3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Where the local code allows a farm dwelling on EFU-zoned property that "is currently used for a commercial farm use," the local government may interpret its code to allow it to issue a building permit for a farm dwelling when a commercial farm management plan is substantially implemented, including a situation where perennial crops capable of producing the level of income required for commercial farm use have been planted on the property. Kunze v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 130 (1994).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. The provisions of ORS 215.213 and 215.283 establishing the uses allowable on exclusive farm use zoned land apply directly to a local government decision approving a farm dwelling on such land. Fleck v. Marion County, 25 Or LUBA 745 (1993).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. A local government decision that approves a farm dwelling, but does not require that the farm use justifying the dwelling be established on the subject property prior to issuance of a building permit for the proposed farm dwelling, violates ORS 215.283(1)(f) and OAR 660-05-030(4). Fleck v. Marion County, 25 Or LUBA 745 (1993).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. A county may reasonably interpret the term "existing commercial farm enterprises" in a code provision establishing a minimum lot size standard for farm dwellings, as not including property that is not presently operated as part of a commercial farm operation. Giesy v. Benton County, 25 Or LUBA 493 (1993).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Where the county code requires the "farm unit" on which a farm dwelling is proposed to be located to be consistent with the size of existing commercial farm enterprises in the area, and also recognizes that commercial farms may be composed of several separate management units, it is reasonable for the county to interpret "farm unit" to include all land that is part of a farm operation, including land in different locations. Giesy v. Benton County, 25 Or LUBA 493 (1993).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Where a farm dwelling approval standard in a local code requires a county to consider the median size of commercial farms in a specific area, as reported by certain government agencies or "other similar source," it is within the county's discretion to interpret the "other similar source" provision to allow it to consider relevant evidence from the county planning department, county assessor's office or other reliable sources. Giesy v. Benton County, 25 Or LUBA 493 (1993).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. In determining compliance with a local code standard that a proposed farm dwelling be on a parcel as large as the median commercial farm unit in the area, a local government may rely on evidence that farm operations on three adjoining parcels constitute one commercial farm operation for purposes of calculating the size of the median commercial farm unit in that area. Walker v. Clackamas County, 25 Or LUBA 6 (1993).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Under OAR 660-05-030(4), a dwelling customarily provided in conjunction with farm use may not be approved until the farm use which justifies the dwelling exists on the subject property. Forster v. Polk County, 24 Or LUBA 476 (1993).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. It is clearly contrary to the express terms of a local ordinance standard requiring a determination that "the type of farm products produced on the applicant's farm" be unrepresented within a particular area, to determine the standard is satisfied by a showing that there are no similar farm management methodologies employed on farms in the designated area. Giesy v. Benton County, 24 Or LUBA 328 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. That area farms produce either purebred cattle or sheep, rather than a combination of purebred cattle and sheep, is not a basis for determining there are no similar farm products produced in the designated area. Giesy v. Benton County, 24 Or LUBA 328 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. The grown on "land used exclusively" requirement of ORS 215.203(2)(a) and (3)(a) and the "evidence of periodic maintenance practices" requirement of ORS 215.203(3)(d) are qualifications for particular tax treatment, and are not standards applicable to the approval of dwellings "customarily provided in conjunction with farm use" under ORS 215.283(1)(f). Forster v. Polk County, 23 Or LUBA 420 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. A county can approve a dwelling customarily provided in conjunction with farm use, where all or part of the proposed farm use does not yet exist on the subject property, only if it (1) determines the farm operation proposed in a farm management plan satisfies the applicable approval standards, and (2) ensures through conditions that the farm dwelling may not be built until after the county determines the farm management plan has been carried out. Forster v. Polk County, 23 Or LUBA 420 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. In approving a dwelling customarily provided in conjunction with farm use, what OAR 660-05-030(4) and equivalent local code provisions require is that the daily activities on the subject property be directed primarily towards farm use, rather than residential use, not that the daily activities of the residents be directed primarily toward farm use. Forster v. Polk County, 23 Or LUBA 420 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Parcels in Exclusive Farm Use zones that are of insufficient size to "continue the existing commercial enterprise in the area" may be eligible for approval of a nonfarm dwelling, but are not eligible for approval of a farm dwelling. OAR 660-05-025; 660-05-030. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 23 Or LUBA 361 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. A local government may not distinguish between commercial and noncommercial farms in an area, as required by OAR 660-05-015(6), based on gross farm income only. All of the factors specified in OAR 660-05-015(6)(b) must be considered. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 23 Or LUBA 361 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. ORS 215.283(1)(e) allows a dwelling for a relative whose assistance either is or will be required by the farm operator. Therefore, such a dwelling may be justified on the basis of proposed farm activities. Neither OAR 660-10-030(4) nor ORS 215.283(1)(f), relating to approvals of primary farm dwellings in EFU zones, are applicable to the approval of a dwelling for the relative of a farm operator under ORS 215.283(1)(e). Kenagy v. Benton County, 23 Or LUBA 328 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Where the unchallenged facts reflected in an appealed decision are that the farm operator requires assistance to perform the tasks necessary to carry out a cattle operation on a portion of the farm parcel due to his physical condition, that the proposed assistance of the farm operator's relatives is "nominal" provides no basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision. Kenagy v. Benton County, 23 Or LUBA 328 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Where the local government findings are silent on the issue of whether the farm operator will continue to have significant involvement in the farm operations, but suggest that the relative will assume all of the farm operator's duties, the decision must be remanded to determine whether the farm operator will continue to have "significant involvement" in the farm operations on the farm parcel. Kenagy v. Benton County, 23 Or LUBA 328 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Even where a parcel is shown to be in commercial farm use, approval of a dwelling customarily provided in conjunction with farm use requires a demonstration that the proposed dwelling is customarily provided in conjunction with the particular commercial farm use. It may not be assumed that a dwelling is customarily provided in conjunction with all commercial farm uses. Elliott v. Jackson County, 23 Or LUBA 257 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. In applying the "customarily provided in conjunction with farm use" standard of OAR 660-05-030(4), only existing farm uses of the property may be considered. Elliott v. Jackson County, 23 Or LUBA 257 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. In determining whether a proposed dwelling meets the ORS 215.213(2) standards for dwellings in conjunction with a Christmas tree farm use, it is incorrect to apply the "used exclusively" and "evidence of periodic maintenance practices" standards contained in ORS 215.203(2)(a) and (3)(a) and (d). Those ORS 215.203 standards are designed to constitute qualifications for particular taxation treatment, and are not land use standards applicable to approval of dwellings in conjunction with farm use. Harwood v. Lane County, 23 Or LUBA 191 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Nothing in ORS 215.213(2) requires a local government to find that a proposed dwelling in conjunction with farm use be "necessary" to the farm use of the property. Harwood v. Lane County, 23 Or LUBA 191 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. OAR 660-05-030(4) does not allow approval of a dwelling customarily provided in conjunction with farm use where the farm use that the dwelling would be customarily provided in conjunction with does not yet exist on the subject property. Hayes v. Deschutes County, 23 Or LUBA 91 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. A code approval standard requiring that a farm dwelling be located on a parcel "planted in perennials capable of producing upon harvest, an average of at least 10,000 dollars in gross annual income" does not require that the site be capable of producing the required income, but rather that the perennials planted on the site be capable of producing, upon harvest, the required income. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 23 Or LUBA 85 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. In approving a request for a dwelling in conjunction with farm use, under applicable local code provisions which require that the proposed farm use constitute a commercial farm, a county is not required to find that the proposed commercial farm will not have adverse environmental impacts or that the commercial farm will be successful in the short or long term. Richards v. Marion County, 22 Or LUBA 608 (1992).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Where a local code authorizes a second farm related dwelling for a relative of a "farm operator," whether the alleged "farm operator" owns the farm property is a relevant consideration in determining who is the "farm operator." Kenagy v. Benton County, 22 Or LUBA 356 (1991).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. To the extent it is relevant to determine whether an alleged farm operator has "significant involvement in farm operations," that the alleged farm operator is a property owner who retains the right to control when, whether and what crops are planted indicates "significant involvement in farm operations." Kenagy v. Benton County, 22 Or LUBA 356 (1991).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. OAR 660-05-030(4) is applicable only to determining whether dwellings are "customarily provided in conjunction with farm use" under ORS 215.213(1)(g) and 215.283(1)(f). McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 19 Or LUBA 421 (1990).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. There is no requirement in ORS chapter 215 or Statewide Planning Goal 3 that farm dwellings authorized pursuant to ORS 215.213(2)(b) be on acreages sufficient to support residents whose principal occupation is farming. To the contrary, ORS 215.213(2)(b) specifically recognizes that a farm dwelling may be allowed on a parcel capable of producing 10,000 dollars in annual gross farm income. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 19 Or LUBA 421 (1990).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. A county may rely on statistical data in establishing crop acreage and density standards for meeting the ORS 215.213(2)(b) farm income standards for dwellings in conjunction with farm use. However, the adoption of such standards must be supported by substantial evidence in the whole record upon which a reasonable person may conclude that such acreages and densities of crops are capable of producing an average of at least 10,000 dollars in gross annual farm income. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 19 Or LUBA 421 (1990).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Where a parcel is "currently employed for farm use as defined in ORS 215.203," the requirement of OAR 660-05-030(4) that farm use of EFU-zoned property be established prior to approval of a farm dwelling is satisfied, even where the current farm use is not the farm use which the proposed dwelling is to be "customarily provided in conjunction with." Rebmann v. Linn County, 19 Or LUBA 307 (1990).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Where the local code requires that a farm dwelling be "customarily provided in conjunction with farm use, as determined by [listed] factors," the county must adopt findings addressing the factors listed in the code to determine whether it is customary to establish a dwelling for farm assistance for the proposed type of farming operation. Rebmann v. Linn County, 19 Or LUBA 307 (1990).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Findings that the applicants "have other plans for" their nearby rental dwelling, and that immediately available live-in farm help will make their farm more "productive," are inadequate to establish that farm help is required to reside on the subject farm. Rebmann v. Linn County, 19 Or LUBA 307 (1990).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. ORS 215.283(1)(f) does not require a county to permit outright all dwellings customarily provided in conjunction with farm use. Zorn v. Marion County, 19 Or LUBA 54 (1990).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Ordinance provisions which effectively require conversion of nonfarm dwellings to farm dwellings before additional farm dwellings may be approved are not mandated by ORS 215.283(1)(f), but they do further the legislative policy contained in ORS 215.243, and are consistent with ORS 215.283(1)(f) and 215.283(3). Zorn v. Marion County, 19 Or LUBA 54 (1990).

3.2.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. To satisfy ORS 215.283(1)(e), a county must adopt findings, supported by substantial evidence, determining both (1) the farm operator will maintain significant involvement in farm operations, and (2) the assistance of a relative is, or will be, required by the farm operator. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Coos County, 18 Or LUBA 852 (1990).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. Counties are not prohibited as a matter of law from applying separation buffers to marijuana production facilities in EFU zones. Waveseer of Oregon, LLC v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 583 (2020).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. In determining whether proposed "agri-tourism or other commercial events or activities" are "incidental and subordinate to existing commercial farm use of the tract" for purposes of ORS 215.283(4)(d)(A), a county errs in relying on a comparison of the frequency of commercial events with the frequency of commercial farming activity on the property to the exclusion of any relevant circumstances, including the nature, intensity, and economic value of the respective uses, that bear on whether the existing commercial farm use remains the predominant use of the tract. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 81 Or LUBA 276 (2020).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. Establishing that proposed "agri-tourism or other commercial events or activities" are "necessary to support the commercial farm uses or the commercial agricultural enterprises in the area" for purposes of ORS 215.283(4)(d)(A) is a relatively high hurdle: the county must find that the events are essential in order to maintain the existence of either the commercial farm uses on the subject property or the commercial agricultural enterprises in the area. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 135 (2019).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. A demonstration that proposed "agri-tourism or other commercial events or activities" are "necessary to support" an approved commercial activity in conjunction with farm use under ORS 215.283(2)(a), such as a brewery, is not sufficient to demonstrate that the events are "necessary to support" an "existing commercial farm use of the tract," such as the growing of filberts, for purposes of ORS 215.283(4)(d)(A), even where revenue from the brewery "supplements" revenue from the growing of filberts. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 135 (2019).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. When an applicant chooses to use reclaimed wastewater on farmland, a written explanation of alternatives to water uses is a very limited obligation imposed by ORS 215.246(3). The county's role, indeed LUBA's review itself, is confined to ensuring that the applicant (1) considered in writing any sufficiently identified alternatives, and (2) explained in writing the reasons for not using them. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 78 Or LUBA 81 (2018).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. When ORS 215.283(1)(o) was enacted in 1993 to expressly authorize farm stands in EFU zones the statue authorized, among other things, "sale of retail incidental items," but limited such sales to "25 percent of the total sales of the farm stand." Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. Legislation enacted in 2001 amended ORS 215.283(1)(o) concerning farm stands to expressly authorize "fee-based activity to promote sale of farm crops and livestock sold at the farm stand," subject to the limitation that such sales and incidental retails could not exceed 25 percent of farm stand sales. Legislative history shows that the legislature intended to authorize farm product food contests and farm product food preparations, but did not intend to authorize banquets, restaurants, or cafes. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. The ORS 215.283(1)(o) authorization for farm stands authorizes structures that are designed and used for the sale of farm products and livestock, and also authorizes those structures to be used for "sale of retail incidental items and fee-based activity to promote sale of farm crops or livestock." The EFU statute is correctly interpreted also to authorize farm stand activities to be conducted outside the authorized structures. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. A farm stand permit that authorizes up to 22 al fresco dinners for up to 75 diners each year is inconsistent with the express prohibition in ORS 215.283(1)(o) and OAR 660-033-0130(23) against farm stand structures for banquets. Although the statute and rule are expressly directed at "structures for banquets," the prohibition extends to such large and frequent al fresco dinners, which fall within the meaning of "banquets," as that term is used in the statute and rule, and the prohibition extends to outdoor banquets. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.283(1)(o) and OAR 660-033-0130(23) authorize the "sale of retail incidental items and fee-based activity to promote the sale of farm crops or livestock" inside structures that are "designed and used for sale of farm crops and livestock," but they do not authorize structures that are specifically designed and used for retail sales and fee-based promotional activity. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. A county's condition of approval that farm stand "wholesale sales" be separately accounted and not included in applying the ORS 215.283(1)(o) requirement that "sale of retail incidental items and fee-based activity to promote sale of farm crops or livestock" not exceed "25 percent of the total annual sales of the farm stand," while an imperfect way to ensure that farm stand sales are not inflated with nonfarm stand sales to inflate the permissible sales from retail and fee-based activity, is a permissible condition under the statute. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. A farm stand permit that (1) authorizes "small-scale gatherings such as birthdays, picnics, and similar activities" and requires that such gatherings "shall promote the farm stand and contemporaneous crops sold in the farm stand" does not exceed the ORS 215.283(1)(o) and OAR 660-033-0130(23) authority for farm stands. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. A farm stand permit that authorizes multiple food carts to sell a variety of prepared food at up to 24 events per year cannot be characterized as "incidental retail sales," and exceeds the authority granted by ORS 215.283(1)(o) and OAR 660-033-0130(23). Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.283(1)(o) and OAR 660-033-0130(23) do not categorically prohibit food carts in all circumstances. If a permit authorizing a farm stand appropriately limited food carts so that they could be characterized as "incidental retail sales," they could be authorized at a farm stand. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.283(1)(o) and OAR 660-033-0130(23) do not prohibit all concessions at farm stands. The statute and rule only prohibit "large concessions." Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. Where an applicant's engineering report and environmental consultant identified technical and engineering challenges and public health and safety issues associated with several alternatives to replacing a currently failing waste water treatment system that are independent of the costs of replacing that system, the county's findings are inadequate to explain its conclusion that an applicant considered only the cost of replacing the existing waste water treatment system in eliminating other alternative facility options. Falcon Heights WSD v. Klamath County, 64 Or LUBA 390 (2011).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.275(5) requires a county to consider whether the imposition of clear and objective conditions on a proposed utility facility would prevent a significant change in accepted farm practices or prevent a significant increase in the cost of farm practices, and to approve the proposed facility with those clear and objective conditions if the conditions would minimize or mitigate the impacts. Falcon Heights WSD v. Klamath County, 64 Or LUBA 390 (2011).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. A hearings officer does not err in interpreting a code provision that allows the "preparation of land for cultivation" that is a "customarily accepted agricultural activity" without a permit in agricultural zones to require the landowner to demonstrate that a proposal to cover an existing landfill with 100,000 cubic yards of soil not only involves "preparation of land for cultivation" but is also a "customarily accepted agricultural activity." Ehler v. Washington County, 52 Or LUBA 663 (2006).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. Any inquiry into whether a proposal to place 100,000 cubic yards of soil on an existing landfill is a "customarily accepted agricultural activity" is necessarily a fact-specific inquiry. In answering that question, a hearings officer does not err in considering as relevant facts the absence of ongoing agricultural activity on the property and the lack of specificity in the landowner's plans for post-fill agricultural use. Ehler v. Washington County, 52 Or LUBA 663 (2006).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. Any inquiry into what is a customarily accepted agricultural activity necessarily requires whether other similar farms have engaged in the proposed activity. A hearings officer does not err in considering the absence of evidence that other farms have placed 100,000 cubic yards of fill in a 13-acre area to prepare the land for cultivation. Ehler v. Washington County, 52 Or LUBA 663 (2006).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. Given the history of the subject property as a landfill, a hearings officer does not err in considering the lack of evidence that it is customary for farmers to charge a fee to persons to deposit soil on farm land, in determining whether a proposal to place 100,000 cubic yards of fill on farm land is a "customarily accepted agricultural activity" allowed without a permit, or something else that requires a permit. Ehler v. Washington County, 52 Or LUBA 663 (2006).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. The only limitations placed on uses that may be permitted as "commercial uses in conjunction with farm use" within the meaning of ORS 215.283(2)(a) are that the proposed use must: (1) enhance the farming enterprises of the local agricultural community to which the EFU land hosting that commercial activity relates; and (2) satisfy ORS 215.296. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 45 Or LUBA 297 (2003).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. Testimony from fruit growers that a fruit processing facility provides a market for their fruit and, as a result, provides incentive to those growers to continue their agricultural operations and a condition of approval that requires the operator of the fruit processing facility to grow fruit on its property that will be processed at the facility is sufficient to establish that the proposed fruit processing facility will enhance the farming enterprises of the local agricultural community. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 45 Or LUBA 297 (2003).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. The fact that wineries are a permitted use in EFU zones under ORS 215.213(1) and 215.283(1) does not mean that wineries are "agricultural uses" permitted in a rural residential zone, where the code definition of "agricultural uses" does not include wineries, and wineries are not among the uses allowed in the rural residential zone. Roth v. Jackson County, 40 Or LUBA 531 (2001).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 197.685 imposes a legislative duty to consider non-EFU-zoned lands to provide areas that would supplement seasonal farmworker housing allowed outright on EFU-zoned land. ORS 197.685 does not require that an applicant for quasi-judicial approval for seasonal farmworker housing in EFU zones demonstrate that non-EFU-zoned lands are unavailable to provide such housing. Durig v. Washington County, 40 Or LUBA 1 (2001).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 197.685(3) and (4) allow local governments to adopt clear and objective approval criteria for seasonal farmworker housing that do not have the result of discouraging needed seasonal farmworker housing, but do not require local governments to adopt additional approval criteria, and do not make unrelated approval criteria applicable in the absence of legislation incorporating those criteria. Durig v. Washington County, 40 Or LUBA 1 (2001).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. Nothing in the context of the term "kennel" as used in ORS 215.283(2)(m) demonstrates that the intended meaning of that term is narrower than the plain dictionary definition, which refers to establishments for the breeding and boarding of dogs. A proposal to breed and propagate dogs for sale is thus a "kennel" subject to county regulation and not a "farm use" allowed outright in an EFU zone. Tri-River Investment Co. v. Clatsop County, 37 Or LUBA 195 (1999).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. The definition of "farm use" in ORS 215.203(2)(a) does not include the extraction, processing and bottling of a mineral resource such as water. DLCD v. Curry County, 32 Or LUBA 358 (1997).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. The county's findings classifying livestock sales and shows as a "farm use" rather than as "stockyard and animal sales" are inadequate when the challenged decision does not relate the general findings to the property at issue, and therefore does not establish that the proposed use complies with the approval standards. Collins v. Klamath County, 32 Or LUBA 338 (1997).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. Where the county determines that an apparent conflict exists between state statute and county code regarding whether livestock sales and shows are permitted on EFU land, LUBA will defer to the county's decision to clarify the nature of the use through a quasi-judicial use classification hearing. Collins v. Klamath County, 32 Or LUBA 338 (1997).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. The breeding and raising of one's own horses is a farm use. Moody v. Deschutes County, 22 Or LUBA 567 (1992).

