object to a procedural error, at any stage of the local government proceedings, but fails to do so, that error cannot be assigned as grounds for reversal or remand of the local government's decision in an appeal to LUBA. Mazeski v. Wasco County, 26 Or LUBA 226 (1993).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where petitioners reasonably relied on a local code provision and hearing notice stating the governing body's review is limited to the evidentiary record before the planning commission, and were unaware that materials not in the planning commission record were placed before the governing body, petitioners do not waive their right to assert this error before LUBA by failing to object to it below. Mazeski v. Wasco County, 26 Or LUBA 226 (1993).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where petitioner failed to object to the board of commissioners concerning the county's failure to comply with the procedural requirements of ORS 197.763 in the notice of, and announcement at, a planning commission hearing, petitioner cannot assign those errors as a basis for reversing or remanding the county's decision. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 312 (1993).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. If petitioners were present at a local government meeting when an alleged procedural error occurred, petitioners must enter an objection in order to preserve their right to raise that procedural error in an appeal to LUBA, even where the local evidentiary record had previously been closed and there was no scheduled opportunity for public input at the meeting in question. Horizon Construction, Inc. v. City of Newberg, 23 Or LUBA 159 (1992).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. A petitioner may not assert the occurrence of his own ex parte contacts with the decision maker as a basis for reversal or remand, where the contacts were disclosed and petitioner did not object to the adequacy or completeness of the disclosure of such ex parte contacts. Toth v. Curry County, 22 Or LUBA 488 (1991).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. If petitioners were present at a local government meeting when an alleged procedural error occurred, petitioners must make their objections known to the decision making body below in order to assign the procedural error as a basis for reversal or remand by LUBA. Schellenberg v. Polk County, 21 Or LUBA 425 (1991).

25.10 Local Government Procedures – Necessity for Objections to. Where a party has the opportunity to object to a procedural error before the local government, but fails to do so, that error cannot be assigned as a basis for reversal or remand of the local government's decision in an appeal to LUBA. Torgeson v. City of Canby, 19 Or LUBA 511 (1990).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. The "final resolution of the judicial review," for purposes of ORS 215.435(2)(a), is not LUBA's issuance of its notice of appellate judgment but, rather, the Court of Appeals' issuance of its appellate judgment. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 81 Or LUBA 839 (2020).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA remands a county decision, the petitioner appeals LUBA's decision to the Court of Appeals, the Court of Appeals dismisses the appeal for failure to timely file the petition for judicial review, the petitioner seeks review by the Supreme Court, the Supreme Court grants review, the county issues its decision on remand while Supreme Court review is pending, and the petitioner appeals the decision on remand to LUBA, arguing that the county lacked jurisdiction to issue it while their appeals remain pending before the appellate courts, LUBA will grant a continuance under ORS 197.840(1)(d) and (2), and extend the 77-day deadline under ORS 197.830(14) for issuance of its final opinion and order, pending issuance of the appellate court decision(s) and appellate judgement. Gould v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 1007 (2020).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Provisions of a challenged ordinance that refer to or rely on provisions of a prior ordinance that LUBA remanded are invalid, even where the prior ordinance contained a severability clause purporting to allow unchallenged aspects of the prior ordinance to take effect after LUBA's remand. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. That an alteration to a proposed PAPA is required by LUBA's decision in a prior appeal and reduces the subject acreage does not mean as a matter of law that the proposed PAPA is not "altered to such an extent that the materials submitted no longer reasonably describe the proposed change," thereby requiring notice of the alteration to DLCD pursuant to ORS 197.610(6). Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 422 (2019).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. According to the "law of the case" pursuant to Beck v. City of Tillamook, 313 Or 148, 831 P2d 678 (1992), matters conclusively resolved before LUBA cannot be relitigated in subsequent appeals of subsequent decisions on the same matter. However, that principle is not violated where (1) LUBA remands to the county to adopt new findings, based on substantial evidence, and (2) on remand, the county accepts new evidence and adopts new findings, as LUBA directed. Where LUBA's original decision discussed certain requirements to provide guidance and framework on remand, and some of the county's findings are still insufficient on remand does not mean that the county violated the "law of the case." Richards v. Jefferson County, 79 Or 171 (2019).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. On remand, where LUBA instructed the county to resolve whether the project applicant's farm operation qualifies as a "commercial farming operation" for purposes of applying for an accessory farm dwelling for a relative, LUBA established that certain findings and evidence are necessary to establish compliance with OAR 660-033-0130(9). The county's findings fall short of establishing that the applicant's farm operation qualifies as a "commercial farming operation," because it is an undefined term, and it is the county's obligation to attempt to articulate the thresholds that separate a "commercial" from a non-commercial farming operation, and to determine those thresholds in the first instance. Although the county has some discretion to determine the thresholds, that determination will necessarily constitute a mixed question of fact and law, subject to LUBA's review for legal error and evidentiary sufficiency. Richards v. Jefferson County, 79 Or 171 (2019).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. The focus of OAR 660-033-0130(9) and county code that implements it regarding whether the "farm operator * * * continue[s] to play the predominant role in the management and farm use of the farm," is on the farm operator's involvement in farm operations on the subject property, not on off-farm businesses that may relate to the farm operation. The commercial farm operator's involvement in off-farm businesses do not help establish any element of OAR 660-033-0130(9). The commercial farm operator's involvement in off-farm businesses are relevant to establishing the elements of OAR 660-033-0130(9) only in so much as the time spent on those businesses and away from the farm operation might undermine the claim that the farm operator will continue to play the "predominant role" in the farm operation and requires assistance in running the farm operation. Richards v. Jefferson County, 79 Or 171 (2019).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA's review of an historic review board decision resulted in LUBA remanding the decision for the historic review board to answer threshold jurisdictional questions, but no issue was presented to LUBA regarding who the decision maker on remand should be, the city council does not err by addressing and answering those threshold jurisdictional questions on remand, instead of allowing the historic review board to answer those questions. McLoughlin Neighborhood Association v. City of Oregon City, 77 Or LUBA 377 (2018).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where local law does not dictate the historic review board must be the decision maker that decides whether it has jurisdiction to proceed with a historic land mark designation proposal after the property owner has refused to consent to the historic designation under ORS 197.772(1), a city council does not err by deciding those jurisdictional questions following a LUBA remand of a historic review board decision that failed to address those jurisdictional questions. McLoughlin Neighborhood Association v. City of Oregon City, 77 Or LUBA 377 (2018).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where a county code provision governing the conduct of proceedings on remand is not limited by text or context to remands of quasi-judicial decisions, a county does not err in applying those provisions to govern the conduct of proceedings on remand of a legislative decision. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. ORS 215.050 and 215.060 require the county governing body to approve revisions to the comprehensive plan and to conduct at least one hearing on proposed revisions. A county violates ORS 215.050 and 215.060, where on remand of an initial governing body decision approving plan amendments, the governing body delegates to a hearings officer final decision-making authority and the conduct of the only hearing, and on remand the hearings officer approves new comprehensive plan amendments that the governing body did not consider in the governing body's initial decision leading to the appeal to LUBA. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. While a local government may not generally be required to expand the scope of remand to include new issues that could not have been raised during the initial proceedings, where on remand a new issue is raised regarding the continuing jurisdiction of the local government to process the underlying zone change application, the local government has an obligation to address the jurisdictional issue. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. On remand from LUBA to address issues regarding compliance with the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) at OAR 660-012-0060, a hearings officer errs in refusing to consider a new issue raised on remand regarding testimony that access to the approved mining haul road across adjoining property and access point on a county road are no longer available for development purposes, due to intervening changes in ownership of the adjoining land. Such a new issue is within the scope of LUBA's remand, because the locations of the haul road and access point are important predicates for compliance with the TPR. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA remands a comprehensive plan amendment to adopt limited, technical changes to the analysis of economic, social, environmental and energy (ESEE) consequences that was adopted to support an exception to Goal 3, the county does not err in limiting the scope of remand to exclude new issues raised on remand regarding new conflicts with agricultural uses that the petitioner argues should be considered in a revised ESEE analysis, where the alleged new conflicts have nothing to do with the limited, technical changes to the ESEE required by LUBA's remand. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. While the issues following a LUBA on remand are often fewer and smaller in scope, in order to exhaust or preserve issues for LUBA's review under the reasoning in Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 506-07, 79 P3d 382 (2003), local appeals of decisions on remand must still identify the issues for local appeal with sufficient specificity that the local government and other parties have reasonable notice of those aspects of the underlying decision on remand the local appellant wishes to challenge. Dion v. Baker County, 72 Or LUBA 307 (2015).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. When LUBA remands a land use decision, absent some authority to the contrary the decision becomes ineffective, and remains ineffective unless and until the local government takes action on remand to re-adopt the decision or otherwise render the decision or portions of it effective. Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 68 Or LUBA 162 (2013).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. The fact that a city believed it was making a decision on the last day allowed by the ORS 227.181 for a decision after remand does not absolve the city from following the procedures applicable to quasi-judicial hearings, including giving all parties the opportunity to respond to new evidence submitted at the hearing. The city could have rejected the new evidence and avoided the procedural conundrum that it apparently believed it faced or could have left the record open to respond to the new evidence under ORS 197.763(4)(b). Poe v. City of Warrenton, 66 Or LUBA 108 (2012).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where a city development code requires a hearing before the planning commission before planned development approval but does not specifically require a second hearing before the planning commission where a planned development approval is appealed to LUBA and remanded, the city need not hold a second hearing before the planning commission where LUBA's remand does not require an additional hearing. Rosenzweig v. City of McMinnville, 66 Or LUBA 164 (2012).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where petitioners' were allowed to present evidence during the hearings on a decision that is appealed to LUBA and remanded, the city need not allow petitioners a second opportunity to enhance their evidentiary presentation following LUBA's remand where neither the city's regulations nor LUBA's remand require a further evidentiary hearing. Rosenzweig v. City of McMinnville, 66 Or LUBA 164 (2012).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where on remand of a decision that amends a county zoning ordinance, the county adopts a new ordinance with new amendments, but does not explicitly or implicitly re-adopt the original ordinance, on appeal to LUBA of the new ordinance the petitioner cannot challenge the original ordinance or the findings adopted on remand that are intended to support the original ordinance. Hatley v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 265 (2012).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where the local government on remand from LUBA conducts a single, consolidated proceeding that results in adoption of two ordinances and an order, on appeal of the two ordinances to LUBA the record includes the unappealed order, because the order was placed before the final decision maker during the proceedings on the ordinances. Hatley v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 427 (2012).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. An order that simply adopts additional findings following a LUBA remand, but does not "change" any acknowledged comprehensive plan or land use regulation, is not a post-acknowledgment plan amendment, and the deadline to appeal the order to LUBA is therefore 21 days from the date the decision became final, pursuant to the first sentence of ORS 197.830(9), not 21 days from the date that notice of the order was mailed. Hatley v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 433 (2012).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. When a decision to sell public park property is remanded to consider comprehensive plan policies after the local government only considered the public interest standard of ORS 275.330, there is no absolute requirement that the local government hold another public hearing on the ORS 275.330 public interest standard. Kaye v. Marion County, 62 Or LUBA 57 (2010).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. When LUBA remands an ordinance that changes the zoning for property, the ordinance becomes legally ineffective to rezone the property and the property's zoning reverts to its prior zoning. Turner v. Jackson County, 62 Or LUBA 199 (2010).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Nothing in ORS 197.763(3) requires that the notice of a hearing on remand summarize LUBA's bases for remand, and such bases for remand are not "applicable criteria" that must be listed in the notice of remand hearing. Easterly v. Polk County, 59 Or LUBA 417 (2009).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA remands a decision by sustaining one or more assignments of error, it does not necessarily mean that LUBA agreed with every argument or sub-argument the petitioner advanced in the sustained assignments of error, or that on remand the local government must address every argument in the petition for review under those assignments of error. Instead, the local government must address the issues described in the portion of LUBA's opinion remanding the decision. Easterly v. Polk County, 59 Or LUBA 417 (2009).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. LUBA will not resolve arguments that a $660 fee to conduct a hearing on remand is inconsistent with ORS 215.422, where the county notified the petitioner/applicant of the hearing fee but ultimately held the remand hearing without requiring petitioner to pay the fee. Under these circumstances, LUBA's resolution of the issue would be advisory. Easterly v. Polk County, 59 Or LUBA 417 (2009).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where the Court of Appeals adopts an interpretation of a city plan policy and the city's decision is remanded because the Court of Appeals concludes the city's and LUBA's interpretation of the plan policy in approving an urban growth boundary amendment was erroneous, the city is free following remand to amend the plan policy, and is not bound to reapply the plan policy to the urban growth boundary amendment as it was interpreted by the Court of Appeals. Hildenbrand v. City of Adair Village, 58 Or LUBA 43 (2008).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. The provisions of ORS 197.763(6), dealing with when and how hearings may be continued or the record left open for additional evidence, only apply to the initial evidentiary hearing in a proceeding. Any evidentiary hearing on remand from LUBA is not the initial evidentiary hearing and ORS 197.763(6) does not apply. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 56 Or LUBA 120 (2008).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. If a hearing is not the initial evidentiary hearing as is usually the case on remand, when a party submits new evidence as part of its rebuttal to another's party's evidence, as long as that new evidence is limited to rebutting the other party's evidence the other party has no right to surrebuttal. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 56 Or LUBA 120 (2008).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where a petitioner raises an issue and LUBA rejects that issue but remands a permit decision on other grounds, the petitioner may not raise the rejected issue for a second time in the local government's decision on remand. Save Our Skyline v. City of Bend, 55 Or LUBA 12 (2007).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A local government may limit its proceedings following a remand from LUBA to addressing the issues that led to the remand and may select the procedures it believes are most appropriate, provided those procedures do not improperly exclude any parties who are entitled to participate in those remand proceedings. Siporen v. City of Medford, 55 Or LUBA 29 (2007).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A party who otherwise has standing to participate in a city's land use public hearings under the city's land use legislation may not be denied standing to participate in public hearings following a remand from LUBA, simply because he or she failed to participate in the LUBA appeal. Siporen v. City of Medford, 55 Or LUBA 29 (2007).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where a local government erroneously decides that certain parties may not participate regarding certain issues in public hearings following a LUBA remand, but then nevertheless allows those parties to participate fully, the initial error would likely not result in prejudice to the parties' substantial rights. However, where the record in fact supports a conclusion that the parties' testimony on the disputed issues was not considered, the parties' substantial rights were prejudiced. Siporen v. City of Medford, 55 Or LUBA 29 (2007).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. While ORS 227.181(1) requires a city to take final action on a permit decision within 90 days of LUBA remand, once the applicant requests that the city proceed with the application on remand, nothing in the statute prohibits an applicant from essentially abandoning a remanded approval decision and instead filing a new or different application. In that circumstance, the city is under no obligation to address issues directed at the prior decision. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 55 Or LUBA 350 (2007).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where the petitioner raises a number of issues, some directed at a remanded decision that is not before the city, and others at the application that is before the city, and the city prudently adopts findings addressing all issues raised, the findings that address issues regarding an application that is not before the city are surplusage and not binding on the city or parties, and LUBA will not address challenges to those findings. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 55 Or LUBA 350 (2007).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. There is no requirement that local government decision makers personally read LUBA's opinion remanding a decision before taking action on remand. If the decision makers, or their legal staff or planners, misread a LUBA opinion and thereby make mistakes on remand, it is those mistakes that potentially provide a basis for assignments of error in a subsequent appeal – not the decision maker's failure to personally read LUBA's decision. Sommer v. Josephine County, 54 Or LUBA 507 (2007).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where the local government on remand allows the permit applicant an opportunity to rebut the permit opponent's response to the new evidence, it must allow other parties an opportunity to rebut the permit opponent's response; but the local government is not obligated on remand to allow other permit opponents an additional opportunity to enhance their evidentiary presentation. Rice v. City of Monmouth, 53 Or LUBA 55 (2006).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. When on remand a local government conducts an evidentiary hearing regarding a modified application, the local government may not restrict participation in the public hearing to parties to the original LUBA appeal. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 52 Or LUBA 509 (2006).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA remands a preliminary subdivision plat approval to the local government to address an issue, the local government may limit the hearing on remand to that issue, and need not address as part of the remand hearing other issues raised by petitioner regarding whether detailed development plans required by the preliminary plat approval are inconsistent with the approved conceptual plans approved. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 52 Or LUBA 518 (2006).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Under a code provision prohibiting ex parte contacts "in connection with any issue involved in the hearing," petitioner fails to demonstrate that communication between staff and the decision maker involving potential donation of land on the property is an indirect ex parte contact with the developer, where the remand hearing is limited to a single issue, and potential donation of land has nothing to do with that remand issue. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 52 Or LUBA 518 (2006).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Local governments are generally required to provide notice of proceedings on remand to the parties before LUBA, even if those parties would not otherwise be entitled to notice under the code. However, such notice is not necessarily required where, following remand, the local government elects to proceed on what is essentially a new and different application involving the same property, under code procedures that do not require notice. Sullivan v. Polk County, 51 Or LUBA 107 (2006).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. When the local government limits the scope of review on remand to issues raised in the petition for review before LUBA, those issues include arguments made in support of the assignments of errors, not merely the text of the assignments of error themselves. Dauenhauer v. Jackson County, 51 Or LUBA 539 (2006).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. ORS 227.180(1) requires that a local government take action within 90 days of the date LUBA remands a decision or within 90 days of the date of final resolution of judicial review. ORS 227.180(1) does not authorize a local government to take action on a decision before LUBA prior to the effective date of LUBA's order or the date of the Court of Appeals' appellate judgment, if LUBA's decision is appealed to the court. Rose v. City of Corvallis, 49 Or LUBA 260 (2005).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Under Standard Insurance Co. v. Washington County, 17 Or LUBA 647 (1989), absent statutory authority to the contrary, a local government has no jurisdiction to modify a land use decision that is before LUBA or the Court of Appeals. Rose v. City of Corvallis, 49 Or LUBA 260 (2005).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. When an earlier decision was remanded by LUBA based on issues regarding the safety of a proposed road design, and the local government specifically limits the remand proceedings to the issues remanded by LUBA, petitioners may not challenge the proposed road's location under the local government's transportation system plan when that locational issue could have been, but was not raised, in the earlier appeal. McCulloh v. City of Jacksonville, 49 Or LUBA 345 (2005).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Absent some code requirement to the contrary, a local government is not obligated to require a new application when the applicant proposes modifications to a site plan on remand from LUBA, although the local government must offer all parties the opportunity to submit testimony and evidence with respect to the proposed modifications. Friends of the Metolius v. Jefferson County, 48 Or LUBA 466 (2005).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Remand is necessary where, on remand from LUBA, the local government approves unspecified modifications to an approved site plan without addressing issues raised on remand regarding whether those modifications are consistent with applicable criteria. Friends of the Metolius v. Jefferson County, 48 Or LUBA 466 (2005).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA's remand of a county decision does not necessarily require that the county conduct additional evidentiary proceedings to respond to the remand, and (1) petitioner does not advise a county hearings officer that she believes it would be error for the county not to reopen the record to receive evidence that was not presented in the first appeal and (2) it is at least questionable whether county planning staff were responsible for the failure to include that evidence in the record of the first appeal, the hearings officer's decision not to reopen the record on remand is not error. Bradley v. Washington County, 47 Or LUBA 11 (2004).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. When an applicant on remand modifies the application that led to the remanded decision, the local government proceedings on remand represent a continuation of the original application rather than a new application. Therefore, the local government record that led to the LUBA appeal is properly part of the record on remand unless specifically excluded by the local government. Rutigliano v. Jackson County, 47 Or LUBA 628 (2004).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A petitioner's argument that a city's erroneous notice regarding the date it would reconsider a decision following remand from LUBA provides no basis for reversal or remand, where petitioner's entire argument is based on an erroneous assumption that an evidentiary hearing was required on remand and that the notice the city gave did not comply with ORS 197.763(2). McFall v. City of Sherwood, 46 Or LUBA 735 (2004).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A local government does not err in failing to provide an evidentiary hearing on remand to accept updated information regarding the current status of petitioner's property, where LUBA's remand did not require the local government to conduct additional evidentiary hearings, and petitioner fails to identify any authority that requires the local government to conduct an additional evidentiary hearing to accept updated information. Manning v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 1 (2003).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. That a local government moves for a voluntary remand of a land use decision does not necessarily mean that the remanded decision is substantively flawed. On remand the local government may be able to correct procedural errors or correct defects in its findings and, thereafter, readopt the same substantive decision. Paddock v. Yamhill County, 45 Or LUBA 39 (2003).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. In moving for a voluntary remand, a local government need not confess error and it need not confess error in its proceedings following remand. The local government's obligation in considering a decision following a voluntary remand is to conduct whatever additional proceedings may be necessary to allow it to correct any errors or possible errors there may be in the original decision, so that it can adopt a decision that it can defend in any further appeal. Paddock v. Yamhill County, 45 Or LUBA 39 (2003).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A city denial of petitioners' request for an evidentiary hearing after remand from LUBA is not error, where (1) petitioners had an opportunity to present evidence and argument during the city's initial proceedings; (2) the city did not apply new approval criteria or consider new evidence in making its decision on remand; and (3) petitioners do not provide a reason why the initial evidentiary proceedings were inadequate to address petitioners' application. Martin v. City of Dunes City, 45 Or LUBA 458 (2003).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A remand from LUBA for a city to adopt a written decision that identifies the applicable criteria and explains why the city concludes that those criteria have or have not been met does not bind the city to apply only those criteria that formed the basis for the city's initial decision to deny the application. Martin v. City of Dunes City, 45 Or LUBA 458 (2003).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Absent instructions from LUBA or applicable local requirements, a local government is entitled to limit the scope of remand proceedings to correcting the deficiencies that were the basis for LUBA's remand, although it may also choose to expand the scope of remand proceedings beyond the scope of LUBA's remand. CCCOG v. Columbia County, 44 Or LUBA 438 (2003).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA's remand requires the county to resolve an issue regarding three tax lots, but the county on remand accepts evidence on broader issues, the county's error, if any, in confining its final decision to resolving the dispute regarding the three tax lots is harmless, given that the county could have initially chosen to confine the remand proceeding to the basis for LUBA's remand. CCCOG v. Columbia County, 44 Or LUBA 438 (2003).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A petitioner fails to demonstrate that he was entitled to an evidentiary hearing before the local government following a remand from LUBA under Gutoski v. Lane County, 155 Or App 369, 963 P2d 145 (1998), where the arguments petitioner sought to present in that evidentiary hearing on remand were legal arguments rather than an expanded evidentiary presentation. Dimone v. City of Hillsboro, 44 Or LUBA 698 (2003).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. ORS 215.435 requires that a local government take final action on remand from LUBA within 90 days after the applicant requests in writing that the county proceed. Absent a local provision that establishes a deadline or limit that is consistent with that statute, a local government has no authority to terminate proceedings on remand or require that the applicant submit a new application, based on delay in initiating the request to proceed on remand. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 43 Or LUBA 4 (2002).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A local government is entitled to limit the scope of issues on remand to correcting the deficiencies that were the basis for remand. Where a local government does so, issues that could have been raised during the previous appeal, but were not, may not be raised on remand. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 43 Or LUBA 4 (2002).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Even where no specific statutory or local provisions govern limits on presentation of evidence on remand from LUBA, the parties have a fundamental right during an evidentiary proceeding to present and rebut evidence. An evidentiary proceeding on remand that fails to offer any opportunity to rebut new evidence submitted on remand is inconsistent with Fasano v. Washington Co. Comm., 264 Or 574, 503 P2d 23 (1973). Crowley v. City of Bandon, 43 Or LUBA 79 (2002).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where the record demonstrates that the local government did not incorrectly believe it was legally required to limit its scope of review on remand to the two issues that were identified in LUBA's remand, the local government commits no error in limiting its review on remand to the two issues that formed the basis of the remand. The city is entitled to so limit its scope of review on remand if it wishes. Lord v. City of Oregon City, 43 Or LUBA 361 (2002).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A local government's decision to request that an applicant prepare revised findings to respond to a LUBA remand does not, by itself, obligate the local government to provide a hearing following LUBA's remand. Arlington Heights Homeowners v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 185 (2001).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Parties that seek to demonstrate that a local government erred by adopting an interpretation of local land use legislation after the opportunity for argument and evidentiary presentations closes must demonstrate (1) that the interpretation was unforeseeable, and (2) that the party can produce new evidence that is different from evidence in the record and is directly responsive to the unanticipated interpretation. Gutoski v. Lane County, 155 Or App 369, 963 P2d 145 (1998). Arlington Heights Homeowners v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 185 (2001).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA remands a land use decision for inadequate findings, parties have no unqualified right to demand a hearing to present additional argument or evidence under Morrison v. City of Portland, 70 Or App 437, 689 P2d 1027 (1984). Arlington Heights Homeowners v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 185 (2001).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where, on remand from LUBA, the local government adopts a procedure that is proposed by the parties and that allows all sides to submit written evidence and written rebuttals, but limits oral testimony at the evidentiary hearing before the local government to summaries and explanations of previous submittals, the procedure is not correctly interpreted to prohibit an oral explanation of previously submitted evidence that includes additional supportive facts in response to the previously submitted written rebuttal. Terra v. City of Newport, 40 Or LUBA 286 (2001).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. The law of the case doctrine does not apply to an appeal of a new application, even if that application is similar to a prior application that resulted in a decision that was remanded by LUBA. Durig v. Washington County, 40 Or LUBA 1 (2001).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. When the record of a final decision made after remand of an earlier decision from LUBA also includes the record from the earlier decision, but portions of the record from the earlier decision no longer exist, photocopies of the earlier record may be included in the record on remand. If, however, portions of the earlier record are unavailable, re-creations of the earlier record will not be included in the record, if one of the parties objects to the re-creation. Terra v. City of Newport, 39 Or LUBA 811 (2001).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where an initial decision denying a rezoning request is remanded by LUBA, a city decision following remand to approve the rezoning request may be required to address issues the city was not required to address in its initial decision. Anderson v. City of Medford, 38 Or LUBA 792 (2000).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Because a local government's proceedings on remand from LUBA are a continuation of its original proceedings and not a new proceeding, a local government that has sent notice of a proposed post-acknowledgment plan amendment to DLCD as required by ORS 197.610 is not required under the statute or rules implementing the statute to send additional notice of the proposed amendment during the remand proceedings. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 38 Or LUBA 291 (2000).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Because ORS 227.180(3) protects the participants' right to a decision that is free of undisclosed ex parte communications, redressing a violation of the statute on remand requires more than reopening the record to disclose and offer an opportunity to rebut the substance of those communications. Although the city need not repeat the evidentiary proceedings leading up to the initial decision, the city must adopt a new decision approving or denying the application based on the record as a whole, including any evidence submitted in rebuttal. Opp v. City of Portland, 38 Or LUBA 251 (2000).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A local government decision on an application for land use approval that is made without disclosing or offering an opportunity to rebut an ex parte communication must be remanded for a plenary rehearing on the application. Opp v. City of Portland, 38 Or LUBA 251 (2000).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Petitioners are not precluded from raising arguments on appeal that pertain to assignments of error that were raised, but not finally decided, in a prior appeal to LUBA on the same application. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. An issue that could have, but was not, raised in the initial petition for review before LUBA in an appeal that was voluntarily remanded, may not be included in an assignment of error in a later appeal of a decision following remand. Riggs v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 432 (1999).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where a local government elects to conduct additional hearings prior to making a decision following remand of a decision by LUBA, all parties to the LUBA appeal that led to the remand are entitled to some form of individualized notice of the proceedings on remand, and a local government's failure to provide notice to one of those parties is procedural error. DLCD v. Crook County, 37 Or LUBA 39 (1999).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A party's right to appeal a local decision that is adopted following a remand by LUBA does not eliminate prejudice to that party's substantial rights caused by the local government's failure to provide notice of its proceedings on remand. The rights the party has in seeking LUBA review of the decision on remand are much more circumscribed that the rights the party has during a local land use hearing. DLCD v. Crook County, 37 Or LUBA 39 (1999).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Absent land use regulations that specify a particular procedure when a decision is withdrawn for reconsideration pursuant to OAR 661-010-0021, the procedures that govern depend on what stage in the process the local government returns to on reconsideration. Procedures governing evidentiary hearings are not applicable when the local government does not reopen the evidentiary record during the reconsideration proceedings. McElroy v. City of Corvallis, 36 Or LUBA 185 (1999).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where a county code applies the same "stability" standard that is required by ORS 215.284(1)(d) and (2)(d) for nonfarm dwellings to approval of recreational vehicle parks, it is not bound by case law that interprets and applies the statutory standard, where LUBA did not determine in its decision remanding the decision to the county that it must interpret the code standard in the same manner that the statute has been interpreted. Ray v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 45 (1999).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A local decision maker is entitled to limit its considerations on remand from LUBA to correcting the deficiencies identified in LUBA's remand decision. Port Dock Four, Inc. v. City of Newport, 36 Or LUBA 68.

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA determined in an earlier appeal of the county's approval of a nonconforming use that the nonconforming use was not established by a prior county decision approving site design review for that use, the law of the case doctrine prohibits the county, on remand, from revisiting the issue decided by LUBA. Marquam Farms Corp. v. Multnomah County, 35 Or LUBA 392 (1999).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. The law of the case doctrine does not bar petitioner from arguing that the city's action on remand from LUBA so altered the proposed development that the city must revisit a variance granted in the original decision. Dodds v. City of West Linn, 35 Or LUBA 101 (1998).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A decision on remand that increases a variance from a maximum lot coverage standard is not inconsistent with the initial variance approval, where the initial decision did not specify the variance allowed from the maximum lot coverage. Dodds v. City of West Linn, 35 Or LUBA 101 (1998).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Absent local procedures to the contrary, a local government is not required to follow all of the procedures required for the initial decision when the decision is withdrawn for reconsideration following appeal to LUBA under OAR 661-010-0021 and readopted without changes. Barnard Perkins Corp. v. City of Rivergrove, 34 Or LUBA 660 (1998).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. On remand, a county may prepare new findings without opening the record if it determines its findings were inadequate. A county may reopen the record to accept additional evidence if it determines there is not substantial evidence in the record upon which findings of approval can be based. Roberts v. Crook County, 33 Or LUBA 267 (1997).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Even if petitioner was not afforded an opportunity below to present argument and rebuttal on the issue of how the city should proceed on remand, petitioner has not demonstrated prejudice to its substantial rights where it was provided both an adequate opportunity to prepare and submit a case and a full and fair hearing. Prineville Properties, Inc. v. City of Prineville, 32 Or LUBA 139 (1996).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. In some circumstances, issues decided by LUBA and not appealed may not be further considered after remand to the local government. However, when the local government reopens the record on remand, new issues may be raised and may be the basis for a new decision, or grounds for a subsequent appeal. Prineville Properties, Inc. v. City of Prineville, 32 Or LUBA 139 (1996).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Nothing prohibits a city from weighing existing evidence differently and reaching a different decision on remand. Prineville Properties, Inc. v. City of Prineville, 32 Or LUBA 139 (1996).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where, on remand from LUBA, the county corrects an error in its decision, it is not required to follow the procedures that were required during the initial proceeding. Richards-Kreitzberg v. Marion County, 32 Or LUBA 76 (1996).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. When a local government limits its remand proceedings to issues that were the basis for LUBA's remand order, issues that were not raised in the first appeal, and are not within the scope of the issues that were the basis for LUBA's remand, cannot be raised in a subsequent appeal to LUBA. O'Rourke v. Union County, 31 Or LUBA 174 (1996).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA remanded a previous appeal because the county did not apply relevant agricultural goal and implementation policies of its comprehensive plan, the county's conclusion on remand that its previous findings were sufficient is not adequate. Brown v. Coos County, 31 Or LUBA 142 (1996).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A statement in a staff report prepared prior to a hearing on remand that certain criteria need not be considered on remand does not itself broaden the scope of the remand to include consideration of those criteria. Melton v. City of Cottage Grove, 30 Or LUBA 331 (1996).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. When, prior to an appeal to LUBA, a city satisfies the coordination requirement of OAR 660-12-060(3) by consulting with the county, and the development proposal does not change between LUBA's remand order and a second appeal, the city is not required to consult with the county again during the proceedings on remand. Melton v. City of Cottage Grove, 30 Or LUBA 331 (1996).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Petitioner was not prejudiced by the city's decision not to accept new evidence on remand, where petitioner made its arguments in the original hearing and the city considered them. ONRC v. City of Oregon City, 30 Or LUBA 258 (1995).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A local government's violations of the notice provisions of ORS 197.763 in its original proceedings do not permit a petitioner who fails to raise certain issues during proceedings on remand to elude the waiver provisions of ORS 197.835 during a second appeal to LUBA. Noble v. City of Fairview, 30 Or LUBA 180 (1995).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. To the extent parties were not properly apprised of the applicable criteria during the initial hearing, they must be provided the information required by ORS 197.763(3)(b) on remand. Noble v. City of Fairview, 30 Or LUBA 180 (1995).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. When petitioner was apprised by the local government of the applicable criteria, but failed to raise an issue before the local government during proceedings on remand, ORS 197.835(3) precludes petitioner from raising the issue on appeal to LUBA. Noble v. City of Fairview, 30 Or LUBA 180 (1995).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. When LUBA's remand order requires the county to address one code provision, the fact that certain issues raised under that code provision are also addressed by another code provision does not broaden the scope of the remand order to include the latter. Reeves v. Yamhill County, 30 Or LUBA 135 (1995).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where the city's findings of compliance with an ambiguous provision are inadequate and unresponsive to the issues raised by petitioners, on remand the city must specifically respond to those issues and explain its conclusions. Canby Quality of Life Committee v. City of Canby, 30 Or LUBA 166 (1995).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Unless required by LUBA's remand order or a local regulation, a local government does not have to repeat on remand the procedures applicable to the initial proceedings. East Lancaster Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Salem, 30 Or LUBA 147 (1995).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA remands a decision because the local decision maker failed to adopt findings explaining its determination of compliance with relevant approval standards, and the local decision maker was not required to hold a hearing before making its initial decision, the local decision maker is not required to hold a hearing on remand. Save Amazon Coalition v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 335 (1995).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Absent code provisions to the contrary, when a local government decision is remanded by LUBA, the local government is not required to repeat the procedures applicable to the initial proceedings, unless LUBA's remand specifically requires that those procedures be followed. Sanchez v. Clatsop County, 29 Or LUBA 26 (1995).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA remands a local government decision because it lacks findings of compliance with relevant approval standards, the local government must, at a minimum, conduct a hearing on remand to allow the parties an opportunity to present argument based on the possible interpretations to be adopted by the local government on remand. Friends of the Metolius v. Jefferson County, 28 Or LUBA 591 (1995).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where petitioners never had an opportunity to participate in the local process utilized for adopting the decision on remand, petitioners had no opportunity to raise issues during the remand proceedings and, therefore, are not limited by "raise it or waive it" rules. Friends of the Metolius v. Jefferson County, 28 Or LUBA 591 (1995).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where a local government is required to adopt a new decision on remand, it must conduct a hearing and provide notice of that hearing, at least for the purpose of allowing argument on the proposal's compliance with the standards to be addressed on remand. Collins v. Klamath County, 28 Or LUBA 553 (1995).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. ORS 197.763(8) applies only to a local government's notice of its initial evidentiary hearing. It does not apply to local hearings conducted after remand by LUBA. Collins v. Klamath County, 28 Or LUBA 553 (1995).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Unresolved issues, which may be considered in a local government proceeding on remand from LUBA, and raised in a subsequent appeal to LUBA from a local decision on remand, include (1) issues presented in the first appeal that LUBA either sustains or does not consider, and (2) issues that could not have been raised in the first LUBA appeal. Louisiana Pacific v. Umatilla County, 28 Or LUBA 32 (1994).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. ORS 197.835(8) applies only where LUBA determines a local government made a land use decision exceeding the local government's discretionary authority under applicable comprehensive plan and land use regulation provisions, not where LUBA determines the local government misconstrued its permissible scope of review on remand from a previous LUBA appeal. Louisiana Pacific v. Umatilla County, 28 Or LUBA 32 (1994).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Neither law of the case nor issue preclusion applies in a LUBA appeal of a land use decision made after a prior remand by LUBA, where the second appeal involves different parties and a new application for a revised project was submitted after remand. Davenport v. City of Tigard, 27 Or LUBA 243 (1994).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where the applicant submits a new application following remand by LUBA of a decision approving an earlier application, a local government is under no obligation to include the record of the prior application or to provide explicit notice that parties have to submit evidence from the previous record that they wish the local government to consider in reviewing the new application. Davenport v. City of Tigard, 27 Or LUBA 243 (1994).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where a local government limits its remand proceedings to the issues that were the basis for LUBA's remand, issues that were not raised in the first appeal, and are not within the scope of the issues that were the basis for LUBA's remand, cannot be raised in a subsequent appeal to LUBA. Wilson Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 106 (1994).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. That newly elected members of the local decision making body decided not to participate in local proceedings on remand from LUBA, because they were not members of the decision making body at the time the original local proceedings were conducted and are unfamiliar with the record, provides no basis for reversal or remand of the local government decision on remand. Rhine v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 86 (1994).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. If a local government wishes to exclude the record of the previous local proceeding on the same development application that led to local proceedings after remand by LUBA, it must expressly do so. Otherwise, in an appeal to LUBA from the local government decision on remand, the record of the previous local proceeding will be considered part of the record of the local government decision on remand. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 27 Or LUBA 651 (1994).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA remands a local government decision for an interpretation of ambiguous code provisions, and no appeal is taken from LUBA's determination concerning the code's ambiguity, petitioner is barred from arguing before LUBA that the disputed code provision is unambiguous, in an appeal from the local decision on remand. McGowan v. City of Eugene, 26 Or LUBA 9 (1993).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Under ORS 197.763, absent consideration of a new development application, local proceedings after remand by LUBA are part of a single, continuous land use process. Citizens for Resp. Growth v. City of Seaside, 26 Or LUBA 458 (1994).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. ORS 197.763(6), concerning requests by participants to leave the local evidentiary record open, applies only to the "initial evidentiary hearing" and not to local proceedings after remand by LUBA. Citizens for Resp. Growth v. City of Seaside, 26 Or LUBA 458 (1994).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. It is unclear whether the provisions of ORS 197.763(4) entitling parties to a continuance of a local government quasi-judicial land use hearing if additional evidence is provided in support of the application, applies to local remand proceedings. Nevertheless, to trigger the requirement of ORS 197.763(4) to continue the hearing, a party must request a continuance. Citizens for Resp. Growth v. City of Seaside, 26 Or LUBA 458 (1994).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. LUBA will not deny a request for voluntary remand of a challenged land use decision, simply because different approval criteria may apply on remand. Petitioners are entitled to obtain review by LUBA to assure a correct decision is rendered, whatever approval criteria may be applicable. Hastings Bulb Growers, Inc. v. Curry County, 25 Or LUBA 558 (1993).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. There is no general legal requirement that petitioners be provided an opportunity to rebut proposed local government findings. Adler v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 546 (1993).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA briefs are submitted to a local government during the local proceedings on remand, those briefs do not constitute "new evidence" that petitioners are entitled to rebut during the local proceedings on remand. Adler v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 546 (1993).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where petitioners argue a city cannot approve an amendment to a PUD development plan on remand from LUBA, because the underlying development plan approval expired after LUBA remanded the initial city decision approving the amendment, petitioners did not waive this issue. The issue was not ripe to be raised at the time of the city's initial proceedings on the amendment or during petitioners' first appeal to LUBA. Gage v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 449 (1993).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where a local government fails to apply, or improperly applies, an applicable approval standard in its initial proceedings, it is not automatically required to repeat on remand from LUBA every procedural step it followed in making its original decision. Gage v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 449 (1993).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Local government proceedings conducted after LUBA remand of the initial local government decision, regarding the same application, are a continuation of the initial local government proceedings. Where a petitioner submitted testimony to the local government at some point during the local proceedings, petitioner "appeared before the local government," as required by ORS 197.830(2)(b). DLCD v. Klamath County, 25 Or LUBA 355 (1993).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. In most circumstances, and in the absence of a local code requirement to the contrary, during proceedings on remand a local government need not repeat the entire process it followed in making the original decision. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 25 Or LUBA 327 (1993).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where (1) the local government's plan and land use regulations were unacknowledged when the original development application was submitted, (2) there has been no proceeding in which the local government identified the applicable standards after limited acknowledgment and enforcement orders were issued by LCDC, and (3) a prior LUBA opinion specifically required the local government to identify the applicable standards, the requirements of ORS 197.763 must be applied to the local proceedings on remand. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 25 Or LUBA 327 (1993).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A local government is required to provide parties with an opportunity to rebut evidence submitted during local proceedings on remand from this Board under either ORS 197.763(4)(b) or Fasano. A local government's failure to provide petitioner with such opportunity is a procedural error that prejudices petitioner's substantial rights. Caine v. Tillamook County, 25 Or LUBA 209 (1993).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A local government's failure to comply with procedural requirements of ORS 197.763 on remand from LUBA does not allow a petitioner to raise issues in a second appeal to LUBA that are otherwise barred by the doctrine of waiver articulated in Mill Creek Glen Protection Assoc. v. Umatilla County, 88 Or App 522, 527, 746 P2d 728 (1987). Caine v. Tillamook County, 25 Or LUBA 209 (1993).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA remands a decision on the basis that the local government failed to identify applicable standards, and ORS 197.763 is applicable to the local proceedings, the local government is required to provide notice identifying the relevant standards, conduct an evidentiary hearing, and allow petitioner to present evidence and argument concerning the applicability and proper interpretation of the identified standards. Warren v. City of Aurora, 25 Or LUBA 11 (1993).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Reversal of a local government land use decision approving a permit application means the subject application cannot be approved under the applicable criteria as a matter of law, and that a new or amended permit application is required to correct at least one allegation of error sustained in LUBA's final opinion. Seitz v. City of Ashland, 24 Or LUBA 311 (1992).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. While ORS 227.178(3) identifies the criteria that a city must apply to a permit application, it has no bearing on whether the city must, following reversal or remand of a permit decision by this Board, (1) accept an amended application reviewable against the criteria in effect when the original application was submitted, or (2) require a new application reviewable against the criteria in effect when the new application is submitted. Seitz v. City of Ashland, 24 Or LUBA 311 (1992).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Following LUBA reversal of a city decision approving a permit application, the choice between whether to allow the permit application to be amended or to require that a new permit application be submitted is within the city's discretion, provided any local code requirements governing that choice are followed. Seitz v. City of Ashland, 24 Or LUBA 311 (1992).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. When a local government decision has been remanded by LUBA, it is within the local government's authority to conduct further proceedings, including holding public hearings and accepting new evidence, to determine whether the subject application complies with the approval criteria that provided the bases for remand. Bouman v. Jackson County, 23 Or LUBA 628 (1992).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. On remand from LUBA, referral of modifications in proposed plan amendments to the planning commission for its recommendation is not required, where applicable statutory and code provisions requiring planning commission recommendations on proposed plan amendments do not also require that subsequent modifications made during city council consideration be referred to the planning commission for recommendations. Davenport v. City of Tigard, 23 Or LUBA 565 (1992).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where a decision approving a permit application is remanded by LUBA, and the application is thereafter modified to correct the deficiencies identified in LUBA's remand, without changing the nature of the original proposal, the local government does not err by applying on remand approval standards as they existed when the permit application was first submitted. Approval standards, as amended following submittal of the original permit application, need not be applied in such circumstances. ORS 227.178(3). Wentland v. City of Portland, 23 Or LUBA 321 (1992).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where a permit application is modified following LUBA's remand of a decision granting approval of the permit, but the modified application does not differ significantly from the original application, the local government does not err by failing to require that a new application be submitted. Wentland v. City of Portland, 23 Or LUBA 321 (1992).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Following remand of a permit decision by LUBA, a local government does not commit error by conducting a public hearing before the governing body, rather than before the hearings officer, as required under the code for the initial permit decision. Absent code requirements to the contrary, local procedural requirements that apply in reaching an initial decision on a permit application need not be followed during local proceedings following remand unless the remand specifically requires that those procedures be followed. Wentland v. City of Portland, 23 Or LUBA 321 (1992).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Petitioners' allegation that the local government failed to provide required notice of local proceedings following LUBA's remand of a land use decision provides no basis for remand, where petitioners do not contend they were in any way prejudiced by the alleged failure to provide the required notice of the local proceedings. Wentland v. City of Portland, 23 Or LUBA 321 (1992).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. LUBA will not assume certain city council members' participation in a decision following remand from LUBA is improper, simply because those members abstained from participating in the first decision because they felt they were not sufficiently familiar with the record. Bartels v. City of Portland, 23 Or LUBA 182 (1992).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Even if a local government erred by failing to provide notice of local hearings following remand from LUBA to persons other than parties in the LUBA appeal, that failure results in no prejudice to the substantial rights of the parties who did receive notice of the local hearings on remand. Bartels v. City of Portland, 23 Or LUBA 182 (1992).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. A local government may limit its proceedings on remand from LUBA to correcting the deficiencies that led to the remand and, unless the local code so requires, need not repeat the entire process it followed in making the initial decision. Bartels v. City of Portland, 23 Or LUBA 182 (1992).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where the applicable code provisions do not require a local government to conduct an evidentiary hearing after remand, the local government did not err simply because it refused to accept new evidence at a remand hearing. Washington Co. Farm Bureau v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 540 (1992).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where a decision is remanded because LUBA could not determine what standards were applied to deny a permit application, the local government on remand is required to identify the relevant standards and hold an evidentiary hearing to allow petitioner to present evidence and argument concerning the proper interpretation and application of those standards to his application. Bradbury v. City of Independence, 22 Or LUBA 783 (1991).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. The "law of the case" or "waiver" doctrine does not limit a local government's ability to adopt a different decision, or different findings in support of its decision, after its initial decision is remanded by LUBA. Eckis v. Linn County, 22 Or LUBA 27 (1991).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. City councilors who participated in a decision remanded by LUBA are not bound on remand to vote as they did previously. Strawn v. City of Albany, 21 Or LUBA 172 (1991).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where LUBA remands a decision in part on the basis that the local government improperly shifted the burden of proof to those opposed to the subject development proposal, the local government cannot limit its consideration on remand to only the specific issues which provided the other bases for LUBA's remand. Beck v. City of Tillamook, 20 Or LUBA 178 (1990).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. On remand from LUBA, a local government is entitled to limit its consideration of a request for land use approval to the issues that were the basis for remand. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 19 Or LUBA 404 (1990).

25.11 Local Government Procedures – Action After Remand. Where a local government decision concerning a permit is remanded by LUBA and, following local proceedings on remand, a second decision concerning the permit is appealed to LUBA, the record supporting the prior decision is not included in the record of the second decision where the county fails to either include the prior record in the second record submitted to LUBA or designate the prior record as being part of the record. Clark v. Jackson County, 19 Or LUBA 220 (1990).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. While issue preclusion does not generally apply in local land use hearings, and while the state's land use system is incompatible with giving preclusive effect to issues previously determined by a local government tribunal, a hearings officer does not err by giving a federal court judgment preclusive effect in a subsequent local government land use proceeding involving the same parties. O'Connor v. Clackamas County, 81 Or LUBA 413 (2020).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Where a local code provision requires that a proposed conditional use be "consistent with the character of the area," and where nothing in the code defines or describes the relevant study area for purposes of the provision, a local government does not err by expanding the scope of the study area beyond that described in the application. Tarr v. Multnomah County, 81 Or LUBA 242 (2020).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Provisions of a challenged ordinance that refer to or rely on provisions of a prior ordinance that LUBA remanded are invalid, even where the prior ordinance contained a severability clause purporting to allow unchallenged aspects of the prior ordinance to take effect after LUBA's remand. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Where a prior decision approved a plan amendment and zone change for the subject property and included a condition of approval limiting the type of future development to a "retail shopping center" and the size of future development to a certain square footage of gross leasable area, but where the prior decision approved no specific development, voluntary descriptions, statements, or representations made by the applicant during the prior proceeding regarding the particular store with which the shopping center would be developed are not binding on the applicant in a subsequent site plan review proceeding unless they were memorialized in conditions of approval for the prior decision. M & T Partners, Inc. v. City of Salem, 80 Or LUBA 221 (2019).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. The statute of limitations in ORS 131.125(8)(c) is inapplicable to a county's separate land use enforcement proceeding procedures pursuant to a county code that does not contain any time limitation for enforcement actions for violations of the county's land use code, because the county has authority over land use code enforcement matters independent from any statutorily derived authority in ORS Title 14 pursuant to county charter, and because ORS 153.030(4) expressly provides that "[n]othing in this chapter affects the ability of any other political subdivision of this state to provide for the administrative enforcement of the charter, ordinances, rules and regulations of the political subdivision, including enforcement through imposition of monetary penalties." A Walk on the Wild Side v. Washington County, 78 Or LUBA 356 (2018).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. A city commits procedural error that prejudiced the applicants' substantial rights when it failed to provide the applicants with a reasonable opportunity to respond to new evidence regarding compliance with tree preservation requirements that was submitted one day prior to the city's denial of the application for failure to demonstrate compliance with those requirements, based on the new evidence. Sage Equities, LLC v. City of Portland, 72 Or LUBA 163 (2015).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. When repair or replacement of windows in a historic district requires permit approval from a review body, any alleged failure of local government staff to respond to inquiries about the process or alleged knowledge of and failure to take action on unauthorized replacement cannot possibly substitute for the required approval process or constitute a de facto approval of the required permit. West v. City of Salem, 61 Or LUBA 166 (2010).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Equitable estoppel cannot arise from the actions of local government officials who purport to waive the provisions of a mandatory law or otherwise exceed their authority. West v. City of Salem, 61 Or LUBA 166 (2010).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Where a county board of commissioners adopts a tentative decision approving an application, but requests that the opponents provide comments on a proposed condition of approval, it is not procedural error for county counsel to discuss the opponents' comments with the commissioners rather than place the written comments in front of the commissioners for their direct review, where the motion that led to tentative approval did not specify how the commissioners wished to receive the comments. Western Land & Cattle, Inc. v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 295 (2009).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. OAR 661-010-0005 is a LUBA administrative rule under which LUBA treats certain procedural errors as technical violations. OAR 661-010-0005 does not apply to local governments, and local governments are not bound to treat technical errors in the same manner as LUBA. Golden v. City of Silverton, 58 Or LUBA 399 (2009).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. To give preclusive effect to an earlier unappealed land use decision and thus bar raising issues in a subsequent decision on a related, but separate, permit proceeding, the issue must concern particular development that was proposed, considered and approved in the earlier unappealed decision. Where the earlier decision approved only improvements to the second and third floor of a building, and did not purport to approve the first floor reconstruction that is at issue in the subsequent permit proceeding, on appeal of that subsequent permit to LUBA the petitioner is not precluded from raising issues regarding the first floor reconstruction. VanSpeybroeck v. Tillamook County, 56 Or LUBA 184 (2008).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Even if a prior conditional use permit implicitly approved reconstruction of the first floor of an existing building used for a nonconforming use, failure to appeal the prior decision would not necessarily preclude petitioner from arguing on appeal of a subsequent building permit to reconstruct the first floor that the building permit requires nonconforming use review, where the first floor plan authorized in the building permit approval proposes expansions and alterations not depicted on the first floor plan submitted as part of the prior conditional use application. VanSpeybroeck v. Tillamook County, 56 Or LUBA 184 (2008).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Under Nelson v. Emerald People's Utility Dist., 318 Or 99, 862 P2d 1293 (1993), a prior decision involving an issue may preclude relitigation of the issue if, among other things, the issue was actually litigated and essential to a final decision on the merits. Where in a prior land use decision the hearings officer concluded that a city code provision is facially unconstitutional, but the hearings officer denied the petitioner's application on different grounds, the hearings officer's view regarding facial unconstitutionality is dicta and not "essential" to a final decision on the merits, and therefore does not preclude the hearings officer from reconsidering that view in a decision on petitioner's subsequent land use application. Kingsley v. City of Portland, 55 Or LUBA 256 (2007).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. No state statute obligates a county to initiate an enforcement action against violation of its zoning code, and ORS 215.185(3) appears to provide to the contrary. Love v. Klamath County, 54 Or LUBA 410 (2007).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Where an applicant requests a legal lot verification under the local code procedure for obtaining such verification, the local government must necessarily inquire into whether the unit of land was lawfully created. That inquiry is not a collateral attack on decision that created the unit of land. Hogrefe v. Lane County, 54 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Where the legal effect of withdrawal of an application on a land use decision that approved that application is not clear under a county's land use regulation, LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss based on the withdrawal. Jacobsen v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 790 (2007).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Where a permit decision is not appealed before the local deadline for filing a local appeal expires, and a local governing body decision not to exercise its authority under ORS 227.180(1)(a) to review the permit decisions "on its own motion" is not governed by any statutory or local standards, the governing body's decision is not a land use decision. Such a governing body decision is not a land use decision, notwithstanding that the local governing body considers the merits of the permit decisions before exercising its discretion not to review the permit decisions on its own motion under ORS 227.180(1)(a). Beilke v. City of Tigard, 53 Or LUBA 133 (2006).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Where the standard to refer a permit revocation request to a hearing is whether the petitioner has shown a "reasonable suspicion" to believe that a misrepresentation in the permit application was the "sole basis" for approval, because the ultimate standard (sole basis for approval) is so difficult to satisfy, application of the threshold "reasonable suspicion" standard to that ultimate standard makes it relatively difficult to obtain referral of a revocation request to a hearing. Emami v. City of Lake Oswego, 52 Or LUBA 18 (2006).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. When a city steps into the shoes of a county to make land use decisions pursuant to an intergovernmental agreement, unless some controlling authority specifies otherwise, the resulting decision on behalf of the county is subject to the statutes applicable to counties rather than those applicable to cities. Stoloff v. City of Portland, 51 Or LUBA 560 (2006).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. When a local comprehensive plan provision requires coordination with affected natural resources agencies, the coordination with the affected agencies may be conducted by ODOT when the proposed project involves a multi-jurisdictional transportation project. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 49 Or LUBA 640 (2005).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Where applicable criteria require that the applicant and city identify the intended use and evaluate its impacts, a city errs when, in a combined role as applicant and decision-maker, it substantially changes a "intended use" of property proposed for rezoning after the close of the evidentiary hearing without providing the petitioner an opportunity to present argument and evidence with respect to the new intended use. Nielson v. City of Stayton, 47 Or LUBA 52 (2004).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. The Oregon Attorney General interprets ORS 174.130 to require the affirmative votes of a majority of a body that is made of three or more persons to take action, rather than a majority of the members of the body who happen to be present. However, where a body's enabling legislation includes provisions for a quorum, a majority vote of the quorum is sufficient to take action. Roe v. City of Union, 45 Or LUBA 660 (2003).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Claim preclusion does not generally apply to local land use proceedings, which are not intended to have the preclusive and final effects of proceedings where claim preclusion is applied. If one proposal for development is denied, land use ordinances anticipate and allow for additional attempts for similar or identical applications. Lawrence v. Clackamas County, 40 Or LUBA 507 (2001).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Issue preclusion does not generally apply to local land use proceedings, which are incompatible with giving preclusive effect to issues previously decided by a local government tribunal in another proceeding. Lawrence v. Clackamas County, 40 Or LUBA 507 (2001).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. A local government may not separate an otherwise unitary land use decision into separate components, remand some components for further local proceedings and designate some components as immediately appealable to LUBA. Besseling v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 177 (2000).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Where prior dealings between petitioner and city building officials concerning the elevation of native grade on petitioner's property simply show there was confusion about the issue, the city is not estopped from taking a position contrary to petitioner's regarding the location of native grade. Rivera v. City of Bandon, 38 Or LUBA 736 (2000).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Residents of annexation territory who signed consents to annexation to obtain city water and sewer services were not coerced into doing so, even though their consents were given because their wells were contaminated and septic tanks were failing. The city did not cause the contamination, nor did the city require the extraterritorial residents to connect to city systems. Johnson v. City of La Grande, 37 Or LUBA 380 (1999).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Where the applicants were aware that the local government's schedule failed to include time for the submission of written legal arguments as provided for by ORS 197.763(6)(e) and the applicants informed the local government that if they had objections to the process, they would "file" objections with the county counsel, the county could assume that the applicants waived their right to submit final written arguments, when the applicants failed to file objections. Wild Rose Ranch Enterprises v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 368 (1999).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. A basic tenet of the doctrine of claim preclusion is that claims resolved in a prior proceeding cannot be relitigated in a subsequent proceeding. Claim preclusion does not apply where the claim that intervenors urge should be precluded stems from a single proceeding in which the county made two determinations. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes County, 33 Or LUBA 12 (1997)

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Issue preclusion can be invoked to prevent an administrative agency from deciding an issue differently than it did in a previous decision; however, it is only applicable in a subsequent proceeding when an issue of ultimate fact has been determined by a valid and final determination in a prior proceeding. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes County, 33 Or LUBA 12 (1997).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Claim and issue preclusion may not be asserted against a petitioner in a LUBA appeal based on a prior circuit court proceeding where the circuit court proceeding ended in a stipulated judgment and where petitioner had no notice of and was not a party to the circuit court proceeding. DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. Where an earlier application was to partition a 14.45-acre lot, putting one parcel into farm use in conjunction with adjoining property, and to allow a nonfarm dwelling on the remaining parcel; but a subsequent application is to partition the remaining 8-acre lot into two parcels and to allow a second nonfarm dwelling, the "claims" involved in the two proceedings are not the same, and claim preclusion does not apply. Nelson v. Clackamas County, 19 Or LUBA 131 (1990).

25.12 Local Government Procedures – Other. The system of local government land use adjudication established by state statute and local regulations places primary importance on expeditious adjudications, contemporaneous application of the same approval criteria to all similarly situated applicants, and the ability of a local government tribunal to make an independent determination on the application of those approval criteria to the facts before it. This system is incompatible with giving preclusive effect to issues previously determined by a local government tribunal in another proceeding. Nelson v. Clackamas County, 19 Or LUBA 131 (1990).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Whether emergency access to the subject property is within the scope of an easement requires interpretation of the easement and is a matter of real estate law involving, among other things, a determination of the intent of the parties to the easement. Land use review bodies such as the city council are not particularly competent bodies to render interpretations of ambiguous terms in easements or deeds. Generally, a final and authoritative determination regarding the intent and scope of deeds, easements and similar real estate documents can be obtained only in circuit court, based on application of real estate law. McNichols v. City of Canby, 79 Or LUBA 139 (2019).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where an issue arises regarding compliance with an approval criterion that can be resolved only by interpretation of the ambiguous terms of an easement, the most problematic option for a local land use review body is to rely, without more, on its own interpretation of the ambiguous terms of an easement to determine compliance with the approval criterion. A less problematic option would be to impose conditions, at least as an alternative, intended to ensure that the legal uncertainty is resolved prior to final development approvals. The least problematic option is for the local government to interpret the terms of its approval criterion, if it can, to the effect that compliance can be determined regardless of how the ambiguous terms of the easement are interpreted or whether the dispute over the terms of the easement is resolved. McNichols v. City of Canby, 79 Or LUBA 139 (2019).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA will consider an affidavit from a party's attorney regarding dates and certain actions that occurred related to notice of the local government's decision at issue in the appeal for the limited purpose of resolving disputes regarding LUBA's jurisdiction. PGE v. City of West Linn, 79 Or LUBA 213 (2019).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A local code amendment adopted to implement provisions of ORS 197.724 is not an "action[] taken under ORS 197.722 to ORS 197.728" so as to place the amendment decision outside of LUBA's scope of review pursuant to ORS 197.726(1). Instead, such an amendment is an action taken under ORS 197.646(1), which requires local governments to amend their land use regulations "to comply with a new requirement in land use statutes." McCaffree v. Coos County, 79 Or LUBA 512 (2019).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. When all appeal fees originally charged by the county are refunded and the county has conceded that no appeal fees should have been charged, an opinion issued by LUBA would be in essence an advisory opinion. LUBA typically declines to issue advisory opinions. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 136 (2018).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the county determined that petitioner had not established a right to construct a Measure 49 dwelling on the subject property, and the county did not apply any county siting standards, the county's decision is not a land use decision under ORS 195.318(1) and, thereby, is not subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Vannett Properties, LLC v. Lane County, 78 Or LUBA 345 (2018).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA's jurisdiction over Metro decisions is complicated, because Metro does not have a comprehensive plan, and its ordinances are not "land use regulation[s]." As a result, a Metro decision fits within the ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A) definition of a "land use decision" only if the decision (1) adopts or amends Metro's Regional Framework Plan; or (2) otherwise concerns the application of the statewide planning goals. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. To qualify as a "land use decision" as defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(i), a Metro Resolution must constitute a "final decision" that concerns the application of the statewide planning goals. However, finality for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(a) is not solely a matter of whether the decision constitutes a local government's last word on a land use issue. Other important considerations include whether the decision is an exercise of the local government's land use planning authority, and the extent to which the decision is binding on the local government and affected parties. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A decision by Metro acting as arbitrator does not constitute a "final decision," where Metro's role as arbitrator was not an exercise of its function as a local government at all, but rather where Metro acted as a chosen arbitrator, a function that could have been performed by a private entity or individual. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A Metro arbitration decision subject to an arbitration process devised by Metro that contemplates that the final decision the comprehensive plan designation of an area of land shared by two cities and a county will be determined in the post-acknowledgement plan amendments (PAPA) adopted by the cities and county is not itself a "final" "land use decision." Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A Metro arbitration decision issued pursuant to a Metro arbitration process to arrive at a solution for the comprehensive plan designation for a disputed area of land jointly owned by two cities and a county, and which contemplates that the final decision regarding the comprehensive plan designation of the area will occur during the post-acknowledgment plan amendments, is not a "zoning" decision for purposes of ORS 268.393(6), which is part of the statute implementing Ballot Measure 56. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where LUBA determines that a Metro resolution is not a "final" decision, the significant impact land use decision test does not apply. The jurisdictional requirement–that a land use decision must be "final"–applies to both the statutory as well as the significant impact test. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA will not suspend a proceeding where petitioners have not established that LUBA's resolution of the pending LUBA appeal would likely be rendered moot by a concurrently pending circuit court proceeding. Although a circuit court could ultimately decide, in a future remand proceeding from the Court of Appeals, to grant petitioners full injunctive relief which could potentially be in conflict with, or moot LUBA's ruling, where such an outcome is extremely likely, LUBA will not grant petitioners' motion for stay. LUBA is a creature of statute, and can exercise only those powers granted by the legislature, and according to ORS 197.805 and ORS 197.830(10)(a), LUBA's mandate is that "time is of the essence in reaching final decisions in matters involving land use." Bishop v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 1050 (2018).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. When a petitioner's appeal is timely filed and the decision concerns the application of a land use regulation, the city's decision to deny a local appeal of a fee waiver does not fall under the ministerial exception and review of the decision is not excepted from LUBA's jurisdiction. Riverview Abbey Mausoleum Co. v. City of Portland, 78 Or LUBA 1057 (2018).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA will deny petitioners' motion for reconsideration of a motion to stay the proceedings, where petitioners argue for the first time that LUBA should grant a continuance under ORS 197.840(1)(d) and (2), and to suspend the 77-day deadline to resolve an appeal, where LUBA considered petitioners' arguments and responses thereto in the underlying motion to stay the proceedings, and LUBA remains unpersuaded that, to the extent the "ends of justice" would be served by indefinitely suspending the appeal, those ends outweigh the best interest of the public and the parties in meeting the 77-day deadline. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 1075 (2018).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where petitioners' counsel attempts to amend a timely filed Notice of Intent to Appeal (NITA), to add additional petitioners who were mistakenly omitted from the original NITA, but the amended NITA is filed after the time limit set forth in ORS 197.830(9) for filing a NITA before LUBA, petitioners' mistaken omission of the petitioners from the original NITA was not merely a "technical violation" of LUBA's rules at OAR 660-010-0015. The additional petitioners listed in the Amended NITA have not established that their NITA was filed within the time limit set forth in ORS 197.830(9), and are therefore not parties to the appeal. Cossins v. Josephine County, 77 Or LUBA 240 (2018).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Petitioner has not demonstrated that a city's decision to remove 35 trees from a 33-acre city park will have a significant qualitative or quantitative impact on present or future land uses. The decision does not alter any of the land uses allowed in the park's zone or any of the present or future land uses in the park, and the trees themselves are not land "uses" in any legally cognizable sense. Carlson v. City of Brookings, 77 Or LUBA 497 (2018).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where LUBA issues an interlocutory order approving or denying a motion to intervene, an appeal of LUBA's Final Opinion and Order to the Oregon Court of Appeals would allow challenge to that interlocutory order. Where the contested motion to intervene is briefed and ripe for resolution, delaying the resolution of the motion would unnecessarily prejudice the other parties, and complicate final resolution of the appeal by allowing a person LUBA has determined lacks standing to intervene to file a petition for review. Conte v. City of Eugene, 76 Or LUBA 498 (2017).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA may consider documents outside the record, including copies of earlier land use decisions regarding the subject property, that are useful in resolving a jurisdictional challenge to the appeal of a land use compatibility statement (LUCS), even in the absence of a motion to take evidence under OAR 661-010-0045. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 75 Or LUBA 504 (2017).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The interplay between ORS 197.830(3), allowing an extended 21-day period to appeal certain decisions directly to LUBA, and ORS 197.825(2)(a), requiring a party to exhaust all local appeals available by right, introduces jurisdictional uncertainty in some cases. Where the petitioner prudently requests a local appeal and also files a direct appeal to LUBA, LUBA typically suspends the LUBA proceeding until the local government determines whether a local appeal is available. Friends of the Lostine v. Wallowa County, 75 Or LUBA 546 (2017).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. City comprehensive plan goals, other adopted city plans and sub-plans, Metro Regional Framework and Regional Transportation Plans, and the Oregon Transportation Plan and Oregon Freight Plan are subject to judicial notice under ORS 40.090(4) or (7). However, LUBA will not consider "adjudicative facts" or facts found within judicially cognizable documents that are asserted for an "adjudicative" purpose, i.e., to provide evidentiary support or countervailing evidence with respect to an applicable approval criterion in an adjudicatory setting. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 75 Or LUBA 552 (2017).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Standard Insurance Co. v. Washington County, 17 Or LUBA 647, rev'd and rem'd on other grounds, 97 Or App 687, 776 P2d 1315 (1989), stands for the proposition that once a LUBA appeal is perfected to challenge a land use decision at LUBA, a local government no longer has jurisdiction to amend the land use decision until LUBA finally resolves the appeal. However, where the decision on appeal is a site plan and conditional use permit to construct a house on a property, a decision while that appeal is pending to amend a sewer improvement district boundary to include that property does not amend the site plan or conditional use permit. Evans v. City of Bandon, 74 Or LUBA 418 (2016).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where LUBA concludes that it lacks jurisdiction over an applicant's appeal of an adverse land use compatibility statement, the appeal must either be dismissed or transferred to circuit court if a motion to transfer is filed. LUBA lacks authority to reverse a decision it has no jurisdiction over. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 103 (2015).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA has exclusive jurisdiction over a city council decision that amends the city's Goal 5 inventory of historic resources to remove property, notwithstanding that following the city council decision a circuit court decided a mandamus action in the property owner's favor based on the stipulation of the parties that the city council had removed the property from the inventory. Because the circuit court judgment did not determine that the property owner was entitled to removal from the inventory under state law, but simply reflected the parties' stipulation regarding the outcome of the city council's decision, LUBA's review of the city council decision cannot conflict with the circuit court judgment. Lake Oswego Preservation Society v. City of Lake Oswego, 70 Or LUBA 103 (2014).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A petitioner at LUBA must do more than simply assert that the challenged decision is a land use decision that is subject to LUBA review. Early v. Jackson County, 70 Or LUBA 273 (2014).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) exempts from the ORS 197.015(10)(a) definition of "land use decision," and from LUBA review, decisions that require no "exercise of policy or legal judgment." Where a county moves to dismiss an appeal, asserting that the ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) exemption applies, and petitioners offer no understandable response to that jurisdictional argument, petitioners fail to carry their burden to establish that LUBA has jurisdiction. Early v. Jackson County, 70 Or LUBA 273 (2014).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Under OAR 661-010-0075(11)(b), petitioners have 14 days from the date a party files a motion challenging LUBA's jurisdiction over an appealed decision to file a conditional motion to transfer the appeal to circuit court, in the event LUBA sustains the jurisdictional challenge. Where petitioners do not file a conditional motion to transfer, and LUBA concludes it lacks jurisdiction, it will dismiss the appeal. Early v. Jackson County, 70 Or LUBA 273 (2014).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Under ORS 34.102(4), LUBA only has the authority to transfer to Circuit Court an appeal of a decision that LUBA concludes is not a land use decision or limited land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. LUBA lacks authority to transfer to circuit court discrete "issues" raised in an appeal of a land use decision or limited land use decision, while retaining jurisdiction and review authority over the remainder of the decision. Macfarlane v. Clackamas County, 70 Or LUBA 497 (2014).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the decision that is the subject of a LUBA appeal does not exist, LUBA lacks jurisdiction and the appeal will be dismissed. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 68 Or LUBA 159 (2013).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where all parties agree that an appeal should be dismissed, but argue the appeal should be dismissed for different reasons, LUBA need only find that one reason to dismiss is well-founded. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 68 Or LUBA 159 (2013).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA has a statutory obligation to ensure that its jurisdiction is appropriately exercised. LUBA must address a jurisdictional challenge presented by a party even if the challenge violates a stipulated case management order signed by the party. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Metro, 68 Or LUBA 302 (2013).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The legislature did not intend LUBA to exercise jurisdiction to review a decision approving a tax exemption for multiple family housing under ORS 307.600 et seq., as evidenced by the fact that the legislature specifically provided, in ORS 307.631, that denial or termination of a tax exemption for multiple-unit housing is subject to review in circuit court. Conte v. City of Eugene, 66 Or LUBA 95 (2012).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A decision that approves a property tax exemption for multiple-family housing under ORS 307.600 et seq.. is a fiscal decision excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction, notwithstanding that ORS 307.618 requires a finding that the multiple-family housing "is or will be at the time of development" in conformance with applicable land use regulations, because the decision has only incidental impacts on land use and does not approve or deny any proposed development, which will necessarily be subject to a subsequent decision on a building permit or application for development approval under the applicable land use regulations. Conte v. City of Eugene, 66 Or LUBA 95 (2012).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Even if all of the assignments of error challenging a decision on remand are barred from relitigation or waived under Beck v. City of Tillamook, 313 Or 148, 831 P2d 678 (1992), and thus not within LUBA's scope of review, that only means LUBA will affirm the decision, not that the decision on remand is not within LUBA's jurisdiction. Hatley v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 427 (2012).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. An order that simply adopts additional findings following a LUBA remand, but does not "change" any acknowledged comprehensive plan or land use regulation, is not a post-acknowledgment plan amendment, and the deadline to appeal the order to LUBA is therefore 21 days from the date the decision became final, pursuant to the first sentence of ORS 197.830(9), not 21 days from the date that notice of the order was mailed. Hatley v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 433 (2012).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The 21-day period to appeal to LUBA under the second sentence of ORS 197.830(9) commences on the date notice of the decision is mailed to "parties entitled to notice under ORS 197.615." The "notice" referred to in ORS 197.830(9) is the written notice that ORS 197.615(4) requires the local government to mail to participants, not the copy of the final decision that ORS 197.615(1) requires the local government to submit to DLCD. Hatley v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 433 (2012).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where a petitioner participated in the proceedings leading to adoption of a post-acknowledgment plan amendment, and received timely notice of the decision, the deadline to appeal the decision to LUBA is 21 days from the date the notice was mailed to petitioner, not 21 days from the date the local government submits a copy of the decision to DLCD. Hatley v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 433 (2012).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Under ODOT v. City of Oregon City, 153 Or App 705, 959 P2d 615 (1998), the deadline to appeal a post-acknowledgment plan amendment to LUBA under the second sentence of ORS 197.830(9) is 21 days from the date the local government mails notice of the decision to parties entitled to notice, even for persons who did not participate in the proceedings and thereby become entitled to notice. However, ODOT does not suggest that notice failures to some parties tolls the 21-day deadline for a petitioner who did receive notice but failed to appeal the decision to LUBA within the 21-day period. Hatley v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 433 (2012).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA may consider whether it has jurisdiction over an appeal on its own motion, and if it is uncertain whether it has jurisdiction, LUBA is obligated to do so without regard to whether the parties raise any jurisdictional question. Mingo v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 122 (2012).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Under subsection (3) of ORS 197.825, circuit courts retain jurisdiction "[t]o grant declaratory, injunctive, or mandatory relief in * * * proceedings brought to enforce the provisions of an adopted comprehensive plan or land use regulations[.]"Mingo v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 122 (2012).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. When a local government takes action to enforce its land use laws, LUBA has exclusive jurisdiction in such circumstances to review any land use decisions a local government may render in enforcing its land use laws, but circuit courts otherwise retain jurisdiction over proceedings that are brought to enforce county land use laws. Mingo v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 122 (2012).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Just as LUBA in reviewing land use decisions to determine whether they should be affirmed, remanded or reversed under ORS 197.835 "has no authority to enforce" local land use laws, circuit courts lack jurisdiction to review local government land use decisions when proceedings are brought in circuit court to enforce land use laws. Mingo v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 122 (2012).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where a county has adopted the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality's noise standards as a county land use regulation, a final county decision that applies those noise standards is a "land use decision," as that term is defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a). Mingo v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 122 (2012).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where LUBA raises a jurisdictional issue on its own motion at oral argument, requests additional briefing from the parties on whether LUBA has jurisdiction over the appeal and, after considering the parties' briefing, ultimately concludes that LUBA lacks jurisdiction, LUBA will dismiss the appeal unless the petitioner has filed a motion to transfer the appeal to circuit court. Maguire v. Clackamas County, 64 Or LUBA 288 (2011).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Under ORS 197.825(1), LUBA's jurisdiction is limited to review of land use decisions and limited land use decisions. Adjudication of allegations of false swearing under ORS 162.075(1) is not within LUBA's scope of review. Rosenzweig v. City of McMinnville, 64 Or LUBA 402 (2011).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA lacks statutory authority to grant a motion to transfer an appeal to circuit court that is filed after LUBA has issued its final opinion and order dismissing the appeal. Devereux v. Douglas County, 64 Or LUBA 466 (2011).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Even assuming that OAR 661- 010-0075(11), which provides that LUBA shall dismiss an appeal of a decision that is not reviewable as a land use decision, unless a motion to transfer to circuit court is filed within 14 days of the date any party or LUBA raises the jurisdictional issue, is inconsistent with ORS 34.102(4) or the federal due process clause, LUBA lacks authority to reconsider its final opinion to change the disposition of the appeal, in response to a motion to transfer filed after LUBA issued its final opinion dismissing the appeal. Any error that LUBA may commit in issuing the final opinion can only be corrected by appeal to the Court of Appeals. Maguire v. Clackamas County, 64 Or LUBA 478 (2011).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA lacks the equitable power of a court to apply the doctrine of laches to dismiss an appeal based on allegations that a petitioner knew from conversations with a neighbor about the challenged decision long before filing the LUBA appeal. The legislature has comprehensively prescribed in ORS 197.830(3) and other relevant statutes the deadlines to appeal land use decisions to LUBA, including what states of knowledge are relevant in applying those deadlines. Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A decision that amends a land use decision is itself a land use decision. Mingo v. Morrow County, 63 Or LUBA 357 (2011).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where there is a reasonable dispute regarding which of two documents or decisions is appealable to LUBA, the notice of intent to appeal identifies both documents, but mistakenly identifies the wrong document as the appealable decision, LUBA will regard that mistake as a technical pleading error, treat the appealable decision as the subject of the notice, and not dismiss an otherwise properly filed appeal. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 63 Or LUBA 538 (2011).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the notice of intent to appeal mistakenly identifies a planning commission decision as the county's final decision, but it is clear that the petitioner wished to appeal the county's final decision, the governing body's decision on petitioner's local appeal of the planning commission decision, dismissing the appeal based on that mistake would amount to dismissing the appeal based on a technical pleading error. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 63 Or LUBA 538 (2011).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA will not dismiss an appeal based on mistaken identification of the county's final decision, where the appeal has proceeded from its beginning and the record was settled under a shared understanding regarding the subject of the appeal, and no party identifies prejudice to any party's substantial rights from the petitioner's error in mis-identifying the appealed decision in the notice of intent to appeal. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 63 Or LUBA 538 (2011).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA normally resolves jurisdictional challenges before considering any other arguments on the merits. However, LUBA will consider those other arguments on the merits where petitioner's "jurisdictional" challenge is really an argument for a limited scope of review of a decision that petitioner concedes is a land use decision, and LUBA's resolution of the arguments on the merits makes it unnecessary to resolve petitioner's scope of review arguments. Parker Johnstone Wilsonville Honda v. ODOT, 62 Or LUBA 116 (2010).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Decisions that local governments do not believe to be land use decisions and do not process as land use decisions may in fact be land use decisions. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 62 Or LUBA 535 (2010).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA may raise the issue of jurisdiction on its own motion and at any time. Stewart v. City of Salem, 61 Or LUBA 77 (2010).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. No statute authorizes LUBA to reconsider a previously issued final opinion. Boucot v. City of Corvallis, 61 Or LUBA 459 (2010).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Arguments that a permit applicant failed to raise any issue concerning a refund of permit fees in his appeal of the permit denial provide no basis for a motion to dismiss. Waiver of issues for failure to raise those issues in a local proceeding or prior LUBA appeals may affect LUBA's scope of review, but such waiver does not affect LUBA's jurisdiction to review a decision that qualifies as a land use decision. Sperber v. Coos County, 61 Or LUBA 477 (2010).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A motion to dismiss an appeal because the notice of intent to appeal inadequately described the appealed decision will be denied, where that motion is based on a hyper-technical reading of the notice of intent to appeal and the notice of intent to appeal adequately described the comprehensive plan and zoning map amendment that the petitioner wished to appeal, even though the notice of intent to appeal did not refer to the enacting ordinance by number and erroneously referred to a resolution that adopted supporting findings but did not adopt the appealed amendment. Just v. Linn County, 60 Or LUBA 74 (2009).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where a petitioner transmits the petition for review to LUBA in any way other than by first class mail with the United States Postal Service, the petition for review is not "filed" until it is received by LUBA. In that circumstance it is legally irrelevant whether the petitioner acted in good faith in using a carrier other than the United States Postal Service and it is legally irrelevant that the choice to transmit the petition for review by a means other than first class mail resulted in no delay in LUBA receiving the petition for review. Canfield v. Lane County, 59 Or LUBA 505 (2009).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Whether the OAR 661-010-0030(1) requirement that a LUBA appeal be dismissed if the petition for review is not filed within the 21-day deadline established by that rule is a jurisdictional requirement or merely a compulsory non-jurisdictional basis for dismissing the appeal, the 10-day rule in OAR 661-010-0065(2) that requires a motion to be filed within 10 days after discovery of a failure to comply with LUBA's rules does not apply to a motion to dismiss based on a petitioner's failure to comply with the deadline established by OAR 661-010-0030(1) for filing the petition for review. Canfield v. Lane County, 59 Or LUBA 505 (2009).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. When a local government dismisses a local appeal of a decision that is a land use decision, LUBA has jurisdiction to review that dismissal even if the dismissal did not require interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment. Golden v. City of Silverton, 58 Or LUBA 399 (2009).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Under Measure 37, specifically under ORS 197.352(9) (2005), public entity decisions to modify or to waive land use laws in response to Measure 37 claims were not land use decisions and were therefore not reviewable by LUBA. Public entity decisions that were issued following those modification or waiver decisions, which applied modified land use laws or land use laws that were not waived under Measure 37 were land use decisions and were reviewable by LUBA. DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Decisions under Measure 49 are not land use decisions and are not subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. ORS 195.305(7); 195.318(1). DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Under ORS 195.305(7) local government decisions about the "nature and extent" of just compensation due under Ballot Measure 49 are not land use decisions. However, a local government decision maker's understanding that approval of a preliminary plat was a decision about the "nature and extent" of just compensation under Measure 49 has no bearing on whether the decision actually is a decision about the "nature and extent" of just compensation under Measure 49. DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A preliminary subdivision plat approval decision that post-dates a vested rights determination under Measure 49 is a land use decision subject to LUBA's review and is not a decision concerning the "nature and extent of [just] compensation" under Measure 49. DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA has jurisdiction to review decisions that post-date and rely on Ballot Measure 37 waivers, if those decisions apply land use laws that were not waived under Ballot Measure 37. However, in those appeals LUBA's scope of review does not include challenges to the underlying Ballot Measure 37 waiver. DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Decisions under ORS 197.352(8) about whether land use laws should be or can be waived under Ballot Measure 37 are not land use decisions and are not reviewable by LUBA. But where questions arise about the scope of previously issued Ballot Measure 37 waivers in subsequent land use decisions that rely on those Ballot Measure 37 waivers, LUBA's scope of review includes resolving any ambiguities about the scope of a previously issued Ballot Measure 37 waiver. DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. In an appeal of a subdivision decision that relies on Ballot Measure 37 waivers and a Ballot Measure 49 vested rights decision, LUBA's scope of review includes resolving questions about the scope of the previously issued Ballot Measure 37 waiver. A decision about the scope of a previously issued Ballot Measure 37 waiver is not a decision about the "nature and extent of [just] compensation" under Measure 49 (ORS 195.305(7)) and is therefore subject to LUBA review. DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA may consider documents that are not in the record, even without a motion to take evidence under OAR 661-010-0045, if a party offers such documents for the limited purpose of determining whether LUBA has jurisdiction over the challenged decision. Murray v. Multnomah County, 56 Or LUBA 370 (2008).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Designation of tax lots is not a land use decision. Chaves v. Jackson County, 56 Or LUBA 643 (2008).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA does not have authority to "reopen" or "restart" an appeal in which LUBA has already issued a final opinion and order. The only recourse for a party that wishes to challenge our final opinion and order is to appeal our decision to the Court of Appeals. Jacobsen v. Douglas County, 56 Or LUBA 816 (2008).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The filing of a Notice of Intent to Appeal (NITA) is a jurisdictional prerequisite to commencing a LUBA appeal. Where all petitioners withdraw the NITA, the appeal must be dismissed. Brown v. Jackson County, 55 Or LUBA 178 (2007).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Petitioners' failure to include an adequate jurisdictional statement in their petition for review is not a basis for dismissing their appeal, where their dispute about whether the challenged decision is a land use decision is the central dispute and petitioners' first assignment of error alleges that the appealed decision is a land use decision that is subject to LUBA review. Zirker v. City of Bend, 55 Or LUBA 188 (2007).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Petitioners' argument that a prior zoning ordinance did not allow a mushroom buying business is moot, where the currently applicable zoning ordinance that replaced the prior zoning ordinance does not allow a mushroom buying business and would apply to any application for a mushroom buying business in the future. Robson v. City of La Grande, 54 Or LUBA 10 (2007).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Whether the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality properly issued a permit in reliance on a local government land use compatibility statement has no bearing on whether that land use compatibility statement is a land use decision as defined in ORS 197.015(11). Wolfgram v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 54 (2007).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The fact that procedures for making limited land use decisions are used for making a decision to approve or deny a final partition plat does not convert that decision into a limited land use decision or override the language of ORS 92.100(7) providing that decisions to approve or deny a final partition plat are not limited land use decisions. Ehle v. City of Salem, 54 Or LUBA 688 (2007).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA's scope of review is not limited to the local government record under ORS 197.835(2)(a) when LUBA is considering whether the decision on appeal is a land use decision that is subject to LUBA review. Making that threshold jurisdictional inquiry does not entail "[r]eview of the decision," within the meaning of ORS 197.835(2)(a). Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 54 Or LUBA 692 (2007).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the legal effect of withdrawal of an application on a land use decision that approved that application is not clear under a county's land use regulation, LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss based on the withdrawal. Jacobsen v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 790 (2007).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. An agreement between a local government and a private party for development of a sports park is not a "development agreement" as defined in ORS 94.504, where it is clear from the language of the agreement that the parties did not intend the agreement to comply with the requirements of ORS 94.504(1)–(8). Dorall v. Coos County, 53 Or LUBA 32 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Referral to the Court of Appeals under ORS 34.102(5) is not appropriate or required where LUBA will have jurisdiction to review the county's interlocutory decision denying a motion to dismiss as part of its review of the county's final decision on the application. Ratzlaff v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 480 (2007).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA need not resolve the parties' legal dispute over whether a condition of subdivision approval requiring construction of a street through a neighboring development is consistent with conditions, covenants and restrictions governing that neighboring development, where only the circuit court has jurisdiction to finally resolve that dispute, and the local government has adequately established an alternative basis to impose the condition regardless of how that legal dispute is resolved. Butte Conservancy v. City of Gresham, 52 Or LUBA 550 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Based on dicta in Kalmiopsis Audubon Society v. Curry County, 131 Or App 308, 884 P2d 894 (1994), it is theoretically possible to appeal a decision that purports to correct a "clerical error" in a final, unappealed decision, as long as the petitioner demonstrates that the correction qualifies as a land use decision and the appeal is narrowly focused on the correction itself, rather than the unappealed decision. Hoschek v. Tillamook County, 52 Or LUBA 793 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA has consistently declined to apply the "fiscal exception" to decisions that involve local land use appeal fees or land use application fees, because such decisions implicate core land use concerns regarding access to and citizen participation in land use reviews. Sommer v. Josephine County, 52 Or LUBA 806 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The specific motivation of a county for amending its schedule of appeal and application fees is not determinative of whether the "fiscal exception" to LUBA's jurisdiction applies. Sommer v. Josephine County, 52 Or LUBA 806 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A decision approving a manufactured home subdivision is a limited land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. That the decision includes a condition of approval that imposes or references system development charges does not mean that the decision is excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction as a "fiscal" decision under the reasoning in State Housing Council v. City of Lake Oswego, 48 Or App 525, 617 P2d 655 (1980). D & B Home Investments v. City of Donald, 51 Or LUBA 1 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A quasi-judicial decision approving a tentative subdivision plat does not "implement" a systems development charge within the meaning of ORS 223.314, and therefore fall within an exclusion to LUBA's jurisdiction, simply because the decision imposes a condition of approval that imposes or references system development charges. D & B Home Investments v. City of Donald, 51 Or LUBA 1 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the local government failed to provide either (1) a "notice of a hearing" required by ORS 197.763 or (2) notice of an "administrative decision" required by ORS 197.195, ORS 197.830(6)(b) provides that the statute of ultimate repose in ORS

197.830(6)(a) does not apply. Failure to provide notice required by other statutes or by local codes do not provide an exception to the three-year statute of ultimate repose. Kamp v. Washington County, 51 Or LUBA 670 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Notice of withdrawal of a permit application required by local ordinance is not "notice of a hearing" required by ORS 197.763, and failure to provide such notice of withdrawal does not invoke the exception to the statute of ultimate repose at ORS 197.803(6)(b). Kamp v. Washington County, 51 Or LUBA 670 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Failure to provide notice of withdrawal of a permit application required by local ordinance is not a failure to provide the "notice of decision" required by the statutes governing limited land use decisions at ORS 197.195, for purposes of the statute of ultimate repose at ORS 197.830(6), where it is undisputed that the subject property is not within an urban growth boundary and for that reason alone a decision with respect to the application cannot be a limited land use decision. Kamp v. Washington County, 51 Or LUBA 670 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The requirements in OAR 661-010-0015(3) that the notice of intent to appeal include a caption identifying the "governing body" as the respondent and that the notice include the name and telephone number of the governing body and its counsel serve important purposes, including notifying the local government responsible for compiling the record and defending the decision before LUBA that its decision has been appealed, but those requirements are not in themselves jurisdictional. Stoloff v. City of Portland, 51 Or LUBA 812 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where pursuant to an intergovernmental agreement a city acts as the final decision maker for a county, compiles the record, and defends the decision before LUBA, the purposes of OAR 661-010-0015(3) are better served by naming the city rather than the county as the respondent. Stoloff v. City of Portland, 51 Or LUBA 812 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Failure to satisfy the content requirements for a notice of an intent to appeal is a technical violation of LUBA's rules that does not provide a basis to dismiss the appeal, absent a showing of prejudice to the parties' substantial rights. Where no prejudice is shown, LUBA will allow the notice to be amended to name the correct parties. Stoloff v. City of Portland, 51 Or LUBA 812 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss, which is based on an argument that there is no "reasonable basis" to appeal the challenged subdivision approval, where no pleadings have yet been filed and the movant fails to demonstrate that the decision is subject to any exception to LUBA's jurisdiction. Even if petitioner is ultimately unable to advance a meritorious challenge to the decision, LUBA would affirm the decision rather than dismiss the appeal. Frewing v. City of Tigard, 51 Or LUBA 834 (2006).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Statutes relating to development agreements, ORS 94.5084 et seq., are not the exclusive avenue for a local government to adopt development agreements, and the language in ORS 94.508(2) providing that approval or amendment of a development agreement is a land use decision does not apply to a city's adoption of a development agreement pursuant to its charter authority. ZRZ Realty Company v. City of Portland, 49 Or LUBA 309 (2005).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. An allegation that a local ordinance authorizes actions prohibited under contract with federal government does not fall within LUBA's scope of review. Roads End Sanitary District v. City of Lincoln City, 48 Or LUBA 126 (2004).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Contrary to Thede v. Polk County, 1 Or LUBA 339 (1980), irregularities in signing and approving a final city decision does not mean that the challenged decision is not a "final decision" subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Knutson Family LLC v. City of Eugene, 48 Or LUBA 618 (2004).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. An argument that the assignments of error in the petition for review are directed at decisions not before LUBA is not a basis to dismiss an appeal of a decision otherwise within LUBA's jurisdiction. If that argument is correct, the proper disposition is to reject the assignments of error in the petition for review and affirm the challenged decision, not to dismiss the appeal. Such arguments are more correctly viewed as a scope of review challenge rather than a jurisdictional challenge. Butte Conservancy v. City of Gresham, 47 Or LUBA 282 (2004).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A challenge to LUBA's jurisdiction may be brought at any time, and a city's delay of several months in filing its motion to dismiss provides no basis for LUBA to refuse to consider the city's motion to dismiss. Dobson v. City of Newport, 47 Or LUBA 589 (2004).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where a petitioner does not ask any questions of LUBA staff or city staff until the last day to file her notice of intent to appeal under her legal theory and nine days after the notice of intent to appeal was due under the city's legal theory, nothing city or LUBA staff may have said to petitioner could be the cause of her failing to file a timely notice of intent to appeal under the city's legal theory. Dobson v. City of Newport, 47 Or LUBA 589 (2004).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Although a motion to dismiss may be filed at any time prior to the issuance of a final opinion and order, a party is not entitled to file unlimited motions on the same issue. When a party has had ample time to brief and argue jurisdictional issues, LUBA is not obligated to reconsider earlier orders regarding jurisdiction. Comrie v. City of Pendleton, 46 Or LUBA 19 (2003).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA does not have the authority to issue a remedial order that requires an applicant to restore property to the condition it was in prior to approval of the challenged application in the event petitioners prevail in their LUBA appeal. Roberts v. Clatsop County, 44 Or LUBA 178 (2003).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the respondent argues that its decision is merely a recommendation to another governing body, and thus not a final decision, and the petitioner fails to respond to that argument, the petitioner has not met his burden of establishing the Board's jurisdiction, and the appeal will be dismissed. Ziemer v. City of Florence, 43 OR LUBA 1 (2002).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the petitioners do not argue that a city decision establishing a local improvement district to fund street improvements is a land use decision, LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review the city's decision. Hazelnut A Partners v. City of Woodburn, 42 Or LUBA 474 (2002).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Ancillary local government decisions pertaining to the siting of energy generating facilities that might otherwise fall under the definition of land use decisions subject to LUBA's jurisdiction are nevertheless subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Oregon Energy Facility Siting Council, with direct review by the Oregon Supreme Court. Thomas v. City of Turner, 42 Or LUBA 39 (2002).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. ORS 197.805 can be read in isolation to suggest that LUBA must apply the "practical effect" limitation on the judicial power described in Utsey v. Coos County, 176 Or App 524, 32 P3d 933 (2001), as a "sound principle of judicial review." However, read in context with ORS 197.830, it is clear that the legislature did not intend to require that petitioners invoking LUBA's review under ORS 197.830(2) establish that the challenged decision impacts their interests. Central Klamath County CAT v. Klamath County, 41 Or LUBA 524 (2002).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. ORS 197.825(2)(b), which states that LUBA's jurisdiction is subject to the statutes governing the Court of Appeals' review of LUBA decisions, simply clarifies that LUBA no longer has jurisdiction over an appeal once a party seeks judicial review of LUBA's final order in that appeal. ORS 197.825(2)(b) does not require that LUBA consider whether the Court of Appeals might lack constitutional authority to review LUBA's final order, or require that LUBA dismiss the appeal if it concludes that such is the case. Central Klamath County CAT v. Klamath County, 41 Or LUBA 524 (2002).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. ORS 197.090(2) requires DLCD to obtain approval from LCDC prior to filing an appeal with LUBA, but allows DLCD to obtain approval after the fact if the decision being appealed becomes final less than 15 days before the next LCDC meeting or no meeting is scheduled during the appeal period. However, nothing in the statute indicates that the timing of approval has jurisdictional significance, or that LUBA loses jurisdiction over the appeal if DLCD erroneously obtains after-the-fact approval rather than prior approval. DLCD v. Douglas County, 40 Or LUBA 604 (2001).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. ORS 197.626 provides the Land Conservation and Development Commission with exclusive jurisdiction to review decisions that amend an urban growth boundary (UGB) to include more than 50 acres. However, ORS 197.626 does not deprive LUBA of jurisdiction over a final decision that amends the city's comprehensive plan housing needs inventory but does not amend the UGB or otherwise determine how the city will accommodate the identified housing needs. DLCD v. City of McMinnville, 40 Or LUBA 591 (2001).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Under ORS 197.644(2) and OAR 660-025-0040, it is possible for the Land Conservation and Development Commission and LUBA to have concurrent jurisdiction over the same land use decision, albeit each may have exclusive jurisdiction over different issues arising from the decision. DLCD v. City of McMinnville, 40 Or LUBA 591 (2001).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA has jurisdiction under ORS 197.644(2), ORS 197.825(2)(c) and OAR 660-025-0040(1) over a decision amending a city's comprehensive plan housing inventory, notwithstanding that the city is undergoing periodic review, where the decision was not adopted to implement the city's periodic review work program or any work program tasks. DLCD v. City of McMinnville, 40 Or LUBA 591 (2001).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where a city has not responded to petitioner's concerns that a property owner lost his right to continue a nonconforming residential use, petitioner may be able to seek a remedy in circuit court under ORS 197.825(3)(a). However, unless and until the city addresses those concerns in a land use decision, LUBA has no jurisdiction to consider those concerns. Robson v. City of La Grande, 40 Or LUBA 250 (2001).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where LUBA has determined in a prior earlier appeal that a conditional use permit has expired, a subsequent appeal challenging a city decision that refuses to revoke the conditional use permit or delete certain conditions of approval in the conditional use permit is moot. Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 39 Or LUBA 353 (2001).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where a petitioner fails to respond to an apparently meritorious motion to dismiss, petitioner fails to carry his burden to demonstrate that the challenged decision is a land use decision subject to review by LUBA. Rohrer v. Crook County, 38 Or LUBA 8 (2000).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where a county enforcement decision does not apply or interpret any land use regulations in deciding that a mobile home set-up permit is the equivalent of a building permit for the purpose of determining whether a permit deadline has been met, the county's decision is not a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Balk v. Multnomah County, 38 Or LUBA 1 (2000).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Under ORS 197.825(3)(a), a local government may elect to enforce its land use regulations, and if such an enforcement action is filed in circuit court, the court has jurisdiction to consider any land use issues that might arise. Yost v. Deschutes County, 37 Or LUBA 653 (2000).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A local government decision not to institute action in circuit court to enforce its land use regulations is not itself a land use decision, provided the local government's decision is not rendered pursuant to a local procedure that necessarily leads to a land use decision, as defined by ORS 197.015(10)(a). Yost v. Deschutes County, 37 Or LUBA 653 (2000).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where a local government's land use regulations make it clear that staff determinations describing the uses to which property may be put are informal decisions rather than final county decisions, and those decisions are rendered outside formal local government land use procedures for decision making and declaratory rulings, such decisions do not constitute land use decisions that may be appealed to LUBA. Yost v. Deschutes County, 37 Or LUBA 653 (2000).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. In lieu of judicial review by the Court of Appeals of an order of the Columbia River Gorge Commission regarding any action of a county pursuant to the Columbia River Gorge Scenic Area Act, the county's decision may be appealed to LUBA. Such an appeal must be filed within 21 days after the Columbia River Gorge Commission decision becomes final and LUBA may not consider any issue concerning interpretation or implementation of the Columbia River Gorge Scenic Act. Lois Thompson Housing Project v. Multnomah County, 37 Or LUBA 580 (2000).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. An appeal to LUBA of a county decision under the Columbia River Gorge Scenic Act, prior to the date the Columbia River Gorge Commission issues a final decision reviewing the county decision, is premature and will be dismissed. Appellate jurisdiction for review of such a county decision in the first instance lies with the Columbia River Gorge Commission. Lois Thompson Housing Project v. Multnomah County, 37 Or LUBA 580 (2000).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA's dismissal of an appeal at petitioner's request expresses no opinion on the merits of any underlying agreement or any actions taken by the local government that may form the basis for petitioner's decision to request that its appeal be dismissed. Genstar Land Company Northwest v. City of Sherwood, 36 Or LUBA 612 (1999).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the relationship between two decisions is not clear from the parties' memoranda, LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss and defer a ruling on jurisdiction until after the parties' briefs are filed and an opportunity for oral argument is provided. Columbia Hills Development Co. v. Columbia County, 35 Or LUBA 737 (1998).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. An access permit for petitioner's subdivision and an irrevocable consent agreement are neither land use or limited land use decisions, as defined by ORS 197.015(10) and (12), over which LUBA has jurisdiction. River Estates v. Umatilla County, 35 Or LUBA 310 (1998).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Whether multiple enactments constitute a single decision for purposes of appeal to LUBA depends on the relationship between the enactments. Where a decision on reconsideration reenacts the original decision together with a supplemental enactment that is characterized as an "integral part" of the reconsidered decision, there is a single decision for purposes of appeal of the decision on reconsideration to LUBA. Barnard Perkins Corp. v. City of Rivergrove, 34 Or LUBA 660 (1998).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where a different, closely related decision is not separately appealed to LUBA, LUBA has no jurisdiction to conduct a consolidated review of the decision that was not appealed as part of its review of the decision that was appealed. Jebousek v. City of Newport, 34 Or LUBA 340 (1998).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA's jurisdiction is limited to reviewing the land use decision appealed. In reviewing an appealed land use decision, LUBA may not consider whether a code amendment that is applied in the challenged decision was properly adopted, where the decision adopting the code amendment was not appealed. Femling v. Coos County, 34 Or LUBA 328 (1998).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA does not have jurisdiction to enforce a circuit court injunction requiring that a structure be reduced in size. Femling v. Coos County, 34 Or LUBA 328 (1998).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The parties to an appeal at LUBA may not by agreement stipulate that LUBA has jurisdiction to review a separate decision that was not appealed to LUBA. Mountain Gate Homeowners v. Washington County, 34 Or LUBA 169 (1998).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A challenge to LUBA's jurisdiction is not subject to the 10-day requirement of OAR 661-10-065(2), which governs motions that challenge an opposing party's failure to comply with statutes or LUBA's rules. Adams v. City of Ashland, 33 Or LUBA 552 (1997).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA is obligated as an appellate body to examine its jurisdiction sua sponte, regardless of whether the issue is raised by the parties. Adams v. City of Ashland, 33 Or LUBA 552 (1997).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A county's delay in providing petitioner with notice of decision does not toll the 21-day appeal period set forth in ORS 197.830(8), and under Wicks-Snodgrass v. City of Reedsport, 148 Or App 217, 939 P2d 625 (1997), LUBA has no jurisdiction over an appeal filed more than 21 days after the county's decision became final. Michael-Mark v. Yamhill County, 33 Or LUBA 409 (1997).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA will consider appended materials outside the record to the extent they aid in determining whether a local government's action is a land use decision subject to LUBA jurisdiction. Ceniga v. Clackamas County, 33 Or LUBA 261 (1997).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A challenge to LUBA's jurisdiction is not subject to the 10-day requirement of OAR 661-10-065(2); it may be brought at any time prior to LUBA's issuance of a final opinion and order. Petersen v. Columbia County, 33 Or LUBA 253 (1997).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. With the exception of ORS 197.540, which authorizes LUBA to review a moratorium on land construction or development alleged to have been adopted in violation of the moratorium statute (ORS 197.505 to 197.540), LUBA's jurisdiction is limited by ORS 197.825(1) to the review of any land use decision or limited land use decision of a local government. Cole v. Lane Transit District, 33 Or LUBA 201 (1997).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Service of copies of the notice of intent to appeal is a jurisdictional requirement under OAR 661-10-015(2); while late service of such notice is a technical violation that will not result in dismissal, a complete failure to provide such notice defeats LUBA's jurisdiction. Bruce v. City of Hillsboro, 32 Or LUBA 382 (1997).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where petitioner's objective is to require the city to apply its comprehensive plan or land use regulations, petitioner's remedy lies in circuit court, not at LUBA. No Casino Association v. City of Lincoln City, 32 Or LUBA 154 (1996).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The jurisdictional statement required by OAR 660-10-030(2) provides a means for LUBA to determine whether the challenged decision fits within the statutory scope of its jurisdiction. The statement does not limit the issues that may be raised in the body of a petition for review. Miller v. City of Joseph, 31 Or LUBA 472 (1996).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. ORS 258.036, which governs jurisdiction over election contests, does not apply to the election of members to a county citizen planning advisory committee (CPAC). Boom v. Columbia County, 31 Or LUBA 318 (1996).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA's jurisdiction is governed by the applicable statutes in effect when the notice of intent to appeal was filed. Torgeson v. Clackamas County, 31 Or LUBA 554 (1996).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A local government cannot confer appeal jurisdiction on LUBA where jurisdiction does not otherwise exist by including in a notice of ordinance adoption a statement that there is an appeal to LUBA. Mazeski v. Wasco County, 31 Or LUBA 126 (1996).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. In deciding jurisdictional challenges, LUBA will consider material attached to the parties' briefs if no party objects. If a party does object, the appropriate means to introduce evidence from outside the record is through a motion for an evidentiary hearing. Mazeski v. Wasco County, 31 Or LUBA 126 (1996).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the local government in a motion to dismiss raises a significant issue regarding LUBA's jurisdiction over a purported land use decision, and petitioner does not respond to the motion or otherwise explain the basis for LUBA's jurisdiction, petitioner has not satisfied its burden of establishing jurisdiction. Bennett v. Polk County, 30 Or LUBA 349 (1996).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. When the 1995 legislature amended ORS 197.835, it did not deprive LUBA of jurisdiction over issues that could be raised at the time the notice of intent to appeal was filed. Ramsay v. Linn County, 30 Or LUBA 283 (1996).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Because petitioner's notice of intent to appeal was accompanied by a check made out to the wrong agency and the error was not corrected before the expiration of the appeal period, LUBA has no jurisdiction over the appeal. Ray v. Douglas County, 30 Or LUBA 238 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA does not retain jurisdiction over a proceeding once it has issued a final opinion and order. Mazeski v. Wasco County, 30 Or LUBA 442 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Under OAR 660-25-040(1) and (2), LUBA retains jurisdiction during periodic review over matters that do not involve compliance with the Statewide Planning Goals. Mazeski v. Wasco County, 30 Or LUBA 442 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A challenge to LUBA's jurisdiction is not subject to the 10-day requirement of OAR 661-10-065(2), which governs motions that challenge an opposing party's failure to comply with statutes or LUBA's rules. No Casino Association v. Lincoln City, 30 Or LUBA 79 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where petitioners do not respond to a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction, or otherwise establish that actions taken by the county constitute a land use decision, petitioners have not met their burden of establishing LUBA's jurisdiction. Murphy Cit. Advisory Committee v. Josephine County, 30 Or LUBA 28 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Even if county actions could otherwise be construed to be land use decisions, where the actions are mandated by a circuit court order in response to a writ of mandamus, they are not land use decisions over which LUBA has jurisdiction. Murphy Cit. Advisory Committee v. Josephine County, 30 Or LUBA 28 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The Public Records Law provides that it is enforced by petition to the county district attorney and, if that fails, by instituting an action in circuit court. ORS 192.460. LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review alleged violations of the Public Records Law. Jackman v. City of Tillamook, 29 Or LUBA 391 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Whether planning commission members comply with a local government's requirements regarding the make-up of its planning commission is not within LUBA's scope of review. Jackman v. City of Tillamook, 29 Or LUBA 391 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the city council conducted a separate proceeding on the question of whether off-street parking use of certain property requires a conditional use permit, petitioners participated in that proceeding, and city council minutes indicate a final, appealable decision interpreting the local code in this regard was made, petitioners cannot challenge that decision in their appeal of the city's subsequent decision on an application for site plan approval for such off-street parking. Jackman v. City of Tillamook, 29 Or LUBA 391 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Once LUBA has issued a "final order" pursuant to ORS 197.830(14), review jurisdiction rests with the Court of Appeals, and LUBA will dissolve a previously issued stay of a challenged local government decision. Save Amazon Coalition v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 335 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. As the party seeking review, a petitioner has the burden of establishing LUBA has jurisdiction. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Columbia County, 29 Or LUBA 597 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA does not have the authority to reject an otherwise properly filed appeal on the basis of an equitable defense of laches. Nehoda v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 251 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The provisions of ORS 94.5O4 to 94.528 (1993) making the approval or amendment of a "development agreement" a "land use decision," do not apply to agreements that may be titled "Development Agreements," but were executed prior to the effective date of the 1993 statute. Franklin v. Deschutes County, 29 Or LUBA 79 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the dispute between the parties involves an ethical dispute concerning the application of disciplinary rules of the Oregon State Bar that have no direct bearing on the merits of the decision appealed to LUBA, LUBA will not attempt to resolve such ethical dispute. Burghardt v. City of Molalla, 28 Or LUBA 788 (1995).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Petitioners generally establish LUBA's jurisdiction in the petition for review. However, if a respondent moves to dismiss the LUBA appeal on the basis that the appealed decision is not a land use decision or that the appeal was not timely filed, petitioner's response to the motion to dismiss must establish that LUBA has jurisdiction. Bowen v. City of Dunes City, 28 Or LUBA 324 (1994).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A motion challenging LUBA's jurisdiction is not subject to the 10-day filing requirement for motions specified in OAR 661-10-065(2). Bowen v. City of Dunes City, 28 Or LUBA 324 (1994).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. It is petitioner's obligation to establish LUBA's jurisdiction, including that petitioner's notice of intent to appeal was timely filed. Bowen v. City of Dunes City, 28 Or LUBA 324 (1994).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. That an individual member of the board of commissioners may have told a newspaper that he believes certain uses of the subject property are incidental to farm use or otherwise are permitted uses in the EFU zoning district, does not constitute a decision of the board of commissioners. Bach v. Deschutes County, 28 Or LUBA 58 (1994).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where a notice of intent to appeal filed at LUBA is later withdrawn, the LUBA appeal must be dismissed. Davis v. City of Bandon, 28 Or LUBA 38 (1994).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA's jurisdiction over an appeal is governed by the statutes in effect when the notice of intent to appeal initiating that appeal was filed. Williams v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 602 (1994).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A local government decision is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction if it meets either (1) the statutory definition in ORS 197.015(10); or (2) the significant impact test established by City of Pendleton v. Kerns, 294 Or 126, 133-34, 653 P2d 996 (1982). Sahagian v. Columbia County, 27 Or LUBA 341 (1994).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. If a land use decision is made in a local government proceeding to enforce its land use regulations, under ORS 197.825(1) LUBA has exclusive jurisdiction for initial review of that land use decision. If no appeal to LUBA is filed, or after any review by LUBA is complete and the local government's decision is affirmed, the local government may then seek to enforce its decision in a circuit court proceeding under ORS 197.825(3)(a). Watson v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 164 (1994).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA lacks jurisdiction to reopen an appeal, once its final opinion and order in that appeal is issued. Fechtig v. City of Albany, 27 Or LUBA 648 (1994).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA does not have authority to deny respondent the right to appear and defend its decision in an appeal before LUBA. Sanchez v. Clatsop County, 26 Or LUBA 631 (1994).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The exclusive forum for enforcement of public meetings laws is circuit court. That public meetings law violations may have occurred during the land use decision making process does not, of itself, provide a basis for reversal or remand. Sorte v. City of Newport, 26 Or LUBA 236 (1993).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where a local government decision determines the effect of a previous decision, LUBA may not review the legal sufficiency of the previous decision. Rodriguez v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 50 (1993).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Judicial review of LUBA decisions is governed solely by ORS 197.850. ORS 197.850 does not authorize LUBA to consider petitions for reconsideration or to stay its final opinions and orders. DLCD v. Klamath County, 26 Or LUBA 589 (1993).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Petitioner has the obligation to establish LUBA's jurisdiction. Where respondent moves to dismiss an appeal challenging a local government decision ordering compliance with local government land use regulations, alleging the challenged compliance order is not a land use decision, and petitioner fails to respond to the motion, LUBA will dismiss the appeal. Kezar v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 16 (1993).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. As the party seeking LUBA review, the burden is on petitioner to establish that the challenged decision is a land use decision. Where petitioner fails to identify any comprehensive plan provision as applicable to, or argue that any plan provision is an approval standard for, the challenged decision, LUBA will conclude the challenged decision does not concern the application of a comprehensive plan. Price v. Clatsop County, 25 Or LUBA 341 (1993).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA has no authority to reconsider or clarify its final opinions and orders. Caine v. Tillamook County, 25 Or LUBA 785 (1993).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where a party simply asserts that LUBA lacks jurisdiction over an appeal, but fails to explain why, and it appears to LUBA that it has jurisdiction, LUBA will assume jurisdiction over the appeal. A Storage Place v. City of Tualatin, 25 Or LUBA 202 (1993).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the planning commission delegated to the city manager authority to grant extensions of PUD overall development plan approval, and neither the planning commission's decision nor the city manager's decision exercising that authority was appealed, LUBA will not consider arguments that the planning commission improperly delegated authority to the city manager in an appeal of a subsequent city decision granting final PUD approval. Westlake Homeowners Assoc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 25 Or LUBA 145 (1993).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA has authority to promulgate rules allowing the filing of cross petitions for review by respondents who have not themselves filed timely notices of intent to appeal. Reusser v. Washington County, 24 Or LUBA 652 (1993).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. That petitioner may be precluded from raising the issues it seeks to raise in a LUBA appeal because those issues were required to have been raised and resolved in an earlier stage of the local land use proceeding, which petitioner did not appeal, would not mean that LUBA would lack jurisdiction to review the challenged decision. Rather, in such circumstances, LUBA would be required to affirm the decision. DLCD v. Crook County, 24 Or LUBA 393 (1993).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. In determining whether it has jurisdiction over an appeal, absent some objection from the parties, LUBA will consider materials from the record of a related LUBA appeal that are attached to parties' briefs, as well as other material in the record of that related appeal. Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The timely filing of a notice of intent to appeal is required for LUBA to have jurisdiction. Where the time for filing a notice of intent to appeal runs from the date a petitioner obtained actual knowledge of the decision or knew or should have known of the decision, it is petitioner's burden to establish when the requisite knowledge of the decision was obtained. Leonard v. Union County, 24 Or LUBA 362 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A local government decision is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction if it meets either (1) the statutory definition in ORS 197.015(10); or (2) the significant impact test. Curtis Serve N Save v. City of Eugene, 24 Or LUBA 341 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. As the party seeking review by LUBA, petitioner has the burden of establishing that LUBA has jurisdiction. Where a petitioner argues her notice of intent to appeal is timely because it was filed within 21 days after she received actual notice of the challenged decision, the petitioner must support her argument with affidavits, record citations or other evidence. Sparrows v. Clackamas County, 24 Or LUBA 318 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where allegations of fact made in petitioner's briefs are critical to establishing LUBA's jurisdiction, respondents dispute those allegations, and petitioner neither provides citations to the record, affidavits or other evidence supporting the allegations nor files a motion for evidentiary hearing seeking to introduce evidence to support the allegations, LUBA will dismiss the appeal. Sparrows v. Clackamas County, 24 Or LUBA 318 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. That the electorate may have exceeded its authority in adopting land use legislation by initiative, is a question bearing on the merits of an appeal from such a decision, not on LUBA's jurisdiction to review the appealed decision. Riverbend Landfill Company v. Yamhill County, 24 Or LUBA 607 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A special district decision is a "land use decision" subject to LUBA review if it meets either (1) the statutory definition in ORS 197.015(10), or (2) the significant impact test. Keating v. Heceta Water District, 24 Or LUBA 175 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where a local planning official refuses to accept petitioner's local appeal of a hearings officer's decision on a permit application, but another local appeal of the same decision is processed, the refusal is either (1) a final land use decision, in which case a NITA must be timely filed with LUBA; or (2) part of the ongoing local proceedings on the subject application, in which case in an appeal of the local government's final decision, LUBA can only consider issues concerning the refusal to accept petitioner's appeal if those issues were raised below. Wilson Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 24 Or LUBA 98 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA has no authority to issue an order clarifying its final opinion. Alliance for Resp. Land Use v. Deschutes County, 23 Or LUBA 717 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The land use decision reviewed in an appeal before LUBA is the final written decision, not what individual parties, staff or members of the decision making body may have stated during the course of the proceedings below. Hess v. City of Portland, 23 Or LUBA 343 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A notice of intent to appeal identifying one land use decision may not later be amended to include a second decision, where no notice of intent to appeal the second decision was filed within the time required by statute and no filing fee or deposit for costs has been paid to challenge the second decision. Hood River Sand v. City of Mosier, 23 Or LUBA 701 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A local government decision is a land use decision if it meets either (1) the statutory definition in ORS 197.015(10); or (2) the significant impact test established by City of Pendleton v. Kerns, 294 Or 126, 133-34, 653 P2d 996 (1982). Miller v. City of Dayton, 22 Or LUBA 661 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. As the party seeking LUBA review, the burden is on petitioner to establish that the appealed decision is a land use decision. Miller v. City of Dayton, 22 Or LUBA 661 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where LUBA determines an appealed decision is not reviewable as a land use decision, and a request to transfer the appeal to circuit court pursuant to ORS 19.230 was not filed within 10 days after the respondent's brief was due, as required by OAR

661-10-075(10)(b), LUBA will dismiss the appeal. Miller v. City of Dayton, 22 Or LUBA 661 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Under ORS 197.830(1), the maintenance of a validly filed notice of intent to appeal is required for LUBA to have jurisdiction over an appeal. Ramsey v. City of Portland, 22 Or LUBA 535 (1992).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A statutory change in the tribunal with appellate jurisdiction affects the legal rights and obligations of parties arising out of past transactions, and retrospective application of such a change in jurisdictional statutes to pending appeals is not appropriate. Schultz v. City of Grants Pass, 22 Or LUBA 457 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where LUBA lacks jurisdiction over an appeal challenging a decision approving a land division within an urban growth boundary under the jurisdictional statutes existing on the date the notice of intent to appeal is filed, LUBA does not obtain jurisdiction to consider such an appeal when legislation giving LUBA jurisdiction over appeals of such decisions becomes effective while the improperly filed appeal is pending. Schultz v. City of Grants Pass, 22 Or LUBA 457 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Failure to include a jurisdictional statement in the petition for review, as required by OAR 661-10-030(3)(c), is a technical violation of LUBA's rules and does not provide a sufficient basis for dismissing the petition for review. However, because petitioner bears the burden of establishing LUBA's jurisdiction, LUBA will require the petition for review to be amended to include a jurisdictional statement. OAR 661-10-030(4). Dolan v. City of Tigard, 22 Or LUBA 820 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the standards upon which conceptual development approval was based are changed to disallow the use conceptually approved, and later decisions authorizing a building permit and final development approval for the use are adopted on the basis that the prior standards continue to apply, a petitioner is entitled to challenge the later decisions notwithstanding petitioner's failure to challenge the conceptual development approval. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. The land use decision reviewed in a LUBA appeal is the final written decision, not what individual parties, staff or members of the decision making body may have stated during the course of the proceedings below. Gray v. Clatsop County, 22 Or LUBA 270 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Inconsistencies between a decision made by two service districts and a county comprehensive plan and land use regulations do not make the service districts' decision a decision by the county or a de facto amendment to the county comprehensive plan. Price v. Arch Cape Service District, 22 Or LUBA 807 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Whether the challenged decision exceeded the decision maker's jurisdiction is an issue to be resolved in considering the merits of an appeal. For purposes of determining LUBA's jurisdiction, the sole question is whether the challenged decision falls within the class of decisions over which LUBA has review authority. Pilling v. LCDC, 22 Or LUBA 188 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. As the party seeking review by LUBA, petitioner has the burden of establishing that LUBA has jurisdiction. Hamby v. City of Jefferson, 22 Or LUBA 1 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA does not have authority to take official notice of adjudicative facts, as set out in OEC 201. LUBA's review is limited by ORS 197.830(13)(a) to the record of the proceeding below, except in instances where an evidentiary hearing is authorized by ORS 197.830(13)(b), and where facts outside the record are essential to determining whether LUBA has jurisdiction or whether an appeal is moot. Blatt v. City of Portland, 21 Or LUBA 337 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where petitioners' notice of intent to appeal (1) identifies a decision applying the local code, rather than provisions of the local code itself, as the subject of the appeal, and (2) was not filed within 21 days of the adoption of the code provisions, petitioners may not challenge the code provisions in the appeal. Wickwire v. Clackamas County, 21 Or LUBA 278 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where respondent's motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction is based solely on the legal nature of the challenged decision, and petitioner does not explain why the local government record would provide any assistance in determining the legal nature of the challenged decision, LUBA will grant respondent's motion to delay filing the record until after the motion to dismiss is resolved. Goose Hollow Foothills Assoc. v. City of Portland, 21 Or LUBA 555 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Although a decision rendered in violation of statutory public meeting law requirements may be voided, the circuit court for the county in which the governing body ordinarily meets has jurisdiction, not LUBA. ORS 192.680. Strawn v. City of Albany, 21 Or LUBA 172 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where LUBA lacks jurisdiction, an appeal must either be dismissed or transferred to circuit court pursuant to ORS 19.230. Sully v. City of Ashland, 20 Or LUBA 428 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA lacks statutory authority to reconsider its final decisions, and once a final decision is issued the only remedy is an appeal to the Court of Appeals. Sarti v. City of Lake Oswego, 20 Or LUBA 562 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the Court of Appeals reverses or remands a LUBA decision, the 30-day period specified in ORS 197.850(11) for LUBA to respond commences on the date the appellate court judgment becomes effective. Byrnes v. City of Hillsboro, 20 Or LUBA 408 (1991).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA's jurisdiction is based on the land use regulations the local government has adopted, not on land use regulations it could have adopted or might yet adopt. Bartels v. City of Portland, 20 Or LUBA 303 (1990).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the notice of intent to appeal identifies as the subject of the appeal a local government decision applying its zoning ordinance to the subject property, not a prior decision rezoning the subject property, and no appeal was filed within 21 days of the prior zone change, LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review the prior zone change. Sabin v. Clackamas County, 20 Or LUBA 23 (1990).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A local government decision is a land use decision if it meets either (1) the statutory definition in ORS 197.015(10); or (2) the significant impacts test established by City of Pendleton v. Kerns, 294 Or 126, 133-134, 653 P2d 996 (1982). City of Portland v. Multnomah County, 19 Or LUBA 468 (1990).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. A challenge to LUBA's jurisdiction may be brought at any time and is not subject to the 10-day requirement of OAR 661-10-065(2). Elliott v. Lane County, 18 Or LUBA 871 (1990).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. Where the parties in an appeal proceeding contend the appeal should be dismissed, LUBA will dismiss the appeal, even though the parties contend the appeal should be dismissed for different reasons. Kirpal Light Satsang v. Douglas County, 18 Or LUBA 795 (1990).