3.2.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Farm Uses – Other Uses. Where a code separately lists "boarding of horses for profit" and "commercial activities in conjunction with farm use" as distinct conditional uses in certain exclusive farm use zones that another zone lists "commercial activities in conjunction with farm use" but does not list "boarding of horses for profit" as a conditional use, it is reasonable to infer that the latter use was not intended to be allowed in the other zone. Moody v. Deschutes County, 22 Or LUBA 567 (1992).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. In determining whether proposed "agri-tourism or other commercial events or activities" are "incidental and subordinate to existing commercial farm use of the tract" for purposes of ORS 215.283(4)(d)(A), a county errs in relying on a comparison of the frequency of commercial events with the frequency of commercial farming activity on the property to the exclusion of any relevant circumstances, including the nature, intensity, and economic value of the respective uses, that bear on whether the existing commercial farm use remains the predominant use of the tract. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 81 Or LUBA 276 (2020).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. "In-home commercial activities" are not authorized by right in resource zones, even where (1) such activities are accessory to residential uses and would have minimal to no impact on resource lands, (2) such an approach would streamline local permitting by avoiding the conditional use process required for home occupations, and (3) such activities are consistent with a model ordinance prepared by DLCD. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Where certain activities are allowed as accessory to a home occupation use, they may not be allowed through a Type I process (i.e., ministerial review of an application based on clear and objective standards and criteria) that does not provide the review that is required by ORS 215.448(1) and (4). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Where local code amendments allow accessory uses and structures in an EFU zone, arguments that (1) the amendments improperly exempt such structures from a local code requirement that steps be taken to minimize adverse impacts on farm and forest uses and (2) the provisions governing such uses are inconsistent with ORS 215.213(3)(b) provide no basis for reversal or remand where the amended code is comparable to the prior code and where the petitioner does not develop any argument explaining why the amendments are substantive instead of technical. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Establishing that proposed "agri-tourism or other commercial events or activities" are "necessary to support the commercial farm uses or the commercial agricultural enterprises in the area" for purposes of ORS 215.283(4)(d)(A) is a relatively high hurdle: the county must find that the events are essential in order to maintain the existence of either the commercial farm uses on the subject property or the commercial agricultural enterprises in the area. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 135 (2019).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A demonstration that proposed "agri-tourism or other commercial events or activities" are "necessary to support" an approved commercial activity in conjunction with farm use under ORS 215.283(2)(a), such as a brewery, is not sufficient to demonstrate that the events are "necessary to support" an "existing commercial farm use of the tract," such as the growing of filberts, for purposes of ORS 215.283(4)(d)(A), even where revenue from the brewery "supplements" revenue from the growing of filberts. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 135 (2019).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. ORS 215.441 does not provide an independent basis to approve a dwelling within a church on property zoned EFU, and, where a local code provision provides that "[e]xisting churches may be maintained, enhanced or expanded on the same tract," a construction of that provision to independently allow a residential use of a church as an enhancement to the church impermissibly conflicts with ORS 215.203, ORS 215.283, and ORS 215.441. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 80 Or LUBA 183 (2019).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. While applying pesticides and herbicides in a manner that causes overspray or drift onto adjoining properties is not an accepted farm practice for purposes of the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1), where the labels for some pesticides and herbicides effectively require a setback from certain sensitive uses regardless of whether drift or overspray occurs, a county will likely have to make specific factual findings about the specific setbacks required by particular chemicals on particular farming operations on surrounding farmlands, based on application methods, and whether the operation of each setback would force a significant change in farm practices. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 348 (2019).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Spraying adjoining property with herbicides without permission from the property owner or another legal right to do so is not an accepted farm practice for purposes of the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1), even where the farm operation grows grass seed which is certified to be free of contamination from weeds and where spraying the adjoining property allows multiple fields to be treated as a single continuous field for purposes of certification and prevents the farm operator from having to create "isolation strips" on either side of the adjoining property that would shrink the scope of the certified fields. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 348 (2019).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A condition of approval requiring that an applicant construct a proposed fence between a proposed trail and adjoining farms; specifying only that the proposed fence must be "capable of preventing dogs and people from entering adjacent farm fields"; punting all determinations regarding fence design, materials, construction, etc. to a subsequent master planning process that offers no opportunity for a public hearing or other public input; and allowing adjacent landowners to opt out of installing a fence on their property line is inadequate where the county relies on the proposed fence to address a wide variety of different potential impacts, which might require different fence designs, materials, construction techniques, and maintenance routines in order to ensure that the trail will not cause significant impacts on farm practices for purposes of the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1). Such a condition is also not clear and objective for purposes of ORS 215.296(2). Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 348 (2019).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Where farmers have historically crossed a right-of-way to access fields they own on either side of the right-of-way, and where the right-of-way owner proposes to construct a fence along its property line, negotiate with farmers to provide licenses to cross the applicant's property, and install gates in the fence to allow farm equipment to pass through, any delay for farmers to open, pass through, and close the gates multiple times per day and perhaps multiple times per hour need not be evaluated as impacts on accepted farm practices for purposes of the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1) because using another's property to move farm equipment without a legal right or permission to do so is not an accepted farm practice. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 348 (2019).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Although the impacts of nonfarm uses on surrounding farmland must be evaluated on a farm-by-farm and practice-by-practice basis, an evaluation of the cumulative impacts on all farm practices on all impacted farms is not required. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 348 (2019).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. When an applicant chooses to use reclaimed wastewater on farmland, a written explanation of alternatives to water uses is a very limited obligation imposed by ORS 215.246(3). The county's role, indeed LUBA's review itself, is confined to ensuring that the applicant (1) considered in writing any sufficiently identified alternatives, and (2) explained in writing the reasons for not using them. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 78 Or LUBA 81 (2018).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A petitioner may not also operate an exotic animal rescue facility, which is undisputedly not a "farm use," on EFU land where the petitioner uses his or her EFU-zoned property for certain "farm uses," under ORS 215.203. The existing "farm use[s]" do not "legitimize" the concurrent unpermitted uses, nor do they shield the unpermitted uses from county code enforcement action. A Walk on the Wild Side v. Washington County, 78 Or LUBA 356 (2018).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. With regard to school structures on non-high-value farmland that existed prior to adoption of LCDC's three-mile rule, OAR 660-033-0130(2)(c) provides that such schools may be "maintained, enhanced or expanded on the same tract subject to other requirements of law, but enclosed existing structures within a farm use zone within three miles of an urban growth boundary may not be expanded beyond the requirements of this rule." The "requirements of this rule" in OAR 660-033-0130(2)(c) is a reference to the OAR 660-033-0130(2)(a) requirement that the design capacity of enclosed structures be no "greater than 100 people," and the OAR 660-033-0130(2)(b) requirement that enclosed structures be spaced "no less than one-half mile" apart. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 76 Or LUBA 227 (2017).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. HB 3099, now codified at ORS 215.135, was adopted in 2009 to address legislative concerns about the new HB 3099 requirement that schools on EFU-zoned land must be "primarily for residents of the rural area in which the school is located" and perhaps concerns about new local criteria that might be adopted and applied to such existing schools. But there is nothing in the legislative history of HB 3099 that suggests it was also concerned with LCDC's three-mile rule at OAR 660-033-0130(2), adopted in 1993. ORS 215.135 and its parallel administrative rule at OAR 660-033-0130(18)(b) to (c) were not adopted to excuse existing schools from complying with LCDC's three-mile rule. To the extent the text of OAR 660-033-0130(2)(c) is ambiguous, the legislative history confirms that LCDC intended the OAR 660-033-0130(2)(a) 100-person design limit and the OAR 660-033-0130(2)(b) "no less than one-half mile" spacing requirement to apply to expansion of such existing structures. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 76 Or LUBA 227 (2017).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A "residential facility" as defined in ORS 197.660(1) is not a use that is authorized in the exclusive farm use zone under ORS 215.283(2)(o). KanDu Ranch, LLC v. Jackson County, 72 Or LUBA 401 (2015).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A Table in OAR 660-033-0120 is not inconsistent with ORS 215.283(2)(o) where the text of the Table, read in context with the definition of "residential home" at ORS 197.660 that it references, authorizes only a "residential home" in the exclusive farm use zone and does not purport to authorize a "residential facility" in the EFU zone, which would be inconsistent with ORS 215.283(2)(o). KanDu Ranch, LLC v. Jackson County, 72 Or LUBA 401 (2015).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. The uses authorized in EFU zones in counties that have designated marginal lands are generally set out in subsections of ORS 215.213, whereas the uses authorized in EFU zones in non-marginal lands counties are generally set out in ORS 215.283. The regulation of dwellings under ORS 215.213 was originally intended to be slightly more restrictive than under ORS 215.283, as the quid pro quo for more liberal allowance of dwellings on designated marginal lands under ORS 215.317. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 325 (2014).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. The nonfarm dwelling standards codified at ORS 215.284 were enacted by the legislature as amendments to ORS 215.283(3) and new subsections of ORS 215.283. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 325 (2014).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. As a marginal lands county, Lane County is expressly authorized to apply ORS 215.213(3) in approving a nonfarm dwelling on non-high value farmland in the Willamette Valley. Because Lane County is a marginal lands county, it is not required to apply ORS 215.284(1) in addition to ORS 215.213(3), simply because ORS 215.284(1) expressly applies to lands in the Willamette Valley. ORS 215.284(1) applies to non-marginal lands counties. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 325 (2014).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. ORS 215.213(4) provides that a lot for a nonfarm dwelling must comply with any applicable Willamette River Greenway regulations and ORS 215.213(3) does not include a similar reference to Willamette River Greenway regulations. However, that difference in wording between ORS 215.213(3) and (4) alone does not support interpreting ORS 215.213(4) to apply, to the exclusion of ORS 215.213(3), throughout both the Willamette River Greenway and the much larger Willamette River Valley, when ORS 215.213(3) includes no language precluding its applicability within the Willamette River Valley. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 325 (2014).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A county errs in requiring an applicant to apply the ORS 215.296 "significant change/increase" standard to a study of the "surrounding area" that encompasses all agricultural land in the county, on the theory that a proposed conditional use will remove land from agricultural use and require county farmers to shoulder a greater burden of fixed costs in the county's agricultural economy. The focus of ORS 215.296 is on the impacts of the proposed conditional use on agricultural practices in the proximate surrounding area, not attenuated impacts to the larger economy caused by conversion of the subject property from agricultural use to a conditional non-farm use otherwise allowed under ORS chapter 215. Hood River Valley PRD v. Hood River County, 67 Or LUBA 314 (2013).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. The scope of "surroundings lands" to which ORS 215.296 applies is not limited to lands adjacent to the subject property. However, failure to define the outer limits of the study area or to evaluate impacts on non-adjacent farm operations is not necessarily fatal to the application, if the surrounding agricultural area is homogenous, and there is substantial evidence that the conditional use has no significant impacts on farm practices on adjacent farm parcels. Hood River Valley PRD v. Hood River County, 67 Or LUBA 314 (2013).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. ORS 215.296(1) does not require a demonstration that a proposed conditional use of an EFU-zoned parcel will not prevent future agricultural use of the soils occupied by the non-farm conditional use. Because ORS chapter 215 authorizes in EFU zones several uses such as mining or solid waste disposal facilities that involve removal or loss of agricultural soil, such a requirement would effectively prohibit uses allowed in EFU zones under ORS chapter 215. Hood River Valley PRD v. Hood River County, 67 Or LUBA 314 (2013).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Under ORS 215.283(1)(c), "[u]tility facilities necessary for public service" are permitted in EFU zones. ORS 215.283(1)(c) operates in conjunction with ORS 215.275(1), which provides that the utility facilities authorized by ORS 215.283(1)(c) are "necessary for public service if the facility must be sited in an exclusive farm use zone in order to provide the service," and ORS 215.275(2), which sets out the alternatives analysis that must be used to demonstrate that a proposed utility facility is the type of utility facility authorized by ORS 215.283(1)(c) and 215.275(1). WKN Chopin LLC v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 1 (2012).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. An important difference between the uses that are allowed under subsection (1) of ORS 215.283 and the uses that are allowed under subsection (2) of 215.283 is that the uses allowed under subsection (1) are permitted outright and are only subject to statutory standards. Unlike Subsection (2) uses, which may be subject to locally adopted standards, Subsection (1) uses may not be subject to additional regulation under local law. Brentmar v. Jackson County, 321 Or 481, 496, 900 P2d 1030 (1995). WKN Chopin LLC v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 1 (2012).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Transmission towers over 200 feet in height are allowed under subsection (2) of ORS 215.283. ORS 215.283(2)(m). Transmission towers that are not taller than 200 feet are allowable as "utility facilities necessary for public service" under subsection (1) of ORS 215.283. ORS 215.283(1)(c); 215.275. WKN Chopin LLC v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 1 (2012).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Under ORS 215.275, an applicant proposing to site a utility facility on EFU zoned land must consider alternatives that do not utilize EFU-zoned land. Such an applicant need not consider alternatives that do utilize EFU-zoned land and need not establish that there are not other EFU-zoned alternatives that would have fewer adverse impacts on the county's EFU zone. WKN Chopin LLC v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 1 (2012).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. The general legislative farmland preservation policies set out in the statutory EFU zone play no role in applying the alternatives analysis required for utility facilities necessary for public service under ORS 215.275. WKN Chopin LLC v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 1 (2012).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. ORS 215.296(2), which provides that an applicant for a conditional use allowed under ORS 215.213(2) or 215.283(2) may demonstrate compliance with the ORS 215.296(1) no significant change/increase standard through imposition of clear and objective conditions, does not impliedly limit conditions to those intended to protect farm and forest uses. Neither does ORS 215.296(2) prohibit counties from adopting additional EFU zone approval standards to address the impacts of wind energy facilities on residential uses or Goal 5 resources. Cosner v. Umatilla County, 65 Or LUBA 9 (2012).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A comprehensive plan policy implementing Statewide Planning Goal 3, which states that the county's policy is to "continue to preserve" for farm use lands with agricultural soils, does not impliedly preclude the county from adopting a text amendment that authorizes in the EFU zone one of the non-farm uses allowed on EFU land under ORS 215.283(2). Authorizing on EFU land non-farm uses listed in ORS 215.283(2) is consistent with Goal 3 as a matter of law. Waste Not of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 65 Or LUBA 142 (2012).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. In approving a building permit for a building "customarily provided in conjunction with farm use" in the EFU zone under ORS 215.213(1)(e) or 215.283(1)(e), one factual variable a county should consider is whether the building is intended to be used as an accessory building to non-farm uses authorized on the property, such as a private use airport, instead of or in addition to an accessory to farm use of the property. Bratton v. Washington County, 65 Or LUBA 461 (2012).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. ORS 215.441 authorizes weddings on EFU-zoned land, only if the weddings are associated with "a church, synagogue, temple, mosque, chapel, meeting house or other nonresidential place of worship." Reed v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 253 (2010).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Where a county's EFU zone does not permit solid waste disposal sites, but the statutory EFU zone does allow solid waste disposal sites, under the holding in DLCD v. Yamhill County, 183 Or App 556, 53 P3d 462 (2002), a county may not approve an exception to Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands) to allow a solid waste disposal site on EFU-zoned property. Rather, the county must amend its EFU zone to allow solid waste disposal sites if it wishes to authorize that use on its EFU-zoned land. Waste Not of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 61 Or LUBA 423 (2010).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Utility facilities that are necessary for public service are a permitted use on EFU-zoned land. However, reasonable non-EFU-zoned alternative sites must be considered, and only if one or more of the factors listed at ORS 215.275(2) make the non-EFU-zoned sites infeasible can the utility facility be developed on EFU-zoned land. Getz v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 559 (2009).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. To comply with ORS 215.275(2), before approval for a utility facility on EFU-zoned land may be granted, an applicant must (1) make a reasonable effort to identify reasonable non-EFU-zoned sites, consider any reasonable non-EFU zoned sites that are identified by other parties and demonstrate that all identified non-EFU-zoned alternative sites are not feasible based on one or more of the factors set out in ORS 215.275(2). Where an applicant generally describes how alternative sites were selected, opponents may not fail to suggest any additional alternative non-EFU-zoned sites and on appeal of a decision approving the utility facility argue that the applicant's failure to provide a more detailed explanation for how the applicant selected alternative sites provides a basis for remand. Getz v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 559 (2009).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. It is not error for an applicant for approval of a utility facility on EFU-zoned land to change the focus of its analysis of whether alternative non-EFU-zoned sites are a feasible alternative, so long as the analysis that is ultimately accepted by the local government is legally defensible. Getz v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 559 (2009).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. The term "dwelling," as used in ORS 215.284 regarding nonfarm dwellings on farmland, includes any essential or accessory improvements or structures such as a well and septic system, and therefore, like the dwelling itself, those essential or accessory improvements or structures are authorized only on portions of the farm parcel that are generally unsuitable for farm use. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 56 Or LUBA 120 (2008).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Under ORS 215.284, unlike the nonfarm dwelling itself or essential or accessory improvements or structures, driveways or access roads serving the nonfarm dwelling do not have to be located on a portion of the parcel that is generally unsuitable for farm use. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 56 Or LUBA 120 (2008).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A county EFU zone limit on farm recreational uses that requires that such uses "be subordinate to the commercial agricultural operation in scope, scale and impact, and shall contribute 'added value' to the commercial agricultural farm operation" does not necessarily prohibit a farm recreational use that generates more income than the commercial agricultural operation on the property. Underhill v. Wasco County, 43 Or LUBA 277 (2002).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A use permitted by statute on EFU land is not subject to the additional requirement that the use be rural or that an exception to Goal 14 be taken, even if the use is urban in nature. Where such a use is expressly permitted on EFU land, it is also implicitly permitted by statute on rural land zoned other than EFU. Stallkamp v. City of King City, 43 Or LUBA 333 (2002).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Because a public park is permitted by statute on EFU land without requiring compliance with Goal 14 or an exception to that goal, it is also permitted on rural land zoned other than EFU without requiring compliance with Goal 14 or an exception, even if the park would primarily serve urban residents. Stallkamp v. City of King City, 43 Or LUBA 333 (2002).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Assuming that a public park is a "public facility or service" governed by Goal 11, because a public park is permitted by statute on EFU land without taking an exception to Goal 11, a public park is also allowed on rural land zoned other than EFU without taking an exception to Goal 11, or requiring that the park serve only rural lands. Stallkamp v. City of King City, 43 Or LUBA 333 (2002).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A public stormwater facility is or can be a "utility facility necessary for public service" allowed by statute in the EFU zone. Such a facility is also allowed on rural lands zoned other than EFU without taking an exception to Goal 11 or requiring that the stormwater facility serve only rural lands. Stallkamp v. City of King City, 43 Or LUBA 333 (2002).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. The rural fire service facilities authorized by ORS 215.283(1)(w) are not required to serve rural areas exclusively. Keicher v. Clackamas County, 39 Or LUBA 521 (2001).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. In considering whether a rural fire service facility authorized by ORS 215.283(1)(w) primarily serves rural rather than urban areas, areas inside UGBs and any areas outside a UGB for which an exception to Goal 14 has been approved to allow urban-level development must be considered urban. Keicher v. Clackamas County, 39 Or LUBA 521 (2001).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A fire station with only five percent of its service area inside a UGB and somewhere between 67 percent and 76 percent of its incident responses going to rural areas outside the UGB primarily serves rural areas. Keicher v. Clackamas County, 39 Or LUBA 521 (2001).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. The fire service facilities authorized by ORS 215.283(1)(w) may also provide emergency medical services and appropriately limited on-site training. Keicher v. Clackamas County, 39 Or LUBA 521 (2001).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. The requirement under OAR 660-012-0065(3)(o) that the travel capacity and level of service of transportation facilities sited on rural EFU-zoned land must "be limited to that necessary to support rural land uses identified in the acknowledged comprehensive plan" is satisfied where the proposed facility would serve seven lot of record dwellings, the comprehensive plan authorizes rural dwellings and the EFU zoning statutes specifically authorize lot of record dwellings in EFU zones. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 39 Or LUBA 478 (2001).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. An existing road cannot be rejected as an alternative under OAR 660-012-0065(5)(a) because it is (1) unsafe, (2) does not meet "applicable standards," or (3) has not previously been "approved by a registered professional engineer." Under the rule, the county must also establish that the existing road cannot be improved to be "safe," meet "applicable standards," and be "approved by a registered professional engineer" "at a reasonable cost, not considering raw land costs, with available technology." Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 39 Or LUBA 478 (2001).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A decision that an existing road need not be considered as an alternative under OAR 660-012-0065(5)(a) is not supported by substantial evidence where there is no attempt to identify how costly it would be to address safety problems and bring the road up to applicable standards so that it could be approved by a registered engineer. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 39 Or LUBA 478 (2001).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. OAR 660-012-0065(5)(a) prohibits consideration of "land costs," in determining whether the cost of an alternative is reasonable. "Land costs" are not limited to purchase of the fee title and include purchase of an easement. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 39 Or LUBA 478 (2001).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Contextual statutory references to "public schools," "private schools" and "schools" indicate that the legislature intended the scope of "public or private schools" allowed in the EFU zone under ORS 215.283(1)(a) to include schools for elementary and secondary education, but not adult career schools. Warburton v. Harney County, 39 Or LUBA 398 (2001).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Nonfarm uses allowed by ORS 215.213 and 215.283 are exceptions to the agricultural purpose of the EFU zone and, where an interpretative choice is necessary, specific statutory uses should be interpreted not to include uses that would subvert the goal of preserving land in productive agriculture. Warburton v. Harney County, 39 Or LUBA 398 (2001).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Where the scope of "public or private schools" allowed in the EFU zone under ORS 215.283(1)(a) could be plausibly construed to include only schools for elementary and secondary education, or more broadly to include any kind of use that has an educational component, the statute should be interpreted not to include uses that would subvert the goal of preserving land for agriculture. Warburton v. Harney County, 39 Or LUBA 398 (2001).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Where petitioner does not establish that the city either applied or was required to apply land use standards when it made a final decision to condemn petitioner's EFU-zoned property for a utility facility, in advance of seeking county land use approval for that facility, the challenged decision is not a land use decision over which LUBA has jurisdiction. E & R Farm Partnership v. City of Gervais, 39 Or LUBA 251 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Where industrial effluent is applied to poplar trees in an exclusive farm use zone so that heavy metals and nitrogen compounds in the effluent will bind to the soil and be taken up into the poplar trees, rather than being deposited into a creek, the proposed use is properly viewed as an extension of the city's sewerage treatment system and thus as a "utility facility," within the meaning of ORS 215.283(1)(d). Cox v. Polk County, 39 Or LUBA 1 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A proposed use of land may be both a "farm use" and a "utility facility," and where it qualifies as both, the proposed use must meet the approval criteria for both farm uses and utility facilities. Cox v. Polk County, 39 Or LUBA 1 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. The limitations on activities in public parks imposed by OAR 660-034-0035 do not apply to private parks allowed on agricultural and forest lands under ORS 215.283(2)(c), OAR 660-033-0120 and OAR 660-006-0025(4)(e). Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Unlike Goal 4 and the Goal 4 rule, which limit recreational activities on forest lands to those "appropriate for a forest environment," ORS 215.283(2)(c) and OAR 660-033-0120 contain no express language restricting the scope or intensity of activities allowed in "private parks" on agricultural land. Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Transmission towers that are less than 200 feet in height may only be approved on EFU-zoned land, under ORS 215.283(1)(d), where it is established that it is not feasible to locate the tower on non-EFU-zoned lands. Dierking v. Clackamas County, 38 Or LUBA 106 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Transmission towers that are more than 200 feet in height may be approved under ORS 215.283(2)(L) on EFU-zoned land, subject to the approval criteria set out at ORS 215.296 and any locally adopted approval criteria. It is not necessary to establish that it is not feasible to locate such transmission towers on non-EFU-zoned lands. Dierking v. Clackamas County, 38 Or LUBA 106 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. In approving applications for permits for uses that are specifically allowed in rural EFU zones by ORS 215.213 and 215.283, counties are not required to apply the case-by-case urban/rural analysis that is required under Goal 14 and 1000 Friends of Oregon v. LCDC (Curry Co.), 301 Or 447, 724 P2d 268 (1986), on non-EFU-zoned rural lands. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 37 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A water utility's proposal to solve a water shortage by drilling wells and constructing related facilities on EFU-zoned land need not demonstrate that it is not feasible to solve the water shortage in some other way than drilling wells. Dayton Prairie Water Assoc. v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 14 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Once a water utility decides to solve a water shortage by drilling wells and constructing related facilities, the wells and related facilities must be located on non-EFU-zoned land, unless it is not feasible to do so. Dayton Prairie Water Assoc. v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 14 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A utility facility may be located on EFU-zoned land if it is not feasible to locate the utility facility on non-EFU-zoned land and, in that circumstance, ORS 215.213(1)(d) and 215.283(1)(d) do not require that the utility facility be located on the "least suitable" EFU-zoned land. Dayton Prairie Water Assoc. v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 14 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. In reviewing alternatives to locating a proposed utility facility on a proposed EFU-zoned site, a county is not required to examine alternatives that would also involve using EFU-zoned lands. Dayton Prairie Water Assoc. v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 14 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Under Brentmar v. Jackson County, 321 Or 481, 900 P2d 1030 (1995), a county may not apply local land use legislation to deny or condition uses that are authorized by ORS 215.213(1) or 215.283(1), unless the county is required by statewide planning goals or LCDC rules to apply the local land use legislation to such uses. Dayton Prairie Water Assoc. v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 14 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. "Community centers" that are operated by a "nonprofit commmunity organization" may be allowed in EFU zones. An argument that an approved facility is a "retreat center" rather than a "community center" provides no basis for remand, where petitioner fails to establish that the facility could not appropriately be considered both a "retreat center" and a "community center." Lighthart v. Polk County, 37 Or LUBA 787 (2000).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. An applicant for approval of a utility facility on EFU-zoned land must demonstrate that constructing the utility on non-EFU-zoned land is not a feasible alternative. Clackamas Co. Svc. Dist. No. 1 v. Clackamas County, 35 Or LUBA 374 (1998).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. The rule announced in Brentmar v. Jackson County, 321 Or 481, 900 P2d 1030 (1995), that the category of uses listed at ORS 215.283(1) are uses of right to which a county cannot apply supplementary standards, does not preclude the possibility that specific uses listed at ORS 215.283(1) by their terms permit the county to apply supplemental standards. Shadrin v. Clackamas County, 34 Or LUBA 154 (1998).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Read in context, the statutory provision at ORS 215.283(1)(p) allowing "seasonal farmworker housing" as a permitted use in an EFU zone allows the local government to apply supplemental approval standards, as long as those standards are clear and objective and do not have the effect of discouraging needed housing through unreasonable cost or delay. Shadrin v. Clackamas County, 34 Or LUBA 154 (1998).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A local standard limiting seasonal farmworker housing to workers employed exclusively on the resident farm is inconsistent with the legislative intent behind the seasonal farmworker statutes, which do not contemplate such a restriction. Shadrin v. Clackamas County, 34 Or LUBA 154 (1998).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A county may regulate or define uses allowed under ORS 215.283(2) as long as it does not define those uses more expansively than permitted by state law. R/C Pilots Association v. Marion County, 33 Or LUBA 532 (1997).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A county may interpret its local codification of nonfarm uses allowed in EFU zones more restrictively than state law requires. Such a more restrictive interpretation is not contrary to ORS 215.283(2)(d) and will be affirmed by LUBA where it is not so inconsistent with the zoning ordinance as to be clearly wrong. R/C Pilots Association v. Marion County, 33 Or LUBA 532 (1997).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Expansion of a golf course is not permitted under OAR 660-33-130(18) exception unless the existing facilities are within the same zone as the proposed expansion. DLCD v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 302 (1997).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Limitations in OAR 660-33-120 and 660-33-130 are consistent with ORS 215.283 provision allowing golf courses on exclusive farm use land. DLCD v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 302 (1997).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Neither ORS 215.203(1) nor ORS 215.283 mandates the manner in which the local governing body may approve nonfarm uses allowed in EFU zones under ORS 215.283. Nor do these statutes require an additional permit for uses allowed under ORS 215.283, independent of the requirements of the local government's approval process. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 281 (1995).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. The requirements of ORS 215.296 apply directly to uses allowed in EFU zones under ORS 215.283(2). In order to establish a proposed use satisfies the requirements of ORS 215.296, the local government must adopt findings establishing the proposal complies with that statute. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 281 (1995).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. A county must incorporate into its exclusive farm use zones, or otherwise implement, the restrictions on uses of high-value farmland required by OAR 660-33-020(8), 660-33-080, 660-33-090 and 660-33-120. DLCD v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 459 (1994).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Although nothing in ORS 215.213(1) and (2) and 215.283(1) and (2) prevents a county from adopting an EFU zone that allows uses identified in ORS 215.213(1) or 215.283(1) as outright permitted uses, those statutes do not require that it do so. Brentmar v. Jackson County, 27 Or LUBA 453 (1994).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Where LUBA determines a proposed use is allowable as a conditional use on EFU-zoned land under a provision of ORS 215.213 or 215.283, it need only consider whether the use is also allowable as a conditional use under the provisions of a county's EFU zone to the extent that the zone imposes more restrictive requirements than the statute. Spiering v. Yamhill County, 25 Or LUBA 695 (1993).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. That a proposed paintball game park could be allowed as a "private recreation use" in a commercial zone does not mean it cannot be allowed as a "park" in an EFU zone. Spiering v. Yamhill County, 25 Or LUBA 695 (1993).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Where a local code requires certain nonresidential conditional uses in an EFU zone to be "a principal use of the property," it is within a local government's discretion to interpret this phrase to apply only to the portion of the property on which the conditional use will be located, and to require that the proposed use be more than a strictly personal use of the property owner. Spiering v. Yamhill County, 25 Or LUBA 695 (1993).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. ORS 215.283 establishes standards directly applicable to county land use decisions concerning nonfarm uses of EFU-zoned land. Regardless of whether a county adopts an exception to Goal 3 for EFU-zoned land, it cannot allow a nonfarm use not listed under ORS 215.283 on such land without changing the zone. Schrock Farms, Inc. v. Linn County, 25 Or LUBA 187 (1993).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Where a local government adopts an adequate exception to Statewide Planning Goal 3 for a proposed highway realignment, failure to comply with ORS 215.283 or local EFU zoning requirements does not provide a basis for reversing or remanding the local government's decision. Schrock Farms, Inc. v. Linn County, 24 Or LUBA 58 (1992).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. While counties may not adopt exclusive farm use zones that are less protective of agricultural lands than required by statute, they may regulate agricultural lands more stringently. Avgeris v. Jackson County, 23 Or LUBA 124 (1992).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Under the EFU zoning statute, counties may allow churches as outright permitted uses. However, where a particular EFU zone requires case-by-case findings that proposed nonfarm uses, including churches, will be compatible with farm uses and consistent with state Agricultural Land Use Policies, such findings must be made. Avgeris v. Jackson County, 23 Or LUBA 124 (1992).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Where a conditional use permit approval standard in an EFU zone requires that there be "no other feasible location for the proposed use," the term "feasible location" does not mean "ideal location," but rather a location which is capable of being used for the proposed use. Simmons v. Marion County, 22 Or LUBA 759 (1992).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Where a conditional use permit approval standard in an EFU zone requires that there be "no other feasible location for the proposed use," the price of land at an alternative site is not justification for finding that site infeasible, in the absence of evidence that the price is unreasonable for a site for the proposed use. Simmons v. Marion County, 22 Or LUBA 759 (1992).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Although the EFU zoning statutes do not establish specific approval standards for golf courses in EFU zones, ORS 215.296(1) establishes standards applicable to nonfarm uses in EFU zones generally, and requires that approval of such uses not force a significant change in, or significantly increase the cost of, accepted farm or forest practices on surrounding lands. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 22 Or LUBA 307 (1991).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Comprehensive plan agriculture policies are criteria applicable to a request for conditional use approval for a nonfarm use in an exclusive farm use zone, where the zoning ordinance specifically provides that conditional uses must comply with plan goals and policies and there is nothing in the language of the plan agriculture policies which suggests they were not intended to apply as applicable approval standards. Waker Assoc., Inc. v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 233 (1991).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. The correct way to resolve a conflict between code provisions that (1) specifically allow approval of golf courses in an EFU zone as a conditional use, but (2) establish approval standards for golf courses which make it impossible to ever approve a golf course in the exclusive farm use zone, is to conclude that the approval standards making approval an impossibility were not intended to govern approval of golf courses. Waker Assoc., Inc. v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 233 (1991).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Because the statutes allowing dog kennels in exclusive farm use zones do not define the term "dog kennel," that term must be given its plain and ordinary meaning, which includes boarding and breeding facilities but does not include training facilities. Greuner v. Lane County, 21 Or LUBA 329 (1991).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Where the legislature intended to allow facilities for intensive training of dogs in the exclusive farm use zone, it specifically used the term "training" in addition to the term "kennel." ORS 215.213(1)(L). Greuner v. Lane County, 21 Or LUBA 329 (1991).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. Application of plan agricultural goals requiring preservation of agricultural lands to proposed nonfarm conditional uses in exclusive farm use zones does not effectively prohibit such nonfarm conditional uses, if the ordinance requirement to satisfy the purposes of the plan goals is interpreted and applied by balancing the degree to which a proposed nonfarm use furthers or conflicts with various plan goals and policies. Rowan v. Clackamas County, 19 Or LUBA 163 (1990).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. County interpretation of its plan agricultural land policy to allow it to balance the applicant's need for additional acreage for a golf course, against the county policy favoring retention of EFU-zoned land in large blocks for agricultural use, is a correct interpretation of the county policy. Douglas v. Multnomah County, 18 Or LUBA 607 (1990).

3.3.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Generally. County interpretation of a code "minimum" lot size standard requiring that the lot size be based on the needs of the use to impose a requirement that a golf course in an EFU zone include only the number of acres needed for the golf course is a correct interpretation of the code. Douglas v. Multnomah County, 18 Or LUBA 607 (1990).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. ORS 215.301 prohibits approval of a batching operation on land zoned exclusive farm use within two miles of a planted vineyard, unless the batching operation is "under a local land use approval on October 3, 1989, or a subsequent renewal of an existing approval." Poto v. Linn County, 67 Or LUBA 162 (2013).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. In considering conflicts with agricultural practices under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(b), nothing in ORS 215.301 mandates that the outcome of a county's conflicts analysis must be that batching is a conflict that cannot be minimized. If the evidence showed absolutely no conflicts between a batching plant and a vineyard located closer than two miles from the property, under the Goal 5 rule the county could add the site to its inventory of Significant Resource Sites with All Conflicts Minimized, but would be prohibited from approving batching under ORS 215.301 unless the exemption in ORS 215.301(2) applies. Poto v. Linn County, 67 Or LUBA 162 (2013).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. Read in context, the ORS 215.298 provision allowing a mining operation on EFU-zoned lands if the site is on an "inventory" in a comprehensive plan is a reference to a Goal 5 "inventory" of mineral sites. Because under the 1982 Goal 5 rule the term "inventory" referred to an inventory of significant mineral sites, ORS 215.298 allows mining in an EFU zone only if the site is on a comprehensive plan inventory of significant mineral sites, not if the site is on a separate list of nonsignificant sites. Beaver State Sand and Gravel v. Douglas County, 43 Or LUBA 140 (2002).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. In ORS 215.298, the legislature apparently balanced the conflict between preservation of agricultural soils and extraction of important mineral resources, by allowing mining in the EFU zone only if the site is on a comprehensive plan inventory of significant Goal 5 mineral inventory. It is inconsistent with that legislative intent to read ORS 215.298 more broadly to allow in the EFU zone mining of mineral resources that are insignificant in quality or quantity. Beaver State Sand and Gravel v. Douglas County, 43 Or LUBA 140 (2002).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. A conditional use permit standard for aggregate extraction requiring that the applicant submit "sufficient information to allow the county to set standards" regarding the location, quality and quantity of resource available allows but does not obligate the county to set such standards in approving the permit. A local government's interpretation to that effect is consistent with the express language of the standard and is not reversible under ORS 197.829(1) or Clark v. Jackson County, 313 Or 508, 836 P2d 710 (1992). Jorgensen v. Union County, 37 Or LUBA 738 (2000).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. ORS 215.296 does not require a guarantee that aggregate mining on land zoned for exclusive farm use will cause no adverse impacts on the water table on surrounding lands. Jorgensen v. Union County, 37 Or LUBA 738 (2000).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. That a type of nonfarm use is listed in ORS 215.283(2) authorizes a county to allow such uses in an EFU zone, but carries no implication that a particular use is consistent with the purpose of the EFU zone as a matter of law. ORS 215.283(2) does not prohibit the county from applying a local criterion that requires a proposal to mine high-value agricultural topsoil in an EFU zone not seriously interfere with the purpose of that zone. MacHugh v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 65 (1999).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. Even assuming that a county cannot categorically prohibit all mining operations in the EFU zone, the county can apply a local standard requiring that conditional uses not seriously interfere with the purpose of the zone to deny a proposal to mine high-value agricultural topsoil, where the county's application of its standard is limited to mining operations that permanently remove agricultural topsoil. MacHugh v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 65 (1999).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. LUBA's review of a local government decision applying its code mineral and aggregate resources chapter for compliance with ORS 215.283 does not extend to a review of the code chapter for compliance with ORS 215.283 in respects unrelated to the challenged decision. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 281 (1995).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. ORS 215.253 must be read in context with ORS 215.203(1) and ORS 215.283(2)(b), which specifically permit mineral and aggregate operations on EFU-zoned land. Mineral and aggregate operations do not per se unreasonably restrict or regulate farm structures or practices. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 281 (1995).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. A condition imposed on a mineral and aggregate operation does not violate ORS 215.253(1) simply because it has the potential of impacting some farm uses. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 281 (1995).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. A potential, temporary impact on farm structures or practices on the subject property, caused by an aggregate operation allowed in the EFU zone, is not an unreasonable restriction or regulation under ORS 215.253. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 281 (1995).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. Where a county decision adds a mineral and aggregate overlay zone to the site of a pre-existing conditional use asphalt batch plant within two miles of a planted vineyard, but does not expand or alter either the operation of or area subject to the conditional use permit, and the batch plant could continue to operate regardless of the challenged decision, the continuation of the batch plant is not prohibited by ORS 215.301. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 281 (1995).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. Nothing in ORS chapter 215 requires a conditional use process before a county can impose on the application of a mineral and aggregate overlay zone conditions requiring minor road improvements of the type listed in ORS 215.283(1)(L), which "may be established" in any EFU-zoned area. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 281 (1995).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. The provisions of ORS 215.298, including its definition of "mining," do not apply to zoning districts that are not exclusive farm use zones. Williams v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 602 (1994).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. Exclusive farm use zoning statutory requirements apply directly to uses in exclusive farm use zones. ORS 215.283(2)(b)(B) and (C) allow mining of aggregate and processing into asphalt, subject to the standards imposed by ORS 215.296. Zippel v. Josephine County, 27 Or LUBA 11 (1994).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. Where a county failed to interpret ORS 215.213(2)(d)(C) as allowing an aggregate processing facility that conducts part of the processing on-site but completes the process of making aggregate into asphalt or Portland cement off-site, and the party wishing to assign the county's interpretive failure as error did not appeal the county's decision to LUBA or file a cross-petition for review, LUBA will not consider the interpretive question. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 238 (1993).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. ORS 215.213(2)(d)(D) authorizes the processing of mineral resources other than aggregate. Therefore, that statute does not authorize an aggregate processing facility, notwithstanding that the final processing of aggregate into asphalt or Portland cement occurs off-site. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 238 (1993).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. All provisions of the act that created ORS 215.301 must be related to uses allowed in EFU zones. Therefore, ORS 215.301 applies only to asphalt plants sited in EFU zones, not to an application to site an asphalt plant in an industrial zone. O'Mara v. Douglas County, 25 Or LUBA 25 (1993).

3.3.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Mineral Operations. The requirement of ORS 215.298(2) that permits for mining of aggregate on EFU-zoned land only be issued for sites included on an inventory in an acknowledged comprehensive plan became effective October 3, 1989, and does not apply to a pending application submitted prior to that date. Clark v. Jackson County, 19 Or LUBA 220 (1990).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Any permits for residential development on resource land that were issued prior to the effective date of HB 2106 (2019) are eligible for the five one-year extensions provided in ORS 215.417(2) (2019) only if, on the effective date of that legislation, those permits were still in the initial four-year period of validity or the one two-year extension period provided in ORS 215.417 (2017). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 81 Or LUBA 279 (2020).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A marginal lands county is not required to include in its code a requirement to consider the cumulative impacts from existing or potential lot-of-record dwellings in approving dwellings under OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D)(ii) and (iii). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. ORS 215.441 does not provide an independent basis to approve a dwelling within a church on property zoned EFU, and, where a local code provision provides that "[e]xisting churches may be maintained, enhanced or expanded on the same tract," a construction of that provision to independently allow a residential use of a church as an enhancement to the church impermissibly conflicts with ORS 215.203, ORS 215.283, and ORS 215.441. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 80 Or LUBA 183 (2019).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A replacement dwelling allowed under ORS 215.213(1)(q) must be located on a lawful unit of land. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 415 (2019).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Although it is not clear a proposed "parsonage," which is a portion of a church to include a bedroom, kitchen and bathroom for use by the church's pastor, must be evaluated and approved or denied under the criteria that apply to a nonfarm dwelling under the county's land use ordinance implementing ORS 215.284, those land use standards require the exercise of discretion in approving the development of land. Further, it is possible, even probable, that any application for a proposed residential use associated with a church must be evaluated under the standards at ORS 215.441, and accordingly the county must process such an application according to its procedures that apply to permits. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 33 (2018).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. When a hearings officer determines that a building envelope is generally unsuitable in part due to adverse soil conditions and in part due to size or location, the hearings officer is not required to consider the "used in conjunction with other lands" standard. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 136 (2018).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. The dictionary definition of "conjunction" suggests a close spatial relationship between an existing dwelling on EFU-zoned property and a temporary hardship dwelling that is allowed "in conjunction" with that existing dwelling. Holmberg v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 109 (2018).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Interpreting ORS 215.283(2)(L), which authorizes a temporary hardship dwelling "in conjunction with" an existing dwelling, to require that the temporary hardship dwelling be sited in close proximity to the existing dwelling, so as to minimize the need for new supporting residential infrastructure, is consistent with the overriding legislative policy of preventing "agricultural land from being diverted to non-agricultural use." Holmberg v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 109 (2018).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. OAR 660-033-0130(10)'s requirement—that a temporary hardship dwelling developed "in conjunction with" an existing dwelling on EFU-zoned land must use the existing dwelling's septic system unless it is inadequate for two dwellings—is some indication that the Land Conservation and Development Commission wants to discourage unnecessary, duplicative new supporting infrastructure. Holmberg v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 109 (2018).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Legislative history supports an interpretation of Oregon Laws 2013, chapter 462 (2013 Act), which amended ORS 215.213(2)(b)(A) and (B) (and its counterpart ORS 215.283(2)(b)(A) and (B)), that the default, and longest, assessment look-back period possible to allow a property owner to build a "replacement dwelling" on Exclusive Farm Use (EFU)-zoned land is five years. Section 2 of the 2013 Act provides that a dwelling may be replaced if the dwelling it replaces was assessed ad valorem taxes for the lesser of: (1) the previous five tax years, (2) the previous five tax years except those years where the dwelling had no value as a result of destruction or demolition of the dwelling, or (3) where the dwelling was constructed within the last five years, for the rest of that five-year period. The five-year look-back therefore may not be more than five years and applies to dwellings that were destroyed or demolished. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 76 Or LUBA 250 (2017).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. OAR 660-033-0180(8), the Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) rule that implements Oregon Laws 2013, chapter 462 (the 2013 Act), combines the first part of the 2013 Act's Section 2(2)(b)(A) and Section 2(2)(b)(B) into the rule's Section (B), and ties the first part of Section 2(2)(b)(B) to the five-year tax assessment look-back. Then, the rule's Section (C)(i) eliminates the duplication in the statute and achieves the same limitation the statute achieves, but the rule does not eliminate the statutory requirement to impose a look-back period of five years, essentially giving effect to the "lesser of" language that is not included in the rule. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 76 Or LUBA 250 (2017).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Where four pre-1993 parcels are combined through property line adjustments to meet a local minimum parcel size standard, under OAR 660-033-0020(4) the date the property line adjustments created the new combined parcel is the new "date of creation." Where that new date of creation post-dates 1993, a county decision approving a nonfarm dwelling on the combined parcel does not comply with the ORS 215.284(2)(c) requirement that a nonfarm dwelling must "be sited on a lot or parcel created before January 1, 1993." Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 75 Or LUBA 186 (2017).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A county's findings that a parcel proposed siting a nonfarm dwelling is generally unsuitable for farm use are inadequate, where the property is composed of predominantly Class I-VI soils and the findings do not address the OAR