26.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Generally. LUBA does not have authority to review the SCS's identification of prime farmland for compliance with applicable SCS standards. LUBA simply reviews the county's decision for whether the county correctly determined what land the SCS identifies as prime farmland. Foland v. Jackson County, 18 Or LUBA 731 (1990).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a county approves a petitioner's application subject to a condition of approval, where the approval requires that the condition be met prior to the expiration of the approval period, where county counsel subsequently sends the petitioner a letter concluding that the petitioner had not satisfied the condition and, thus, that the approval had expired, and where the petitioner does not assert that the letter involves the application of land use regulations or identify any land use regulation that county counsel applied or should have applied, LUBA will conclude that the letter is not a "land use decision," as defined in ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A), and that LUBA lacks jurisdiction to review it. Schofield v. Douglas County, 81 Or LUBA 143 (2020).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A contract between a local government and an engineering firm for the design of three bridges does not concern the application of any land use regulation, and, thus, is not a "land use decision," where the contract authorizes only design work and consulting services, where the contract does not authorize the use or development of land, and where the design and consulting services concern development actions that must be (and in fact were) authorized by other land use decisions. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 403 (2019).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. When a county code compliance officer determines there is not violation of the County Land Use and Development Ordinance (LUDO) under the holding in Thomas v. Wasco County, 284 Or App 17, 392 P3d 741 (2017), rev den, 362 Or 666 (2018), it is not a "land use decision" within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(a) because it does not constitute the "application" of the LUDO. Accordingly, LUBA lacks jurisdiction over the appeal. Thomas v. Wasco County, 78 Or LUBA 312 (2018).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where the county determined that petitioner had not established a right to construct a Measure 49 dwelling on the subject property, and the county did not apply any county siting standards, the county's decision is not a land use decision under ORS 195.318(1) and, thereby, is not subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Vannett Properties, LLC v. Lane County, 78 Or LUBA 345 (2018).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. LUBA's jurisdiction over Metro decisions is complicated, because Metro does not have a comprehensive plan, and its ordinances are not "land use regulation[s]." As a result, a Metro decision fits within the ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A) definition of a "land use decision" only if the decision (1) adopts or amends Metro's Regional Framework Plan; or (2) otherwise concerns the application of the statewide planning goals. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. To qualify as a "land use decision" as defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(i), a Metro Resolution must constitute a "final decision" that concerns the application of the statewide planning goals. However, finality for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(a) is not solely a matter of whether the decision constitutes a local government's last word on a land use issue. Other important considerations include whether the decision is an exercise of the local government's land use planning authority, and the extent to which the decision is binding on the local government and affected parties. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A decision by Metro acting as arbitrator does not constitute a "final decision," where Metro's role as arbitrator was not an exercise of its function as a local government at all, but rather where Metro acted as a chosen arbitrator, a function that could have been performed by a private entity or individual. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A Metro arbitration decision subject to an arbitration process devised by Metro that contemplates that the final decision the comprehensive plan designation of an area of land shared by two cities and a county will be determined in the post-acknowledgement plan amendments (PAPA) adopted by the cities and county is not itself a "final" "land use decision." Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A Metro arbitration decision issued pursuant to a Metro arbitration process to arrive at a solution for the comprehensive plan designation for a disputed area of land jointly owned by two cities and a county, and which contemplates that the final decision regarding the comprehensive plan designation of the area will occur during the post-acknowledgment plan amendments, is not a "zoning" decision for purposes of ORS 268.393(6), which is part of the statute implementing Ballot Measure 56. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where LUBA determines that a Metro resolution is not a "final" decision, the significant impact land use decision test does not apply. The jurisdictional requirement–that a land use decision must be "final"–applies to both the statutory as well as the significant impact test. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a city adopts an ordinance prohibiting marijuana businesses in the city pursuant to ORS 475B.968(1), the ordinance is not a de facto amendment of the city's land use code provisions governing "agriculture," and therefore is not a "land use" decision. Caudle v. City of Dunes City, 77 Or LUBA 230 (2018).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a city adopts an ordinance prohibiting marijuana businesses in the city pursuant to ORS 475B.968(1), the city is not required to apply its comprehensive plan provisions or adopt findings addressing those policies. ORS 475B.968 allows the city to enact a prohibition on marijuana businesses and refer that prohibition to the city's electors for approval, and nothing within that broad grant of authority suggests the legislature intended to subject that grant of authority to review for compliance with local governments' comprehensive plans. Caudle v. City of Dunes City, 77 Or LUBA 230 (2018).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A construction checklist that is signed by an official of the local fire district is not a land use decision where the checklist does not require application of any county land use regulations or comprehensive plan provisions. Seits v. Yamhill County, 77 Or LUBA 310 (2018).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where petitioner fails to identify any zoning or subdivision regulations that would govern the city's decision whether or not to remove 35 trees from a city park and does not contend the park or trees in the park are inventoried as significant Goal 5 resources or identify any Goal 5 program that would apply to protect the trees at issue, petitioner fails to carry her burden to demonstrate that the challenged decision is a "land use decision" subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Carlson v. City of Brookings, 77 Or LUBA 497 (2018).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Petitioner fails to meet her burden to demonstrate that LUBA has subject matter jurisdiction over a city council's decision to remove 35 trees from a city park, where petitioner argues the decision constitutes "logging" because it was motivated at least in part to generate revenue, and "logging" is not authorized under the Public Open Space zone that applies to the park. Simply because a city decides to offset the costs of removing hazardous trees to avoid the cost of treating and maintaining other compromised trees that are not yet hazardous does not convert the tree removal proposal into a logging operation, or otherwise make the decision a "land use decision." Carlson v. City of Brookings, 77 Or LUBA 497 (2018).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a building permit is issued without applying any land use regulations, and a prior design review decision either applied or should have applied all applicable land use standards, the building permit is not a land use decision that is appealable to LUBA. Glenwood 2006, LLC v. City of Beaverton, 76 Or LUBA 160 (2017).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A historic review board's final decision to suspend and terminate its review of an application for historic landmark designation that would otherwise result in a final decision by the city commission, based solely on an ORS 197.772(1) refusal to consent, is a land use decision that is reviewable by LUBA. McLoughlin Neighborhood Assoc. v. City of Oregon City, 76 Or LUBA 180 (2017).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A county resolution that was adopted to implement the statutory road vacation procedures in ORS 368.326 and that includes criteria for the county road official to assess "whether a vacation would be in the public interest" pursuant to ORS 368.326(1)(b), in preparing the report required under ORS 368.326(1), is not a "land use regulation" as defined in ORS 197.015(11) because it was not adopted to implement the county's comprehensive plan or development code. Neighbors for Smart Growth v. Washington County, 76 Or LUBA 492 (2017).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A county decision that determines that a proposed road vacation does not "create an access configuration which violates present development standards" requires the county to consider and apply "development standards" contained in the comprehensive plan or development code that govern access, and is therefore a "land use decision" as defined in ORS 197.015(10)(a). Neighbors for Smart Growth v. Washington County, 76 Or LUBA 492 (2017).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A determination in an intergovernmental agreement between a city and a county that the city has no land use process established for road improvement projects that are listed in the city's transportation system plan (TSP) or permitted with development requires the city and county to consider and apply the city's land use regulations and the city's TSP in order to reach that conclusion, and the intergovernmental agreement is therefore a "land use decision" within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(a). MGP X Properties, LLC, LLC v. Washington County, 74 Or LUBA 378 (2016).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A written decision that interprets various provisions of the local code is a "land use decision" as defined in ORS 197.015(10)(a), because the decision concerns the application of the local code procedures for seeking and obtaining an interpretation of the local code and the application of local code provisions that implement ORS 215.203 and ORS 215.283. Such decision is a "final" decision because no right of further local appeal exists. Gilmour v. Linn County, 73 Or LUBA 90 (2016).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A resolution adopted by the county board of commissioners that discontinues a planning area advisory committee and directs the county planning staff to amend the county's comprehensive plan and land use regulations to implement the discontinuance is a "land use decision" as described in ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A), because it concerns the application of comprehensive plan and land use regulation provisions that assign a review role to the planning advisory committee. Jensvold v. Clatsop County, 73 Or LUBA 417 (2016).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a planning director approves an extension of a site plan review approval by relying on a provision of the code that allows extension of a zoning permit, and another provision of the code that is specific to site plan review approvals does not mention or expressly authorize extensions, a decision to extend the site plan review approval necessarily requires interpretation and the exercise of legal judgment, and therefore does not fall within the exception to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A). Devin Oil Co., Inc. v. Morrow County, 72 Or LUBA 14 (2015).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. LUBA's scope of review under ORS 197.835(9) includes authority to determine whether the decision on review "[i]mproperly construed the applicable law[.]" Where LUBA has jurisdiction to review a land use decision, it also has jurisdiction to review challenges to that decision's construction of "applicable law," even if that "applicable law" is not a statewide planning goal, a comprehensive plan provision or a land use regulation. Carlsen v. City of Portland, 39 Or LUBA 93, 98-100, aff'd in part, remanded in part on other grounds, 169 Or App 1, 8 P3d 234 (2000). Bend/Sisters Garden RV Resort, LLC v. City of Sisters, 72 Or LUBA 200 (2015).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. While local laws that do not qualify as land use laws might be so unrelated to land use laws that LUBA's scope of review to consider violations of "applicable law" would not include such laws, a city's business licensing regulations qualify as "applicable law" under ORS 197.835(9)(a)(D), where those business licensing regulations are intertwined with the land use issues in a LUBA appeal. Bend/Sisters Garden RV Resort, LLC v. City of Sisters, 72 Or LUBA 200 (2015).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. The business licensing provisions of a city's municipal code that are not a part of the city's zoning code are not "Land use regulation[s]" as defined in ORS 197.015(11), and therefore a city ordinance that amends the business licensing code provisions is not a "land use decision" within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(a), because it is not a decision that "concerns the * * * amendment * * * of * * * a land use regulation[.]" Oregonians in Action v. City of Lincoln City, 71 Or LUBA 234 (2015).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A letter from the city announcing that mountain biking is no longer allowed in a natural area is not a land use decision, as defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a), where the letter does not concern the application or amendment of any statewide planning goal, comprehensive plan provision, or land use regulation. Northwest Trail Alliance v. City of Portland, 71 Or LUBA 339 (2015).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A letter from the county's counsel to the petitioner that merely confirms that the county has accepted, approved and recorded a final subdivision plat and that the board of commissioners cannot revoke the county's acceptance and recording of the final plat is not a land use decision where the county counsel was not required to and did not apply a comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation in the letter. Willamette Oaks LLC v. Lane County, 68 Or LUBA 84 (2013).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. LUBA will not resolve a record objection and require the local government to submit a supplemental record, where the local government has filed a dispositive motion to dismiss, and none of the documents at issue in the record objection have any bearing on the jurisdictional issue. Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 68 Or LUBA 162 (2013).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Because Metro does not have a comprehensive plan or land use regulations, a Metro decision is a statutory land use decision subject to LUBA's review only if the decision (1) adopts or amends the Metro Regional Framework Plan or one of its components, or (2) otherwise constitutes a Metro decision that concerns the application of the statewide planning goals. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Metro, 68 Or LUBA 302 (2013).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. The Metro Council's adoption by resolution of a master plan for a regional park does not constitute the adoption or amendment of a functional plan, where the master plan consists entirely of non-binding recommendations and guidelines to local governments, and nothing in Metro's legislation or elsewhere requires such a master plan to be adopted as a functional plan or amendment to a functional plan. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Metro, 68 Or LUBA 302 (2013).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A decision that qualifies as an "appropriate zoning classification decision" under ORS 227.160(2)(b) is subject to LUBA review "in the same manner as a limited land use decision." ORS 227.175(11)(b). Such decisions are subject to LUBA review without regard to whether they might qualify for the general exclusion from LUBA's jurisdiction provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for land use decisions that are "made under land use standards that do not require interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment." Mariposa Townhouses v. City of Medford, 68 Or LUBA 528 (2013).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A building permit decision that applies an ambiguous land use regulation may qualify as a land use decision and the ORS 197.015(10)(b) exclusions to the statutory definition of "land use decision" for certain ministerial decisions may not apply due to the land use regulation ambiguity. But that does not necessarily mean that the building permit also qualifies as a statutory "permit," as ORS 227.160(2) defines that term. Richmond Neighbors v. City of Portland, 67 Or LUBA 115 (2013).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A building permit decision that applies an ambiguous land use regulation may qualify as a land use decision and the ORS 197.015(10)(b) exclusions to the statutory definition of "land use decision" for certain ministerial decisions may not apply due to the land use regulation ambiguity. But that does not necessarily mean that the building permit also qualifies as a statutory "permit," as ORS 227.160(2) defines that term. Kerns Neighbors v. City of Portland, 67 Or LUBA 130 (2013).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. ORS 197.015(10)(a) broadly defines the term "land use decision." Subsections (b), (c) and (d) of the statute then set out a number of exceptions for decisions that would otherwise qualify or potentially qualify as land use decisions under subsection (a). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 67 Or LUBA 214 (2013).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. ORS 197.015(10)(d) sets out an exception to the statutory definition of "land use decision" for "outdoor mass gatherings," and certain other gatherings. But the ORS 197.015(10)(d) exception includes an internal exception for agri-tourism. The effect of the exception within an exception is to make decisions authorizing agri-tourism "land use decisions" that are reviewable by LUBA. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 67 Or LUBA 214 (2013).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. ORS 197.015(10)(d) creates an exception to the ORS 197.015(10)(a) definition of "land use decision" for "[g]athering[s] of fewer than 3,000 persons that [are] not anticipated to continue for more than 120 hours in any three-month period." Because a decision approving one outdoor music festival limited to fewer than 3,000 persons falls with the ORS 197.015(10)(d) exception, the decision is not a land use decision subject to review by LUBA. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 67 Or LUBA 214 (2013).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A county's unilateral termination of an intergovernmental agreement that never became effective might not qualify as a land use decision defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a). However, where the parties dispute and the record does not establish whether or not the agreement was effective, LUBA will not dismiss the appeal on that basis. City of Sandy v. Clackamas County, 67 Or LUBA 501 (2013).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Whether a contract was properly awarded under the Oregon Public Contracting Code has no bearing on the question of whether the authorization of an amendment to a construction contract is a "land use decision" as defined in ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A). Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 66 Or LUBA 101 (2012).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(i), adopted in 2010, "land use decision" does not include a local government decision that a proposed state agency action is compatible with the local government's comprehensive plan and land use regulations if (1) the local government has already made a land use decision authorizing a use that encompasses the state agency action, (2) the use is allowed without review, or (3) the use requires a future land use review. As ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(i) is worded, LUBA's jurisdiction over a local government compatibility determination turns on whether that determination is correct. McPhillips Farm Inc. v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 355 (2012).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. In order for one of the exclusions for compatibility determination at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H) to apply, the decision must purport to fall within the exclusion or on its face fall within the exclusion. Arguments that the local government should have made its compatibility determination in a manner that would bring it within a different exclusion, based on findings the local government did not make, are not a basis to apply the different exclusion and thereby conclude that LUBA lacks jurisdiction over the compatibility determination. McPhillips Farm Inc. v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 355 (2012).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A 1980 reasons exception and comprehensive plan and zoning amendment to allow for a waste disposal facility "authorizes" subsequent expansions of that landfill within the rezoned area for purposes of the exclusion to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(i), where the 1980 decision specifically contemplated that the facility would expand incrementally over time, with filled disposal cells capped and reclaimed, while the active landfill operation moves on to new disposal cells. McPhillips Farm Inc. v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 355 (2012).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A petitioner fails to demonstrate that a decision is a "land use decision" under ORS 197.015(10)(a) where the definition of "lot of record" set out in the city's zoning code includes five circumstances or categories under which a unit of land may be considered a "lot of record," determining whether a unit of land is a "lot of record" under most of the five categories does not appear to require the exercise of any discretion at all, and petitioner does not argue that the unit of land falls under the one category that might require the exercise of discretion. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 64 Or LUBA 164 (2011).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. LUBA lacks the equitable power of a court to apply the doctrine of laches to dismiss an appeal based on allegations that a petitioner knew from conversations with a neighbor about the challenged decision long before filing the LUBA appeal. The legislature has comprehensively prescribed in ORS 197.830(3) and other relevant statutes the deadlines to appeal land use decisions to LUBA, including what states of knowledge are relevant in applying those deadlines. Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where one petitioner was an adjoining property owner and entitled to written notice of a permit decision under ORS 215.416, but was not provided the required notice, the deadline for filing an appeal of a decision approving the permit is within 21 days of "actual notice" of the decision, pursuant to ORS 197.830(3)(a). For other petitioners who were not entitled to notice of the decision, the deadline for filing the appeal is within 21 days of the date the petitioners "knew or should have known" of the decision, pursuant to ORS 197.830(3)(b). Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A decision that amends a land use decision is itself a land use decision. Mingo v. Morrow County, 63 Or LUBA 357 (2011).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A zoning information sheet that is a printout of a computer screen and shows that information from an application has been entered into the county's automated permit application tracking system is neither a "decision" nor "final" where there is no indication that the county has taken any action on the application. LUBA lacks jurisdiction to review a zoning information sheet that is neither a decision nor final. Hardesty v. Jackson County, 63 Or LUBA 447 (2011).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A county decision that applies no land use laws and only authorizes construction of some walls for uses and a structure that were granted land use approval by prior land use decisions is not a land use decision. Hardesty v. Jackson County, 62 Or LUBA 228 (2010).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Planning department staff exercised considerable legal judgment in concluding that it could rely on a prior planning department decision, which authorized ministerial approval of certain uses, to approve a new industrial use, where that prior planning department decision was appealed and never became final. Because the planning department had to apply land use laws to approve the new industrial use and exercised considerable legal judgment in relying on its prior decision to grant that approval, the ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) exception to the statutory definition of "land use decision" for decisions that do not require the "exercise of * * * legal judgment" does not apply. Hardesty v. Jackson County, 62 Or LUBA 228 (2010).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Decisions that local governments do not believe to be land use decisions and do not process as land use decisions may in fact be land use decisions. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 62 Or LUBA 535 (2010).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Under ORS 92.100(7), a city decision that approves or withholds approval of a final subdivision plat is not a land use decision or limited land use decision and is not reviewable by LUBA. Calvary Construction v. City of Glendale, 61 Or LUBA 50 (2010).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. LUBA has jurisdiction over "land use decisions" as defined in ORS 197.015(10)(a). In reviewing land use decisions, LUBA's scope of review extends to issues regarding a decision's compliance with federal law. Foland v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 264 (2010).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a board of county commissioners' order directs the planning director to move forward with securing needed permits to remove a dam and to remove the dam, and the planning department issues a permit that is pending on appeal before the county hearings officer, the board of county commissioners' order is not the county's final statutory land use decision and petitioner's LUBA appeal seeking review of the board of county commissioners' order will be dismissed. Schock v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 403 (2010).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A staff report that explains that an application was withdrawn by the applicant after a tentative oral decision by a decision maker but before the decision was made final is not itself a land use decision, because it does not concern the goals, comprehensive plan, or any land use regulations. Larson v. City of Salem, 60 Or LUBA 411 (2010).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Under ORS 197.825(1), LUBA has exclusive jurisdiction to review "land use decisions," as that term is defined by ORS 197.015(10)(a), unless one of the exclusions set out at ORS 197.015(10)(b) applies. Dierks v. Jackson County, 60 Or LUBA 487 (2010).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. LUBA cannot exercise jurisdiction over a decision that is statutorily excluded from the definition of "land use decision" at ORS 197.015(10)(a), even if the decision would otherwise fall within the ambit of a "significant impact" land use decision as described in City of Pendleton v. Kerns, 294 Or 127, 653 P2d 992 (1982). 7th Street Station, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 58 Or LUBA 93 (2008).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. An electrical permit that simply recognizes that the electrical panel that is the subject of the permit will be used to power a refrigeration unit, but does not authorize the refrigeration unit or take any position regarding whether the refrigeration unit is authorized under the local government's land use regulations is not a statutory land use decision. Hardesty v. Jackson County, 58 Or LUBA 162 (2009).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. If an electrical permit is "for construction involving a new building, an addition or change in the use of a building," then under OAR 918-001-0045 verification may be required to establish that the "project" is permitted under the local government's land use regulations without "specific land use approval" or that "the project has final land use approval." If any such verifications are actually included as part of an electrical permit decision itself, that may be sufficient to make the electrical permit a land use decision, as ORS 197.015(10)(a) defines that term. Hardesty v. Jackson County, 58 Or LUBA 162 (2009).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where the decision on appeal to LUBA is a hearings officer's dismissal of a local appeal, not the building permit that was the subject of the local appeal, and the hearings officer clearly applied discretionary land use regulation standards to dismiss the local appeal, the hearings officer's decision falls within the ORS 197.015(10) definition of "land use decision," and LUBA has jurisdiction to review the hearings officer's decision. Kuhn v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 483 (2009).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss an appeal of a county decision to sell park land, where petitioners locally identified a comprehensive plan policy that could be interpreted to apply to a county decision to sell park land, and the county approves the sale of park land without responding to petitioner's argument that sale of the park land is inconsistent with the cited comprehensive plan policy. Kaye v. Marion County, 58 Or LUBA 680 (2009).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where subdivision covenants, conditions and restrictions require that the city approve any changes to the covenants, conditions and restrictions and the city approves changes without applying any land use regulations, the city's decision is not a land use decision. Rasmussen v. City of Lake Oswego, 56 Or LUBA 628 (2008).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A local government decision that purports to be a final decision with regard to one aspect of a land use permit application while at the same time remanding the permit application for additional decision making with regard to other aspects of the permit application is not a "final decision," within the meaning of ORS 197.015(11)(a) and therefore is not appealable to LUBA. Siporen v. City of Medford, 55 Or LUBA 29 (2007).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. DLCD v. City of McMinnville, 40 Or LUBA 591 (2001), recognizes that some complex planning projects such as urban growth boundary amendments may result in adoption of more than one separately appealable land use decision. Siporen v. City of Medford, 55 Or LUBA 29 (2007).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. If two resolutions are properly viewed as separate and independent decisions, a petitioner's failure to appeal one of those resolutions would generally be fatal to any challenges to determinations made in the unappealed resolution. However, where the two resolutions are adopted contemporaneously to approve a permit application, the two resolutions purport to resolve different legal issues but only have only minor wording differences and both resolutions are supported by the same findings document, an appeal of either resolution is sufficient to allow petitioners to challenge legal determinations in both resolutions. Siporen v. City of Medford, 55 Or LUBA 29 (2007).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Petitioners' failure to include an adequate jurisdictional statement in their petition for review is not a basis for dismissing their appeal, where their dispute about whether the challenged decision is a land use decision is the central dispute and petitioners' first assignment of error alleges that the appealed decision is a land use decision that is subject to LUBA review. Zirker v. City of Bend, 55 Or LUBA 188 (2007).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A resolution that adopts a revised franchise agreement between the county and a landfill operator does not constitute a de facto nonconforming use determination subject to LUBA's jurisdiction, where the resolution makes no determination whatsoever about the lawfulness or status of the landfill. Kamp v. Washington County, 54 Or LUBA 717 (2007).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A statement in a letter from county counsel to petitioner that purports to be a final and binding county interpretation of a local code provision by a person who has apparent authority to make such a statement is a land use decision under ORS 197.015(11). Love v. Klamath County, 54 Or LUBA 747 (2007).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a permit decision is not appealed before the local deadline for filing a local appeal expires, and a local governing body decision not to exercise its authority under ORS 227.180(1)(a) to review the permit decisions "on its own motion" is not governed by any statutory or local standards, the governing body's decision is not a land use decision. Such a governing body decision is not a land use decision, notwithstanding that the local governing body considers the merits of the permit decisions before exercising its discretion not to review the permit decisions on its own motion under ORS 227.180(1)(a). Beilke v. City of Tigard, 53 Or LUBA 133 (2006).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A county's certification in a state agency land use compatibility statement that the activities proposed in the related state agency permit application are consistent with all local land use requirements is necessarily a land use decision, as defined in ORS 197.015(11)(a), if it is a final decision and not subject to any of the exceptions set out at ORS 197.015(11)(b). Wolfgram v. Douglas County, 52 Or LUBA 536 (2006).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A determination that no local right of appeal exists for a land use compatibility statement concerns at least the application of the local government's local appeal regulations, and thus is a land use decision under ORS 197.015(11). Hoschek v. Tillamook County, 52 Or LUBA 793 (2006).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A determination that no local right of appeal exists because the appealed decision did not require discretion and is not a "land use decision" requires interpretation and exercise of legal judgment, and thus does not fall within the ministerial exception to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(11)(b)(B). Hoschek v. Tillamook County, 52 Or LUBA 793 (2006).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A planning commission decision that purports to "correct" a "clerical error" in an earlier subdivision approval by changing the 12 month expiration deadline to a 24 month deadline does not fall within the ministerial exception to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(11)(b)(B), where the planning commission exercised discretion and legal judgment in implicitly determining that it had the authority to "correct" the deadline after its expiration. Hoschek v. Tillamook County, 52 Or LUBA 793 (2006).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a Metro Committee would be required to apply land use standards to approve a city annexation ordinance on appeal, its decision to deny the annexation ordinance is a land use decision subject to review to LUBA, notwithstanding that the denial was based on non-land use standards. City of Damascus v. Metro, 51 Or LUBA 210 (2006).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. When a local government enforces its own land use regulations through its own procedures, those actions may result in land use decisions that can be appealed to LUBA, and ORS 197.825(3)(a) does not divest LUBA of jurisdiction. When a local government decides to pursue enforcement of its local land use regulations in circuit court pursuant to ORS 197.825(3)(a), however, jurisdiction properly lies with the circuit court, and the determination to pursue enforcement in circuit court is not a land use decision. Johnston v. Marion County, 51 Or LUBA 250 (2006).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. When a local government makes a decision to enforce its regulations or not to enforce its regulations in circuit court, that decision of where to contest (or not contest) the land use issues is not a land use decision as defined by ORS 197.015(10). Conversely, when a local government makes a decision to enforce its regulations (or that no violation exists) at the local level, that decision may be a land use decision subject to our review, provided it meets the statutory definition of a land use decision. Johnston v. Marion County, 51 Or LUBA 250 (2006).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A local government's rejection of a local appeal may be a land use decision even if the underlying decision sought to be appealed would not itself be a land use decision. Wells v. Yamhill County, 51 Or LUBA 659 (2006).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. When a decision is reduced to writing and prepared for the decision maker's signature, the decision is "signed" with a signature stamp rather than an actual signature, and the local government does not contend that someone else issued the decision in the decision maker's name, LUBA will treat the signature stamp as the equivalent of the decision maker's signature. Wells v. Yamhill County, 51 Or LUBA 659 (2006).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a local government has adopted a generally applicable procedure under which it corrects violations of a variety of local laws by filing actions in circuit court, a local government decision that an existing use of property does not constitute a violation of its zoning ordinance that would justify filing a circuit court action under that procedure is not a land use decision. Wells v. Yamhill County, 51 Or LUBA 659 (2006).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where the zoning of property is discussed by a local appellate body during proceedings to revoke and reinstate a building permit, but the revocation and reinstatement decisions are not governed by the zoning ordinance or other land use regulations, the mere reference to the zoning ordinance does not mean the decision "concern[ed] the * * * application of [a] land use regulation," within the meaning of ORS 197.015(11)(a). Barnas v. City of Portland, 51 Or LUBA 750 (2006).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a city decision to reinstate a building permit does not apply any of the land use standards identified at ORS 197.015(11)(a)(A), and the petitioner does not argue that the city should have applied any such land use standards in addition to the Uniform Building Code provisions that the city applied to reinstate the building permit, petitioner fails to establish that the reinstatement decision is a land use decision subject to LUBA review. Barnas v. City of Portland, 51 Or LUBA 750 (2006).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. ORS 223.314 provides a statutory exclusion from the statutory definition of land use decision. But that exclusion only applies to the extent "a plan * * * adopted pursuant to ORS 223.309" is adopted for the limited purpose of supplying the public facility list that is required by ORS 223.309 as a precondition of adopting a systems development charge methodology. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Springfield, 50 Or LUBA 109 (2005).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. So long as sewerage facilities recommended in a regional sewerage plan cannot be built until the applicable comprehensive plan is amended to recommend those facilities, the regional sewerage plan may be adopted before the comprehensive plan is amended and the decision to adopt that regional sewerage plan to comply with state and federal environmental regulations and the requirements of ORS 223.309 for adoption of a systems development charge methodology is not a land use decision that is reviewable by LUBA. The reviewable land use decision will be adopted when the corresponding comprehensive plan amendments are adopted. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Springfield, 50 Or LUBA 109 (2005).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Under 2003 statutes, LCDC and LUBA both have jurisdiction to review land use decisions that are adopted in whole or in part to comply with periodic review. LCDC reviews such decisions to ensure, among other things, that the local government's plans and land use regulations are "achieving the statewide planning goals." ORS 197.628(3)(d); OAR 660-025-0070(4). Century Properties, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 50 Or LUBA 691 (2005).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. LUBA's scope of review over periodic review land use decisions extends to all legal issues that are properly within LUBA's statutory scope of review, but it does not include review for compliance with statewide planning goals or other questions that are within LCDC's scope of review in periodic review. Century Properties, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 50 Or LUBA 691 (2005).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where prior appeals to LUBA and the Court of Appeals concerning a property near the ocean have established that a particular comprehensive plan goal regarding environmentally hazardous areas applies at the time a building permit is issued, a subsequent city decision to issue a building permit for the property is a land use decision. Jebousek v. City of Newport, 50 Or LUBA 724 (2005).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A local government ordinance that defines "driveways" in terms of "travel distance" is ambiguous and subject to different interpretations where the endpoint for measuring that travel distance is unclear. Therefore the local government exercises policy or legal judgment in making its interpretation, and a decision that interprets the ambiguous ordinance is not a ministerial decision. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 49 Or LUBA 719 (2005).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Because OAR 734-051-0155(4)(d) requires that access management plans shall be consistent with a city's transportation system plan and because OAR 734-051-0155(4)(k) requires that the access management plan be "adopted into" the city's transportation system plan, the city's adoption of the access management plan "concerns the adoption, amendment or application of * * * [a] comprehensive plan provision" within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(a) and, for that reason, is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Rhodes v. City of Talent, 47 Or LUBA 574 (2004).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Under OAR 660-012-0040(4), LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review "timing and financing provisions" in a transportation financing program. However, LUBA does have jurisdiction to review a city decision that determines that a particular facility alternative is consistent with its transportation system plan, notwithstanding that such a decision may be driven in part by timing or financing considerations. Ramsey v. City of Philomath, 46 Or LUBA 241 (2004).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A local government decision "concerns" the application of a comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation if (1) the decision maker was required by law to apply its plan or land use regulations as approval standards, but did not, or (2) the decision maker in fact applied plan provisions or land use regulations. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 566 (2004).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Whether a decision that changes the fee to file local appeals of land use decisions is codified in the zoning ordinance is not dispositive as to LUBA's jurisdiction under either the statutory definition or the fiscal decision exception. The essential questions are whether the challenged appeal fees (1) "concern" the application of a land use regulation and (2) are an integral part of the zoning code provisions governing the processing and review of land use applications. Friends of Linn County, 45 Or LUBA 408 (2003).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a local government has failed to amend its land use regulations to implement a land use statute, such as ORS 215.263 that governs partitions in EFU zones, a county decision that directly applies such statutes pursuant to ORS 197.646(3) is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction, notwithstanding that the county does not apply a statewide planning goal, comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation. Perkins v. Umatilla County, 45 Or LUBA 445 (2003).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A decision that initiates condemnation of property but does not approve development of the property is not a land use decision subject to LUBA review. Decker v. City of Cornelius, 45 Or LUBA 539 (2003).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A resolution that initiates condemnation of property is not a statutory land use decision, where petitioner identifies no statewide planning goal, comprehensive plan or land use regulation provision that must be applied in adopting such a resolution. Decker v. City of Cornelius, 45 Or LUBA 539 (2003).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. It is not clear whether the ORS 197.015(10)(d) exemption of decisions authorizing certain small, infrequent gatherings from the statutory definition of "land use decision" precludes local governments from applying their land use regulations to decisions concerning such gatherings. Landsem Farms v. Marion County, 44 Or LUBA 611 (2003).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Assuming that ORS 197.015(10)(d) prohibits local governments from applying its land use regulations to "gatherings of fewer than 3,000 persons that [are] not anticipated to continue for more than 120 hours in any three-month period," the "in any three month period" language limits the statutory prohibition to properties where such gatherings occur no more frequently than once every three months. Landsem Farms v. Marion County, 44 Or LUBA 611 (2003).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Local government decisions authorizing outdoor mass gatherings as defined at ORS 433.735(1) that will last fewer than 120 hours are not subject to local land use regulations and are not land use decisions subject to LUBA review. Landsem Farms v. Marion County, 44 Or LUBA 611 (2003).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Local government decisions authorizing the large outdoor gatherings defined at ORS 433.763(1) that will last more than 120 hours are subject to local land use regulations and are land use decisions subject to LUBA review. Landsem Farms v. Marion County, 44 Or LUBA 611 (2003).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A business that schedules up to 15 social gatherings at an airport is not exempt from county land use regulations under ORS 197.015(10)(d) because even if ORS 197.015(10)(d) prohibits regulation of the small gatherings described in the statute, the prohibition only applies if there is no more than one gathering every three months. Landsem Farms v. Marion County, 44 Or LUBA 611 (2003).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Even if ORS 197.015(10)(d) does prohibit county regulation of gatherings of fewer than 3,000 persons on a site, it would only do so if those gatherings occurred no more frequently than once every three months on the site. Cookman v. Marion County, 44 Or LUBA 630 (2003).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A decision that changes the appeal fee charged to file a local appeal under a county zoning ordinance "concerns the application of" the zoning ordinance and, for that reason, qualifies as a land use decision under ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(iii). Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 43 Or LUBA 270 (2002).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. The combined effect of ORS 197.175(1) and OAR 660-001-0300 and 660-001-0310 is to make all city annexation decisions land use decisions. Either (1) the city's comprehensive plan or land use regulations have criteria that govern the annexation, in which case the annexation decision is a land use decision under ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(ii) or (iii), or (2) the comprehensive plan and land use regulations do not have criteria that govern annexation decisions, in which case under ORS 197.175(1) and OAR 660-001-0310 the statewide planning goals continue to apply directly and make the annexation decision a land use decision under ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(i). Cape v. City of Beaverton, 43 Or LUBA 301 (2002).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A city's approval of a reimbursement district is a "fiscal ordinance" and therefore not subject to LUBA's jurisdiction, regardless of whether the city applied or should have applied its land use regulations in rendering the decision. Jesinghaus v. City of Grants Pass, 42 Or LUBA 477 (2002).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. The fact that a city's approval of a reimbursement district is related to a condition of approval imposed in a previous land use decision does not make the approval of the reimbursement district itself a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction, absent a showing that the city applied or interpreted the goals, a plan provision or a land use regulation in approving the reimbursement district. Jesinghaus v. City of Grants Pass, 42 Or LUBA 477 (2002).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A city decision establishing a local improvement district to fund street improvements that does not involve the application of comprehensive plan policies or land use regulations or result in a "significant impact" on land use is not a land use decision. Hazelnut A Partners v. City of Woodburn, 42 Or LUBA 474 (2002).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Two letters from county counsel explaining the county's position that a code deadline to commence subdivision construction applies to a subdivision approval with litigation pending, and stating that the applicants may file an application for extension of the subdivision approval under a particular code provision, do not constitute land use decisions. Bartell v. Washington County, 42 Or LUBA 464 (2002).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where applicants unsuccessfully seek a writ of mandamus to compel a county to grant their request for a county extension of time to commence construction of a subdivision, or a county ruling that the deadline was tolled while litigation concerning the subdivision was pending, and the county never responds to the applicants' request in writing, LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review the county's decision until it renders a written decision in response to the applicants' request. Bartell v. Washington County, 42 Or LUBA 464 (2002).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A decision that interprets and applies zoning ordinance provisions regarding uses that are listed as conditional uses in an exclusive farm use zone and includes determinations regarding allowed uses on a property does not fall into the exception to the definition of "land use decision" found in ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B), and is a land use decision reviewable by LUBA. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 41 Or LUBA 316 (2002).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a city has not responded to petitioner's concerns that a property owner lost his right to continue a nonconforming residential use, petitioner may be able to seek a remedy in circuit court under ORS 197.825(3)(a). However, unless and until the city addresses those concerns in a land use decision, LUBA has no jurisdiction to consider those concerns. Robson v. City of La Grande, 40 Or LUBA 250 (2001).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. The failure of a petition for review to include the jurisdictional statement required by OAR 661-010-0030(4)(c) provides no basis for dismissal where it is clear that the challenged decision is a land use decision, as defined by ORS 197.015(10), because the decision concerns the adoption of comprehensive plan map and zoning map amendments and applies discretionary comprehensive plan amendment criteria and at least one statewide planning goal. Cape v. City of Beaverton, 40 Or LUBA 78 (2001).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. LUBA may consider evidence outside of the local record for the limited purpose of determining whether it has jurisdiction without the necessity of granting motions to take evidence outside of the record. Neighbors for Sensible Dev. v. City of Sweet Home, 39 Or LUBA 766 (2001).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where petitioner does not establish that the city either applied or was required to apply land use standards when it made a final decision to condemn petitioner's EFU-zoned property for a utility facility, in advance of seeking county land use approval for that facility, the challenged decision is not a land use decision over which LUBA has jurisdiction. E & R Farm Partnership v. City of Gervais, 39 Or LUBA 251 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A city has authority under ORS 92.040 and 92.180 to review and approve subdivision plats. Where a city requires an application for a subdivision replat to show revised easements and applies its land use regulations to approve the replat, the city's decision is a land use decision or limited land use decision subject to LUBA's review. Haber v. City of Gates, 39 Or LUBA 137 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. In reviewing land use decisions, LUBA's scope of review is not limited to arguments regarding the local government's application of land use regulations or other land use standards; LUBA may also consider arguments that the decision violates applicable non-land use standards. Carlsen v. City of Portland, 39 Or LUBA 93 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A letter from a city parks commissioner stating that the city planning department had concluded a conditional use permit is not required for a proposed soccer practice field is not a "land use decision" pursuant to ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A) because it does not purport to apply a land use regulation. However, the letter from the planning department concluding that the proposed use does not require a permit is a final "land use decision" because it does apply a land use regulation and no further local appeal process was available. Kent v. City of Portland, 38 Or LUBA 942 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A county's decision finding that a letter from another local government constitutes a memorandum of understanding required under the county's comprehensive plan applies a comprehensive plan provision and is thus a land use decision. Cedar Mill Creek Corr. Comm. v. Washington County, 38 Or LUBA 333 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a county's decision regarding compliance with a comprehensive plan provision is made in conjunction with a determination that a condition of approval of a previously granted permit is satisfied, the ancillary decision regarding the condition of approval is subject to LUBA review. Cedar Mill Creek Corr. Comm. v. Washington County, 38 Or LUBA 333 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A decision that, by itself, is not a land use decision may nevertheless be reviewable when presented to LUBA as part of a decision that applies comprehensive plan policies or land use regulations. Cedar Mill Creek Corr. Comm. v. Washington County, 38 Or LUBA 333 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a petitioner fails to respond to an apparently meritorious motion to dismiss, petitioner fails to carry his burden to demonstrate that the challenged decision is a land use decision subject to review by LUBA. Rohrer v. Crook County, 38 Or LUBA 8 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a county enforcement decision does not apply or interpret any land use regulations in deciding that a mobile home set-up permit is the equivalent of a building permit for the purpose of determining whether a permit deadline has been met, the county's decision is not a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Balk v. Multnomah County, 38 Or LUBA 1 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. An otherwise clear and objective building permit, as that concept is used in ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B), remains clear and objective even if, as applied in a particular circumstance, it undermines the purpose or policy that it implements. Tirumali v. City of Portland, 37 Or LUBA 859 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A calculation mistake made during the course of applying a clear and objective building permit standard does not render a decision applying that standard a land use decision. Tirumali v. City of Portland, 37 Or LUBA 859 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A planning director's letter to a third party explaining the basis for approving a building permit is not a land use decision, where the standards used in approving the building permit are clear and objective. Tirumali v. City of Portland, 37 Or LUBA 859 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A condition of approval included in a temporary surfacing permit requiring information and reports about trees proposed for removal under city code sections regulating tree removal does not make the temporary surfacing permit a land use decision, even if the cited code sections are land use regulations, where the condition makes it clear that the temporary surfacing permit does not authorize removal of trees. Lindsey v. City of Eugene, 37 Or LUBA 695 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Petitioners have the burden to establish LUBA jurisdiction and, where petitioners do not argue that the challenged decision applied or should have applied any land use standards, LUBA will dismiss the appeal. Lindsey v. City of Eugene, 37 Or LUBA 695 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Under ORS 197.825(3)(a), a local government may elect to enforce its land use regulations, and if such an enforcement action is filed in circuit court, the court has jurisdiction to consider any land use issues that might arise. Yost v. Deschutes County, 37 Or LUBA 653 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A local government decision not to institute action in circuit court to enforce its land use regulations is not itself a land use decision, provided the local government's decision is not rendered pursuant to a local procedure that necessarily leads to a land use decision, as defined by ORS 197.015(10)(a). Yost v. Deschutes County, 37 Or LUBA 653 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a local government's land use regulations make it clear that staff determinations describing the uses to which property may be put are informal decisions rather than final county decisions, and those decisions are rendered outside formal local government land use procedures for decision making and declaratory rulings, such decisions do not constitute land use decisions that may be appealed to LUBA. Yost v. Deschutes County, 37 Or LUBA 653 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A city's ordinance that adopts a process to establish revenue reimbursement districts and a resolution that then applies that process to a particular area are not "land use decisions" as defined in ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A). Baker v. City of Woodburn, 37 Or LUBA 563 (2000).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A resolution of nonbinding support for the siting of a tribal casino within city limits is not a statutory land use decision because it does not apply comprehensive plan or land use regulations. Kelley v. City of Cascade Locks, 37 Or LUBA 80 (1999).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Under LUBA's rules a land use decision must be a written decision. Friends of Clean Living v. Polk County, 36 Or LUBA 544 (1999).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A city's concurrence in a county's vacation of a right-of-way within city limits pursuant to ORS 368.361(3) is not a final, appealable land use decision. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lincoln County, 36 Or LUBA 288 (1999).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A decision approving a subdivision pursuant to county comprehensive plan and land use regulations is a land use decision under ORS 197.015(10)(a). That a subdivision approval decision is conditioned on construction of road access for the subdivision does not convert that decision or any part of the decision into the type of transportation facility decision that is excluded from the statutory definition of "land use decision" by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D). Warrick v. Josephine County, 36 Or LUBA 81 (1999).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where the relationship between two decisions is not clear from the parties' memoranda, LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss and defer a ruling on jurisdiction until after the parties' briefs are filed and an opportunity for oral argument is provided. Columbia Hills Development Co. v. Columbia County, 35 Or LUBA 737 (1998).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A city decision that a use must comply with applicable building code requirements even if it is properly viewed as a home occupation under the city's land use regulations is not a statutory land use decision subject to LUBA review, because it does not apply a comprehensive plan or land use regulation provision. Brodka v. City of Eugene, 35 Or LUBA 695 (1999).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a local government is required to apply required land use provisions but fails to do so, that failure does not exclude the decision from the definition of "land use decision" under ORS 197.015(10)(a). Murphy Citizens Advisory Committee v. Josephine County, 33 Or LUBA 882 (1997).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. When a local governing body determines that a condition imposed in connection with an earlier land use decision either has or has not been complied with, but does not base its determination on the interpretation and application of land use regulations, the determination is not a land use decision over which LUBA has jurisdiction. Mar-Dene Corp. v. City of Woodburn, 33 Or LUBA 245 (1997).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A school district's decision to adjust attendance area boundaries is not a statutory land use decision. Butts v. Hillsboro School District, 33 Or LUBA 211 (1997).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where the city explains in its decision to grant a development permit that a conditional use review is not required, a letter from the city planning director written five months later stating that the review is not required is not itself an appealable land use decision, and an appeal five months from the initial decision is not timely. Northwest Environmental Adv. v. City of Portland, 33 Or LUBA 45.

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A letter from county counsel refusing to revoke a previously granted building permit is not an appealable land use decision. Ceniga v. Clackamas County, 32 Or LUBA 273 (1997).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. The issuance or denial of a building permit can be a land use decision if it involves the application of the Statewide Planning Goals, a comprehensive plan, a zoning ordinance or other ordinance implementing a comprehensive plan. Friends of Eugene v. City of Eugene, 32 Or LUBA 161 (1996).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. When a county has made detailed findings explaining why a challenged decision is not a land use decision under its local regulations or, alternatively, why the decision is exempt from review under those regulations, and those findings are not clearly wrong, LUBA will defer to the county's interpretation of its own regulations. Leathers v. Washington County, 31 Or LUBA 43 (1996).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A local government's reiteration of a previous land use decision in a notice letter does not create a new appealable decision, and the inclusion of a statement of appeal rights in the notice letter does not convert that notice into a separate land use decision. Lloyd Dist. Community Assoc. v. City of Portland, 30 Or LUBA 390 (1996).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Even if a local decision maker had no authority to make a land use decision, LUBA has jurisdiction over an appeal of that decision if it falls within the class of decisions over which LUBA has review authority. Caraher v. City of Klamath Falls, 30 Or LUBA 204 (1995).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. In modifying a condition to the earlier approval of a conditional use permit, a county planning director exercised policy judgment in the application of land use regulations, thereby making a statutory land use decision. Franklin v. Deschutes County, 30 Or LUBA 33 (1995).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where an improvement agreement signed by a county is limited to implementing a conditional use permit previously approved by the county, and does not modify that conditional use permit, the improvement agreement does not require application of land use standards and does not constitute a "land use decision," as that term is defined by ORS 197.015(10). Franklin v. Deschutes County, 29 Or LUBA 79 (1995).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a decision to eliminate conditions of approval requires local review under code zone change standards, the decision is a land use decision, and not a limited land use decision. Lamm v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 468 (1995).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. In the absence of an interpretation of the applicability of zone code regulations to the challenged decision, LUBA cannot determine whether a city council decision approving a road improvement is a statutory land use decision. Carlson v. City of Dines City, 28 Or LUBA 411 (1994).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A local government order that simply corrects clerical mistakes in an earlier local government order making a land use decision is not itself an appealable land use decision. Kalmiopsis Audubon Society v. Curry County, 27 Or LUBA 640 (1994).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. The limited land use decisions described by ORS 197.015(12)(b) fall somewhere between (1) outright permitted uses for which approval involves no discretionary review; and (2) uses allowed subject to application of discretionary approval standards that may require denial of the use altogether (as opposed to discretionary approval standards that only regulate the use's physical characteristics). Fechtig v. City of Albany, 27 Or LUBA 480 (1994).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Allegations in a notice of intent to appeal that the challenged decision is a land use decision do not constitute a judicial admission that the challenged decision is a land use decision. Salem-Keizer School Dist. 24-J v. City of Salem, 27 Or LUBA 351 (1994).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where no land use standards govern a local government decision to allow the applicant to abandon a permit application that led to a permit decision remanded by LUBA and instead to submit a new application governed by amended approval standards, the decision does not, by itself, constitute a land use decision or limited land use decision. Fechtig v. City of Albany, 27 Or LUBA 666 (1994).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. A planning department letter stating the local government considers itself bound by a stipulation entered in a prior circuit court proceeding is not a land use decision, separate and apart from the prior stipulation. DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where a local government refers to its land use regulations, finds facts and makes a decision that its land use regulations do not apply, its decision is a land use decision. The nature of the legal theory supporting its conclusion that its land use regulations do not apply does not affect whether the decision is properly viewed as a land use decision. DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Under the statutory definition of "land use decision," circuit courts do not make land use decisions; local governments, special districts and state agencies do. DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. That a stipulation concerning the applicability of a local government's land use regulations to certain property is entered into by the local government and a property owner outside the confines of a land use proceeding and without following the procedures required for land use decision making does not make the decision any less a land use decision. DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where the challenged decision simply applies the city's fire code, and petitioner does not argue that the fire code is (1) a land use regulation, (2) a comprehensive plan provision, or (3) a goal provision, the challenged decision is not a statutory land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Curtis Serve N Save v. City of Eugene, 24 Or LUBA 341 (1992).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Where the challenged decision is a governing body's directive to the county counsel to file a complaint in circuit court to enforce zoning regulations pursuant to ORS 197.825(3)(a), the challenged decision is not one over which LUBA has review authority. Wygant v. Curry County, 22 Or LUBA 110 (1991).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Findings addressing land use standards may or may not be required to support a legislative land use decision. However, the absence of such findings has no bearing on whether a decision actually is a land use decision. Jentzsch v. City of Sherwood, 20 Or LUBA 575 (1991).

26.2.1 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Generally. Final decisions which apply the local government's land use regulations are land use decisions subject to review by LUBA unless one or more of the limitations provided in ORS 197.015(10)(b) and 197.825(2) and (3) apply. Putnam v. Klamath County, 19 Or LUBA 616 (1990).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A letter from the director of the Oregon Department of Aviation to petitioners' counsel, stating that, "[o]n October 27, 2011, the [Oregon Aviation Board] approved the [Aurora Airport] Master Plan for submittal to the Federal Aviation Administration" is not a "final decision or determination of a state agency" or a decision "with respect to which the agency [was] required to apply the goals" for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(a)(B) where, regardless of whether the letter itself is incorrect in stating, as a fact, that the Board adopted the Master Plan in 2011, the letter merely conveys facts about events that have already occurred. Friends of French Prairie v. ODA, 80 Or LUBA 524 (2019).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. When a county code compliance officer determines there is not violation of the County Land Use and Development Ordinance (LUDO) under the holding in Thomas v. Wasco County, 284 Or App 17, 392 P3d 741 (2017), rev den, 362 Or 666 (2018), it is not a "land use decision" within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(a) because it does not constitute the "application" of the LUDO. Accordingly, LUBA lacks jurisdiction over the appeal. Thomas v. Wasco County, 78 Or LUBA 312 (2018).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. LUBA's jurisdiction over Metro decisions is complicated, because Metro does not have a comprehensive plan, and its ordinances are not "land use regulation[s]." As a result, a Metro decision fits within the ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A) definition of a "land use decision" only if the decision (1) adopts or amends Metro's Regional Framework Plan; or (2) otherwise concerns the application of the statewide planning goals. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. To qualify as a "land use decision" as defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(i), a Metro Resolution must constitute a "final decision" that concerns the application of the statewide planning goals. However, finality for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(a) is not solely a matter of whether the decision constitutes a local government's last word on a land use issue. Other important considerations include whether the decision is an exercise of the local government's land use planning authority, and the extent to which the decision is binding on the local government and affected parties. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A decision by Metro acting as arbitrator does not constitute a "final decision," where Metro's role as arbitrator was not an exercise of its function as a local government at all, but rather where Metro acted as a chosen arbitrator, a function that could have been performed by a private entity or individual. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A Metro arbitration decision subject to an arbitration process devised by Metro that contemplates that the final decision the comprehensive plan designation of an area of land shared by two cities and a county will be determined in the post-acknowledgement plan amendments (PAPA) adopted by the cities and county is not itself a "final" "land use decision." Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A Metro arbitration decision issued pursuant to a Metro arbitration process to arrive at a solution for the comprehensive plan designation for a disputed area of land jointly owned by two cities and a county, and which contemplates that the final decision regarding the comprehensive plan designation of the area will occur during the post-acknowledgment plan amendments, is not a "zoning" decision for purposes of ORS 268.393(6), which is part of the statute implementing Ballot Measure 56. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where LUBA determines that a Metro resolution is not a "final" decision, the significant impact land use decision test does not apply. The jurisdictional requirement—that a land use decision must be "final"—applies to both the statutory as well as the significant impact test. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where the last paragraph of a legal lot verification decision states that it is a "preliminary" decision and that the "decision" on whether the property is a legal lot will be made when a development permit is approved, the legal lot verification decision is not a final, binding decision that determines that the property is a lawfully created lot. Wolcott v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 165 (2018).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. ORS 197.830(6) is a statute of ultimate repose, providing that appeal periods to LUBA may not exceed either a three-year or 10-year period, depending on whether notice of the final decision is required but not provided. However, ORS 197.830(6) cannot be applied to require a county in 2016 to recognize property as a lawfully created parcel pursuant to a 2003 legal lot verification decision, on the theory that the 2003 decision was a "final," unappealed, and now unappealable decision under ORS 197.830(6), where the 2003 decision itself states that it was only a "preliminary" decision. Because only final decisions can be appealed to LUBA, the statute of ultimate repose is inapplicable. Wolcott v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 165 (2018).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A construction checklist that is signed by an official of the local fire district with the word "temp[orary]" is not a final decision within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A), and is therefore not a "land use decision." Seits v. Yamhill County, 77 Or LUBA 310 (2018).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. The minutes of a historic review board's meeting at which it suspended action on an application for historic landmark designation, or a letter by a planner describing the historic review board's decision to suspend action, can be sufficient to constitute a writing, to the extent a writing is a jurisdictional requirement for a final land use decision. McLoughlin Neighborhood Assoc. v. City of Oregon City, 76 Or LUBA 180 (2017).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a county's code enforcement procedure requires a code enforcement officer to make a preliminary decision regarding whether there is probable cause to believe there is an ordinance violation, that decision is not a final decision that may be appealed to LUBA. Under the county's code enforcement procedure, if the code enforcement officer finds there is probable cause, the first step is to seek voluntary compliance and the next step would be for the county to seek declaratory or injunctive relief in circuit court, where the code enforcement officer would have the burden of proof regarding the ordinance violation. If the code enforcement officer finds there is no probable cause, that is not a final decision either, as a petitioner may continue to request that the county take enforcement action, or petitioner may seek declaratory or injunctive relief in circuit court under ORS 197.825(3), where petitioner would have the burden of proof regarding the ordinance violation. Robson v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 343 (2017).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A county board of commissioners' order authorizing the planning director to enter into a stipulation with a land use applicant is an initiatory or interlocutory step toward a final decision, the stipulation, not a final decision in itself. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 74 Or LUBA 38 (2016).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. LUBA will dismiss an appeal of a hearings officer's decision approving a post-acknowledgment plan amendment (PAPA) because the decision is not a final decision, notwithstanding that the county code states that the hearings officer's decision on a PAPA is the county's final decision, and the county board of commissioners merely ratifies the hearings officer's decision, where it is reasonably clear that the county commissioners' ratification decision is the county's final decision on the application for purposes of appeal to LUBA. Setniker v. Polk County, 74 Or LUBA 134 (2016).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. An intergovernmental agreement (IGA) between a city and a county that establishes a county process and review procedure for a road improvement project located within the city on a county-owned road is a "final" decision, because the IGA may be the city's only decision to rely on the county to process and review the proposed road improvement project, notwithstanding that pursuant to the IGA the county will proceed to adopt subsequent land use decisions. MGP X Properties, LLC, LLC v. Washington County 74 Or LUBA 378 (2016).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A comment letter that a city planner provides to a county hearings officer on a land use application before the county, regarding whether a proposed county road project is consistent with city legislation, is not a "final" decision regarding the application of city legislation, and therefore not a land use decision as defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a), even if the intergovernmental agreement that assigns the county land use approval authority over the project is on appeal to the Court of Appeals and potentially could become invalid. MGP X Properties, LLC v. City of Sherwood, 74 Or LUBA 476 (2016).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A comment letter from one jurisdiction to a second jurisdiction that has land use approval authority over a pending application is at best an interlocutory decision by the commenting jurisdiction regarding consistency with the commenting jurisdiction's legislation, not a final decision subject to appeal to LUBA, or a final decision subject to transfer to circuit court. MGP X Properties, LLC v. City of Sherwood, 74 Or LUBA 476 (2016).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. If opponents of land use approval fail to comply with one or more mandatory requirements for perfecting a local appeal, but the county governing body nevertheless accepts the local appeal and renders a decision on the merits affirming the land use approval, opponents' failure to comply with those mandatory requirements may provide a basis for reversing the governing body's decision, but such failures do not mean opponents' LUBA appeal must be dismissed for failure to exhaust administrative remedies. Kaplowitz v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 601 (2016).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A written decision that interprets various provisions of the local code is a "land use decision" as defined in ORS 197.015(10)(a), because the decision concerns the application of the local code procedures for seeking and obtaining an interpretation of the local code and the application of local code provisions that implement ORS 215.203 and ORS 215.283. Such decision is a "final" decision because no right of further local appeal exists. Gilmour v. Linn County, 73 Or LUBA 90 (2016).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where two county commissioners are disqualified from participating in a decision on a local appeal of a permit approval decision, the final written decision reflecting that action would look somewhat different from a decision on the merits of the local appeal. But the requirement in OAR 661-010-0010(3) that a decision must be reduced to writing before it can become final does not depend on the nature of the decision. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 73 Or LUBA 98 (2016).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a petitioner's notice of intent to appeal a decision was filed at LUBA after the board of county commissioners was unable to take action on a local appeal of a planning director's decision that approved a permit application, but before the board of county commissioners reduced its decision to writing, the notice of intent to appeal was filed prematurely. Where the permit applicant files a petition for writ of mandamus more than 14 days after the board of commissioners' hearing at which they failed to take action, and before the board of commissioners approved the minutes of that hearing, the circuit court has exclusive jurisdiction regarding the permit application, and LUBA does not have jurisdiction over the appeal. ORS 215.429(2) and (4). Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 73 Or LUBA 98 (2016).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. LUBA will tentatively deny a motion to dismiss based on the exclusion at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(iii) for land use compatibility statements (LUCS) that identify local land use reviews, where (1) based on the record and pleadings LUBA cannot tell if the exclusion applies and (2) the appeal of the LUCS decision is consolidated with an appeal of a related land use decision regarding the availability of local appeal of the LUCS decision. Until it is determined whether a local appeal of the LUCS decision was available, and hence whether the LUCS decision was a final decision capable of review by either LUBA or the circuit court, it is premature to resolve the jurisdictional question. Todd v. Clackamas County, 73 Or LUBA 369 (2016).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A resolution adopted by the county board of commissioners that discontinues a planning area advisory committee and directs the county planning staff to amend the county's comprehensive plan and land use regulations to implement the discontinuance is a "final" decision within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A). Jensvold v. Clatsop County, 73 Or LUBA 417 (2016).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A letter from the city announcing that mountain biking is no longer allowed in a city-owned natural area is a final decision, absent an indication that the issue of whether mountain biking is allowed in the natural area remains an issue that is under consideration in a pending city management plan process or other land use plan process. Northwest Trail Alliance v. City of Portland, 71 Or LUBA 339 (2015).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a city's code does not expressly provide that the city's decisions are "final" for purposes of appeal to LUBA on the date notice is mailed to the parties, but a city code provision directs the planning director to include a statement in the notice of decision that the decision is final and may be appealed to LUBA within 21 days of the date of mailing, LUBA will interpret the code provision as intended to make the city's decisions final on the date of mailing for purposes of OAR 661-010-0010(3), which authorizes local governments to determine the date of finality by local rule or ordinance. Stevens v. City of Island City, 71 Or LUBA 373 (2015).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. The Metro Council's adoption by resolution of a master plan for a regional park is not a "final" decision for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(a), where the master plan consists entirely of non-binding recommendations and guidelines to local governments, and the final, appealable decisions will be subsequent city or county plan and land use regulation amendments, if any, that may be adopted to give effect to the master plan's recommendations or guidelines. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Metro, 68 Or LUBA 302 (2013).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. To constitute a "final" decision for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(a), the decision must actually decide something. Where an adopted master plan is entirely precatory, without any possible land use effects unless and until its recommendations are embodied in other appealable decisions, LUBA's review of that master plan would be entirely advisory. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Metro, 68 Or LUBA 302 (2013).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Generally, a decision that merely initiates a legislative proceeding leading to future amendments to a local government's comprehensive plan or land use regulations is not a "final" decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Washington County, 68 Or LUBA 515 (2013).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A county resolution that merely "acknowledges" a Metro master plan, and contemplates that the county will implement the Metro master plan by adopting future comprehensive plan amendments is not a "final" decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Washington County, 68 Or LUBA 515 (2013).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A city resolution that "approves" a Metro master plan, and directs staff to implement the master plan by proposing legislative comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendments, is not a "final" decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Washington County, 68 Or LUBA 515 (2013).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A city resolution that acknowledges a Metro trail master plan as a "reference document for decision-making purposes," and directs staff to use the master plan as a "guide" for developing the trail proposed in the master plan and already planned and funded by the city, appears to be the city's final decision implementing the master plan, and is therefore a final decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Washington County, 68 Or LUBA 515 (2013).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A significant impact land use decision must be a "final" decision to be subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Washington County, 68 Or LUBA 515 (2013).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A letter from a city planner that takes the position that a previously approved master plan has expired is not a "final" decision within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(a), where no application that seeks approval of a development proposal under the master plan has been submitted and the letter was sent as part of an informal, non-binding, advisory pre-application process. Kaiser Permanente v. City of Portland, 67 Or LUBA 111 (2013).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a city consolidates three related applications pursuant to ORS 227.175(2), but suspends processing of two applications and proceeds to issue a decision approving the third application, absent language that defers its finality the decision on the third application is a final decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Consolidation of applications under ORS 227.175(2) is at the request of the applicant, and nothing in the statute prevents a city, with the applicant's consent, making a final decision on one application while separately processing other applications, or renders an otherwise final decision non-final until the city completes separate processing of the other applications. Save Downtown Canby v. City of Canby, 67 Or LUBA 385 (2013).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A city resolution that generally contains (1) a description of a surface water supply system from its early days to the present, (2) a chronology of various proposals to improve the surface water supply system, and (3) an expression of the city's commitment to maintain and improve the surface water supply facility is not a "final decision" to proceed with the water supply system improvement project, where somewhat contemporaneously with its adoption of the resolution the city adopted a water public facilities plan that includes the surface water improvement project. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 66 Or LUBA 101 (2012).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. An unsigned printout of a local government computer database entry for an encroachment permit is not the permit itself, and does not represent a final decision of any kind. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 66 Or LUBA 369 (2012).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. An ordinance that deletes text from a county zoning ordinance is a final decision, notwithstanding that the county also adopted a resolution initiating proceedings before the planning commission to recommend future land use regulation amendments to replace the text deleted from the zoning ordinance. Hatley v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 427 (2012).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A zoning information sheet that is a printout of a computer screen and shows that information from an application has been entered into the county's automated permit application tracking system is neither a "decision" nor "final" where there is no indication that the county has taken any action on the application. LUBA lacks jurisdiction to review a zoning information sheet that is neither a decision nor final. Hardesty v. Jackson County, 63 Or LUBA 447 (2011).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. LUBA will not grant the local government's motion to dismiss an appeal based on its argument that the challenged decision is not "final" within the meaning of OAR 661-010-0015(1)(a), where the challenged decision appears to be the local government's final determination that the proposed use is a permitted use under its land use regulations. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 62 Or LUBA 535 (2010).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where LUBA concludes that the decision on appeal is not a land use decision or limited land use decision , because it is a fiscal decision, and transfers the decision to circuit court, LUBA need not also consider whether the appealed decision fails to qualify as a land use or limited land use decision for the additional reason that it is not a "final" decision. Montgomery v. City of Dunes City, 61 Or LUBA 123 (2010).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a board of county commissioners' order directs the planning director to move forward with securing needed permits to remove a dam and to remove the dam, and the planning department issues a permit that is pending on appeal before the county hearings officer, the board of county commissioners' order is not the county's final statutory land use decision and petitioner's LUBA appeal seeking review of the board of county commissioners' order will be dismissed. Schock v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 403 (2010).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A local ordinance that provides that a decision becomes effective 14 days after mailing notice of the decision means that the decision is effective at that date. The ordinance does not delay the date the decision becomes final for purposes of appeal to LUBA under OAR 661-010-0010(3). VK Northwest, Inc. v. City of West Linn, 60 Or LUBA 39 (2009).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Even though the language of a final decision is somewhat misleading in stating that it becomes final at a later date, a misstatement of fact and law in the decision does not excuse a petitioner from filing a timely notice of intent to appeal. VK Northwest, Inc. v. City of West Linn, 60 Or LUBA 39 (2009).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a city building official denies a building permit application based on an interpretation set forth by the city planning director in a previous letter to the applicant, an appeal of the building official's denial is not a collateral attack of the planning director's previous letter or require dismissal under the reasoning in Lloyd Dist. Community Assoc. v. City of Portland, 30 Or LUBA 290 (1996), where the building official's decision is the city's final decision on the applicant's building permit applications, the decision is subject to criteria the planning director did not consider in the previous letter, and the building official applies the planning director's interpretation to a specific set of facts that the planning director did not consider. Noble Built Homes, LLC v. City of Silverton, 60 Or LUBA 460 (2010).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A governing body's decision to adopt a resolution initiating a legislative comprehensive plan amendment process is the first step in a multi-step proceeding that will likely culminate in a final decision, but that resolution is not itself a final decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Any alleged procedural errors in adopting the resolution may be challenged in an appeal of the local government's final decision, if not rendered harmless or cured by later proceedings. Setniker v. Polk County, 58 Or LUBA 87 (2008).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. An erroneous statement in the notice of decision that the decision can be appealed to LUBA does not affect whether the decision is a land use decision or otherwise affect LUBA's jurisdiction. Setniker v. Polk County, 58 Or LUBA 87 (2008).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Local laws that only delay the date an ordinance takes effect do not also delay the date an ordinance becomes final for purposes of appeal to LUBA. Reeves v. City of Wilsonville, 58 Or LUBA 545 (2009).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A local government decision that purports to be a final decision with regard to one aspect of a land use permit application while at the same time remanding the permit application for additional decision making with regard to other aspects of the permit application is not a "final decision," within the meaning of ORS 197.015(11)(a) and therefore is not appealable to LUBA. Siporen v. City of Medford, 55 Or LUBA 29 (2007).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. It does not follow that any decision that is reduced to writing and signed by the necessary decision makers is necessarily a "final decision," within the meaning of ORS 197.015(11)(a). Siporen v. City of Medford, 55 Or LUBA 29 (2007).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a planning commission decision is appealed to the board of county commissioners, the planning commission's decision is not final. Dunn v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 206 (2007).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A local government may not break up a single decision into "final" and "non-final" components so that the decision is appealable in part to LUBA and in part locally; a decision that attempts to do so is not a final decision as to any part and is therefore not a land use decision within the meaning of ORS 197.015(11). Yun v. City of Portland, 54 Or LUBA 155 (2007).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A city decision to defer making a decision about whether a recently enacted statute operates retroactively to invalidate an annexation ordinance while the property owner's appeal of that annexation ordinance is pending before the Court of Appeals is not a final decision, and, because it is not a final decision, it is not a land use decision subject to review by LUBA. Leupold & Stevens, Inc. v. City of Beaverton, 53 Or LUBA 203 (2007).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A property owner's request that a city apply a statute to invalidate a previously enacted annexation ordinance is not an application for a boundary change, which would require that the city adopt a land use decision. Leupold & Stevens, Inc. v. City of Beaverton, 53 Or LUBA 203 (2007).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A "land use decision," as that term is defined in ORS 197.015(11)(a)(A), must be a final decision. A county's denial of an applicant's motion to dismiss a local appeal of an administrative approval is an interlocutory decision, not a final decision, and therefore is not an appealable land use decision. Ratzlaff v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 480 (2007).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Based on dicta in Kalmiopsis Audubon Society v. Curry County, 131 Or App 308, 884 P2d 894 (1994), it is theoretically possible to appeal a decision that purports to correct a "clerical error" in a final, unappealed decision, as long as the petitioner demonstrates that the correction qualifies as a land use decision and the appeal is narrowly focused on the correction itself, rather than the unappealed decision. Hoschek v. Tillamook County, 52 Or LUBA 793 (2006).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where the Metro Code provides that when a necessary party appeals a city boundary change decision to Metro the city boundary change decision is not final until the appeal is resolved, LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review that city boundary change decision while the Metro appeal is pending, because LUBA's review jurisdiction is limited to "final" decisions. City of Happy Valley v. City of Damascus, 51 Or LUBA 141 (2006).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A letter from county counsel explaining that previously issued building permits were properly issued and will not be revoked merely repeats a previously issued decision and is not a final land use decision that may be appealed to LUBA. Johnston v. Marion County, 51 Or LUBA 250 (2006).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A board of county commissioners order that calls up a hearings officer's decision denying a conditional use permit application for a de novo hearing is an interlocutory order and not a final decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Gould v. Deschutes County, 51 Or LUBA 493 (2006).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A board of county commissioners order declining discretionary review of a hearings officer's decision would usually have the effect of making the hearings officer's decision the county's final decision appealable to LUBA. However, where the commissioners decline review because the commissioners have called up the hearings officer's decision for review at a de novo hearing at which the petitioner may appear and raise any issues, the order does not have the effect of making the hearings officer's decision the county's final decision, and the order declining petitioner's local appeal is not itself a final decision appealable to LUBA. Gould v. Deschutes County, 51 Or LUBA 493 (2006).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a county governing body affirms a planning commission decision denying a building permit to expand an existing noncoforming use but remands to the planning commission for a determination of the type of review required with regard to the nonconforming use, the governing body's decision is not a "final" decision, and LUBA lacks jurisdiction to review it, notwithstanding petitioner's allegation that the governing body's remand was ultra vires. Vanspeybroeck v. Tillamook County, 51 Or LUBA 546 (2006).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. When a decision is reduced to writing and prepared for the decision maker's signature, the decision is "signed" with a signature stamp rather than an actual signature, and the local government does not contend that someone else issued the decision in the decision maker's name, LUBA will treat the signature stamp as the equivalent of the decision maker's signature. Wells v. Yamhill County, 51 Or LUBA 659 (2006).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a city council exercises its authority to review a decision of a hearings officer granting approval of site development review, sensitive lands review and adjustments for a proposed development and, in substance, affirms the hearings officer's decision, its action is a final land use decision and is subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Beilke v. City of Tigard, 51 Or LUBA 837 (2006).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A condition of site plan approval that calls for mediation to develop possible mitigation measures for an asphalt recycling plant does not delay the effective date of the decision where there is no language in the condition that suggests that was the local governments intent and the notice of the decision states that the decision can be appealed to LUBA. Clearwaters v. Josephine County, 50 Or LUBA 600 (2005).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Ordinances that adopt comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendments are final decisions that are appealable to LUBA, notwithstanding language in those ordinances that delays their effective date until the Department of Land Conservation and Development completes periodic review and requires the city to adopt a subsequent ordinance, where those ordinances all provide notice that the decision is appealable to LUBA. Century Properties, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 50 Or LUBA 691 (2005).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A resolution adopted pursuant to ORS 222.111(2) to initiate annexation proceedings that sets a date for an election in the area to be annexed, but dispenses with a separate vote within the city to approve the annexation, is not the city's "final" decision regarding the annexation, and for that reason such a resolution is not a land use decision. Following adoption of such a resolution, ORS 222.120(4) requires that the city provide a public hearing and thereafter the city must adopt an ordinance to declare that the territory is annexed provided a majority of voters in the territory to be annexed approve. City of Happy Valley v. City of Damascus, 49 Or LUBA 553 (2005).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Whether a local government decision is a "final" decision is primarily governed by the form of the decision and whether all local appeals have been exhausted. That an otherwise final temporary decision may ultimately expire or be replaced by another decision does not mean that the temporary decision is not a final decision subject to appeal to LUBA. Curl v. City of Bend, 48 Or LUBA 530 (2005).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Contrary to Thede v. Polk County, 1 Or LUBA 339 (1980), irregularities in signing and approving a final city decision does not mean that the challenged decision is not a "final decision" subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Knutson Family LLC v. City of Eugene, 48 Or LUBA 618 (2004).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. In construing an initiative, a court attempts to discern the intent of the voters, based foremost on text and context of the initiative itself. While the chief petitioners may have intended that an initiative that preserves the city waterfront for a public park function as a mere straw poll on the future of the waterfront, the text and context of the initiative indicate that the voters intended to establish a binding policy effectively rezoning the city waterfront as a public park. The initiative is therefore a final, non-advisory decision for purposes of LUBA's jurisdiction. Port of Hood River v. City of Hood River, 47 Or LUBA 62 (2004).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A county counsel stipulation in a mandamus proceeding that purports to determine the zoning of property is in essence a declaratory ruling interpreting an ambiguous ordinance concerning the zoning of property and is a final determination subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Flying J, Inc. v. Marion County, 47 Or LUBA 637 (2004).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A decision that (1) announces that the local government has reconsidered what is otherwise a final appealable decision, and (2) identifies a future decision on reconsideration as the final appealable decision effectively renders the original decision a tentative, non-final decision that is not within LUBA's jurisdiction. Grabhorn v. Washington County, 46 Or LUBA 672 (2004).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A decision to reconsider an earlier decision and reserve final judgment on the merits of that earlier decision is not itself a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction, where the decision to reconsider does not concern the application of any comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation, and the decision to reconsider is accurately characterized as an interlocutory decision and not a final decision of any kind. Grabhorn v. Washington County, 46 Or LUBA 672 (2004).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A resolution that authorizes a city to acquire property is a "final" decision, where the only remaining act that would be required to transfer title to the property is a deed or a circuit court judgment pursuant to ORS 35.325 following an exercise of eminent domain by the city, because such a deed or circuit court judgment would not be land use decisions subject to LUBA review. Willamette Oaks, LLC v. City of Eugene, 46 Or LUBA 813 (2004).

26. 2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. To the extent a surveyor's signature on a final partition plat denotes a decision concluding that the partition conforms with applicable land use regulations, for the purposes of an appeal to LUBA, that decision is final when the surveyor signs the final partition plat. Hammer v. Clackamas County, 45 Or LUBA 32 (2003).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. If a county governing body errs in rejecting an attempted local appeal of a planning commission decision, LUBA will remand the county governing body's decision so that the county may provide the required local appeal, but LUBA will dismiss an attempted direct appeal of the planning commission decision because the county governing body's decision on remand will be the county final decision that is subject to LUBA review. Burke v. Crook County, 45 Or LUBA 516 (2003).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a county governing body determines that it has conflicts that prevent it from considering a local appeal of a planning commission decision, and rejects the appeal without identifying any appealable error on the local appellant's part: (1) the local appellant is not obligated to seek LUBA review of the county governing body's decision; (2) the local appellant has satisfied the statutory requirement that he exhaust local remedies before appealing to LUBA; and (3) the planning commission decision becomes the county's final decision and subject to appeal to LUBA. Burke v. Crook County, 45 Or LUBA 516 (2003).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where the respondent argues that its decision is merely a recommendation to another governing body, and thus not a final decision, and the petitioner fails to respond to that argument, the petitioner has not met his burden of establishing the Board's jurisdiction, and the appeal will be dismissed. Ziemer v. City of Florence, 43 OR LUBA 1 (2002).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a timely request is filed to locally appeal a decision made without a hearing under ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10), the local government must conduct a de novo hearing and render a final decision approving or denying the permit application. Where the local government conducts a de novo hearing and renders a final decision, the decision made without a hearing is not and cannot become a final decision, and cannot be appealed to LUBA under ORS 197.830(4) or any other provision of law. Dead Indian Memorial Rd. Neigh. v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 597 (2002).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a timely request is filed to locally appeal a decision made without a hearing under ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10) and a de novo hearing is held, but the request is withdrawn and the local appeal dismissed prior to reaching a final decision on the local appeal, the underlying decision made without a hearing becomes the county's final land use decision on the permit application. Dead Indian Memorial Rd. Neigh. v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 597 (2002).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where the de novo hearing provided under ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10) is dismissed without reaching a decision on the permit application, the underlying decision made without a hearing becomes the final land use decision on the permit application, as of the date of the order dismissing the local appeal. The underlying decision does not become final retroactively back to the date the local appeal period expired. Dead Indian Memorial Rd. Neigh. v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 597 (2002).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Two letters from county counsel explaining the county's position that a code deadline to commence subdivision construction applies to a subdivision approval with litigation pending, and stating that the applicants may file an application for extension of the subdivision approval under a particular code provision, do not constitute land use decisions. Bartell v. Washington County, 42 Or LUBA 464 (2002).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where applicants unsuccessfully seek a writ of mandamus to compel a county to grant their request for a county extension of time to commence construction of a subdivision, or a county ruling that the deadline was tolled while litigation concerning the subdivision was pending, and the county never responds to the applicants' request in writing, LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review the county's decision until it renders a written decision in response to the applicants' request. Bartell v. Washington County, 42 Or LUBA 464 (2002).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A local decision to deny a motion to dismiss filed during a local land use appeal is not a separate final land use decision subject to an appeal to LUBA. Riddell Farms, Inc. v. Polk County, 41 Or LUBA 47 (2001).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a board of commissioners declares that it is biased, recuses itself from an appeal of a hearings officer's land use decision, and designates a hearings officer's decision as the county's final decision, the hearings officer's decision may be appealed to LUBA, notwithstanding local code provisions that grant a party a right to a local appeal before the board of commissioners. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 41 Or LUBA 316 (2002).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. The right to an impartial tribunal will supersede petitioners' right to a local appeal, where denying the local appeal will not deprive petitioners of an opportunity to have a local decision reviewed on the merits. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 41 Or LUBA 316 (2002).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a planning director's decision to revoke a previously approved appeal fee waiver and reject petitioner's local appeal was final when rendered, and petitioner did not file a timely appeal with LUBA to challenge that decision, petitioner may not challenge the fee waiver revocation and denial of the local appeal in an appeal of a subsequent planning director letter that merely reiterates the earlier decision. Babbitt v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 151 (2001).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A decision amending a city's comprehensive plan housing needs inventory and analysis pursuant to ORS 197.296(3) is a final decision and therefore a "land use decision" as defined by ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A), notwithstanding that the amended inventory and analysis may require the city to adopt further land use decisions to comply with ORS 197.296(4) and (5). DLCD v. City of McMinnville, 40 Or LUBA 591 (2001).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A resolution that directs planning staff to continue a legislative process to develop a plan governing future expansion of the state medical university is not a final decision and for that reason is not a land use decision under either the statutory test at ORS 197.015(10) or the significant impact test. No Tram to OHSU v. City of Portland, 40 Or LUBA 411 (2001).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A staff letter acknowledging that a hydrogeologic report satisfies the code requirements for a pre-application evidentiary submission, but that does not purport to determine that the evidence is or will be sufficient to show compliance with approval criteria once the application is filed, is not a final land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Harcourt v. Marion County, 40 Or LUBA 393 (2001).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a local ordinance limits appeals of local land use decisions to "land use decisions" as that term is defined in the local ordinance, a petitioner is not entitled to a local appeal where petitioner fails to demonstrate that the decision he wishes to appeal is a "land use decision" within the city's definition of the term. Robinson v. City of Silverton, 40 Or LUBA 159 (2001).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where the first and second steps of a four-step PUD approval process each yield decisions that are not final or binding in any respect, neither the local government's decision granting first-step approval nor its decision granting second-step approval is a final land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Neighbors for Sensible Dev. v. City of Sweet Home, 40 Or LUBA 21 (2001).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where the first step of a three-step planned unit development (PUD) approval process yields a decision that is final and binding in certain respects, the local government's decision granting such approval is a final land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Neighbors for Sensible Dev. v. City of Sweet Home, 39 Or LUBA 766 (2001).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A local government may not separate an otherwise unitary land use decision into separate components, remand some components for further local proceedings and designate some components as immediately appealable to LUBA. Besseling v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 177 (2000).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. LUBA will dismiss an appeal of a component of a local decision for lack of finality where it is clear that the local government has separated an otherwise unitary land use decision into separate components, and remanded some of those components for further local proceedings. Besseling v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 177 (2000).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A letter from a city parks commissioner stating that the city planning department had concluded a conditional use permit is not required for a proposed soccer practice field is not a "land use decision" pursuant to ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A) because it does not purport to apply a land use regulation. However, the letter from the planning department concluding that the proposed use does not require a permit is a final "land use decision" because it does apply a land use regulation and no further local appeal process was available. Kent v. City of Portland, 38 Or LUBA 942 (2000).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. When a party receives notice of a land use decision by means of a follow-up clarification letter, an appeal of that clarification letter is sufficient to appeal the earlier land use decision, as long as the appeal is filed within the period in which the party could have timely appealed the land use decision. Kent v. City of Portland, 38 Or LUBA 942 (2000).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A city council decision to hire an appraiser and begin the process of condemning property for waste disposal purposes does not constitute a land use decision because it is not a "final" decision, where it is clear that the decision is neither a final decision to purchase property nor a final decision concerning whether the property may be used for waste disposal under applicable land use standards. E & R Farm Partnership v. City of Gervais, 37 Or LUBA 702 (2000).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Objection to LUBA's jurisdiction may be raised at any time and the filing of the record in an appeal does not and could not have the legal effect of establishing that LUBA has jurisdiction. E & R Farm Partnership v. City of Gervais, 37 Or LUBA 702 (2000).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A notice of intent to appeal is timely filed where the county code specifies that land use decisions become final when mailed to the parties entitled to notice, and petitioner filed the notice of intent to appeal within 21 days of the date the county mailed the decision. Warrick v. Josephine County, 36 Or LUBA 796 (1999).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A local code provision that delays the "effective date" of a decision does not delay the date the local decision becomes "final" for purposes of appeal to LUBA. Friends of Clean Living v. Polk County, 36 Or LUBA 544 (1999).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Under LUBA's rules a land use decision must be a written decision. Friends of Clean Living v. Polk County, 36 Or LUBA 544 (1999).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Although deficiencies in a hearings officer's notice of hearing may provide a basis for direct appeal of the hearings officer's decision to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3), where a local appeal is filed and the city council makes a decision in the appeal, the hearings officer's decision is not the city's final decision and is not subject to appeal to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3). Bigley v. City of Portland, 36 Or LUBA 517 (1999).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. An argument that a party failed to file a timely appeal of a local planning department's decision may, if correct, provide a basis for reversing the land use decision that ultimately resulted from the local appeal; but it would not provide a basis for dismissing the LUBA appeal. Wood v. Crook County, 36 Or LUBA 143 (1999).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a regional government endorses expansion of the UGB as the initial step in a three-step process requiring subsequent county approval and consideration under the statewide planning goals followed by final action by the regional government, the regional government's initial endorsement is not a final land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 720 (1999).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A city decision requesting that Metro initiate proceedings to amend the urban growth boundary and designated urban reserves is not a "final" decision subject to LUBA review. Dickert v. City of Wilsonville, 35 Or LUBA 52 (1998).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A decision is not final until it is reduced to writing and signed by the authorized decision maker. An applicant may withdraw the application prior to the time the decision becomes final, even if an oral decision has already been made. Witzel v. Harney County, 34 Or LUBA 433 (1998).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a local appeal of a property line adjustment decision is rejected on the basis that no local appeal is available and petitioner appeals both the property line adjustment decision and the denial of the local appeal but only assigns error to the property line adjustment decision, the property line adjustment decision will be considered the "final" local decision and is subject to review at LUBA. Goddard v. Jackson County, 34 Or LUBA 402 (1998).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a local code does not specify a date upon which a decision becomes final, OAR 661-10-010(3) specifies that the decision becomes final on the date it is reduced to writing and signed by the decision maker. Adams v. City of Ashland, 33 Or LUBA 552 (1997).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Generally, where a local government approves a street improvement project, and in a later decision awards a contract to build the improvement, the reviewable decision is the initial decision to approve the project. Knapp v. City of Jacksonville, 33 Or LUBA 457 (1997).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A decision to proceed with an environmental assessment pursuant to the National Environmental Policy Act as part of a feasibility determination is not a final decision over which LUBA has jurisdiction, because it does not actually approve or deny a land use. Cole v. Lane Transit District, 33 Or LUBA 201 (1997).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A "legal lot verification" service provided by the county results in a preliminary, advisory opinion as to whether a lot was legally created. The service does not create a binding final land use decision over which LUBA has jurisdiction. Davis v. Lane County, 32 Or LUBA 267 (1997).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. If a DSL finding of compatibility is not based on a final land use decision made by the city, LUBA lacks jurisdiction over the appeal from the finding of compatibility. Citizens for Pub. Accountability v. City of Eugene, 31 Or LUBA 395 (1996).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A DSL finding of compatibility that relies on the separate opinions of two city planners and the city attorney is not based on a final land use decision made by the city. Citizens for Pub. Accountability v. City of Eugene, 31 Or LUBA 395 (1996).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Although OAR 660-31-035(1), which governs Class A permits, does not require that an affected local government's compatibility determination either be in writing or be supported by written findings in order to be relied upon by a state agency issuing a permit, the absence of a writing raises the question of whether there actually is a local government determination. Citizens for Pub. Accountability v. City of Eugene, 31 Or LUBA 395 (1996).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Two factors govern whether a local government's determination of compatibility with its acknowledged plan and regulations, made as part of a state agency approval process, is a "final" decision applying the local government's plan and regulations: (1) the state agency must be required by statute, rule or other authority, to assure that the proposal is compatible with the local government plan and regulations; and (2) the state agency must be authorized by statute, rule or other legal authority to rely on the local government's determination. Citizens for Pub. Accountability v. City of Eugene, 31 Or LUBA 395 (1996).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a petitioner challenges a county's authority to process an application for a lot line adjustment on the basis that there has never been a legal determination that the property consists of more than one parcel, such a challenge is an impermissible collateral attack on an earlier determination, if such a determination has been made. However, where the record does not reflect that any legal determination has been made, petitioner may challenge the county's authority to proceed with a lot line adjustment on the premise that the property consists of two parcels. Higgins v. Marion County, 30 Or LUBA 426 (1996).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. While a local government can make a de facto land use decision without satisfying procedural or substantive requirements for a land use decision, a county does not make a de facto land use decision by merely acquiescing to a property owner's desired characterization of his property. Higgins v. Marion County, 30 Or LUBA 426 (1996).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A county minute order that accepts a staff report, but makes no decision to initiate action to consider modification of a condition to an existing permit, is not itself a final decision appealable to LUBA. Anderson v. Washington County, 30 Or LUBA 240 (1995).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A notice of intent to appeal to LUBA that designates a corrected decision is timely if filed within the period allowed for appeals of the original (final) decision. Caraher v. City of Klamath Falls, 30 Or LUBA 204 (1995).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Notwithstanding the standards in OAR 661-10-010(3) addressing when a decision becomes final, the physical form of the decision is less important than the finality accorded it by the city's codes and procedures and by subsequent actions relying upon it. No Casino Association v. Lincoln City, 30 Or LUBA 79 (1995).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. The pursuit of a nonexistent local right of appeal does not suspend the date a land use decision becomes final for purposes of appeal to LUBA. No Casino Association v. Lincoln City, 30 Or LUBA 79 (1995).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Under OAR 661-10-010(3), a document containing findings of fact and conclusions of law that is signed by the mayor and attested by the city recorder is a final decision, but if the city has no authority to take the action reflected in the decision, the final decision is not a land use decision. Subsequent adoption with authority is a land use decision appealable to LUBA. DLCD v. City of St. Helens, 29 Or LUBA 485 (1995).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a local government decision to classify petitioner's proposed comprehensive plan amendment as "major" is final, and denies petitioner a right he would otherwise have under the local code to have his proposed amendment reviewed on its merits, the local government's decision is a land use decision as defined in ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(iii) and is subject to review by LUBA. Cone v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 133 (1995).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A local government resolution requesting ODOT not to build a particular freeway ramp is a final, reviewable land use decision if (1) the local government's comprehensive plan includes any provision the substance of which applies to such a recommendation, and (2) ODOT may choose to abandon the disputed ramp project without taking any action that requires the local government to amend its plan or demonstrate compliance with it. Central Eastside Industrial Council v. Portland, 29 Or LUBA 541 (1995).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A LUBA appeal must be initiated within 21 days after a local governing body adopts its written order, unless petitioners establish that (1) the local government plan or code grants a right to seek rehearing or reconsideration of the governing body's order; (2) petitioners sought such rehearing or reconsideration; and (3) under local legislation, such a request for rehearing or reconsideration has the effect of preventing the governing body's order from becoming a final decision. Bowen v. City of Dunes City, 28 Or LUBA 324 (1994).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Under either the statutory test or the significant impact test, a "land use decision" must be a final decision. Knee Deep Cattle Company v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 288 (1994).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A planning director letter stating certain uses are permitted outright under the local code is not a "final" decision, where that letter is either superseded or qualified by a subsequent planning director letter stating a final determination on whether such uses are permitted outright on the subject property will be made in the building permit process. Knee Deep Cattle Company v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 288 (1994).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A local government's determination of compatibility with its acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations, made as part of a state agency permit approval process, is a "final" decision applying the local plan and regulations if (1) the state agency is required, by statute, rule or other legal authority, to assure the permit is compatible with the local plan and regulations; and (2) the state agency is authorized to rely on the local government's determination of compatibility. Knee Deep Cattle Company v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 288 (1994).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a local government's statements on a state agency permit land use compatibility form identify the code provisions relied on by the local government and explain the basis for the local government's determination that the subject facility is an outright permitted use, the statements constitute written findings which, under OAR 661-31-035(2), entitle a state agency to rely on the local government's compatibility determination. Knee Deep Cattle Company v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 288 (1994).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A city's approval of a motion to extend a city street is the city's final decision to pave the street, not the city's subsequent decision to award the contract to pave the street. Carlson v. City of Dunes City, 28 Or LUBA 770 (1994).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where petitioners presented a discrete land use question concerning the use of certain property for film-making purposes to the board of commissioners at its meeting, but statements made by commission members indicate the commission explicitly did not answer the land use question petitioners presented, no land use decision was made. Bach v. Deschutes County, 28 Or LUBA 58 (1994).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a notice of intent to appeal states the challenged decision is a planning commission recommendation to the governing body, the local government moves to dismiss the appeal on the ground the challenged decision is not final, and petitioner fails to respond to the motion to dismiss, the appeal will be dismissed. Braun v. City of La Grande, 27 Or LUBA 581 (1994).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A city council decision to receive a staff report as information only and not to proceed with a public hearing is not a land use decision. Salem-Keizer School Dist. 24-J v. City of Salem, 27 Or LUBA 351 (1994).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where certain parties requested that a local government determine whether a particular development complies with all requirements of its land use regulations, a letter by the local government planning director making the requested determination is a final land use decision, even though not issued pursuant to a local process for making binding declaratory rulings. Hart v. Jefferson County, 27 Or LUBA 688 (1994).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a local government compliance hearings officer order (1) applies the local zoning ordinance to the relevant facts in determining petitioners violated that ordinance, and (2) is the local government's final determination on the issues decided, the order is a "land use decision" subject to review by LUBA. Watson v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 164 (1994).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A city resolution asking ODOT not to construct a particular transportation improvement and to spend the funds allocated to that project for other purposes, including development of a transportation master plan for the area, is merely a recommendation to ODOT concerning actions within ODOT's authority, not a "final" land use decision reviewable by LUBA. Central Eastside Industrial Council v. Portland, 26 Or LUBA 540 (1994).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a local government makes a decision denying its own application to vacate a street and thereafter, in the same decision, withdraws the pending vacation application, the local government has made a final land use decision subject to review by LUBA. Lane v. City of Klamath Falls, 26 Or LUBA 295 (1993).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Local regulations govern the determination of when a local government decision is final for purposes of LUBA review, so long as the local regulations do not conflict with applicable statutes or LUBA's rules. City of Grants Pass v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 722 (1993).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A local government decision that makes a binding interpretation of its regulations, without amending or adopting regulation provisions or granting or denying a development application, is a "final" decision, even if other actions are required to give that decision practical effect. City of Grants Pass v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 722 (1993).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A city resolution initiating a boundary commission proceeding to consider annexation of property pursuant to ORS 199.490 is not a final decision and, for that reason, is not a land use decision as defined by ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A). Interlachen, Inc. v. City of Fairview, 25 Or LUBA 618 (1993).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A city resolution initiating a boundary commission proceeding under ORS 199.490 to consider annexation of property is not a final land use decision, where the boundary commission is not authorized to rely on comprehensive plan compliance findings in the city resolution and must itself make a determination of plan compliance. Interlachen, Inc. v. City of Fairview, 25 Or LUBA 618 (1993).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A letter sent by the planning director to the applicant, four months before a city decision granting PUD final development plan approval, does not constitute a final, appealable city decision with regard to the duration of the subsequent PUD final development plan approval. Gage v. City of Portland, 25 Or LUBA 449 (1993).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Local ordinances governing when a local decision becomes final are effective only to the extent they do not conflict with state statutes. A Storage Place v. City of Tualatin, 24 Or LUBA 637 (1993).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. LUBA's rejection of petitioners' arguments that the challenged decision is final, does not mean petitioners' arguments were presented without probable cause to believe they were well-founded. Whether a challenged decision is a "final" decision is, more often than not, far from obvious. City of North Plains v. Washington County, 24 Or LUBA 623 (1993).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where local government has a direct role to play in the adoption of local legislation affecting land use, and the local electorate must vote to approve or reject such legislation, the reviewable land use decision occurs at the time when the governing body determines the legislation complies with applicable land use laws. Riverbend Landfill Company v. Yamhill County, 24 Or LUBA 607 (1992).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where an ordinance is adopted by initiative, and the local government has no role to play in determining the ordinance's compliance with applicable land use laws, the reviewable land use decision is made when the election results are certified by the county clerk. Riverbend Landfill Company v. Yamhill County, 24 Or LUBA 607 (1992).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Although a city may be limited to an advisory role with regard to requests to rezone property located outside its municipal boundaries, where it adopts an ordinance granting the requested rezoning, the decision is a final decision subject to LUBA review. Hofmann v. City of Seaside, 24 Or LUBA 183 (1992).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A county planning director's letter stating he will initiate an application for development approval is not a final land use decision subject to LUBA's review authority. City of North Plains v. Washington County, 24 Or LUBA 78 (1992).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a formal declaratory ruling process established in a local government's code is not used, but an application or request for a plan or code interpretation initiates a process which provides the equivalent of a formal declaratory ruling process, including the right to notice and hearing, and that process results in the adoption of a written decision by the highest level local government review authority interpreting the plan or code, the decision is a land use decision subject to LUBA's review authority. Brogoitti v. Wallowa County, 23 Or LUBA 247 (1992).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A local code provision that requires the planning commission to conduct a site review of certain proposed developments, but which establishes no separate procedure for site review, does not prevent a city council decision approving a conditional use permit for the proposed development from being a final land use decision appealable to LUBA, even though the planning commission never conducted such site review. Citizens for Resp. Growth v. City of Seaside, 23 Or LUBA 100 (1992).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where the challenged decision does not purport to adopt or amend land use regulations, was not issued as a part of a decision approving or denying a permit, and is not the result of any motion of the decision making body, but rather is only a reflection of the impressions of the individual decision makers concerning the validity of a conditional use permit, such decision is not a final decision and, therefore, is not a land use decision within LUBA's jurisdiction. Weeks v. City of Tillamook, 22 Or LUBA 667 (1992).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. LUBA reviews the decision maker's final written decision, not statements made during the proceedings leading to adoption of the challenged decision. Such statements are preliminary and subject to change in the final decision. Toth v. Curry County, 22 Or LUBA 488 (1991).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a challenged decision does not purport to adopt or amend land use regulations, was not issued as a part of a decision approving or denying a permit, and is not the result of any motion of the decision making body, but rather is an expression of how various individual decision makers "felt" about the proposal as reflected in the minutes, the challenged decision is an advisory opinion only and is not a final land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Owen Development Group, Inc. v. City of Gearhart, 22 Or LUBA 418 (1991).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. LUBA's jurisdiction over county decisions applying land use standards extends only to final decisions. Pilling v. LCDC, 22 Or LUBA 188 (1991).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. When a local government interprets existing comprehensive plan or land use regulation provisions without amending or adopting plan or land use regulation provisions or granting or denying a development permit or other land use approval, such a decision is a final decision if it is issued pursuant to an established local process for issuing binding declaratory rulings. Hollywood Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 21 Or LUBA 381 (1991).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. LUBA's review jurisdiction is limited to final decisions, and a recommendation from one governing body to a second governing body concerning an action within the jurisdiction of the second governing body is not a final decision subject to review by LUBA. Goose Hollow Foothills League Assoc. v. Portland, 21 Or LUBA 358 (1991).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A local government decision adopting a proposed wetlands conservation plan for subsequent submittal to the director of Division of State Lands is not a final decision. Blatt v. City of Portland, 21 Or LUBA 510 (1991).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. An ordinance which adopts a natural resources management plan (NRMP) pursuant to local code provisions is a final decision with regard to adoption of a NRMP, even though the NRMP is also a proposed wetlands conservation plan and is submitted to the DSL for approval as such. Blatt v. City of Portland, 21 Or LUBA 510 (1991).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A city ordinance referring a charter amendment to prohibit solid waste incinerators is the city's final decision, not the subsequent vote of the citizens approving the charter amendment. Jentzsch v. City of Sherwood, 20 Or LUBA 575 (1991).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a county hearings officer remands an application to the planning director for further action on certain issues, the hearings officer has not yet made any final decision on the application. Only when all county proceedings on the subject application are complete will the county have made its final decision on the application. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 20 Or LUBA 296 (1990).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where petitioners appeal a letter from the county court's counsel, stating the county court (1) has decided not to conduct any further review of petitioners' local appeal of a planning commission decision, and (2) considers the planning commission decision to be final, that letter constitutes the county's final decision on petitioners' local appeal, and petitioners have not failed to exhaust their administrative remedies. That the county court's decision not to conduct any further review of petitioners' appeal may have been erroneous does not affect LUBA's jurisdiction. Komning v. Grant County, 20 Or LUBA 481 (1990).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A city charter provision delaying the effective date of an ordinance does not also delay the date the ordinance becomes a final decision subject to appeal to LUBA. Club Wholesale v. City of Salem, 19 Or LUBA 576 (1990).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a timely appeal to the planning commission from the city administrator's decision on petitioners' application was filed, the city administrator's decision was not a final decision by the city on petitioners' application. If petitioners withdraw their application before the city makes a final decision on it, any decision made by the city on that application after its withdrawal is not a final land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Torgeson v. City of Canby, 19 Or LUBA 214 (1990).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. A county order selecting a preferred alternative site for a new bridge and directing staff to file necessary land use applications is not a "statutory test" land use decision, because it is only the expression of the board of commissioners' preliminary preference for the location of a new bridge, not a final decision selecting the site for a new bridge. McKenzie River Guides Assoc. v. Lane County, 19 Or LUBA 207 (1990).

26.2.2 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Final Decision. Where a county's land development ordinance provides for adoption of resolutions of intent to rezone and makes such resolutions binding commitments that the county will grant rezoning when conditions stated in such resolutions of intent to rezone are met, a resolution of intent to rezone is a final appealable decision. Headley v. Jackson County, 19 Or LUBA 109 (1990).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. Where a county approves a petitioner's application subject to a condition of approval, where the approval requires that the condition be met prior to the expiration of the approval period, where county counsel subsequently sends the petitioner a letter concluding that the petitioner had not satisfied the condition and, thus, that the approval had expired, and where the petitioner does not assert that the letter involves the application of land use regulations or identify any land use regulation that county counsel applied or should have applied, LUBA will conclude that the letter is not a "land use decision," as defined in ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A), and that LUBA lacks jurisdiction to review it. Schofield v. Douglas County, 81 Or LUBA 143 (2020).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. A contract between a local government and an engineering firm for the design of three bridges does not concern the application of any land use regulation, and, thus, is not a "land use decision," where the contract authorizes only design work and consulting services, where the contract does not authorize the use or development of land, and where the design and consulting services concern development actions that must be (and in fact were) authorized by other land use decisions. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 403 (2019).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. LUBA's jurisdiction over Metro decisions is complicated, because Metro does not have a comprehensive plan, and its ordinances are not "land use regulation[s]." As a result, a Metro decision fits within the ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A) definition of a "land use decision" only if the decision (1) adopts or amends Metro's Regional Framework Plan; or (2) otherwise concerns the application of the statewide planning goals. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. To qualify as a "land use decision" as defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(i), a Metro Resolution must constitute a "final decision" that concerns the application of the statewide planning goals. However, finality for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(a) is not solely a matter of whether the decision constitutes a local government's last word on a land use issue. Other important considerations include whether the decision is an exercise of the local government's land use planning authority, and the extent to which the decision is binding on the local government and affected parties. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. A decision by Metro acting as arbitrator does not constitute a "final decision," where Metro's role as arbitrator was not an exercise of its function as a local government at all, but rather where Metro acted as a chosen arbitrator, a function that could have been performed by a private entity or individual. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. A Metro arbitration decision subject to an arbitration process devised by Metro that contemplates that the final decision the comprehensive plan designation of an area of land shared by two cities and a county will be determined in the post-acknowledgement plan amendments (PAPA) adopted by the cities and county is not itself a "final" "land use decision." Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. A Metro arbitration decision issued pursuant to a Metro arbitration process to arrive at a solution for the comprehensive plan designation for a disputed area of land jointly owned by two cities and a county, and which contemplates that the final decision regarding the comprehensive plan designation of the area will occur during the post-acknowledgment plan amendments, is not a "zoning" decision for purposes of ORS 268.393(6), which is part of the statute implementing Ballot Measure 56. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. Where LUBA determines that a Metro resolution is not a "final" decision, the significant impact land use decision test does not apply. The jurisdictional requirement–that a land use decision must be "final"–applies to both the statutory as well as the significant impact test. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. Where a building permit is issued without applying any land use regulations, and a prior design review decision either applied or should have applied all applicable land use standards, the building permit is not a land use decision that is appealable to LUBA. Glenwood 2006, LLC v. City of Beaverton, 76 Or LUBA 160 (2017).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. Because Metro does not have a comprehensive plan or land use regulations, a Metro decision is a statutory land use decision subject to LUBA's review only if the decision (1) adopts or amends the Metro Regional Framework Plan or one of its components, or (2) otherwise constitutes a Metro decision that concerns the application of the statewide planning goals. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Metro, 68 Or LUBA 302 (2013).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. The Metro Council's adoption by resolution of a master plan for a regional park does not constitute the adoption or amendment of a functional plan, where the master plan consists entirely of non-binding recommendations and guidelines to local governments, and nothing in Metro's legislation or elsewhere requires such a master plan to be adopted as a functional plan or amendment to a functional plan. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Metro, 68 Or LUBA 302 (2013).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. A county's certification in a state agency land use compatibility statement that the activities proposed in the related state agency permit application are consistent with all local land use requirements is necessarily a land use decision, as defined in ORS 197.015(11)(a), if it is a final decision and not subject to any of the exceptions set out at ORS 197.015(11)(b). Wolfgram v. Douglas County, 52 Or LUBA 536 (2006).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. Where a Metro Committee would be required to apply land use standards to approve a city annexation ordinance on appeal, its decision to deny the annexation ordinance is a land use decision subject to review to LUBA, notwithstanding that the denial was based on non-land use standards. City of Damascus v. Metro, 51 Or LUBA 210 (2006).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District. Although a private conservation group's decision to purchase land could not be a land use decision reviewable by LUBA, since under ORS 197.015(10)(a) land use decisions must be governmental decisions, a city's decision to purchase land might be a land use decision if it otherwise qualifies under the definition of land use decision set out at ORS 197.015(10)(a). Willamette Oaks, LLC v. City of Eugene, 46 Or LUBA 813 (2004).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. A decision by a parks commission to construct a driving range within a city owned golf course is not a land use decision subject to LUBA review because the decision is not made by a local government or special district. Davis v. City of Ashland, 37 Or LUBA 224 (1999).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. A school district's decision to adjust attendance area boundaries is not a statutory land use decision. Butts v. Hillsboro School District, 33 Or LUBA 211 (1997).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. A pre-annexation agreement which does not purport to and does not effect approval of a proposed development or annexation of property into the city is not a final land use decision over which LUBA has jurisdiction. Crist v. City of Beaverton, 31 Or LUBA 202 (1996).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. ORS 195.020(1) does not give a special district land use planning responsibilities. Rather, it limits a special district's exercise of its land use planning responsibilities if, in fact, the special district has been given such responsibilities by other legal authority. Churchill v. Neahkahnie Water District, 29 Or LUBA 354 (1995).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. Where LUBA has affirmed a special district's decision repealing its water allocation program, the district's decision authorizing the provision of domestic water service to property designated and zoned for residential use under an acknowledged county plan and regulations is not a land use decision subject to LUBA review. Churchill v. Neahkahnie Water District, 29 Or LUBA 354 (1995).

26.2.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Local Government/Special District Decision. A special district's repeal of a program affecting land use, like its adoption or implementation of such a program, is an "action * * * with respect to programs affecting land use" that must be in accordance with the goals pursuant to ORS 195.020(1) and, therefore, is a land use decision subject to review by LUBA. Churchill v. Neahkahnie Water District, 27 Or LUBA 721 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A county's decision to approve the construction of a bridge and related trail improvements in an EFU zone is both a land use decision and a "permit," as defined in ORS 215.402(4), where LUBA previously concluded that approval of the transportation project including the bridge and related trail improvements is a conditional use in the EFU zone and where the construction of the bridge and related trail improvements constitutes the "development of land" within the meaning of ORS 215.402(4). Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 81 Or LUBA 427 (2020).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a petitioner fails to establish that a city council decision applied a goal, comprehensive plan provision, or land use regulation, the city's decision is not a land use decision and petitioner's motion to transfer to circuit court will be granted. Boeder v. City of Corvallis, 81 Or LUBA 470 (2020).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. That the subject property's zoning changed after an initial building permit application and that the project, as proposed, would conflict with several of the local government's updated code provisions do not mean that subsequent extensions of the building permit application are land use decisions where the petitioner does not establish that the local government should have applied any land use regulations to the building permit extension applications. Arbor Lodge Neighborhood Assoc. v. City of Portland, 81 Or LUBA 378 (2020).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a county approves a petitioner's application subject to a condition of approval, where the approval requires that the condition be met prior to the expiration of the approval period, where county counsel subsequently sends the petitioner a letter concluding that the petitioner had not satisfied the condition and, thus, that the approval had expired, and where the petitioner does not assert that the letter involves the application of land use regulations or identify any land use regulation that county counsel applied or should have applied, LUBA will conclude that the letter is not a "land use decision," as defined in ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A), and that LUBA lacks jurisdiction to review it. Schofield v. Douglas County, 81 Or LUBA 143 (2020).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A contract between a local government and an engineering firm for the design of three bridges does not concern the application of any land use regulation, and, thus, is not a "land use decision," where the contract authorizes only design work and consulting services, where the contract does not authorize the use or development of land, and where the design and consulting services concern development actions that must be (and in fact were) authorized by other land use decisions. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 403 (2019).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a county suspends operation of a verified nonconforming use based on notice of noncompliance with DEQ rules, and subsequently lifts that suspension based on notice that corrective actions have been taken, the county is not required to apply land use regulations relating to the discontinuation of nonconforming uses where those land use regulations apply only in the context of an application for development of a nonconforming use or a code enforcement proceeding. Because the county is not required to apply land use regulations, lifting the suspension is not a "land use decision" for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A) and LUBA therefore lacks jurisdiction under ORS 197.825(1). Campbell v. Columbia County, 79 Or LUBA 56 (2019).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. An ordinance that amends a county's comprehensive plan map and zoning maps, in order to implement an earlier decision that adopted findings taking exception to statewide planning goals, is a land use decision as defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a), because it "amends" the county's comprehensive plan and land use regulations, even if the ordinance itself does not adopt the exceptions or otherwise "apply" any statewide planning goals. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 72 Or LUBA 475 (2015).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a county adopts an ordinance amending its comprehensive plan map and zoning map, in order to implement an earlier decision that adopted findings taking exceptions to statewide planning goals, it may be that those earlier adopted findings cannot be challenged in the appeal of the ordinance. However, even in that event, that does not mean that LUBA lacks jurisdiction over the ordinance, only that if the petitioner raises no challenges to the ordinance that are within LUBA's scope of review, LUBA will affirm the ordinance. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 72 Or LUBA 475 (2015).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A determination that a condition of land use approval has or has not been complied with generally does not result in a land use decision, unless that determination involves the direct application of a comprehensive plan or land use regulation. Egge v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 1 (2014).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A decision that only determines the amount of the financial penalty a landowner must pay for violating a condition of land use approval is not a land use decision, where the only land use regulation that is directly applied states only that the amount of the fine will be determined by application of factors set out in a code provision that is itself not a land use regulation. Egge v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 1 (2014).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. LUBA has exclusive jurisdiction over a city council decision that amends the city's Goal 5 inventory of historic resources to remove property, notwithstanding that following the city council decision a circuit court decided a mandamus action in the property owner's favor based on the stipulation of the parties that the city council had removed the property from the inventory. Because the circuit court judgment did not determine that the property owner was entitled to removal from the inventory under state law, but simply reflected the parties' stipulation regarding the outcome of the city council's decision, LUBA's review of the city council decision cannot conflict with the circuit court judgment. Lake Oswego Preservation Society v. City of Lake Oswego, 70 Or LUBA 103 (2014).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A letter from the county's counsel to the petitioner that merely confirms that the county has accepted, approved and recorded a final subdivision plat and that the board of commissioners cannot revoke the county's acceptance and recording of the final plat is not a land use decision where the county counsel was not required to and did not apply a comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation in the letter. Willamette Oaks LLC v. Lane County, 68 Or LUBA 84 (2013).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A building permit decision that does not apply any comprehensive plan and land use regulation is not a statutory "land use decision" defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a), even if the building at issue was initially approved as part of a planned unit development decision that is on remand from LUBA. The remanded decision is not a comprehensive plan or land use regulation for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(a). Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 68 Or LUBA 162 (2013).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A decision can be wrong or erroneous, yet not qualify as a statutory "land use decision" defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a). Even if a local government lacked authority to issue a building permit, or otherwise erred in approving that permit, where the petitioner does not establish that any comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation applied to the building permit, the permit is not within LUBA's jurisdiction, and any errors committed in issuing the decision can only be challenged in circuit court. Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 68 Or LUBA 162 (2013).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Because Metro does not have a comprehensive plan or land use regulations, a Metro decision is a statutory land use decision subject to LUBA's review only if the decision (1) adopts or amends the Metro Regional Framework Plan or one of its components, or (2) otherwise constitutes a Metro decision that concerns the application of the statewide planning goals. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Metro, 68 Or LUBA 302 (2013).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. The Metro Council's adoption by resolution of a master plan for a regional park does not constitute the adoption or amendment of a functional plan, where the master plan consists entirely of non-binding recommendations and guidelines to local governments, and nothing in Metro's legislation or elsewhere requires such a master plan to be adopted as a functional plan or amendment to a functional plan. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Metro, 68 Or LUBA 302 (2013).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Local code provisions that regulate tree cutting and park uses that are not included in the city's zoning ordinance are not "land use regulations" as defined in ORS 197.015(12). Lazarus v. City of Milwaukie, 67 Or LUBA 226 (2013).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Regulations that are codified elsewhere than in a local government's zoning ordinance or similar land use ordinance may nonetheless implement the comprehensive plan and thus constitute "land use regulations" as defined at ORS 197.015(11), if there is a clear connection between the comprehensive plan and the regulation and the inference that the regulation implements the comprehensive plan is unavoidable. Oregon Aviation Watch v. City of Hillsboro, 67 Or LUBA 252 (2013).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Regulations adopted in 1963 governing aircraft flight operations over a city could not possibly "implement" comprehensive plan policies that were adopted in 1977, and such regulations are therefore not "land use regulations" as defined at ORS 197.015(11). Oregon Aviation Watch v. City of Hillsboro, 67 Or LUBA 252 (2013).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Regulations proscribing certain aircraft operations over a city are not "clearly connected" to broadly worded comprehensive plan policies that concern environmental protection or the development of a safe transportation system, and such regulations are therefore not "land use regulations" as defined at ORS 197.015(11). Oregon Aviation Watch v. City of Hillsboro, 67 Or LUBA 252 (2013).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. LUBA may take official notice of a 1984 LCDC acknowledgment order for the purpose of determining whether LCDC reviewed or relied upon a municipal traffic code section to acknowledge the city's comprehensive plan and land use regulations. That the acknowledgement order does not list or refer to the traffic code section suggests that the traffic code section was not submitted to LCDC for acknowledgment, and neither the city nor LCDC understood the code section to implement a comprehensive plan provision or function as a land use regulation. Oregon Aviation Watch v. City of Hillsboro, 67 Or LUBA 252 (2013).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A comprehensive plan policy requirement that the city "work" with an existing city airport to reduce airport-related incompatibilities with surrounding land uses is not a mandatory applicable approval standard for legislation that deletes superseded code provisions proscribing certain aircraft flight operations and requiring city council approval of new airports. Oregon Aviation Watch v. City of Hillsboro, 67 Or LUBA 252 (2013).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a county comprehensive plan relies on an intergovernmental agreement between the county and cities to implement plan policies regarding preservation of green corridors, the county's decision to unilaterally terminate the intergovernmental agreement concerns the application of those comprehensive plan policies, and thus falls within the definition of "land use decision" at ORS 197.015(10)(a). City of Sandy v. Clackamas County, 67 Or LUBA 501 (2013).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A county's unilateral termination of an intergovernmental agreement that never became effective might not qualify as a land use decision defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a). However, where the parties dispute and the record does not establish whether or not the agreement was effective, LUBA will not dismiss the appeal on that basis. City of Sandy v. Clackamas County, 67 Or LUBA 501 (2013).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a city's road vacation regulations are codified in the city's land use code, such regulations are "land use regulations," and a decision that concerns the application of those regulations falls within the definition of "land use decision" at ORS 197.015(10)(a). Conte v. City of Eugene, 66 Or LUBA 334 (2012).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A reasonable attorney could believe that an enforcement decision that determines that parking of tow trucks is authorized by a previously issued home occupation permit concerns the application of the city's home occupation regulations, and is thus a land use decision as defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a), because it is frequently unclear whether in making an enforcement decision regarding an existing permit the decision maker applies, or should have applied, a land use regulation. Noordhoff v. City of North Bend, 66 Or LUBA 442 (2012).