660-033-0130(4)(c)(B)(ii) presumption that property composed of predominantly Class I-VI soils are suitable for farm use or the fact that livestock did graze on the property in the past. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 75 Or LUBA 186 (2017).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. The uses authorized in EFU zones in counties that have designated marginal lands are generally set out in subsections of ORS 215.213, whereas the uses authorized in EFU zones in non-marginal lands counties are generally set out in ORS 215.283. The regulation of dwellings under ORS 215.213 was originally intended to be slightly more restrictive than under ORS 215.283, as the quid pro quo for more liberal allowance of dwellings on designated marginal lands under ORS 215.317. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 325 (2014).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. The nonfarm dwelling standards codified at ORS 215.284 were enacted by the legislature as amendments to ORS 215.283(3) and new subsections of ORS 215.283. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 325 (2014).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. As a marginal lands county, Lane County is expressly authorized to apply ORS 215.213(3) in approving a nonfarm dwelling on non-high value farmland in the Willamette Valley. Because Lane County is a marginal lands county, it is not required to apply ORS 215.284(1) in addition to ORS 215.213(3), simply because ORS 215.284(1) expressly applies to lands in the Willamette Valley. ORS 215.284(1) applies to non-marginal lands counties. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 325 (2014).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. ORS 215.284(1) to (4) distinguish between lands inside the Willamette Valley and lands outside the Willamette Valley, and apply the stability standard inside the Willamette Valley and apply the suitability standard outside the Willamette Valley. However, the fact that ORS 215.213(3) imposes a suitability standard does not provide a basis for importing the Willamette Valley regulatory distinction from ORS 215.284 into ORS 215.213 and it does not provide a basis for concluding that ORS 215.213(3) does not apply to lands in the Willamette Valley. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 325 (2014).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. ORS 215.213(4) provides that a lot for a nonfarm dwelling must comply with any applicable Willamette River Greenway regulations and ORS 215.213(3) does not include a similar reference to Willamette River Greenway regulations. However, that difference in wording between ORS 215.213(3) and (4) alone does not support interpreting ORS 215.213(4) to apply, to the exclusion of ORS 215.213(3), throughout both the Willamette River Greenway and the much larger Willamette River Valley, when ORS 215.213(3) includes no language precluding its applicability within the Willamette River Valley. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 325 (2014).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A reasonable person could infer from photographs that show the front and two sides of a dwelling that the pictured dwelling has "intact exterior walls and roof structure," as required by ORS 215.283(1)(s)(A) for approval of a replacement dwelling in an exclusive farm use zone. Hegele v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 156 (2008).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Where the evidence shows that a house had a kitchen sink, toilet and bathing facilities that were connected to a pipe that exited the house and traveled underground to a holding and disposal tank of some sort, that evidence is sufficient to establish that the dwelling had indoor plumbing that was connected to "a sanitary waste disposal system," as required by ORS 215.283(1)(s)(B) for approval of a replacement dwelling in an exclusive farm use zone. ORS 215.283(1)(s)(B) does not require that the applicant establish that the required "sanitary waste disposal system" qualifies as a "subsurface sewage disposal system," as defined by ORS 454.605(13). Hegele v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 156 (2008).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Under ORS 215.283(1)(s)(A) and (B), a county may approve a replacement dwelling only if the dwelling that is to be replaced "[h]as intact walls and roof structure" and "[h]as indoor plumbing." Although ORS 215.283(1)(s)(A) and (B) can be interpreted to require that the dwelling that is to be replaced must remain intact until the county decision approving the replacement dwelling becomes final, the statute does not have to be interpreted in that way, since ORS 215.283(1)(s)(E)(i) requires that the dwelling to be replaced must ultimately be removed. Hegele v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 156 (2008).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A county does not commit error by allowing access to a nonfarm dwelling in an exclusive farm use zone to be provided across a right-of-way that crosses a zoning district that does not permit nonfarm dwellings. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 56 Or LUBA 280 (2008).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. OAR 660-012-0065(3) sets out "transportation improvements [that] are consistent with Goals 3, 4, 11, and 14" and allows new access roads "where the function of the road is to reduce local access to or local traffic on a state highway." The rule does not require that the reduced access must in all cases be access that is currently constructed and providing access, but the rule also does not necessarily allow new access roads where the access that is to be eliminated is an unexercised legal right to construct access. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 56 Or LUBA 280 (2008).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Relinquishing a reserved right of access does not result in a reduction of "local access to * * * a state highway," within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0065(3)(g), where the only evidence in the record suggests that ODOT would not allow access to be constructed under that reserved right of access. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 56 Or LUBA 280 (2008).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. OAR 660-012-0035(10) does not require that projects approved under OAR 660-012-0065(3) must be included in the transportation system plan; it provides that they may be included in the transportation system plan, but only if they satisfy the other requirements set out in that section of the rule. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 56 Or LUBA 280 (2008).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. While a parcel may not be considered generally unsuitable "based solely on size or location" without considering whether it can be used in conjunction with other lands, if size or location are not the sole basis for a finding of general unsuitability, then a local government is just required to determine whether the parcel can be used in conjunction with other lands. Williams v. Jackson County, 55 Or LUBA 223 (2007).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. The proper inquiry under ORS 215.284(3)(b) is whether land is generally unsuitable "for the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species," not whether the land is generally unsuitable for "farm use." Williams v. Jackson County, 55 Or LUBA 223 (2007).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A parcel can satisfy the generally unsuitable standard even if portions of the parcel contain areas that, if considered alone, do not satisfy the standard. Williams v. Jackson County, 55 Or LUBA 223 (2007).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. In Smith v. Clackamas County, 313 Or 519, 836 P2d 716 (1992), the court held that in applying local nonfarm dwelling standards that replicated existing statutory standards, the requirement that the dwelling be sited on "generally unsuitable land for the production of farm crops and livestock" requires that the entire farm parcel, rather than the portion of the parcel where the dwelling would be sited, must be "generally unsuitable land." ORS 215.284(3)(b) was adopted in 1993 in reaction to Smith, and makes the "generally unsuitable land" standard apply to "a lot, parcel or portion of a lot or parcel." Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 71 (2005).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. For jurisdictions outside the Willamette Valley, OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c) requires that an applicant for a nonfarm dwelling must demonstrate that the dwelling: (1) "will not force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of accepted farming or forest practices on nearby lands devoted to farm or forest use;" (2) will be "situated upon a lot or parcel, or a portion of a lot or parcel, that is generally unsuitable land for the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species;" and (3) "will not materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area." Lichvar v. Jackson County, 49 Or LUBA 68 (2005).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(C) incorporates the worst-case scenario methodology for applying the stability standard that is set out at OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D) and essentially requires that an applicant for a nonfarm dwelling: (1) project the worst-case scenario for development of dwellings on similarly situated parcels; and (2) determine whether the stability of the area for continued agriculture will be upset if that worst-case scenario comes true. If the worst-case scenario would upset the stability of the area for continued agriculture, the application for a nonfarm dwelling must be denied. Lichvar v. Jackson County, 49 Or LUBA 68 (2005).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. In most cases, the OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D) stability standard cannot be applied until after the OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B) generally unsuitable standard is applied because the county will need to know the salient characteristics of the subject property in order to determine whether other similarly situated parcels include generally unsuitable land that could potentially provide a site for a nonfarm dwelling under OAR 660-033-0130(4), when applying the stability standard's worst-case scenario test. If so, the potential for siting a nonfarm dwelling on that similarly situated parcel must be included in the analysis of the worst-case scenario. Lichvar v. Jackson County, 49 Or LUBA 68 (2005).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A county finding that a site where a nonfarm dwelling could be located under OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B) is too small for a dwelling is an inadequate basis for denying the application where the other nonfarm dwelling criteria are met and the county has no minimum size or dimensional requirement for nonfarm dwellings. Lichvar v. Jackson County, 49 Or LUBA 68 (2005).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Where an applicant takes the position that a farm driveway has compacted the underlying soils so that they are no longer suitable for the production of farm crops and livestock or trees so that the driveway is a potential site for a nonfarm dwelling under OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B), and the county accepts that position, the applicant cannot fault the county for finding there are other nearby similarly situated parcels that have driveways that would also qualify for nonfarm dwellings and thereby destabilize the area for agriculture, in violation of OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D). Lichvar v. Jackson County, 49 Or LUBA 68 (2005).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. OAR 660-006-0025(4)(t), which is part of the Land Conservation and Development Commission's rule governing medical hardship dwellings on land that is zoned for exclusive farm use, does not require that a "recreational vehicle" or "an existing building" be connected to the septic system that serves the existing residence. Burton v. Polk County, 48 Or LUBA 440 (2005).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Because OAR 660-006-0025(4)(t) does not require that "existing buildings" that are to be used for hardship dwelling must be connected to the same septic system that serves the existing dwelling, it would not be inconsistent with OAR 660-006-0025(4)(t) to interpret an ambiguous zoning ordinance provision for hardship dwellings in exclusive farm use zones not to impose that requirement either. Burton v. Polk County, 48 Or LUBA 440 (2005).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A county interpretation of its zoning ordinance to allow an existing manufactured dwelling to remain connected to the septic system that serves that existing dwelling, rather than to require the manufactured dwelling to be moved and connected to the septic system for the other dwelling on the property where the medical hardship is located is not inconsistent with the underlying purpose for medical hardship dwellings. In either case a second dwelling remains on the property for a specified period of time. Burton v. Polk County, 48 Or LUBA 440 (2005).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. When a proposed nonresource parcel is found to be unsuitable for farm or forest use based solely on terrain, adverse soils and land conditions, rather than size and location, a local government need not consider whether the parcel could be put to farm or forest use in conjunction with other land. Epp v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 480 (2004).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. When an acknowledged local ordinance requires a justification of the study area for a stability analysis only when the study area is less than 2000 acres, and the study area used by the local government is over 2000 acres, no justification is required even though OAR 660-033-0130(4) would require such justification absent the acknowledged local ordinance. Epp v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 480 (2004).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. ORS 215.213(1)(t) allows alteration, restoration or replacement of an existing dwelling in an EFU zone if certain requirements are met, including a requirement that the dwelling have "intact exterior walls and roof structure." This requirement is met even if the roof and wall have suffered from normal wear and tear or are damaged, so long as they continue to perform the function of separating an indoor living environment from the elements outside the dwelling. Bradley v. Washington County, 44 Or LUBA 36 (2003).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. ORS 215.213(1)(t) requires that "exterior walls" be "intact." Where an addition to a dwelling makes the original exterior wall an interior wall, it is the exterior wall of the addition that must be "intact" under ORS 215.213(1)(t). Bradley v. Washington County, 44 Or LUBA 36 (2003).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A county may not approve a nonfarm dwelling on a parcel created after January 1, 1993, under ORS 215.284(2)(c), which requires that the parcel on which a nonfarm dwelling is to be located be created prior to January 1, 1993, in order to remedy what it perceives to be an injustice. Harris v. Jefferson County, 44 Or LUBA 205 (2003).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A decision that approves a nonfarm dwelling on EFU land notwithstanding that the application does not comply with the applicable criteria set out at ORS 215.284(2)(c) will be reversed. Harris v. Jefferson County, 44 Or LUBA 205 (2003).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Because a study area of 276 acres is clearly insufficient to satisfy the 1,000-to-2,000-acre study area required by OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D), for purposes of the stability standard, LUBA will not address arguments that the study area is sufficient to satisfy the case law on which the rule elaborates. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 43 Or LUBA 4 (2002).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A local government must consider whether land can be used in conjunction with a commercial farm or ranch under OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c), unless it first finds that the subject property is generally unsuitable for farm use, regardless of size or location. Where the local government relies on a combination of factors, including size, to conclude that the subject property is generally unsuitable for farm use, it must consider whether the property can be used in conjunction with nearby commercial farms or ranches. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 43 Or LUBA 4 (2002).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. If property has some value as farmland if used in conjunction with a neighboring commercial farm or ranch, and the owner of that farm or ranch offers to buy, lease, rent or otherwise manage the property for something approaching its actual market value as farmland, then OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c) prohibits a finding that the property is "generally unsuitable" for farm use. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 43 Or LUBA 4 (2002).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A finding that an EFU parcel would contribute no productive farm acreage to any neighboring farm, and thus is generally unsuitable for farm use even if used in conjunction with neighboring dairy farms, is not supported by substantial evidence, where two neighboring dairy farmers offered to buy the parcel to use in conjunction with their farms. A property's usefulness as farmland, considered on its own, is not necessarily indicative of its usefulness when combined with an existing farm or ranch. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 43 Or LUBA 4 (2002).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(C) requires that a county consider the "cumulative impact of nonfarm dwellings on other lots or parcels in the area similarly situated" by applying the standards of OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D), in determining whether a proposed nonfarm dwelling would materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern. That language requires that the county include in its stability analysis potential new nonfarm dwellings on existing lots or parcels. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D) requires that the county's stability analysis consider the potential for new nonfarm parcels in the area, whether or not the applicant proposes a new nonfarm parcel. OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(C) requires compliance with the standards of OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D), and therefore also requires consideration of potential new nonfarm parcels, whether or not a new nonfarm parcel is proposed. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Remand is necessary where the hearings officer cites a nonexistent requirement for "substantial and compelling findings," and appears to apply that standard in determining that the applicant does not satisfy the stability standard. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. ORS 215.236(4) requires that the applicant for a nonfarm dwelling notify the tax assessor that the parcel is no longer being used as farmland, and appears to presume that nonfarm parcels are not in farm use. Given that statutory presumption, the hearings officer did not err in assuming that a parcel disqualified for farm tax deferral is no longer in farm use, and is not required to assume that farm use will continue on portions of larger nonfarm parcels. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D) requires the county to assume that any property in the study area that can be divided or developed for a nonfarm dwelling will be. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. The stability standard at OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D)(iii) is framed in the disjunctive, and the standard is not met if the cumulative impact of nonfarm dwellings will either (1) make it more difficult for farm use to continue due to diminished opportunities to expand, purchase or lease farmland; or (2) diminish the number of tracts or acreage in farm use in a manner that destabilizes the character of the study area. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D) and (c)(C) require consideration of the cumulative impact of a proposed nonfarm dwelling on lots or parcels that are "similarly situated." Because OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D)(ii) expressly requires consideration of whether parcels larger than the minimum parcel size may be divided to allow nonfarm dwellings, the scope of "similarly situated" parcels is not limited to substandard parcels or parcels that are the same size as the subject property. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Any minimum gross farm income level that a county may establish in approving a lot of record dwelling on EFU-zoned high-value farmland must be consistent with the income generated by the county's noncommercial farms, which are protected under Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands) and the EFU zoning statutes. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A county errs in relying on OAR 660-033-0135, which establishes standards to ensure that farms are large enough and generate sufficient income to warrant an assumption that a dwelling on the farm is properly viewed as "customarily provided in conjunction with farm use" within the meaning of ORS 215.283(1)(f), to also set a gross annual income threshold for determining whether farm use on high-value farmland is "impracticable" for purposes of siting a lot of record dwelling under ORS 215.705(2)(a)(C)(i). Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. The minimum gross income levels the legislature established at ORS 308A.071(2)(a) for non-EFU-zoned parcels to qualify for special assessment are the best available indication of the level of gross income that the legislature believes demonstrates practicable farm use. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. In applying ORS 215.705(2)(a)(C)(i) to determine whether farm use of an EFU-zoned parcel with high-value soils is "impracticable," evidence that the property and nearby properties have generated limited farm income in the past is relevant evidence, but it is not determinative. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Under ORS 215.705(2)(a)(C)(i), a property's impracticability for farm use must be "due to extraordinary circumstances inherent in the land or its physical setting that do not apply generally to other land in the vicinity." A decision that does not demonstrate that cited factors are not shared by neighboring properties and does not explain why the cited factors make farm use impracticable must be remanded. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Failure to specifically describe the grazing practices on surrounding properties does not render a finding of compliance with the noninterference standard inadequate where the proposed nonfarm dwelling is one-half mile from the nearest grazing operation and buffered by a number of vacant lots, and no conceivable interference is identified. Wolverton v. Crook County, 39 Or LUBA 256 (2000).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Vandalism and traffic impacts associated with a county road traversing petitioners' cattle ranch are insufficient to show that a proposed nonfarm dwelling will seriously interfere with grazing practices on petitioners' ranch, where the county finds that vandalism is not associated with nonfarm dwellings using the road and traffic from the proposed dwelling is not significantly greater than could occur under permitted uses. Wolverton v. Crook County, 39 Or LUBA 256 (2000).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Although past denial of nonfarm development in the area is not necessarily an indicator that similar applications will be denied in the future, the county does not err in relying upon recent denials and its understanding of the current law to conclude that potential new nonfarm development is so limited in the area that the cumulative effect of such development will not materially alter the stability of the land use pattern. Wolverton v. Crook County, 39 Or LUBA 256 (2000).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. As construed in Dorvinen v. Crook County, 153 Or App 391, 957 P2d 180 (1998), ORS 215.780(1) applies the statutory minimum lot or parcel size to all parcels resulting from a partition for nonfarm dwellings, including the parcel on which the nonfarm dwelling will be sited. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 156 (2000).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. When a local code parallels and implements an administrative rule standard for reviewing an application for a nonfarm dwelling in an EFU zone, the local government's discretion to interpret its local criteria is constrained. Its interpretation and application of its code must be consistent with the rule it implements. Dowrie v. Benton County, 38 Or LUBA 93 (2000).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Two separate parcels do not form a "tract," as that term is defined by ORS 215.010(2), where a husband and a wife own one parcel jointly and the second parcel is owned by the husband only. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 280 (1999).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. LUBA will remand rather than reverse a decision approving partitions in conjunction with a nonfarm dwelling, notwithstanding that the resulting partitions violate the minimum parcel size at ORS 215.780(1), where the decision expressly preserves an issue regarding whether the county's 20-acre minimum parcel size was adopted under one of the exceptions to ORS 215.780(1), and thus LUBA cannot determine whether the approval is prohibited as a matter of law. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Co., 37 Or LUBA 215 (1999).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. The legal effect of a "partition," as defined at ORS 92.010, is to create new parcels as of the date the partition plat is approved. The parcels resulting from a partition are thus "created" as of the date the plat is approved, for purposes of the nonfarm dwelling provisions of OAR 660-033-0130 and ORS 215.284. Hartmann v. Washington County, 36 Or LUBA 442 (1999).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. The definition of "Date of Creation" at OAR 660-033-0020(4) expands the circumstances in which parcels are "created" for purposes of siting a nonfarm dwelling to include lot line adjustments or similar reconfigurations that have the effect of qualifying the parcel for a dwelling. The definition does not impliedly narrow the set of circumstances that create a parcel to include only those events that have the effect of qualifying a parcel for a dwelling. Hartmann v. Washington County, 36 Or LUBA 442 (1999).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A partition, as defined by ORS 92.010, is not a "reconfiguration" of the boundaries of a parcel within the meaning of OAR 660-033-0020(4) because the legal effect of partition is to create new parcels. Hartmann v. Washington County, 36 Or LUBA 442 (1999).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Absent an identification of what specific farm and forest practices are involved on nearby lands, a local government cannot meaningfully determine whether a proposed nonfarm dwelling will cause a significant change in or increased cost to those practices. Hearne v. Baker County, 34 Or LUBA 176 (1998).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. The only difference between ORS 215.284(2) and 215.284(3) is that ORS 215.284(2) permits a nonfarm dwelling on an existing parcel, while ORS 215.284(3) permits a nonfarm dwelling on a newly created parcel. Dorvinen v. Crook County, 33 Or LUBA 711 (1997).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A parcel that was illegally created in 1974 and then legalized by an "after-the-fact" decision in 1989 is not "lawfully created" under ORS 215.705(1), which requires that the parcel be "lawfully created * * * [p]rior to January 1, 1985." Skrepetos v. Douglas County, 33 Or LUBA 502 (1997).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. The county fails to establish that, under local code, a second dwelling is authorized as a conditional use in an EFU zone where the findings do not explain why the proposed dwelling is authorized and do not explain when the primary dwelling was established or whether its use is resource-related. Le Roux v. Malheur County, 32 Or LUBA 124 (1996).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. There is insufficient evidence in the county's findings to support a conclusion of compatibility with farm use where the findings do not include evidence regarding the surrounding farm uses in the area, and do not explain how the proposed nonfarm dwelling will be compatible with the identified farm uses. Le Roux v. Malheur County, 32 Or LUBA 124 (1996).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. The county's findings lack evidentiary support for the conclusion that a proposed dwelling will not materially alter the stability of the surrounding area where there is inadequate evidence regarding the surrounding area, inadequate evidence regarding the uses existing in the area, and no evidence regarding how the proposed dwelling will not alter the stability of those uses in the selected area. Le Roux v. Malheur County, 32 Or LUBA 124 (1996).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. In approving a conditional use permit for a nonfarm dwelling, the county must make findings required by ORS 215.284(2)(c) or 215.284(3)(c) regarding the legal creation of the subject property as a separate parcel. O'Brien v. Lincoln County, 31 Or LUBA 262 (1996).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. How petitioners believe a property should have been assessed for property taxation before approval of a nonfarm dwelling permit is not relevant in a subsequent land use proceeding. Wakeman v. Jackson County, 29 Or LUBA 521 (1995).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. ORS 215.236(2) requires that farm assessment disqualifications be filed within 120 days of approval of a nonfarm dwelling permit only when the subject property is assessed for farm use at the time of approval. A county's decision to modify a condition of approval requiring disqualification from farm assessment within 120 days after approval does not violate ORS 215.236(2) when the subject property was not assessed for farm use at the time of approval. Wakeman v. Jackson County, 29 Or LUBA 521 (1995).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. The "lot of record" dwelling provisions of ORS 215.705 provide an alternative to the nonfarm dwelling provisions of ORS 215.284, which do not allow dwellings on lots or parcels that are not composed of predominantly Class IV to VIII soils. Blondeau v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 115 (1995).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Where amendments to an exclusive farm use (EFU) zoning district do not change the maximum allowable density of nonfarm dwellings in PUDs, but may have the effect of increasing the numbers of, and circumstances in which, residential PUDs may be approved on EFU-zoned land, the county must consider these potential secondary effects of the amendments in determining whether the EFU zone, as amended, complies with Goals 11 and 14. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Marion County, 27 Or LUBA 303 (1994).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. ORS 215.283(1)(f) and OAR 660-05-030(4) are satisfied where the farm use in conjunction with which a dwelling is customarily provided will be established prior to placement of a dwelling on the subject property. Testa v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 357 (1994).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. A local government's interpretation of its code provisions on farm dwellings is within the interpretive discretion afforded local governments by Clark v. Jackson County and 1993 Oregon Laws, chapter 792, section 43, so long as its interpretation does not provide less protection to EFU-zoned land than what ORS 215.283(1)(f) and OAR 660-05-030(4) provide. Testa v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 357 (1994).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Even though LUBA might agree with a county's argument in its brief that the purpose section of its EFU zoning district is not an approval standard for a farm dwelling permit application, if the challenged decision itself does not interpret the code provision, LUBA must remand the decision for the county to interpret the provision in the first instance. Testa v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 357 (1994).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Where a previous local government decision approved a nonfarm dwelling, the local government cannot require the proposed nonfarm dwelling to be re-reviewed against the same standards. Rodriguez v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 50 (1993).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. LUBA will defer to a county's interpretation of its EFU zone provisions as not allowing approval of a nonfarm dwelling on a parcel that already has a dwelling, or approval of a partition to allow a nonfarm dwelling, if the parent parcel already has a dwelling. Hahn v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 18 (1993).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. ORS 215.283(3) applies to the "establishment" of a nonfarm dwelling in an EFU zone. In this context, "establishment" refers to the legal establishment of a nonfarm residential use, not merely to the construction of a nonfarm dwelling. DLCD v. Columbia County, 24 Or LUBA 32 (1992).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Parcels in Exclusive Farm Use zones that are of insufficient size to "continue the existing commercial enterprise in the area" may be eligible for approval of a nonfarm dwelling, but are not eligible for approval of a farm dwelling. OAR 660-05-025; 660-05-030. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 23 Or LUBA 361 (1992).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Whether a proposed dwelling (1) is permitted outright in an EFU zone, (2) is "accessory" to an underlying nonconforming use, and (3) complies with ORS 215.296(1), are determinations which require "interpretation or the exercise of factual, policy or legal judgment" within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) and (C). Komning v. Grant County, 20 Or LUBA 481 (1990).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. In denying an application for a nonfarm dwelling on land zoned for exclusive farm use, a county need only adopt findings demonstrating that one or more approval standards are not met. McNulty v. Marion County, 19 Or LUBA 367 (1990).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. In reviewing a combined request for approval of a nonfarm dwelling and a partition to create a nonfarm parcel, a county must first apply applicable approval standards, including the "general unsuitability" standard, to the request for approval of the nonfarm dwelling. Only after the nonfarm dwelling is approved may the county consider the request to create a new nonfarm parcel for the dwelling. Smith v. Clackamas County, 19 Or LUBA 171 (1990).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. The "general unsuitability" standard applies to the entire parent parcel, not just to the portion of the parent parcel or the new nonfarm parcel on which a nonfarm dwelling is to be located. Smith v. Clackamas County, 19 Or LUBA 171 (1990).

3.3.3 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Dwellings. Compliance with an ordinance provision requiring that proposed nonfarm dwellings be found consistent with the policies of ORS 215.243 requires the county to explain which of the policies of ORS 215.243 are relevant and to address those relevant policies. Stefan v. Yamhill County, 18 Or LUBA 820 (1990).

3.3.4 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Compatibility Standard. A local government's unsupported inference that ranching operations are 2-3 miles distant from the proposed nonfarm dwelling, and its reliance on the absence of evidence on which the applicant bears the burden of proof, do not constitute substantial evidence supporting a finding that the nonfarm dwelling is compatible with farm uses. Wolverton v. Crook County, 34 Or LUBA 515 (1998).

3.3.4 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Compatibility Standard. Under the compatibility standard, the local government must address conflicts between existing residential uses and nearby farm uses, where a proposed nonfarm dwelling will contribute to and thus aggravate those conflicts. Wolverton v. Crook County, 34 Or LUBA 515 (1998).

3.3.4 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Compatibility Standard. Absent an identification of what specific farm and forest practices are involved on nearby lands, a local government cannot meaningfully determine whether a proposed nonfarm dwelling will cause a significant change in or increased cost to those practices. Hearne v. Baker County, 34 Or LUBA 176 (1998).

3.3.4 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Compatibility Standard. Where a conditional use is proposed on EFU land, the compatibility of the proposed use with uses on adjacent properties is necessary to ensuring the stability of existing uses, but it does not alone ensure stability. Ray v. Douglas County, 32 Or LUBA 388 (1997).

3.3.4 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Compatibility Standard. There is insufficient evidence in the county's findings to support a conclusion of compatibility with farm use where the findings do not include evidence regarding the surrounding farm uses in the area, and do not explain how the proposed nonfarm dwelling will be compatible with the identified farm uses. Le Roux v. Malheur County, 32 Or LUBA 124 (1996).

3.3.4 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Compatibility Standard. Where a county acknowledges an incompatibility between a proposed nonfarm use and surrounding farm uses, it cannot determine that the proposed use satisfies the requirement that it be compatible through the imposition of a condition which will mitigate but not resolve the incompatibility. Thomas v. Wasco County, 30 Or LUBA 302 (1996).

3.3.4 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Compatibility Standard. Findings determining compatibility between a proposed nonforest dwelling and forest uses are inadequate where the findings simply conclude no conflicts have occurred between existing dwellings and forest uses, but fail to establish the proximity between those existing dwellings and forest uses, and fail to establish whether the existing dwellings have buffering or other characteristics similar to those of the subject parcel. DLCD v. Lincoln County, 26 Or LUBA 89 (1993).

3.3.4 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Compatibility Standard. Even if a proposed use does not significantly interfere with accepted farming practices on adjacent agricultural lands or materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area, it may nevertheless be incompatible with farm uses and inconsistent with the intent and purpose of ORS 215.243. DLCD v. Crook County, 26 Or LUBA 478 (1994).

3.3.4 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Compatibility Standard. A local code requirement that a proposed farm dwelling be compatible with area farm operations does not require a determination of the compatibility of the proposed dwelling with domestic water users in the area. Giesy v. Benton County, 24 Or LUBA 328 (1992).

3.3.4 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Compatibility Standard. A code requirement that a proposed nonresource dwelling not be incompatible or interfere with adjacent farm and forest uses requires findings (1) identifying an area zoned for farm and forest uses, (2) determining what farm and forest uses occur within that identified area, and (3) evaluating whether the proposed nonresource dwelling will be "incompatible" or will "interfere" with those practices. Veach v. Wasco County, 23 Or LUBA 492 (1992).

3.3.4 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Compatibility Standard. In determining whether a proposed golf course on EFU-zoned land satisfies local standards requiring that the golf course be compatible with and not seriously interfere with farm uses, the local government must identify the farm uses in the area and explain how the proposal will be compatible, and not seriously interfere, with the identified farm uses. Kaye v. Marion County, 23 Or LUBA 452 (1992).

3.3.4 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Compatibility Standard. Without an explanation of the relationship between the location of the farm uses in the area and the subject parcel, a county's findings are inadequate to establish that a proposed nonfarm dwelling is compatible with the farm uses in the area. Stefan v. Yamhill County, 18 Or LUBA 820 (1990).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. Where it is not apparent that a county adopted one or more conditions of approval to address the impacts described in ORS 215.296(1), petitioner's argument that the county's conditions of approval are not "clear and objective," as is required by ORS 215.296(2), provides no basis for reversal or remand. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Grant County, 42 Or LUBA 9 (2002).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. Failure to specifically describe the grazing practices on surrounding properties does not render a finding of compliance with the noninterference standard inadequate where the proposed nonfarm dwelling is one-half mile from the nearest grazing operation and buffered by a number of vacant lots, and no conceivable interference is identified. Wolverton v. Crook County, 39 Or LUBA 256 (2000).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. Vandalism and traffic impacts associated with a county road traversing petitioners' cattle ranch are insufficient to show that a proposed nonfarm dwelling will seriously interfere with grazing practices on petitioners' ranch, where the county finds that vandalism is not associated with nonfarm dwellings using the road and traffic from the proposed dwelling is not significantly greater than could occur under permitted uses. Wolverton v. Crook County, 39 Or LUBA 256 (2000).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. Where a neighboring farmer identifies significant changes and significant cost increases to his ranching operation from a proposed motocross race track and off-road vehicle park, the county must find that the proposed park, as conditioned, will not cause those impacts. Such findings are inadequate where the county does not address those identified impacts or explain why the proposed park, as conditioned, will not cause those impacts. Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. Conditions imposed on a proposed motocross race track and off-road vehicle park that noise from the park must comply with DEQ standards and not exceed 99 decibels are inadequate to support a finding of compliance with the noninterference standard, where the county does not determine whether compliance with DEQ standards will prevent identified impacts on surrounding farm and forest practices, and the only mechanism for achieving compliance is to limit the noise from individual vehicles to 99 decibels. Without addressing the cumulative noise impacts of multiple vehicles, the county is no position to conclude that identified impacts will not occur. Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. Where a party during local proceedings advises the county that an existing or prior farm use on surrounding lands is in the process of being abandoned, and plans for the new farm use are sufficiently developed to allow the new farm use to be described in sufficient detail to allow the farm practices that will be associated with the new farm use to be identified, an applicant for a nonfarm use that is subject to ORS 215.296(1) must address the accepted farming practices that will be associated with that new farm use. Dierking v. Clackamas County, 38 Or LUBA 106 (2000).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. Organic farming is not properly viewed as either a "farm use" or an "accepted farm practice." However, organic farmers may employ accepted farming practices that are not normally associated with other types of farming. Dierking v. Clackamas County, 38 Or LUBA 106 (2000).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. Impacts on "farm families, residents and workers" are not impacts on "accepted farm practices," that must be considered under ORS 215.296(1). Dierking v. Clackamas County, 38 Or LUBA 106 (2000).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. Where a county's findings are adequate to identify accepted farming practices on lands surrounding a proposed aggregate mining operation but do not explain why they will not be significantly affected by the mining operation, the county's decision must be remanded. Turner Community Association v. Marion County, 37 Or LUBA 324 (1999).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. A county may distinguish between those properties "primarily devoted" to farm use versus properties "primarily devoted" to residential use in its analysis to determine whether a proposed dwelling will force a significant change in or increase the cost of farm practices on surrounding lands devoted to farm use, as required by ORS 215.705(2)(a)(C)(ii). Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 297 (1999).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. A county's findings concerning the noninterference standard are inadequate, where the findings simply identify nearby farm uses without identifying the accepted farming practices associated with those uses or explaining why the proposal will not force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of those accepted farming practices. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 280 (1999).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. A finding that there is no "commercially viable farm activity" on nearby parcels does not satisfy an approval standard that a proposed nonfarm dwelling will not interfere with nearby farm uses. O'Brien v. Lincoln County, 31 Or LUBA 262 (1996).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. The noninterference standard of ORS 215.283(3)(b) applies directly to land in a county EFU zone, and EFU zone provisions implementing ORS 215.283(3)(b) may not be interpreted inconsistently with the statute. DLCD v. Crook County, 26 Or LUBA 478 (1994).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. Where only a portion of an EFU-zoned property is to be put to nonfarm use, the provision of ORS 215.283(3)(b) requiring noninterference with accepted farming practices applies both to farming practices that will continue on the subject property and to farming practices on parcels that adjoin the subject property. DLCD v. Crook County, 26 Or LUBA 478 (1994).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. Where findings state facts relevant to whether a proposed nonfarm use will interfere with accepted farming practices, but do not identify the types of farming occurring in the area, and those findings are challenged as inadequate and not supported by substantial evidence, LUBA will sustain the challenge in the absence of any attempt by respondents to defend the findings or identify evidence supporting the findings. DLCD v. Crook County, 25 Or LUBA 98 (1993).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. A code requirement that a proposed nonresource dwelling not be incompatible or interfere with adjacent farm and forest uses requires findings (1) identifying an area zoned for farm and forest uses, (2) determining what farm and forest uses occur within that identified area, and (3) evaluating whether the proposed nonresource dwelling will be "incompatible" or will "interfere" with those practices. Veach v. Wasco County, 23 Or LUBA 492 (1992).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. In determining whether a proposed golf course on EFU-zoned land satisfies local standards requiring that the golf course be compatible with and not seriously interfere with farm uses, the local government must identify the farm uses in the area and explain how the proposal will be compatible, and not seriously interfere, with the identified farm uses. Kaye v. Marion County, 23 Or LUBA 452 (1992).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. Where the evidence establishes a reasonable farmer would not significantly change the manner in which the farm is managed due to a proposed golf course, and the opponents' evidence shows only that there is a remote possibility that there could be some impacts from such proposed golf course, the county's determinations that the proposed golf course will not seriously interfere with, force a significant change in, or significantly increase the cost of accepting farming practices in the area, are supported by substantial evidence. Washington Co. Farm Bureau v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 540 (1992).