26.2.4 Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan, or Land Use Decision. A decision that simply concludes that a condition of permit approval is satisfied or not satisfied, is violated or not violated, is not a land use decision as defined by ORS 197.015(10)(a), because it concerns only the application of a permit condition of approval, not the application of a land use regulation. Noordhoff v. City of North Bend, 65 Or LUBA 420 (2012).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A code enforcement decision that determines the location of the floodplain on property falls within the definition of "land use decision" at ORS 197.015(10)(a), where the decision requires application of floodplain maps adopted as part of the county development code, the maps thus qualify as "land use regulations," and the code enforcement decision therefore concerns the application of a land use regulation. Bratton v. Washington County, 65 Or LUBA 461 (2012).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Authorizations signed by city and county officials that authorized an applicant to submit on the city's and county's behalf a land use application to construct improvements on city and county owned property are not land use decisions under ORS 197.015(10)(a), where the authorizations do not apply a land use regulation and the city and county were not required to apply a land use regulation in deciding to sign the authorizations. Willamette Oaks LLC v. Lane County, 64 Or LUBA 328 (2011).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Under ORS 92.100(7), a city decision that approves or withholds approval of a final subdivision plat is not a land use decision or limited land use decision and is not reviewable by LUBA. Calvary Construction v. City of Glendale, 61 Or LUBA 50 (2010).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A letter from the planning staff to a property owner stating that a land use compatibility statement (LUCS) has expired under its own terms does not "concern" the application of a county's code enforcement land use regulations, thereby making the decision a land use decision, when the letter does not enforce any conditions or revoke any permit but merely explains what the owner must do to avoid an enforcement action. VanGrinsven v. Klamath County, 60 Or LUBA 299 (2010).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. The mere exercise of authority by planning staff to send a letter informing an owner that a permit has expired is insufficient in itself to make the staff action "concern" the application of a land use regulation and therefore a land use decision. Otherwise, every conceivable action taken by county staff under color of authority of its land use code could constitute a land use decision. VanGrinsven v. Klamath County, 60 Or LUBA 299 (2010).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a county's adopted right-of-way encroachment license policy was adopted to address public safety concerns with encroachments, rather than to implement any state or local land use policies, a county decision to grant a right-of-way encroachment license is not a land use decision. Amussen v. Tillamook County, 58 Or LUBA 431 (2009).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a county's comprehensive plan, transportation system plan and applicable community plan call for roadway design standards and adopt a skinny-streets standard, but do not address right-of-way encroachments, a decision to grant a right-of-way encroachment license does not apply any of those land use standards and is not a land use decision. Amussen v. Tillamook County, 58 Or LUBA 431 (2009).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where the decision on appeal to LUBA is a hearings officer's dismissal of a local appeal, not the building permit that was the subject of the local appeal, and the hearings officer clearly applied discretionary land use regulation standards to dismiss the local appeal, the hearings officer's decision falls within the ORS 197.015(10) definition of "land use decision," and LUBA has jurisdiction to review the hearings officer's decision. Kuhn v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 483 (2009).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss an appeal of a county decision to sell park land, where petitioners locally identified a comprehensive plan policy that could be interpreted to apply to a county decision to sell park land, and the county approves the sale of park land without responding to petitioner's argument that sale of the park land is inconsistent with the cited comprehensive plan policy. Kaye v. Marion County, 58 Or LUBA 680 (2009).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A decision vacating a 30-foot by 100-foot section of public right-of-way is not a statutory land use decision that "concerns" the application of local land use regulations, even if in the course of addressing the statutory "public interest" road vacation standard the county considers the zoning map or zoning regulations that govern the surrounding area. Bohnenkamp v. Clackamas County, 56 Or LUBA 17 (2008).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a county adopts a resolution approving an urban renewal plan under ORS 457.105 and in approving the plan finds that the plan conforms to the county's comprehensive plan, the resolution is a land use decision as defined in ORS 197.015(1)(a)(A). Granada Land Co. v. City of Albany, 56 Or LUBA 475 (2008).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A letter and memorandum from a county counsel to a county cartography office directing the cartography office to amend the county's tax maps to reflect a judicially ordered partition is not a land use decision because it does not concern the adoption, amendment or application of any goals, comprehensive plan provisions, or land use regulations. Stricklin v. Clatsop County, 54 Or LUBA 334 (2007).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A petitioner fails to establish that LUBA has jurisdiction over a franchise agreement entered into between a county and a landfill operator, where the petitioner identifies no comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation that the decision applies or concerns. Kamp v. Washington County, 54 Or LUBA 717 (2007).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. LUBA will grant a motion to transfer to circuit court an appeal of an ordinance that establishes a permitting process for closing mobile home parks, where the petitioner alleges but does not substantiate that the decision concerns the application of statewide planning goals, comprehensive plan provisions or land use regulations. Century Drive Mobile Home Park, LLC v. City of Bend, 53 Or LUBA 1 (2006).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. An agreement between a local government and a private party for the development and operation of a sports park is not a land use decision as defined in ORS 197.015(11)(a)(A), where the agreement conditions the private party's future use of the property on compliance with all applicable land use rules and regulations and the local government applied no goals, land use regulations, or comprehensive plan provisions in entering into the agreement. Dorall v. Coos County, 53 Or LUBA 32 (2006).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A city council decision to dismiss a local appeal is a land use decision, where the underlying decision revokes a conditional use permit and both the city council proceedings and the underlying revocation decision were subject to procedures set out in the city's zoning ordinance. Merton v. City of Jefferson, 53 Or LUBA 559 (2007).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A determination that no local right of appeal exists for a land use compatibility statement concerns at least the application of the local government's local appeal regulations, and thus is a land use decision under ORS 197.015(11). Hoschek v. Tillamook County, 52 Or LUBA 793 (2006).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where the zoning of property is discussed by a local appellate body during proceedings to revoke and reinstate a building permit, but the revocation and reinstatement decisions are not governed by the zoning ordinance or other land use regulations, the mere reference to the zoning ordinance does not mean the decision "concern[ed] the * * * application of [a] land use regulation," within the meaning of ORS 197.015(11)(a). Barnas v. City of Portland, 51 Or LUBA 750 (2006).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a city decision to reinstate a building permit does not apply any of the land use standards identified at ORS 197.015(11)(a)(A), and the petitioner does not argue that the city should have applied any such land use standards in addition to the Uniform Building Code provisions that the city applied to reinstate the building permit, petitioner fails to establish that the reinstatement decision is a land use decision subject to LUBA review. Barnas v. City of Portland, 51 Or LUBA 750 (2006).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. There is no clear connection between the Clean Water Services District's design and construction standards and the county's comprehensive plan, and the standards are therefore not "land use regulations." Therefore, decisions issued pursuant to those standards, such as a sensitive area pre-screening site assessment and the issuance of an erosion control permit, do not concern the adoption, amendment or application of a land use regulation, and are not "land use decisions" pursuant to ORS 197.015(10)(a). Angius v. Clean Water Services District, 50 Or LUBA 154 (2005).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Petitioners fail to demonstrate that an improvement agreement specifying how public improvements required by a preliminary plat approval will be financed and constructed is a land use decision or limited land use decision, where petitioners do not establish that the city applied land use approval criteria or exercised discretion in approving the agreement. Bellingham v. City of King City, 50 Or LUBA 683 (2005).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where prior appeals to LUBA and the Court of Appeals concerning a property near the ocean have established that a particular comprehensive plan goal regarding environmentally hazardous areas applies at the time a building permit is issued, a subsequent city decision to issue a building permit for the property is a land use decision. Jebousek v. City of Newport, 50 Or LUBA 724 (2005).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a petitioner does not demonstrate that a resolution approving an amendment to a development agreement applies, adopts or amends a land use regulation or comprehensive plan provision, it fails to satisfy its burden to demonstrate that the resolution satisfies the statutory definition of "land use decision." ZRZ Realty Company v. City of Portland, 49 Or LUBA 309 (2005).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Land use application fees, like local appeal fees, are an integral part of the zoning code provisions governing the processing and review of land use applications. A decision adopting a schedule of land use application fees pursuant to a local land use regulation is a "land use decision" subject to LUBA's jurisdiction, because it concerns the adoption, amendment or application of a land use regulation, and is not subject to the "fiscal" exception to LUBA's jurisdiction. Doty v. City of Bandon, 49 Or LUBA 411 (2005).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A transportation planning document that is intended to demonstrate compliance with federal law and references statewide planning goals, comprehensive plan provisions or land use regulations because its language was taken from a statewide transportation system plan does not apply the cited goals, plan provisions or land use regulations and is not a "land use decision" pursuant to ORS 197.015(10). Friends of Eugene v. Lane Council of Governments, 49 Or LUBA 672 (2005).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where the county's comprehensive plan contains language applicable to a decision approving formation of a special district, and the county specifically addresses the language in its decision, the decision "concerns" the application of a comprehensive plan provision and is a "land use decision" under ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(ii). Kneeland v. Douglas County, 48 Or LUBA 347 (2005).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. In issuing a building permit to remodel an existing commercial facility, a city was not required to apply zoning ordinance criteria that govern rezoning decisions and, therefore, those rezoning criteria provide no basis for asserting that the building permit decision qualifies as a land use decision that is subject to LUBA review. Wetzel v. City of Eugene, 48 Or LUBA 491 (2005).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. In issuing a building permit to remodel an existing commercial facility, a city was not required to apply zoning ordinance development standards that apply to development of large new commercial development and, therefore, those zoning ordinance criteria provide no basis for asserting that the building permit decision qualifies as a land use decision that is subject to LUBA review. Wetzel v. City of Eugene, 48 Or LUBA 491 (2005).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where LUBA initially denies a motion to dismiss based on a mistaken understanding that discretionary zoning ordinance criteria cited by petitioner apply to an appealed building permit, but respondent and intervenor later demonstrate that the discretionary zoning ordinance criteria cited by petitioner do not apply, LUBA will dismiss the appeal. Wetzel v. City of Eugene, 48 Or LUBA 491 (2005).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A county's decision to accept a deed for a road easement is a land use decision, where the county has adopted procedures as part of its subdivision regulations that require the county to apply standards in those regulations and its zoning ordinance in accepting land for use as county roads. Niederhof v. Deschutes County, 48 Or LUBA 626 (2004).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. An initiative that establishes a policy to preserve the city waterfront as a public park, effectively prohibits new uses otherwise allowed under the current comprehensive plan and zoning designations, and allows existing uses to continue only as nonconforming uses is a decision that "concerns * * * the application" of the city's land use regulations within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10), and therefore the initiative is a land use decision within LUBA's jurisdiction. Port of Hood River v. City of Hood River, 47 Or LUBA 62 (2004).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A local government decision "concerns" the application of a comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation if (1) the decision maker was required by law to apply its plan or land use regulations as approval standards, but did not, or (2) the decision maker in fact applied plan provisions or land use regulations. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 566 (2004).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a refinement plan policy prohibits "development" of property prior to master plan approval, the code definition of "development" includes excavation and fill, and there is no textual or contextual basis to conclude that "development" for purposes of the policy excludes excavation and fill authorized by a grading permit, then the policy is applicable to a challenged permit authorizing excavation and fill on the property. Because the grading permit "concerns" the application of a comprehensive plan provision, the permit is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 566 (2004).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. That regulations governing grading permits do not expressly require compliance with comprehensive plan policies does not necessarily indicate that specific comprehensive plan policies cannot apply to grading permits, especially where the grading permit regulations require planning department review for compliance with "any applicable laws." Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 566 (2004).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A decision that simply removes a contractual impediment to development in an annexation agreement does not in itself approve "development" or otherwise have an actual impact on present or future land uses, and that decision therefore is neither a statutory nor significant impact test land use decision. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 566 (2004).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Adoption of a decision-making process that allows quasi-judicial application of a county's land use regulations to be nullified by the voters on a case-by-case basis "concerns * * * the application" of the county's land use regulations, within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(a), and thus a county initiative adopting that decision-making process is a "land use decision" within LUBA's exclusive jurisdiction. Sievers v. Hood River County, 46 Or LUBA 635 (2004).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A decision to reconsider an earlier decision and reserve final judgment on the merits of that earlier decision is not itself a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction, where the decision to reconsider does not concern the application of any comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation, and the decision to reconsider is accurately characterized as an interlocutory decision and not a final decision of any kind. Grabhorn v. Washington County, 46 Or LUBA 672 (2004).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A final city decision to purchase property within the Willamette River Greenway is a land use decision, where the city is required to apply its comprehensive plan provisions that identify the property the city will purchase within the Willamette River Greenway for Willamette River Greenway purposes. Willamette Oaks, LLC v. City of Eugene, 46 Or LUBA 813 (2004).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a local government has failed to amend its land use regulations to implement a land use statute, such as ORS 215.263 that governs partitions in EFU zones, a county decision that directly applies such statutes pursuant to ORS 197.646(3) is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction, notwithstanding that the county does not apply a statewide planning goal, comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation. Perkins v. Umatilla County, 45 Or LUBA 445 (2003).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A resolution that initiates condemnation of property is not a statutory land use decision, where petitioner identifies no statewide planning goal, comprehensive plan or land use regulation provision that must be applied in adopting such a resolution. Decker v. City of Cornelius, 45 Or LUBA 539 (2003).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A development permit decision that refers to a prior land use decision but does not apply any land use regulations is not a "land use decision" as that term is defined in ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A) and, therefore, is not a decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Arlington Heights Neigh. Assn. v. City of Portland, 45 Or LUBA 559 (2003).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. LUBA has jurisdiction to review a hearings officer decision on reconsideration that determines the location of a zoning boundary, when in the course of making that decision the hearings officer is obliged to address a challenge to the hearings officer's authority to review the matter because the underlying LUBA appeal had been dismissed and the hearings officer concludes that he does have that authority in part because the local zoning code does not prohibit such review. 6710 LLC v. City of Portland, 43 Or LUBA 177 (2002).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A decision denying a request to reconsider an earlier land use decision is itself a statutory land use decision only if the decision on reconsideration applies one or more statewide planning goals, comprehensive plan provisions, or land use regulations. A decision that summarily denies the reconsideration request without applying any goal, plan provision or land use regulation is not a statutory land use decision. Wiper v. City of Eugene, 43 Or LUBA 649 (2002).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a local government adopts a decision following remand from LUBA that applies both land use criteria and non-land use criteria, that decision is a land use decision that may be appealed to LUBA. That all issues concerning the decision's compliance with land use criteria may have been resolved or waived under Beck v. City of Tillamook, 313 Or 148, 831 P2d 678 (1992), does not mean that a decision that applies land use criteria is not a land use decision. Arlington Heights Homeowners v. City of Portland, 41 Or LUBA 560 (2001).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a city's tree preservation ordinance was identified during acknowledgment as an implementing measure to achieve compliance with Statewide Planning Goal 5, a decision that amends the tree preservation ordinance concerns the application of Goal 5 and is therefore a statutory land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 453 (2002).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A planning commission decision to deny a request to reopen a public hearing and reconsider an earlier decision approving a subdivision is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction, where the local code allows for reconsideration and the decision maker exercised its authority under the code to deny the request. Hausam v. City of Salem, 40 Or LUBA 234 (2001).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A city decision determining that the terms of a development permit condition, as interpreted, have not been satisfied is not a statutory land use decision, where the decision does not apply or interpret any goal, plan or land use regulation. Garrard v. City of Newport, 40 Or LUBA 258 (2001).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A decision amending a city's comprehensive plan housing needs inventory and analysis pursuant to ORS 197.296(3) is a final decision and therefore a "land use decision" as defined by ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A), notwithstanding that the amended inventory and analysis may require the city to adopt further land use decisions to comply with ORS 197.296(4) and (5). DLCD v. City of McMinnville, 40 Or LUBA 591 (2001).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. ORS 197.626 provides the Land Conservation and Development Commission with exclusive jurisdiction to review decisions that amend an urban growth boundary (UGB) to include more than 50 acres. However, ORS 197.626 does not deprive LUBA of jurisdiction over a final decision that amends the city's comprehensive plan housing needs inventory but does not amend the UGB or otherwise determine how the city will accommodate the identified housing needs. DLCD v. City of McMinnville, 40 Or LUBA 591 (2001).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a local government makes it clear that the ordinance it is adopting is not intended to be a land use regulation, LUBA generally does not have jurisdiction to review such an ordinance. However, where the connection between the ordinance and specific comprehensive plan provisions is clear, and the inference that the ordinance implements the comprehensive plan provisions is unavoidable, the ordinance is a land use regulation subject to review by LUBA. Rest-Haven Memorial Park v. City of Eugene, 39 Or LUBA 282 (2001).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where petitioner does not establish that the city either applied or was required to apply land use standards when it made a final decision to condemn petitioner's EFU-zoned property for a utility facility, in advance of seeking county land use approval for that facility, the challenged decision is not a land use decision over which LUBA has jurisdiction. E & R Farm Partnership v. City of Gervais, 39 Or LUBA 251 (2000).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A decision that does not apply the statewide planning goals, a comprehensive plan provision or a land use regulation, but rather applies a condition of approval in a previously approved land use permit, does not fall within the statutory definition of a "land use decision." Frevach Land Company v. Multnomah County, 38 Or LUBA 729 (2000).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A county decision determining that a letter from a city transportation director satisfies a plan design element and a specific development's condition of approval is a land use decision subject to LUBA review. Cedar Mill Creek Corr. Comm. v. Washington County, 37 Or LUBA 1011 (2000).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. An annexation decision that includes findings of compliance with local land use standards is a land use decision subject to LUBA review. Johnson v. City of La Grande, 37 Or LUBA 380 (1999).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. If an annexation decision includes the application of and findings of compliance with local land use regulations, it is a land use decision, notwithstanding that, in the absence of the application of land use standards, a city's discretionary decision to annex property is not a land use decision. Johnson v. City of La Grande, 37 Or LUBA 380 (1999).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a county's comprehensive plan contains or is required to contain provisions that by their terms apply to a decision vacating a county road within city limits, the county must apply those provisions. If any such provisions apply, the county's road vacation decision is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lincoln County, 36 Or LUBA 288 (1999).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A decision approving a subdivision pursuant to county comprehensive plan and land use regulations is a land use decision under ORS 197.015(10)(a). That a subdivision approval decision is conditioned on construction of road access for the subdivision does not convert that decision or any part of the decision into the type of transportation facility decision that is excluded from the statutory definition of "land use decision" by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D). Warrick v. Josephine County, 36 Or LUBA 81 (1999).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. An informational letter composed by an assistant planner explaining that the city's code does not contain a time limit for early subdivision approval does not involve the application or interpretation of any code provision and is thus not a land use decision under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) or a limited land use decision under ORS 197.015(11). Ward v. City of Medford, 35 Or LUBA 219 (1998).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Background reports, which typically contain data and information that describe a community's resources and features and address the topics specified in the applicable Statewide Planning Goals, are not the equivalent of comprehensive plans, which set forth the community's long-range objectives and the policies by which it intends to achieve them. Mount Hood Stewardship Council v. Clackamas County, 33 Or LUBA 284 (1997).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where petitioner does not demonstrate that a forest management strategy is part of a county's comprehensive plan, petitioner has not carried its burden of showing that the application of the forest management strategy is a land use decision over which LUBA has jurisdiction. Mount Hood Stewardship Council v. Clackamas County, 33 Or LUBA 284 (1997).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A decision that parcels may be sold separately constitutes a land use decision subject to LUBA jurisdiction under ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A) when a county follows local land use procedures and applies local land use regulations in making its decision. Joseph v. Baker County, 33 Or LUBA 38 (1997).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. The decision to vacate 105 feet of a public road is not a "plan," as that term is used in ORS 197.250. The county's land use "plans, programs, rules or regulations affecting land use" are contained in its acknowledged comprehensive plan and implementing regulations. Pacific Western Co. v. Lincoln County, 32 Or LUBA 317 (1997).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. The city's affirmation of the status of an existing use as a nonconforming use requires the application of the city's zoning ordinance and is therefore a land use decision over which LUBA has jurisdiction. Smith v. City of Phoenix, 31 Or LUBA 358 (1996).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Notwithstanding the use of the word "ordinance" in ORS 197.105(11), which defines "land use regulation," whether a land use regulation is adopted by resolution or ordinance is unimportant when determining if LUBA has jurisdiction. Boom v. Columbia County, 31 Or LUBA 318 (1996).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. In modifying a condition to the earlier approval of a conditional use permit, a county planning director exercised policy judgment in the application of land use regulations, thereby making a statutory land use decision. Franklin v. Deschutes County, 30 Or LUBA 33 (1995).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A city decision to assume jurisdiction over and maintenance responsibility for a developed street in the downtown area satisfies the statutory test for a land use decision only if there are provisions in the city plan or land use regulations that establish a standard for making such a decision. Anderson v. City of Gates, 29 Or LUBA 321 (1995).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a local government decision to classify petitioner's proposed comprehensive plan amendment as "major" is final, and denies petitioner a right he would otherwise have under the local code to have his proposed amendment reviewed on its merits, the local government's decision is a land use decision as defined in ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(iii) and is subject to review by LUBA. Cone v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 133 (1995).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A decision concerns the application of a "land use regulation," as defined by ORS 197.015(11), where it concerns the application of a provision of the local government's zoning code, even though the particular zoning code section at issue might not independently satisfy the statutory definition of land use regulation if not contained within the zoning code. Hick v. Marion County, 28 Or LUBA 782 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A local code sewer improvement reimbursement chapter which implements comprehensive plan provisions constitutes a "general ordinance establishing standards for implementing a comprehensive plan" and, therefore, is a "land use regulation" within the meaning of within the meaning of ORS 197.015(11). The Petrie Company v. City of Tigard, 28 Or LUBA 535 (1995).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a local government's comprehensive plan and land use regulations have no provisions for the reconsideration or rehearing of governing body decisions, a decision to deny a request for reconsideration does not concern the application of a plan provision or land use regulation and, therefore, is not a land use decision under ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A). Bowen v. City of Dunes City, 28 Or LUBA 324 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. That LUBA may consider a statewide planning goal that is implemented by a particular plan or code provision, in determining whether the local government's interpretation of the plan or code provision should be affirmed under ORS 197.829(4), does not make that goal an approval standard for decisions made under an acknowledged plan and land use regulations. Knee Deep Cattle Company v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 288 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. For a decision to concern the application of a land use regulation, as provided in ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(iii), it is not enough that the decision touch on some aspect of a land use regulation; the land use regulation must contain provisions that are standards or criteria for making the challenged decision. Knee Deep Cattle Company v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 288 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. In the absence of code provisions that regulate onsite sewage treatment facilities separately from the uses they serve, a local government decision to allow construction of an onsite sewage treatment facility to serve a use determined to be an outright permitted use by other local government decisions, is not a decision concerning the application of the local code. Knee Deep Cattle Company v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 288 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A local government's determination of compatibility with its acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations, made as part of a state agency permit approval process, is a "final" decision applying the local plan and regulations if (1) the state agency is required, by statute, rule or other legal authority, to assure the permit is compatible with the local plan and regulations; and (2) the state agency is authorized to rely on the local government's determination of compatibility. Knee Deep Cattle Company v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 288 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. After acknowledgment, a city is not required to apply the statewide planning goals to land use decisions that do not amend its acknowledged plan or land use regulations. Therefore, a city decision to provide city sewer and water service to development outside city limits does not concern the application of the statewide planning goals. Fraser v. City of Joseph, 28 Or LUBA 217 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. To decide whether a challenged decision is a "land use decision" under ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(ii), because it concerns the application of a comprehensive plan, LUBA must determine whether arguably relevant plan provisions cited by the parties are standards or criteria for making the challenged decision. Fraser v. City of Joseph, 28 Or LUBA 217 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a challenged city council decision approving the provision of city sewer and water services outside city limits does not interpret arguably relevant comprehensive plan provisions with regard to whether they are approval criteria for the challenged decision, LUBA must remand the decision to the city to adopt such interpretations, before LUBA can determine whether the challenged decision is a land use decision subject to LUBA review. Fraser v. City of Joseph, 28 Or LUBA 217 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A special district's repeal of a program affecting land use, like its adoption or implementation of such a program, is an "action * * * with respect to programs affecting land use" that must be in accordance with the goals pursuant to ORS 195.020(1) and, therefore, is a land use decision subject to review by LUBA. Churchill v. Neahkahnie Water District, 27 Or LUBA 721 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A local government decision approving a building permit is a "land use decision" subject to review by LUBA if it involves the application of the goals, a comprehensive plan or a land use regulation and does not qualify as a ministerial decision under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) or (B). Sullivan v. City of Ashland, 27 Or LUBA 411 (1994).

226.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A county order that simply restates a decision made in an earlier order and corrects a citation in the earlier order is not a land use decision, because it does not concern the adoption, amendment or application of the goals, local comprehensive plan or local code, or have a significant impact on land use. Sahagian v. Columbia County, 27 Or LUBA 341 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a local government planning director has authority to interpret and apply the local zoning and subdivision ordinances, a letter by the planning director stating that a development complies with all requirements of those ordinances is a decision concerning the application of a land use regulation under ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A). Hart v. Jefferson County, 27 Or LUBA 688 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. An intergovernmental agreement between a city and a special district relating to city provision of sewage treatment service to the district, which interprets various provisions of the city's comprehensive plan and determines no plan provisions govern the proposal, applies comprehensive plan provisions and, therefore, is a land use decision subject to LUBA review. DLCD v. City of Donald, 27 Or LUBA 208 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a local government compliance hearings officer order (1) applies the local zoning ordinance to the relevant facts in determining petitioners violated that ordinance, and (2) is the local government's final determination on the issues decided, the order is a "land use decision" subject to review by LUBA. Watson v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 164 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A special district decision that finally determines policy questions concerning how the district will provide sewerage service to an area, where that service will occur, and the level of that service, is an exercise of the district's planning duties and responsibilities under ORS 195.020(1) that must comply with the Statewide Planning Goals and is a land use decision subject to LUBA review. DLCD v. Fargo Interchange Service District, 27 Or LUBA 150 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Under ORS 197.175(1), city decisions to annex unincorporated territory concern the application of the statewide planning goals and, therefore, satisfy the statutory definition of a "land use decision." Roloff v. City of Milton-Freewater, 27 Or LUBA 80 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a local government refers to its land use regulations, finds facts and makes a decision that its land use regulations do not apply, its decision is a land use decision. The nature of the legal theory supporting its conclusion that its land use regulations do not apply does not affect whether the decision is properly viewed as a land use decision. DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A chief planner's letter rejecting an attempt to file a local appeal of an earlier document explaining how land use regulation provisions are interpreted and applied is a land use decision, if the letter applies land use regulation provisions governing local appeals in concluding that no appeal is available, and there is no further appeal of the chief planner's letter available which must be exhausted. ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(iii). Forest Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 26 Or LUBA 636 (1994).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where the challenged decision is a local government interpretation of a local land use regulation concerning its applicability to a particular use, and discretion was exercised by the local government in reaching that decision, the challenged decision is a land use decision subject to review exclusively by LUBA. Kaady v. City of Cannon Beach, 26 Or LUBA 614 (19/93).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Under the statutory test for a land use decision, the obligation to apply the Statewide Planning Goals, a comprehensive plan provision or a land use regulation must arise from legal requirements contained in statutory, administrative rule or local ordinance provisions. J.C. Reeves Corp. v. Sherwood Education Dist. 88J, 26 Or LUBA 220 (1993).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where the challenged decision is an intergovernmental agreement that does not adopt, amend or apply a local government's plan or land use regulations, the challenged decision is not a land use decision as defined by ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A). Many Rivers Group v. City of Eugene, 25 Or LUBA 518 (1993).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where the petition for review alleges the challenged decision applies provisions of a local government plan and land use regulations, it is not fatal to LUBA's jurisdiction that the petition for review improperly characterizes the decision as a "land use decision" rather than a "limited land use decision." Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 25 Or LUBA 327 (1993).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. As the party seeking LUBA review, the burden is on petitioner to establish that the challenged decision is a land use decision. Where petitioner fails to identify any comprehensive plan provision as applicable to, or argue that any plan provision is an approval standard for, the challenged decision, LUBA will conclude the challenged decision does not concern the application of a comprehensive plan. Price v. Clatsop County, 25 Or LUBA 341 (1993).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. The use of land for a recreational parachuting center and for parachute landings is a "land use" subject to regulation by local land use ordinances. Skydive Oregon v. Clackamas County, 25 Or LUBA 294 (1993).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where petitioners allege in the petition for review that the challenged decision approves a plan amendment and zone change, that allegation is adequate to establish LUBA's jurisdiction. Neuharth v. City of Salem, 25 Or LUBA 267 (1993).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a water district has adopted a water allocation program that significantly limits the development of land in the district otherwise allowable under the applicable acknowledged county comprehensive plan and land use regulations, under ORS 197.185(1) a district decision made under such a program is "an action * * * with respect to a program affecting land use" to which the statewide planning goals apply and, therefore, is a "land use decision." Olson v. Neahkahnie Water District, 25 Or LUBA 776 (1993).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A surface mining ordinance that establishes standards implementing comprehensive plan surface mining policies is a land use regulation, even if portions of that ordinance, read in isolation, do not establish standards for implementing the comprehensive plan. An ordinance amending such a land use regulation is a land use decision subject to LUBA review. Oregon City Leasing, Inc. v. Columbia County, 25 Or LUBA 129 (1993).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. As used in the statutes identifying land use decisions subject to LUBA review, "local government decisions" includes decisions adopted through the initiative process. Riverbend Landfill Company v. Yamhill County, 24 Or LUBA 607 (1992).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where the challenged decision simply applies the city's fire code, and petitioner does not argue that the fire code is (1) a land use regulation, (2) a comprehensive plan provision, or (3) a goal provision, the challenged decision is not a statutory land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Curtis Serve N Save v. City of Eugene, 24 Or LUBA 341 (1992).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. In the absence of an adopted district program regulating the approval of water hookups for land use purposes, a water district action to approve an individual water hookup for a use consistent with the applicable acknowledged county plan and land use regulations is not an "action with respect to a program affecting land use" under ORS 197.185(1), to which the statewide planning goals apply. Keating v. Heceta Water District, 24 Or LUBA 175 (1992).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Allegations that the challenged decision violates a statewide planning goal and the local comprehensive plan and land use regulations are sufficient to constitute an allegation that the challenged decision is a land use decision under the statutory test, even where such allegations are found in the body of the petition for review, rather than in a separate statement of jurisdiction as required by OAR 661-10-030(3)(c). Adkins v. Heceta Water District, 23 Or LUBA 207 (1992).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A domestic water supply district's adoption of water hookup standards which will significantly affect development activity is an action with respect to a program affecting land use to which the statewide planning goals apply under ORS 197.185(1) and, therefore, is a land use decision subject to LUBA review. Adkins v. Heceta Water District, 23 Or LUBA 207 (1992).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. That three separate governmental units share the same three member board as their governing bodies does not provide a basis for making a decision rendered by two of those governmental units a decision by all three. Price v. Arch Cape Service District, 22 Or LUBA 807 (1991).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a county's approval of a permit is mandated by an order of the circuit court issued pursuant to a writ of mandamus under ORS 215.428(7), the county's decision approving the permit is not a "land use decision," as defined in ORS 197.015(10), because the county was not required to apply its comprehensive plan or land use regulations in adopting that decision. Gearhard v. Klamath County, 22 Or LUBA 377 (1991).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where the only determinations that must be made for the approval of a building permit are whether the applicant has certifications concerning septic approval and electrical and plumbing permits, and those determinations do not involve application of the goals, comprehensive plan, or land use regulations, the approval of the building permit is not a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. The question of whether a hearings officer appointed by the Department of Land Conservation and Development pursuant to an enforcement order acts on behalf of the local government or on behalf of DLCD is governed by the terms of the enforcement order. Pilling v. LCDC, 22 Or LUBA 188 (1991).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where the issue on appeal is whether petitioner has a vested right to develop property in a manner inconsistent with current zoning regulations, and the resolution of that issue requires the application of city land use regulations from 1973 to the present, the challenged decision is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Terraces Condo Assoc. v. City of Portland, 22 Or LUBA 151 (1991).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a local government makes a final decision in which it denies an application for a DMV wrecking yard license, in part, on the basis of provisions in its comprehensive plan and land use regulations, the challenged decision "concerns * * * the application of" the city's comprehensive plan and land use regulations within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A) and, consequently, is a land use decision over which LUBA has exclusive review authority. Bradbury v. City of Independence, 21 Or LUBA 535 (1991).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where it is not clear whether a city's comprehensive plan and land use regulations already prohibit solid waste incinerators and that question is presented in a separate pending LUBA appeal, LUBA will not assume a city charter amendment which specifically prohibits solid waste incinerators has the legal effect of amending or adopting a plan or land use regulation. Jentzsch v. City of Sherwood, 20 Or LUBA 575 (1991).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. The explicit requirement in Goal 11 that local governments provide in their plans for solid waste disposal facilities necessarily requires that Goal 11 be applied to any local government decision to prohibit a particular type of solid waste disposal facility. Jentzsch v. City of Sherwood, 20 Or LUBA 575 (1991).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Where a county administrator's decision on whether petitioners have a right to appeal a planning commission decision to the county board of commissioners required application of provisions of the county zoning ordinance, that decision is a land use decision subject to review by LUBA. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 20 Or LUBA 208 (1990).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. In determining whether a local government decision concerns the application of a comprehensive plan provision or a land use regulation, it is not sufficient that the decision may touch on some aspects of the comprehensive plan or land use regulations, rather the comprehensive plan or regulations must contain provisions intended as standards or criteria for making the decision. City of Portland v. Multnomah County, 19 Or LUBA 468 (1990).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. A comprehensive plan policy which simply directs a county to enter into urban area planning agreements with adjacent jurisdictions to coordinate land use planning does not adopt such agreements as part of the comprehensive plan. City of Portland v. Multnomah County, 19 Or LUBA 468 (1990).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Although ORS 197.825(3)(a) authorizes a local government to initiate proceedings in circuit court to enforce its plan and land use regulations, that statute does not require a county to proceed exclusively in that manner, particularly where the county has adopted a procedure for conducting local proceedings to determine whether its plan and land use regulations are violated. Putnam v. Klamath County, 19 Or LUBA 616 (1990).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Urban area planning agreements which have not been adopted by a local government by ordinance or resolution are not "land use regulations," as defined in ORS 197.015(11). City of Portland v. Multnomah County, 19 Or LUBA 468 (1990).

26.2.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Goal, Plan or Land Use Regulation. Under ORS 92.100(1), a board of county commissioners' role in signing a final subdivision plat prior to recording is simply to determine that the plat is in proper form for recording and, therefore, county approval of a final subdivision plat pursuant to ORS 92.100(1) is not a statutory test land use decision. Elliott v. Lane County, 18 Or LUBA 871 (1990).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. Where an acknowledged comprehensive plan addresses matters relevant to a state agency's program, the state agency is not required to demonstrate compliance with the plan and with the goals under ORS 197.180(1). Schaefer v. OAB, 81 Or LUBA 819 (2020).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. The fact that an overlay zone that a county applies to lands adjacent to an airport extends into a city and the existence of an intergovernmental agreement between the county and the city regarding airport planning coordination do not give the city "planning authority" over the airport and, therefore, do not make the city an "affected city or county" for purposes of OAR 738-130-0015(1), OAR 731-015-0015(2), and those SAC programs. Schaefer v. OAB, 81 Or LUBA 819 (2020).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. If an electrical permit is "for construction involving a new building, an addition or change in the use of a building," then under OAR 918-001-0045 verification may be required to establish that the "project" is permitted under the local government's land use regulations without "specific land use approval" or that "the project has final land use approval." If any such verifications are actually included as part of an electrical permit decision itself, that may be sufficient to make the electrical permit a land use decision, as ORS 197.015(10)(a) defines that term. Hardesty v. Jackson County, 58 Or LUBA 162 (2009).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. A state agency permit renewal decision that concludes, based on substantial evidence, that the renewed permit does not involve a substantial modification to or intensification of the permitted activity, and thus no land use compatibility statement is required from the affected local government, is not a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction under ORS 197.015(11)(a)(B), because it is not an agency decision with respect to which the agency is required to apply the goals. Tualatin Riverkeepers v. ODEQ, 55 Or LUBA 569 (2008).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. Under former OAR 660-025-0040(2), LUBA has jurisdiction over issues that do not involve compliance with the statewide planning goals. Gordon v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 618 (2007).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review a decision by the Department of Land Conservation and Development approving a county periodic review work task. Colony v. Wallowa County, 46 Or LUBA 586 (2004).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. Generally, a state agency decision is a land use decision that is reviewable by LUBA if the state agency is required to apply the statewide planning goals to its decision. Witham Parts and Equipment Co. v. ODOT, 41 Or LUBA 588 (2002).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. One of the required elements of a state agency coordination program under OAR 660-030-0060(2) and (3) is that the agency identify agency programs that affect land use and must therefore comply with statewide planning goals. Witham Parts and Equipment Co. v. ODOT, 41 Or LUBA 588 (2002).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. Although state agencies are required to carry out their programs that affect land use in a manner that is consistent with both the statewide planning goals and acknowledged comprehensive plans, under OAR 660-030-0065, state agencies generally achieve compliance with statewide planning goals by assuring that their actions are compatible with acknowledged comprehensive plans. Witham Parts and Equipment Co. v. ODOT, 41 Or LUBA 588 (2002).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. Where ODOT's approved state agency coordination program provides that (1) ODOT Class 3 Project decisions must be consistent with comprehensive plans and statewide planning goals, (2) ODOT will make the requisite comprehensive plan and statewide planning goal determination when it "grants design approval for the project," and (3) ODOT grants design approval for a Class 3 Project in a Revised Environmental Assessment, the Revised Environmental Assessment is reviewable by LUBA as a land use decision. Witham Parts and Equipment Co. v. ODOT, 41 Or LUBA 588 (2002).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. If a DSL finding of compatibility is not based on a final land use decision made by the city, LUBA lacks jurisdiction over the appeal from the finding of compatibility. Citizens for Pub. Accountability v. City of Eugene, 31 Or LUBA 395 (1996).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. A DSL finding of compatibility that relies on the separate opinions of two city planners and the city attorney is not based on a final land use decision made by the city. Citizens for Pub. Accountability v. City of Eugene, 31 Or LUBA 395 (1996).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. Although OAR 660-31-035(1), which governs Class A permits, does not require that an affected local government's compatibility determination either be in writing or be supported by written findings in order to be relied upon by a state agency issuing a permit, the absence of a writing raises the question of whether there actually is a local government determination. Citizens for Pub. Accountability v. City of Eugene, 31 Or LUBA 395 (1996).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. Two factors govern whether a local government's determination of compatibility with its acknowledged plan and regulations, made as part of a state agency approval process, is a "final" decision applying the local government's plan and regulations: (1) the state agency must be required by statute, rule or other authority, to assure that the proposal is compatible with the local government plan and regulations; and (2) the state agency must be authorized by statute, rule or other legal authority to rely on the local government's determination. Citizens for Pub. Accountability v. City of Eugene, 31 Or LUBA 395 (1996).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. Petitioner's sole remedy on appeal from a DSL approval of a fill permit, stated in ORS 196.835, is to request a contested case hearing and, if desired, to appeal to the Court of Appeals from the order issued following the hearing. Citizens for Pub. Accountability v. City of Eugene, 31 Or LUBA 395 (1996).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. ORS 517.890 provides that appeals of provisional surface mining permits are governed by the provisions of "ORS 183.310 to 183.550 for appeals from orders in contested cases." Therefore, regardless of whether contested case procedures were observed in all respects during DOGAMI proceedings governed by ORS 183.480(2) and 183.482, jurisdiction to review DOGAMI's decision lies with the court of appeals, not LUBA. Hood River Sand, Gravel & Readi-Mix v. DOGAMI, 25 Or LUBA 668 (1993).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. Where the court of appeals has jurisdiction for initial review of a state agency land use decision, LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review the decision. ORS 198.825(2)(d). Interlachen, Inc. v. City of Fairview, 25 Or LUBA 618 (1993).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. A city resolution initiating a boundary commission proceeding under ORS 199.490 to consider annexation of property is not a final land use decision, where the boundary commission is not authorized to rely on comprehensive plan compliance findings in the city resolution and must itself make a determination of plan compliance. Interlachen, Inc. v. City of Fairview, 25 Or LUBA 618 (1993).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. ORS 196.825(6) explicitly provides that Division of State Lands removal-fill permit decisions are contested case orders and that appeals of such orders are to the court of appeals, pursuant to ORS 183.482. LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review state agency contested case orders. ORS 197.825(2)(d). Stewart v. Division of State Lands, 25 Or LUBA 565 (1993).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. LUBA does not have authority to invalidate a rule promulgated by LCDC. DLCD v. Coos County, 24 Or LUBA 137 (1992).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. LUBA does not have jurisdiction to determine whether an enforcement order exceeds LCDC's statutory authority under ORS 197.320. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 23 Or LUBA 40 (1992).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. The Court of Appeals has exclusive jurisdiction to review final state agency orders in contested case proceedings. Pilling v. LCDC, 22 Or LUBA 188 (1991).

26.2.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. The question of whether a hearings officer appointed by the Department of Land Conservation and Development pursuant to an enforcement order acts on behalf of the local government or on behalf of DLCD is governed by the terms of the enforcement order. Pilling v. LCDC, 22 Or LUBA 188 (1991).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. In making a decision approving an application for a replacement dwelling, a local government is not required to exercise "legal judgment," for purposes of the ministerial exception to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A), where there is nothing for the local government to evaluate by discerning or comparing because the evidentiary support for the local government's conclusion is clear and unambiguous, and does not require the application of any legal principles. Wachal v. Linn County, 81 Or LUBA 57 (2020).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. In determining whether an existing dwelling was "lawfully established," a local government is not required to exercise "legal judgment," for purposes of the ministerial exception to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A), where the local government relies on a 1978 decision approving the existing dwelling. Wachal v. Linn County, 81 Or LUBA 57 (2020).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. To some extent, the ministerial decision exclusion from LUBA's jurisdiction in ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) is separate and distinct from the building permit exclusion from LUBA's jurisdiction in ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B). Madrona Park, LLC v. City of Portland, 80 Or LUBA 26 (2019).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. The statutory distinction between ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) and ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) reflects a recognition that building permits are substantively different from more generic land use decisions and that the legislature intended that LUBA's jurisdiction over building permit decisions would be (1) limited and (2) evaluated under a different standard. Madrona Park, LLC v. City of Portland, 80 Or LUBA 26 (2019).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where a city approves a building permit for a temporary mass shelter under the city's Housing Emergency Ordinance because it satisfies the development standards in the city's Central Employment (EX) zone, where the petitioner argues not that the EX zone development standards that the city applied in approving the building permit are not "clear and objective" but, rather, that the city was required but failed to apply other land use standards in approving the building permit, and where LUBA concludes that none of those other land use standards are applicable approval criteria, the city's decision is subject to the building permit exclusion from LUBA's jurisdiction in ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B). Madrona Park, LLC v. City of Portland, 80 Or LUBA 26 (2019).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A building permit decision may fall within the exception to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) even if, in making it, the local government applied a land use regulation that uses ambiguous terms, where the ambiguous terms describe the desired results achieved by compliance with unambiguous standards. Leyden v. City of Eugene, 80 Or LUBA 41 (2019).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Whether a building permit decision falls within the exception to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) turns on the applicable land use standards and not on comments or arguments in the record that led to the decision. Accordingly, that the record contains staff notes showing that staff exercised discretion to indicate that all land use approvals were received does not take a building permit decision out of the exception where the petitioners do not cite any land use standard that required staff to independently verify whether all applicable land use applications had been approved or whether the previously approved uses were subject to additional approval criteria. Leyden v. City of Eugene, 80 Or LUBA 41 (2019).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. The determination that an issue was decided, or could have been decided, in prior proceedings relates to LUBA's scope of review and not whether LUBA has jurisdiction to review the challenged decision. Similarly, where a local government approves building permits, an argument that the underlying development requires a conditional use permit confuses the jurisdictional issue with the merits of whether the local government committed error in approving the building permits. Leyden v. City of Eugene, 80 Or LUBA 41 (2019).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. That a local government imposed a condition of approval in prior proceedings requiring the applicant to demonstrate compliance with a local off-site parking standard at a later time, that staff initially determined in a subsequent building permit proceeding that compliance was required before building permits could be issued, and that staff later determined in the same proceeding that compliance was not required prior to issuing the building permits do not make the local off-site parking standard applicable to the building permit decision. In addition, even if the condition of approval required compliance at the time of building permit issuance, a dispute over whether a prior condition of approval is satisfied does not give LUBA jurisdiction over a decision that is not otherwise a land use decision. Leyden v. City of Eugene, 80 Or LUBA 41 (2019).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – State Agency Decision. A letter from the director of the Oregon Department of Aviation to petitioners' counsel, stating that, "[o]n October 27, 2011, the [Oregon Aviation Board] approved the [Aurora Airport] Master Plan for submittal to the Federal Aviation Administration" is not a "final decision or determination of a state agency" or a decision "with respect to which the agency [was] required to apply the goals" for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(a)(B) where, regardless of whether the letter itself is incorrect in stating, as a fact, that the Board adopted the Master Plan in 2011, the letter merely conveys facts about events that have already occurred. Friends of French Prairie v. ODA, 80 Or LUBA 524 (2019).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. When a petitioner's appeal is timely filed and the decision concerns the application of a land use regulation, the city's decision to deny a local appeal of a fee waiver does not fall under the ministerial exception and review of the decision is not excepted from LUBA's jurisdiction. Riverview Abbey Mausoleum Co. v. City of Portland, 78 Or LUBA 1057 (2018).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where a county's floodplain development permit standards require the county to evaluate whether proposed structures are authorized by right in the applicable zone, and that evaluation entails some inquiry into the intended use of the structures, if under the circumstances of the case that evaluation requires the exercise of interpretation or legal judgment then the resulting floodplain development permit is a "land use decision" as defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a) subject to LUBA's jurisdiction, and not subject to the exclusion at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A). Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 77 Or LUBA 181 (2018).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where a decision on a floodplain development permit does not require interpretation or the exercise of legal judgment to determine whether development is authorized by right in the underlying zone, e.g., by reference to a list of uses permitted in the zone, or a previously issued, final decision such as a zoning classification decision or nonconforming use verification, then the decision falls within the exclusion at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) and is not a "land use decision" subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 77 Or LUBA 181 (2018).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. That application of code standards required the exercise of legal judgment for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) means only that a county's decision is not excluded from the definition of "land use decision" at ORS 197.015(10)(a), and hence LUBA's review jurisdiction. That conclusion does not compel the conclusion that the county's decision is also a statutory "permit" as defined at ORS 215.402(4) and thus the type of decision for which there is a statutory obligation to provide notice and an opportunity to request a hearing under RS 215.416 or the county's implementation of that statute. Reed v. Jackson County, 77 Or LUBA 527 (2018).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where the county decision at issue in petitioner's appeal merely increased appeal fees for local appeals to account for inflation as mandated by a provision of the county's code, and in approving the code-mandated increase, the county did not "exercise * * * policy or legal judgment," the county's decision falls within the ministerial exception at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) and is therefore not a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 76 Or LUBA 222 (2017).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. LUBA will conclude that a petitioner has not satisfied the burden to establish that LUBA has jurisdiction over an appeal, where the challenged email message from a county commissioner to the petitioner appears to merely reiterate and affirm a decision made more than a year earlier regarding the same request from the petitioner, and the petitioner does not establish that, even if the challenged decision was a new decision, the local government made a decision under land use standards that require interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment. Forbes v. Linn County, 76 Or LUBA 315 (2017)

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where a decision approving property line adjustments was required to determine if the resulting parcels complied with setback requirements, and the applicable setback required "minimal intrusion into forest areas" the decision required the exercise of "policy or legal judgment" and therefore the exception to the definition of "land use decision" and LUBA's review jurisdiction provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) does not apply. Bowerman v. Lane County, 75 Or LUBA 86 (2017).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. The ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) exception for decisions "made under land use standards that do not require interpretation or the exercise of legal judgment" could apply to a county decision concerning an Oregon Department of Motor Vehicles business certificate to operate as a motor vehicle dismantler, even if the decision applies standards that require interpretation or the exercise of legal judgment, so long as those "standards" are not "land use standards." Devlin v. Linn County, 75 Or LUBA 163 (2017).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. ORS 822.110(1)(a) and ORS 822.140(20(b) simply require a local government to determine if property for a proposed motor vehicle dismantler use is zoned for industrial use. Where it is clear that the property is zoned for industrial use, a local government determination that the property is zoned for industrial use does not require "interpretation or the exercise of legal judgment," for purposes of determining whether the ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) exception to the statutory definition of "land use decision" for decisions "made under land use standards that do not require interpretation or the exercise of legal judgment" applies. Devlin v. Linn County, 75 Or LUBA 163 (2017).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where a land use compatibility statement does not identify the land use to be served by proposed storage of groundwater in two reservoirs, and on appeal the applicant does not identify what land use is served by the groundwater, LUBA cannot resolve the dispute over whether the decision is excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A), for decisions applying land use regulations that do not require interpretation or the exercise of legal judgment, because it is not clear what land use regulations apply. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 75 Or LUBA 504 (2017).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where on appeal of a land use compatibility statement (LUCS) concluding that no county land use regulations apply to the proposed storage of groundwater in two reservoirs, the applicant fails to demonstrate that the decision is excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) (for decisions applying land use regulations that do not require interpretation or the exercise of legal judgment), by arguing that the county's land use regulations should be interpreted to exempt construction of the two reservoirs from county approval. Even if that argument is correct, that the applicable land use regulations require interpretation defeats application of the exclusion at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A). Bishop v. Deschutes County, 75 Or LUBA 504 (2017).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A decision does not fall within the ministerial exception at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for decisions that do not require interpretation or the exercise of legal judgment, where the decision required the local government to determine that some arguably applicable standards did not apply to the application and that determination required the exercise of legal judgment. Agnew v. Josephine County, 75 Or LUBA 527 (2017).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A city attorney's determination that the city code provides no right of local appeal over a city planner's letter commenting on a pending land use matter is not a decision that is made under standards that require interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment, where it is clear and unambiguous that the city's code provides a right of local appeal only for decisions that, but for the appeal, would be capable of becoming a final city decision, and does not provide a right of appeal over a comment letter, which is not capable of becoming a final decision of any kind. MGP X Properties, LLC v. City of Sherwood, 74 Or LUBA 476 (2016).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Because the operative terms of two exclusions to the definition of "land use decision" at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) (decision made under standards that do not require interpretation or exercise of discretion) and ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) (building permit decisions issued under clear and objective standards) overlap significantly, LUBA will address responses couched in the language of ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A), even though the motion to dismiss invokes only ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B). McCollough v. City of Eugene, 74 Or LUBA 620 (2016).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where a city issues a zoning classification decision concluding that a probation office for residents of an apartment building is an accessory use to the permitted residential use if the office serves only the residents, a building permit approval for the use proposed in the zoning classification decision does not involve standards that require interpretation or the exercise of legal discretion for purposes of the exclusions to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) or (B), because all interpretation and exercise of legal judgment regarding the nature of the proposed use was accomplished in the unappealed zoning classification decision. McCollough v. City of Eugene, 74 Or LUBA 620 (2016).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where a city's code is ambiguous regarding whether site review is required for a proposed apartment building because it proposes "needed housing," a building permit decision approving the apartment building is not issued under clear and objective standards for purposes of the exclusion to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B). McCollough v. City of Eugene, 74 Or LUBA 620 (2016).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A development standard requiring that a site with frontage on two or more streets take access from the lower classification street, unless "physical conditions preclude locating the access connection" requires interpretation or the exercise of legal judgment and is therefore not clear and objective, for purposes of the exclusion to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B). McCollough v. City of Eugene, 74 Or LUBA 620 (2016).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A development standard requiring that buildings be located in 40 percent of the street frontage width, defined to exclude "non-buildable areas as determined by the planning director," requires interpretation or the exercise of legal judgment and is therefore not clear and objective, for purposes of the exclusion to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B). McCollough v. City of Eugene, 74 Or LUBA 620 (2016).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where the undefined code term "frontage" as applied to a cul-de-sac is ambiguous regarding whether the frontage is measured along the curve of the property line or by drawing a straight line across the cul-de-sac from one property border to another border, the standard is not clear and objective, for purposes of the exclusion to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B). McCollough v. City of Eugene, 74 Or LUBA 620 (2016).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. In determining that four applications to adjust the property lines of five properties, four of which are part of a platted subdivision, could be approved as property line adjustments rather than as a replat of a recorded subdivision, the county interpreted its land use regulations and exercised legal judgment, and therefore the challenged decision is not subject to the ministerial exception at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A). Balsly v. Benton County, 73 Or LUBA 287 (2016).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A decision that only determines the amount of the financial penalty a landowner must pay for violating a condition of land use approval is not a land use decision, where the only land use regulation that is directly applied states only that the amount of the fine will be determined by application of factors set out in a code provision that is itself not a land use regulation. Egge v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 1 (2014).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A decision to proceed to issue a floodplain permit for an asphalt batch plant, while an earlier decision that determined the scope of the batch plant that qualified as a nonconforming use was on appeal to LUBA and subject to reversal or remand, required "interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment," so that the exception to LUBA's jurisdiction set out at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) does not apply and LUBA has jurisdiction to review the floodplain permit decision on the merits. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 70 Or LUBA 163 (2014).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) exempts from the ORS 197.015(10)(a) definition of "land use decision," and from LUBA review, decisions that require no "exercise of policy or legal judgment." Where a county moves to dismiss an appeal, asserting that the ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) exemption applies, and petitioners offer no understandable response to that jurisdictional argument, petitioners fail to carry their burden to establish that LUBA has jurisdiction. Early v. Jackson County, 70 Or LUBA 273 (2014).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A decision does not fall within the ministerial exception at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for decisions that do not require interpretation, where the decision required the local government to determine that some arguably applicable standards did not apply to the application and that determination required the exercise of legal judgment. Del Rio Vineyards LLC v. Jackson County, 68 Or LUBA 553 (2013).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. An application submittal requirement is not a "land use standard" within the meaning of ORS

197.015(10)(b)(A) where it is not connected to any substantive approval requirement. Lazarus v. City of Milwaukie, 67 Or LUBA 226 (2013).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where an apparent ambiguity in the text of a local code is presented by an arguable conflict between two different code provisions and a county decision to approve a farm stand authorized under local legislation that implements ORS 215.213(1)(r) requires the county to resolve that conflict, the exclusion from the statutory definition of "land use decision" at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for a decision "[t]hat is made under land use standards that do not require interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment" does not apply, and the farm stand decision is a land use decision. Keith v. Washington County, 66 Or LUBA 80 (2012).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Many of the statutory criteria for uses allowed under ORS 215.213(1) and 215.283(1) are not clear and objective, but the fact that subsection (1) uses may not be subjected to additional local regulations does not necessarily mean that a decision approving such uses cannot be a land use decision. Keith v. Washington County, 66 Or LUBA 80 (2012).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Under the inquiry required by Tirumali v. City of Portland, 169 Or App 241, 246, 7 P3d 761 (2000), rev den, 331 Or 674, 21 P3d 96 (2001), a building permit does not qualify for either of the exceptions set out in ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) and (B) if the applicable land use regulations are ambiguous. The applicable land use regulations are ambiguous, if they "can plausibly be interpreted in more than one way." Richmond Neighbors v. City of Portland, 66 Or LUBA 464 (2012).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where applicable overlay zone regulations do not specify how they apply to a site that is located partially within the overlay zone and partially outside the overlay zone, and the overlay zones can be applied in more than one plausible way in that circumstance, the overlay zone regulations are ambiguous and a building permit that applies those overlay zone regulations that is appealed to LUBA does not qualify for either of the exceptions to LUBA's review jurisdiction set out at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) and (B) for ministerial decisions that do not require interpretation or are subject to clear and objective standards. Richmond Neighbors v. City of Portland, 66 Or LUBA 464 (2012).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A planning staff decision to charge the local appeal fee required by a city fee schedule falls within the ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) exclusion to the definition of "land use decision," for decisions that do not require interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment, where staff had no discretion under city code or elsewhere to do anything but charge the local appeal fee set out in the city fee schedule. Treadmill Joint Venture v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 209 (2012).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A code enforcement decision determining the location of a floodplain on property does not fall within the ministerial exception at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for decisions that do not require interpretation, where the decision relies on a new floodplain delineation rather than the county's adopted floodplain maps, and determining what source of authority the county can use under its code to locate floodplain boundaries in the context of a code enforcement action requires code interpretation. Bratton v. Washington County, 65 Or LUBA 461 (2012).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Determining whether a proposed building is allowed in the EFU zone under ORS 215.213(1)(e) or 215.283(1)(e) as a building "customarily provided in conjunction with farm use" requires the local government to determine whether the land is currently employed for farm use and whether the proposed building is of the type that is customarily combined with the farm use in question. Because those determinations are not clear and objective, a building permit to approve such a building is not subject to the ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) exception for "building permits issued under clear and objective standards." Bratton v. Washington County, 65 Or LUBA 461 (2012).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Some of the ORS 215.705(1) standards to approve a lot of record dwelling, such as the requirement that the parcel be "lawfully created," that the dwelling comply with applicable comprehensive plan provisions, and that the dwelling be consistent with big-game habitat limitations on residential density, require the exercise of policy or legal judgment, and therefore a decision approving or denying a lot of record dwelling under such standards is a land use decision as defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a), and does not fall within the exception for ministerial decisions at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A). Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Planning department staff exercised considerable legal judgment in concluding that it could rely on a prior planning department decision, which authorized ministerial approval of certain uses, to approve a new industrial use, where that prior planning department decision was appealed and never became final. Because the planning department had to apply land use laws to approve the new industrial use and exercised considerable legal judgment in relying on its prior decision to grant that approval, the ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) exception to the statutory definition of "land use decision" for decisions that do not require the "exercise of * * * legal judgment" does not apply. Hardesty v. Jackson County, 62 Or LUBA 228 (2010).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A permit extension under a standard that requires only a finding that the permit is "current as of January 1, 2010" does not require interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment, and the permit extension is therefore excluded from the definition of "land use decision" under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A). The requirement that the permit be "current as of January 1, 2010" cannot plausibly be interpreted in more than one way. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 62 Or LUBA 471 (2010).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A permit extension under a standard that allows an "additional 12-month month extension" does not require interpretation, as that phrase can be plausibly read in only one way: to allow an extension for an additional 12 month period from the date the permit would otherwise expire. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 62 Or LUBA 471 (2010).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. In the limited circumstance in which an applicant has withdrawn an application that led to a decision that is pending before LUBA, a local government could, consistent with Standard Insurance Co. v. Washington County, 17 Or LUBA 647, 660, rev'd on other grounds, 97 Or App 687, 776 P2d 1315 (1989), adopt a new land use decision that revokes the decision that has been appealed to and is pending before LUBA. That new decision would likely have the effect of rendering the pending appeal of the previous decision moot. Jacobsen v. Douglas County, 62 Or LUBA 461 (2010).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. To demonstrate that that a code requirement for a "minimum of 10 feet between buildings" is not clear and objective for purposes of the ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) exclusion to LUBA's jurisdiction, a petitioner must demonstrate that a key word or phrase in that code provision can be interpreted in more than one way. 621 Company v. City of Eugene, 61 Or LUBA 1 (2010).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A code requirement for a "minimum of 10 feet between buildings" is not ambiguous with respect to whether the 10-foot setback is measured from building features that have been removed, where the petitioner does not identify any text or context plausibly suggesting that the setback should be measured from previously removed building features. 621 Company v. City of Eugene, 61 Or LUBA 1 (2010).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A code provision requiring "articulation" of exterior building walls by incorporating certain design features could be ambiguous with respect to whether a metal awning qualifies as an unlisted type of "articulation." However, where the context of that code provision includes language that specifically refers to awnings as one type of "articulation," no ambiguity exists and the articulation standard is clear and objective, for purposes of the ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) exclusion to LUBA's jurisdiction. 621 Company v. City of Eugene, 61 Or LUBA 1 (2010).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A building permit decision that denies development authorized under a city's code does not fall within the ministerial exceptions to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) or (B), where the decision includes an interpretation of an ambiguous local code provision, to the effect that development restrictions in a prior land use approval under an old version of the city's development code require denial of development that is otherwise permitted outright under the city's current development code. Noble Built Homes, LLC v. City of Silverton, 60 Or LUBA 460 (2010).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where issuing a floodplain review permit requires calculating whether the cumulative effect of a proposed development in a designated floodplain increases the base flood elevation more than one foot, and that calculation can require either interpretation or the exercise of legal judgment, a decision to issue the permit is a land use decision. Johnson v. Jackson County, 59 Or LUBA 94 (2009).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. When a local government dismisses a local appeal of a decision that is a land use decision, LUBA has jurisdiction to review that dismissal even if the dismissal did not require interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment. Golden v. City of Silverton, 58 Or LUBA 399 (2009).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where a local government's decision does not involve the exercise of policy or legal judgment, the decision is not a land use decision and LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review it. ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A). Biggerstaff v. Yamhill County, 58 Or LUBA 476 (2009).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where a local code provision applicable to property line adjustments requires a determination that a parcel was "lawfully created" and as part of that determination, the county must determine whether "the creation of [a] parcel was in accordance with applicable laws in effect at the time," it is likely those determinations require the exercise of legal judgment and as such, are land use decisions under ORS 197.015(10). Davison v. Benton County, 58 Or LUBA 684 (2009).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Code standards that allow modification of a permit condition of approval where the applicant demonstrates that an "unanticipated circumstance arising from a physical condition or off site" causes a "complication" that "prevents performance of the condition of approval" require interpretation and/or the exercise of legal judgment, and thus decisions under those standards do not fall under the ORS 197.015(11)(b) ministerial exceptions to LUBA's jurisdiction. Neelund v. Josephine County, 52 Or LUBA 683 (2006).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A determination that no local right of appeal exists because the appealed decision did not require discretion and is not a "land use decision" requires interpretation and exercise of legal judgment, and thus does not fall within the ministerial exception to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(11)(b)(B). Hoschek v. Tillamook County, 52 Or LUBA 793 (2006).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A planning commission decision that purports to "correct" a "clerical error" in an earlier subdivision approval by changing the 12 month expiration deadline to a 24 month deadline does not fall within the ministerial exception to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(11)(b)(B), where the planning commission exercised discretion and legal judgment in implicitly determining that it had the authority to "correct" the deadline after its expiration. Hoschek v. Tillamook County, 52 Or LUBA 793 (2006).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Whether a building permit qualifies for the "clear and objective" standards exception to LUBA's jurisdiction depends on the wording of the standards themselves, not the quality or quantity of the evidence in the record. Jebousek v. City of Newport, 51 Or LUBA 93 (2006).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Determining whether "there is reason to believe that a potential geologic hazard does exist" is a discretionary determination, and when that determination is made as part of a decision to issue a building permit, the building permit is a land use decision subject to LUBA review. Jebousek v. City of Newport, 51 Or LUBA 93 (2006).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Petitioners fail to demonstrate that an improvement agreement specifying how public improvements required by a preliminary plat approval will be financed and constructed is a land use decision or limited land use decision, where petitioners do not establish that the city applied land use approval criteria or exercised discretion in approving the agreement. Bellingham v. City of King City, 50 Or LUBA 683 (2005).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A comprehensive plan goal that requires that a city determine whether "there is a reason to believe that a potential [hazard] does exist" and, if so, to require "a site specific investigation by a registered geologist or engineer * * * prior to development" is not a clear and objective standard. Where the city is required to apply that plan goal in issuing a building permit, the building permit does not qualify for the ministerial exception to LUBA's review jurisdiction over land use decisions and limited land use decision. Jebousek v. City of Newport, 50 Or LUBA 724 (2005).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A decision under ORS 227.175(1), 227.180(1) and implementing local regulations to increase land use application and local appeal fees does not fall within the ministerial exception to LUBA's jurisdiction, where in doing so the city necessarily makes policy choices whether to charge the maximum allowed under statute or something less, and whether to subsidize some types of applications and appeals, but not others. Doty v. City of Bandon, 49 Or LUBA 411 (2005).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A local government ordinance that defines "driveways" in terms of "travel distance" is ambiguous and subject to different interpretations where the endpoint for measuring that travel distance is unclear. Therefore the local government exercises policy or legal judgment in making its interpretation, and a decision that interprets the ambiguous ordinance is not a ministerial decision. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 49 Or LUBA 719 (2005).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where code standards for a lot line adjustment require submission of deeds, a survey drawing, proof that taxes are paid, and verification that the city has accepted any water or sewer line construction, and the petitioner fails to identify anything about those standards that requires interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment, a decision approving a lot line adjustment under those standards is not a "land use decision" as defined at ORS 197.015(10). Jewett v. City of Bend, 48 Or LUBA 16 (2004).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A decision that approves a "property line adjustment" as that term is defined in ORS chapter 92 will usually fall within the ministerial exception to LUBA's jurisdiction. However, determining whether a particular lot configuration in fact qualifies as property line adjustment, as opposed to something else such as a partition or replat, may require interpretation and exercise of legal judgment. If so, the decision does not fall within the ministerial exception, and is subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. South v. City of Portland, 48 Or LUBA 555 (2005).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Absent some demonstration that recording a partition plat with the county clerk requires the application of statewide planning goals, comprehensive plan policies or implementing regulations, a county clerk's act of recording a signed partition plat is not a land use decision or a limited land use decision. Hammer v. Clackamas County, 45 Or LUBA 32 (2003).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A county counsel stipulation in a mandamus proceeding zoning of property required the exercise of policy or legal judgment because the legal effect of an LCDC order on the property's zoning was not clear. Flying J, Inc. v. Marion County, 47 Or LUBA 637 (2004).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A floodplain permit does not fall within the ORS 197.015(10)(b) ministerial exception to the definition of "land use decision," where interpretation is required to determine whether comprehensive plan policies prohibiting "development" on the property prior to master plan approval apply to the floodplain permit and to determine whether the fill approved by the floodplain permit is within the scope of "development" subject to those policies. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 566 (2004).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Land use regulations that allow "on-site" signs but prohibit "off-site" signs are not clear and objective, as applied to a proposal to construct a sign advertising a business located on a different parcel than the sign, and a building permit decision approving such a sign as a permitted use is not subject to the ORS 197.015(10(b)(B) exception to LUBA's jurisdiction. Frymark v. Tillamook County, 45 Or LUBA 486 (2003).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. LUBA has jurisdiction to review a hearings officer decision on reconsideration that determines the location of a zoning boundary, when in the course of making that decision the hearings officer is obliged to address a challenge to the hearings officer's authority to review the matter because the underlying LUBA appeal had been dismissed and the hearings officer concludes that he does have that authority in part because the local zoning code does not prohibit such review. 6710 LLC v. City of Portland, 43 Or LUBA 177 (2002).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where the question of whether billboards are allowed in the city is not unequivocally answered by the language of the city code and requires interpretation, a city decision denying a billboard application is not subject to the ministerial exception to the statutory definition of "land use decision." West Coast Media v. City of Gladstone, 43 Or LUBA 585 (2002).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss based on an argument that the challenged decision is a ministerial decision, where the decision interprets and applies a local land use ordinance adopted to implement a statute and that interpretation requires the exercise of discretion. Demlow v. City of Hillsboro, 39 Or LUBA 307 (2001).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A city determination that one of two arguably applicable ordinances applies to a building permit requires the exercise of legal judgment, and is a land use decision subject to LUBA jurisdiction. Gagnier v. City of Gladstone, 38 Or LUBA 858 (2000).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Even if an implicit exception for nondiscretionary limited land use decisions can be read into the definition at ORS 197.015(12), final plat approval of a planned unit development may be discretionary. Depending upon the particular circumstances of each preliminary plat approval and attendant conditions, the determination of whether final plat approval should be granted may involve the exercise of significant factual and legal judgment. Bauer v. City of Portland, 38 Or LUBA 715 (2000).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A decision to extend a previously granted conditional use permit requires the exercise of policy or legal judgment, and therefore does not qualify as a ministerial decision under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A), where the decision determines that a code "substantial construction" requirement will be met by obtaining all required permits and that the prior permit can be revived and extended after it has become void. Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 38 Or LUBA 375 (2000).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A planning director's decision stating that a proposed driving range is a permitted use and not subject to land use review is a "land use decision" subject to LUBA review because the decision is subject to standards that require the interpretation and the exercise of factual judgment to determine whether, under the ordinance, the driving range is a permitted use. Davis v. City of Ashland, 37 Or LUBA 224 (1999).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A planning director's letter determining that a driving range is a permitted use is the decision that triggers the 21-day appeal timeline to LUBA, not the date the developer began construction. Davis v. City of Ashland, 37 Or LUBA 224 (1999).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where a county makes a land use decision in which it interprets its zoning ordinance and comprehensive plan and, based on that interpretation, issues a separate decision denying a request for a building permit, the second decision does not apply a comprehensive plan or land use regulation and therefore is not a land use decision under ORS 197.015(10)(a). Columbia Hills Development Co. v. Columbia County, 36 Or LUBA 691 (1999).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A decision that disposal of sewage effluent by applying it to farm land constitutes a "utility facility necessary for public service" within the meaning of ORS 215.283(1)(d) requires the exercise of policy or legal judgment and for that reason the decision does not qualify for the exception to the statutory definition of land use decision provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for certain ministerial decisions. Friends of the Creek v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 562 (1999).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A decision that disposal of sewage effluent by applying it to farm land constitutes a "farm use" within the meaning of ORS 215.203 requires the exercise of policy or legal judgment and for that reason the decision does not qualify for the exception to the statutory definition of "land use decision" provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for certain ministerial decisions. Friends of the Creek v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 562 (1999).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A decision that a proposal to transport treated effluent to an EFU-zoned parcel and apply that effluent to poplar trees constitutes a "farm use" within the meaning of ORS 215.283(1)(d) requires the exercise of policy or legal judgment and for that reason the decision does not qualify for the exception to the statutory definition of land use decision provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for certain ministerial decisions. Friends of Clean Living v. Polk County, 36 Or LUBA 544 (1999).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where the relationship between two decisions is not clear from the parties' memoranda, LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss and defer a ruling on jurisdiction until after the parties' briefs are filed and an opportunity for oral argument is provided. Columbia Hills Development Co. v. Columbia County, 35 Or LUBA 737 (1998).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A property line adjustment decision is a land use decision where complex factual and legal circumstances of the case require the exercise of legal judgment. Goddard v. Jackson County, 34 Or LUBA 402 (1998).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where an application for a development permit requires a site plan review, is processed according to "Type III" review procedures and involves discretionary application of policy and legal judgment, the local decision is not a ministerial decision under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A). Murphy Citizens Advisory Committee v. Josephine County, 33 Or LUBA 882 (1997).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Generally, where a local government approves a street improvement project, and in a later decision awards a contract to build the improvement, the reviewable decision is the initial decision to approve the project. Knapp v. City of Jacksonville, 33 Or LUBA 457 (1997).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. When a comprehensive plan provides for converting two specific sections of a street into a collector street under established standards, there is no additional interpretation or policy judgment required, and the award of a construction contract for the project is not a reviewable decision under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A). Knapp v. City of Jacksonville, 33 Or LUBA 457 (1997).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A grading permit, issued under clear and objective standards, is not a land use decision even if the permit substantively violates a prior unappealed farm management plan. Ceniga v. Clackamas County, 33 Or LUBA 261 (1997).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A fill permit issued by the city building division is excluded from the definition of a land use decision under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) where it involves the application of clear and objective standards that do not require interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment. Fechtig v. City of Albany, 31 Or LUBA 441 (1996).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. When an interpretation of the city's land use regulations and an exercise of legal judgment are required to determine which criteria apply to lot line adjustments, the city's decision does not fall under the exclusion from LUBA's jurisdiction stated in ORS 197.015(10)(b). Thompson v. City of St. Helens, 30 Or LUBA 339 (1996).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A major partition decision is a land use decision under ORS 197.015(10) where a county's major partition regulations provide for the exercise of policy or legal judgment, even when the county applies only minimal judgment to the application. Sparks v. Tillamook County, 30 Or LUBA 325 (1996).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. That a county is acting to avoid a breach of contract has no bearing on whether its decision to modify a conditional use permit is a discretionary land use decision. Franklin v. Deschutes County, 30 Or LUBA 33 (1995).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A hearings officer's decision to approve a zone change and planned unit development is a land use decision. Therefore, a planning department decision not to accept petitioner's local appeal of that decision is not subject to the ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) exception to LUBA's jurisdiction for "ministerial" decisions. Ramsey v. City of Portland, 29 Or LUBA 139 (1995).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. The exception to LUBA's jurisdiction in ORS 197.015(10)(b) does not apply where applicable local code standards concerning the timely filing of a local appeal require interpretation and the exercise of legal judgment. Hick v. Marion County, 28 Or LUBA 782 (1994).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where petitioner's claim is that a building permit violates clear and objective standards, petitioner fails to establish a basis for LUBA's jurisdiction over the appeal. Broderson v. Jackson County, 28 Or LUBA 645 (1995).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Petitioner's argument that a decision to approve a building permit is a land use decision because the decision requires the application of a LCDC enforcement order fails where the enforcement order does not establish land use standards for the issuance of building permits. Broderson v. Jackson County, 28 Or LUBA 645 (1995).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where conditions of a prior nonforest dwelling approval do not require a determination of compliance with any discretionary land use standard, the fact that a building permit may only be issued after it is determined that such conditions are satisfied provides no basis for LUBA's jurisdiction. Broderson v. Jackson County, 28 Or LUBA 645 (1995).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Determining whether the local code allows a proposed wastewater treatment facility as part of, or incidental to, the uses that it serves, or whether it requires the proposed wastewater treatment facility to be regulated as a separate use, requires interpretation and judgment. Therefore, the exception to LUBA's jurisdiction provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) does not apply. Knee Deep Cattle Company v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 288 (1994).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where a planning director exercises discretion in applying the local code and correctly rejecting an attempted local appeal as untimely filed, the decision to reject the attempted local appeal is a land use decision, and the proper disposition of a LUBA appeal challenging that decision is to affirm the decision rather than to dismiss the LUBA appeal. Kevedy, Inc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 227 (1994).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. The limited land use decisions described by ORS 197.015(12)(b) fall somewhere between (1) outright permitted uses for which approval involves no discretionary review; and (2) uses allowed subject to application of discretionary approval standards that may require denial of the use altogether (as opposed to discretionary approval standards that only regulate the use's physical characteristics). Fechtig v. City of Albany, 27 Or LUBA 480 (1994).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A local government decision approving a building permit is a "land use decision" subject to review by LUBA if it involves the application of the goals, a comprehensive plan or a land use regulation and does not qualify as a ministerial decision under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) or (B). Sullivan v. City of Ashland, 27 Or LUBA 411 (1994).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A local government decision maker exercises both policy and legal judgment in determining whether the raising of large numbers of pigs in a confined area is a use "similar" to farm uses permitted in an EFU zone. Therefore, such a decision is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Derry v. Douglas County, 26 Or LUBA 25 (1993).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where a local government exercised significant legal and factual judgment in determining whether a proposed dwelling will replace an "existing dwelling," the exception established by ORS

197.015(10)(b)(B) does not apply, and the challenged decision is a "land use decision" subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Heceta Water District v. Lane County, 24 Or LUBA 402 (1993).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A county decision approving a dwelling on a lot or parcel that is a woodlot capable of producing 10,000 dollars or more in average gross annual income, as provided in ORS 215.213(2)(b)(B), is "discretionary" and is a "permit," as defined by ORS 215.402(4). McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 24 Or LUBA 187 (1992).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where a determination of whether a local appeal document meets jurisdictional requirements of the local code requires interpretation and the exercise of factual judgment, a local government decision to dismiss the local appeal is not excepted from the definition of "land use decision" under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A). Breivogel v. Washington County, 23 Or LUBA 143 (1992).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A decision approving a building permit is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction only if the building permit approval decision involves the application of the goals, comprehensive plan or a land use regulation and does not qualify as a ministerial decision under ORS 197.015(10)(b). Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where the zoning standards under which conceptual development approval was granted are changed to disallow the use conceptually approved, and standards applicable to a second development approval require the proposed use be allowed in the zone, the uncertainty concerning which standards apply to the second application under ORS 215.428(3), makes approval of second application not subject to the exception to LUBA's jurisdiction established by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A). Tuality Lands Coalition v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 319 (1991).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. After 1989 amendments, ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) and (C) parallel the interpretation of former ORS 197.015(10)(b) expressed in Doughton v. Douglas County, 82 Or App 444, 449, 728 P2d 887 (1986), rev den, 303 Or 74 (1987). However, the current statutory language may narrow the exception for nondiscretionary decisions expressed in Doughton, because it does not expressly require the exercise of significant judgment. Hollywood Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 22 Or LUBA 789 (1991).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Where the local code does not contain a definition of "medical clinic," the exception to LUBA's jurisdiction provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(C) does not apply to a decision that a proposed use is a "medical clinic," because there is no single "common knowledge" definition of "medical clinic" which can be applied without interpretation or the exercise of factual and legal judgment. Hollywood Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 22 Or LUBA 789 (1991).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A decision is "ministerial" rather than "discretionary" if it does not entail the exercise of any significant legal or factual judgment. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 21 Or LUBA 515 (1991).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. A city's determination that a medical waste incinerator is similar to other uses allowed in its General Industrial zone involved sufficient discretion to make it a "permit" as defined by statute. That the determination may be correct has no bearing on whether the determination is a permit. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 21 Or LUBA 515 (1991).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Whether a proposed dwelling (1) is permitted outright in an EFU zone, (2) is "accessory" to an underlying nonconforming use, and (3) complies with ORS 215.296(1), are determinations which require "interpretation or the exercise of factual, policy or legal judgment" within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) and (C). Komning v. Grant County, 20 Or LUBA 481 (1990).

26.2.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Ministerial Exception. Decisions that would otherwise be subject to LUBA review jurisdiction are exempt if they are "nondiscretionary or minimally discretionary applications of established criteria." Doughton v. Douglas County, 82 Or App 444, 728 P2d 887 (1986), rev den, 303 Or 74 (1987). Kirpal Light Satsang v. Douglas County, 18 Or LUBA 651 (1990).

26.2.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Urban Division Exception. A statutory change in the tribunal with appellate jurisdiction affects the legal rights and obligations of parties arising out of past transactions, and retrospective application of such a change in jurisdictional statutes to pending appeals is not appropriate. Schultz v. City of Grants Pass, 22 Or LUBA 457 (1991).

26.2.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Urban Division Exception. Where LUBA lacks jurisdiction over an appeal challenging a decision approving a land division within an urban growth boundary under the jurisdictional statutes existing on the date the notice of intent to appeal is filed, LUBA does not obtain jurisdiction to consider such an appeal when legislation giving LUBA jurisdiction over appeals of such decisions becomes effective while the improperly filed appeal is pending. Schultz v. City of Grants Pass, 22 Or LUBA 457 (1991).

26.2.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Urban Division Exception. The takings clause of the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution is not a "land use standard" within the meaning of former ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B), which provides that the "land use decisions" over which LUBA has review jurisdiction do not include urban land divisions that are "consistent with land use standards." Schultz v. City of Grants Pass, 22 Or LUBA 457 (1991).

26.2.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Urban Division Exception. A local code provision requiring that partitions comply with "applicable * * * State and Federal Laws," does not make all state and federal statutes and constitutional provisions which are implicated in some way by a particular partition decision "land use standards" within the meaning of former ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B). Schultz v. City of Grants Pass, 22 Or LUBA 457 (1991).

26.2.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Urban Division Exception. The exception to LUBA's jurisdiction provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) for urban land divisions does not apply where LUBA determines the challenged decision violates applicable land use standards. Southwood Homeowners Assoc. v. City of Philomath, 21 Or LUBA 260 (1991).

26.2.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Urban Division Exception. Where a decision approving an urban division of land is challenged, LUBA lacks jurisdiction under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) only if the decision is consistent with land use standards. Therefore, before LUBA can determine whether it has jurisdiction over such an appeal, it must first determine whether the challenged decision is consistent with land use standards. Walton v. Clackamas County, 21 Or LUBA 69 (1991).

26.2.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Urban Division Exception. Where governing land use standards are not amended or modified, the circuit court, not LUBA, has jurisdiction to determine whether an urban subdivision or partition decision violates applicable approval standards. Sully v. City of Ashland, 20 Or LUBA 428 (1991).

26.2.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Urban Division Exception. The exception to LUBA's jurisdiction under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) for urban divisions of land is limited to cases which simply apply existing standards. It does not apply where plan or zone changes or variances are also granted as part of the decision. Neither does the exception apply where, in addition to granting tentative subdivision approval, the local government modifies applicable approval standards through a planned unit development approval. Bartels v. City of Portland, 20 Or LUBA 303 (1990).

26.2.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Urban Division Exception. Because ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) is in a subsection of the statute which creates exceptions to LUBA's jurisdiction, LUBA will assume the legislature intended ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) to be a workable exception, and will not interpret ORS

197.015(10)(b)(B) to require that LUBA conduct a substantive review of urban partition and subdivision decisions to determine whether LUBA has jurisdiction to conduct such a review in the first place. Southwood Homeowners Assoc. v. City of Philomath, 20 Or LUBA 279 (1990).

26.2.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Urban Division Exception. The exception to LUBA's jurisdiction created by 197.015(10)(b)(B) is confined to urban partition and subdivision decisions which merely apply, rather than modify or amend, applicable land use standards. Southwood Homeowners Assoc. v. City of Philomath, 20 Or LUBA 279 (1990).

26.2.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Urban Division Exception. ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) removes from LUBA's review authority any decision approving or denying a subdivision or partition within an acknowledged urban growth boundary, where the challenged decision does not also approve, or is not made in conjunction with, an amendment or modification of a comprehensive plan or land use regulation provision, regardless of whether the decision is made under objective review criteria. Meadowbrook Development v. City of Seaside, 20 Or LUBA 18 (1990).

26.2.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Urban Division Exception. The exception to LUBA's jurisdiction established by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) is limited to decisions concerning subdivisions located within an acknowledged, urban growth boundary. Cecil v. City of Jacksonville, 19 Or LUBA 446 (1990).

26.2.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Urban Division Exception. County approval of a partition within an urban growth boundary, without concurrent amendment of the comprehensive plan or land use regulations, is a decision "consistent with land use standards" and, under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B), is not a "land use decision" subject to LUBA review. Parmenter v. Wallowa County, 19 Or LUBA 271 (1990).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. A zone verification is not a statutory land use "permit" as defined at ORS 227.160(2)(b), and the city is not required to provide notice of the decision or opportunity for a local appeal of the decision. However, a zone verification decision is subject to LUBA review and a 21-day appeal period. ORS 227.175(11); ORS 197.830(5)(b). Leyden v. City of Eugene, 79 Or LUBA 151 (2019).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. When a hearings officer makes a zone classification decision, such a Zone Verification, the Zone Verification is a final land use decision. Thus, such decisions are appealable to LUBA "in the same manner as a limited land use decision." ORS 227.175(11)(b); ORS 197.830(5). LUBA has exclusive jurisdiction to review land use decisions and limited land use decisions. ORS 197.825. The fact that a zone verification is not a statutory permit removes certain procedural requirements that apply to statutory permits, such as notice and the opportunity for a hearing. However, the fact that a zone verification is not a statutory permit does not mean that a zone verification is not a final land use decision for purposes of LUBA review, including the general prohibition on collateral attack. Richardi v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 299 (2018).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. A limited land use decision may be approved through a notice and comment process, and a local government may provide a right of local appeal. ORS 197.195(5). In such an appeal, the appeal hearing may be based on the existing administrative record or new evidence may be allowed. Should an appeal hearing allow the introduction of new evidence, the hearing is subject to the quasi-judicial hearing procedures set forth in ORS 197.763. In such a situation, a hearings officer may properly consider new evidence and analysis offered by the local government, as well as a petitioner's response, and LUBA's review includes the hearings officer's consideration of that evidence and those issues. Hill v. City of Portland, 77 Or LUBA 317 (2018).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Limited Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. Petitioner has not demonstrated that a city's decision to remove 35 trees from a 33-acre city park will have a significant qualitative or quantitative impact on present or future land uses. The decision does not alter any of the land uses allowed in the park's zone or any of the present or future land uses in the park, and the trees themselves are not land "uses" in any legally cognizable sense. Carlson v. City of Brookings, 77 Or LUBA 497 (2018).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. Where respondents respond to petitioner's argument that a proposed development violates comprehensive plan standards by arguing in their response brief that the challenged decision is a "limited land use decision" and the plan policies therefore do not apply under ORS 197.195(1) because the plan policies have not been incorporated into the city's land use regulations, and petitioner does not respond to that argument at oral argument or seek permission to respond in a reply brief, petitioner's assumption that the plan policies apply is inadequate to state a basis for reversal or remand. LO 138 LLC v. City of Lake Oswego, 71 Or LUBA 195 (2015).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. Where an application for city subdivision approval includes a request for planned unit development approval that allows the property to be divided in ways that the property could not be divided without planned unit development approval, the decision granting planned unit development subdivision approval is a land use decision, not a limited land use decision. Wasserburg v. City of Dunes City, 52 Or LUBA 70 (2006).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. A decision approving a manufactured home subdivision is a limited land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. That the decision includes a condition of approval that imposes or references system development charges does not mean that the decision is excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction as a "fiscal" decision under the reasoning in State Housing Council v. City of Lake Oswego, 48 Or App 525, 617 P2d 655 (1980). D & B Home Investments v. City of Donald, 51 Or LUBA 1 (2006).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. The definition of "limited land use decision" in ORS 197.015(12)(a) does not distinguish between preliminary and final plat approval. Both types of approval may be final decisions or determinations concerning approval or denial of a subdivision, and thus limited land use decisions subject to LUBA review. Bauer v. City of Portland, 38 Or LUBA 715 (2000).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. Even if an implicit exception for nondiscretionary limited land use decisions can be read into the definition at ORS 197.015(12), final plat approval of a planned unit development may be discretionary. Depending upon the particular circumstances of each preliminary plat approval and attendant conditions, the determination of whether final plat approval should be granted may involve the exercise of significant factual and legal judgment. Bauer v. City of Portland, 38 Or LUBA 715 (2000).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. Because the city's decision to allow a continuation of an existing conditional use permit is not a limited land use decision under ORS 197.015, a subsequent statement of appeal rights in a notice letter provided by the city is not dispositive of whether petitioner's appeal was timely filed. Lloyd Dist. Community Assoc. v. City of Portland, 30 Or LUBA 390 (1996).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. Where a decision to eliminate conditions of approval requires local review under code zone change standards, the decision is a land use decision, and not a limited land use decision. Lamm v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 468 (1995).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. The limited land use decisions described by ORS 197.015(12)(b) fall somewhere between (1) outright permitted uses for which approval involves no discretionary review; and (2) uses allowed subject to application of discretionary approval standards that may require denial of the use altogether (as opposed to discretionary approval standards that only regulate the use's physical characteristics). Fechtig v. City of Albany, 27 Or LUBA 480 (1994).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. A local government wishing to identify in its plan or land use regulations uses qualifying for approval as limited land use decisions under ORS 197.015(12)(b) must make it clear the discretionary approval standards applied to such uses may only be applied to regulate the use's physical characteristics and may not be used to deny approval of the use altogether. Fechtig v. City of Albany, 27 Or LUBA 480 (1994).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. A decision approving a tentative subdivision plat for land within an urban growth boundary is a "limited land use decision." ORS 197.015(12)(a). Barrick v. City of Salem, 27 Or LUBA 417 (1994).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. A city's failure to incorporate comprehensive plan provisions applicable to limited land use decisions into its land use regulations, as required by ORS 197.195(1), means only that applicable plan provisions continue to apply to limited land use decisions. It has no bearing on whether a development proposal meets the ORS 197.015(12) definition of "limited land use decision." Shelter Resources, Inc. v. City of Cannon Beach, 27 Or LUBA 229 (1994).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. A letter by a city planning director concerning the application of code provisions relevant to the validity of tentative plan approvals and approval of final plats, for certain subdivisions within an urban growth boundary, is a limited land use decision. Forest Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 215 (1994).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. Where no land use standards govern a local government decision to allow the applicant to abandon a permit application that led to a permit decision remanded by LUBA and instead to submit a new application governed by amended approval standards, the decision does not, by itself, constitute a land use decision or limited land use decision. Fechtig v. City of Albany, 27 Or LUBA 666 (1994).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. Where the petition for review alleges the challenged decision applies provisions of a local government plan and land use regulations, it is not fatal to LUBA's jurisdiction that the petition for review improperly characterizes the decision as a "land use decision" rather than a "limited land use decision." Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 25 Or LUBA 327 (1993).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. To constitute a "limited land use decision" under ORS 197.015(12), the challenged local government decision must relate to "a site within an urban growth boundary" (UGB). For purposes of determining whether a challenged decision is a limited land use decision, there is no established UGB until the local government's plan and land use regulations are completely acknowledged. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 25 Or LUBA 327 (1993).

26.2.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Limited Land Use Decision. A decision granting subdivision final plat approval is reviewable by LUBA as a limited land use decision. ORS 197.015(12)(a); 197.825(1). Warren v. City of Aurora, 23 Or LUBA 507 (1992).

26.2.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Transportation Facility Exception. A county's decision to approve the construction of a bridge and related trail improvements in an EFU zone is both a land use decision and a "permit," as defined in ORS 215.402(4), where LUBA previously concluded that approval of the transportation project including the bridge and related trail improvements is a conditional use in the EFU zone and where the construction of the bridge and related trail improvements constitutes the "development of land" within the meaning of ORS 215.402(4). Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 81 Or LUBA 427 (2020).

26.2.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Transportation Facility Exception. LUBA will reject an argument that the construction of a pedestrian bridge and related trail approaches proposed as a part of a trail development project qualifies as a "fire service facility" under ORS 215.283(1)(s) where the record does not support the county's assertion that the intended use of the bridge is for fire protection. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 81 Or LUBA 427 (2020).

26.2.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Transportation Facility Exception. ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D), which excludes from the definition of "land use decision" a local government decision regarding transportation facilities, encompasses technical decisions regarding operation, maintenance, etc., of transportation facilities that are planned and authorized under the plan and zoning code. The exclusion does not encompass decisions that adopt or modify plan or zoning code text regarding transportation facilities. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 76 Or LUBA 15 (2017).

26.2.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Transportation Facility Exception. A city decision concerning a request to place an encroachment within the right-of-way bordering a pedestrian sidewalk is a decision that concerns the "maintenance" and "preservation" of the sidewalk, a city transportation facility, and thus falls within the exclusion to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D). Bristol Creek Homes and Development v. City of Portland, 74 Or LUBA 138 (2016).

26.2.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Transportation Facility Exception. ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D) excludes from the definition of "land use decision" a decision that determines the maintenance, etc., of a transportation facility that is "otherwise authorized by and consistent with the comprehensive plan and land use regulations." A transportation facility may be "authorized by and consistent with the comprehensive plan and land use regulations" for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D) notwithstanding that the facility was previously approved subject to waivers or variances from applicable standards. Bristol Creek Homes and Development v. City of Portland, 74 Or LUBA 138 (2016).

26.2.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Transportation Facility Exception. A decision to place barricades in a city street to restrict vehicular access is a decision related to the "operation" of a transportation facility for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D). 7th Street Station, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 58 Or LUBA 93 (2008).

26.2.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Transportation Facility Exception. The exception to LUBA's jurisdiction, at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D), for a decision that "determines final engineering design, construction, operation, maintenance, repair or preservation of a transportation facility that is otherwise authorized by and consistent with the comprehensive plan and land use regulations" is ambiguous, as it is not clear whether what must be "authorized by and consistent with" the plan and regulations is both the design, construction, operation, etc., and the transportation facility, or only the transportation facility. 7th Street Station, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 58 Or LUBA 93 (2008).

26.2.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Transportation Facility Exception. A decision to close a city street to vehicular traffic is subject to the exception to LUBA's jurisdiction, at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D) for decisions that determine the "operation * * * of a transportation facility that is otherwise authorized by and consistent with" the city's comprehensive plan and regulations, even if the plan and code include no specific authorization for the city to close the street. It is the "transportation facility" that must be authorized by and consistent with the plan and code, not routine decisions regarding how existing streets will operate. 7th Street Station, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 58 Or LUBA 93 (2008).

26.2.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Transportation Facility Exception. Once a city has adopted an access management plan (AMP) as part of its transportation system plan (TSP), future city or ODOT actions to implement the projects described in the AMP might qualify as the type of actions that are exempted from LUBA's review jurisdiction by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D) because those actions are the kinds of actions described in ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D) and they are "authorized by and consistent with" the city's TSP. However, where the city has neither adopted the AMP as part of the TSP or established that the projects described in the AMP are "authorized by and consistent with" the city's TSP, a city decision to approve the AMP is not exempted from LUBA's review jurisdiction by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D). Rhodes v. City of Talent, 47 Or LUBA 574 (2004).

26.2.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Transportation Facility Exception. Under OAR 660-012-0040(4), LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review "timing and financing provisions" in a transportation financing program. However, LUBA does have jurisdiction to review a city decision that determines that a particular facility alternative is consistent with its transportation system plan, notwithstanding that such a decision may be driven in part by timing or financing considerations. Ramsey v. City of Philomath, 46 Or LUBA 241 (2004).

26.2.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Transportation Facility Exception. Where a city imposes conditions of approval requiring external street improvements as part of a land use decision approving a conditional use permit, the aspects of the decision requiring external street improvements are not subject to the exception to the definition of land use decision at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D), notwithstanding that if the required improvements were imposed in a separate decision not involving conditional use approval, those improvements might fit within the exception. Terra v. City of Newport, 36 Or LUBA 582 (1999).

26.2.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Transportation Facility Exception. Decisions which would otherwise be statutory land use decisions, but which involve the design, construction, operation, maintenance or repair of roads, are exempt from the statutory definition of land use decision and, therefore, not subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Leathers v. Washington County, 31 Or LUBA 43 (1996).

26.2.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Transportation Facility Exception. Local government decisions granting design review approval for segments of a light rail transit (LRT) line which do not approve final engineering design or construction of the LRT facility are not within the exception to the definition of "land use decision" established by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(D). Tri-County Metro. Trans. Dist. v. City of Beaverton, 28 Or LUBA 78 (1994).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. An appeal of a LUCS for a DEQ permit for a natural gas pipeline is excluded from LUBA's review under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(ii) and (iii) where the LUCS correctly determines that no future land use reviews are required for some portions of the project and that other portions of the project require future land use reviews, and where the LUCS does not purport to approve or deny those reviews. McCaffree v. City of North Bend, 81 Or LUBA 32 (2020).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. The Land Conservation and Development Commission has adopted OAR 660-031-0026, which identifies state agency permits that must be compatible with local land use regulations, and OAR 660-031-0035, which authorizes state agencies to rely on local land use compatibility statements when issuing such permits. Oregon Liquor Control Commission decisions regarding returnable bottle redemption centers are not listed at OAR 660-031-0026, and therefore a local government planner's checkmark on an OLCC form indicating a redemption center is allowed in the applicable zone is not a land use compatibility statement. Glenwood 2006, LLC v. City of Beaverton, 76 Or LUBA 162 (2017).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. To invoke the exclusions to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H), for certain land use compatibility statements (LUCS) decisions, the proponent must demonstrate that the LUCS decision correctly categorized the proposed land use in a manner that falls within one of three categories. Where the challenged LUCS decision does not identify or categorize the proposed land use at all, LUBA cannot determine if the decision correctly categorizes the proposed land use, and thus determine whether the exclusions at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H) apply. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 75 Or LUBA 504 (2017).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(iii) excludes from LUBA's jurisdiction a land use compatibility statement (LUCS) that identifies required local land use reviews that the applicant must obtain in order to carry out the proposed activity. However, where a LUCS suggests that the applicant could seek an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 5 in order to eliminate the requirement to obtain a permit to develop within a Goal 5 resource area, the suggestion to obtain a Goal 5 exception does not identify a type of required local land use review for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(iii). Todd v. Clackamas County, 73 Or LUBA 369 (2016).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. The exclusion at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(iii) for land use compatibility statements (LUCS) that identify local land use reviews is not triggered by a suggestion in a LUCS that the applicant avoid the requirement to obtain approval of a revegetation plan required by a subdivision condition of approval, by filing an application to eliminate or modify the subdivision condition of approval. Todd v. Clackamas County, 73 Or LUBA 369 (2016).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. The exclusion at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(iii) for land use compatibility statements (LUCS) that identify local land use reviews does not apply where the LUCS not only identifies the required local land use review, but also approves or denies the identified review. However, where the LUCS applicant submitted along with the LUCS request a land use application seeking approval of a re-vegetation plan, but the LUCS decision does not expressly address, approve, or deny the application, LUBA will not presume that the LUCS decision implicitly denied the application. Todd v. Clackamas County, 73 Or LUBA 369 (2016).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. LUBA will tentatively deny a motion to dismiss based on the exclusion at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(iii) for land use compatibility statements (LUCS) that identify local land use reviews, where (1) based on the record and pleadings LUBA cannot tell if the exclusion applies and (2) the appeal of the LUCS decision is consolidated with an appeal of a related land use decision regarding the availability of local appeal of the LUCS decision. Until it is determined whether a local appeal of the LUCS decision was available, and hence whether the LUCS decision was a final decision capable of review by either LUBA or the circuit court, it is premature to resolve the jurisdictional question. Todd v. Clackamas County, 73 Or LUBA 369 (2016).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. Where LUBA concludes that it lacks jurisdiction over an applicant's appeal of an adverse land use compatibility statement, the appeal must either be dismissed or transferred to circuit court if a motion to transfer is filed. LUBA lacks authority to reverse a decision it has no jurisdiction over. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 103 (2015).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. A county is not obligated to accept an applicant's characterization of its proposed use and scope of use for purposes of issuing a land use compatibility statement. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 103 (2015).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. A governing body's code interpretation made in the course of rendering a decision on a request for a land use compatibility statement is subject to the deferential standard of review at ORS 197.829(1). Even without that deferential standard of review, the county correctly concluded that a proposal to store irrigation water in two newly excavated but unapproved reservoirs is not an outright permitted use as the operation of an "existing irrigation system," but rather a use that requires conditional use approval as the "excavation" for "reservoirs" in conjunction with an irrigation system. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 103 (2015).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. That a decision on a request for a land use compatibility statement (LUCS) involves the exercise of discretion or interpretation of code language to determine whether the proposed use is permitted outright or requires future land use reviews does not mean that the exclusions at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H) do not apply. Many LUCS decisions that otherwise fall within the exclusions at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H) require the interpretation of code language, which is often necessary to determine how to correctly categorize the proposed use. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 103 (2015).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. Where a county land use compatibility statement correctly categorizes a proposed use as one that requires future land use reviews and thus falls within the exclusion from LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(iii), a petitioner's argument that the proposed use requires additional future land use reviews does not provide a basis for LUBA to determine that it retains jurisdiction over the appeal of the decision. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 103 (2015).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H) is silent regarding what procedures a local government may apply to a request for a land use compatibility statement (LUCS). LUBA's conclusion that a LUCS decision is excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction does not mean that the county lacked "land use jurisdiction" to process the LUCS request pursuant to land use procedures that provide for local appeal. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 103 (2015).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(i) excludes from the definition of "land use decision" land use compatibility statements determining that a prior local government land use decision authorized a use that "encompasses" the proposed state agency action. However, that exclusion is not met where the proposed state agency action is to expand the septic system for a nonconforming manufactured dwelling park, and the prior local government decision merely verified a portion of the nonconforming use, but that verification did not authorize or "encompass" the proposed septic expansion. Campbell v. Columbia County, 67 Or LUBA 53 (2013).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(ii) excludes from the definition of "land use decision" any land use compatibility statements determining that the proposed state agency action is "allowed without review" under local comprehensive plan and regulations. However, that exclusion is not met where the proposed state agency action is to expand the septic system for a nonconforming manufactured dwelling park, and the expansion is accomplished by verifying and altering the scope of the nonconforming use, which necessarily requires discretionary review. Campbell v. Columbia County, 67 Or LUBA 53 (2013).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. Under ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(i), adopted in 2010, "land use decision" does not include a local government decision that a proposed state agency action is compatible with the local government's comprehensive plan and land use regulations if (1) the local government has already made a land use decision authorizing a use that encompasses the state agency action, (2) the use is allowed without review, or (3) the use requires a future land use review. As ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(i) is worded, LUBA's jurisdiction over a local government compatibility determination turns on whether that determination is correct. McPhillips Farm Inc. v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 355 (2012).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. In order for one of the exclusions for compatibility determination at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H) to apply, the decision must purport to fall within the exclusion or on its face fall within the exclusion. Arguments that the local government should have made its compatibility determination in a manner that would bring it within a different exclusion, based on findings the local government did not make, are not a basis to apply the different exclusion and thereby conclude that LUBA lacks jurisdiction over the compatibility determination. McPhillips Farm Inc. v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 355 (2012).

26.2.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Compatibility Statement Exception. A 1980 reasons exception and comprehensive plan and zoning amendment to allow for a waste disposal facility "authorizes" subsequent expansions of that landfill within the rezoned area for purposes of the exclusion to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(i), where the 1980 decision specifically contemplated that the facility would expand incrementally over time, with filled disposal cells capped and reclaimed, while the active landfill operation moves on to new disposal cells. McPhillips Farm Inc. v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 355 (2012).

26.2.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Zoning Classification Decisions. A zone verification is not a statutory land use "permit" as defined at ORS 227.160(2)(b), and the city is not required to provide notice of the decision or opportunity for a local appeal of the decision. However, a zone verification decision is subject to LUBA review and a 21-day appeal period. ORS 227.175(11); ORS 197.830(5)(b). Leyden v. City of Eugene, 79 Or LUBA 151 (2019).

26.2.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Zoning Classification Decisions. When a hearings officer makes a zone classification decision, such a Zone Verification, the Zone Verification is a final land use decision. Thus, such decisions are appealable to LUBA "in the same manner as a limited land use decision." ORS 227.175(11)(b); ORS 197.830(5). LUBA has exclusive jurisdiction to review land use decisions and limited land use decisions. ORS 197.825. The fact that a zone verification is not a statutory permit removes certain procedural requirements that apply to statutory permits, such as notice and the opportunity for a hearing. However, the fact that a zone verification is not a statutory permit does not mean that a zone verification is not a final land use decision for purposes of LUBA review, including the general prohibition on collateral attack. Richardi v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 299 (2018).

26.2.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Zoning Classification Decisions. Where in evaluating petitioner's zone verification request pursuant to Eugene Code (EC) 9.2741(2), the city failed to consider the ORS 197.312(5) requirement that all accessory dwellings must be allowed "subject to reasonable local regulations relating to siting and design," the proper remedy is for LUBA to remand the decision to the city for the city to consider in the first instance whether EC 9.2741(2) is a "reasonable local regulation[] relating to siting and design" pursuant to ORS 197.312(5). Kamps-Hughes v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 457 (2018).

26.2.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Zoning Classification Decisions. A zoning classification decision described in ORS 227.160(2)(b) is not limited to "ministerial" decisions that do not require interpretation or the exercise of legal judgment; indeed zoning classification decisions often involve interpretation and the exercise of legal judgment. Central Eastside Industrial Council v. City of Portland, 74 Or LUBA 221 (2016).

26.2.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Zoning Classification Decisions. LUBA will reject an argument that a building permit approval is a "permit" as defined at ORS 227.160(2) (discretionary approval of the development of land), where all arguably discretionary determinations regarding the nature and categorization of the proposed use were previously resolved in an unappealed zoning classification decision, and the building permit decision on appeal simply relied on the zoning classification decision. McCollough v. City of Eugene, 74 Or LUBA 573 (2016).

26.2.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Zoning Classification Decisions. Where an applicant obtains from the city a zoning classification decision concluding that a specific type of housing development is an allowed use, but noting that if the use is changed to provide services to persons other than residents of the development, the development must be approved as a conditional use, and the applicant thereafter seeks and the city approves building permits based on the same specific housing development proposed in the zoning classification decision, the city is not required to impose conditions to preclude the applicant from changing the use to one that requires conditional use approval. McCollough v. City of Eugene, 74 Or LUBA 573 (2016).

26.2.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Zoning Classification Decisions. Where a city issues a zoning classification decision concluding that a probation office for residents of an apartment building is an accessory use to the permitted residential use if the office serves only the residents, a building permit approval for the use proposed in the zoning classification decision does not involve standards that require interpretation or the exercise of legal discretion for purposes of the exclusions to LUBA's jurisdiction at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) or (B), because all interpretation and exercise of legal judgment regarding the nature of the proposed use was accomplished in the unappealed zoning classification decision. McCollough v. City of Eugene, 74 Or LUBA 620 (2016).

26.2.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Statutory Test – Zoning Classification Decisions. A city's failure to enter a zoning classification decision into a registry as required by ORS 227.175(11)(a) does not make the decision something other than a zoning classification decision. Mariposa Townhouses v. City of Medford, 68 Or LUBA 479 (2013).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impacts Test. A state agency SAC program's identification of "activities" that "significantly affect land use" for purposes of the SAC program does not relate to or answer the jurisdictional question of whether LUBA has jurisdiction over a decision because the decision creates "actual, qualitatively or quantitatively significant impact on present or future land uses" under the "significant impacts" test articulated in Peterson v. City of Klamath Falls, 279 Or 249, 566 P2d 1193 (1977). Schaefer v. OAB, 81 Or LUBA 819 (2020).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impacts Test. A contract between a local government and an engineering firm for the design of three bridges does not qualify as a "significant impacts" land use decision where the contract authorizes only design work and consulting services and does not authorize the use or development of land. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 403 (2019).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impacts Test. LUBA will only exercise its jurisdiction under the judicially created significant impacts test if the petitioner identifies non-land-use standards that apply to the decision and would govern LUBA's review, and that have some relationship to the use of land. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 403 (2019).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impacts Test. Where LUBA determines that a Metro resolution is not a "final" decision, the significant impact land use decision test does not apply. The jurisdictional requirement—that a land use decision must be "final"—applies to both the statutory as well as the significant impact test. Watts v. Metro, 78 Or LUBA 429 (2018).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. When a city adopts an ordinance prohibiting marijuana businesses in the city pursuant to ORS 475B.968(1), the city's decision is not a significant impacts land use decision because any provisions of ORS 475B.968 that arguably could contain what would qualify as standards have no bearing on or relationship to the use of land or to the city's planning and zoning responsibilities. Caudle v. City of Dunes City, 77 Or LUBA 230 (2018).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impacts Test. Where the legislature excludes certain decisions from the statutory definition of "land use decision," LUBA has no review authority over such decisions under the significant impact test. Similarly, where no party challenges the statutory authority of the Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) to adopt an administrative rule that excludes a decision extending a permit on farm or forest land from LUBA's jurisdiction, and LUBA applies the rule to conclude that the extension decision is excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction, LUBA will not consider whether the "significant impacts test" is met. McLaughlin v. Douglas County, 76 Or LUBA 77 (2017).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. In order to qualify as a "significant impacts" land use decision, the decision must significantly change the land use status quo with respect to present or future uses of land. Where a decision at best simply preserves the land use status quo, the decision is not a significant impacts land use decision. McLoughlin Neighborhood Association v. City of Oregon City, 73 Or LUBA 82 (2016).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impacts Test. LUBA will decline to apply the "significant impact" land use decision test to a city's operational or property management decisions that have the effect of restricting public access and use of public lands, when those decisions have little or nothing to do with land use planning or regulation. In order to successfully establish LUBA's jurisdiction under the significant impact test, petitioner must identify statutory or other standards or laws that would govern LUBA's review, and show that such standards have some bearing on or relationship to the use of land. Northwest Trail Alliance v. City of Portland, 71 Or LUBA 339 (2015).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. LUBA will decline to apply the "significant impact" land use decision test to allow the Board to review building permit decisions that merely implement earlier statutory land use decisions, even if the building permit decisions are the proximate step leading to actual construction and other actions affecting land use, and even if some of the earlier statutory land use decisions were remanded by LUBA and still before the local government. Extending the significant impacts test to allow LUBA's review over such building permits would represent an end run around the statutory scheme for reviewing land use decisions. Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 68 Or LUBA 162 (2013).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. To constitute a "significant impacts" land use decision, the decision must be a "final" decision. The adoption of a master plan that consists entirely of recommendations and guidelines that can have no land use impacts at all until implemented in subsequent land use decisions is not a significant impacts land use decision. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Metro, 68 Or LUBA 302 (2013).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A significant impact land use decision must be a "final" decision to be subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Terra Hydr Inc. v. Washington County, 68 Or LUBA 515 (2013).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Repeal of code provisions proscribing certain aircraft operations, such as acrobatics, in the airspace over a city has no significant impacts on present or future uses of land, and is therefore not a significant impact land use decision. Oregon Aviation Watch v. City of Hillsboro, 67 Or LUBA 252 (2013).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Repeal of a code provision requiring city council approval of new airports is not a significant impacts land use decision, where the code provision has been entirely superseded by comprehensive planning and zoning governing the approval of new airports within the city. Oregon Aviation Watch v. City of Hillsboro, 67 Or LUBA 252 (2013).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where a board of county commissioners' order directs the planning director to move forward with securing needed permits to remove a dam and to remove the dam, and the planning department issues a permit that is pending on appeal before the county hearings officer, the planning department permit will be the county's final land use decision when the local appeal is final and the board of county commissioners' order is not separately appealable as a significant impacts test land use decision. Schock v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 403 (2010).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. LUBA cannot exercise jurisdiction over a decision that is statutorily excluded from the definition of "land use decision" at ORS 197.015(10)(a), even if the decision would otherwise fall within the ambit of a "significant impact" land use decision as described in City of Pendleton v. Kerns, 294 Or 127, 653 P2d 992 (1982). 7th Street Station, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 58 Or LUBA 93 (2008).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A decision vacating a 30-foot by 100-foot section of vacant public right-of-way in order to enlarge a single residential lot to the size necessary to construct a single-family dwelling in a developed residential area is not a "significant impacts" land use decision, because there are few or no traffic impacts and the only impact on present or future land uses is to allow a single dwelling consistent with the development on surrounding lots. Bohnenkamp v. Clackamas County, 56 Or LUBA 17 (2008).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where an amendment to a development agreement is contingent on future land use approvals, any significant impacts on land uses resulting from the amendment are merely potential and do not satisfy the significant impact test. ZRZ Realty Company v. City of Portland, 49 Or LUBA 309 (2005).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A concern that a property line adjustment may facilitate future development of a 33-acre parcel and a 64-acre parcel does not render a decision approving the adjustment a "significant impact" land use decision, where the petitioner fails to demonstrate that the adjustment would allow a different kind or intensity of development, change the land use status quo of the area, or create an actual, qualitatively or quantitatively significant impact on present or future land uses. Jewett v. City of Bend, 48 Or LUBA 16 (2004).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A decision that simply removes a contractual impediment to development in an annexation agreement does not in itself approve "development" or otherwise have an actual impact on present or future land uses, and that decision therefore is neither a statutory nor significant impact test land use decision. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 566 (2004).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A decision creating a local improvement district to finance a sewer system for a long-established subdivision will not have a significant effect on present or future land uses and, therefore, is not a significant impact land use decision. Lewis v. City of Bend, 45 Or LUBA 122 (2003).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. The change in ownership of land that may result from a city decision to commence condemnation of property, in and of itself, will have no impact on present or future land use and does not constitute a significant impacts test land use decision. Decker v. City of Cornelius, 45 Or LUBA 539 (2003).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A city decision that permits repair of city reservoirs and installation of temporary covers over those reservoirs will not effect a significant change in the land use status quo of the area, and therefore is not a significant impacts land use decision. Arlington Heights Neigh. Assn. v. City of Portland, 45 Or LUBA 559 (2003).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A city's approval of a reimbursement district is a "fiscal ordinance" and therefore not subject to LUBA's jurisdiction, regardless of whether petitioners can demonstrate that the decision satisfies the significant impacts test. Jesinghaus v. City of Grants Pass, 42 Or LUBA 477 (2002).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A city decision establishing a local improvement district to fund street improvements that does not involve the application of comprehensive plan policies or land use regulations or result in a "significant impact" on land use is not a land use decision. Hazelnut A Partners v. City of Woodburn, 42 Or LUBA 474 (2002).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A resolution that directs planning staff to continue a legislative process to develop a plan governing future expansion of the state medical university is not a final decision and for that reason is not a land use decision under either the statutory test at ORS 197.015(10) or the significant impact test. No Tram to OHSU v. City of Portland, 40 Or LUBA 411 (2001).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A decision to acquire by eminent domain a 0.01-acre portion of petitioner's property to facilitate a previously authorized transportation improvement does not itself have qualitative or quantitative significant impacts on present or future land uses, and is thus not a "significant impacts" land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Phillips v. City of Hermiston, 39 Or LUBA 581 (2001).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A decision to vacate approximately one third of a mile of an existing road has an actual, qualitatively or quantitatively significant impact on present or future land use and thus is a significant impact test land use decision, because it alters the existing traffic pattern and access of nearby property owners and sets the stage for further development that will alter the character of surrounding uses. Mekkers v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 928 (2000).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. City legislation that may, when applied, result in an uncompensated taking of property does not, by itself, result in a significant impact on land use. Baker v. City of Woodburn, 37 Or LUBA 563 (2000).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. An increase in the cost of development does not necessarily constitute a significant impact on land use. Baker v. City of Woodburn, 37 Or LUBA 563 (2000).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A resolution of nonbinding support for the siting of a tribal casino within city limits is not a land use decision under the significant impacts test because, by itself, it does not have an impact, significant or otherwise, on present or future uses of land. Kelley v. City of Cascade Locks, 37 Or LUBA 80 (1999).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. The focus of the significant impact test is on impacts to land use, not economic or property interest. Where alleged economic harm from a revocable permit to close streets does not relate to land uses in the area, the challenged decision is not a significant impact test land use decision. Hashem v. City of Portland, 34 Or LUBA 629 (1998).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where identified impacts do not extend to any other nearby property and have only minimal impacts on land uses on the subject property, the significant impact test is not met. Hashem v. City of Portland, 34 Or LUBA 629 (1998).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. The impact of a revocable permit to close streets is speculative and, for that reason, is not significant where any actual loss of access caused by a revocable permit would not occur for at least three years, and might not occur then if an existing lease is renewed or if the permit is revoked in the event the lease is not renewed. Hashem v. City of Portland, 34 Or LUBA 629 (1998).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where LUBA determines a challenged decision is not a land use decision or limited land use decision and petitioner has filed a conditional motion to transfer as provided by OAR 661-010-0075(11)(c), the appeal will be transferred to circuit court. Hashem v. City of Portland, 34 Or LUBA 629 (1998).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. The land use impact of a school district's decision to adjust attendance area boundaries is not so quantitatively or qualitatively significant as to constitute a land use decision, where the identified impacts are either unrelated to land use or involve only increased travel distances to school. Butts v. Hillsboro School District, 33 Or LUBA 211 (1997).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. The city's sale of a portion of a city-owned lot which does not involve any public right-of-way and does not alter any existing traffic patterns of nearby property owners with access rights, does not amount to a street vacation that will have a significant impact on present or future land uses in the area. Thierolf v. City of Ashland, 32 Or LUBA 182 (1996).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where the city's sale of a portion of a lot to intervenor facilitates a subsequent partition of intervenor's property, the subsequent partition does not transform the lot conveyance into a significant impact land use decision. Thierolf v. City of Ashland, 32 Or LUBA 182 (1996).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. The significant impact test does not apply to land use decisions specifically excluded by statute from LUBA's jurisdiction. Friends of Eugene v. City of Eugene, 32 Or LUBA 161 (1996).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. When a local decision is statutorily exempt from review, that the decision may significantly impact land uses does not make it a land use decision subject to LUBA's review. Leathers v. Washington County, 31 Or LUBA 43 (1996).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where a challenged decision authorizes improvements to a public right-of-way which will significantly alter the long-established character of the area, in that they will change not only the physical attributes of the subject property but also the traffic patterns of the surrounding neighborhoods, these actual impacts are sufficient to make the decision a significant impact test land use decision. Leathers v. Washington County, 29 Or LUBA 343 (1995).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where petitioners fail to establish that a city decision assuming jurisdiction over and maintenance responsibility for a developed street in the downtown area will have a significant impact on present or future land uses, the decision does not satisfy the significant impact test for a land use decision. Anderson v. City of Gates, 29 Or LUBA 321 (1995).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. To qualify as a significant impact test land use decision, the decision must create an actual, qualitatively or quantitatively significant impact on present or future land uses and the expected impacts must be likely as a result of the decision, and not speculative. Carlson v. City of Dines City, 28 Or LUBA 411 (1994).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A decision to pave a 230-foot right-of-way segment is a significant impact test land use decision, because it authorizes paving an area used as a public recreational area and changes the character of that area by opening up a dead-end street and converting the dead-end street into a public thoroughfare. Carlson v. City of Dines City, 28 Or LUBA 411 (1994).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. An agreement between a local government and third parties implementing a different local decision to develop an unimproved section of a road, does not concern the adoption, amendment or application of the goals, a land use regulation or a comprehensive plan, and does not of itself have significant impacts on present or future land uses. Carlson v. City of Dines City, 28 Or LUBA 411 (1994).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Under either the statutory test or the significant impact test, a "land use decision" must be a final decision. Knee Deep Cattle Company v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 288 (1994).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where petitioners do not explain why the installation of sand filter tanks, as part of a proposed new sewage treatment system designed to remedy past problems, will have significant impacts on petitioners' use of their land, petitioners fail to demonstrate that the challenged permit allowing installation of sand filter tanks satisfies the significant impact test. Knee Deep Cattle Company v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 288 (1994).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. As the party seeking review by LUBA, petitioner has the burden of establishing that the challenged decision satisfies the significant impact test for a "land use decision." Petitioner must establish there is (1) a relationship between the decision and the projected impacts, and (2) evidence demonstrating that the projected impacts are likely to occur as a result of the decision. Fraser v. City of Joseph, 28 Or LUBA 217 (1994).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where property outside city limits is planned and zoned for residential use under the acknowledged county plan and regulations, and a prior county decision approves subdivision of the property for residential development, a city decision to provide city sewer and water services to the property, for the approved residential use, does not satisfy the significant impact test. Fraser v. City of Joseph, 28 Or LUBA 217 (1994).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A county order that simply restates a decision made in an earlier order and corrects a citation in the earlier order is not a land use decision, because it does not concern the adoption, amendment or application of the goals, local comprehensive plan or local code, or have a significant impact on land use. Sahagian v. Columbia County, 27 Or LUBA 341 (1994).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where the challenged decision simply refuses to change school district boundaries, and petitioner does not demonstrate that any of the impacts it alleges will result from the decision are likely to occur, the challenged decision is not a significant impact test land use decision. J.C. Reeves Corp. v. Sherwood Education Dist. 88J, 26 Or LUBA 220 (1993).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where the challenged decision is an intergovernmental agreement, the effects of which on land use are speculative only, the decision is not a significant impact test land use decision. Many Rivers Group v. City of Eugene, 25 Or LUBA 518 (1993).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where petitioner does not contend a challenged decision is a land use decision under the significant impact test and, based on the parties' submittals, it is not obvious to LUBA that it is, LUBA will conclude the challenged decision does not satisfy the significant impact test for a "land use decision." Price v. Clatsop County, 25 Or LUBA 341 (1993).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Absent an explanation from petitioner concerning why a decision that simply determines certain property is in violation of the local government fire code is a significant impact test land use decision, the decision is not a significant impact land use decision. Curtis Serve N Save v. City of Eugene, 24 Or LUBA 341 (1992).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A water district decision authorizing the provision of domestic water service to property designated and zoned for residential use by an acknowledged county plan and land use regulations is not a "significant impact test" land use decision. Keating v. Heceta Water District, 24 Or LUBA 175 (1992).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. In order to qualify as a significant impact land use decision, the appealed decision must be final. City of North Plains v. Washington County, 24 Or LUBA 78 (1992).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. That a city decision to expand a basketball court in a city park might potentially cause some impact to surrounding mature fir trees or to the historic character of the park, does not demonstrate the decision will cause "a significant impact on present or future land uses in the area," as is required by the significant impact test. Miller v. City of Dayton, 22 Or LUBA 661 (1992).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Even if a local government decision does not satisfy the statutory definition of "land use decision," it may nevertheless be a land use decision subject to LUBA review if it will have a "significant impact on present or future land uses in the area." City of Pendleton v. Kerns, 294 Or 126, 133-134, 653 P2d 996 (1982). City of Portland v. Multnomah County, 19 Or LUBA 468 (1990).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where the formation of a People's Utility District (P.U.D.) is for the purpose of providing water service to the same developed area where water service is currently provided by an existing domestic water supply district distribution system, the only significant effect of the creation of the P.U.D., and its potential acquisition of the assets of the water district, is on the manner in which a city wanting to annex and withdraw from the water district territory in the subject area may obtain ownership of the water distribution facilities in that area, not on the present or future uses of land in the area. City of Portland v. Multnomah County, 19 Or LUBA 468 (1990).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. The alternative "significant impact test" for identifying land use decisions subject to LUBA review does not apply to decisions which are specifically excluded from the statutory definition of "land use decision" under ORS 197.015(10)(b). Parmenter v. Wallowa County, 19 Or LUBA 271 (1990).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. A county order selecting a preferred alternative site for a new bridge and directing staff to file necessary land use applications could potentially lead to a significant impact on land use, if the authorized applications result in county decisions approving construction of a new bridge. However, a decision which has only potential impacts on land use does not satisfy the significant impact test. McKenzie River Guides Assoc. v. Lane County, 19 Or LUBA 207 (1990).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. Where a statute specifically excludes certain decisions from the statutory definition of "land use decision" and vests review jurisdiction in another tribunal, LUBA has no review authority over such decisions under the significant impact test. Oregonians in Action V. LCDC, 19 Or LUBA 107 (1990).

26.3 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Significant Impact Test. No purpose would be served by recognizing county approval of a final plat for a subdivision within city limits for recording as a "significant impact" test land use decision, when the same impacts are inherent in one or more city approvals which are statutory land use decisions. Elliott v. Lane County, 18 Or LUBA 871 (1990).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. To some extent, the ministerial decision exclusion from LUBA's jurisdiction in ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) is separate and distinct from the building permit exclusion from LUBA's jurisdiction in ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B). Madrona Park, LLC v. City of Portland, 80 Or LUBA 26 (2019).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. The statutory distinction between ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) and ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) reflects a recognition that building permits are substantively different from more generic land use decisions and that the legislature intended that LUBA's jurisdiction over building permit decisions would be (1) limited and (2) evaluated under a different standard. Madrona Park, LLC v. City of Portland, 80 Or LUBA 26 (2019).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where a city approves a building permit for a temporary mass shelter under the city's Housing Emergency Ordinance because it satisfies the development standards in the city's Central Employment (EX) zone, where the petitioner argues not that the EX zone development standards that the city applied in approving the building permit are not "clear and objective" but, rather, that the city was required but failed to apply other land use standards in approving the building permit, and where LUBA concludes that none of those other land use standards are applicable approval criteria, the city's decision is subject to the building permit exclusion from LUBA's jurisdiction in ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B). Madrona Park, LLC v. City of Portland, 80 Or LUBA 26 (2019).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. A city's rejection of petitioner's as-applied challenge of a city's appeal fee during the city's proceeding on intervenor's land use application, and legal challenges to the city's future assessment of actual attorney's fees is not excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction by the "fiscal" exception. However, to the extent petitioner challenges the amount of the actual attorney fees, that challenge is outside the Board's scope of review because that fee dispute arose after the city issued the fee invoice and after the city made a decision on petitioner's underlying appeal, and is therefore a "fiscal" decision. The fact that the local record includes the invoice for the actual attorney fees petitioner was charged for his local appeal does not convert the amount of the fees in that invoice into an issue that is reviewable by LUBA. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 78 Or LUBA 463 (2018).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where a city adopts an ordinance prohibiting marijuana businesses in the city pursuant to ORS 475B.968(1), the ordinance is not a de facto amendment of the city's land use code provisions governing "agriculture," and therefore is not a "land use" decision. Caudle v. City of Dunes City, 77 Or LUBA 230 (2018).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where a city adopts an ordinance prohibiting marijuana businesses in the city pursuant to ORS 475B.968(1), the city is not required to apply its comprehensive plan provisions or adopt findings addressing those policies. ORS 475B.968 allows the city to enact a prohibition on marijuana businesses and refer that prohibition to the city's electors for approval, and nothing within that broad grant of authority suggests the legislature intended to subject that grant of authority to review for compliance with local governments' comprehensive plans. Caudle v. City of Dunes City, 77 Or LUBA 230 (2018).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Absent a focused challenge to the authority of the Land Conservation and Development Commission's to promulgate OAR 660-033-0140, which provides that a decision to extend a permit for development on farm or forest land is not a "land use decision" as defined in ORS 197.015, LUBA will give effect to the rule. McLaughlin v. Douglas County, 76 Or LUBA 77 (2017).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Operation of OAR 660-033-0140, which provides that a decision to extend a permit for development on farm or forest land is not a "land use decision" as defined in ORS 197.015, does not turn on whether the extension criteria require the exercise of discretion. McLaughlin v. Douglas County, 76 Or LUBA 77 (2017).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where the legislature excludes certain decisions from the statutory definition of "land use decision," LUBA has no review authority over such decisions under the significant impact test. Similarly, where no party challenges the statutory authority of the Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) to adopt an administrative rule that excludes a decision extending a permit on farm or forest land from LUBA's jurisdiction, and LUBA applies the rule to conclude that the extension decision is excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction, LUBA will not consider whether the "significant impacts test" is met. McLaughlin v. Douglas County, 76 Or LUBA 77 (2017).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where the county decision at issue in petitioner's appeal merely increased appeal fees for local appeals to account for inflation as mandated by a provision of the county's code, and in approving the code-mandated increase, the county did not "exercise * * * policy or legal judgment," the county's decision falls within the ministerial exception at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) and is therefore not a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 76 Or LUBA 222 (2017).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where a county's code enforcement procedure requires a code enforcement officer to make a preliminary decision regarding whether there is probable cause to believe there is an ordinance violation, that decision is not a final decision that may be appealed to LUBA. Under the county's code enforcement procedure, if the code enforcement officer finds there is probable cause, the first step is to seek voluntary compliance and the next step would be for the county to seek declaratory or injunctive relief in circuit court, where the code enforcement officer would have the burden of proof regarding the ordinance violation. If the code enforcement officer finds there is no probable cause, that is not a final decision either, as a petitioner may continue to request that the county take enforcement action, or petitioner may seek declaratory or injunctive relief in circuit court under ORS 197.825(3), where petitioner would have the burden of proof regarding the ordinance violation. Robson v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 343 (2017).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Pursuant to ORS 475B.063(3), LUBA lacks jurisdiction over a decision on a request for a land use compatibility statement (LUCS) that involves a petitioner's proposed land use for a retail marijuana license. George v. Lincoln County, 75 Or LUBA 438 (2017).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where LUBA concludes that it lacks jurisdiction over an applicant's appeal of an adverse land use compatibility statement, the appeal must either be dismissed or transferred to circuit court if a motion to transfer is filed. LUBA lacks authority to reverse a decision it has no jurisdiction over. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 103 (2015).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. That a decision on a request for a land use compatibility statement (LUCS) involves the exercise of discretion or interpretation of code language to determine whether the proposed use is permitted outright or requires future land use reviews does not mean that the exclusions at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H) do not apply. Many LUCS decisions that otherwise fall within the exclusions at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H) require the interpretation of code language, which is often necessary to determine how to correctly categorize the proposed use. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 103 (2015).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where a county makes a single decision to approve an outdoor mass gathering as defined in ORS 433.735, that decision is excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction under ORS 197.015(10)(d), even if the decision authorizes access roads and other development and that authorization, but for being embodied in a decision approving an outdoor mass gathering, arguably might constitute a land use decision. Thomas v. Wasco County, 68 Or LUBA 102 (2013).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. A decision that qualifies as an "appropriate zoning classification decision" under ORS 227.160(2)(b) is subject to LUBA review "in the same manner as a limited land use decision." ORS 227.175(11)(b). Such decisions are subject to LUBA review without regard to whether they might qualify for the general exclusion from LUBA's jurisdiction provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for land use decisions that are "made under land use standards that do not require interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment." Mariposa Townhouses v. City of Medford, 68 Or LUBA 528 (2013).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. ORS 197.015(10)(d) sets out an exception to the statutory definition of "land use decision" for "outdoor mass gatherings," and certain other gatherings. But the ORS 197.015(10)(d) exception includes an internal exception for agri-tourism. The effect of the exception within an exception is to make decisions authorizing agri-tourism "land use decisions" that are reviewable by LUBA. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 67 Or LUBA 214 (2013).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. ORS 197.015(10)(d) creates an exception to the ORS 197.015(10)(a) definition of "land use decision" for "[g]athering[s] of fewer than 3,000 persons that [are] not anticipated to continue for more than 120 hours in any three-month period." Because a decision approving one outdoor music festival limited to fewer than 3,000 persons falls with the ORS 197.015(10)(d) exception, the decision is not a land use decision subject to review by LUBA. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 67 Or LUBA 214 (2013).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. The legislature did not intend LUBA to exercise jurisdiction to review a decision approving a tax exemption for multiple family housing under ORS 307.600 et seq., as evidenced by the fact that the legislature specifically provided, in ORS 307.631, that denial or termination of a tax exemption for multiple-unit housing is subject to review in circuit court. Conte v. City of Eugene, 66 Or LUBA 95 (2012).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. A decision that approves a property tax exemption for multiple-family housing under ORS 307.600 et seq. is a fiscal decision excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction, notwithstanding that ORS 307.618 requires a finding that the multiple-family housing "is or will be at the time of development" in conformance with applicable land use regulations, because the decision has only incidental impacts on land use and does not approve or deny any proposed development, which will necessarily be subject to a subsequent decision on a building permit or application for development approval under the applicable land use regulations. Conte v. City of Eugene, 66 Or LUBA 95 (2012).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Under subsection (3) of ORS 197.825, circuit courts retain jurisdiction "[t]o grant declaratory, injunctive, or mandatory relief in * * * proceedings brought to enforce the provisions of an adopted comprehensive plan or land use regulations[.]" Mingo v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 122 (2012).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. When a local government takes action to enforce its land use laws, LUBA has exclusive jurisdiction in such circumstances to review any land use decisions a local government may render in enforcing its land use laws, but circuit courts otherwise retain jurisdiction over proceedings that are brought to enforce county land use laws. Mingo v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 122 (2012).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Just as LUBA in reviewing land use decisions to determine whether they should be affirmed, remanded or reversed under ORS 197.835 "has no authority to enforce" local land use laws, circuit courts lack jurisdiction to review local government land use decisions when proceedings are brought in circuit court to enforce land use laws. Mingo v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 122 (2012).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where a county has adopted the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality's noise standards as a county land use regulation, a final county decision that applies those noise standards is a "land use decision," as that term is defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a). Mingo v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 122 (2012).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. A petitioner fails to demonstrate that a decision is a "land use decision" under ORS 197.015(10)(a) where the definition of "lot of record" set out in the city's zoning code includes five circumstances or categories under which a unit of land may be considered a "lot of record," determining whether a unit of land is a "lot of record" under most of the five categories does not appear to require the exercise of any discretion at all, and petitioner does not argue that the unit of land falls under the one category that might require the exercise of discretion. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 64 Or LUBA 164 (2011).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Under ORS 197.015(10)(d) a decision authorizing an outdoor mass gathering as defined at ORS 433.735 is not a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction, but ORS 433.735 provides both a statutory definition and an authorization for counties to adopt a more expansive definition of outdoor mass gathering, and it is unclear whether a decision under a county definition is also excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction. Even if a decision under a county definition of outdoor mass gathering is not subject to the ORS 197.015(10)(d) exclusion, however, ORS 433.735(5) provides an independent exclusion, by providing for appeal of a county decision to circuit court under either the statutory or a county definition. Devereux v. Douglas County, 64 Or LUBA 191 (2011).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. To the extent there is textual ambiguity regarding whether an outdoor mass gathering under a county definition of that term authorized by ORS 433.735 is also "an outdoor mass gathering as defined in ORS 433.735" and thus excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction under ORS 197.015(10)(d), the legislative history of ORS 197.015(10)(d) indicates that the legislature clearly understood that outdoor mass gatherings under county definitions authorized under ORS 433.735 were outdoor mass gatherings as defined at ORS 433.735. Devereux v. Douglas County, 64 Or LUBA 191 (2011).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. OAR 660-033-0140 provides that a decision extending the expiration period for an ORS 215.402 permit decision on farm or forest land is not a "land use decision," and therefore such an extension decision is not within LUBA's jurisdiction. Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Under ORS 215.429(2), once a petition for writ of mandamus is filed under the 120/150-day rule, the circuit court has exclusive jurisdiction over a permit application and any decision rendered on that permit application. Where a permit decision has been appealed to LUBA and withdrawn by the county for reconsideration under 197.830(13)(b), and the permit applicant files a petition for writ of mandamus arguing a violation of the 120/150-day rule, the county loses jurisdiction to reconsider the permit decision and LUBA loses jurisdiction as well. However, LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss the appeal where the county has moved to dismiss the mandamus proceeding, contending that the 120/150-day rule only applies to the county's initial permit decision that was appealed to LUBA and not to a reconsidered decision under 197.830(13)(b). In that circumstance the county and LUBA would again have jurisdiction over the permit application and decision if the mandamus proceeding is dismissed, and LUBA will await a final decision on the county's motion to dismiss before taking final action on the applicant's motion to dismiss. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 63 Or LUBA 547 (2011).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. In Friends of Lincoln County v. Newport, 5 Or LUBA 346 (1982), LUBA determined that a city decision to collect a $2,050 appeal and transcript preparation fee to allow a local appeal to proceed was not reviewable as a land use decision because it qualified for the "fiscal decision" exception created by the Court of Appeals in Housing Council v. City of Lake Oswego, 48 Or App 525, 617 P2d 655 (1980), rev dismissed, 291 Or 878, 635 P2d 647 (1981). Montgomery v. City of Dunes City, 61 Or LUBA 123 (2010).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. In Ramsey v. City of Portland, 29 Or LUBA 139 (1995), LUBA held the city's land use appeal fees were "an integral part of the zoning code provisions governing the processing and review of land use applications." LUBA has relied on that holding in a number of subsequent appeals to reject jurisdictional challenges to appeals of local government decisions that adopt or amend application or appeal fee schedules. Montgomery v. City of Dunes City, 61 Or LUBA 123 (2010).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. LUBA has relied on Ramsey v. City of Portland, 29 Or LUBA 139 (1995), in a number of decisions to reject jurisdictional challenges to appeals that assert "as-applied" challenges to previously adopted land use permit and appeal fee schedules. Montgomery v. City of Dunes City, 61 Or LUBA 123 (2010).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. A city decision to charge a subdivision applicant the actual cost of processing his subdivision application is not a land use decision that is subject to review by LUBA, where the city's final decision demanding payment of the actual costs was not made as part of its decision on the merits of the subdivision application and instead postdates that decision on the merits by over one year. The city's later decision to demand payment of the actual cost of processing the subdivision application is a "fiscal" decision, and under the reasoning in Housing Council v. City of Lake Oswego, 48 Or App 525, 617 P2d 655 (1980), rev dismissed, 291 Or 878, 635 P2d 647 (1981), is not a land use decision subject to LUBA review. Montgomery v. City of Dunes City, 61 Or LUBA 123 (2010).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Under ORS 197.825(1), LUBA has exclusive jurisdiction to review "land use decisions," as that term is defined by ORS 197.015(10)(a), unless one of the exclusions set out at ORS 197.015(10)(b) applies. Dierks v. Jackson County, 60 Or LUBA 487 (2010).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where a development ordinance only requires that the county "consider" a fire district recommendation in ruling on a request to reduce a fire break, and the development ordinance imposes few boundaries on the decision maker's exercise of discretion in making a decision on the request, the exclusion from the statutory definition of "land use decision" at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for a decision "[t]hat is made under land use standards that do not require interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment" does not apply, and the fuel break reduction decision is a land use decision. Dierks v. Jackson County, 60 Or LUBA 487 (2010).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Under ORS 197.825(2)(c)(A), LUBA does not have initial jurisdiction to review a decision by a city with a population over 2,500 to amend its urban growth boundary to add more than 50 acres of land where that decision is submitted to the Department of Land Conservation and Development (DLCD) for review under ORS 197.626. LUBA may later acquire jurisdiction over certain matters addressed in the decision if the director of DLCD transfers those matters to LUBA. Swalley Irrigation District v. City of Bend, 59 Or LUBA 52 (2009).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where a county adopts an ordinance that amends its comprehensive plan map in conjunction with a city's urban growth boundary (UGB) amendment, and the county's ordinance is submitted in conjunction with the city's UGB amendment to the Department of Land Conservation and Development for review, under ORS 197.825(2)(c)(A), LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review the county's decision. Swalley Irrigation District v. Deschutes County, 59 Or LUBA 192 (2009).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. A code provision that states that certain duplex and triplex applications qualify for administrative review without public hearings does not eliminate the need for such duplex and triplex applications to comply with substantive approval standards that would otherwise apply. Zirker v. City of Bend, 55 Or LUBA 188 (2007).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. A county's statement in a state agency land use compatibility certification of facts about a property's zoning and the status of a subdivision of that property falls under the ORS 197.015(11)(b)(A) exception to the definition of land use decision because the compatibility statement did not require interpretation or the exercise of policy or legal judgment. Wolfgram v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 54 (2007).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where a county, in response to a Ballot Measure 37 claim, adopts an order that initiates a process to "modify" the existing planning and zoning of a property and later adopts an ordinance that actually changes the plan and zoning map designation for the property, the subsequent ordinance is the county decision that modifies the existing planning and zoning under ORS 197.352(8), and under ORS 197.352(9) such a decision is not a land use decision that LUBA has jurisdiction to review. DLCD v. Klamath County, 54 Or LUBA 113 (2007).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. ORS 92.100(7), which provides that a decision approving a final subdivision or partition plat is not a land use decision or limited land use decision, effectively removes such decisions from LUBA's jurisdiction. Nothing in the text or legislative history of ORS 92.100(7) suggests that the exclusion applies only to nondiscretionary final subdivision or partition plat decisions. Wagon Trail Ranch v. Klamath County, 54 Or LUBA 654 (2007).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. The fact that procedures for making limited land use decisions are used for making a decision to approve or deny a final partition plat does not convert that decision into a limited land use decision or override the language of ORS 92.100(7) providing that decisions to approve or deny a final partition plat are not limited land use decisions. Ehle v. City of Salem, 54 Or LUBA 688 (2007).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. ORS 92.100(7) excludes from LUBA's jurisdiction decisions made by a local government or its designee to approve or deny a final partition plat. Ehle v. City of Salem, 54 Or LUBA 688 (2007).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. ORS 223.314 exempts certain plans that are adopted in support of systems development charges from the statutory definition of "land use decision." If that exemption is applied literally and broadly, it would exempt a large number of decisions that would otherwise be subject to the statewide planning goals and would otherwise be land use decisions subject to LUBA review. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 54 Or LUBA 692 (2007).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. If a local government wants to adopt one plan to comply with ORS 223.309(1) to establish systems development charges and adopt a second plan to satisfy any obligations it may have under the statewide planning goals and local land use laws, ORS 223.309(1) and 223.314 effectively authorize such a bifurcated approach. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 54 Or LUBA 692 (2007).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. A city decision to adopt a public facilities plan under ORS 223.309(1) and to proceed to adopt and implement systems development charges, before the city has separately adopted a second plan to comply with the city's obligations under the statewide planning goals and local land use legislation, does not convert the ORS 223.309(1) public facilities plan into a de facto land use decision. Such an ORS 223.309(1) public facilities plan remains a fiscal plan that under ORS 223.314 is not considered a land use decision and is not reviewable by LUBA. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 54 Or LUBA 692 (2007).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. LUBA has consistently declined to apply the "fiscal exception" to decisions that involve local land use appeal fees or land use application fees, because such decisions implicate core land use concerns regarding access to and citizen participation in land use reviews. Sommer v. Josephine County, 52 Or LUBA 806 (2006).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. The specific motivation of a county for amending its schedule of appeal and application fees is not determinative of whether the "fiscal exception" to LUBA's jurisdiction applies. Sommer v. Josephine County, 52 Or LUBA 806 (2006).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. The ORS 197.015(10)(e) exception to LUBA's jurisdiction for writs of mandamus issued pursuant to ORS 215.429 or 227.179 applies only when the writ is based on an alleged violation of the statutory 120-day deadline for issuing a final decision. A writ of mandamus filed for another reason does not deprive LUBA of jurisdiction over a land use decision approving a manufactured home subdivision, even if the writ involves the same property. D & B Home Investments v. City of Donald, 51 Or LUBA 1 (2006).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. A quasi-judicial decision approving a tentative subdivision plat does not "implement" a systems development charge within the meaning of ORS 223.314, and therefore fall within an exclusion to LUBA's jurisdiction, simply because the decision imposes a condition of approval that imposes or references system development charges. D & B Home Investments v. City of Donald, 51 Or LUBA 1 (2006).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Pursuant to ORS 92.100(7) and ORS 197.015(13), LUBA has no jurisdiction over a decision approving or denying an application for final subdivision plat approval that was submitted after June 16, 2005. Severson v. Josephine County, 51 Or LUBA 569 (2006).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. ORS 223.314 provides a statutory exclusion from the statutory definition of land use decision. But that exclusion only applies to the extent "a plan * * * adopted pursuant to ORS 223.309" is adopted for the limited purpose of supplying the public facility list that is required by ORS 223.309 as a precondition of adopting a systems development charge methodology. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Springfield, 50 Or LUBA 109 (2005).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. So long as sewerage facilities recommended in a regional sewerage plan cannot be built until the applicable comprehensive plan is amended to recommend those facilities, the regional sewerage plan may be adopted before the comprehensive plan is amended and the decision to adopt that regional sewerage plan to comply with state and federal environmental regulations and the requirements of ORS 223.309 for adoption of a systems development charge methodology is not a land use decision that is reviewable by LUBA. The reviewable land use decision will be adopted when the corresponding comprehensive plan amendments are adopted. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Springfield, 50 Or LUBA 109 (2005).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Goal 14, factors 3 through 7 implicitly require a determination that the sites chosen to be included in an urban growth boundary (UGB) are better than other alternative sites that are also considered for inclusion and rejected. Therefore, a local code provision requiring a demonstration that "the recommended site was better than alternative sites," does not "go further" or require more than the requirements of Goal 14, and assignments of error concerning that local code provision therefore involve "matters" that fall within the Land Conservation and Development Commission's exclusive jurisdiction in periodic review. City of West Linn v. Metro, 49 Or LUBA 403 (2005).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Land use application fees, like local appeal fees, are an integral part of the zoning code provisions governing the processing and review of land use applications. A decision adopting a schedule of land use application fees pursuant to a local land use regulation is a "land use decision" subject to LUBA's jurisdiction, because it concerns the adoption, amendment or application of a land use regulation, and is not subject to the "fiscal" exception to LUBA's jurisdiction. Doty v. City of Bandon, 49 Or LUBA 411 (2005).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. An allegation that a Metropolitan Service District ordinance that amends a regional plan and the urban growth boundary (UGB) is inconsistent with that regional plan is a Goal 2 consistency issue and therefore is a matter that is within the Land Conservation and Development Commission's exclusive jurisdiction in a pending periodic review proceeding concerning the same ordinance. City of Sandy v. Metro, 48 Or LUBA 363 (2005).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. If the Metropolitan Service District's authority to amend a regional plan to mandate certain zoning protections for industrial lands were solely a question of whether the regional plan itself prohibits such mandates, that question would likely be an issue that is exclusively within the Land Conservation and Development Commission's exclusive jurisdiction in a pending periodic review of the amendment. However, where the question of whether the regional plan prohibits such mandates is intertwined with the question of whether other legal authorities prohibit such mandates, and LUBA has jurisdiction to consider whether those other legal authorities prohibit such mandates, LUBA also has jurisdiction to consider whether the regional plan prohibits the mandates. City of Sandy v. Metro, 48 Or LUBA 363 (2005).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. There is nothing in the language of ORS 197.025(1) and 268.385(1) that imposes a higher obligation on the Metropolitan Service District in performing its coordination obligation than is imposed under the Goal 2 coordination obligation. Therefore, in performing periodic review of a regional plan amendment, the Land Conservation and Development Commission will resolve the question of whether the Metropolitan Service District properly coordinated its decision, and LUBA does not have jurisdiction to consider that issue in a LUBA appeal of the same regional plan amendment. City of Sandy v. Metro, 48 Or LUBA 363 (2005).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. A county counsel stipulation in a mandamus proceeding zoning of property required the exercise of policy or legal judgment because the legal effect of an LCDC order on the property's zoning was not clear. Flying J, Inc. v. Marion County, 47 Or LUBA 637 (2004).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Whether a decision that changes the fee to file local appeals of land use decisions is codified in the zoning ordinance is not dispositive as to LUBA's jurisdiction under either the statutory definition or the fiscal decision exception. The essential questions are whether the challenged appeal fees (1) "concern" the application of a land use regulation and (2) are an integral part of the zoning code provisions governing the processing and review of land use applications. Friends of Linn County, 45 Or LUBA 408 (2003).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. When a land use decision involving appeal fees is bundled together with decisions involving other types of fees that standing alone would not fall within LUBA's jurisdiction, the question of our jurisdiction does not turn on whether the appeal fee is quantitatively a large or small component of the decision viewed as a whole. Friends of Linn County, 45 Or LUBA 408 (2003).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Local appeal fees implicate core land use concerns regarding access to and citizen participation in land use reviews. Given the integral role appeal fees play with respect to land use reviews, a decision affecting appeal fees is not subject to the fiscal exception to LUBA's jurisdiction, even where the challenged appeal fee is bundled together with a large number of other fee changes that have nothing to do with land use. Friends of Linn County, 45 Or LUBA 408 (2003).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where the challenged decision is adopted to fulfill a periodic review work task, and the issue before LUBA can be framed as either (1) a matter of compliance with a statute, comprehensive plan or land use regulation or (2) a matter of compliance with a statewide planning goal or administrative rule, LUBA has jurisdiction over the issue only if the statutory, plan or code obligation goes beyond or is different from the obligation imposed by the goal or rule. City of Woodburn v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 423 (2003).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. An argument that a county comprehensive plan amendment adopted to fulfill a periodic review work task is inconsistent with a city comprehensive plan provision is an issue that is cognizable as a Goal 2 consistency issue, and thus is an issue that is within LCDC's exclusive jurisdiction. City of Woodburn v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 423 (2003).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Findings challenges are necessarily derivative of the underlying criteria the findings address. Where the county code requires adoption of findings supporting legislative decisions, whether jurisdiction to review an adequate findings challenge in a legislative decision adopted to fulfill a periodic review work task lies with LUBA or LCDC depends on whether the findings address goal or rule compliance issues subject to LCDC's exclusive jurisdiction. City of Woodburn v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 423 (2003).