3.3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Noninterference Standard. Findings of compliance with a standard that a proposed golf course will not "force a significant change in," or "significantly increase the cost of," accepted farm or forest practices on surrounding lands do not necessarily satisfy a standard that the proposed golf course will not "interfere seriously" with accepted farming practices. Washington Co. Farm Bureau v. Washington Co., 21 Or LUBA 51 (1991).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. ORS 215.284(1) to (4) distinguish between lands inside the Willamette Valley and lands outside the Willamette Valley, and apply the stability standard inside the Willamette Valley and apply the suitability standard outside the Willamette Valley. However, the fact that ORS 215.213(3) imposes a suitability standard does not provide a basis for importing the Willamette Valley regulatory distinction from ORS 215.284 into ORS 215.213 and it does not provide a basis for concluding that ORS 215.213(3) does not apply to lands in the Willamette Valley. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 325 (2014).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. When a petitioner was required to raise local appeal issues below pursuant to Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 79 P3d 382 (2003), raising the issue that approval of a nonfarm dwelling would significantly increase the cost of farming practices is not sufficient to raise any issue concerning impacts on the stability of the overall land use pattern, and the petitioner may not raise the stability standard at LUBA. Zeitoun v. Yamhill County, 60 Or LUBA 111 (2009).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. The stability standard requires a county to project a full-development, worst-case scenario and determine whether under that scenario the agricultural land use pattern would be destabilized at some point in the future. If the answer is affirmative, the county must either (1) deny the application or (2) identify some reason or mechanism why that scenario is not likely to occur and nonfarm development will not reach levels that destabilize the agricultural land use pattern. Young v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 704 (2008).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Where a county's code and comprehensive plan are silent regarding how a one-dwelling-per-160-acres wildlife habitat standard is to be calculated, the county does not err in averaging residential density within the same 2000-acre study area that is used for the stability standard. Young v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 704 (2008).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Although a local land use regulation may not specifically require the justification of a 2,000-acre study area for purposes of determining whether a proposed nonfarm dwelling will "materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area," that regulation implements a statutory requirement, ORS 215.284(2)(d), which has been interpreted to require justification of the scope and contours of any study area used in applying the stability test. To the extent Epp v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 480 (2004), concludes otherwise, it is overruled. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. For purposes of determining whether a proposed nonfarm dwelling will "materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area," OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D)(ii) requires identification of the "number, location and type" of existing dwellings in an identified study area. Where a petitioner fails to explain why the county's alleged errors in identifying existing dwellings on nearby properties as nonfarm dwellings rather than farm dwellings would render its conclusion regarding the resulting stability of the area inadequate, it fails to provide a basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A 2,000-acre study area that encompasses a diverse range of topography and land uses could take on many different configurations that are equally "representative of the land use pattern surrounding the subject parcel," for purposes of OAR 660-033-0140(4)(a). Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 50 Or LUBA 608 (2005).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Where a county considers whether the stability standard is met based on the number of vacant parcels in the study area that potentially qualify for a nonfarm dwelling under the general unsuitability standard, it is not enough to consider whether such vacant parcels are generally unsuitable as a whole. The county must also consider whether due to poor soils or other circumstances portions of such vacant parcels could qualify the parcels for nonfarm dwellings. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 50 Or LUBA 608 (2005).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. That lot-of-record dwellings are allowed in the EFU zone is an insufficient basis to demonstrate compliance with a code standard requiring that a proposed lot-of-record dwelling will not materially alter the stability of the land use pattern in the area. Tallman v. Clatsop County, 47 Or LUBA 240 (2004).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. LUBA will not consider new evidence presented for the first time in an appendix to a petition for review that addresses the stability standard set out at OAR 660-033-0130(4), where the evidence is used to challenge the reasonableness of a county's evidentiary decision regarding the number of new dwellings that could be established within the study area and the new evidence is based on a methodology that was not presented to the county during the local evidentiary proceedings. Knoche v. Crook County, 46 Or LUBA 85 (2003).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. When an acknowledged local ordinance requires a justification of the study area for a stability analysis only when the study area is less than 2000 acres, and the study area used by the local government is over 2000 acres, no justification is required even though OAR 660-033-0130(4) would require such justification absent the acknowledged local ordinance. Epp v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 480 (2004).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Findings that do not address arguments made at the local level that the chosen study area is not reflective of the actual land use pattern of the area are not adequate to satisfy the stability standard set out in OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D). Frazee v. Jackson County, 45 Or LUBA 263 (2003).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Findings that fail to consider the cumulative impact of existing, proposed and potential future nonfarm dwellings are inadequate to demonstrate that proposed nonfarm dwellings will not materially alter the stability of the land use pattern. Hanna v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 386 (2003).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Because a study area of 276 acres is clearly insufficient to satisfy the 1,000-to-2,000-acre study area required by OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D), for purposes of the stability standard, LUBA will not address arguments that the study area is sufficient to satisfy the case law on which the rule elaborates. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 43 Or LUBA 4 (2002).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(C) requires that a county consider the "cumulative impact of nonfarm dwellings on other lots or parcels in the area similarly situated" by applying the standards of OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D), in determining whether a proposed nonfarm dwelling would materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern. That language requires that the county include in its stability analysis potential new nonfarm dwellings on existing lots or parcels. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D) requires that the county's stability analysis consider the potential for new nonfarm parcels in the area, whether or not the applicant proposes a new nonfarm parcel. OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(C) requires compliance with the standards of OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D), and therefore also requires consideration of potential new nonfarm parcels, whether or not a new nonfarm parcel is proposed. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Remand is necessary where the hearings officer cites a nonexistent requirement for "substantial and compelling findings," and appears to apply that standard in determining that the applicant does not satisfy the stability standard. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. ORS 215.236(4) requires that the applicant for a nonfarm dwelling notify the tax assessor that the parcel is no longer being used as farmland, and appears to presume that nonfarm parcels are not in farm use. Given that statutory presumption, the hearings officer did not err in assuming that a parcel disqualified for farm tax deferral is no longer in farm use, and is not required to assume that farm use will continue on portions of larger nonfarm parcels. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D) requires the county to assume that any property in the study area that can be divided or developed for a nonfarm dwelling will be. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. The stability standard at OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D)(iii) is framed in the disjunctive, and the standard is not met if the cumulative impact of nonfarm dwellings will either (1) make it more difficult for farm use to continue due to diminished opportunities to expand, purchase or lease farmland; or (2) diminish the number of tracts or acreage in farm use in a manner that destabilizes the character of the study area. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D) and (c)(C) require consideration of the cumulative impact of a proposed nonfarm dwelling on lots or parcels that are "similarly situated." Because OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D)(ii) expressly requires consideration of whether parcels larger than the minimum parcel size may be divided to allow nonfarm dwellings, the scope of "similarly situated" parcels is not limited to substandard parcels or parcels that are the same size as the subject property. Elliott v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 426 (2003).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. The analysis that is required to demonstrate compliance with the ORS 215.284 stability standard is not necessarily required for versions of the stability standard that are unrelated to the siting of nonfarm dwellings in EFU zones. However, approval standards that require an analysis of the impact of the proposed use on surrounding properties must identify those properties. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Grant County, 42 Or LUBA 9 (2002).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Although past denial of nonfarm development in the area is not necessarily an indicator that similar applications will be denied in the future, the county does not err in relying upon recent denials and its understanding of the current law to conclude that potential new nonfarm development is so limited in the area that the cumulative effect of such development will not materially alter the stability of the land use pattern. Wolverton v. Crook County, 39 Or LUBA 256 (2000).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. When a local government is required by an administrative rule to adequately describe and identify a study area for determining whether a proposed nonfarm use will materially alter the stability of the existing area, the local government's findings must justify the study area that is selected. Dowrie v. Benton County, 38 Or LUBA 93 (2000).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A local government cannot reach supportable conclusions as to the stability of the land use pattern required by OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D) unless it adequately defines the study area and determines not only what the land use pattern is, but also whether the proposed use or land division will encourage similar uses or divisions on similarly situated parcels in the area. Dowrie v. Benton County, 38 Or LUBA 93 (2000).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A county's findings of compliance with the stability standard are inadequate, where the county fails to explain or justify a study area that places the subject property at the margin of the identified study area, and excludes from the study large EFU-zoned parcels adjacent to the subject property. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 844 (2000).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A county's findings under the stability standard are inadequate, where the county fails to identify any uses on most of the EFU-zoned parcels within the study area, but merely assumes that the dominant land use in the area is residential because of the small size of most parcels and the fact that most dwellings in the area predated zoning restrictions. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 844 (2000).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A county's finding that a proposed lot of record dwelling on high-value soils will not materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern is inadequate, where the county considers only the stability of the nonfarm land uses in the area, and fails to consider whether the proposed dwelling will encourage additional nonfarm development in a manner that destabilizes remaining farm uses. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 844 (2000).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Where a proposed lot of record dwelling will be sited on a parcel surrounded by 34 other small EFU parcels that already contain dwellings, a county could conclude that the proposed dwelling will not materially affect the stability of the land use pattern in the area. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 297 (1999).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A challenge to a county's identification of a study area must demonstrate why the proposed study area does not provide a "clear picture" of the land use pattern in the area, as required by ORS 215.705(2)(a)(C)(iii). Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 297 (1999).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. In selecting a study area to determine whether a proposed dwelling would alter the overall stability of the area, the county's selection of a study area based on natural and constructed barriers is appropriate, where no party explains why defining the study area based on the selected barriers is inappropriate. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 280 (1999).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A county's findings that a proposed lot-of-record dwelling would "not materially alter the overall stability of the land use pattern in the area" are inadequate, where the findings focus almost exclusively on non-EFU zoned property in the area and do not explain why approving the request would not lead to approval of additional dwellings on remaining farm parcels that are not already developed with dwellings. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 280 (1999).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A county code "stability" standard that does not implement the statutory nonfarm use "stability" standard is not subject to case law interpreting the statutory "stability" standard, but such a code "stability" standard necessarily connotes a temporal period and a scope of causative impact for analysis. However, a county's interpretation of the local "stability" standard as focusing on short-term effects and direct impacts rather than long-term and cumulative impacts is not clearly wrong and therefore must be affirmed by LUBA. Ray v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 45 (1999).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A county's findings addressing the requirement of ORS 215.705(a)(C)(iii) that a dwelling not "materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area" must limit the analysis to EFU-zoned lands. Where LUBA cannot determine whether the analysis was so limited, the decision will be remanded. DLCD v. Umatilla County, 34 Or LUBA 703 (1998).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Under the stability standard, the county must explain what justifies the scope and contours of a defined study area, and the county's failure to adopt a reasonably definite study area may so undermine its evaluation of the other elements of the analysis required by Sweeten v. Clackamas County, 17 Or LUBA 1234 (1989), as to render its findings on those elements unreviewable. Wolverton v. Crook County, 34 Or LUBA 515 (1998).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. In defining an area to study, the local government must explain what justifies the scope and contours of the study area. Bare references to "geographic and traffic patterns" are insufficient to explain the scope and contours of the study area. DLCD v. Crook County, 34 Or LUBA 243 (1998).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Characterizing the bulk of the study area solely on the basis of nonspecific information such as farm tax deferrals is insufficient to draw the requisite clear picture of the existing land use pattern. DLCD v. Crook County, 34 Or LUBA 243 (1998).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. The stability standard requires a prospective analysis, under which the county must determine not only what the land use pattern is, but also the development trends in the area and whether the proposed use or land division will encourage similar uses or divisions on similarly situated parcels in the area. DLCD v. Crook County, 34 Or LUBA 243 (1998).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. The basic purpose of evaluating the land use pattern and the development trends in an area is to determine how stable the current land use pattern is and hence what steps are necessary to protect its stability. DLCD v. Crook County, 34 Or LUBA 243 (1998).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. OAR 660-033-0130 and LUBA's decisions require the local government to determine that the proposed nonfarm dwellings and any chain of conversions that the dwellings will encourage on similarly situated properties susceptible to development shall not materially alter the stability of the current land use pattern. DLCD v. Crook County, 34 Or LUBA 243 (1998).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. The stability standard requires a local government to examine the history of nonfarm development in the area and to determine the extent to which that development and the current proposal encourage future nonfarm development. The stability standard is not met if the cumulative effect of historical, current and projected nonfarm development is to materially alter the stability of the land use pattern. Hearne v. Baker County, 34 Or LUBA 176 (1998).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. In applying a code approval standard that requires the identification of an area whose stability might be affected by a proposed development, the county's findings may not rely on inconsistent definitions of the area. Ray v. Douglas County, 32 Or LUBA 388 (1997).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Where a conditional use is proposed on EFU land, the compatibility of the proposed use with uses on adjacent properties is necessary to ensuring the stability of existing uses, but it does not alone ensure stability. Ray v. Douglas County, 32 Or LUBA 388 (1997).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A county must consider development trends in determining whether a proposed development will alter the stability of the overall land use pattern in an area. Ray v. Douglas County, 32 Or LUBA 388 (1997).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Evidence of a history of similar development approvals or of similarly situated properties where comparable applications would be encouraged by approval of the subject application supports a conclusion that approval of the application could materially alter the stability of existing uses in a selected area. Ray v. Douglas County, 32 Or LUBA 388 (1997).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. The county's findings lack evidentiary support for the conclusion that a proposed dwelling will not materially alter the stability of the surrounding area where there is inadequate evidence regarding the surrounding area, inadequate evidence regarding the uses existing in the area, and no evidence regarding how the proposed dwelling will not alter the stability of those uses in the selected area. Le Roux v. Malheur County, 32 Or LUBA 124 (1996).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. The purpose of requiring a clear picture of the existing land use pattern as part of the Sweeten analysis is to evaluate what impacts a proposed development will have on the stability of that pattern. Information not pertinent to the evaluation need not be obtained, and whether the picture is sufficiently clear depends on the facts of a particular case. Lett v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 98 (1996).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Information as to the particular farm use on each parcel in the area selected as the first step of the stability analysis is pertinent because it may indicate the amount and nature of farm-related capital investment on that parcel, and that, in turn, may help to determine the degree of commitment to continued farm use, which itself bears on stability. Lett v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 98 (1996).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. "Similarly situated," as the term is used in OAR 660-33-130(4)(d) means "similarly circumstanced" in susceptibility to development of nonfarm dwellings. While the size of the parcels is one factor to consider in determining which parcels are situated similarly to a particular parcel, it is not the only factor. Lett v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 98 (1996).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A demonstration that a particular tax lot will be ineligible for a nonfarm dwelling for three years is not substantial evidence which supports a finding that the tax lot has no real potential for a nonfarm dwelling. Lett v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 98 (1996).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Without information concerning the nature and duration of the lease, the use of a particular tax lot as a leased tax-exempt watershed is not substantial evidence which supports a finding that the lot will remain ineligible for a nonfarm dwelling during a term that is reasonable for purposes of a stability analysis. Lett v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 98 (1996).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Findings regarding the stability of the overall land use pattern are inadequate where they do not describe the size of the area encompassing the adjoining parcels, do not examine all of the types of uses in the selected area, do not describe the development pattern and do not conclude that the proposed dwelling will not materially alter the stability of the existing uses. O'Brien v. Lincoln County, 31 Or LUBA 262 (1996).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. To establish that a nonfarm dwelling will not materially alter the stability of the land use pattern in the area, the county must (1) select an appropriate area for consideration; (2) examine the types of uses existing in the selected area; and (3) determine that the proposed nonfarm use will not materially alter the stability of the existing uses in the selected area. Thomas v. Wasco County, 30 Or LUBA 302 (1996).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Identifying the area to be considered and the overall land use pattern of that area are prerequisites to determining whether a proposed partition satisfies a code requirement that it "not materially alter the stability of the land use pattern of the area." McNamara v. Union County, 28 Or LUBA 396 (1994).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Findings which identify some physical features and characteristics of an area, discuss planned improvements, and identify farm and nonfarm uses in the area do not establish the stability of the existing land use pattern of the area or explain why introducing a 120 lot residential planned unit development into the area will not materially alter that stability, as required by ORS 215.283(3)(c). DLCD v. Crook County, 26 Or LUBA 478 (1994).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. The requirement of ORS 215.283(3)(c) that nonfarm dwellings "not materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern in the area" may be violated by introducing residential development into a rural agricultural area where such residential uses do not already exist and may also be violated where there is existing residential development and introducing more such development makes it more difficult to continue existing agricultural uses. DLCD v. Crook County, 26 Or LUBA 478 (1994).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. It is erroneous for a county to determine a farm and forest zoned area has a residential character based on the existence of former homesites in the area. DLCD v. Lincoln County, 26 Or LUBA 89 (1993).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Findings explaining how the existing limited rural industrial uses near a proposed aggregate processing facility have not affected the historical stability of an EFU-zoned area, and that the existing and proposed industrial uses may discourage intrusion of rural residential development, are adequate to demonstrate compliance with an EFU zone "stability" standard. McKay Creek Valley Assoc. v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 238 (1993).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Where a decision recites facts that might provide a basis for explaining why a proposed nonfarm use will not materially alter the land use pattern of the area, but the findings do not identify the relevant area, examine uses existing in the area, or explain why the proposed use will not materially alter the stability of the land use pattern of the area, the findings are inadequate. DLCD v. Crook County, 25 Or LUBA 98 (1993).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A local government determination that a proposed nonresource dwelling "does not materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area" is not supported by substantial evidence, where the parties cite no evidence in the record establishing the relevant area, the overall land use pattern of such area or the effect of the proposed dwelling on the stability of such land use pattern. Todd v. Columbia County, 24 Or LUBA 289 (1992).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. In applying a local code standard requiring that newly created nonfarm and nonforest parcels not materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area, a local government must define the relevant area and may not focus exclusively on a single rural residential area near the subject property and ignore the potential impacts on nearby forestlands. DLCD v. Curry County, 24 Or LUBA 200 (1992).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A code standard requiring that a proposed nonfarm/nonforest dwelling in a farm/forest zone not materially alter the stability of the land use pattern of the area, requires findings (1) identifying an area for consideration, (2) identifying the farm and forest practices occurring in the identified area, and (3) explaining how the proposal will affect those practices. Veach v. Wasco County, 23 Or LUBA 492 (1992).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Where the record shows that a proposed church will not require urban services and will be located within a designated rural service center, adjacent to existing commercial and public uses, and is otherwise surrounded by large parcels in commercial farm use, a determination that the proposed church will not materially alter the stability of the land use pattern in the area is supported by substantial evidence Simmons v. Marion County, 22 Or LUBA 759 (1992).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A finding that a proposed nonfarm partition would establish a precedent and encourage additional requests for nonfarm partitions of the subject property and an adjoining similarly situated property is sufficient to support a determination that a proposed nonfarm partition will materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area. Jonas v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 525 (1992).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. Under a code standard requiring that a proposed nonfarm dwelling will "not materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern in the area," local government findings which indicate the decision maker (1)

excluded from the considered area those parcels zoned for rural residential use, (2) analyzed the types of uses occurring on the land in the area considered, and (3) concluded those uses were "generally" agricultural, are adequate to establish the overall land use pattern of the area. Fiegi v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 182 (1991).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. In order to deny a proposed nonfarm dwelling based on its precedential effect, a county must either determine there is a "history of progressive partitioning and homesite development in the area" or there are "other similarly situated properties in the area for which similar nonfarm dwelling applications would be encouraged." Fiegi v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 182 (1991).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. A code standard requiring that a nonfarm dwelling "not materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern in the area" does not require a determination that proposed nonfarm dwelling would change the balance between resource and nonresource uses in the area considered. Fiegi v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 182 (1991).

3.3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Stability Standard. To determine whether a nonfarm dwelling will materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area, it is necessary for a county to (1) select an area for consideration, (2) examine the types of uses existing in the selected area, and (3) determine the proposed nonfarm dwelling will not materially alter the stability of the existing uses in the selected area. Stefan v. Yamhill County, 18 Or LUBA 820 (1990).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where local code amendments allow accessory uses and structures in an EFU zone, arguments that (1) the amendments improperly exempt such structures from a local code requirement that steps be taken to minimize adverse impacts on farm and forest uses and (2) the provisions governing such uses are inconsistent with ORS 215.213(3)(b) provide no basis for reversal or remand where the amended code is comparable to the prior code and where the petitioner does not develop any argument explaining why the amendments are substantive instead of technical. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. While applying pesticides and herbicides in a manner that causes overspray or drift onto adjoining properties is not an accepted farm practice for purposes of the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1), where the labels for some pesticides and herbicides effectively require a setback from certain sensitive uses regardless of whether drift or overspray occurs, a county will likely have to make specific factual findings about the specific setbacks required by particular chemicals on particular farming operations on surrounding farmlands, based on application methods, and whether the operation of each setback would force a significant change in farm practices. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 348 (2019).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Spraying adjoining property with herbicides without permission from the property owner or another legal right to do so is not an accepted farm practice for purposes of the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1), even where the farm operation grows grass seed which is certified to be free of contamination from weeds and where spraying the adjoining property allows multiple fields to be treated as a single continuous field for purposes of certification and prevents the farm operator from having to create "isolation strips" on either side of the adjoining property that would shrink the scope of the certified fields. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 348 (2019).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A condition of approval requiring that an applicant construct a proposed fence between a proposed trail and adjoining farms; specifying only that the proposed fence must be "capable of preventing dogs and people from entering adjacent farm fields"; punting all determinations regarding fence design, materials, construction, etc. to a subsequent master planning process that offers no opportunity for a public hearing or other public input; and allowing adjacent landowners to opt out of installing a fence on their property line is inadequate where the county relies on the proposed fence to address a wide variety of different potential impacts, which might require different fence designs, materials, construction techniques, and maintenance routines in order to ensure that the trail will not cause significant impacts on farm practices for purposes of the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1). Such a condition is also not clear and objective for purposes of ORS 215.296(2). Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 348 (2019).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where farmers have historically crossed a right-of-way to access fields they own on either side of the right-of-way, and where the right-of-way owner proposes to construct a fence along its property line, negotiate with farmers to provide licenses to cross the applicant's property, and install gates in the fence to allow farm equipment to pass through, any delay for farmers to open, pass through, and close the gates multiple times per day and perhaps multiple times per hour need not be evaluated as impacts on accepted farm practices for purposes of the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1) because using another's property to move farm equipment without a legal right or permission to do so is not an accepted farm practice. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 348 (2019).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Although the impacts of nonfarm uses on surrounding farmland must be evaluated on a farm-by-farm and practice-by-practice basis, an evaluation of the cumulative impacts on all farm practices on all impacted farms is not required. Van Dyke v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 348 (2019).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. When a hearings officer determines that a building envelope is generally unsuitable in part due to adverse soil conditions and in part due to size or location, the hearings officer is not required to consider the "used in conjunction with other lands" standard. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 78 Or LUBA 136 (2018).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. The answer to whether property in eastern Oregon is generally unsuitable for farm use begins with the OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B)(ii) presumption that it is suitable for farm use if its soils are predominantly Class VI. It is inconsistent with OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B)(ii) to dismiss the significance of the predominant soil class simply because only 50 to 60 percent of the soils are Class VI soils. Because Class VI soils predominate, under OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B)(ii) the presumption of suitability for farm use applies. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 77 Or LUBA 202 (2018).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. In considering whether property is generally unsuitable for farm use, it is not appropriate to disregard adjoining parcels as "nonfarm" parcels, simply because there is a nonfarm dwelling on the properties, where there is evidence those adjoining parcels have been planted in winter wheat. Without some findings addressing that evidence of farm use, findings that the property is generally unsuitable for farm use are not supported by substantial evidence. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 77 Or LUBA 202 (2018).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. If a local government finds property is generally unsuitable for farm use without considering size or location, under ORS 215.284(2)(b) and OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B)(i) the county need not consider whether the property can be used for farm use in conjunction with other lands. But if the property is not generally unsuitable for farm use based on factors other than size and location, size and location must be considered and therefore size and location are to be the determining factors in establishing that the subject property is generally unsuitable for farm use. Therefore, the county must then consider whether the subject property "can reasonably be put to farm * * * use in conjunction with other land[,]" as required by ORS 215.284(2)(b) and OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B)(i). Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 77 Or LUBA 202 (2018).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Findings that property "is not necessary for the future continuation of any existing farm operation," and that

"[t]here is no evidence that the property can be put to farm use in conjunction with other land," are inadequate to establish that the property cannot "reasonably be put to farm * * * use in conjunction with other land," as required by ORS 215.284(2)(b) and OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B)(i). It is entirely possible that the property could "reasonably be put to farm * * * use in conjunction with other land" even though nearby farms do not depend on such conjoined use to continue to operate. And a lack of evidence that property can be put to use in conjunction with other lands is not evidence that the subject cannot "reasonably be put to farm * * * use in conjunction with other land." Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 77 Or LUBA 202 (2018).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A county's findings that a parcel proposed siting a nonfarm dwelling is generally unsuitable for farm use are inadequate, where the property is composed of predominantly Class I-VI soils and the findings do not address the OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B)(ii) presumption that property composed of predominantly Class I-VI soils are suitable for farm use or the fact that livestock did graze on the property in the past. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 75 Or LUBA 186 (2017).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. ORS 215.284(1) to (4) distinguish between lands inside the Willamette Valley and lands outside the Willamette Valley, and apply the stability standard inside the Willamette Valley and apply the suitability standard outside the Willamette Valley. However, the fact that ORS 215.213(3) imposes a suitability standard does not provide a basis for importing the Willamette Valley regulatory distinction from ORS 215.284 into ORS 215.213 and it does not provide a basis for concluding that ORS 215.213(3) does not apply to lands in the Willamette Valley. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 70 Or LUBA 325 (2014).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A nonfarm dwelling must be sited on land that is "generally unsuitable for the production of farm crops and livestock." In determining whether that standard is met, a county does not err by failing to identify the precise level of beef production that would indicate suitability. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 56 Or LUBA 280 (2008).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. While a parcel may not be considered generally unsuitable "based solely on size or location" without considering whether it can be used in conjunction with other lands, if size or location are not the sole basis for a finding of general unsuitability, then a local government is just required to determine whether the parcel can be used in conjunction with other lands. Williams v. Jackson County, 55 Or LUBA 223 (2007).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. The proper inquiry under ORS 215.284(3)(b) is whether land is generally unsuitable "for the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species," not whether the land is generally unsuitable for "farm use." Williams v. Jackson County, 55 Or LUBA 223 (2007).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A parcel can satisfy the generally unsuitable standard even if portions of the parcel contain areas that, if considered alone, do not satisfy the standard. Williams v. Jackson County, 55 Or LUBA 223 (2007).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where a portion of a lot or parcel is predominantly composed of Class I-IV soils, OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B)(ii) provides that the portion is presumed generally suitable for the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species; where the portion is predominantly composed of soils that are not Class I-IV, but the entire subject property is predominantly composed of Class I-IV soils, the presumption provided for in OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B)(ii) does not apply. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Even assuming a county correctly interprets local code provisions designed to implement OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B) regarding the general suitability for the production of farm crops to refer to the grapes and not the vines, its determination that the portion of the property is generally unsuitable for growing grapes is not supported by substantial evidence where there is no evidence that the vines on that portion do not produce grapes. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where local land use regulation implements the statutory requirement in ORS 215.284(2)(b) that a portion of a lot or parcel on which a nonfarm dwelling will be located be generally unsuitable for the production of farm crops, the local regulation must be interpreted to be consistent with the statutory requirement it implements. An interpretation that improvements such as driveways, septic systems and wells may be located on the portion of the property that is suitable for production of farm crops is not consistent with the legislative intent of ORS 215.284(2)(b). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. In Smith v. Clackamas County, 313 Or 519, 836 P2d 716 (1992), the court held that in applying local nonfarm dwelling standards that replicated existing statutory standards, the requirement that the dwelling be sited on "generally unsuitable land for the production of farm crops and livestock" requires that the entire farm parcel, rather than the portion of the parcel where the dwelling would be sited, must be "generally unsuitable land." ORS 215.284(3)(b) was adopted in 1993 in reaction to Smith, and makes the "generally unsuitable land" standard apply to "a lot, parcel or portion of a lot or parcel." Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 71 (2005).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Statements in a county soil survey that a general class of soils is limited by risk of erosion if the vegetative cover is not maintained is not substantial evidence that specific soils within that class on the subject property are generally unsuitable for grazing, where nothing in the soil survey suggests that grazing presents a risk of erosion and the survey's specific description of the soils on the property states that those soils are used mainly for grazing. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 50 Or LUBA 608 (2005).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Evidence that an adjoining dairy farmer grazed 70 cows on a six-acre portion of a 25-acre parcel and exhausted the forage on that portion within six days does little to demonstrate that the parcel is generally unsuitable for farm uses, where the record provides no comparison or standard against which to measure the relative forage producing capacity of the grazed portion. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 50 Or LUBA 608 (2005).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. The focus under the generally unsuitable standard is the land's capacity to produce crops or livestock under appropriate agricultural management. Evidence that land once maintained as pasture but neglected for 20 years currently does not produce much forage says little about its capacity for producing forage, particularly where there is evidence that forage production would dramatically improve if the land were appropriately managed. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 50 Or LUBA 608 (2005).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A finding that the subject property cannot be used in conjunction with neighboring commercial farms is not supported by the record, where neighboring farmers submitted affidavits expressing interest in acquiring the subject property and describing how they could use the property in conjunction with their farm operation. Evidence of actual offers to buy or lease the property is not essential, particularly where the affidavits explain that the applicant for the nonfarm dwelling has no interest in selling or leasing the property for its value as farm land. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 50 Or LUBA 608 (2005).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where the record indicates that the neighboring dairy farmers could expand their herds if a particular property were available for manure disposal under a confined animal feeding (CAFO) permit, and evidence indicates that the property is suited for that use, the county must consider whether the property can be used in conjunction with adjoining dairy farms for manure disposal under a CAFO permit. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 50 Or LUBA 608 (2005).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where a local code criterion requires that a nonfarm dwelling be situated on a portion of a lot or parcel that is "generally unsuitable for the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species," and the code then spells out the considerations for determining whether a portion of a lot or parcel is "unsuitable for farm use," the term "farm use" is not properly read to require evaluation of the suitability for farm uses other than the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species. Griffin v. Jackson County, 48 Or LUBA 1 (2004).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. When a proposed nonresource parcel is found to be unsuitable for farm or forest use based solely on terrain, adverse soils and land conditions, rather than size and location, a local government need not consider whether the parcel could be put to farm or forest use in conjunction with other land. Epp v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 480 (2004).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A county hearings officer does not misconstrue local code provisions designed to implement OAR 660-033-

0130(4)(c)(B) by interpreting those provisions not to require consideration of the suitability of the entire parcel that is the subject of a nonfarm dwelling application. Frazee v. Jackson County, 45 Or LUBA 263 (2003).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Whether an EFU-zoned parcel is capable of producing "herbaceous forage" is a relevant consideration under the "generally unsuitable" standard, which requires consideration of "vegetation" on the subject property. Hanna v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 386 (2003).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Because the legislature required compliance with both the "generally unsuitable" standard and the "adequate herbaceous forage" test in order to partition an EFU zoned parcel for nonfarm dwellings under ORS 215.263(5)(b), the legislature did not intend that compliance with one standard necessarily establishes compliance with the other. Hanna v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 386 (2003).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A county's erroneous application of an "adequate herbaceous forage" standard in approving a nonfarm partition is not harmless error, where the county focused preponderantly on that standard and failed to adopt findings addressing the required considerations under the correct standard. Hanna v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 386 (2003).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A local government must consider whether land can be used in conjunction with a commercial farm or ranch under OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c), unless it first finds that the subject property is generally unsuitable for farm use, regardless of size or location. Where the local government relies on a combination of factors, including size, to conclude that the subject property is generally unsuitable for farm use, it must consider whether the property can be used in conjunction with nearby commercial farms or ranches. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 43 Or LUBA 4 (2002).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. If property has some value as farmland if used in conjunction with a neighboring commercial farm or ranch, and the owner of that farm or ranch offers to buy, lease, rent or otherwise manage the property for something approaching its actual market value as farmland, then OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c) prohibits a finding that the property is "generally unsuitable" for farm use. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 43 Or LUBA 4 (2002).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A finding that an EFU parcel would contribute no productive farm acreage to any neighboring farm, and thus is generally unsuitable for farm use even if used in conjunction with neighboring dairy farms, is not supported by substantial evidence, where two neighboring dairy farmers offered to buy the parcel to use in conjunction with their farms. A property's usefulness as farmland, considered on its own, is not necessarily indicative of its usefulness when combined with an existing farm or ranch. Ploeg v. Tillamook County, 43 Or LUBA 4 (2002).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. The fact that a small portion of an EFU-zoned parcel can theoretically generate some farm income does not necessarily compel a conclusion that the property as a whole is suitable for farm use. King v. Washington County, 42 Or LUBA 400 (2002).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A decision approving a nonfarm dwelling does not misconstrue applicable law where the hearings officer considers all of the relevant factors of ORS 215.213(3)(b) and concludes that a parcel is generally unsuitable for farm use based on (1) the steep topography of the site; the limited access to irrigation water; (3) the relatively small parcel size; (4) the size of the farmable area on the subject parcel; and (5) the inability to combine farm operations on the subject property with other farm operations. King v. Washington County, 42 Or LUBA 400 (2002).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Any minimum gross farm income level that a county may establish in approving a lot of record dwelling on EFU-zoned high-value farmland must be consistent with the income generated by the county's noncommercial farms, which are protected under Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands) and the EFU zoning statutes. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A county errs in relying on OAR 660-033-0135, which establishes standards to ensure that farms are large enough and generate sufficient income to warrant an assumption that a dwelling on the farm is properly viewed as "customarily provided in conjunction with farm use" within the meaning of ORS 215.283(1)(f), to also set a gross annual income threshold for determining whether farm use on high-value farmland is "impracticable" for purposes of siting a lot of record dwelling under ORS 215.705(2)(a)(C)(i). Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. The minimum gross income levels the legislature established at ORS 308A.071(2)(a) for non-EFU-zoned parcels to qualify for special assessment are the best available indication of the level of gross income that the legislature believes demonstrates practicable farm use. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. In applying ORS 215.705(2)(a)(C)(i) to determine whether farm use of an EFU-zoned parcel with high-value soils is "impracticable," evidence that the property and nearby properties have generated limited farm income in the past is relevant evidence, but it is not determinative. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Under ORS 215.705(2)(a)(C)(i), a property's impracticability for farm use must be "due to extraordinary circumstances inherent in the land or its physical setting that do not apply generally to other land in the vicinity." A decision that does not demonstrate that cited factors are not shared by neighboring properties and does not explain why the cited factors make farm use impracticable must be remanded. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. In adopting an irrevocably committed exception where the proposed exception area has a history of farm use and is currently in farm use, it is not sufficient to rely solely upon long-standing site characteristics or the presence of long-standing adjacent conflicting uses. An adequate demonstration of impracticability must identify recent or imminent changes affecting the subject property that, by themselves or in combination with other factors, render continued farm use of the property impracticable. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 357 (2000).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. The mere presence of residential uses on EFU-zoned properties adjacent to a proposed exception area does not demonstrate that the subject property is irrevocably committed to nonfarm uses. In considering residential uses on adjacent properties, the county must identify in its findings the conflicts or other impacts between the residential uses and the subject property that make farm use of the subject property impracticable. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 357 (2000).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A county must consider all farm uses in the area, including "hobby farm" uses located on adjacent properties, in determining whether property can practicably be managed for farm use, as required by ORS 215.705(2)(a)(C)(i). Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 297 (1999).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. County findings that a parcel has been managed for "private use" rather than for "profit" fail to demonstrate that a parcel "cannot be practicably managed for farm use." Although the statutory definition of "farm use" requires that property be used "for the purpose of obtaining a profit in money," the term "profit" in this context does not mean profit in the ordinary sense, but rather refers to gross income. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 280 (1999).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A county's findings that a parcel "cannot be practicably managed for farm use" due to a ravine, road frontage, lack of irrigation and rocky soils are inadequate, where the parcel has been managed for pasture use in conjunction with a nearby 20-acre parcel in the past. That the cited factors may make the parcel unsuitable for intensive, cultivated agriculture does not establish that the parcel "cannot be practicably managed for farm use." Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 280 (1999).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Under the agricultural lands definition, in western Oregon, Class V soils, when intermingled with Class IV soils, are not presumed to be nonagricultural, nor is the presence of Class V soils determinative, in itself, as to whether land is generally unsuitable for farm use. Evenson v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 251 (1999).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. In addressing a code criterion requiring a finding that a parcel "cannot practicably be managed for farm use," a hearings officer's occasional use of the word "unsuitable" does not mean the hearings officer applied the wrong standard. Jorgensen v. Clackamas County, 34 Or LUBA 710 (1998).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. The suitability standard requires that the local government consider whether the subject parcel or portion thereof can reasonably be put to farm use in conjunction with adjacent or nearby lands, including land under the same ownership. The local government must consider not only the property's suitability for producing crops but also its suitability for producing livestock, both alone and in conjunction with adjoining and nearby properties. DLCD v. Crook County, 34 Or LUBA 243 (1998).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. The proper inquiry in reference to the unsuitability standard is whether the subject property can reasonably be put to farm or forest use alone or in conjunction with other land. In this context, farm use need not rise to the scale of a commercial agricultural enterprise. Hearne v. Baker County, 34 Or LUBA 176 (1998).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Although the choice between conflicting testimony belongs to the county, where the evidence provided by petitioners reveals factual inconsistencies in intervenors' evidence, the county must at least explain a reasonable basis for its choice between the conflicting evidence. Le Roux v. Malheur County, 32 Or LUBA 124 (1996).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where the county's factual findings determine that the subject parcel contains soils that are presumptively suitable for farm use, but then conclude that the proposed dwelling is situated on land that is unsuitable for farm use, the county's conclusion is not supported by substantial evidence in the record. Le Roux v. Malheur County, 32 Or LUBA 124 (1996).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. An applicant carries the burden to demonstrate that a parcel is generally unsuitable for the production of farm crops and livestock. The question to be answered is whether the subject land, rather than a particular farmer, can produce crops or livestock. Moore v. Coos County, 31 Or LUBA 347 (1996).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. An operation that requires land for grazing horses employs that land for the production of livestock within the meaning of ORS 215.284(2)(b); therefore, a county errs when it concludes that consideration of the potential use of a parcel for grazing horses is not required in determining whether the parcel is generally unsuitable for farm use. Moore v. Coos County, 31 Or LUBA 347 (1996).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. In approving a nonfarm dwelling under OAR 660-33-130(4)(c), analysis is required regarding whether the parcel can be sold, leased or otherwise put to profitable agricultural use, unless the county first finds that a parcel is generally unsuitable for farm use, regardless of size. Moore v. Coos County, 31 Or LUBA 347 (1996).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Findings that state that "property above the county road" is "unsuitable for commercial agricultural use" are insufficient because they do not clearly relate to the subject property and do not justify a conclusion that the subject property is unsuitable for the production of farm crops, livestock or merchantable tree species. O'Brien v. Lincoln County, 31 Or LUBA 262 (1996).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. ORS 215.284(2)(b) imposes a requirement that nonfarm dwellings be located on land that is generally unsuitable for the production of both (1) "farm crops and livestock," and (2) "merchantable tree species." DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. ORS 215.283(3)(d) must be independently applied to an application for division of EFU-zoned land and requires that the entire EFU-zoned parcel be found to be generally unsuitable for farm use, regardless of whether local regulations impose a more relaxed standard on homestead lot divisions. Geiselman v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 260 (1993).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Evidence that a parcel is suitable for grazing of livestock is evidence of suitability for the production of farm products. Alexanderson v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 209 (1993).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where the challenged decision interprets a local code standard for nonforest dwellings to require that an entire parcel be generally unsuitable for farm or forest uses, and that interpretation is not clearly contrary to the words, policy or context of the code, LUBA will defer to it. DLCD v. Lincoln County, 26 Or LUBA 89 (1993).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where the record establishes only that a small portion of the subject parcel is unsuitable for forest uses, a reasonable person could not conclude the entire parcel is generally unsuitable for farm or forest uses. DLCD v. Lincoln County, 26 Or LUBA 89 (1993).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where a church is proposed to be located in an EFU zone, and a county code provision requires that there be "no other feasible location" for the proposed use that satisfies a code standard requiring that certain nonfarm uses in the EFU zone be located on land "generally unsuitable" for farm use, the county may interpret the code provision to require that there be no other feasible location for the propose church in the EFU zone that is generally unsuitable for agricultural production. Simmons v. Marion County, 25 Or LUBA 647 (1993).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where a code approval standard for home occupations in a resource zone requires that a home occupation be "situated upon generally unsuitable land for the production of farm and forest products," the local government may interpret the standard to require that the entire property on which the home occupation is proposed to be located be "generally unsuitable." Smith v. Clackamas County, 25 Or LUBA 568 (1993).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where a county interprets a forest zone requirement that nonforest uses be located on generally unsuitable land for production of farm or forest products as requiring consideration of the suitability of the entire parcel, the county exercises its interpretive discretion to the fullest in interpreting a home occupation approval standard that incorporates the nonforest use standard by reference, as requiring consideration of only the land under the existing building where the home occupation will be located. Weuster v. Clackamas County, 25 Or LUBA 425 (1993).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Findings that a parcel lacks water rights and does not produce sufficient forage for livestock without supplemental feed are inadequate to demonstrate the parcel is generally unsuitable land for agricultural production, where the parcel is large, has two active springs and is currently leased for grazing. DLCD v. Crook County, 25 Or LUBA 98 (1993).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. In the absence of a statutory policy pertaining to forestlands that, like the statutory policy concerning EFU land, requires the preservation of forestland in large blocks, LUBA cannot require that a local government interpret and apply its nonforest use "generally unsuitable" land approval standard in the same manner as the similarly worded statutory standard pertaining to nonfarm uses on EFU land. DLCD v. Coos County, 24 Or LUBA 349 (1992).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where a zoning district adopted to implement both Goal 3 and Goal 4 includes the generally unsuitable land standard that is required under statutory exclusive farm use zoning provisions, the generally unsuitable standard must be applied to the entire parent parcel and may not be limited in its application to a proposed nonforest parcel. DLCD v. Curry County, 24 Or LUBA 200 (1992).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A proposed nonfarm dwelling will not be located on land generally unsuitable for farm use, as required by statute and local code provisions, where the evidence shows the property contains soils suitable for a variety of farm crops and, while the property is small, it can be farmed in conjunction with other nearby agricultural enterprises. Reed v. Benton County, 23 Or LUBA 486 (1992).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A finding that a parcel is generally suitable for farm use is supported by substantial evidence where the evidence shows that, while the parcel is of limited value for farm use because it is small, the parcel is otherwise suitable for a variety of farm uses and could be used in conjunction with adjoining and nearby farming operations. Nelson v. Benton County, 23 Or LUBA 392 (1992).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A parcel's small size cannot be relied upon, in whole or in part, to support a finding that the parcel is generally unsuitable for farm use, without also demonstrating the parcel cannot be leased or by some other arrangement be put to agricultural use in conjunction with adjoining or nearby farm uses. Nelson v. Benton County, 23 Or LUBA 392 (1992).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. In addressing the ORS 215.283(3)(d) "general unsuitability" standard for the approval of nonfarm dwellings in an EFU zone, or an equivalent standard in a local code, a local government must consider all relevant factors listed in the standard, not just soil types. Dority v. Clackamas County, 23 Or LUBA 384 (1992).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A determination of noncompliance with the ORS 215.283(3)(d) "general unsuitability" standard for the approval of nonfarm dwellings in an EFU zone, or an equivalent standard in a local code, does not require a finding that a reasonable and prudent farmer can put the subject property to profitable agricultural use. Dority v. Clackamas County, 23 Or LUBA 384 (1992).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where a parcel has historically been used for livestock grazing in conjunction with other adjoining parcels, a county must consider the subject parcel's suitability for grazing in conjunction with adjoining and nearby properties in determining whether the parcel satisfies the "generally unsuitable" standard. Avgeris v. Jackson County, 23 Or LUBA 124 (1992).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where evidence in the record establishes that with adequate drainage a parcel could be put to farm use, petitioner has not established as a matter of law that the proposed nonfarm use is located on land "generally unsuitable" for farm use. Barber v. Marion County, 23 Or LUBA 71 (1992).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Local code term "generally unsuitable" is a term of art. Where a local code applies the "generally unsuitable" standard to the approval of nonforest dwellings in a forest zone, the legal interpretation of the term "generally unsuitable" developed in the context of nonfarm uses is applicable. DLCD v. Coos County, 23 Or LUBA 13 (1992).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where the evidence in the record establishes (1) the soils on the subject property are suitable for the production of forest and farm products, (2) the subject property has been logged, and other parcels in the area are suitable for the production of forest products or currently are used for the production of Christmas trees, there is substantial evidence that the subject property is not generally unsuitable for the production of farm and forest products. Ralston v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 573 (1992).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. In determining whether a nonforest dwelling proposed to be located on a small but otherwise suitable parcel may be approved under a "generally unsuitable for the production of farm or forest products" standard, it is proper for the local government to determine whether the subject parcel may be combined with other resource land and managed for farm or forest uses. Samoilov v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 446 (1991).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Whether adjacent parcels are currently used for the production of farm or forest products is only indirectly relevant in determining whether such properties are suitable for farm or forest use. Samoilov v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 446 (1991).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Evidence which establishes that a forest zoned parcel has been for sale for many years, but does not establish that the parcel was listed for sale at a price typical for farm of forest parcels, is not sufficient evidence to establish as a matter of law that the parcel cannot be combined with adjacent properties suitable for farm of forest uses. Samoilov v. Clackamas County, 22 Or LUBA 446 (1991).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Adequate findings that the subject property is generally unsuitable for the production of farm crops and livestock regardless of size, supported by substantial evidence in the whole record, make it irrelevant whether the subject parcel may be combined with other land, as it cannot be made suitable in any event. Stefan v. Yamhill County, 21 Or LUBA 18 (1991).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. An exclusive farm use zone provision which states that a "nonfarm dwelling * * * will be located on * * * predominantly soil capability classes IV through VIII" requires that the entire parcel on which the proposed nonfarm dwelling will be located consist of predominantly Class IV-VIII soils. A U.S. Soil Conservation Service map can be substantial evidence for a determination of compliance with such a standard. Adams v. Jackson County, 20 Or LUBA 398 (1991).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where property has been used for grazing and growing of hay in the past and there is no evidence that anything about the land has changed to make it generally unsuitable for those purposes, there is substantial evidence to support a finding that the property is not generally unsuitable for the production of livestock. Adams v. Jackson County, 20 Or LUBA 398 (1991).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Evidence that a parcel's soils are all Agricultural Class I-IV is relevant to whether the parcel is generally unsuitable for farm use. McNulty v. Marion County, 19 Or LUBA 367 (1990).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Undisputed evidence in the record that at least half of the soils on the subject property are Agriculture Class I and II, and that at least seven of the subject parcel's eight acres have been, and continue to be, used for farm uses, is evidence which "clearly supports" a finding that the parcel is not generally unsuitable for farm use. McNulty v. Marion County, 19 Or LUBA 367 (1990).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. A statement that property is not useful for agricultural purposes because it is "heavily impacted by wetland and a drainage way" is conclusory and inadequate to establish that the subject property is unsuitable for the production of farm crops and livestock. Reed v. Lane County, 19 Or LUBA 276 (1990).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Local code "unsuitability for the production of farm crops and livestock" standards similar to ORS 215.213(3)(b) and 215.283(3)(d) require an analysis of the physical attributes of the exclusive farm use zoned land which is the subject of a nonfarm dwelling application. Whether a particular farmer can make a profit, at a particular period in time, on a particular piece of farmland, is at best indirect evidence of whether the land itself is suitable for the production of farm crops and livestock. Reed v. Lane County, 19 Or LUBA 276 (1990).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where 40 acres which produce only sparse forage of little value for grazing are generally unsuitable for grazing by themselves, but have historically been used for grazing in conjunction with the adjoining 400 acres, the adjoining 40 acres are not "generally unsuitable for farm use" within the meaning of ORS 215.213(3), 215.283(3) and county legislation implementing those statutes. Clark v. Jackson County, 19 Or LUBA 220 (1990).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. In reviewing a combined request for approval of a nonfarm dwelling and a partition to create a nonfarm parcel, a county must first apply applicable approval standards, including the "general unsuitability" standard, to the request for approval of the nonfarm dwelling. Only after the nonfarm dwelling is approved may the county consider the request to create a new nonfarm parcel for the dwelling. Smith v. Clackamas County, 19 Or LUBA 171 (1990).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. The "general unsuitability" standard applies to the entire parent parcel, not just to the portion of the parent parcel or the new nonfarm parcel on which a nonfarm dwelling is to be located. Smith v. Clackamas County, 19 Or LUBA 171 (1990).