26. 4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. A local code requirement for findings demonstrating that legislative decisions are "in the public interest and will be of general public benefit" does not implicate any Goal or rule requirements, and thus a challenge that the local government failed to adopt adequate findings addressing that criterion in adopting a decision to fulfill a periodic review work task is subject to LUBA's exclusive jurisdiction. City of Woodburn v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 423 (2003).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Under OAR 660-033-0140(5) a forest template dwelling permit is valid for four years and can be extended for two additional years. Although OAR 660-033-0140(3) provides that such an extension of a permit for a forest template dwelling "is not subject to appeal as a land use decision," a county decision that grants a one-year extension of a forest template dwelling two years after it was issued, pursuant to general local legislation that allows permits to be extended, is a land use decision and is reviewable by LUBA. Butori v. Clatsop County, 45 Or LUBA 677 (2003).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. The scope of the "fiscal exception" to statewide land use planning standards generally and LUBA's jurisdiction in particular is not well defined, but an amendment to the fee charged to file a local appeal under a zoning ordinance does not qualify as a fiscal exception, notwithstanding that the decision adopting the fee change is not codified as part of the zoning ordinance. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 43 Or LUBA 270 (2002).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. ORS 197.825(2)(b), which states that LUBA's jurisdiction is subject to the statutes governing the Court of Appeals' review of LUBA decisions, simply clarifies that LUBA no longer has jurisdiction over an appeal once a party seeks judicial review of LUBA's final order in that appeal. ORS 197.825(2)(b) does not require that LUBA consider whether the Court of Appeals might lack constitutional authority to review LUBA's final order, or require that LUBA dismiss the appeal if it concludes that such is the case. Central Klamath County CAT v. Klamath County, 41 Or LUBA 524 (2002).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. In lieu of judicial review by the Court of Appeals of an order of the Columbia River Gorge Commission regarding any action of a county pursuant to the Columbia River Gorge Scenic Area Act, the county's decision may be appealed to LUBA. Such an appeal must be filed within 21 days after the Columbia River Gorge Commission decision becomes final and LUBA may not consider any issue concerning interpretation or implementation of the Columbia River Gorge Scenic Act. Lois Thompson Housing Project v. Multnomah County, 37 Or LUBA 580 (2000).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. An appeal to LUBA of a county decision under the Columbia River Gorge Scenic Act, prior to the date the Columbia River Gorge Commission issues a final decision reviewing the county decision, is premature and will be dismissed. Appellate jurisdiction for review of such a county decision in the first instance lies with the Columbia River Gorge Commission. Lois Thompson Housing Project v. Multnomah County, 37 Or LUBA 580 (2000).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Under Murphy Citizens Advisory Com. v. Josephine County, 325 Or 101, 934 P2d 415 (1997), a land use decision otherwise within LUBA's jurisdiction is not removed from LUBA's purview, pursuant to ORS 197.825(3), by a court order that is not a peremptory writ of mandamus. Murphy Citizens Advisory Committee v. Josephine County, 33 Or LUBA 882 (1997).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. An indication on the notice of adoption furnished to DLCD under ORS 197.610(1) that the Statewide Planning Goals do not apply to a proposed plan or code amendment or a new land use regulation is a ministerial act without independent significance, not a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Petersen v. Columbia County, 33 Or LUBA 253 (1997).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. The jurisdictional bar of ORS 197.015(10)(d) applies to both alternative and peremptory writs of mandamus, and excludes a local government decision issued in response to an alternative writ of mandamus from the definition of "land use decision." Arnold v. Columbia County, 32 Or LUBA 237 (1996).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where a circuit court issues an order requiring the county to approve four land use applications, and that order is the culmination of a mandamus proceeding, the county's subsequent approvals of the applications are issued "in response to a writ of mandamus" for purposes of the jurisdictional bar of ORS 197.015(10)(d)(B), notwithstanding the fact that the court's order is not itself a writ of mandamus. Estremado v. Jackson County, 32 Or LUBA 206 (1996).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. ORS 197.825(2)(c) excludes from LUBA's jurisdiction matters addressed during periodic review by DLCD and LCDC. Mazeski v. Wasco County, 31 Or LUBA 126 (1996).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. The Land Use Board of Appeals has no jurisdiction over expedited land division approvals. Jurisdiction for review of expedited land divisions rests instead with the Court of Appeals. Richey Lane Neigh. Assoc. v. Washington County, 31 Or LUBA 102 (1996).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. The Oregon Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction over decisions that involve the "project" component of the Westside Corridor Project. Kane v. Tri-County Metro Trans. Dist., 31 Or LUBA 41 (1996).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Notwithstanding the 1991 legislature's failure to amend ORS 197.825(c), which states exclusions from LUBA's jurisdiction, to refer to the statutes where the new periodic review process is codified, LUBA reads ORS 197.825(c) as if it were so amended. Mazeski v. Wasco County, 30 Or LUBA 442 (1995).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Under ORS 197.644 and ORS 197.825(c), issues arising during periodic review that involve compliance with the goals must be addressed and decided by LCDC, but other issues may be appealed to LUBA. Mazeski v. Wasco County, 30 Or LUBA 442 (1995).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Under OAR 660-25-040(1) and (2), LUBA retains jurisdiction during periodic review over matters that do not involve compliance with the Statewide Planning Goals. Mazeski v. Wasco County, 30 Or LUBA 442 (1995).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Even if county actions could otherwise be construed to be land use decisions, where the actions are mandated by a circuit court order in response to a writ of mandamus, they are not land use decisions over which LUBA has jurisdiction. Murphy Cit. Advisory Committee v. Josephine County, 30 Or LUBA 28 (1995).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Under OAR 661-10-010(3), a document containing findings of fact and conclusions of law that is signed by the mayor and attested by the city recorder is a final decision, but if the city has no authority to take the action reflected in the decision, the final decision is not a land use decision. Subsequent adoption with authority is a land use decision appealable to LUBA. DLCD v. City of St. Helens, 29 Or LUBA 485 (1995).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. A zoning code fees chapter which is an integral part of the zoning code provisions governing the processing and review of land use applications is not a purely fiscal ordinance, and its application to a local appeal of a hearings officer's decision on a land use application is not excepted from review by LUBA. Ramsey v. City of Portland, 29 Or LUBA 139 (1995).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. A local code chapter which allows a subdivider to recoup part of the costs of installing sewer improvements for a subdivision is purely a fiscal ordinance, and a decision applying such a fiscal ordinance is not a land use decision subject to review by LUBA. The Petrie Company v. City of Tigard, 28 Or LUBA 535 (1995).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Local government decisions granting design review approval for segments of a light rail transit line do not adopt or amend a city or county public facility plan and, therefore, are not excluded from being considered "land use decisions" under ORS 197.712(2)(e). Tri-County Metro. Trans. Dist. v. City of Beaverton, 28 Or LUBA 78 (1994).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. ORS 517.890 provides that appeals of provisional surface mining permits are governed by the provisions of "ORS 183.310 to 183.550 for appeals from orders in contested cases." Therefore, regardless of whether contested case procedures were observed in all respects during DOGAMI proceedings governed by ORS 183.480(2) and 183.482, jurisdiction to review DOGAMI's decision lies with the court of appeals, not LUBA. Hood River Sand, Gravel & Readi-Mix v. DOGAMI, 25 Or LUBA 668 (1993).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. If a single legislative decision both approves plan and land use regulation amendments with regard to some Goal 5 resource sites and denies such amendments with regard to other sites, such a legislative decision would not qualify as a decision from which an appeal to this Board is foreclosed under ORS 197.830(2) and 197.620(1). ODOT v. Klamath County, 25 Or LUBA 761 (1993).

26.4 LUBA Jurisdiction – Land Use Decision: Exclusions. Where the challenged decision is a governing body's directive to the county counsel to file a complaint in circuit court to enforce zoning regulations pursuant to ORS 197.825(3)(a), the challenged decision is not one over which LUBA has review authority. Wygant v. Curry County, 22 Or LUBA 110 (1991).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Failure to meet the preservation requirement of ORS 197.763(1) and ORS 197.835(3) and the exhaustion requirement of ORS 197.825(2)(a) and Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 79 P3d 382 (2003), rev den, 336 Or 615 (2004), removes issues from the scope of LUBA's review; it does not deprive LUBA of jurisdiction to review final land use decisions. Nehmzow v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 571 (2020).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where the petitioner's local appeal statement did not address an access easement and did not address, either by citation or reference to the operative language, a local code provision at all but, rather, included general statements regarding the petitioner's concern with the increased traffic that a development would create, the principle of exhaustion-waiver articulated in Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 79 P3d 382 (2003), rev den, 336 Or 615 (2004), precludes petitioner from raising the issues raised in those assignments of error at LUBA. Sanga v. City of Eugene, 81 Or LUBA 236 (2020).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a petitioner files a local appeal of a decision and the local government rejects the local appeal, the petitioner has exhausted all remedies available by right, within the meaning of ORS 197.825(2)(a). Hood River Valley Residents' Committee v. Hood River County, 77 Or LUBA 1 (2018).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a petitioner files a local appeal of a decision and the local government initially accepts the appeal and schedules a hearing, but later cancels the hearing and rejects the local appeal, the petitioner has exhausted all remedies available by right, within the meaning of ORS 197.825(2)(a). Hood River Valley Residents' Committee v. Hood River County, 77 Or LUBA 7 (2018).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a county's land development ordinance provides petitioner with the right to appeal its staff decision to a hearings officer, whether the county's provisions for appealing a planning director decision are permissive or mandatory, they are "remedies" that are "available by right" to petitioner, within the meaning of the ORS 197.825(2)(a) requirement that a petitioner exhaust available local remedies, and therefore LUBA lacks jurisdiction if petitioner did not avail herself of the county's procedures for local appeal. Levy v. Jackson County, 75 Or LUBA 401 (2017).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. A petitioner does not fail to exhaust administrative remedies within the meaning of ORS 197.825(2) by failing to file a local appeal of a decision made under the county's "ministerial review procedures" where the local code provides only the applicant with the right to appeal a decision to deny a permit using those ministerial review procedures. Agnew v. Josephine County, 75 Or LUBA 527 (2017).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. The interplay between ORS 197.830(3), allowing an extended 21-day period to appeal certain decisions directly to LUBA, and ORS 197.825(2)(a), requiring a party to exhaust all local appeals available by right, introduces jurisdictional uncertainty in some cases. Where the petitioner prudently requests a local appeal and also files a direct appeal to LUBA, LUBA typically suspends the LUBA proceeding until the local government determines whether a local appeal is available. Friends of the Lostine v. Wallowa County, 75 Or LUBA 546 (2017).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. A remedy that would remove the matter entirely from LUBA's review, such as requesting that a circuit court vacate a judgment related to a county land use decision, is not a remedy available "by right" that a petitioner must exhaust prior to seeking LUBA's review over the related land use decision. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 74 Or LUBA 38 (2016).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. If opponents of land use approval fail to comply with one or more mandatory requirements for perfecting a local appeal, but the county governing body nevertheless accepts the local appeal and renders a decision on the merits affirming the land use approval, opponents' failure to comply with those mandatory requirements may provide a basis for reversing the governing body's decision, but such failures do not mean opponents' LUBA appeal must be dismissed for failure to exhaust administrative remedies. Kaplowitz v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 601 (2016).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Generally, where a local appeal is available, that local appeal must be exhausted before filing an appeal with LUBA. Housing Land Advocates v. City of Happy Valley, 73 Or LUBA 405 (2016).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. A petitioner is not required to appeal a planning commission decision approving a comprehensive plan map amendment to the city council, where under applicable law a decision by the city council is required in any event to make the comprehensive plan map amendment final and effective. In that circumstance, a petitioner is not required by ORS 197.825(2)(a) to exhaust a remedy that would do no more than require the city council to do what applicable statutes and Goal 2 already require the city council to do. Housing Land Advocates v. City of Happy Valley, 73 Or LUBA 405 (2016).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a cross petition for review challenges the local government's application of a standard to a proposal for needed housing on the basis that the city may not apply the standard because it is not a "clear and objective standard" within the meaning of ORS 197.307(4), the cross petition for review may assign error to the city's application of the standard only if the issue was raised in the applicant's appeal statement appealing the hearings officer's decision to the planning commission, under ORS 197.825(2)(a) and the reasoning in Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 79 P3d 382 (2003). SE Neighbors Neighborhood Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 68 Or LUBA 51 (2013).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. The exhaustion waiver principle articulated in Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 79 P3d 382 (2003), is based in part on ORS 197.763, which applies to quasi-judicial land use decisions but does not apply to legislative land use decisions, and in part on the ORS 197.825(2)(a) exhaustion of remedies requirement. Therefore the Miles exhaustion waiver principle does not apply in an appeal of a legislative decision where there were no right of local appeal and no remedies to exhaust. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 68 Or LUBA 173 (2013).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. ORS 197.825(2)(a) and Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 79 P3d 382 (2003), do not limit the issues before LUBA to those issues specified in the local appeal to the governing body, where the local government's appeal regulations do not require specification or limitation of issues for that type of local appeal, and the governing body allowed and considered all issues raised by any party during the appeal proceeding. White v. Lane County, 68 Or LUBA 423 (2013).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a petitioner receives actual notice of a decision issued without a hearing and pursues a local appeal, any right to directly appeal the decision to LUBA pursuant to ORS 197.830(3) may be lost if it turns out no right of local appeal exists and the petitioner delays longer than 21 days from actual notice of the decision to appeal the decision to LUBA. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 66 Or LUBA 369 (2012).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. For the ORS 197.825(2)(a) exhaustion of local remedies requirement to serve its intended purpose, it is the decision rendered at the end of the local appeal process that must be appealed to LUBA, not the intermediate decision that led to the local appeal. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 63 Or LUBA 405 (2011).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. LUBA will not dismiss an appeal for failure to exhaust the right of local appeal to the governing body, where the petitioner filed a notice of local appeal that mistakenly identified as the subject of appeal the initial planning director's decision rather than the subsequent planning commission's decision, but the governing body and all parties understood the appeal to concern the planning commission's decision and the county in fact provided an appeal of the planning commission decision. Oberdorfer v. Harney County, 64 Or LUBA 47 (2011).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. The ORS 197.825(2)(a) requirement that a petitioner at LUBA first exhaust available local remedies does not require that a petitioner appeal a local government decision that petitioner agrees with. If another party appeals that decision and the local government ultimately adopts a different decision that petitioner does not agree with, the petitioner may appeal to LUBA. Families for a Quarry Free Neighborhood v. Lane County, 64 Or LUBA 297 (2011).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Exhaustion of any available local remedies is a mandatory prerequisite for LUBA to have jurisdiction to review a decision. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 63 Or LUBA 531 (2011).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. If a petitioner seeks a local appeal of a land use decision but terminates that local appeal before it is complete, the petitioner failed to exhaust an available remedy and LUBA must dismiss a direct appeal of the land use decision. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 63 Or LUBA 531 (2011).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. If a local government determines that petitioners abandoned their local appeal of a land use decision, but petitioners are allowed to pursue a local appeal of the abandonment determination, petitioners separate direct appeal of the underlying land use decision to LUBA must be dismissed, because petitioners have not yet exhausted their local appeal as required by ORS 197.825(2)(a). Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 63 Or LUBA 531 (2011).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. A petitioner does not waive her right to challenge a city's concept plan at LUBA by failing to appeal a Metro order finding that the concept plan complies with regional planning requirements, where Metro never conducted such a compliance review and never issued an order regarding compliance. Graser-Lindsey v. City of Oregon City, 59 Or LUBA 388 (2009).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where one LUBA petitioner filed a local appeal to the county board of commissioners but a second LUBA petitioner did not file her own local appeal, the second petitioner has nonetheless exhausted local remedies and will not be dismissed from a LUBA appeal of the commissioners' decision. Even if the second petitioner is required to appear at the local appeal hearing in order to satisfy the exhaustion requirement, LUBA will not dismiss that petitioner where the governing body declines to review the underlying decision and conducts no hearing on the appeal at which the petitioner could have appeared. Sommer v. Douglas County, 59 Or LUBA 535 (2009).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 79 P3d 382 (2003), did not overrule or modify Colwell v. Washington County, 79 Or App 82, 91, 718 P2d 747 (1986), and similar cases holding that the ORS 197.825(2)(a) exhaustion requirement does not require a petitioner to file a local appeal of a lower body's initial comprehensive plan amendment decision to the governing body, because applicable statutes require the governing body to conduct a hearing on the amendment in any event. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Notwithstanding that a county's code provides that the planning commission's decision on a comprehensive plan amendment is "final" unless a local appeal is filed, under ORS 215.060 the county governing body must hold a public hearing on the plan amendment and take final action, and therefore the planning commission's initial decision on the plan amendment is not "final" in any meaningful sense. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Even where a county's code provides for local appeal as one of three possible paths by which a governing body will review the planning commission's initial decision on a comprehensive plan amendment, because ORS 215.060 requires the governing body to hold a public hearing on a plan amendment at which testimony and issues can be raised, in that circumstance a petitioner before LUBA is not required to file a local appeal and specify issues in a notice of local appeal in order to exhaust administrative remedies or avoid waiver under Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 79 P3d 382 (2003). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a code provides for appeal of a planning commission decision to the governing body, the petitioner must exhaust that local remedy, even if the planning commission decision is part of a larger multi-step review process that will independently require additional proceedings before the governing body. The petitioner cannot instead of filing a local appeal of the planning commission decision wait to challenge that decision during the final proceedings before the governing body. VanSpeybroeck v. Tillamook County, 56 Or LUBA 184 (2008).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where intervenor-respondent argues that petitioners failed to exhaust administrative remedies but fails to identify the local administrative remedy that it believes was available, intervenor-respondent's argument is insufficiently developed for review. Zirker v. City of Bend, 55 Or LUBA 188 (2007).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where an issue raised before LUBA was not included in the local notice of appeal filed by petitioners, the petitioners have failed to exhaust their remedies under ORS 197.825(2)(a) and are precluded from raising the issue under Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 79 P3d 382 (2003). Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 55 Or LUBA 545 (2008).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. The waiver principle in Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 79 P3d 382 (2003), applies to require that a petitioner at LUBA have raised an issue in the local notice of appeal, notwithstanding that the issue may have been raised earlier in the local land use proceeding. That waiver principle does not apply where consideration of a local application for land use approval does not include a local right of appeal. Wasserburg v. City of Dunes City, 52 Or LUBA 70 (2006).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a notice of local appeal appeals related subdivision and planned unit development (PUD) approvals, but refers to "residential subdivision" in challenging the type of residential use allowed under both approvals, the local government errs in concluding that the appeal raises issues only with respect to the subdivision and not the PUD, under the reasoning in Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 79 P3d 283 (2003). Concerned Homeowners v. City of Creswell, 52 Or LUBA 620 (2006).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. While it is unusual for a petitioner to have to exhaust an appeal that is available before another unit of local government to challenge an annexation ordinance before appealing that annexation ordinance to LUBA, where applicable law provides that right of appeal and prevents the annexation ordinance from becoming final until that appeal is resolved, petitioner must exhaust that appeal before appealing to LUBA. City of Happy Valley v. City of Damascus, 51 Or LUBA 141 (2006).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where petitioners file a LUBA appeal to challenge a decision that petitioners mistakenly believed was a final county decision at the time the notice of intent to appeal was filed, and petitioners later file a local appeal to challenge that same decision, LUBA must dismiss the appeal for failure to first exhaust local remedies. Doyle v. Coos County, 49 Or LUBA 397 (2005).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where it is clear that the land use decision that is identified in a notice of intent to appeal is an administrative conditional use permit approval that is also the subject of a local appeal, LUBA must dismiss the appeal and will not interpret that notice of intent to appeal as an appeal of other possible land use decisions. Doyle v. Coos County, 49 Or LUBA 397 (2005).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. LUBA will not extend the ORS 197.763(1) "raise it or waive it" requirement to legislative proceedings, and a failure to raise an issue under ORS 197.763 is not correctly characterized as a failure to exhaust administrative remedies. Roads End Sanitary District v. City of Lincoln City, 48 Or LUBA 126 (2004).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. The logic of the exhaustion requirement at ORS 197.825(2)(a) dictates that, where the local government determines that the petitioner failed to perfect an otherwise available local remedy, LUBA has no jurisdiction over an appeal of the underlying decision. Under such circumstances, petitioner's only recourse is to appeal the decision rejecting the local appeal and demonstrate to LUBA that the local government erred in determining that petitioner failed to perfect the local appeal. Siuslaw Rod and Gun Club v. City of Florence, 47 Or LUBA 615 (2004).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. If a county governing body correctly rejects an attempted local appeal as not properly perfected, the planning commission decision that was the subject of the attempted local appeal becomes the county's final decision and a LUBA appeal seeking to directly challenge the planning commission decision will be dismissed for failure to exhaust available local remedies. Burke v. Crook County, 45 Or LUBA 516 (2003).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a county governing body determines that it has conflicts that prevent it from considering a local appeal of a planning commission decision, and rejects the appeal without identifying any appealable error on the local appellant's part: (1) the local appellant is not obligated to seek LUBA review of the county governing body's decision; (2) the local appellant has satisfied the statutory requirement that he exhaust local remedies before appealing to LUBA; and (3) the planning commission decision becomes the county's final decision and subject to appeal to LUBA. Burke v. Crook County, 45 Or LUBA 516 (2003).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. A party attempting to intervene in a LUBA appeal need only have appeared before the local government and file a timely motion to intervene with LUBA. Unlike petitioners before LUBA, there is no requirement that intervenors have exhausted all administrative remedies below. Comrie v. City of Pendleton, 45 Or LUBA 758 (2003).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. The purpose of the ORS 197.825(2)(a) exhaustion requirement is to ensure that the final decision is made by the highest local decision-making body before an appeal to LUBA is pursued. That purpose is satisfied notwithstanding that the petitioner did not file her own local appeal and did not obtain a decision from the highest local decision-making body on the merits of the permit application, where the petitioner appeared at the hearing on an appeal filed by another person before the local appeal was withdrawn and dismissed, and the effect of dismissal was to adopt an earlier tentative decision as the local government's final decision on the permit. Dead Indian Memorial Rd. Neigh. v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 597 (2002).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a land use decision is rendered without a hearing and parties belatedly learn of the decision, ORS 197.830(3) provides a right of direct appeal to LUBA except where petitioners also seek and are granted a local appeal. Warf v. Coos County, 42 Or LUBA 84 (2002).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. ORS 197.830(4) comprehensively addresses the situation where a local government makes a permit decision without a hearing pursuant to ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10). Warf v. Coos County, 42 Or LUBA 84 (2002).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. ORS 197.830(4) applies where a local government is attempting to render a permit decision without a prior hearing pursuant to ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10). ORS 197.830(3) applies in all other cases where a local government adopts a decision without providing a hearing, including where the local government mistakenly believes its decision is not a discretionary "permit" decision and for that reason does not provide the required notice and opportunity for a local appeal. Warf v. Coos County, 42 Or LUBA 84 (2002).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a local government cites no legal requirement that a petitioner must have (1) submitted written opposition to a proposed annexation with a request for public hearing and (2) appeared in person at the public meeting where the city council considered the written opposition and hearing request, LUBA will reject the local government's argument that both a written and personal appearance are required to exhaust local administrative remedies. Cape v. City of Beaverton, 40 Or LUBA 78 (2001).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. A petitioner may not challenge the merits of the underlying decision in an appeal of a local decision maker's determination that there is no local appeal available to challenge that decision. Robinson v. City of Silverton, 39 Or LUBA 792 (2001).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. A determination that there is no further local appeal under a local government's code is a land use decision that may be challenged at LUBA. Robinson v. City of Silverton, 39 Or LUBA 792 (2001).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. LUBA will not dismiss an appeal for failure to exhaust local administrative remedies where the local code provisions regarding appeals are ambiguous and petitioner followed a directive in a planning commission notice of decision that appeals from its decision would be directly to LUBA. Mountain West Investment v. City of Silverton, 39 Or LUBA 788 (2001).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where ORS 197.830(4) applies it provides a right to appeal directly to LUBA, within certain time limits, notwithstanding that the deadline for filing a local appeal has expired. In such circumstances, there is no local appeal available to be exhausted pursuant to ORS 197.825(2)(a). Neighbors for Sensible Dev. v. City of Sweet Home, 39 Or LUBA 766 (2001).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where the city council is legally obligated to review the planning commission's legislative recommendation to adopt proposed land use regulations, petitioner is not required to perform the redundant task of appealing the planning commission's decision to the city council. Home Depot, Inc. v. City of Beaverton, 37 Or LUBA 1020 (2000).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where the notice of a planning commission's legislative recommendation to the city council limited nonapplicant appeal rights to persons who appeared before the planning commission, but the city's violation of ORS 197.610(1) obviates the appearance requirement for petitioner, a local appeal of the planning commission's decision is not "available" to petitioner and petitioner need not exhaust such a local remedy in order to appeal the city council's decision to LUBA. Home Depot, Inc. v. City of Beaverton, 37 Or LUBA 1020 (2000).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where the availability of a local appeal is unclear and petitioner first seeks such a local appeal and then files a notice of intent to appeal with LUBA within 21 days after the local appeal is denied, petitioner's appeal to LUBA is timely. Hal's Construction, Inc. v. Clackamas County, 37 Or LUBA 981 (1999).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. LUBA will dismiss an appeal if the petitioner files both a local appeal and an appeal with LUBA and the county accepts the local appeal, because the county has made available to petitioner a local remedy that petitioner is required to exhaust before appealing to LUBA. McKy v. Josephine County, 36 Or LUBA 769 (1999).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a local government decision gives no hint that a local appeal is available and states that it is the local government's final decision, a petitioner does not fail to exhaust administrative remedies by appealing that decision to LUBA without attempting first to appeal the decision locally. Friends of Clean Living v. Polk County, 36 Or LUBA 544 (1999).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. An argument that a party failed to file a timely appeal of a local planning department's decision may, if correct, provide a basis for reversing the land use decision that ultimately resulted from the local appeal; but it would not provide a basis for dismissing the LUBA appeal. Wood v. Crook County, 36 Or LUBA 143 (1999).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where the county administratively approves development under ORS 215.416(11), but fails to provide an adjacent landowner with either the notice or the opportunity for local appeal required by statute, the time to file an appeal of that approval to LUBA is tolled until the landowner receives actual notice, pursuant to ORS 197.830(3). Bowlin v. Grant County, 35 Or LUBA 776 (1998).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Petitioners have no available administrative remedy to exhaust where petitioners do not receive notice of the planning director's decision in an administrative action, and therefore did not appear at the proceeding by filing the "timely written statement" required to appeal under local ordinance. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 33 Or LUBA 761 (1997).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. A local appellant exhausts local remedies as required by ORS 197.825(2)(a) by appealing the local decision to the hearings officer, where the board of county commissioners have by standing order declined to hear certain appeals of hearings officer decisions and the notice of decision states it is the county's final decision. Central Oregon Cellular, Inc. v. Deschutes County, 33 Or LUBA 345 (1997).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. An amendment to a county's comprehensive plan does not compel an identical amendment to the zoning ordinance, and petitioners are not required to exhaust administrative remedies available to a plan amendment approval in order to appeal a subsequent zone change. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes County, 33 Or LUBA 12 (1997).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Because petitioners failed to demonstrate the county's announcement of a higher appeal fee two hours before the deadline for filing a local appeal precluded them from exercising their local appeal rights, they failed to show they exhausted their local administrative remedies, and LUBA must dismiss. Westall v. Polk County, 32 Or LUBA 443 (1997).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Deficiencies alleged by petitioners in the notice of proposed action and the notice of decision do not excuse petitioners from exhausting available local remedies as required by ORS 197.825(2)(a) prior to appealing to LUBA. Walton v. Clackamas County, 32 Or LUBA 426 (1997).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. If there is no procedure available for the local appeal of a land use decision, it may be appealed directly to LUBA. No Casino Association v. Lincoln City, 30 Or LUBA 79 (1995).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. A petitioner must first pursue local administrative remedies prior to review by LUBA; however, those remedies must be both available and adequate to meet an applicant's needs. Reeves v. City of Tualatin, 31 Or LUBA 11 (1996).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. The exhaustion requirement of ORS 197.825(2)(a) is satisfied where the petitioner has appealed a decision on his application to the highest decision maker at the local level. Reeves v. City of Tualatin, 31 Or LUBA 11 (1996).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. If a city hearings officer issues an amended decision and the amendments are so integrated into the decision that a page-by-page review is required to locate them, petitioners may file a local appeal of the entire amended decision within the period allowed by local ordinance. Wilmington Neighbors v. City of Bend, 30 Or LUBA 415 (1996).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Requirement that LUBA must dismiss for lack of jurisdiction if a petitioner fails to exhaust all local remedies applies only when there is an available procedure which, if pursued successfully, would accomplish the petitioner's desired result. New v. Clackamas County, 30 Or LUBA 453 (1995).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. A local government must make clear prior to the commencement of a local appeal period that a local appeal is available or it cannot contend that a petitioner who fails to appeal locally has not exhausted all local remedies. New v. Clackamas County, 30 Or LUBA 453 (1995).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. When county ordinance is unclear and county decision maker's remarks were self-contradictory and confusing as to whether a local appeal was available, a local appeal was not an available local remedy that petitioner was required to exhaust prior to appealing to LUBA. New v. Clackamas County, 30 Or LUBA 453 (1995).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. The local appeal from an administrative decision provided by ORS 227.175(10) must be exhausted prior to an appeal to LUBA, which otherwise lacks jurisdiction under ORS 197.825(2)(a). Caraher v. City of Klamath Falls, 30 Or LUBA 204 (1995).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Since a local appeal is not available from an ORS 197.825 administrative decision made without authority, a petitioner may appeal the decision directly to LUBA. Caraher v. City of Klamath Falls, 30 Or LUBA 204 (1995).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. The purpose of ORS 197.825(2)(a) is to assure a local government decision is reviewed by the highest-level local decision-making body that the local code makes available, and a party's failure to exercise a right to a local appeal is grounds for dismissal of that party's appeal to LUBA. Shaffer v. City of Salem, 29 Or LUBA 479 (1995).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a local appeal is available, the purpose of the exhaustion requirement of ORS 197.825(2)(a) is to assure that the local government decision is reviewed by the highest level local decision making body the local code makes available, before an appeal to LUBA is pursued. Tarjoto v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 408 (1995).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. If a local government fails to provide the notice of a permit decision made without a hearing required by ORS 215.416(11) or 227.175(10), the time for filing a local appeal does not begin to run until an appellant is provided the notice of decision to which he or she is entitled. Because a local appeal is available to such an individual, under ORS 197.825(2)(a) that local appeal must be exhausted before appealing to LUBA. Tarjoto v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 408 (1995).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Although ORS 197.825(2)(a) requires that local appeals be exhausted, the fact that the local code may limit the scope of review of a local appellate body in considering a local appeal does not similarly limit LUBA's scope of review. Save Amazon Coalition v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 238 (1995).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where the local code provides petitioner has a right to initiate a minor comprehensive plan amendment, but only the local government can initiate a major plan amendment, and that the local government may refuse to do so for any reason, the process for local government-initiated plan amendments is not an administrative remedy petitioner is required to exhaust before seeking LUBA review of a local government decision that petitioner's proposed plan amendment is a major plan amendment. Cone v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 133 (1995).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where ORS 197.830(3) applies, it provides a petitioner with a right to appeal directly to LUBA, within the time limits established by ORS 197.830(3)(a) and (b), notwithstanding that the deadline for filing a local appeal may have expired. In such circumstances, there is no local appeal available to be exhausted pursuant to ORS 197.825(2)(a). Beveled Edge Machines, Inc. v. City of Dallas, 28 Or LUBA 790 (1995).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. A right to request rehearing or reconsideration by the highest local decision maker is not an "appeal" that a petitioner is obligated to exhaust before appealing to LUBA, pursuant to ORS 197.825(2)(a). Bowen v. City of Dunes City, 28 Or LUBA 324 (1994).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where petitioners were the prevailing parties after the initial local decision on an application, a local appeal of that initial decision was filed by another party, and petitioners participated in the local appeal proceedings, petitioners did not fail to exhaust available local administrative remedies, as required by ORS 197.825(2)(a). ONRC v. City of Oregon City, 28 Or LUBA 263 (1994).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Absent local code provisions analogous to ORS 197.830(3), where a notice of local hearing in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding fails to adequately describe the action ultimately taken by the local government and the time for filing a local appeal has expired, an adversely affected person's exclusive route of appeal is directly to LUBA. Kevedy, Inc. v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 227 (1994).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. If petitioner appeared in the local proceedings, and became entitled to notice of the local government's decision under ORS 227.173(3) or 215.416(10), petitioner cannot appeal that decision directly to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3), but rather must first exhaust any available local administrative remedies, as required by ORS 197.825(2)(a). Ramsey v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 763 (1994).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a petitioner seeks to avoid civil penalties by obtaining permit approval for mobile homes located on his property rather than by pursuing an available local appeal of the civil penalties, petitioner may not challenge the civil penalties at LUBA in an appeal of the local government's denial of the requested permits. Jones v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 193 (1994).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where the challenged decision is made by the highest level local decision maker possible and petitioner appeared before that decision maker, the exhaustion requirement of ORS 197.825(2)(a) is met. Tri-County Metro. Trans. Dist. v. City of Beaverton, 28 Or LUBA 78 (1994).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. A chief planner's letter rejecting an attempt to file a local appeal of an earlier document explaining how land use regulation provisions are interpreted and applied is a land use decision, if the letter applies land use regulation provisions governing local appeals in concluding that no appeal is available, and there is no further appeal of the chief planner's letter available which must be exhausted. ORS 197.015(10)(a)(A)(iii). Forest Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 26 Or LUBA 636 (1994).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where petitioner was the prevailing party after the initial local decision on an application, a local appeal of that initial decision was filed by another party to the proceeding, and petitioner participated in the local appeal proceedings, petitioner did not fail to exhaust his local administrative remedies simply because he did not file the local appeal. Choban v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 572 (1993).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a motion to dismiss is filed on the basis that petitioners failed to exhaust local remedies, but an appeal of a local government decision not to accept petitioners' local appeal of the decision challenged at LUBA is pending below, LUBA cannot determine whether petitioners failed to exhaust local remedies, and will suspend consideration of the motion to dismiss until the local government makes a final decision on whether to accept petitioners' local appeal. Hart v. Jefferson County, 25 Or LUBA 773 (1993).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where parties object that petitioner failed to properly perfect its local appeal, but the local government nevertheless allows the local appeal, petitioner satisfies the requirement that it exhaust available administrative remedies, as ORS 197.825(2)(a) requires. Although the local government may have committed reversible error in considering the local appeal, LUBA has jurisdiction to review the local government's final decision. Miller v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 169 (1993).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. That petitioner may be precluded from raising the issues it seeks to raise in a LUBA appeal because those issues were required to have been raised and resolved in an earlier stage of the local land use proceeding, which petitioner did not appeal, would not mean that LUBA would lack jurisdiction to review the challenged decision. Rather, in such circumstances, LUBA would be required to affirm the decision. DLCD v. Crook County, 24 Or LUBA 393 (1993).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. The requirement of ORS 197.825(2)(a) for exhaustion of administrative remedies is satisfied so long as one petitioner exhausts all available administrative remedies before a land use decision is appealed to LUBA. Glisan Street Assoc. v. City of Portland, 24 Or LUBA 600 (1992).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. The requirement of ORS 197.825(2)(a) that petitioners exhaust administrative remedies before appealing to LUBA is satisfied if at least one petitioner exhausted all available administrative remedies. Wilson Park Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Portland, 24 Or LUBA 98 (1992).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. The ORS 197.825(2)(a) requirement that administrative remedies be exhausted before appealing a land use decision to LUBA is satisfied if at least one petitioner exhausts all available administrative remedies. Goose Hollow Foothills League v. City of Portland, 24 Or LUBA 69 (1992).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. That a local government is required to provide particular individuals with written notice of a land use decision has no bearing on the requirement that available local administrative remedies be exhausted before appealing to LUBA. Pautler v. City of Lake Oswego, 23 Or LUBA 339 (1992).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. The purpose of the exhaustion requirement is to assure that the challenged decision is reviewed by the highest level local decision making body the code makes available, before an appeal to LUBA is pursued. Where petitioners did not initiate the local appeal, but did appear before the governing body, the exhaustion requirement of ORS 197.825(2)(a) is satisfied. Moody v. Deschutes County, 22 Or LUBA 567 (1992).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where the local code provides an unqualified right to a local appeal, petitioners must exhaust that local administrative remedy before appealing to LUBA. Kamppi v. City of Salem, 21 Or LUBA 498 (1991).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Petitioners are not excused from filing a local appeal on the basis that local government employees asserted that no local appeal of the challenged decision is available. Kamppi v. City of Salem, 21 Or LUBA 498 (1991).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a local code requires a determination of compliance with applicable ordinance requirements at the time of subdivision outline plan approval and that the final plat be approved if it is "in substantial conformance with the outline plan," a petitioner may not fail to appeal the decision granting outline plan approval and thereafter, in an appeal of the final plan approval, challenge the subdivision's compliance with plan and code provisions found to be satisfied at the time of outline plan approval. Sandler v. City of Ashland, 21 Or LUBA 483 (1991).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. LUBA will not dismiss an appeal for failure to exhaust administrative remedies below, where the available administrative remedies required that a person first appear and the local government rendered the challenged decision without providing a public hearing at which petitioner could have appeared. Rebmann v. Linn County, 21 Or LUBA 542 (1991).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where a local code gives "aggrieved parties" the right to appeal a decision, but does not require notice and a hearing prior to making that decision, petitioners were not given an opportunity to become "aggrieved parties" and therefore had no local remedies to exhaust. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 21 Or LUBA 515 (1991).

26.5 LUBA Jurisdiction – Exhaustion of Remedies. Where petitioners appeal a letter from the county court's counsel, stating the county court (1) has decided not to conduct any further review of petitioners' local appeal of a planning commission decision, and (2) considers the planning commission decision to be final, that letter constitutes the county's final decision on petitioners' local appeal, and petitioners have not failed to exhaust their administrative remedies. That the county court's decision not to conduct any further review of petitioners' appeal may have been erroneous does not affect LUBA's jurisdiction. Komning v. Grant County, 20 Or LUBA 481 (1990).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where a county has approved a petitioner's application for a nonfarm dwelling subject to a condition of approval; where the petitioner has constructed the nonfarm dwelling and related improvements; where the petitioner appeals a subsequent letter from county counsel concluding that the petitioner had not satisfied the condition and, thus, that the approval had expired; and where LUBA concludes that it lacks jurisdiction to review the letter; but where the county or an opponent may commence an enforcement action requiring the petitioner to remove the nonfarm dwelling and related improvements that may involve the county's interpretation of the condition, LUBA will conclude that the issues raised in the appeal are not moot and transfer the appeal to circuit court, rather than dismissing the appeal. Schofield v. Douglas County, 81 Or LUBA 143 (2020).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. When all appeal fees originally charged by the county are refunded and the county has conceded that no appeal fees should have been charged, an opinion issued by LUBA would be in essence an advisory opinion. LUBA typically declines to issue advisory opinions. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 136 (2018).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. LUBA will not suspend a proceeding where petitioners have not established that LUBA's resolution of the pending LUBA appeal would likely be rendered moot by a concurrently pending circuit court proceeding. Although a circuit court could ultimately decide, in a future remand proceeding from the Court of Appeals, to grant petitioners full injunctive relief which could potentially be in conflict with, or moot LUBA's ruling, where such an outcome is extremely likely, LUBA will not grant petitioners' motion for stay. LUBA is a creature of statute, and can exercise only those powers granted by the legislature, and according to ORS 197.805 and ORS 197.830(10)(a), LUBA's mandate is that "time is of the essence in reaching final decisions in matters involving land use." Bishop v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 1050 (2018).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. LUBA will deny petitioners' motion for reconsideration of a motion to stay the proceedings, where petitioners argue for the first time that LUBA should grant a continuance under ORS 197.840(1)(d) and (2), and to suspend the 77-day deadline to resolve an appeal, where LUBA considered petitioners' arguments and responses thereto in the underlying motion to stay the proceedings, and LUBA remains unpersuaded that, to the extent the "ends of justice" would be served by indefinitely suspending the appeal, those ends outweigh the best interest of the public and the parties in meeting the 77-day deadline. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 1075 (2018).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. LUBA will decline to dismiss an appeal as moot based on extra-record evidence that the factual predicate for four of the assignments of error has been eliminated, where even if the evidence were properly before LUBA, the movant has not established that the changed factual predicate fully resolves the four assignments of error, or otherwise would render LUBA's review of no practical effect. McNichols v. City of Canby, 78 Or LUBA 1090 (2018).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. An argument that the issue raised in an assignment of error is waived is not a basis to dismiss the appeal as moot. If LUBA agrees with that argument, the appropriate disposition would be to deny the assignment of error and affirm the local government's decision, not to dismiss the appeal as moot. McNichols v. City of Canby, 78 Or LUBA 1090 (2018).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. A declaration signed by the county planning manager that a land use compatibility decision on appeal to LUBA is no longer "valid" is a sufficient basis for LUBA to conclude that the appeal is moot, notwithstanding the informality of the declaration and the absence of express words of revocation or rescission. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 15 (2018).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. The "capable of repetition" prong of ORS 14.175 is not satisfied by the hypothetical possibility that in the future the applicant for a land use decision that the applicant has abandoned and the county has declared invalid could file a new application to obtain a new decision on the same terms or attempt to persuade the county to revive the invalid decision. If ORS 14.175 were that easy to satisfy, it would be nearly impossible for a local government to moot an appeal by revoking or rescinding the decision on appeal. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 15 (2018).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where LUBA dismisses as moot an appeal of a land use decision, LUBA will also dismiss as moot a companion appeal of a decision rejecting the local appeal of the moot decision. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 15 (2018).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where LUBA cannot tell what legal effect, if any, an applicant's decision to "abandon/withdraw" its application for a permit approval has on the resulting permit approval decision that is the subject of a pending LUBA appeal, the appeal is not moot. Hagan v. City of Grants Pass, 76 Or LUBA 196 (2017).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. A decision by the electorate to reject an annexation that has been approved by the governing body renders moot a pending LUBA appeal of the land use decision that approved the annexation. Altamont Homeowners' Association v. City of Happy Valley, 76 Or LUBA 338 (2017).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where a challenged local government land use decision has been rescinded by the local government, and the decision rescinding the challenged decision has not been appealed, any decision LUBA might reach on the merits of the challenged decision would be without practical effect, and LUBA will dismiss the appeal as moot. Altamont Homeowners' Association v. City of Happy Valley, 76 Or LUBA 338 (2017).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where a city's voters reject an annexation, that rejection has the legal effect of rescinding the previously adopted city council land use decision approving annexation, and the voters' rejection of the annexation renders any decision LUBA might reach on the merits of the land use decision approving annexation without practical effect, and the appeal is therefore moot. Altamont Homeowners' Association v. City of Happy Valley, 76 Or LUBA 338 (2017).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where intervenor applied for, and received, two consecutive land use compatibility statements (LUCS), and argues it has now abandoned any reliance on the first LUCS decision, and instead has chosen to proceed with development pursuant to the second LUCS decision, the intervenor's current intent does not necessarily render the first LUCS decision ineffective. Unless and until the local government takes action to withdraw, revoke, or supersede the first LUCS decision, it remains as a potential basis for intervenor to proceed with development based on the LUCS as a final and binding county decision, and is therefore not moot. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 76 Or LUBA 515 (2017).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where mootness is at issue, the jurisdictional arguments tend to evolve over the course of the pleadings or can be updated by more recent events. Where intervenor's reply memorandum adds a new argument to its motion to dismiss on the basis of mootness—that the appeals are moot based on a letter the intervenor recently sent to a state agency—and petitioners have responded to that new argument in a motion to strike, LUBA will consider both the reply memorandum and petitioners' countervailing arguments in resolving the pending motion to dismiss. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 76 Or LUBA 515 (2017).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. An appeal of a county's decision concluding that a tract consists of three legal lots of record is not mooted by, or a collateral attack upon, the county's subsequent unappealed decision to approve property line adjustments between the lots, where the property line decision was based on the prior lot of record determination and does not provide an independent basis for that determination. Grimstad v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 360 (2016).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Petitioner's appeal of a decision approving several property line adjustments is not rendered moot by the applicant's reapplication for approval of the property line adjustments, where the decision on the reapplication is not yet final and the applicant could withdraw that reapplication at any time. Bowerman v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 644 (2016).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. An appeal of a decision granting property line adjustments that was rendered without providing notice and an opportunity for a local appeal is not rendered moot by a reapplication followed by notice and an opportunity for appeal, where petitioner's petition for review is not limited to assigning error to the failure to provide notice and an opportunity for local appeal and also assigns error to the substance of the property line adjustment decision. Bowerman v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 644 (2016).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where an application for property line adjustments is appealed to LUBA, while that appeal is pending at LUBA the local government lacks jurisdiction to accept a reapplication for those property line adjustments and render a modified decision on the application. Bowerman v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 644 (2016).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. A local governing body's decision to deny an application to extend a previously approved CUP that was subject to a former version of the local code does not have any effect on a planning director's decision that was made after a different application was filed under a newly enacted version of the local code and does not render an appeal to LUBA of that planning director decision moot. Devin Oil Co. Inc. v. Morrow County, 70 Or LUBA 420 (2014).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. An appeal challenging a zoning classification decision that a methadone clinic is permitted in a professional office zone is not rendered moot by the commencement of operation of the methadone clinic. One of the possible outcomes of the appeal is a remand such that the methadone clinic would not be permitted to operate in the zone. Mariposa Townhouses v. City of Medford, 68 Or LUBA 479 (2013).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. LUBA has no authority to issue declaratory rulings regarding the county's "underlying practices" or whether the county's land use regulations comply with state law. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 67 Or LUBA 29 (2013).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. An exception to the general prohibition on LUBA deciding moot appeals, for decisions that are "capable of repetition, yet evading review," is not applicable where the applicant withdraws the application, and the local code specifies that a withdrawal of an application after a decision is made by the county renders the decision "void." In that circumstance, LUBA will dismiss the appeal as moot, because the county's alleged procedural errors in failing to process an application as a statutory permit and to provide notice and an opportunity for public participation are capable of being reviewed in a future appeal of a different decision on a different application. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 67 Or LUBA 29 (2013).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where a county has issued temporary use permits to authorize a music festival on EFU-zoned land for the past two years, the record strongly suggests the county will be asked to issue additional such permit in the future, and those permits are issued so close to the day of the music festival that there is not time to appeal the temporary use permit to LUBA and receive a decision on the merits, the "capable of repetition yet evading review" exception to the mootness doctrine applies and LUBA has jurisdiction to consider the appeal. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 66 Or LUBA 454 (2012).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. In its decision in Yancy v. Shatzer, 337 Or 345, 359-60, 97 P3d 1161 (2004), the Oregon Supreme Court held that the power granted to the judicial branch under the Oregon Constitution does not permit courts to decide moot cases, even if they are capable of repetition yet evading review. However LUBA is not a judicial branch court and is not similarly limited, and LUBA does apply the generally accepted mootness doctrine exception for moot cases that are capable of repetition yet evading review. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 66 Or LUBA 454 (2012).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. While a decision to extend an ORS 215.402 permit decision pursuant to discretionary extension standards may also constitute a separate permit decision, the legal effect of such an extension is to extend the expiration date of the underlying permit approval, not to supersede or re-authorize the underlying permit approval. Therefore, the issuance of a permit extension does not moot an appeal of the underlying permit decision to LUBA. Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. A local government cannot moot an otherwise properly filed appeal of an ORS 215.402 permit decision to LUBA by issuing subsequent ministerial approvals, such as building permits, intended to implement the appealed permit decision. Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. An appeal by four property owners that challenges a county decision that finds that noise from a wind generating facility does not violate noise standards with regard to three residences is not rendered moot by the county's finding that the wind generating facility must be modified so that it does not violate the noise standard with regard to a fourth dwelling, where the evidentiary record does not show that the measures that will be taken to meet the noise standard at the fourth dwelling will also be adequate to meet the noise standard at the three dwellings. Mingo v. Morrow County, 63 Or LUBA 357 (2011).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where there is no dispute that an ordinance appealed to LUBA has been repealed, review of the ordinance would have no practical effect, even where a local government adopted other decisions based on the repealed ordinance while it was effective, and LUBA will dismiss the appeal of the repealed ordinance. Jacobsen v. City of Winston, 61 Or LUBA 465 (2010).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where a city readopts an earlier land use decision that authorized an election on a proposed annexation so that the proposed annexation would be sent to the voters for a second time, petitioners are entitled to challenge that readopted land use decision at LUBA, notwithstanding that an earlier LUBA appeal of the first land use decision was dismissed as moot after the voters rejected the annexation proposal. But where the voters reject the proposed annexation at the second election, before LUBA issues its decision on the merits, the second appeal must also be dismissed as moot. Kehoe v. City of Oregon City, 58 Or LUBA 552 (2009).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. LUBA's review of a city's extension of an invalidated moratorium would have no practical effect where that extension has expired, and dismissal of the LUBA appeal is the appropriate remedy. Thunderbird Hotels, LLC v. City of Portland, 56 Or LUBA 430 (2008).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Even though a zoning compliance letter that authorizes certain uses and allows for permits to be obtained for one year has expired, the decision that those uses are allowed is a land use decision and it does not become moot once the one-year period for acting on that authorization expires and permits have been obtained. Examilotis v. Coos County, 55 Or LUBA 675 (2007).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Petitioners' argument that a prior zoning ordinance did not allow a mushroom buying business is moot, where the currently applicable zoning ordinance that replaced the prior zoning ordinance does not allow a mushroom buying business and would apply to any application for a mushroom buying business in the future. Robson v. City of La Grande, 54 Or LUBA 10 (2007).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Any assignments of error directed at a decision that LUBA has reversed in a consolidated appeal are moot, and hence LUBA will dismiss as moot an appeal limited to such assignments of error. Grabhorn v. Washington County, 50 Or LUBA 344 (2005).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. An appeal to LUBA is not moot simply because the local government mails another copy of the challenged decision to the parties, with a "corrected" attachment, during the course of the LUBA appeal, where it is clear that the local government did not intend the re-mailed decision to replace the challenged decision, and the re-mailed decision does not purport to do so. Grabhorn v. Washington County, 49 Or LUBA 746 (2005).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. The fact that LUBA has in a previous decision remanded plan amendments that petitioners allege prohibit a grading permit on the subject property does not moot an appeal of a grading permit for the property to LUBA, where (1) it is not clear that LUBA's remand rendered the plan amendments ineffective and (2), even if the amendments are ineffective, the unamended plan provisions include similar operative language that arguably prohibits the challenged permit decision. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 566 (2004).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. LUBA will dismiss as moot appeals of ordinances adopting a city's comprehensive plan and land use regulations, where those ordinances are superseded by county plan and zoning regulations encompassing the same geographic area. McGreer v. City of Rajneeshpuram, 46 Or LUBA 607 (2004).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. A decision that effectively withdraws or repeals an earlier decision finding that a disputed berm requires a county permit, and that reserves final judgment on that issue to a subsequent decision, moots an appeal of the earlier decision. Grabhorn v. Washington County, 46 Or LUBA 672 (2004).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. An appeal of a resolution that authorizes a city to acquire property is not moot where the city has acquired only a part of the property that the resolution authorizes the city to purchase. Willamette Oaks, LLC v. City of Eugene, 46 Or LUBA 813 (2004).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. An appeal of a county decision verifying a nonconforming use is not necessarily moot simply because the subject property is annexed into a city after the appeal to LUBA is filed. Although city annexation means that the county loses jurisdiction over the subject property, annexation does not affect the validity of the county decision, and LUBA's review of the county decision will continue to have a practical effect on the parties. Leach v. Lane County, 45 Or LUBA 580 (2003).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Plan amendment and development approvals that are contingent upon voter approval of an annexation are not necessarily mooted by failure of the annexation election, where the plan amendment and development approvals are not contingent upon a specific election, and may yet take effect if there is a successful future annexation referral. Mason v. City of Corvallis, 45 Or LUBA 682 (2003).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. LUBA will dismiss as moot an appeal of a permit that expired by operation of a local rule during the three-year period when the parties had stipulated to suspend the appeal before LUBA. Rest Haven Memorial Park v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 228 (2003).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where the challenged permit has expired, LUBA's decision on the merits of an appeal of the permit would have no effect on the rights or obligations of the parties under the permit, and would constitute an advisory opinion. LUBA has no jurisdiction to render advisory opinions. Rest Haven Memorial Park v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 231 (2003).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Findings adopted after a land use decision is appealed to LUBA cannot support that decision, and do not moot the appeal. West Side Rural F.P.D v. City of Hood River, 43 Or LUBA 546 (2003).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. LUBA will consider documents that are not included in the record in deciding whether an appeal is moot. Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 39 Or LUBA 743 (2000).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where LUBA has determined in a prior earlier appeal that a conditional use permit has expired, a subsequent appeal challenging a city decision that refuses to revoke the conditional use permit or delete certain conditions of approval in the conditional use permit is moot. Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 39 Or LUBA 353 (2001).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where a local government adopts modified findings in support of a land use compatibility statement and the modified findings are appealed to LUBA, an earlier appeal of the land use compatibility statement will be dismissed as moot because review of the earlier decision would have no practical effect. Friends of Clean Living v. Polk County, 36 Or LUBA 544 (1999).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Petitioners' appeal of a zone change approval is not rendered moot by a contemporaneous comprehensive plan amendment that redesignates the subject property from "Urban Area Reserve" to "Urban Area." Although a county cannot allow more intensive uses on property than are allowed by the plan, it may impose more restrictive zoning than would be permitted under the plan. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes County, 33 Or LUBA 12 (1997).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Issues raised concerning a local government's interpretation of code demolition delay provisions are moot if (1) no stay of the challenged decision was requested from or granted by LUBA, the historic building in question was demolished, and petitioner does not contend it could be restored; or (2) even under petitioner's suggested interpretation of the demolition delay provisions, the demolition delay period has expired. Champion v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 618 (1995).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where a code provision is challenged on the basis that it is inconsistent with the requirements of the statute it implements, but the code provision is subsequently amended so that it is consistent with the statute, the challenge to the prior code provision is moot. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where the trees that are the subject of the challenged city decision authorizing removal of trees within a city right-of-way have been cut and removed, LUBA review will have no practical effect, and LUBA will dismiss the appeal as moot. Gettman v. City of Bay City, 28 Or LUBA 121 (1994).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where a local government renders a final decision approving an application for land use approval, and that decision is appealed to LUBA, the LUBA appeal is not rendered moot by withdrawal of the application for land use approval, where the local code does not make it clear that withdrawal of the application in such circumstances has any legal effect on the local government's final decision. Davis v. City of Bandon, 28 Or LUBA 38 (1994).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. A LUBA appeal of a local government decision applying local code historic landmark and demolition delay provisions is not moot, simply because those provisions involve voluntary efforts to preserve historic resources and do not authorize the local government to prohibit demolition. Historical Development Advocates v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 617 (1994).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Allegations that a local code provision consolidating commonly owned parcels conflicts with ORS 92.017, which provides that a lawfully created lot or parcel shall remain a discrete lot or parcel, are rendered moot and provide no basis for reversal or remand, where the parcels in question were combined in an approved and recorded plat. Van Veldhuizen v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 468 (1994).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where a challenged local government land use decision has been rescinded by the local government, and the decision rescinding the challenged decision has not been appealed, any decision LUBA might reach on the merits of the challenged decision would be without practical effect and LUBA will dismiss the appeal as moot. Heiller v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 555 (1993).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. In determining whether a land use decision is moot, the question is whether a decision by LUBA on the merits would resolve merely an abstract question and be without practical effect. Forest Highlands Neigh. Assoc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 24 Or LUBA 215 (1992).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where it is not clear from the local code that the applicant's withdrawal of a permit application after the local government makes a decision approving it has any effect on that decision, the withdrawal does not in itself make an appeal of such decision to LUBA moot. Berg v. Linn County, 22 Or LUBA 507 (1992).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. When LUBA's decision on the merits of an appeal will be without practical effect, LUBA will dismiss the appeal as moot. LUBA does not have authority in these circumstances to remand the challenged decision to the local government with instructions to dismiss the local proceedings as moot. Barr v. City of Portland, 22 Or LUBA 504 (1991).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where it is not clear from the local code that the applicant's withdrawal of a permit application after the local government makes a decision approving it has any effect on that decision, the withdrawal does not necessarily make an appeal of such decision to LUBA moot. Gilson v. City of Portland, 22 Or LUBA 343 (1991).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. LUBA does not have authority to take official notice of adjudicative facts, as set out in OEC 201. LUBA's review is limited by ORS 197.830(13)(a) to the record of the proceeding below, except in instances where an evidentiary hearing is authorized by ORS 197.830(13)(b), and where facts outside the record are essential to determining whether LUBA has jurisdiction or whether an appeal is moot. Blatt v. City of Portland, 21 Or LUBA 337 (1991).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where a subsequent local government decision is substantially identical to a prior decision, is based on the same findings and evidentiary record and does not purport to supersede or rescind the earlier decision, the subsequent decision does not moot an appeal to LUBA challenging the earlier decision. Tice v. Josephine County, 21 Or LUBA 550 (1991).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. LUBA will dismiss an appeal as moot, where review would have no practical effect. Davis v. City of Bandon, 19 Or LUBA 526 (1990).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where a moratorium challenged at LUBA expires, but the moratorium has been extended by a subsequent moratorium which is the subject of a later LUBA appeal and the subsequent moratorium is also likely to expire before a final decision can be issued in the LUBA appeal challenging that moratorium, LUBA's decision in the appeal challenging the first moratorium may influence the local government's decision to adopt additional moratoria and, therefore, may have practical effect. Davis v. City of Bandon, 19 Or LUBA 526 (1990).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. The exception to the judicial doctrine of mootness to provide guidance to administrative agencies in cases involving the public welfare has been significantly narrowed by the Oregon Supreme Court. If the only reason for continuing with an appeal challenging an expired moratorium was the public interest in knowing whether the expired moratorium was properly enacted, the appeal would have to be dismissed as moot. Davis v. City of Bandon, 19 Or LUBA 526 (1990).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Where a local government adopts successive moratoria with effective dates which guarantee LUBA will be unable to reach the merits of a challenged moratorium before it expires, and petitioner does everything possible to bring the appeal to a conclusion before the challenged moratorium expires and is replaced by another moratorium, the exception to the judicial doctrine of mootness for cases capable of repetition yet evading review is applicable. Davis v. City of Bandon, 19 Or LUBA 526 (1990).