3.3.7 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Unsuitability Standard. Where county findings determine property is suitable for the production of farm crops and livestock, but explain that the agricultural uses for which the parcel is suited are not "warranted" due to identified "substantially" limiting factors, including small parcel size, the county must determine whether the subject parcel may be put to agricultural use in combination with agricultural operations conducted in the area. Stefan v. Yamhill County, 18 Or LUBA 820 (1990).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A county's conclusion that a pesticide or herbicide label requires no setback from recreational areas, and, therefore, that approving a recreational area on EFU land will not force a significant change in accepted farm practices on surrounding lands devoted to farm use for purposes of the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1), is not supported by substantial evidence where farmers and the Oregon Department of Agriculture interpret the label as requiring a setback that could preclude application of the herbicide in significant portions of farmland adjacent to the proposed recreational area and where there is no expert testimony supporting the county's interpretation. Schrepel v. Yamhill County, 81 Or LUBA 895 (2020).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. In the absence of countervailing expert testimony, LUBA will accept farmers' contention that compliance with an EPA rule prescribing an Application Exclusion Zone (AEZ) for outdoor pesticide application is an accepted farm practice for purposes of the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1), regardless of whether it is applicable law, and a county errs by not analyzing the impacts of approving a recreational area on EFU land with respect to the EPA AEZ. Schrepel v. Yamhill County, 81 Or LUBA 895 (2020).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Under the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1), the issue is not whether any law would prevent an accepted farm practice, such as aerial spraying of pesticides, on the farms adjacent to the proposed nonfarm use but whether the proposed nonfarm use would force a significant change in the accepted farm practice on those farms, and the burden is on the applicant to demonstrate that the proposed nonfarm use would not force a significant change. Schrepel v. Yamhill County, 81 Or LUBA 895 (2020).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A condition of approval requiring a subsequent master planning process to determine the type and design of a fence surrounding a proposed nonfarm use in order to prevent "trespass related impacts" to surrounding lands devoted to farm use is not sufficient to satisfy the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1) where the condition excludes potential trespass from the "non-general public," such as the applicant's employees and agents, and the condition is not "clear and objective," as required by ORS 215.296(2), where it does not define "trespass related impacts." Schrepel v. Yamhill County, 81 Or LUBA 895 (2020).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Findings concluding that an aggregate quarry satisfies the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1) are inadequate and not supported by substantial evidence where the county identifies grazing as the only surrounding farm or forest use but does not verify that the grazing operation is in fact limited to grazing, without other uses such as breeding, or establish that logging on the grazing property, government ownership of surrounding forest lands, or maintaining of surrounding forest land as a timber investment do not involve protected forest activity. Currie v. Douglas County, 81 Or LUBA 602 (2020).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. In determining that a landfill does not "[f]orce a significant change" in accepted farm practices on surrounding lands devoted to farm use under ORS 215.296(1)(a), a county errs in relying on a condition of approval requiring the landfill to install a second fence between the working face of the landfill and an adjacent farm to capture more trash that escapes the landfill before it enters onto the adjacent farm, where there is no quantification in the record of how effective the existing fence is at intercepting landfill trash. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 79 Or LUBA 459 (2019).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A county fails to correctly apply the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1) where it concludes that there are only a few farm or forest uses in the area but does not identify and discuss each farm or forest use, where it does not describe the operations on each of the surrounding properties devoted to farm or forest use, where it does not identify evidence of the unmitigated impacts of the proposed nonfarm use, and where it concludes that such impacts will be reduced but does not identify evidence that significant impacts are avoided. Currie v. Douglas County, 79 Or LUBA 585 (2019).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Under ORS 215.296(2), a county may impose conditions of approval to ensure compliance with the ORS 215.296(1) "significant change/cost" standard, in which case the question on appeal to LUBA is not whether the decision establishes that the proposed use complies with ORS 215.296(1), but whether the decision establishes that the proposed use, as conditioned, complies with ORS 215.296(1). Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 74 Or LUBA 1 (2016).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A local government could reasonably conclude that a landfill expansion complies with the ORS 215.296(1) "significant change/cost" standard, notwithstanding testimony from an adjacent hay farmer regarding the need for weekly litter patrols to prevent trash entering farm soils or destroying farm equipment, based in part on a condition of approval that requires a second litter fence between the working face of the landfill and adjacent hay fields, where there is no dispute that the existing litter fence is somewhat effective at reducing the volume of wind-blown trash that escapes the landfill, and the second litter fence will reduce that volume further. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 74 Or LUBA 1 (2016).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A local government can impose conditions of approval to ensure compliance with the ORS 215.296(1) "significant change/cost" standard that require the applicant to assume the cost or burden of performing actions on nearby farms necessary to prevent a significant change in accepted farming practices on those farms or significant increase in costs on those farms. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 74 Or LUBA 1 (2016).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A local government could reasonably conclude that a landfill expansion complies with the ORS 215.296(1) "significant change/cost" standard, notwithstanding testimony from an adjacent hay farmer regarding the need for weekly litter patrols year-round to prevent trash entering farm soils or destroying farm equipment, based in part on a condition of approval that requires the landfill operator to provide, pay for, or reimburse the farmer for litter patrols prior to harvest, even if the condition does not entirely eliminate the need for litter patrols at non-harvest times. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 74 Or LUBA 1 (2016).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A local government could reasonably conclude that a landfill expansion complies with the ORS 215.296(1) "significant change/cost" standard, notwithstanding testimony that the existing intermittent falconry program simply displaces nuisance birds onto nearby farms, based on conditions of approval that require a more intensive falconry program and implementation of integrated techniques recommended by a wildlife biologist to discourage nuisance birds from remaining in the area. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 74 Or LUBA 1 (2016).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A condition requiring the landfill operator to buy at market prices the entire crop of berries and cherries produced by a nearby farmer concerned with nuisance bird impacts on her crop is sufficient to reduce to insignificance the alleged adverse impacts of the landfill on the farmer's farm practices. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 74 Or LUBA 1 (2016).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A farmer's reasonable apprehension about losing direct sale customers due to odor impacts of a landfill could lead the farmer to make changes in accepted farming practices or significantly increase the cost of farming practices; however, customer perceptions are not farm practices, and the feared or actual loss of direct sales customers alone, without any associated change or increased costs, is not a sufficient basis to conclude that the ORS 215.296(1) "significant change/costs" standard is violated. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 74 Or LUBA 1 (2016).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. To address cumulative impacts on farm practices under ORS 215.296(1), the question is whether multiple impacts on individual farms, which may individually be insignificant, cumulatively force significant changes in farm practices or significantly increase the cost of farm practices on each individual farm that experiences multiple impacts. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 74 Or LUBA 1 (2016).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. The applicant has the burden to demonstrate that individual insignificant impacts under ORS 215.296(1) are not cumulatively significant, and a local government cannot shift that burden to farmer/opponents to a proposed landfill, by finding that the farmer/opponents failed to explain how multiple impacts are cumulatively significant. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 74 Or LUBA 1 (2016).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A county errs in applying a rigorous "compelling evidence" standard to evaluate testimony from farmers located more than one mile from a proposed landfill, regarding impacts of the landfill operation on their farm costs and practices. Nothing in ORS 215.296(1) suggests that a county can apply different evidentiary standards on different parties based on the geographic distance to the proposed non-farm use. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A county errs in discounting the testimony of farmer/opponents that a landfill operation causes significant changes or significant costs to their farm practices, for failure to quantify or specify the degree of impacts. While the county is free to give more weight to testimony that is quantified or more detailed over less quantified or detailed testimony, requiring opponents to quantify or specify the degree of impacts, while not requiring similar quantification or specification from the applicant, who has the burden of proof, effectively shifts the burden of proof to the opponents. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A county errs in placing "great weight" on a longitudinal study offered by the applicant to demonstrate that the proposed expansion of a landfill will not cause significant change/increase costs to surrounding farm practices, by showing that farm uses on surrounding lands have remained stable and even expanded under the impacts of the existing landfill. Farm use may have remained stable despite significant changes or significant increases in costs to farm practices, or indeed because such changes have allowed farm operations to continue despite the impacts of the landfill. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A finding that the amount of trash that escapes a landfill onto adjoining farm land is not "significant" in volume is not sufficient to demonstrate that the changes the farmer made to avoid trash damaging equipment and crops does not reflect a significant change or increased cost for purposes of ORS 215.296(1). The question is whether the changes are significant, not whether the impacts or volume of trash is significant. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. The apparent success of a change in farming practices in mitigating or preventing lost revenue from impacts of landfill operations on surrounding farmland does not demonstrate that the change itself is not a significant change in farm practices, for purposes of ORS 215.296(1). Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. That a pheasant raising operation may be a recently established farm practice on farm land adjacent to a proposed landfill does not mean that the operation is a "hobby" or noncommercial farm use such that the county need not evaluate alleged impacts from the landfill operation on the pheasant raising operation. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. To establish compliance with ORS 215.296(1), the applicant may initially survey farm uses on surrounding lands, and identify in general terms accepted farming practices associated with those farm uses. Remand is necessary where the initial survey identifies a farm stand adjacent to a proposed landfill, but does not identify, even in general terms, any accepted practices associated with the farm stand. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where it is undisputed that direct sales of agricultural products is an accepted farm practice, a county must address allegations that odor and visual impacts from a proposed landfill adversely impact direct sales of agricultural products, for purposes of establishing compliance with ORS 215.296(1), even if the alleged adverse impacts are based on customers' perceptions regarding landfill impacts. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Notwithstanding that the record includes no evidence quantifying how much water would be transferred between a ranch and a proposed golf course, a county's finding that the water transfer will not significantly change or increase the cost of farming practices on the ranch is supported by substantial evidence, where the ranch manager testifies that in exchange for transferring water, the applicant will improve the ranch's irrigation system, and the ranch anticipates no change in the amount of irrigation water available or irrigation practices. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 71 Or LUBA 297 (2015).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A county errs in requiring an applicant to apply the ORS 215.296 "significant change/increase" standard to a study of the "surrounding area" that encompasses all agricultural land in the county, on the theory that a proposed conditional use will remove land from agricultural use and require county farmers to shoulder a greater burden of fixed costs in the county's agricultural economy. The focus of ORS 215.296 is on the impacts of the proposed conditional use on agricultural practices in the proximate surrounding area, not attenuated impacts to the larger economy caused by conversion of the subject property from agricultural use to a conditional non-farm use otherwise allowed under ORS chapter 215. Hood River Valley PRD v. Hood River County, 67 Or LUBA 314 (2013).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. The scope of "surroundings lands" to which ORS 215.296 applies is not limited to lands adjacent to the subject property. However, failure to define the outer limits of the study area or to evaluate impacts on non-adjacent farm operations is not necessarily fatal to the application, if the surrounding agricultural area is homogenous, and there is substantial evidence that the conditional use has no significant impacts on farm practices on adjacent farm parcels. Hood River Valley PRD v. Hood River County, 67 Or LUBA 314 (2013).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. ORS 215.296(1) does not require a demonstration that a proposed conditional use of an EFU-zoned parcel will not prevent future agricultural use of the soils occupied by the non-farm conditional use. Because ORS chapter 215 authorizes in EFU zones several uses such as mining or solid waste disposal facilities that involve removal or loss of agricultural soil, such a requirement would effectively prohibit uses allowed in EFU zones under ORS chapter 215. Hood River Valley PRD v. Hood River County, 67 Or LUBA 314 (2013).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. ORS 215.296(1) requires some description of farm practices on surrounding farm lands, in order to evaluate whether the proposed conditional use will significantly change or increase the costs of such practices. Where the record and planning commission decision includes no such description, on local appeal the governing body could conclude that the planning commission decision approving the conditional use is not supported by substantial evidence. Hood River Valley PRD v. Hood River County, 67 Or LUBA 314 (2013).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A winery that was initially approved as a permitted use under ORS 215.283(1)(n) and 215.452 was not required to consider its impact on farm and forest practices on nearby lands because ORS 215.296(1)(a) and (b) do not apply to such permitted use wineries. However, if that winery is to be expanded later in ways that are not allowed under ORS 215.452, as a "commercial activit[y] that [is] in conjunction with farm use" under ORS 215.283(2)(a), the expanded winery must comply with ORS 215.296(1)(a) and (b), which apply to "commercial activities that are in conjunction with farm use." In that circumstance ORS 215.296(1)(a) and (b) apply to the entire winery as expanded, not just the later approved expansion. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 212 (2012).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Petitioners' challenge to a winery expansion presents no basis for remand under the ORS 215.296(1)(a) and (b) significant change/increase standard, where the county's findings can be read to identify "spraying pesticides, burning fence lines and plowing fields" as accepted farming practices that might be impacted by an expanded winery operation, the county imposes a 200-foot buffer setback requirement on the winery and requires a recorded acknowledgement by the winery owner that nearby farms have a right to continue their accepted farming practices even if they impact the winery, and petitioners offer no direct challenge to the adequacy of those measure to avoid significant changes in or increases in the cost of accepted farming practices. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 212 (2012).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. ORS 215.296(2), which provides that an applicant for a conditional use allowed under ORS 215.213(2) or 215.283(2) may demonstrate compliance with the ORS 215.296(1) no significant change/increase standard through imposition of clear and objective conditions, does not impliedly limit conditions to those intended to protect farm and forest uses. Neither does ORS 215.296(2) prohibit counties from adopting additional EFU zone approval standards to address the impacts of wind energy facilities on residential uses or Goal 5 resources. Cosner v. Umatilla County, 65 Or LUBA 9 (2012).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A hearings officer does not err in concluding that a county standard requiring a showing that the proposed "use" will not force a significant change in farm or forest practices or significantly increase costs of farm and forest practices does not apply to a property line adjustment, where the county standard applies to "uses" listed in the county's EFU zone, and property line adjustments are not listed as a use. Louks v. Jackson County, 65 Or LUBA 58 (2012).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Findings are inadequate to explain how a proposed waste water treatment facility on EFU land would either "force a significant change in" the adjacent farming practices or "significantly increase the cost of" an adjacent organic farming operation under ORS 215.296(1) where the findings do not explain what the "significant impacts" to the organic farming operation would be or explain how the potential for spray drift from the proposed facility would either "force a significant change in" the organic farm practices or "significantly increase the cost of" the operation. Falcon Heights WSD v. Klamath County, 64 Or LUBA 390 (2011).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A criterion that requires a local government to find that a proposed dwelling will not force a significant change in accepted farm practices on surrounding lands does not require the local government to address the indirect and speculative possibility that the owner of the land on which the proposed dwelling will be located may decide in the future not to lease any portions of the subject property that may have been available for leasing for grazing in the past. Womelsdorf v. Jackson County, 62 Or LUBA 34 (2010).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A general statement of concern that a proposed campground would cause "interactions between livestock and people" is insufficient under ORS 197.763(1) to raise the issue of compliance with a local code analogue to the ORS 215.296(1) that requires a finding that the proposed use will not force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of accepted farm practices on surrounding lands devoted to farm use. Olstedt v. Clatsop County, 62 Or LUBA 131 (2010).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where a petitioner fails to challenge all the reasons a hearings officer gives for finding that a proposed wind turbine facility will not force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of accepted farm practices on nearby farms, petitioner's challenge to the adequacy of one of the reasons the hearings officer gave provides no basis for reversal or remand. Falls v. Marion County, 61 Or LUBA 39 (2010).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. When a petitioner was required to raise local appeal issues below pursuant to Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500, 79 P3d 382 (2003), raising the issue that approval of a nonfarm dwelling would significantly increase the cost of farming practices is not sufficient to raise any issue concerning impacts on the stability of the overall land use pattern, and the petitioner may not raise the stability standard at LUBA. Zeitoun v. Yamhill County, 60 Or LUBA 111 (2009).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A county does not err in concluding that, as conditioned, a personal use airport will not "significantly" impact a neighboring equine facility, where the only adverse impact identified by the facility owner is that guests are advised to delay mounting or dismounting horses until after planes land or take-off, and conditions of approval limit operations to 20 flights per month. Johnson v. Marion County, 58 Or LUBA 459 (2009).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. In analyzing significant changes to or significant increases in cost of farming practices on nearby lands, where a county wishes to disqualify unspecified farm practices that the county believes are not intended to generate a profit, it is incumbent on the county in its findings to identify which practices it has not analyzed for that reason. Comden v. Coos County, 56 Or LUBA 214 (2008).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A county's error in failing to identify which farm practices on nearby lands are excluded from the significant change/increase analysis because they are part of "hobby farms" and are not intended to generate a profit is harmless error, where the governing body adopted unchallenged planning commission findings that discuss impacts of the proposed mining on farm practices without distinguishing between "hobby farms" and other farms, and conclude that any impacts on farm practices will be insignificant. Comden v. Coos County, 56 Or LUBA 214 (2008).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A county does not err in failing to define a geographic area of analysis for the impacts of a non-forest use in a forest zone under a code "significant change/increase" standard that does not implement the similar significant change/increase standard applicable to EFU zones and that, unlike the statute, does not require analysis of impacts on "surrounding lands" or any other particular geographic area. Comden v. Coos County, 56 Or LUBA 214 (2008).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Findings that describe the only forest practice that adjoining timber operators identified as impacted by proposed mining on forest land are adequate for purposes of a code significant change/increase standard, where the code standard does not implement the statutory significant change/increase standard, and the petitioners do not explain why the code standard requires an exhaustive description of all forest practices on nearby lands. Comden v. Coos County, 56 Or LUBA 214 (2008).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. While a county's failure to describe accepted farming practices on nearby lands would likely require remand under the ORS 215.296(1) significant change/increase standard or a code provision implementing that standard, such a failure is not necessarily reversible error under a similar code significant change/increase standard that does not implement the statute. Any failure to describe accepted farming practices under the code standard is harmless, where the county adopted unchallenged findings, supported by substantial evidence, that the proposed mining will not significantly affect any farm or forest practices. Comden v. Coos County, 56 Or LUBA 214 (2008).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. ORS 215.296(1) does not require that a county prevent all impacts on farming practices, only that the proposed use, as conditioned, not force a significant change in accepted farm practices or significantly increase the cost of accepted farm practices. Rural Thurston Inc. v. Lane County, 55 Or LUBA 382 (2007).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A hearings officer's conclusion that a fence between a public park and grazing land is sufficient to ensure compliance with ORS 215.296(1) is supported by substantial evidence, notwithstanding the possibility that dogs may exit the park through an unfenced boundary and travel across intervening parcels to harass cattle, where there are no reported incidents of trespass across the unfenced boundaries and only speculation to support the possibility. Rural Thurston Inc. v. Lane County, 55 Or LUBA 382 (2007).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Remand is necessary where the local government's approval of an asphalt batch plant fails to address issues raised regarding the impact of emissions on especially sensitive crops grown nearby. Rickreall Community Water Assoc. v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 76 (2006).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. The scope of "accepted farming or forest practices" that must be evaluated under the no significant change/increase standard is a fact-specific inquiry. A hearings officer does not err in evaluating the scope and intensity of "accepted forest practices" on adjacent lands based on the forest uses currently or recently occurring in the area, and need not assume that forest practices on adjacent parcels will occur at the most intensive level possible. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 53 Or LUBA 290 (2007).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. ORS 215.284(2)(a) requires a demonstration that a proposed nonfarm dwelling or "activities associated with the dwelling" will not force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of accepted farming practices on nearby lands. Improvements such as driveways, wells and septic systems are not "activities associated with the dwelling." However, such improvements must be considered part of the proposed dwelling and thus must be considered when determining compliance with ORS 215.284(2)(a). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. For purposes of determining whether a nonfarm dwelling proposed in the middle of an existing vineyard will force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of accepted farming practices on "nearby lands," the county's determination of the dwelling's impact on nearby lands must include consideration of the impact of the dwelling on the existing vineyard on the subject property itself. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. An allegation that the county failed to consider the potential impact of a proposed nonfarm dwelling on wells located on nearby properties that serve domestic purposes does not provide a basis to reverse or remand the approval of a nonfarm dwelling, where the applicable approval criterion requires a demonstration of whether the proposal will force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of accepted farming practices. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Under a code standard requiring that a proposed forest dwelling not significantly change or increase the cost of farm or forest practices on nearby resource lands, the hearings officer's failure to separately analyze more distant properties in the study area or identify its outer boundaries is not reversible error, where the hearings officer found no significant impacts on parcels adjacent to the subject property and, given the homogeneity of the surrounding area, significant impacts on non-adjoining parcels are unlikely. Sisters Forest Planning Comm. v. Deschutes County, 48 Or LUBA 78 (2004).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Testimony that approval of a non-farm dwelling will increase agricultural land costs because of the parcel's increased value as a building site is at best indirect evidence of an increase in the cost of "farm practices" within the meaning of ORS 215.296(1). Frazee v. Jackson County, 45 Or LUBA 263 (2003).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Findings concluding that adjacent farms do not use pesticides or aerial spraying and will not cause conflicts with proposed nonfarm dwellings are sufficient to show compliance with the no significant change/increase standard, where petitioners do not identify other farm practices or conflicts that the county's findings fail to address, and do not challenge the findings regarding pesticide use and aerial spraying. Hanna v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 386 (2003).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where a party during local proceedings advises the county that an existing or prior farm use on surrounding lands is in the process of being abandoned, and plans for the new farm use are sufficiently developed to allow the new farm use to be described in sufficient detail to allow the farm practices that will be associated with the new farm use to be identified, an applicant for a nonfarm use that is subject to ORS 215.296(1) must address the accepted farming practices that will be associated with that new farm use. Dierking v. Clackamas County, 38 Or LUBA 106 (2000).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Organic farming is not properly viewed as either a "farm use" or an "accepted farm practice." However, organic farmers may employ accepted farming practices that are not normally associated with other types of farming. Dierking v. Clackamas County, 38 Or LUBA 106 (2000).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Impacts on "farm families, residents and workers" are not impacts on "accepted farm practices," that must be considered under ORS 215.296(1). Dierking v. Clackamas County, 38 Or LUBA 106 (2000).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. ORS 215.286 does not require a guarantee that aggregate mining on land zoned for exclusive farm use will cause no adverse impacts on the water table on surrounding lands. Jorgensen v. Union County, 37 Or LUBA 738 (2000).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Petitioners' argument that the county used a different definition of "accepted farming practices" than the definition provided in ORS 215.203(2)(c) does not provide a basis for reversal or remand, where petitioners do not demonstrate that the county's definition is inconsistent with the statutory definition, or that application of the county's definition supports a different result than would application of the statutory definition. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 156 (1999).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. It is inconsistent with ORS 215.296(1) to arbitrarily limit the scope of analysis to properties within 500 feet of the subject property, where doing so results in failure to consider substantial evidence in the record of significant impacts from the proposed use to accepted farming practices on lands beyond 500 feet. However, where petitioners fail to challenge a finding that there are no significant impacts within 500 feet, and an extrapolation of that finding to lands beyond 500 feet, the county's error does not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 156 (1999).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Petitioners' argument at LUBA that using agricultural land for a golf course buffer violates the ORS 215.296(1) prohibition against forcing a significant change in farm practices on surrounding lands devoted to farm use was waived, where petitioners' arguments during the local proceedings concerning the proposed buffers were not sufficient for the decision maker to understand and respond to that issue. DLCD v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 88 (1999).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A local provision requiring compatibility between a proposed use and development of abutting properties by outright permitted uses does not require an exhaustive listing and discussion of every subcategory of use permitted in the area. A county's general description of permitted uses and explanation why the proposed use is compatible with types of permitted uses is adequate. Thomas v. Wasco County, 35 Or LUBA 173 (1998).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Adequate findings of compliance with a local standard requiring that proposed nonresource uses not significantly increase the cost of accepted farm and forest practices must identify the farm and forest practices in the area, even if the local standard does not implement and thus need not be consistent with the similar statutory standard. Thomas v. Wasco County, 35 Or LUBA 173 (1998).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. In applying a local provision based on the no significant change/increased cost standard, the local government is not required to perform the impossible task of proving a negative or to quantify how much imposed conditions will reduce conflicts with farm uses below a certain threshold. It need only affirmatively consider the impacts of a proposed use on farm or forest practices, and in so doing, consider whether the use will force a significant change or significantly increase the cost of those practices. Gutoski v. Lane County, 34 Or LUBA 219 (1998).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Under ORS 215.296(1), the applicant bears the burden to demonstrate that the proposed use will force no significant change in accepted farming practices or their cost, and the local government's findings must affirmatively explain why it believes there are no such significant adverse impacts. Just v. Linn County, 32 Or LUBA 325 (1997).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. In order to demonstrate compliance with ORS 215.296(1), county findings must: (1) describe the farm and forest practices on surrounding lands devoted to farm or forest use; explain why the proposed use will not force a significant change in those practices; and (3) explain why the proposed use will not significantly increase the cost of those practices. Brown v. Union County, 32 Or LUBA 168 (1996).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Under ORS 215.296(1), the county may not assume from an absence of information in the record that there are no adverse farm impacts. The burden is on the county to identify and explain why it believes there are no significant adverse impacts and why it believes the cost of accepted farm practices would not be increased. Brown v. Union County, 32 Or LUBA 168 (1996).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where the only use approved by the challenged decision is mineral and aggregate extraction on a 186-acre site, and no uses on the remainder of intervenor's 490-acre parcel are subject to review under ORS 215.296, the county's findings correctly limit the evaluation of compliance with ORS 215.296 to the 186-acre area of mineral and aggregate extraction. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 32 Or LUBA 56 (1996).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. ORS 215.296(1) does not require of the local government the impossible task of proving a negative; rather, the local government must affirmatively consider the impacts of a proposed use on farm or forest practices, and in consideration of those impacts, consider whether the use will force a significant change or significantly increase the cost of those practices. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 32 Or LUBA 56 (1996).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where the local code requires that a proposed use will not force a significant change in, or significantly increase the cost of, accepted farm or forest practices on surrounding land, the applicant has the burden of identifying the relevant accepted farm and forest practices and producing evidence showing those practices will not be significantly changed or their costs significantly increased. Lyon v. Linn County, 28 Or LUBA 402 (1994).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Findings of fact stating that accepted farm practices which occurred on adjoining properties have continued after a golf course was constructed do not constitute an improper interpretation of ORS 215.296(1) as being met simply because those past accepted farm practices have continued. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 28 Or LUBA 362 (1994).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Findings that it is possible to apply agricultural sprays with little or no drift if label restrictions are followed do not constitute findings that spray drift is not an accepted farm practice. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 28 Or LUBA 362 (1994).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where impacts on an individual accepted farm practice are such that they almost force a significant change in that practice, additional impacts on other accepted farm practices may lead to a conclusion that there is a cumulative significant change in accepted farm practices, but such is not necessarily the case. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 28 Or LUBA 362 (1994).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. An applicant may not construct a golf course, prior to receipt of a decision approving such construction that is sustained on appeal, and thereafter rely on the fact that construction has already occurred to avoid showing that the impacts on accepted farm practices and the costs thereof during construction of the golf course are not significant. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 28 Or LUBA 362 (1994).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Findings that an orchard's accepted farming practices have not been significantly affected by trespassing golf balls are supported by substantial evidence where the evidence shows no orchard employees have been hit by golf balls, tree buffers are effective in deflecting golf balls and petitioner's testimony was discredited by video tape of petitioner collecting golf balls on the golf course property. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 28 Or LUBA 362 (1994).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where there is conflicting evidence concerning the effectiveness of a condition requiring golf course closures during spraying operations to avoid significant effects on or cost increases in such spraying, a finding that the condition has been effective is supported by substantial evidence. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 28 Or LUBA 362 (1994).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where the aerial spray applicator formerly used by an orchard will not spray orchards surrounded by a golf course and the only sprayer who will charges 2000 dollars more to do so, the county's findings must explain why this cost increase, viewed cumulatively with any other cost increases attributable to the golf course, is not significant. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 28 Or LUBA 362 (1994).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Petitioner's argument that the county failed to address evidence that escaped dogs can cause great damage in rural areas provides no basis for reversal or remand, where the county found the proposed kennel will comply with a code standard requiring no significant increase in the cost of accepted farm and forest practices because the design of the kennel will result in no dogs escaping from the facility. Larry Kelly Farms, Inc. v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 401 (1994).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where testimony below does not refer to ORS 215.296 by its statutory citation, title or any recognized abbreviation for either, and does not employ any of the operative terms of the statute, a reasonable local decision maker would not have understood that compliance with ORS 215.296 was raised below, and petitioner may not raise this issue before LUBA. Spiering v. Yamhill County, 25 Or LUBA 695 (1993).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where a golf course adjoining an orchard will force alterations in accepted farming practices and increase the costs associated with such practices, the relevant question under ORS 215.296(1) is whether such alterations and increased costs will be significant. Where there is evidence in the whole record that would allow a local government decision maker to answer that question either way, LUBA is required by ORS 197.835(7)(a)(C) to defer to the local government's judgment. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 24 Or LUBA 271 (1992).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where there is evidence in the local government record that the number of golf balls claimed to have landed in adjoining orchards is exaggerated, a decision approving a golf course and imposing a condition requiring the planting of trees to contain golf balls on-site and installation of a fence and screen to prevent golfers and golf balls from entering adjoining orchard property, is supported by substantial evidence. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 24 Or LUBA 271 (1992).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where the aerial application of chemicals on an orchard adjoining a proposed golf course will be rendered more difficult, although possible, in that at least one aerial sprayer indicates he would be willing to spray the affected orchard, and the decision approving the golf course requires the operator to close the golf course to facilitate such spraying, there is substantial evidence in the record that the golf course will not force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of aerial spraying of the adjoining orchard. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 24 Or LUBA 271 (1992).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A decision that a golf course will not significantly change or increase the cost of ground spraying of an adjoining orchard is supported by substantial evidence, where there is conflicting evidence concerning the magnitude of ground spraying drift expected to travel onto adjoining properties, and the decision imposes a condition requiring that the golf course operator provide monitors to prevent golfers from coming into contact with ground spray drift. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 24 Or LUBA 271 (1992).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where petitioners do not specifically challenge county findings which (1) identify a specific area surrounding a proposed golf course as the "surrounding lands" to be considered in determining compliance with ORS 215.296(1) and identical local code provisions, and (2) explain how the area was chosen, but rather assert a larger area should have been chosen, LUBA will uphold the county's identification of "surrounding lands." Schellenberg v. Polk County, 22 Or LUBA 673 (1992).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. ORS 215.296(1), and identical local code provisions, require that a county consider the impacts of a proposed nonfarm use on all "surrounding lands devoted to farm or forest use," whether that use is commercial or noncommercial. Schellenberg v. Polk County, 22 Or LUBA 673 (1992).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. A county may properly base its identification of "accepted farm or forest practices," as those terms are used in ORS 215.296(1), on the definition of "accepted farming practice" in ORS 215.203(2)(c). Schellenberg v. Polk County, 22 Or LUBA 673 (1992).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Where the evidence establishes a reasonable farmer would not significantly change the manner in which the farm is managed due to a proposed golf course, and the opponents' evidence shows only that there is a remote possibility that there could be some impacts from such proposed golf course, the county's determinations that the proposed golf course will not seriously interfere with, force a significant change in, or significantly increase the cost of accepting farming practices in the area, are supported by substantial evidence. Washington Co. Farm Bureau v. Washington County, 22 Or LUBA 540 (1992).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Under ORS 215.296(1), the burden is on the applicant to show a proposed golf center will force no significant change in accepted farming practices or their cost, and on the county to so find. Berg v. Linn County, 22 Or LUBA 507 (1992).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Findings which fail to identify the farm practices employed on surrounding properties devoted to farm use cannot explain why the proposed use will not cause a significant change in or increase the cost of such practices, and are inadequate to comply with ORS 215.296(1). Berg v. Linn County, 22 Or LUBA 507 (1992).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Although the EFU zoning statutes do not establish specific approval standards for golf courses in EFU zones, ORS 215.296(1) establishes standards applicable to nonfarm uses in EFU zones generally, and requires that approval of such uses not force a significant change in, or significantly increase the cost of, accepted farm or forest practices on surrounding lands. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 22 Or LUBA 307 (1991).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Under ORS 215.296(1) and similar local code provisions, the burden is on the applicant to show the proposed use will force no significant change in accepted farming practices or their cost, and on the county to so find. Schellenberg v. Polk County, 21 Or LUBA 425 (1991).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. ORS 215.296(1) and similar local code provisions require a county to consider all issues relevant to whether the proposed use will force a significant change in accepted farm or forest practices on surrounding lands or significantly increase the cost of such practices. Schellenberg v. Polk County, 21 Or LUBA 425 (1991).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. In order to demonstrate compliance with ORS 215.296(1) and similar code standards, county findings must (1) describe the farm and forest practices on surrounding lands devoted to farm or forest use, (2) explain why the proposed use will not force a significant change in those practices, and (3) explain why the proposed use will not significantly increase the cost of those practices. Schellenberg v. Polk County, 21 Or LUBA 425 (1991).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Without an adequate identification of the accepted farming practices on surrounding lands, the county's findings cannot explain why the proposed use will not cause a significant change in or increase the cost of such practices, as required by ORS 215.296(1) and the local code. Schellenberg v. Polk County, 21 Or LUBA 425 (1991).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Findings of compliance with a standard that a proposed golf course will not "force a significant change in," or "significantly increase the cost of," accepted farm or forest practices on surrounding lands do not necessarily satisfy a standard that the proposed golf course will not "interfere seriously" with accepted farming practices. Washington Co. Farm Bureau v. Washington Co., 21 Or LUBA 51 (1991).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. The requirement that conditions imposed to ensure that a proposed nonfarm use will not force a significant change in, or significantly increase the cost of, accepted farm or forest practices on surrounding lands "be clear and objective," does not necessarily require a local government to adopt findings explaining why conditions imposed for this purpose are clear and objective. Washington Co. Farm Bureau v. Washington Co., 21 Or LUBA 51 (1991).

3.3.8 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – No Significant Change/Increase Std. Whether a proposed dwelling (1) is permitted outright in an EFU zone, (2) is "accessory" to an underlying nonconforming use, and (3) complies with ORS 215.296(1), are determinations which require "interpretation or the exercise of factual, policy or legal judgment" within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) and (C). Komning v. Grant County, 20 Or LUBA 481 (1990).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where an applicant considers an alternative and explains that the alternative was rejected because it was approximately 20 percent more costly, a reasonable person could only conclude that ORS 215.246(3) is met. South Suburban Sanitary District v. Klamath County, 81 Or LUBA 796 (2020).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.246(3) does not allow a county to deny an application because an alternative may be feasible in the future. South Suburban Sanitary District v. Klamath County, 81 Or LUBA 796 (2020).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Whether a more efficient alternative possibility exists is not a valid consideration under ORS 215.246(3). South Suburban Sanitary District v. Klamath County, 81 Or LUBA 796 (2020).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. The introduction of chlorine into reclaimed water prior to its transmittal through a pipeline, the continued presence of chlorine in the water in a reservoir at the end of the pipeline, and circulation equipment to prevent stratification in the reservoir do not convert the pipeline or the reservoir into "utility facilities" for purposes of ORS 215.283(1)(c). South Suburban Sanitary District v. Klamath County, 81 Or LUBA 796 (2020).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where an applicant for a CUP to host events as a home occupation on land zoned EFU plans to be on-site during events to assist with general coordination, parking, and other activities, and where conditions of approval make the applicant responsible for operational matters such as maintaining the event calendar to comply with limits on the number of events as well as monitoring noise and sign removal, substantial evidence exists to support a conclusion that the applicant will "operate[]" the home occupation, within the meaning of ORS 215.448(1)(a), even where they plan to have no full-time employees and to allow customers to hire their own contractors, as necessary. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Clackamas County, 81 Or LUBA 664 (2020).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where an applicant for a CUP to host events as a home occupation on land zoned EFU explains how events can be conducted with no more than five employees on-site at one time by scheduling activities, preparing food off-site, utilizing buffet-style service, and planning and making arrangements in advance, and where a condition of approval limits the home occupation to no more than five employees on-site, substantial evidence exists to support a conclusion that the applicant will "employ on site no more than five full-time or part-time persons," within the meaning of ORS 215.448(1)(b), even given the complex planning and implementation that a 300-guest wedding entails. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Clackamas County, 81 Or LUBA 664 (2020).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where an applicant for a CUP to host events as a home occupation on land zoned EFU plans to renovate an existing barn by adding restrooms and "Brides and Grooms rooms" and by eliminating horse stalls, substantial evidence does not exist to support a conclusion that the renovated barn would "otherwise be allowed in the zone," for purposes of ORS 215.448(3). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Clackamas County, 81 Or LUBA 664 (2020).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where an applicant for a CUP to host events as a home occupation on land zoned EFU plans to construct a new, free-standing restroom building with septic system capacity to serve 300 people per event, substantial evidence does not exist to support a conclusion that the new restroom building would be accessory to or customarily associated with an existing dwelling on EFU land. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Clackamas County, 81 Or LUBA 664 (2020).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. In determining whether proposed "agri-tourism or other commercial events or activities" are "incidental and subordinate to existing commercial farm use of the tract" for purposes of ORS 215.283(4)(d)(A), a county errs in relying on a comparison of the frequency of commercial events with the frequency of commercial farming activity on the property to the exclusion of any relevant circumstances, including the nature, intensity, and economic value of the respective uses, that bear on whether the existing commercial farm use remains the predominant use of the tract. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 81 Or LUBA 276 (2020).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. "In-home commercial activities" are not authorized by right in resource zones, even where (1) such activities are accessory to residential uses and would have minimal to no impact on resource lands, (2) such an approach would streamline local permitting by avoiding the conditional use process required for home occupations, and (3) such activities are consistent with a model ordinance prepared by DLCD. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where certain activities are allowed as accessory to a home occupation use, they may not be allowed through a Type I process (i.e., ministerial review of an application based on clear and objective standards and criteria) that does not provide the review that is required by ORS 215.448(1) and (4). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where local code amendments allow accessory uses and structures in an EFU zone, arguments that (1) the amendments improperly exempt such structures from a local code requirement that steps be taken to minimize adverse impacts on farm and forest uses and (2) the provisions governing such uses are inconsistent with ORS 215.213(3)(b) provide no basis for reversal or remand where the amended code is comparable to the prior code and where the petitioner does not develop any argument explaining why the amendments are substantive instead of technical. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Establishing that proposed "agri-tourism or other commercial events or activities" are "necessary to support the commercial farm uses or the commercial agricultural enterprises in the area" for purposes of ORS 215.283(4)(d)(A) is a relatively high hurdle: the county must find that the events are essential in order to maintain the existence of either the commercial farm uses on the subject property or the commercial agricultural enterprises in the area. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 135 (2019).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A demonstration that proposed "agri-tourism or other commercial events or activities" are "necessary to support" an approved commercial activity in conjunction with farm use under ORS 215.283(2)(a), such as a brewery, is not sufficient to demonstrate that the events are "necessary to support" an "existing commercial farm use of the tract," such as the growing of filberts, for purposes of ORS 215.283(4)(d)(A), even where revenue from the brewery "supplements" revenue from the growing of filberts. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 80 Or LUBA 135 (2019).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.441, which provides that if county zoning allows a church or other nonresidential place of worship, the county shall also allow certain accessory uses, is not an independent authorization of churches in any county zone, and does not extend any protections to churches proposed for zones where churches are not allowed. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 75 Or LUBA 284 (2017).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A hearings officer Misconstrues the text and context of the county Wildlife Area overlay zone, which allows uses that are "permitted outright" and "permitted conditionally" in the underlying zone, by concluding that a church is a use "permitted outright" based solely on the fact that ORS 215.283(1) allows churches on lands zoned for exclusive farm use (EFU), when the question is whether churches are "permitted outright" in the county EFU zone, which does not list churches under the category of uses "permitted outright." Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 75 Or LUBA 284 (2017).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Notwithstanding that uses listed in ORS 215.283(1), including churches, are generally allowed on lands zoned for exclusive farm use free of locally imposed restrictions, other state statutes and administrative rules can impose restrictions. Because ORS 215.441 and OAR 660-033-0130 impose restrictions on churches in EFU zones that require or authorize a county to undertake discretionary reviews of proposed churches, it is not accurate to characterize churches as uses "permitted outright" in a county EFU zone. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 75 Or LUBA 284 (2017).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. The text and context of ORS 215.283(2)(c), which allows "private parks, playgrounds, hunting and fishing preserves and campgrounds" on EFU-zoned land, indicate that the qualifier "private" refers to private ownership, not private access. Accordingly, a "private park" for purposes of ORS 215.283(2)(c) is not limited to parks that exclude the public. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 61 (2015).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. The primary use of a "park" allowed under ORS 215.283(2)(c) on EFU-zoned land must be a recreational use of some kind. A proposed wedding event center is not a "park," because weddings and other focal events are not "recreational" uses, even if incidental activities associated with such events, such as dancing and lawn games, could be viewed as recreational activities. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 61 (2015).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. OAR 660-033-0130(18)(a) authorizes expansion of "[e]xisting facilities wholly within a farm use zone," but does not expressly require that the facility existed wholly within a farm use zone in 1996, on the date the rule language was adopted. As written, the rule includes no such temporal qualification, and would allow expansion of a facility that currently exists wholly within a farm use zone, but that did not in 1996. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.283(2)(k) allows a solid waste disposal facility on EFU-zoned land for which a DEQ permit has been granted. Where the record shows that a currently operating facility proposed for expansion had a DEQ permit that has been extended, but does not include a copy of the current DEQ permit, remand is not necessary to remedy that evidentiary defect where the petitioner offers no reason to believe that the landfill is operating without a current permit, and the county imposed a condition requiring the applicant to provide a copy of the current permit prior to undertaking any expansion. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Filming that is incidental to a primary use of a property zoned EFU cannot legitimize that primary use if it is not otherwise allowed in the EFU zone, and such incidental filming cannot bring that primary use within the scope of "on-site filming," allowed in an EFU zone under ORS 215.306. Smalley v. Benton County, 71 Or LUBA 172 (2015).

3.3.9 EFU Statutes/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. An event that may or may not involve videotaping, subject to the event participants' discretion, does not constitute "on-site filming" allowed in an EFU zone under ORS 215.306 when the videotaping that occurs is not the primary use of EFU land, and is merely an incidental part of the event. Videotaping of weddings and other events does not qualify as "on-site filming" when it is the events themselves, and not the recording of them, that are the principal use of the EFU land. Smalley v. Benton County, 71 Or LUBA 172 (2015).

3.3.9 EFU Statutes/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Under ORS 215.306(4)(b), "on-site filming," i.e., the production of "advertisements, documentaries, feature film, television services and other film productions," refers to production of films and television for broadcast or distribution to the public in some manner, and does not mean the production of private home videos that merely memorialize personal events of interest only to the participants. The videotaping of a wedding or similar private event does not constitute the production of a "documentary." Smalley v. Benton County, 71 Or LUBA 172 (2015).