26.6 LUBA Jurisdiction – Mootness. Petitioners' appeal of a decision adopting a moratorium is not rendered moot by the expiration of the moratorium, where invalidation of the challenged moratorium may entitle petitioners to have their application for land development approval reviewed under standards in effect when the challenged moratorium was adopted, rather than under subsequently adopted land use regulations. Davis v. City of Bandon, 19 Or LUBA 523 (1990).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Where a county adopts an ordinance that amends its comprehensive plan map in conjunction with a city's urban growth boundary (UGB) amendment, and the county's ordinance is submitted in conjunction with the city's UGB amendment to the Department of Land Conservation and Development for review, under ORS 197.825(2)(c)(A), LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review the county's decision. Swalley Irrigation District v. Deschutes County, 59 Or LUBA 192 (2009).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. ORS 215.780(2) and ORS 197.835(6) and (7) together limit LUBA's scope of review when considering an appeal of a post-acknowledgement plan amendment to impose reduced minimum lot or parcel sizes in an EFU zone pursuant to ORS 215.780(2) to exclude review for statewide planning goal compliance, where the reduced minimum lot or parcel sizes have already been reviewed for compliance with the statewide planning goals by the Land Conservation and Development Commission under ORS 215.780(2) and found to comply with the statewide planning goals. Thompson v. Umatilla County, 54 Or LUBA 531 (2007).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Under former OAR 660-025-0040(2), LUBA has jurisdiction over issues that do not involve compliance with the statewide planning goals. Gordon v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 618 (2007).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Under 2003 statutes, LCDC and LUBA both have jurisdiction to review land use decisions that are adopted in whole or in part to comply with periodic review. LCDC reviews such decisions to ensure, among other things, that the local government's plans and land use regulations are "achieving the statewide planning goals." ORS 197.628(3)(d); OAR 660-025-0070(4). Century Properties, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 50 Or LUBA 691 (2005).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. LUBA's scope of review over periodic review land use decisions extends to all legal issues that are properly within LUBA's statutory scope of review, but it does not include review for compliance with statewide planning goals or other questions that are within LCDC's scope of review in periodic review. Century Properties, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 50 Or LUBA 691 (2005).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. LUBA's scope of review under ORS 197.835(9) must be read together with and is limited by ORS 197.825(2)(c), which excludes periodic review matters over which LCDC has review authority under ORS 197.628 to 197.650. Under those statutes, a city land use decision could be narrowly tailored to comply with a periodic review work task, and still be reversible by LUBA because it exceeds the city's jurisdiction, is based on an improper construction of a law that LCDC does not consider in periodic review or because the city committed procedural errors in adopting the decision. Century Properties, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 50 Or LUBA 691 (2005).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. A Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) periodic review order that merely makes assumptions about a local ordinance, but does not attempt to resolve an ambiguity, is not identical to an issue before LUBA regarding the proper interpretation of that ambiguous ordinance, and issue preclusion does not bar

LUBA's consideration of the interpretive issue. Flying J. Inc. v. Marion County, 49 Or LUBA 28 (2005).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. A minor dispute, which was withdrawn before a decision was made, regarding the zoning of 2.2 acres in a Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) periodic review order concerning the rural community designation of a large interchange area is not essential to a final decision on the merits in the order. Therefore, issue preclusion does not bar LUBA's consideration of the issue. Flying J. Inc. v. Marion County, 49 Or LUBA 28 (2005).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Goal 14, factors 3 through 7 implicitly require a determination that the sites chosen to be included in an urban growth boundary (UGB) are better than other alternative sites that are also considered for inclusion and rejected. Therefore, a local code provision requiring a demonstration that "the recommended site was better than alternative sites," does not "go further" or require more than the requirements of Goal 14, and assignments of error concerning that local code provision therefore involve "matters" that fall within the Land Conservation and Development Commission's exclusive jurisdiction in periodic review. City of West Linn v. Metro, 49 Or LUBA 403 (2005).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. If the Metropolitan Service District's authority to amend a regional plan to mandate certain zoning protections for industrial lands were solely a question of whether the regional plan itself prohibits such mandates, that question would likely be an issue that is exclusively within the Land Conservation and Development Commission's exclusive jurisdiction in a pending periodic review of the amendment. However, where the question of whether the regional plan prohibits such mandates is intertwined with the question of whether other legal authorities prohibit such mandates, and LUBA has jurisdiction to consider whether those other legal authorities prohibit such mandates, LUBA also has jurisdiction to consider whether the regional plan prohibits the mandates. City of Sandy v. Metro, 48 Or LUBA 363 (2005).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. There is nothing in the language of ORS 197.025(1) and 268.385(1) that imposes a higher obligation on the Metropolitan Service District in performing its coordination obligation than is imposed under the Goal 2 coordination obligation. Therefore, in performing periodic review of a regional plan amendment, the Land Conservation and Development Commission will resolve the question of whether the Metropolitan Service District properly coordinated its decision, and LUBA does not have jurisdiction to consider that issue in a LUBA appeal of the same regional plan amendment. City of Sandy v. Metro, 48 Or LUBA 363 (2005).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. A county counsel stipulation in a mandamus proceeding zoning of property required the exercise of policy or legal judgment because the legal effect of an LCDC order on the property's zoning was not clear. Flying J, Inc. v. Marion County, 47 Or LUBA 637 (2004).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Even assuming that a county decision in response to a periodic review work task includes matters within LUBA's scope of review, LUBA has no jurisdiction to review the county decision where petitioners fail to appeal the county decision to LUBA within the time specified in ORS 197.830(9). Colony v. Wallowa County, 46 Or LUBA 586 (2004).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Assignments of error arguing that an ordinance adopted to satisfy a periodic review work task does not comply with Goals 2 and 14 are matters subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Land Conservation and Development Commission. Manning v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 1 (2003).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Where county comprehensive plan standards for identifying agricultural land implement the Goal 3 definition of agricultural land, and an evidentiary challenge to a finding under the comprehensive plan standards that certain land is agricultural land is inseparable from the question of whether that land is agricultural land under Goal 3, LUBA lacks jurisdiction to address the challenge under the county's comprehensive plan standards. Manning v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 1 (2003).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. The Land Conservation and Development Commission has exclusive jurisdiction to review allegations that a county's proceedings under periodic review failed to comply with Goal 1 and LCDC's rules for conducting periodic review. Manning v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 1 (2003).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. LUBA has exclusive jurisdiction to review allegations that a county's proceedings failed to comply with procedural requirements that are independent of goal or administrative-rule based procedural requirements. Manning v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 1 (2003).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Where the challenged decision is adopted to fulfill a periodic review work task, and the issue before LUBA can be framed as either (1) a matter of compliance with a statute, comprehensive plan or land use regulation or (2) a matter of compliance with a statewide planning goal or administrative rule, LUBA has jurisdiction over the issue only if the statutory, plan or code obligation goes beyond or is different from the obligation imposed by the goal or rule. City of Woodburn v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 423 (2003).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. An argument that a county comprehensive plan amendment adopted to fulfill a periodic review work task is inconsistent with a city comprehensive plan provision is an issue that is cognizable as a Goal 2 consistency issue, and thus is an issue that is within LCDC's exclusive jurisdiction. City of Woodburn v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 423 (2003).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Findings challenges are necessarily derivative of the underlying criteria the findings address. Where the county code requires adoption of findings supporting legislative decisions, whether jurisdiction to review an adequate findings challenge in a legislative decision adopted to fulfill a periodic review work task lies with LUBA or LCDC depends on whether the findings address goal or rule compliance issues subject to LCDC's exclusive jurisdiction. City of Woodburn v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 423 (2003).

26. 7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. A local code requirement for findings demonstrating that legislative decisions are "in the public interest and will be of general public benefit" does not implicate any Goal or rule requirements, and thus a challenge that the local government failed to adopt adequate findings addressing that criterion in adopting a decision to fulfill a periodic review work task is subject to LUBA's exclusive jurisdiction. City of Woodburn v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 423 (2003).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. ORS 197.090(2) requires DLCD to obtain approval from LCDC prior to filing an appeal with LUBA, but allows DLCD to obtain approval after the fact if the decision being appealed becomes final less than 15 days before the next LCDC meeting or no meeting is scheduled during the appeal period. However, nothing in the statute indicates that the timing of approval has jurisdictional significance, or that LUBA loses jurisdiction over the appeal if DLCD erroneously obtains after-the-fact approval rather than prior approval. DLCD v. Douglas County, 40 Or LUBA 604 (2001).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Under ORS 197.644(2) and OAR 660-025-0040, it is possible for the Land Conservation and Development Commission and LUBA to have concurrent jurisdiction over the same land use decision, albeit each may have exclusive jurisdiction over different issues arising from the decision. DLCD v. City of McMinnville, 40 Or LUBA 591 (2001).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. LUBA has jurisdiction under ORS 197.644(2), ORS 197.825(2)(c) and OAR 660-025-0040(1) over a decision amending a city's comprehensive plan housing inventory, notwithstanding that the city is undergoing periodic review, where the decision was not adopted to implement the city's periodic review work program or any work program tasks. DLCD v. City of McMinnville, 40 Or LUBA 591 (2001).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. In reviewing a land use decision, LUBA's scope of review does not include matters over which LCDC has acknowledgment review authority under ORS 197.251. Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 40 Or LUBA 426 (2001).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Where a transportation plan has been submitted to LCDC for acknowledgment review and LCDC has conducted that review with regard to Goal 12 and the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR), LUBA does not have authority to thereafter review the regional transportation plan for compliance with the TPR. That limit on LUBA's scope of review is not affected by the fact that the TPR was adopted to implement both Goal 12 and the ORS 197.712(2)(e) obligation concerning public facility plans, where the statutory obligation is not shown to impose transportation planning obligations that are different than those imposed by Goal 12. Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 40 Or LUBA 426 (2001).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review a regional transportation plan to determine whether it is consistent with a regional framework plan consistency requirement, where such consistency is also required by Goal 2 and LCDC has jurisdiction to review the regional framework plan and regional transportation plan for compliance with Goal 2. Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 40 Or LUBA 426 (2001).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. A regional framework plan requirement for "findings" that a transportation plan is consistent with the regional framework plan is not within LUBA's scope of review where both plans have been submitted to LCDC for acknowledgment review under ORS 197.251. LCDC's review for plan-to-plan consistency under Goal 2 either includes review of the "findings" requirement or renders it legally irrelevant. Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 40 Or LUBA 426 (2001).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Where a regional transportation plan that is submitted to LCDC for acknowledgment review under ORS 197.251 is also appealed to LUBA, and the issues raised in the petition for review arguably are within LCDC's jurisdiction under ORS 197.825(2)(c), it is appropriate to suspend the LUBA appeal for 120 days pursuant to ORS 197.840(1) and (4). Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 39 Or LUBA 807 (2001).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Although a decision may qualify as a land use decision subject to LUBA review, ORS 197.825(2)(c) provides that LUBA lacks jurisdiction to consider statewide planning goal compliance issues in conducting that review, where the challenged decision is also subject to review by LCDC under ORS 197.251. Commercial Real Estate Economic Coalition v. Metro, 37 Or LUBA 171 (1999).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. LUBA has jurisdiction to resolve goal compliance challenges to quasi-judicial post-acknowledgment plan amendments notwithstanding that those amendments rely on data developed for work program tasks that are undergoing periodic review. Citizens for Florence v. City of Florence, 35 Or LUBA 255 (1998).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Where the petition for review challenging a post-acknowledgment decision raises an issue concerning the propriety of the city relying on documents that were prepared for a pending periodic review, the issue of whether ORS 197.644(2) and OAR 660-025-0040 deprive LUBA of jurisdiction to review the challenged decision is necessarily presented and may be included in a state agency brief submitted under ORS 197.830(7). Citizens for Florence v. City of Florence, 34 Or LUBA 793 (1998).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. During periodic review, the existing, acknowledged versions of the county's plan and zoning ordinance continue to apply until they are amended as a result of the acknowledgment of a final decision. Where periodic review is ongoing, the county may amend its plan and zoning map by redesignating and rezoning property to any existing acknowledged designation or zone, as long as the amendment does not violate any statute, rule or statewide planning goal, and LUBA has jurisdiction to review such amendments. Brown v. Jefferson County, 33 Or LUBA 418 (1997).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Prior to the submission of a petition for review, if LUBA cannot tell whether petitioners' appeal will include issues that do not relate to goal compliance, a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction will not be allowed. Torgeson v. Clackamas County, 31 Or LUBA 554 (1996).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. LUBA's jurisdiction over appeals of decisions arising out of the periodic review process is limited to matters that do not involve compliance with the goals. Torgeson v. Clackamas County, 31 Or LUBA 554 (1996).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Where the county converted its periodic review procedures from those established under 1989 statutes to the procedures established by 1991 statutes, and the challenged decisions were "additional work" done by the county as provided for in Oregon Laws 1993, chapter 435, section 1(3), LUBA's jurisdiction over those decisions is governed by the 1991 statute, which grants LCDC exclusive jurisdiction to review completed work program tasks. Torgeson v. Clackamas County, 31 Or LUBA 554 (1996).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Under Oregon Laws 1993, chapter 435, section 1, where a county submitted a final periodic review order to DLCD prior to December 31, 1993, and there was no final disposition of the order by that date, the county's final periodic review order was "under review" by DLCD on December 31, 1993. Torgeson v. Clackamas County, 31 Or LUBA 554 (1996).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Where the notices of intent to appeal a decision adopted by the city as part of a periodic review work program suggest that petitioners intend to raise challenges which are unrelated to goal compliance, LUBA will retain jurisdiction over those issues, and a motion for continuance under ORS 197.840 will be denied. Lewis v. City of Portland, 31 Or LUBA 513 (1996).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. LCDC does not have exclusive jurisdiction over all issues arising out of a periodic review work program; under OAR 660-25-040(1), LUBA retains jurisdiction over matters that do not involve compliance with the goals. Lewis v. City of Portland, 31 Or LUBA 513 (1996).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Under OAR 660-25-040, while LCDC has exclusive authority to review local government work task decisions for goal compliance, LUBA retains jurisdiction to review land use decisions for issues that do not involve goal compliance. Bice v. Jackson County, 30 Or LUBA 439 (1995).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. ORS 197.825(2), which excludes from LUBA's jurisdiction those matters over which LCDC has review authority, does not alter LUBA's continuing jurisdiction over non-goal compliance issues. Bice v. Jackson County, 30 Or LUBA 439 (1995).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Petitioner's argument that a decision to approve a building permit is a land use decision because the decision requires the application of a LCDC enforcement order fails where the enforcement order does not establish land use standards for the issuance of building permits. Broderson v. Jackson County, 28 Or LUBA 645 (1995).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Where, under applicable 1991 statutory provisions, (1) a local government elected to proceed with periodic review under the 1989 statutes that were in effect when its periodic review was initiated, and (2) a comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendment adopted as part of such periodic review is appealed to LUBA, LUBA's review is governed by the statutes in effect in 1989. Williams v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 602 (1994).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Under applicable 1989 statutory provisions, matters subject to periodic review by DLCD were excluded from LUBA's jurisdiction. Under ORS 197.640(3)(1989), where a plan or land use regulation amendment is subject to periodic review, DLCD has review authority over matters concerning the amendment's compliance with the statewide planning goals. Williams v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 602 (1994).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review LCDC acknowledgment orders. ORS 197.825(2)(c). Subject to review by the appellate courts, once an LCDC acknowledgment order is issued, it forecloses an appeal to LUBA on any issue that was raised or could have been raised in the LCDC acknowledgment proceedings concerning goal compliance. Redland/Viola/Fischer's Mill CPO v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 560 (1994).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. LUBA no longer has authority to defer its review of appeals challenging decisions submitted for LCDC review under the pre-1991 periodic review process, because Oregon Laws 1993, chapter 435, repeals the statute authorizing LCDC continuation of previously initiated periodic reviews under the pre-1991 periodic review process. Williams v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 612 (19/93).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Where the challenged local government decision is submitted to DLCD for periodic review pursuant to ORS 197.640 to 197.650(1989), LUBA only has review authority over those issues raised in the petition for review that are not subject to periodic review. Williams v. Clackamas County, 25 Or LUBA 812 (1993).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Where it is unclear whether issues other than ones subject to periodic review will be raised in the petition for review, LUBA will not dismiss the appeal on the basis that the challenged decision has been submitted to DLCD for periodic review, but rather will defer its consideration of the challenged decision pending completion of periodic review. Williams v. Clackamas County, 25 Or LUBA 812 (1993).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. In periodic review, DLCD is not limited in its goal compliance review of post-acknowledgment plan and land use regulation amendments to particular goal requirements that may have triggered a periodic review factor under ORS 197.640(3) (1989). Therefore, while LUBA has concurrent jurisdiction to review post-acknowledgment plan and land use regulation amendments submitted for periodic review, under ORS 197.825(2)(c) (1989) LUBA's scope of review over such amendments does not include review for goal compliance. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of Troutdale, 23 Or LUBA 219 (1992).

26.7 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of LCDC Proceedings. Where periodic review of comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendments is pending before the Department of Land Conservation and Development (DLCD) and those amendments are also appealed to LUBA, ORS 197.840(1)(a) and (4) provide that LUBA may defer its review until DLCD completes periodic review. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of Troutdale, 20 Or LUBA 563 (1991).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. ORS 215.429(2) and ORS 197.015(10)(e)(B) appear to divest LUBA of jurisdiction over local government decisions issued after a petition for a writ of mandamus has been filed. Where a mandamus proceeding regarding a land use application and a LUBA appeal of the local government's decision on the same application are simultaneously pending, LUBA will grant a continuance of the 77-day period for issuance of its final opinion under ORS 197.830(14) until the mandamus proceeding has concluded. Proceeding with the LUBA appeal could result in conflicting decisions, and therefore possibly a "miscarriage of justice" under ORS 197.840(2)(a). Kine v. Deschutes County, 79 Or LUBA 1035 (2019).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. It would be inconsistent with sound principles of judicial review, ORS 197.805, for LUBA to resolve a constitutional challenge to the procedure a city uses to approve an annexation, in a direct appeal of the city decision approving the annexation, when the same issue is pending before a circuit court in a writ of mandamus proceeding between the same parties, seeking to compel the city to approve the annexation under a different procedure. J4J Misc PAC v. City of Jefferson, 75 Or LUBA 120 (2017).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. A circuit court order that requires the two owners of a common tract to enter into an agreement with each other to pay taxes and maintenance costs does not preclude a county from interpreting a partition condition of approval to require one or both tract owners to enter into separate agreements with the county to ensure maintenance of the common tract, or obligate the county to interpret the condition of approval to require the two owners to enter into an agreement with each other. Kuhn v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 190 (2016).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. A remedy that would remove the matter entirely from LUBA's review, such as requesting that a circuit court vacate a judgment related to a county land use decision, is not a remedy available "by right" that a petitioner must exhaust prior to seeking LUBA's review over the related land use decision. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 74 Or LUBA 38 (2016).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. While a circuit court has exclusive authority to modify a 1976 decree recognizing a vested right to development, where in 2013 the applicant seeks county approval to alter or expand that vested right and the county enters into a stipulation with the applicant approving the proposed alteration or expansion, that the circuit court agrees to modify the 1976 decree to reflect the stipulation does not change the fact that the stipulation itself is an alteration or expansion of a nonconforming use, and hence a land use decision subject to LUBA's exclusive jurisdiction. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 74 Or LUBA 38 (2016).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. LUBA lacks authority to review a circuit court order or action. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 74 Or LUBA 38 (2016).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. Where a petition for writ of mandamus to compel a decision approving a permit application was filed with the circuit court before the earliest date on which the county took action to reduce its final decision to writing, the circuit court has exclusive jurisdiction regarding the permit application. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 73 Or LUBA 98 (2016).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. Where a petitioner's notice of intent to appeal a decision was filed at LUBA after the board of county commissioners was unable to take action on a local appeal of a planning director's decision that approved a permit application, but before the board of county commissioners reduced its decision to writing, the notice of intent to appeal was filed prematurely. Where the permit applicant files a petition for writ of mandamus more than 14 days after the board of commissioners' hearing at which they failed to take action, and before the board of commissioners approved the minutes of that hearing, the circuit court has exclusive jurisdiction regarding the permit application, and LUBA does not have jurisdiction over the appeal. ORS 215.429(2) and (4). Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 73 Or LUBA 98 (2016).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. A stipulated agreement between a local government and a landowner to resolve a land use dispute can concern the application of land use regulations, and thus constitute a "land use decision" as defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a), even in circumstances where the stipulated agreement is the basis to resolve a related action in circuit court. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 73 Or LUBA 382 (2016).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. LUBA has exclusive jurisdiction to review appeals of a land use decision, in order to resolve the parties' arguments regarding whether the decision complies with applicable land use standards. Where a circuit court accepts the stipulated agreement of a county and a property owner to resolve a civil proceeding between the parties, the circuit court does not engage in any kind of review of the stipulation against land use standards, and the circuit court's acceptance of the stipulation does not necessarily mean that the stipulation is not a land use decision subject to LUBA's review. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 73 Or LUBA 382 (2016).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. LUBA has exclusive jurisdiction over a city council decision that amends the city's Goal 5 inventory of historic resources to remove property, notwithstanding that following the city council decision a circuit court decided a mandamus action in the property owner's favor based on the stipulation of the parties that the city council had removed the property from the inventory. Because the circuit court judgment did not determine that the property owner was entitled to removal from the inventory under state law, but simply reflected the parties' stipulation regarding the outcome of the city council's decision, LUBA's review of the city council decision cannot conflict with the circuit court judgment. Lake Oswego Preservation Society v. City of Lake Oswego, 70 Or LUBA 103 (2014).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. Under ORS 215.429(2), once a petition for writ of mandamus is filed under the 120/150-day rule, the circuit court has exclusive jurisdiction over a permit application and any decision rendered on that permit application. Where a permit decision has been appealed to LUBA and withdrawn by the county for reconsideration under 197.830(13)(b), and the permit applicant files a petition for writ of mandamus arguing a violation of the 120/150-day rule, the county loses jurisdiction to reconsider the permit decision and LUBA loses jurisdiction as well. However, LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss the appeal where the county has moved to dismiss the mandamus proceeding, contending that the 120/150-day rule only applies to the county's initial permit decision that was appealed to LUBA and not to a reconsidered decision under 197.830(13)(b). In that circumstance the county and LUBA would again have jurisdiction over the permit application and decision if the mandamus proceeding is dismissed, and LUBA will await a final decision on the county's motion to dismiss before taking final action on the applicant's motion to dismiss. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 63 Or LUBA 547 (2011).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. ORS 227.179(2) provides that upon filing a petition for writ of mandamus, "jurisdiction for all decisions regarding the application * * * shall be with the circuit court." Therefore, after petitioner filed a petition for writ of mandamus in circuit court arguing that the city violated the 120-day requirement of ORS 227.178(1), the circuit court has exclusive jurisdiction over the application, and the city lacks jurisdiction thereafter to issue a decision regarding the application. Stewart v. City of Salem, 61 Or LUBA 77 (2010).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. Because ORS 227.179(2) divests a city from jurisdiction to issue a decision "regarding the application" after a petition for writ of mandamus is filed, and LUBA's review of the merits of that post-writ decision would also result in a decision "regarding the application," ORS 227.179(2) also divests LUBA of jurisdiction to review the city's post-writ decision. Stewart v. City of Salem, 61 Or LUBA 77 (2010).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. Where petitioner filed a writ of mandamus action against the city for allegedly failing to issue a permit decision within 120 days of the date the application was complete, and an appeal of the circuit court decision denying the writ is pending before the Court of Appeals, LUBA will suspend petitioner's appeal of the city's post-writ decision denying the permit pending resolution of the Court of Appeals mandamus proceeding, in the interest of judicial economy and consistent with sound principles of judicial review. Stewart v. City of Salem, 61 Or LUBA 487 (2010).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. The jurisdiction of the circuit courts to enforce conditions of approval is not relevant where no enforcement action has been brought by the local government to enforce conditions of approval. Just v. Linn County, 59 Or LUBA 233 (2009).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. A circuit court decision in an unrelated case under Ballot Measure 37 based on stipulated facts is not binding on the county or LUBA in a later proceeding under a different Ballot Measure 37 claim where the relevant facts are disputed. Reeves v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 452 (2007).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Statute of Ultimate Repose. When a local government makes a statutory permit decision without providing a hearing as required by ORS 197.763(1), the local government has not provided a required hearing under ORS 197.830(6)(b) and the three-year statute of ultimate repose does not apply. Michaels v. Douglas County, 53 Or LUBA 16 (2006).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. The ORS 197.015(10)(e) exception to LUBA's jurisdiction for writs of mandamus issued pursuant to ORS 215.429 or 227.179 applies only when the writ is based on an alleged violation of the statutory 120-day deadline for issuing a final decision. A writ of mandamus filed for another reason does not deprive LUBA of jurisdiction over a land use decision approving a manufactured home subdivision, even if the writ involves the same property. D & B Home Investments v. City of Donald, 51 Or LUBA 1 (2006).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. When a local government enforces its own land use regulations through its own procedures, those actions may result in land use decisions that can be appealed to LUBA, and ORS 197.825(3)(a) does not divest LUBA of jurisdiction. When a local government decides to pursue enforcement of its local land use regulations in circuit court pursuant to ORS 197.825(3)(a), however, jurisdiction properly lies with the circuit court, and the determination to pursue enforcement in circuit court is not a land use decision. Johnston v. Marion County, 51 Or LUBA 250 (2006).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. When a local government makes a decision to enforce its regulations or not to enforce its regulations in circuit court, that decision of where to contest (or not contest) the land use issues is not a land use decision as defined by ORS 197.015(10). Conversely, when a local government makes a decision to enforce its regulations (or that no violation exists) at the local level, that decision may be a land use decision subject to our review, provided it meets the statutory definition of a land use decision. Johnston v. Marion County, 51 Or LUBA 250 (2006).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. Where a local government has adopted a generally applicable procedure under which it corrects violations of a variety of local laws by filing actions in circuit court, a local government decision that an existing use of property does not constitute a violation of its zoning ordinance that would justify filing a circuit court action under that procedure is not a land use decision. Wells v. Yamhill County, 51 Or LUBA 659 (2006).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. An interpretation made by county counsel in a stipulated dismissal in a circuit court mandamus proceeding is not entitled to deference under ORS 197.829(1). Flying J. Inc. v. Marion County, 49 Or LUBA 28 (2005).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. A county counsel stipulation in a mandamus proceeding zoning of property required the exercise of policy or legal judgment because the legal effect of an LCDC order on the property's zoning was not clear. Flying J, Inc. v. Marion County, 47 Or LUBA 637 (2004).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. A county counsel stipulation in a mandamus proceeding that purports to determine the zoning of property is in essence a declaratory ruling interpreting an ambiguous ordinance concerning the zoning of property and is a final determination subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Flying J, Inc. v. Marion County, 47 Or LUBA 637 (2004).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. Under ORS 197.825(3)(a), a local government may elect to enforce its land use regulations, and if such an enforcement action is filed in circuit court, the court has jurisdiction to consider any land use issues that might arise. Yost v. Deschutes County, 37 Or LUBA 653 (2000).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. A local government decision not to institute action in circuit court to enforce its land use regulations is not itself a land use decision, provided the local government's decision is not rendered pursuant to a local procedure that necessarily leads to a land use decision, as defined by ORS 197.015(10)(a). Yost v. Deschutes County, 37 Or LUBA 653 (2000).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. Where a local government's land use regulations make it clear that staff determinations describing the uses to which property may be put are informal decisions rather than final county decisions, and those decisions are rendered outside formal local government land use procedures for decision making and declaratory rulings, such decisions do not constitute land use decisions that may be appealed to LUBA. Yost v. Deschutes County, 37 Or LUBA 653 (2000).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. LUBA does not have jurisdiction over an appeal from a circuit court decision arising from a local government code enforcement proceeding. Reeves v. City of Wilsonville, 35 Or LUBA 253 (1998).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. LUBA does not have jurisdiction to enforce a circuit court injunction requiring that a structure be reduced in size. Femling v. Coos County, 34 Or LUBA 328 (1998).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. Under Murphy Citizens Advisory Com. v. Josephine County, 325 Or 101, 934 P2d 415 (1997), a land use decision otherwise within LUBA's jurisdiction is not removed from LUBA's purview, pursuant to ORS 197.825(3), by a court order that is not a peremptory writ of mandamus. Murphy Citizens Advisory Committee v. Josephine County, 33 Or LUBA 882 (1997).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. The jurisdictional bar of ORS 197.015(10)(d) applies to both alternative and peremptory writs of mandamus, and excludes a local government decision issued in response to an alternative writ of mandamus from the definition of "land use decision." Arnold v. Columbia County, 32 Or LUBA 237 (1996).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. Where a circuit court issues an order requiring the county to approve four land use applications, and that order is the culmination of a mandamus proceeding, the county's subsequent approvals of the applications are issued "in response to a writ of mandamus" for purposes of the jurisdictional bar of ORS 197.015(10)(d)(B), notwithstanding the fact that the court's order is not itself a writ of mandamus. Estremado v. Jackson County, 32 Or LUBA 206 (1996).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. The existence of a writ of mandamus remedy in circuit court under ORS 227.178(7) for delay in processing an application does not affect either the city's review of the application or LUBA's jurisdiction if the remedy is not exercised. Sullivan v. City of Woodburn, 31 Or LUBA 192 (1996).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. When a petition for writ of mandamus is filed in circuit court pursuant to ORS 227.178(7), the city is divested of any jurisdiction to render a land use decision. When the circuit court issues the writ of mandamus, ordering the city to approve the underlying application, the city's order is not a land use decision over which LUBA has jurisdiction. Milks v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 502 (1995).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. Where a mandamus proceeding seeking approval of a permit application under ORS 215.428(7) is pending, it is in the interest of judicial economy and consistent with sound principles governing judicial review, to suspend a LUBA appeal pending the outcome of the circuit court proceeding. Cascade Pumice, Inc. v. Deschutes County, 28 Or LUBA 787 (1995).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. If a land use decision is made in a local government proceeding to enforce its land use regulations, under ORS 197.825(1) LUBA has exclusive jurisdiction for initial review of that land use decision. If no appeal to LUBA is filed, or after any review by LUBA is complete and the local government's decision is affirmed, the local government may then seek to enforce its decision in a circuit court proceeding under ORS 197.825(3)(a). Watson v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 164 (1994).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. Circuit court jurisdiction to grant declaratory relief does not include jurisdiction to make a land use decision in the process of granting declaratory relief. The appropriate local government must render any required land use decisions. DLCD v. Benton County, 27 Or LUBA 49 (1994).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. If a circuit court transfers an appeal to LUBA under ORS 19.230(5), and LUBA's jurisdiction is contested, LUBA must determine whether it has jurisdiction over the challenged decision. If LUBA determines it has jurisdiction, there is no jurisdictional dispute to refer to the court of appeals. Kaady v. City of Cannon Beach, 26 Or LUBA 614 (1993).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. After a mandamus proceeding has been initiated pursuant to ORS 215.428(7), a county retains jurisdiction to make a "land use decision" on a pending permit application at any time before the circuit court issues a final judgment in the mandamus proceeding. Although made while circuit court mandamus proceedings are pending, such a "land use decision" is reviewable by LUBA under ORS 197.825(1). Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 507 (1993).

26.8 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Circuit Court Proceedings. A stipulation between county officials and a permit applicant, entered into as part of circuit court mandamus proceedings under ORS 215.428(7), in which the county promises it will subsequently issue the requested permit subject to certain conditions, is not a land use decision subject to LUBA's review. Murphy Citizens Advisory Comm. v. Josephine County, 25 Or LUBA 507 (1993).

26.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Statute of Ultimate Repose. Where a hearing was required and provided, ORS 197.830(6)(a) applies, and the appeal period for appealing a PAPA may not exceed three years after the date of the decision. Dobson v. City of Hines, 80 Or LUBA 469 (2019).

26.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Statute of Ultimate Repose. The general 10-year statute of ultimate repose at ORS 12.140 for commencing "actions" does not apply to appeals to LUBA. Proceedings before LUBA are not "actions" for purposes of ORS 12.140, but are proceedings comprehensively governed by ORS chapter 197, including the specific statue of ultimate repose for LUBA appeals at ORS 197.830(6). Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

26.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Statute of Ultimate Repose. Challenges to the correctness or validity of a previous permit decision that was not appealed amount to an impermissible collateral attack on a final land use decision. Such challenges do not provide a basis for reversal or remand of a later land use decision involving the same property. Just v. Linn County, 59 Or LUBA 233 (2009).

26.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Statute of Ultimate Repose. The ORS 197.830(6) three-year statute of ultimate repose includes an exception to the three-year limit when notice of a hearing is not provided, but it does not include an exception when notice of a hearing is provided but the notice does not adequately describe the local government's final actions. Salem Golf Club, Inc. v. City of Salem, 58 Or LUBA 339 (2009).

26.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Statute of Ultimate Repose. Where the local government failed to provide either (1) a "notice of a hearing" required by ORS 197.763 or (2) notice of an "administrative decision" required by ORS 197.195, ORS 197.830(6)(b) provides that the statute of ultimate repose in ORS 197.830(6)(a) does not apply. Failure to provide notice required by other statutes or by local codes do not provide an exception to the three-year statute of ultimate repose. Kamp v. Washington County, 51 Or LUBA 670 (2006).

26.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Statute of Ultimate Repose. Notice of withdrawal of a permit application required by local ordinance is not "notice of a hearing" required by ORS 197.763, and failure to provide such notice of withdrawal does not invoke the exception to the statute of ultimate repose at ORS 197.803(6)(b). Kamp v. Washington County, 51 Or LUBA 670 (2006).

26.9 LUBA Jurisdiction – Statute of Ultimate Repose. Failure to provide notice of withdrawal of a permit application required by local ordinance is not a failure to provide the "notice of decision" required by the statutes governing limited land use decisions at ORS 197.195, for purposes of the statute of ultimate repose at ORS 197.830(6), where it is undisputed that the subject property is not within an urban growth boundary and for that reason alone a decision with respect to the application cannot be a limited land use decision. Kamp v. Washington County, 51 Or LUBA 670 (2006).

26.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 37 (ORS 197.352 (2005)). Under Measure 37, specifically under ORS 197.352(9) (2005), public entity decisions to modify or to waive land use laws in response to Measure 37 claims were not land use decisions and were therefore not reviewable by LUBA. Public entity decisions that were issued following those modification or waiver decisions, which applied modified land use laws or land use laws that were not waived under Measure 37 were land use decisions and were reviewable by LUBA. DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

26.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 37 (ORS 197.352 (2005)). LUBA has jurisdiction to review decisions that post-date and rely on Ballot Measure 37 waivers, if those decisions apply land use laws that were not waived under Ballot Measure 37. However, in those appeals LUBA's scope of review does not include challenges to the underlying Ballot Measure 37 waiver. DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

26.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 37 (ORS 197.352 (2005)). Decisions under ORS 197.352(8) about whether land use laws should be or can be waived under Ballot Measure 37 are not land use decisions and are not reviewable by LUBA. But where questions arise about the scope of previously issued Ballot Measure 37 waivers in subsequent land use decisions that rely on those Ballot Measure 37 waivers, LUBA's scope of review includes resolving any ambiguities about the scope of a previously issued Ballot Measure 37 waiver. DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

26.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 37 (ORS 197.352). Where the state specifically waives only Goal 3 and related statutes and administrative rules, an argument that the state should also have waived Goals 7, 11 and 14 is beyond LUBA's scope of review and must be asserted in a different forum. The only question LUBA may decide is which goals and regulations the state actually waived. DLCD v. Jefferson County, 55 Or LUBA 625 (2008).

26.10 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 37 (ORS 197.352). A local government's decision determining that a subdivision application complies with all applicable land use regulations is not a decision under ORS 197.352(9) that is exempt from LUBA's jurisdiction; rather, the decision is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Welch v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 697 (2007).

26.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 49. Where the county determined that petitioner had not established a right to construct a Measure 49 dwelling on the subject property, and the county did not apply any county siting standards, the county's decision is not a land use decision under ORS 195.318(1) and, thereby, is not subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Vannett Properties, LLC v. Lane County, 78 Or LUBA 345 (2018).

26.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 49. A decision that approves the adjustment of a property line between two existing parcels that were previously created by partition authorized by a Ballot Measure 49 DLCD Final Order is not a decision "under" Section 11 of Measure 49, because the county did not review the property line adjustment application under the authority of Section 11. Rather, it reviewed the application under the county zoning ordinance criteria applicable to property line adjustments. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 74 Or LUBA 268 (2016).

26.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 49. Under Section 5(3) of Ballot Measure 49 (2007), a property owner may complete construction of a use that was authorized under a previously issued Ballot Measure 37 (2004) waiver, if the property owner can establish that he or she has a common law vested right to complete construction of a use that was authorized under a Ballot Measure 37 waiver. Under ORS 195.318(1), LUBA would likely not have jurisdiction to review a vested right determination under Subsection 5(3) of Measure 49, however, where the property owner claims to have a vested right based on a previously issued building permit, not a Ballot Measure 37 waiver, LUBA has review jurisdiction over a county decision that the property owner does not have a vested right under the building permit. Crosley v. Columbia County, 65 Or LUBA 164 (2012).

26.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 49. Section 11 of Measure 49 requires local governments to apply both local and statutory standards that govern approvals of subdivisions, partitions and development applications based on Measure 49 homesite approvals, including a statutory requirement to cluster development. A decision that applies the standards set out in Section 11 is a decision "under" Section 11 for purposes of the jurisdictional exclusion in Section 16 of Measure 49, ORS 195.318(1), which provides that a determination "under" sections 5 to 11 of Measure 49 is not a land use decision. Maguire v. Clackamas County, 64 Or LUBA 288 (2011).

26.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 49 (ORS 195.300 to 195.336). Under the Court of Appeals' decision in Pete's Mountain Homeowners Assn. v. Clackamas Cty., 227 Or App 140, 204 P3d 802, rev den, 346 Or 589, 214 P3d 821 (2009), where an application for subdivision relies on Ballot Measure 37 waivers, those waivers qualify as "standards and criteria" under the ORS 215.427(3)(a) goal-post statute, and the subdivision application is not subject to subsequently enacted standards and criteria. But Ballot Measure 49, which post-dates Ballot Measure 37 and is inconsistent with the ORS 215.427(3)(a) goal-post statute overrides the goal-post statute and limits the Ballot Measure 37 subdivision applicant to one of the three remedies specified in Ballot Measure 49. Hoffman v. Jefferson County, 60 Or LUBA 101 (2009).

26.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 49 (ORS 195.300 to 195.336). Decisions under Measure 49 are not land use decisions and are not subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. ORS 195.305(7); 195.318(1). DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

26.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 49 (ORS 195.300 to 195.336). Under ORS 195.305(7) local government decisions about the "nature and extent" of just compensation due under Ballot Measure 49 are not land use decisions. However, a local government decision maker's understanding that approval of a preliminary plat was a decision about the "nature and extent" of just compensation under Measure 49 has no bearing on whether the decision actually is a decision about the "nature and extent" of just compensation under Measure 49. DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

26.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 49 (ORS 195.300 to 195.336). A preliminary subdivision plat approval decision that post-dates a vested rights determination under Measure 49 is a land use decision subject to LUBA's review and is not a decision concerning the "nature and extent of [just] compensation" under Measure 49. DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

26.11 LUBA Jurisdiction – Effect of Ballot Measure 49 (ORS 195.300 to 195.336). In an appeal of a subdivision decision that relies on Ballot Measure 37 waivers and a Ballot Measure 49 vested rights decision, LUBA's scope of review includes resolving questions about the scope of the previously issued Ballot Measure 37 waiver. A decision about the scope of a previously issued Ballot Measure 37 waiver is not a decision about the "nature and extent of [just] compensation" under Measure 49 (ORS 195.305(7)) and is therefore subject to LUBA review. DLCD v. Clatsop County, 58 Or LUBA 714 (2009).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. LUBA's rules do not permit the filing of documents with electronic signatures. Southwest Hills Residential League v. City of Portland, 81 Or LUBA 1088 (2020).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. A petition for review is not so grossly deficient that is fails to substantially conform to OAR 661-010-0030(4) where it meets most of the requirements of OAR 661-010-0030(4) but fails to identify the applicable standard of review and fails to include a copy of the challenged decision. Johnson v. City of Philomath, 81 Or LUBA 473 (2020).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Where LUBA remands a county decision, the petitioner appeals LUBA's decision to the Court of Appeals, the Court of Appeals dismisses the appeal for failure to timely file the petition for judicial review, the petitioner seeks review by the Supreme Court, the Supreme Court grants review, the county issues its decision on remand while Supreme Court review is pending, and the petitioner appeals the decision on remand to LUBA, arguing that the county lacked jurisdiction to issue it while their appeals remain pending before the appellate courts, LUBA will grant a continuance under ORS 197.840(1)(d) and (2), and extend the 77-day deadline under ORS 197.830(14) for issuance of its final opinion and order, pending issuance of the appellate court decision(s) and appellate judgement. Gould v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 1007 (2020).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Where a party does not appear at oral argument, that party's request for rehearing will be denied, and the cause will be deemed submitted without oral argument as to that party pursuant to OAR 661-010-0040(2). Bohan v. City of Portland, 80 Or LUBA 263 (2019).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. LUBA's docket is busy, and the best practice when seeking to reschedule oral argument is to contact LUBA to first obtain several alternate available oral argument dates and times to propose to the other parties. Otherwise, there is no guarantee that a date that all parties have agreed to will be available, and, in that circumstance, the Board will deny the request to reschedule oral argument. Underwood v. Clackamas County, 80 Or LUBA 1031 (2019).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. When some arguments presented at oral argument were not included in the petition for review LUBA will not consider those arguments. Given the inherent difficulty in "striking" portions of oral testimony, LUBA will focus its review on the issues framed in the petition for review, the evidence cited in the record, and the portions of the oral argument that discuss those issues and evidence. Newbrook v. City of Portland, 78 Or LUBA 73 (2018).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. If an exhibit is attached to the petition for review before LUBA, but that exhibit was not a part of the record made available to the local decision maker, LUBA may not consider it in resolving petitioner's assignment of error. ORS 197.835(2)(a). When the petitioner's argument relies on exhibits not in the record, it provides no basis for reversal or remand of the decision. Newbrook v. City of Portland, 78 Or LUBA 73 (2018).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. When a party raises an issue for the first time at oral argument LUBA will ignore all statements made at oral argument, by any party, that go beyond the issues framed in the briefs and the evidence cited in the record, and will confine its review to the issues framed in the briefs, the evidence cited in the record, and the portions of the oral argument that discuss those issues and evidence. See OAR 661-010-0040(1) and ORS 197.835(2)(a). Conte v. City of Eugene, 78 Or LUBA 289 (2018).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. LUBA will not suspend a proceeding where petitioners have not established that LUBA's resolution of the pending LUBA appeal would likely be rendered moot by a concurrently pending circuit court proceeding. Although a circuit court could ultimately decide, in a future remand proceeding from the Court of Appeals, to grant petitioners full injunctive relief which could potentially be in conflict with, or moot LUBA's ruling, where such an outcome is extremely likely, LUBA will not grant petitioners' motion for stay. LUBA is a creature of statute, and can exercise only those powers granted by the legislature, and according to ORS 197.805 and ORS 197.830(10)(a), LUBA's mandate is that "time is of the essence in reaching final decisions in matters involving land use." Bishop v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 1050 (2018).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Delayed service of a certificate of compliance and a certificate of service to a party is a "technical violation" of LUBA's rules that provides no basis for LUBA to strike the response brief associated with the certificates, absent a showing that the delayed service prejudiced a party's substantial rights. Conte v. City of Eugene, 77 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. While LUBA and other public bodies have a statutory obligation to protect confidential archeological information in the record from public disclosure, LUBA lacks statutory authority to order private parties to the appeal to keep confidential information in their private possession from public disclosure. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 75 Or LUBA 534 (2017).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. OAR 661-010-0045 permits LUBA to accept extra-record evidence in the case of disputed factual allegations in the parties' briefs, concerning "procedural irregularities not shown in the record and which, if proved, would warrant reversal or remand of the decision." Where petitioners argue that LUBA should consider extra-record newspaper clippings under OAR 661-010-0045, but the extra-record evidence appears to not be connected to petitioners' sole procedural claim, LUBA will reject the proffered evidence. Sage Equities, LLC v. City of Portland, 72 Or LUBA 163 (2015).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. LUBA does not distinguish between parties who are represented by lawyers and parties that appear on their own behalf, in determining whether the party took the required steps to preserve its right at LUBA to assign procedural error. ODFW v. Crook County, 72 Or LUBA 316 (2015).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. LUBA may extend the deadline for issuing its final opinion and order under ORS 197.840(1)(d) and (2), where an unresolved and threshold legal issue is pending before the circuit court in a challenge to a related city decision, and the outcome of that circuit court action will affect LUBA's resolution of the issues in the appeal before LUBA. Marion County Fire District #1 v. City of Keizer, 65 Or LUBA 440 (2012).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. LUBA does not consider arguments that are made for the first time at oral argument and are not included in the petition for review. Freedman v. Lane County, 64 Or LUBA 309 (2011).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. LUBA will not consider at oral argument power point slides or written copies of a party's oral argument, other than copies of materials already in the record. Claus v. City of Sherwood, 62 Or LUBA 67 (2010).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Where one party moves to strike portions of another party's oral argument that allegedly raises new issues not presented in the briefs, given the difficulty of resolving disputes about what is a "new" issue and how to "strike" portions of oral argument, LUBA will view the motion as a request that LUBA focus its review on the issues framed in the briefs, the evidence cited in the record, and the portions of oral argument that discuss those issues and evidence. Claus v. City of Sherwood, 62 Or LUBA 67 (2010).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. When a party informs LUBA the day before oral argument that he wishes to appear by phone, but fails to call into LUBA's hearing room as directed by LUBA staff, LUBA will consider that the party has waived oral argument under OAR 661-010-0040(2), conduct oral argument without his participation, and deny the party's later-submitted motion to file "written oral argument." Kane v. City of Beaverton, 61 Or LUBA 234 (2010).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. When a petitioner waits until the rebuttal portion of oral argument to respond to an argument that issues were waived under ORS 197.763(1) and 197.835(3) and provides only a general response that does not include citations to the record, LUBA will rule on the waiver argument as if there had been no response at all. Boucot v. City of Corvallis, 60 Or LUBA 57 (2009).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. When a dispute arises as to whether new issues were raised at oral argument, rather than submitting a formal motion to strike and response to the motion, the better practice is to briefly object at oral argument or submit a concise written objection. The purpose of the objection is not to convince LUBA that a new issue was raised, but simply to alert LUBA that a party believes a new issue was raised so that the LUBA will focus its attention on the issues presented in the briefs and the oral arguments that discuss the issues raised in the briefs. NAAVE v. Washington County, 59 Or LUBA 153 (2009).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Parties may seek advice from LUBA's administrative staff, but parties assume the risk that the advice may be incorrect. Parties themselves are ultimately responsible for complying with LUBA's rules and deadlines. Waluga Neighborhood Association v. City of Lake Oswego, 59 Or LUBA 380 (2009).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. If a petition for review is delivered to the United States Postal Service and mailed to LUBA via "Priority Mail" it is mailed by "First Class Mail" and therefore filed on the date it was delivered to the United States Postal Service under OAR 661-

010-0075(2)(a)(B), where the United States Postal Service defines "First Class Mail" to include "Priority Mail." Canfield v. Lane County, 59 Or LUBA 505 (2009).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Whether the OAR 661-010-0030(1) requirement that a LUBA appeal be dismissed if the petition for review is not filed within the 21-day deadline established by that rule is a jurisdictional requirement or merely a compulsory non-jurisdictional basis for dismissing the appeal, the 10-day rule in OAR 661-010-0065(2) that requires a motion to be filed within 10-days after discovery of a failure to comply with LUBA's rules does not apply to a motion to dismiss based on a petitioner's failure to comply with the deadline established by OAR 661-010-0030(1) for filing the petition for review. Canfield v. Lane County, 59 Or LUBA 505 (2009).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. LUBA will decline a request to interpret a code provision in the first instance under ORS 197.829(2) and affirm the decision under the proposed interpretation, when the request and proposed interpretation are advanced for the first time at oral argument, and the interpretative issue is a mixed question of law and fact that the city council is in the best position to resolve in the first instance. Fessler v. City of Fossil, 55 Or LUBA 1 (2007).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Argument presented in a petitioner's post-oral argument letter is not timely submitted where that argument could have been included in the petitioner's reply brief. Rhinhart v. Umatilla County, 53 Or LUBA 402 (2007).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Under OAR 661-010-0075(6) corporations, including municipal corporations, must be represented by an attorney in a LUBA appeal. Although LUBA does not require that the local government record of an appealed land use decision be filed by an attorney, any subsequent appearance by a city—after the record is filed—to oppose record objections, oppose any other motions, file motions on the local government's behalf or otherwise appear on behalf of the local government must be through an attorney who is admitted to practice in the State of Oregon. Robson v. City of La Grande, 53 Or LUBA 604 (2006).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Inadvertent introduction of new evidence at oral argument, while improper, does not provide a basis for striking the entirety of oral argument; rather, to the extent oral argument includes evidence not in the record, it will be disregarded. Hecker v. Lane County, 52 Or LUBA 91 (2006).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. An intervenor company's failure to identify itself correctly in its motion to intervene might warrant a motion to require an amended motion to intervene but it does not justify denying the motion to intervene. O'Brien v. City of Portland, 52 Or LUBA 113 (2006).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Delaying oral argument in an appeal of a local government's decision following a remand from LUBA is not an authorized sanction for the local government's delay in responding to an order awarding costs to petitioners in the prior appeal that led to the remand. Rice v. City of Monmouth, 52 Or LUBA 786 (2006).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Petitioner's late filing of a motion to transfer is a technical violation of OAR 661-010-0075(11)(b) where it is filed approximately five months after the first motion challenging LUBA's jurisdiction, but only 16 days after an amended motion to dismiss is filed, and the motion to transfer could not have been ruled on before LUBA ruled on the jurisdictional challenge in any event. ZRZ Realty Company v. City of Portland, 49 Or LUBA 309 (2005).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. While LUBA may have general authority to adopt rules allowing for extension of less critical statutory deadlines, it is unlikely that the legislature intended LUBA to have the authority to adopt rules extending more critical deadlines, including the 21-day deadline for filing the motion to intervene. Grahn v. City of Newberg, 49 Or LUBA 762 (2005).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Where a party commits multiple violations of LUBA's rules regarding service, whether those violations are "technical violations" that shall not interfere with LUBA's review under OAR 661-01-0005 depends on the cumulative effect of those violations on other parties' substantial rights, rather than the individual effect of each violation. Moreland v. City of Depoe Bay, 48 Or LUBA 136 (2004).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Adding highlighting to a copy of a zoning map that is in the record may not technically comply with OAR 661-010-0040(5) regarding demonstrative exhibits at oral argument, but the map will be allowed where there is no prejudice to the opposing party. A table summarizing the local government's findings and corresponding pages of the appendix to the petition for review where those findings can be located could have and should have been included in the brief, and will not be considered if presented at oral argument. Emmons v. Lane County, 48 Or LUBA 457 (2005).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Parties may facilitate LUBA's legal research by providing copies of cases, briefs that were filed in other appeals, or other research materials in their briefs. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. LUBA will not consider a post-oral argument submittal where (1) the Board did not request the submittal, (2) the submittal does not address new case law or arguments that could not have been raised in the briefs, and (3) the submittal is not necessary to resolve assignments of error. West Side Rural F.P.D v. City of Hood River, 46 Or LUBA 451 (2004).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. A petitioner at LUBA may not cite to evidence supporting petitioners' arguments for the first time during rebuttal at oral argument. Nevertheless, in the absence of a showing that reference to evidence in the record prejudices a party's substantial rights, LUBA will deny a motion to strike that rebuttal. Laurance v. Douglas County, 45 Or LUBA 393 (2003).

27.1 LUBA Procedures/Rules – Generally. Where a petition for review is signed by a person who is not an active member of the Oregon State Bar, LUBA will allow the petition for review to be amended so that petitioners may sign the petition for review on their own behalf or an active member of the Oregon State Bar may sign the petition for review. Roe v. City of Union, 45 Or LUBA 736 (2003).