3.3.9 EFU Statutes/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Under ORS 215.306, "on-site filming" is intended to be a temporary or non-permanent use of EFU land. An event facility that operates in a continuous and apparently permanent manner over the course of 12 years, even though individual events may only last one day, does not qualify as "on-site filming" as that term is used in ORS 215.306. Smalley v. Benton County, 71 Or LUBA 172 (2015).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A utility facility authorized in an EFU zone under ORS 215.283(1)(c) is not limited to facilities that provide utility services to local or county residents, but includes a natural gas transmission line that connects an interstate natural gas pipeline to an export terminal. McLaughlin v. Douglas County, 70 Or LUBA 314 (2014).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. LUBA will reject an argument that a county erred in failing to deny a proposed natural gas transmission line allowed as a utility facility in an EFU zone under ORS 215.283(1)(c) based on comprehensive plan language that the petitioner argues limits utility facilities to those that serve county residents, because even if the county's comprehensive plan is interpreted to limit utility facilities, application of those limits to deny a use allowed outright under ORS 215.283(1) would exceed the county's authority, under the reasoning in Brentmar v. Jackson County, 321 Or 481, 900 P2d 1030 (1995). McLaughlin v. Douglas County, 70 Or LUBA 314 (2014).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. When ORS 215.283(1)(o) was enacted in 1993 to expressly authorize farm stands in EFU zones the statue authorized, among other things, "sale of retail incidental items," but limited such sales to "25 percent of the total sales of the farm stand." Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Legislation enacted in 2001 amended ORS 215.283(1)(o) concerning farm stands to expressly authorize "fee-based activity to promote sale of farm crops and livestock sold at the farm stand," subject to the limitation that such sales and incidental retails could not exceed 25 percent of farm stand sales. Legislative history shows that the legislature intended to authorize farm product food contests and farm product food preparations, but did not intend to authorize banquets, restaurants, or cafes. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. The ORS 215.283(1)(o) authorization for farm stands authorizes structures that are designed and used for the sale of farm products and livestock, and also authorizes those structures to be used for "sale of retail incidental items and fee-based activity to promote sale of farm crops or livestock." The EFU statute is correctly interpreted also to authorize farm stand activities to be conducted outside the authorized structures. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A farm stand permit that authorizes up to 22 al fresco dinners for up to 75 diners each year is inconsistent with the express prohibition in ORS 215.283(1)(o) and OAR 660-033-0130(23) against farm stand structures for banquets. Although the statute and rule are expressly directed at "structures for banquets," the prohibition extends to such large and frequent al fresco dinners, which fall within the meaning of "banquets," as that term is used in the statute and rule, and the prohibition extends to outdoor banquets. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.283(1)(o) and OAR 660-033-0130(23) authorize the "sale of retail incidental items and fee-based activity to promote the sale of farm crops or livestock" inside structures that are "designed and used for sale of farm crops and livestock," but they do not authorize structures that are specifically designed and used for retail sales and fee-based promotional activity. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A county's condition of approval that farm stand "wholesale sales" be separately accounted and not included in applying the ORS 215.283(1)(o) requirement that "sale of retail incidental items and fee-based activity to promote sale of farm crops or livestock" not exceed "25 percent of the total annual sales of the farm stand," while an imperfect way to ensure that farm stand sales are not inflated with nonfarm stand sales to inflate the permissible sales from retail and fee-based activity, is a permissible condition under the statute. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A farm stand permit that authorizes "small-scale gatherings such as birthdays, picnics, and similar activities" and (2) requires that such gatherings "shall promote the farm stand and contemporaneous crops sold in the farm stand" does not exceed the ORS 215.283(1)(o) and OAR 660-033-0130(23) authority for farm stands. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A farm stand permit that authorizes multiple food carts to sell a variety of prepared food at up to 24 events per year cannot be characterized as "incidental retail sales," and exceeds the authority granted by ORS 215.283(1)(o) and OAR 660-033-0130(23). Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.283(1)(o) and OAR 660-033-0130(23) do not categorically prohibit food carts in all circumstances. If a permit authorizing a farm stand appropriately limited food carts so that they could be characterized as "incidental retail sales," they could be authorized at a farm stand. Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.283(1)(o) and OAR 660-033-0130(23) do not prohibit all concessions at farm stands. The statute and rule only prohibit "large concessions." Greenfield v. Multnomah County, 67 Or LUBA 407 (2013).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Under 2010 legislation, wineries authorized by ORS 215.283(1)(n) and 215.452 may offer "[s]ervices directly related to the sale and promotion of wine," and host "private events." ORS 215.452 limits "gross income from the sale of incidental items and services" to "25 percent of the gross income from the retail sale on-site of wine produced in conjunction with the winery." Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 212 (2012).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. The legislature in 2010 enacted amendments to ORS 215.452, which governs wineries that are a permitted use under ORS 215.283(1)(n), and those amendments failed to adopt a proposal to expressly preserve statutory authority to approve wineries under ORS 215.283(2)(a) as "commercial activities that are in conjunction with farm use." However, LUBA will not infer from that failure a legislative intent to eliminate ORS 215.283(2)(a) as basis for winery approval on EFU-zoned land, where it was common practice before 2010 to approve wineries under ORS 215.283(2)(a) as "commercial activities that are in conjunction with farm use" and the 2010 legislative history suggests that the legislature did not intended to eliminate that common practice. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 212 (2012).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Approval of wineries under ORS 215.283(2)(a) as "commercial activities that are in conjunction with farm use" and approval of wineries under ORS 215.283(1)(n) and 215.452, which specifically authorize "wineries" on EFU-zoned land, are alternative ways to seek approval for a winery. Approval under ORS 215.283(2)(a) for expansions to an existing winery that was originally approved under ORS 215.283(1)(n) and 215.452 that are not permitted under ORS 215.452, has the legal effect of converting ORS 215.283(1)(n) and 215.452 winery into an ORS 215.283(2)(a) winery. Therefore the expanded winery as a whole must comply with the limits imposed on ORS 215.283(2)(a) wineries. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 212 (2012).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.283(1)(r) authorizes "processing of farm crops" as a permitted use in EFU zones. While a winery that only produces wine from wine grapes might qualify for approval under ORS 215.283(1)(r), a winery that includes a tasting room and hosts numerous events at the winery to promote sale of wine is more than "processing of farm crops" and must be approved under ORS 215.283(1)(n), which authorizes wineries that are limited in accordance with ORS 215.452 and 215.453 or under ORS 215.283(2)(a), which authorizes "commercial activities that are in conjunction with farm use." Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 212 (2012).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A winery that is authorized to hold up to 44 public or private events annually to promote and sell wine produced at the winery and to prepare and serve meals at those events, but must limit sale of incidental items and services at the events and winery to no more than "25 percent of the gross income from the on-site sale of wine produced in conjunction with the winery," is permissible under the Supreme Court's and Court of Appeals' decisions in Craven v. Jackson County, because the events, food service and sale of incidental items and services are properly viewed as "incidental" and "secondary" to the winery. However, such a winery is approaching the point where the events, food service and sale of incidental items and services can no longer be said to be "incidental" and "secondary" to the winery. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 212 (2012).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. In approving a building permit for a building "customarily provided in conjunction with farm use" in the EFU zone under ORS 215.213(1)(e) or 215.283(1)(e), one factual variable a county should consider is whether the building is intended to be used as an accessory building to non-farm uses authorized on the property, such as a private use airport, instead of or in addition to an accessory to farm use of the property. Bratton v. Washington County, 65 Or LUBA 461 (2012).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. LUBA will reject an argument that the alternative site study for a transmission tower proposed in an EFU zone erred in rejecting an alternative site in a light industrial area, where the petitioner cites to no evidence that the industrial area has a vacant location of the size necessary to prevent damage to other structures if the tower collapsed. Hamilton v. Jackson County, 63 Or LUBA 156 (2011).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Under ORS 215.275, the alternative sites analysis for a utility facility proposed on EFU land evaluates alternative sites on land that is zoned other than EFU. The analysis is not required to evaluate alternative EFU-zoned sites. Hamilton v. Jackson County, 63 Or LUBA 156 (2011).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. In approving a public recreational vehicle (RV) campground under OAR 660-035-0035 and 0040, a local government need not limit infrastructure such as septic RV dumps, water and electric services to the most minimally intensive infrastructure that is possible, to avoid the necessity of taking an exception to Goal 3. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 63 Or LUBA 347 (2011).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A county does not err in concluding that providing central septic dump sites for recreational vehicles (RVs) in a public RV campground does not require an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 3, where if the county did not provide central RV dump sites it would have to increase the size or number of communal restrooms to meet campers' needs, offsetting any reduction in septic infrastructure. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 63 Or LUBA 347 (2011).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A county does not err in concluding that providing a water spigot and an electrical outlet in individual campsites in a public recreational vehicle campground does not require an exception to Goal 3, where providing necessary services to campers requires a dispersed water and electric grid in any event, and the additional infrastructure to supply water and electricity to individual sites is not significantly greater than that otherwise required to provide basic services. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 63 Or LUBA 347 (2011).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Driveways serving nonfarm dwellings do not have to be located on a portion of the parcel that is generally unsuitable for farm use. Womelsdorf v. Jackson County, 62 Or LUBA 34 (2010).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A general statement of concern that a proposed campground would cause "interactions between livestock and people" is insufficient under ORS 197.763(1) to raise the issue of compliance with a local code analogue to the ORS 215.296(1) that requires a finding that the proposed use will not force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of accepted farm practices on surrounding lands devoted to farm use. Olstedt v. Clatsop County, 62 Or LUBA 131 (2010).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. It is inappropriate to simply apply the restrictions that govern private park/campgrounds under OAR 660-033-0130(19) to public park/campgrounds governed by a different set of rules, because for whatever reason LCDC has chosen to treat public park/campgrounds more favorably than private park/campgrounds. Nonetheless, the rule governing private campgrounds is the only analogous area of law in which LCDC has attempted to delineate the type or intensity of uses allowed in a campground on EFU land as a conditional use without taking an exception to Goal 3, and is useful context in attempting to determine which local public park uses on EFU land require a Goal 3 exception in the absence of a local master park plan. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.283(2)(k) restricts a solid waste disposal facility from being "established" prior to Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) permitting, but does not prohibit local government approval of a facility that is conditioned on receipt of the DEQ permit prior to establishment or building of the facility. Crocker v. Jefferson County, 60 Or LUBA 317 (2010).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where there is no evidence in the record that a proposed cell tower will have any impact on farm or forest practices, a county may simply find that, and need not conduct a pro forma analysis of impacts on farm and forest practices. Seeberger v. Yamhill County, 56 Or LUBA 656 (2008).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A county cannot apply local site design standards to deny a proposed cellular tower in an exclusive farm use zone, a permitted use under ORS 215.283(1), because as explained in Brentmar v. Jackson County, 321 Or 481, 900 P2d 1030 (1995), state law generally prohibits local governments from imposing approval criteria on ORS 215.283(1) uses other than those authorized by statute. T-Mobile USA v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 83 (2007).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A county errs in denying a proposed cellular tower under ORS 215.275 for failure to evaluate opponents' claims that the tower could be located on alternative sites on non-agricultural land, when none of the alternative sites were identified with sufficient specificity to allow evaluation. T-Mobile USA v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 83 (2007).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.283(1) and 215.275 do not permit a county to deny an application to site a proposed cellular tower in an exclusive farm use zone simply because there is already some existing cellular service in the area. A proposed cellular communication facility may be justified based on a need to improve existing service. T-Mobile USA v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 83 (2007).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A hearings officer does not err in interpreting a code provision that allows the "preparation of land for cultivation" that is a "customarily accepted agricultural activity" without a permit in agricultural zones to require the landowner to demonstrate that a proposal to cover an existing landfill with 100,000 cubic yards of soil not only involves "preparation of land for cultivation" but is also a "customarily accepted agricultural activity." Ehler v. Washington County, 52 Or LUBA 663 (2006).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Any inquiry into whether a proposal to place 100,000 cubic yards of soil on an existing landfill is a "customarily accepted agricultural activity" is necessarily a fact-specific inquiry. In answering that question, a hearings officer does not err in considering as relevant facts the absence of ongoing agricultural activity on the property and the lack of specificity in the landowner's plans for post-fill agricultural use. Ehler v. Washington County, 52 Or LUBA 663 (2006).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Any inquiry into what is a customarily accepted agricultural activity necessarily requires whether other similar farms have engaged in the proposed activity. A hearings officer does not err in considering the absence of evidence that other farms have placed 100,000 cubic yards of fill in a 13-acre area to prepare the land for cultivation. Ehler v. Washington County, 52 Or LUBA 663 (2006).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Given the history of the subject property as a landfill, a hearings officer does not err in considering the lack of evidence that it is customary for farmers to charge a fee to persons to deposit soil on farm land, in determining whether a proposal to place 100,000 cubic yards of fill on farm land is a "customarily accepted agricultural activity" allowed without a permit, or something else that requires a permit. Ehler v. Washington County, 52 Or LUBA 663 (2006).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where a regulation specifically authorizes a use in one zone and does not authorize that specific use in a second zone, a more general authorization of uses in the second zone should not be interpreted to include the more specifically authorized use in the first zone. However, that principle would not apply to bar finding a particular feedlot qualifies as a "farm use" rather than a "commercial activity * * * in conjunction with farm use," where the legislature's authorization of "commercial activities that are in conjunction with farm use" is no more specific than its authorization of "farm uses." Friends of Jefferson County v. Jefferson County, 48 Or LUBA 107 (2004).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Evidence that a livestock operation is conducted on a parcel for part of the year is sufficient to establish that the property contains an "existing" livestock operation, for purposes of the requirements for siting a guest ranch on EFU-zoned land, where the record shows that rotation of cattle from the property during the wet months, to allow pasture to rest, is a matter of good animal husbandry. Durdan v. Deschutes County, 43 Or LUBA 248 (2002).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. While the guest ranch statute requires an existing livestock operation on a parcel of at least 160 acres on which the proposed guest ranch and qualifying dwelling must be located, nothing in the statute requires that the livestock operation exist exclusively on that parcel, or prohibits the livestock operation from being part of a larger operation on non-contiguous properties. Durdan v. Deschutes County, 43 Or LUBA 248 (2002).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. The guest ranch statute requires that the subject parcel contain the dwelling of the livestock operator, but does not require that the dwelling exist on the date of application for approval of a guest ranch. A condition of approval requiring that the dwelling be completed prior to construction of the guest ranch is sufficient to satisfy the statute. Durdan v. Deschutes County, 43 Or LUBA 248 (2002).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. While the guest ranch statute allows provision of food services to "guests" that "visit or stay" at the ranch, and does not expressly prohibit providing food services to visitors who are not overnight guests, it is reasonably clear in context that "guests" are those persons who have paid a fee to stay at the lodge, bunkhouse or cottage authorized by the statute, and therefore the statute does not allow provision of food services to visitors who are not overnight guests. Durdan v. Deschutes County, 43 Or LUBA 248 (2002).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. In adopting ORS 215.275, the legislature struck a particular balance between the siting of utility facilities in EFU zones and the statutory policy to preserve farmland for farm uses. Once that balance is struck, however, the county's task is to apply the terms of the statute. Nothing in ORS 215.275 requires direct consideration of agricultural land preservation policies, external to the statute, in applying its terms, or "balancing" the technical difficulty of alternatives against farmland preservation. Sprint PCS v. Washington County, 42 Or LUBA 512 (2002).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Under ORS 215.275, a utility provider and the local government are not required to consider under ORS 215.275(2) any alternative that requires a different type of facility or that would not meet the essential features of the chosen facility, as defined by the utility provider. However, the utility provider and local government must consider under ORS 215.275(2) an alternative that appears to satisfy the applicant's defined objectives, even if the alternative is a facility in a non-EFU location that requires a different component design than the preferred EFU location. Sprint PCS v. Washington County, 42 Or LUBA 512 (2002).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. In addressing consideration of land costs in comparing "utility facilities that are not substantially similar," ORS 215.275(3) implies that the scope of "reasonable alternatives" that must be considered under ORS 215.275(2) includes non-EFU-zoned sites with conditions that may require at least some design modifications to the facility. However, nothing in the statute requires that a utility provider consider alternatives that cannot satisfy the provider's defined objectives in providing the public service. Sprint PCS v. Washington County, 42 Or LUBA 512 (2002).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A utility provider need not consider and disqualify as "reasonable alternatives" under ORS 215.275(2) alternatives that require reassessment of its fundamental technology or its business plan, or that involve sites or facilities that would fail to provide public services to the desired coverage area. Sprint PCS v. Washington County, 42 Or LUBA 512 (2002).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where a telecommunications provider defines as one of its objectives building its own wireless tower in order to lease space to other providers, any alternative such as collocation on existing telephone poles will not satisfy at least one of the provider's defined objectives, and therefore need not be considered and disqualified as a "reasonable alternative" under ORS 215.275(2). Sprint PCS v. Washington County, 42 Or LUBA 512 (2002).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.275 does not require a utility provider to consider and disqualify as "reasonable alternatives" non-EFU locations on which the proposed utility facility would require a variance from applicable zoning standards. Such lands are either not "reasonable alternatives" or simply not "available" under ORS 215.275(2)(c), as a matter of law. Sprint PCS v. Washington County, 42 Or LUBA 512 (2002).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where it is unclear who would own a proposed "personal use airport" in an EFU zone, and whether the uses that the owner plans to make of the airport would be consistent with the uses allowed under ORS 215.283(2)(h), the owner must be identified and the county's findings must explain why it concludes that the proposed uses fall within the uses allowed with a personal use airport. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Grant County, 42 Or LUBA 9 (2002).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. The fact that wineries are a permitted use in EFU zones under ORS 215.213(1) and 215.283(1) does not mean that wineries are "agricultural uses" permitted in a rural residential zone, where the code definition of "agricultural uses" does not include wineries, and wineries are not among the uses allowed in the rural residential zone. Roth v. Jackson County, 40 Or LUBA 531 (2001).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Absent text or contextual support in the statutes for a narrower interpretation of "community center," a mixed-use building that contains a public library, community meeting space, office space for a local nonprofit community organization and public restrooms may be properly considered a "community center" as that term is used in ORS 215.283(2)(d). Hendrix v. Benton County, 40 Or LUBA 362 (2001).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Collocation of cellular telecommunication facilities is not a reasonable alternative to constructing a new telecommunications tower on EFU-zoned property, where the applicant's siting requirements include constructing a facility where space will be leased to other telecommunication providers and collocation with existing towers will not meet that requirement. Jordan v. Douglas County, 40 Or LUBA 192 (2001).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. In evaluating reasonable alternatives to siting a utility facility necessary for public service in an EFU zone, a county must consider alternative sites identified by opponents that appear to satisfy an applicant's siting requirements and are not located on EFU-zoned land. Jordan v. Douglas County, 40 Or LUBA 192 (2001).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Reasonable alternatives to siting a utility facility necessary for public service in an EFU zone do not include non-EFU sites that the owner will not sell or lease to the utility provider. Jordan v. Douglas County, 40 Or LUBA 192 (2001).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where a permit application identifies ORS 215.275 as a criterion applicable to the county's decision approving a cellular communications tower on EFU-zoned land and proposes findings of compliance with the statute, the issue of compliance with the statute was raised below and the county's failure to address the statute can be assigned as error, notwithstanding petitioners' failure to raise that issue below. Central Klamath County CAT v. Klamath County, 40 Or LUBA 129 (2001).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Evidence that a proposed cellular communications tower on EFU land is within an optimal area for telecommunication coverage is insufficient to allow LUBA to conclude, under ORS 197.835(11)(b), that the record "clearly supports" a finding of compliance with ORS 215.275, which requires that the local government consider reasonable alternatives to siting the tower on EFU-zoned land. Central Klamath County CAT v. Klamath County, 40 Or LUBA 129 (2001).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. The standard a county must apply under ORS 215.275 in considering siting of a public utility facility on EFU land is the same standard mandated by Clackamas Co. Svc. Dist. No. 1 v. Clackamas County, 35 Or LUBA 374 (1998): "whether the facility must be sited in an EFU zone in order to provide the service." The factors specified in ORS 215.275 may be used merely to demonstrate compliance with that ultimate standard. City of Albany v. Linn County, 40 Or LUBA 38 (2001).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. When considering approval of a public utility facility on EFU land, the factors listed in ORS 215.275(2) are intended to be applied not only to the proposed EFU site, but also to the non-EFU sites considered as potential alternatives. City of Albany v. Linn County, 40 Or LUBA 38 (2001).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Justification for siting one component of a utility facility in an EFU zone does not necessarily justify siting other components in that zone. City of Albany v. Linn County, 40 Or LUBA 38 (2001).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Under ORS 215.275, when a county considers siting of a certain type of public utility facility on EFU land, the county need not consider as a "reasonable alternative" a different type of utility facility designed to meet the same need as the proposed facility type. City of Albany v. Linn County, 40 Or LUBA 38 (2001).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. The limitations on activities in public parks imposed by OAR 660-034-0035 do not apply to private parks allowed on agricultural and forest lands under ORS 215.283(2)(c), OAR 660-033-0120 and OAR 660-006-0025(4)(e). Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Unlike Goal 4 and the Goal 4 rule, which limit recreational activities on forest lands to those "appropriate for a forest environment," ORS 215.283(2)(c) and OAR 660-033-0120 contain no express language restricting the scope or intensity of activities allowed in "private parks" on agricultural land. Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Nothing in the context of the term "kennel" as used in ORS 215.283(2)(m) demonstrates that the intended meaning of that term is narrower than the plain dictionary definition, which refers to establishments for the breeding and boarding of dogs. A proposal to breed and propagate dogs for sale is thus a "kennel" subject to county regulation and not a "farm use" allowed outright in an EFU zone. Tri-River Investment Co. v. Clatsop County, 37 Or LUBA 195 (1999).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. The scope of the "solid waste disposal facility" subject to county regulation under ORS 215.283(2)(j) is coextensive with the scope of the facility for which DEQ grants a permit pursuant to ORS 459.245. Where the DEQ permit issued pursuant to ORS 459.245 governs only the septic treatment ponds on the subject property and does not govern the land application of treated wastes on adjacent parcels, the "solid waste disposal facility" subject to compliance with the county's conditional use criteria does not include those adjacent parcels. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 156 (1999).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.283(2)(j) authorizes a county to allow infrastructure such as equipment, facilities or buildings necessary for the operation of a solid waste disposal facility, but does not require a county to consider or approve off-site infrastructure that is not necessary for that facility. An adjacent farm parcel on which treated waste from the facility will be applied as fertilizer and for irrigation purposes is not "necessary" for the operation of the facility, and thus is not subject to the county's regulation under ORS 215.283(2)(j). Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 156 (1999).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Petitioners' argument that the county used a different definition of "accepted farming practices" than the definition provided in ORS 215.203(2)(c) does not provide a basis for reversal or remand, where petitioners do not demonstrate that the county's definition is inconsistent with the statutory definition, or that application of the county's definition supports a different result than would application of the statutory definition. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 156 (1999).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. It is inconsistent with ORS 215.296(1) to arbitrarily limit the scope of analysis to properties within 500 feet of the subject property, where doing so results in failure to consider substantial evidence in the record of significant impacts from the proposed use to accepted farming practices on lands beyond 500 feet. However, where petitioners fail to challenge a finding that there are no significant impacts within 500 feet, and an extrapolation of that finding to lands beyond 500 feet, the county's error does not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Wilbur Residents v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 156 (1999).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A decision that disposal of sewage effluent by applying it to farm land constitutes a "utility facility necessary for public service" within the meaning of ORS 215.283(1)(d) requires the exercise of policy or legal judgment and for that reason the decision does not qualify for the exception to the statutory definition of land use decision provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for certain ministerial decisions. Friends of the Creek v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 562 (1999).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A decision that disposal of sewage effluent by applying it to farm land constitutes a "farm use" within the meaning of ORS 215.203 requires the exercise of policy or legal judgment and for that reason the decision does not qualify for the exception to the statutory definition of "land use decision" provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for certain ministerial decisions. Friends of the Creek v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 562 (1999).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A decision that a proposal to transport treated effluent to an EFU-zoned parcel and apply that effluent to poplar trees constitutes a "farm use" within the meaning of ORS 215.283(1)(d) requires the exercise of policy or legal judgment and for that reason the decision does not qualify for the exception to the statutory definition of land use decision provided by ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A) for certain ministerial decisions. Friends of Clean Living v. Polk County, 36 Or LUBA 544 (1999).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Under OAR 660-033-0130(16) a "utility facility necessary for public service" may only be located in an EFU zone if "it must be situated in the EFU zone in order for the service to be provided." Clackamas Co. Svc. Dist. No. 1 v. Clackamas County, 35 Or LUBA 374 (1998).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. An applicant for approval of a utility facility on EFU-zoned land must demonstrate that constructing the utility on non-EFU-zoned land is not a feasible alternative. Clackamas Co. Svc. Dist. No. 1 v. Clackamas County, 35 Or LUBA 374 (1998).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. It is reasonable and correct to interpret a code provision requiring that "vehicle to be repaired shall be located within an enclosed building" to require that repaired vehicles remain within an enclosed building until they are removed from the property. Gibbons v. Clackamas County, 35 Or LUBA 210 (1998).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. It is reasonable and correct to consider vehicles used to pick up and drop off customers who have vehicles waiting to be repaired as "vehicles associated with" an auto repair home occupation. Gibbons v. Clackamas County, 35 Or LUBA 210 (1998).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Because OAR 660-033-0120 and 660-33-0130 prohibit establishment of a church on high-value farmland, the only procedure available to site a church on high-value farmland is to apply for an exception to the applicable goals under Goal 2. Corp. of Presiding Bishop v. Klamath County, 34 Or LUBA 131 (1998).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Article I, section 20, of the Oregon Constitution does not prohibit a county from limiting park ownership in EFU zones to fee owners because such a classification is not closed to petitioner nor is it based on antecedent personal or social status or characteristics. R/C Pilots Association v. Marion County, 33 Or LUBA 532 (1997).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where the county's interpretation of a local ordinance allows dog kennels that were in existence in 1986 to be established as permitted uses without a showing of compliance with the ORS 215.296 farm impact standards, the county's interpretation violates ORS 215.283(2). Marquam Farms Corp. v. Multnomah County, 32 Or LUBA 240 (1996).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Nothing in ORS chapter 215 requires a conditional use process before a county can impose on the application of a mineral and aggregate overlay zone conditions requiring minor road improvements of the type listed in ORS 215.283(1)(L), which "may be established" in any EFU-zoned area. Mission Bottom Assoc. v. Marion County, 29 Or LUBA 281 (1995).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Although a county may regulate or define "commercial activities that are in conjunction with farm use" more restrictively than required by state law, the county's EFU zones may not allow uses that are not authorized by statutory exclusive farm use zoning provisions. City of Sandy v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 316 (1994).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. The scope and proper construction of the term "commercial activities that are in conjunction with farm use," used in ORS 215.213(2)(c) and 215.283(2)(a), is a question of state law. LUBA is not required to defer to a local government hearings officer's understanding of the scope of that term. City of Sandy v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 316 (1994).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Even if a commercial activity sells primarily to farm uses, it is not a "commercial activity * * * in conjunction with farm use" unless the products and services provided are "essential to the practice of agriculture." City of Sandy v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 316 (1994).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Products and services which could be used by farm uses and farm workers, but are also used by a variety of other nonfarm uses and users, lack a sufficient connection to the "essential practice of agriculture" to be considered "commercial activities * * * in conjunction with farm use." City of Sandy v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 316 (1994).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. OAR 660-33-130(3) precludes approval of churches or public or private schools on agricultural lands "within 3 miles of an urban growth boundary." DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where an EFU zone includes two provisions allowing churches and schools, and one of those provisions includes the OAR 660-33-130(3) restriction against approving churches and schools within three miles of an urban growth boundary but the other provision does not, LUBA will not assume the county will apply the provision that lacks the three-mile limitation as though it includes the three-mile limitation. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. OAR 660-06-025(4)(i) allows power generation facilities on forestlands without a Goal 4 exception, provided such facilities do not remove more than 10 acres of land from resource use. OAR 660-33-130(23) includes similar provisions for power generation facilities on agricultural lands without a Goal 3 exception, but requires that the power generation facilities not remove more than 20 acres of land from resource use. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where an EFU zone allows "golf courses" as a conditional use, it must incorporate the definition of "golf course" in OAR 660-33-130(20) or specify that the rule definition applies. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A county does not err by interpreting a local code provision allowing "commercial or processing activities that are in conjunction with timber and farm uses," in a rural residential zone, in the same way the Oregon Supreme Court has interpreted similar language in the exclusive farm use zoning statutes. Stroupe v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 107 (1994).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. The Oregon Supreme Court's decision in Craven v. Jackson County, 308 Or 281, 779 P2d 1011 (1989), requires that a winery, as a commercial activity in conjunction with farm use, be primarily a buyer and processor of grapes into wine, and only incidentally a retail seller of souvenirs. Stroupe v. Clackamas County, 28 Or LUBA 107 (1994).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where a local code provision implementing ORS 215.283(1)(a) lists schools "including all buildings essential to the operation of a school" as a conditional use in an EFU zone, and the local government fails to interpret and apply the quoted provision in approving a conditional use permit for a school, LUBA must remand the decision for the local government to interpret its code provision in the first instance. Eppich v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 498 (1994).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where the relevant EFU code provisions permit boarding kennels but do not permit training kennels, a boarding kennel that includes up to three hours a day of on-site training may not be approved unless it is established that such on-site training is customary at boarding kennels. Larry Kelly Farms, Inc. v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 401 (1994).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. ORS 215.213(2)(q) through (s) all refer to existing roads. Consequently, a new bridge terminus and new road to connect that bridge to an existing road are not allowed on land designated and zoned for forest uses under OAR 660-06-025(4)(u) and ORS 215.213(2)(q) through (s). Pacific Rivers Council, Inc. v. Lane County, 26 Or LUBA 323 (1993).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Construction of a new bridge terminus or a new road to connect that bridge to an existing road are not uses allowed on forest zoned land under OAR 660-04-025(3)(h) and ORS 215.213(1)(m) to (p). Pacific Rivers Council, Inc. v. Lane County, 26 Or LUBA 323 (1993).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Median turn lanes are prohibited on rural lands under OAR 660-12-065(4), even on rural EFU-zoned lands where they might otherwise be permissible under ORS 215.213(1) or (2). Bicycle Transportation Alliance v. Washington Co., 26 Or LUBA 265 (1993).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. A privately owned and managed paintball game park is potentially allowable in an EFU zone as a "park" under ORS 215.213(2)(e). Spiering v. Yamhill County, 25 Or LUBA 695 (1993).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Under ORS 215.283, construction of new roads and road improvements other than the types identified in ORS 215.283(1)(k) to (n) and (2)(p) to (r) is not allowed in EFU zones. Schrock Farms, Inc. v. Linn County, 25 Or LUBA 187 (1993).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. In the absence of evidence in the record establishing the quantity of products delivered or dollar amount of sales by petitioners' business to farm uses within the local agricultural community, petitioners cannot demonstrate as a matter of law that their proposed use is a commercial activity in conjunction with farm use. Chauncey v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 599 (1992).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Under ORS 215.283(1)(d) and 215.283(2)(L), transmission towers are allowable in EFU zones as "[u]tility facilities necessary for public service." Such towers may be allowed outright under ORS 215.283(1)(d), if they do not exceed 200 feet in height. Such towers may be allowed under ORS 215.283(2)(L), subject to the standards set forth at ORS 215.296(1), if they are over 200 feet in height. Harris v. Polk County, 23 Or LUBA 152 (1992).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. Where a code standard requires a determination that there is a demonstrated need for a proposed golf course "which outweighs the need for, or benefits of, the existing or potential farm or forest use," the county correctly applied that standard by determining even though there is a need for more golf courses in the county, the value of the property for farmland outweighs that need. Barber v. Marion County, 23 Or LUBA 71 (1992).

3.3.9 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Nonfarm Uses – Other Uses. As a matter of law, a cellular communication facility is a "utility facility" which provides "public service." However, the requirement that a cellular communication facility proposed to be located in an exclusive farm use (EFU) zone be a "utility facility necessary for public service" is not satisfied unless the county finds that it is necessary to locate the proposed facility in the EFU zone in order to provide that service. McCaw Communications, Inc. v. Polk County, 20 Or LUBA 456 (1991).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally. A replacement dwelling allowed under ORS 215.213(1)(q) must be located on a lawful unit of land. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 415 (2019).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally. A hearings officer does not err in concluding that a county standard requiring a showing that the proposed "use" will not force a significant change in farm or forest practices or significantly increase costs of farm and forest practices does not apply to a property line adjustment, where the county standard applies to "uses" listed in the county's EFU zone, and property line adjustments are not listed as a use. Louks v. Jackson County, 65 Or LUBA 58 (2012).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally. Where the county criteria that govern division of EFU-zoned land require that parcels be 160 acres or larger and require that divisions of EFU-zoned land comply with applicable comprehensive plan policies, and partition opponents argue that dividing an EFU-zoned parcel into parcels that are smaller than 160 acres violates those criteria and plan policies, the county's decision will be remanded where the county fails to address those arguments. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 55 Or LUBA 330 (2007).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally. Where the county criteria that govern division of EFU-zoned land require that parcels be 160 acres or larger, and the county grants a variance to allow an EFU-zoned parcel to be divided into parcels that are smaller than 160 acres, where LUBA finds the county's justification for the variance is inadequate, the partition approval must be remanded. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 55 Or LUBA 330 (2007).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally. ORS 215.263(7), which provides for the division of land resulting from lien foreclosure, does not authorize a county to "legalize" an existing but illegally created parcel that happens to be subject to foreclosure after its illegal creation. Perkins v. Umatilla County, 45 Or LUBA 445 (2003).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally. Even assuming that a parcel formed without required local government approval has not been "created" in any meaningful sense, the legislature did not intend ORS 215.263(7), which provides for division of land resulting from lien foreclosure, to authorize counties to effectively legalize such parcels for development. Perkins v. Umatilla County, 45 Or LUBA 445 (2003).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally. Where a local land division ordinance mandates that the size of proposed parcels be greater than or equal to the size of the typical commercial agricultural enterprise in the area, a local government misconstrues that ordinance by requiring only that the size of the proposed parcel be similar to the size of other parcels in the area. Wood v. Crook County, 36 Or LUBA 143 (1999).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally The only difference between ORS 215.284(2) and 215.284(3) is that ORS 215.284(2) permits a nonfarm dwelling on an existing parcel, while ORS 215.284(3) permits a nonfarm dwelling on a newly created parcel. Dorvinen v. Crook County, 33 Or LUBA 711 (1997).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally Under OAR 660-05-005 to 660-06-020 and Still v. Marion County, 22 Or LUBA 331 (1991), there are three steps that must be followed to determine if a proposed partition of EFU land is appropriate. First, an area large enough to accurately represent the existing commercial agricultural enterprise must be identified. Second, the existing commercial agricultural enterprises in the area must be identified. Third, it must be determined that the proposed division will result in parcels of sufficient size to "maintain" or "continue" the identified existing commercial agricultural enterprise in the area. Still v. Marion County, 32 Or LUBA 40 (1996).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally The county erred by applying a local ordinance to determine, without further explanation, that the relevant area to be considered for purposes of OAR 660-05-015(6)(c) was limited to the zone in which the subject parcel is located. Still v. Marion County, 32 Or LUBA 40 (1996).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally In determining compliance with a local code standard requiring that partitions of EFU-zoned property result in parcels which are "as large as the typical commercial farm unit in the area," it is appropriate for the local government to examine only EFU-zoned parcels in determining the "typical commercial farm unit in the area." Walker v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 22 (1995).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally Read together, ORS 215.263(7) and 215.284(2)(c) prohibit the further division of an EFU-zoned parcel created before January 1, 1993, on which a nonfarm dwelling has already been approved. Therefore, a county decision approving division of such a parcel is erroneous as a matter of law and must be reversed. Harrell v. Baker County, 28 Or LUBA 260 (1994).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally ORS 215.263 authorizes counties to approve partitions creating new parcels for farm uses and nonfarm uses in EFU zones. However, ORS 215.263 does not authorize subdivision of land zoned for exclusive farm use. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Marion County, 27 Or LUBA 303 (1994).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally To the extent a "woodlot parcel" is something other than a farm parcel, the creation of a "woodlot parcel" in an exclusive farm use zone is not authorized by ORS 215.263, Goal 3 or the Goal 3 rule. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Marion County, 27 Or LUBA 303 (1994).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally The definition of "farm use" in ORS 215.203 is not an independent approval criterion for a lot line adjustment in an exclusive farm use zone. Wissusik v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 94 (1994).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally ORS 215.283(3)(d) must be independently applied to an application for division of EFU-zoned land and requires that the entire EFU-zoned parcel be found to be generally unsuitable for farm use, regardless of whether local regulations impose a more relaxed standard on homestead lot divisions. Geiselman v. Clackamas County, 26 Or LUBA 260 (1993).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally LUBA will defer to a county's interpretation of its EFU zone provisions as not allowing approval of a nonfarm dwelling on a parcel that already has a dwelling, or approval of a partition to allow a nonfarm dwelling, if the parent parcel already has a dwelling. Hahn v. Marion County, 26 Or LUBA 18 (1993).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally A county may reasonably interpret the term "existing commercial farm enterprises" in a code provision establishing a minimum lot size standard for farm dwellings, as not including property that is not presently operated as part of a commercial farm operation. Giesy v. Benton County, 25 Or LUBA 493 (1993).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally Where the county code requires the "farm unit" on which a farm dwelling is proposed to be located to be consistent with the size of existing commercial farm enterprises in the area, and also recognizes that commercial farms may be composed of several separate management units, it is reasonable for the county to interpret "farm unit" to include all land that is part of a farm operation, including land in different locations. Giesy v. Benton County, 25 Or LUBA 493 (1993).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally Where a zoning district adopted to implement both Goal 3 and Goal 4 includes the generally unsuitable land standard that is required under statutory exclusive farm use zoning provisions, the generally unsuitable standard must be applied to the entire parent parcel and may not be limited in its application to a proposed nonforest parcel. DLCD v. Curry County, 24 Or LUBA 200 (1992).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally In applying a local code standard requiring that newly created nonfarm and nonforest parcels not materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area, a local government must define the relevant area and may not focus exclusively on a single rural residential area near the subject property and ignore the potential impacts on nearby forestlands. DLCD v. Curry County, 24 Or LUBA 200 (1992).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally Where a local code standard requires that creation of new nonfarm and nonforest parcels be consistent with comprehensive plan forest and agriculture policies, the local government's findings must demonstrate compliance with all such plan policies or explain why they do not apply. DLCD v. Curry County, 24 Or LUBA 200 (1992).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally ORS 215.263(4) specifically governs the creation of new lots or parcels in an EFU zone for nonfarm dwellings, including the creation of a lot or parcel for a preexisting nonfarm dwelling. DLCD v. Columbia County, 24 Or LUBA 32 (1992).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally ORS 215.236 must be complied with before a land division for a nonfarm dwelling in an EFU zone may be approved, regardless of whether the dwelling already exists. DLCD v. Columbia County, 24 Or LUBA 32 (1992).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally In assuring that partitions creating new farm parcels within exclusive farm use zones comply with the requirements of OAR 660-05-015 and 660-05-020 that the parcels be of sufficient size "to maintain and continue the existing commercial agricultural enterprise in the area," counties may perform the required analysis legislatively or on a case-by-case basis. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 23 Or LUBA 351 (1992).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally A study which divides a county into four large subareas, and describes the "sizes and other characteristics" of commercial agricultural enterprises in the relevant areas, provides adequate justification for the area selected, under OAR 660-05-015(6)(c), to determine the parcel size sufficient to "continue the existing commercial agricultural enterprise in the area." DLCD v. Yamhill County, 23 Or LUBA 351 (1992).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally Where a county identifies subareas of the county for purposes of identifying and analyzing the existing commercial agricultural enterprise within those subareas, the county may limit the analyses required by OAR 660-05-015 and 660-05-020 to the identified subareas. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 23 Or LUBA 351 (1992).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally A local government may not distinguish between commercial and noncommercial farms in an area, as required by OAR 660-05-015(6), based on gross farm income only. All of the factors specified in OAR 660-05-015(6)(b) must be considered. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 23 Or LUBA 351 (1992).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally ORS 215.263(2) establishes minimum standards for approving divisions of land in EFU zones. ORS 215.263(2) does not require findings that the existing parcel is in farm use. Rather, ORS 215.263(2) requires that proposals to divide EFU-zoned land for farm use must establish that the resultant parcels either (1) will be appropriate for the continuation of the existing commercial agricultural enterprises in the area, or (2) will be no less than the acknowledged minimum lot size for the area. Fennell v. Deschutes County, 23 Or LUBA 178 (1992).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally Where a local government changes the zoning of agricultural land from one acknowledged EFU zone to another, Goal 3 requires that it demonstrate that the minimum lot size imposed by the new EFU zone is appropriate for the continuation of the existing commercial agricultural enterprise in the area. Dobson v. Polk County, 22 Or LUBA 701 (1992).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally ORS 215.243(2), relating to the preservation of agricultural land in large blocks, does not prohibit all divisions of agricultural land. Dobson v. Polk County, 22 Or LUBA 701 (1992).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally The legislative policy of ORS 215.243(2) to preserve agricultural land in large blocks is not correctly interpreted to preclude any division of an existing farm parcel. Still v. Marion County, 22 Or LUBA 331 (1991).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally The division of existing farm parcels into two or more smaller parcels is only appropriate where the resulting parcels are appropriate for the continuation of the existing commercial agricultural enterprise in the area. Still v. Marion County, 22 Or LUBA 331 (1991).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally OAR 660-05-015 and 660-05-020 establish three steps that must be followed to divide an EFU-zoned farm parcel. First, an area large enough to accurately represent the existing commercial agricultural enterprise must be identified. Second, the existing commercial agricultural enterprises in the area must be identified. Third, it must be determined that the proposed division will result in parcels of sufficient size to "maintain" or "continue" the identified existing commercial agricultural enterprise in the area. Still v. Marion County, 22 Or LUBA 331 (1991).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally Where an EFU-zoned area includes different commercial agricultural enterprises, with differing land area requirements, a county may not automatically approve divisions of farm parcels in that area into parcels the size of the smallest existing commercial agricultural enterprise. The county may, however, adopt findings explaining why, in the particular circumstances presented, such a proposed division will result in parcels of sufficient size to "maintain" and "continue" the existing commercial agricultural enterprise in the area. Still v. Marion County, 22 Or LUBA 331 (1991).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally An acknowledged zoning ordinance provision concerning division of EFU-zoned farm parcels providing that "evaluation shall include the subject property and commercial agricultural enterprises located in the same zone within one-half mile of the subject property" is properly interpreted as identifying the minimum area to be evaluated, and areas beyond a one-half-mile radius may have to be evaluated to establish the nature of the existing commercial agricultural enterprise in the area. Still v. Marion County, 22 Or LUBA 331 (1991).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally Goal 3 requires that in EFU zones the minimum lot size "shall be appropriate for the continuation of the existing commercial agricultural enterprise in the area." Where a local government changes the zoning of agricultural land from one acknowledged EFU zone to another, it must demonstrate that the minimum lot size imposed by the new EFU zone is appropriate for the continuation of the existing commercial agricultural enterprise in the area. DLCD v. Polk County, 21 Or LUBA 463 (1991).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally In reviewing a combined request for approval of a nonfarm dwelling and a partition to create a nonfarm parcel, a county must first apply applicable approval standards, including the "general unsuitability" standard, to the request for approval of the nonfarm dwelling. Only after the nonfarm dwelling is approved may the county consider the request to create a new nonfarm parcel for the dwelling. Smith v. Clackamas County, 19 Or LUBA 171 (1990).

3.4.1 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Generally The "general unsuitability" standard applies to the entire parent parcel, not just to the portion of the parent parcel or the new nonfarm parcel on which a nonfarm dwelling is to be located. Smith v. Clackamas County, 19 Or LUBA 171 (1990).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Although the county's approval of the boundary line adjustment for the siting of a nonfarm dwelling could effectively undercut the factual predicate for compliance with a statutory-based standard pursuant to ORS 215.263(4) designed to minimize loss of productive resource lands in exclusive farm use zones to non-resource uses, where petitioner has not cited anything in the county ordinance that constitutes an approval standard for a post-partition boundary line adjustment, even if the adjustment undercuts a factual predicate for the partition approval, this argument provides no basis for reversal or remand. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 11 (2018).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Where the county found a boundary line adjustment application is in compliance with a county ordinance that requires that the "resulting parcel sizes do not change the existing land use" because before and after the boundary line adjustment there was one parcel conforming and one parcel non-conforming in size, LUBA will remand the decision. On remand, the county shall consider petitioners' argument and adopt any necessary findings regarding petitioners' argument that the ordinance could be interpreted to require the county to consider whether the "existing land use pattern" is changed when the subject parcel—that was previously deemed "generally unsuitable" for farm use due to its size and soil composition—qualifies for a nonfarm dwelling as a result of the boundary line adjustment because the parcel was expanded to include agricultural soils in a manner that possibly renders the resulting parcel suitable for farm use. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 11 (2018).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Where four pre-1993 parcels are combined through property line adjustments to meet a local minimum parcel size standard, under OAR 660-033-0020(4) the date the property line adjustments created the new combined parcel is the new "date of creation." Where that new date of creation post-dates 1993, a county decision approving a nonfarm dwelling on the combined parcel does not comply with the ORS 215.284(2)(c) requirement that a nonfarm dwelling must "be sited on a lot or parcel created before January 1, 1993." Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 75 Or LUBA 186 (2017).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. ORS 215.780(1)(a) expressly authorizes counties to adopt an 80-acre minimum parcel size in the EFU zone, and ORS 215.263(2)(b) expressly authorizes counties to approve partitions of EFU-zoned land if the resulting parcels "are not smaller than the minimum size established under ORS 215.780." Additional justification for adopting the statutorily authorized 80-acre minimum parcel size is not required by Goal 3, ORS 215.243 and 215.700. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. It is not error for a county to amend its code to recognize that under ORS 215.780(2)(a), a minimum parcel size of less than 80 acres may be authorized by LCDC in the future pursuant to OAR 660-033-0100(2) through (9), if the county is able to justify such smaller minimum parcel sizes in the future. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. ORS 215.263 expressly authorizes a number of different kinds of land divisions of EFU-zoned land for development of non-farm uses on parcels that are smaller than the minimum parcel size for land divisions for new farm parcels. A county may include such authorization in its EFU zone and Goal 3, ORS 215.243 and 215.700 do not require that a county adopt findings to justify its decision to include such statutory authorizations. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. A county is not obligated to explain its choice to adopt current statutory standards for land divisions in its EFU zone in place of the previously adopted county standards for such land divisions. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Where the county criteria that govern division of EFU-zoned land require that parcels be 160 acres or larger and require that divisions of EFU-zoned land comply with applicable comprehensive plan policies, and partition opponents argue that dividing an EFU-zoned parcel into parcels that are smaller than 160 acres violates those criteria and plan policies, the county's decision will be remanded where the county fails to address those arguments. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 55 Or LUBA 330 (2007).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Where the county criteria that govern division of EFU-zoned land require that parcels be 160 acres or larger, and the county grants a variance to allow an EFU-zoned parcel to be divided into parcels that are smaller than 160 acres, where LUBA finds the county's justification for the variance is inadequate, the partition approval must be remanded. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 55 Or LUBA 330 (2007).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. ORS 215.780(2) authorizes counties to seek Land Conservation and Development Commission approval to impose a smaller minimum lot and parcel size in their exclusive farm use zone than would otherwise be required by ORS 215.780(1). Thompson v. Umatilla County, 54 Or LUBA 531 (2007).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. No statute or administrative rule sets out procedures for counties to seek approval from the Land Conservation and Development Commission to impose smaller minimum lot and parcel sizes than would otherwise be required by ORS 215.780(1). Thompson v. Umatilla County, 54 Or LUBA 531 (2007).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. As construed in Dorvinen v. Crook County, 153 Or App 391, 957 P2d 180 (1998), ORS 215.780(1) applies the statutory minimum lot or parcel size to all parcels resulting from a partition for nonfarm dwellings, including the parcel on which the nonfarm dwelling will be sited. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 39 Or LUBA 156 (2000).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. LUBA will remand rather than reverse a decision approving partitions in conjunction with a nonfarm dwelling, notwithstanding that the resulting partitions violate the minimum parcel size at ORS 215.780(1), where the decision expressly preserves an issue regarding whether the county's 20-acre minimum parcel size was adopted under one of the exceptions to ORS 215.780(1), and thus LUBA cannot determine whether the approval is prohibited as a matter of law. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Co., 37 Or LUBA 215 (1999).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Under ORS 215.284(3) a partition of EFU-zoned land must leave a remainder parcel that meets the applicable minimum parcel size. Lyle v. Wheeler County, 33 Or LUBA 746 (1997).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. A new nonfarm parcel is not subject to minimum parcel size under ORS 215.780 where the new nonfarm parcel is created from a parent parcel under ORS 215.263(4) and 215.283(3). Dorvinen v. Crook County, 33 Or LUBA 711 (1997).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Taken together, ORS 215.263(2) and legislative history indicate that the legislature intended ORS 215.284(3) to at least mean that where a remaining parcel suitable for farm use is created from a partition under ORS 215.284(3), the remaining farm parcel must meet the minimum parcel size. Dorvinen v. Crook County, 33 Or LUBA 711 (1997).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Consistent with the statutory scheme and policy of ORS 215.243, ORS 215.284(3) requires that a partition must leave a remainder parcel that meets the minimum parcel size, whether or not the remainder parcel is suitable for farm use. Dorvinen v. Crook County, 33 Or LUBA 711 (1997).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Where the county zoning ordinance establishes an array of minimum lot or parcel sizes on EFU land, depending on the proposed commodity or on circumstances that can only be ascertained through a case-by-case review, the ordinance does not satisfy ORS 215.780(3); and the county must either adopt the minimum lot size stated in ORS 215.780(1)(a) or demonstrate satisfaction of the criteria stated in ORS 215.780(2). DLCD v. Polk County, 31 Or LUBA 69 (1996).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Unless approval is given by LCDC under ORS 215.780(2) for a smaller minimum lot size or sizes, ORS 215.780(1) requires a county to apply minimum lot sizes of 80 acres (designated forestland and non-range farmland) or 160 acres (designated rangeland) in its farm and forest zones. DLCD v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 459 (1994).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Where a county's EFU zone minimum lot size standard was subject to periodic review by LCDC under the old periodic review provisions of ORS 197.640 to 197.649 (1989), not under the new periodic review provisions of ORS 197.628 to 197.636, the county may not apply a minimum lot size less than that required by ORS 215.780(1) to EFU-zoned land without LCDC approval pursuant to ORS 215.780(2). DLCD v. Wallowa County, 28 Or LUBA 452 (1994).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. ORS 215.780, Goal 3 and OAR 660-33-100 require a county to adopt one or more minimum parcel sizes of specific acreages for exclusive farm use zone(s), and do not allow determinations of minimum parcel sizes in EFU zones through the case-by-case application of performance standards. DLCD v. Wallowa County, 28 Or LUBA 452 (1994).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. The 1993 legislature adopted specific minimum lot and parcel sizes. For forestland and farmland that is not designated rangeland, the minimum lot or parcel size is 80 acres. ORS 215.780(1)(a) and (c). For land zoned for exclusive farm use and designated as rangeland, the minimum lot or parcel size is 160 acres. ORS 215.780(1)(b). DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

3.4.2 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. The ORS 215.780(2) provisions that allow counties to adopt a minimum lot size smaller than would otherwise be required for farmland and forestland by ORS 215.780(1), require that a county obtain LCDC approval for such smaller lot sizes before adopting such smaller lot sizes. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Statutory Policy. While a local government's authority to regulate land use and development is generally broad under Oregon law, a local government's authority to regulate land use on exclusive farm use (EFU)-zoned land is governed by state law. Land that is planned and zoned for exclusive farm use must be used exclusively for defined farm uses or limited listed exceptions provided by state law. Production of marijuana is an outright permitted farm use on land zoned EFU. While state law controls permitted uses on farm land and the regulation of marijuana production, local governments may adopt reasonable "time, place, and manner" regulations for marijuana production. MJAI Oregon 5, LLC v. Linn County, 78 Or LUBA 366 (2018).

3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Statutory Policy. A county's decision is "outside the range of discretion allowed the local government under its comprehensive plan and implementing ordinances," pursuant to ORS 197.835(10)(a)(A), where petitioner's application for marijuana production meets a county's clear and objective standards for marijuana production on EFU-zoned land, no evidence was submitted that contradicted petitioner's assertion that it could and would meet the county's marijuana production standards, and the county relied upon factors and considerations in denying petitioner's application that are not contained in the applicable approval criteria. Accordingly, the proper disposition of the county's denial is reversal with an order instructing the county to grant approval of the application. MJAI Oregon 5, LLC v. Linn County, 78 Or LUBA 366 (2018).

3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Statutory Policy. Interpreting ORS 215.283(2)(L), which authorizes a temporary hardship dwelling "in conjunction with" an existing dwelling, to require that the temporary hardship dwelling be sited in close proximity to the existing dwelling, so as to minimize the need for new supporting residential infrastructure, is consistent with the overriding legislative policy of preventing "agricultural land from being diverted to non-agricultural use." Holmberg v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 109 (2018).

3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Statutory Policy. In adopting ORS 215.275, the legislature struck a particular balance between the siting of utility facilities in EFU zones and the statutory policy to preserve farmland for farm uses. Once that balance is struck, however, the county's task is to apply the terms of the statute. Nothing in ORS 215.275 requires direct consideration of agricultural land preservation policies, external to the statute, in applying its terms, or "balancing" the technical difficulty of alternatives against farmland preservation. Sprint PCS v. Washington County, 42 Or LUBA 512 (2002).

3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Statutory Policy. The legislative intent of ORS 215.705 lot-of-record provisions is to allow property owners who acquired property prior to 1985 to subsequently transfer the lot to designated family members or entities without losing the right to build a dwelling on that property. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 33 Or LUBA 362 (1997).

3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Statutory Policy. Even if a proposed use does not significantly interfere with accepted farming practices on adjacent agricultural lands or materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area, it may nevertheless be incompatible with farm uses and inconsistent with the intent and purpose of ORS 215.243. DLCD v. Crook County, 26 Or LUBA 478 (1994).

3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Statutory Policy. ORS 215.243(2), relating to the preservation of agricultural land in large blocks, does not prohibit all divisions of agricultural land. Dobson v. Polk County, 22 Or LUBA 701 (1992).

3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Statutory Policy. The legislative policy of ORS 215.243(2) to preserve agricultural land in large blocks is not correctly interpreted to preclude any division of an existing farm parcel. Still v. Marion County, 22 Or LUBA 331 (1991).

3.5 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Statutory Policy. County interpretation of its plan agricultural land policy to allow it to balance the applicant's need for additional acreage for a golf course, against the county policy favoring retention of EFU-zoned land in large blocks for agricultural use, is a correct interpretation of the county policy. Douglas v. Multnomah County, 18 Or LUBA 607 (1990).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Any permits for residential development on resource land that were issued prior to the effective date of HB 2106 (2019) are eligible for the five one-year extensions provided in ORS 215.417(2) (2019) only if, on the effective date of that legislation, those permits were still in the initial four-year period of validity or the one two-year extension period provided in ORS 215.417 (2017). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 81 Or LUBA 279 (2020).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Under a local code definition of "same ownership" for purposes of applying the local government's lot of record standards, a life estate is a "greater than possessory interest" where, in addition to possession, the life estate holder has the right alienate or encumber the property and to retain rents, profits, and other income generated by the property, and where the life estate is not, by the terms of the conveyance or reservation, qualified and limited to only a possessory interest. Ellis v. Multnomah County, 81 Or LUBA 84 (2020).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A lot or parcel is not ineligible for a lot of record dwelling under ORS 215.705(1)(a) because it was transferred from a pre-1985 owner to a qualifying relative or business entity under ORS 215.705(6) by deed when the pre-1985 owner was still alive, i.e., an inter vivos transfer, rather than by devise or intestate succession after their death. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 75 (2020).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A family trust that the record shows was formed for the purpose of managing and eventually disposing of a pre-1985 owner's assets, including real estate, to family members may qualify as a "business entity owned by any one or combination of these family members," within the meaning of ORS 215.705(6), and, therefore, an "owner" of a lot or parcel, within the meaning of ORS 215.705(1)(a), for purposes of establishing a lot of record dwelling. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 75 (2020).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A lot or parcel is not ineligible for a lot of record dwelling under ORS 215.705(1)(a) because it was transferred from a pre-1985 owner first to a family trust and then to a qualifying relative under ORS 215.705(6) as part of an estate plan; nothing in ORS 215.705(1)(a) limits the number of transfers of an otherwise qualifying parcel to a single transfer. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 75 (2020).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Two parcels are not "under the same ownership" and, therefore, not a "tract," within the meaning of ORS 215.010(2), where one is owned by a person individually and the other is owned by a trust, with the same person serving as trustee. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 75 (2020).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A parcel "include[s] a dwelling," making other parcels in the same tract ineligible for a lot of record dwelling under ORS 215.705(1)(b), where a lot of record dwelling has been approved on that parcel, even if construction of it has not yet started. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 81 Or LUBA 75 (2020).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A marginal lands county is not required to include in its code a requirement to consider the cumulative impacts from existing or potential lot-of-record dwellings in approving dwellings under OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D)(ii) and (iii). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A lot of record dwelling approval under ORS 215.705(1) does not have the automatic effect of consolidating parcels within the tract in which the dwelling is approved; such consolidation must occur via a formal process that has the legal effect of vacating the interior property lines. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 65 Or LUBA 246 (2012).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Some of the ORS 215.705(1) standards to approve a lot of record dwelling, such as the requirement that the parcel be "lawfully created," that the dwelling comply with applicable comprehensive plan provisions, and that the dwelling be consistent with big-game habitat limitations on residential density, require the exercise of policy or legal judgment, and therefore a decision approving or denying a lot of record dwelling under such standards is a land use decision as defined at ORS 197.015(10)(a), and does not fall within the exception for ministerial decisions at ORS 197.015(10)(b)(A). Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Approval of a lot of record dwelling under the standards at ORS 215.705(1) constitutes the "discretionary approval of a proposed development of land" and is thus a "permit" decision subject to ORS 215.416, a conclusion made even clearer under ORS 215.417, which specifically describes dwellings provided under a number of statutes, including ORS 215.705(1), as permits approved under ORS 215.416. Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. ORS 215.705(7) provides that when a local government approves an application for a dwelling under ORS 215.705, including a lot of record dwelling by a qualifying owner under ORS 215.705(1)(a), the "application may be transferred" to any other person after the effective date of the land use decision." The legislature was presumably aware that such decisions could be appealed and potentially remanded following a transfer to a person who does not qualify for a lot of record dwelling. In such circumstances, the subsequent purchaser can pursue the application on remand as if the property were still owned by the qualifying owner for purposes of ORS 215.705(1)(a). Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A hearings officer correctly determines that adjoining parcels do not constitute a "tract" where the parcels are not in the same ownership, and the definition of "owner" found in ORS 215.705 is inapposite to that determination. Craven v. Jackson County, 135 Or App 250, 253-4, 898 P2d 809 (1995). Lenox v. Jackson County, 55 Or LUBA 538 (2008).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Under local legislation that was adopted to implement lot of record provisions at ORS 215.705, once a dwelling is authorized on one of two parcels that makes up a tract in single ownership, a second dwelling may not be approved on the remaining parcel in the tract. Randall v. Klamath County, 48 Or LUBA 321 (2004).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. For land to constitute "high-value farmland" under OAR 660-033-0020(8)(d), the land must be (1) west of the Coast Range summit, (2) used in conjunction with a dairy operation on January 1, 1993, and (3) part of a "tract," one or more contiguous parcels in the same ownership, composed predominantly of listed soils. Separately owned parcels are not part of the same "tract" for purposes of OAR 660-033-0020(8)(d), even if those parcels were used together as part of a dairy operation on January 1, 1993. Tallman v. Clatsop County, 47 Or LUBA 240 (2004).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Any minimum gross farm income level that a county may establish in approving a lot of record dwelling on EFU-zoned high-value farmland must be consistent with the income generated by the county's noncommercial farms, which are protected under Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands) and the EFU zoning statutes. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A county errs in relying on OAR 660-033-0135, which establishes standards to ensure that farms are large enough and generate sufficient income to warrant an assumption that a dwelling on the farm is properly viewed as "customarily provided in conjunction with farm use" within the meaning of ORS 215.283(1)(f), to also set a gross annual income threshold for determining whether farm use on high-value farmland is "impracticable" for purposes of siting a lot of record dwelling under ORS 215.705(2)(a)(C)(i). Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. The minimum gross income levels the legislature established at ORS 308A.071(2)(a) for non-EFU-zoned parcels to qualify for special assessment are the best available indication of the level of gross income that the legislature believes demonstrates practicable farm use. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. In applying ORS 215.705(2)(a)(C)(i) to determine whether farm use of an EFU-zoned parcel with high-value soils is "impracticable," evidence that the property and nearby properties have generated limited farm income in the past is relevant evidence, but it is not determinative. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Under ORS 215.705(2)(a)(C)(i), a property's impracticability for farm use must be "due to extraordinary circumstances inherent in the land or its physical setting that do not apply generally to other land in the vicinity." A decision that does not demonstrate that cited factors are not shared by neighboring properties and does not explain why the cited factors make farm use impracticable must be remanded. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 627 (2001).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Seven lot of record dwellings on lots that range in size from as small as two acres to as large as eight acres are properly viewed as rural land uses. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 39 Or LUBA 478 (2001).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Findings that rely on factors such as soil acidity, poor drainage, traffic conflicts, and the availability of irrigation that are conditions common to the area are inadequate to explain why farming cannot practicably be managed on a parcel due to "extraordinary circumstances" that do not generally apply to other lands in the vicinity, as required by ORS 215.705(2). Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 844 (2000).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A county's findings of compliance with the stability standard are inadequate, where the county fails to explain or justify a study area that places the subject property at the margin of the identified study area, and excludes from the study large EFU-zoned parcels adjacent to the subject property. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 844 (2000).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A county's findings under the stability standard are inadequate, where the county fails to identify any uses on most of the EFU-zoned parcels within the study area, but merely assumes that the dominant land use in the area is residential because of the small size of most parcels and the fact that most dwellings in the area predated zoning restrictions. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 844 (2000).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A county's finding that a proposed lot of record dwelling on high-value soils will not materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern is inadequate, where the county considers only the stability of the nonfarm land uses in the area, and fails to consider whether the proposed dwelling will encourage additional nonfarm development in a manner that destabilizes remaining farm uses. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 844 (2000).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. LCDC has authority to adopt administrative rules that limit types of nonfarm uses otherwise allowed by statute. Therefore, OAR 660-033-0020(4), which establishes November 4, 1993, as the date a county must use for determining whether a dwelling exists on a tract for purposes of lot-of-record dwelling, is valid, notwithstanding that it prohibits some lot-of-record dwellings otherwise allowed by ORS 215.710. Bruggere v. Clackamas County, 37 Or LUBA 571 (2000).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Two separate parcels do not form a "tract," as that term is defined by ORS 215.010(2), where a husband and a wife own one parcel jointly and the second parcel is owned by the husband only. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 37 Or LUBA 280 (1999).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. In addressing a code criterion requiring a finding that a parcel "cannot practicably be managed for farm use," a hearings officer's occasional use of the word "unsuitable" does not mean the hearings officer applied the wrong standard. Jorgensen v. Clackamas County, 34 Or LUBA 710 (1998).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A parcel that qualifies as "high-value farmland" under the criteria established by statute is not disqualified as "high value farmland" because it is subject to "frost threat." DLCD v. Umatilla County, 34 Or LUBA 703 (1998).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Findings that a parcel "cannot practically be managed for farm use due to extraordinary circumstances" under ORS 215.705(a)(C)(i) are inadequate where the parcel has been used for an apple orchard for the past 18 years and the findings simply show that allowing a dwelling on the property would facilitate on-site management of the orchard. DLCD v. Umatilla County, 34 Or LUBA 703 (1998).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A county's findings addressing the requirement of ORS 215.705(a)(C)(iii) that a dwelling not "materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area" must limit the analysis to EFU-zoned lands. Where LUBA cannot determine whether the analysis was so limited, the decision will be remanded. DLCD v. Umatilla County, 34 Or LUBA 703 (1998).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A parcel that was illegally created in 1974 and then legalized by an "after-the-fact" decision in 1989 is not "lawfully created" under ORS 215.705(1), which requires that the parcel be "lawfully created * * * [p]rior to January 1, 1985." Skrepetos v. Douglas County, 33 Or LUBA 502 (1997).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. The legislative intent of ORS 215.705 lot-of-record provisions is to allow property owners who acquired property prior to 1985 to subsequently transfer the lot to designated family members or entities without losing the right to build a dwelling on that property. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 33 Or LUBA 362 (1997).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. An inter vivos transfer of a parcel from the present owner who held the property prior to January 1, 1985, to a family member as defined in ORS 215.705(6) will preserve the expectation of the right to site a lot of record dwelling on the parcel as provided under ORS 215.705(1)(a). DLCD v. Yamhill County, 33 Or LUBA 362 (1997).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. When a unit of land is divided between two zones, the local government must apply the lot-of-record standards appropriate to the predominant use of that unit. Phillips v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 308 (1997).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. The requirement stated in ORS 215.705(1)(b) that the tract on which a proposed lot-of-record dwelling is to be sited not include a dwelling, and the consolidation requirement in ORS 215.705(1)(g) operate to prohibit approval of a lot-of-record dwelling unless (1) the tract of which the lot is a part contains no dwellings; and (2) all lots within the tract are consolidated at the time of approval. DeBates v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 276 (1997).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. ORS 215.705 precisely states comprehensive criteria that govern when a lot-of-record dwelling may be allowed. Under ORS

183.400 and ORS 215.304(3), OAR 660-33-020(4) cannot be interpreted to prohibit what the statute otherwise allows. DeBates v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 276 (1997).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Because ORS 215.705 mentions only the date of creation or existence of a lot or parcel, the reconfiguration of a tract containing the lot or parcel has no significance in determining when, for purposes of qualifying for a lot-of-record dwelling, the lot or parcel was created. DeBates v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 276 (1997).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. ORS 215.705 cannot be interpreted or supplemented by LCDC rule to provide that the reconfiguration of a tract through the sale of one or more lots extinguishes the right to build a dwelling on at least one of the lots of record within the original tract. DeBates v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 276 (1997).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A county that wishes to limit lot-of-record dwellings to protect agricultural lands cannot rely on policies and regulations implementing ORS 215.283(3)(d), which protects agricultural land, but must legislatively adopt new policies and regulations pursuant to ORS 215.705(5). However, policies and regulations with an apparent purpose other than to protect agricultural land are not superseded by ORS 215.705. DeBates v. Yamhill County, 32 Or LUBA 276 (1997).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A lot-of-record dwelling is not precluded by ORS 215.705 where an applicant voluntarily relinquishes irrigation rights to one acre of his property in order to remove it from the definition of "high-value farmland" under ORS 215.710(1). Younger v. Jackson County, 32 Or LUBA 177 (1996).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Lot-of-record provisions should be interpreted as limited in their application to property owners who had a reasonable expectation in 1985 of a right to build a home. Walz v. Polk County, 31 Or LUBA 363 (1996).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. The term "present owner," as it is used in ORS 215.705(1)(a), refers to a land sale contract vendee, not a land sale contract vendor. Walz v. Polk County, 31 Or LUBA 363 (1996).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. The word "owner," as it is used in ORS 215.705, is not defined, and when applied to land generally, has no fixed and inflexible meaning. Walz v. Polk County, 31 Or LUBA 363 (1996).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A county may rely on the current ownership of the subject and contiguous parcels in determining whether a proposed "lot of record" dwelling is located on a "tract" that does not include a dwelling, as required by ORS 215.705(1)(b). Craven v. Jackson County, 29 Or LUBA 125 (1995).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. The expansive definition of "owner" in ORS 215.705(6) explicitly applies only to ORS 215.705(1)(a), which refers to when the subject lot or parcel "was acquired by the present owner." The ORS 215.705(6) definition of "owner" does not apply to the term "tract," as used in ORS 215.705(1)(b), or to the term "ownership," as used in the ORS 215.010(2) definition of "tract." Craven v. Jackson County, 29 Or LUBA 125 (1995).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Under ORS 197.746(3) and appellate court decisions, the provisions of ORS 215.705 are directly applicable to a county decision to approve a "lot of record" dwelling in an exclusive farm use zone, and the county cannot apply comprehensive plan or code criteria that are inconsistent with, or less restrictive than, the applicable statutory standards. Blondeau v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 115 (1995).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. The "lot of record" dwelling provisions of ORS 215.705 provide an alternative to the nonfarm dwelling provisions of ORS 215.284, which do not allow dwellings on lots or parcels that are not composed of predominantly Class IV to VIII soils. Blondeau v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 115 (1995).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. ORS 215.705(1)(c) does not allow a county to deny a "lot of record" dwelling because it fails to comply with code provisions previously adopted to implement ORS 215.283(3) (1991) or with comprehensive plan provisions generally requiring protection of agricultural land. Blondeau v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 115 (1995).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. A code provision allowing establishment of a dwelling on certain "lots of record," if the "lot or parcel" does not already have a dwelling, is impermissibly less strict than ORS 215.705(1)(b), which requires that the "tract" not have a dwelling. ORS 215.010(2) defines "tract" as "one or more contiguous lots or parcels under the same ownership." DLCD v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 459 (1994).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. With regard to siting a lot of record dwelling on high-value farmland, a county does not have authority to require that an Oregon Department of Agriculture hearings officer make determinations other than those specified in ORS 215.705(2)(c). DLCD v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 459 (1994).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. Although a code definition of "high-value farmland," unlike the definition in OAR 660-33-020(8), is prefaced by the phrase "for the purpose of locating a limited lot of record dwelling on farmland," that the code definition is specifically incorporated into the approval standards for other types of dwellings on high-value farmland, as required by LCDC rule, is sufficient to establish that the definition must be applied in these other circumstances as well. DLCD v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 459 (1994).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. ORS 215.705(1)(a) does not allow lot-of-record dwellings on EFU-zoned lots or parcels that were created after January 1, 1985, even if the parent lot or parcel was acquired prior to January 1, 1985. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

3.6 EFU Statute/Ordinances – Lot of Record Dwellings. ORS 215.705(1)(a) does not allow lot-of-record dwellings on EFU-zoned lots or parcels that were illegally created before January 1, 1985, even if action was taken after January 1, 1985 to legalize the illegally created lots or parcels. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Under ORS 197.175(2)(d), after acknowledgement, a local government reviews an application for planned unit development approval to determine whether the application complies with its land use regulations and comprehensive plan, and may not review the application for compliance with the statewide planning goals. Talbott v. City of Happy Valley, 74 Or LUBA 143 (2016).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where a local government adopts an ordinance that repeals and readopts, verbatim, 34 previously adopted and acknowledged land use ordinances, solely to correct a problem with the publication notice for the readopted ordinances, the repeal and readoption of the 34 ordinances does not accomplish any "change" or amendment to the acknowledged ordinances that would require that the re-adoption be processed as a post-acknowledgment plan amendment under ORS 197.610 et seq. Repeal and verbatim readoption of a previously acknowledged ordinance does not change the acknowledged status of the ordinance, such that pursuant to ORS 197.175(2)(e) the statewide planning goals then apply directly to decisions made under the readopted ordinance. Squier v. Multnomah County, 71 Or LUBA 98 (2015).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. The Oregon Supreme Court decision in 1000 Friends of Oregon v. LCDC (Curry County), 301 Or 447 (1986), did not obligate local governments to apply Goal 14 as interpreted directly to land use decisions made under acknowledged land use regulations, although amendments to those regulations must be consistent with Goal 14 as interpreted by Curry County. Where a county's regulations governing floating homes were adopted and acknowledged to comply with Goal 14 in 1982, and have not been amended since, those regulations remain acknowledged to comply with Goal 14, and thus Goal 14 would not apply directly to a decision to approve floating homes under that acknowledged ordinance. Squier v. Multnomah County, 71 Or LUBA 98 (2015).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where a county fails to implement a new administrative rule, pursuant to ORS 197.646(3) the rule applies directly to county land use decisions until the county amends its code to implement the rule. However, once the county implements the Goal 4 rule at OAR 660-006-0025 by adopting the substance of the rule into its land use code, ORS 197.646(3) does not operate to apply the rule directly to nonforest uses the county approves in a forest zone. White v. Lane County, 68 Or LUBA 423 (2013).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. To preserve the issue of whether the statewide planning goals apply to a rezoning decision and thus whether notice of hearing must be provided to DLCD under ORS 197.610, the issue must be raised during the proceedings below to avoid waiver under ORS 197.763(1) and, additionally, specified in the local notice of appeal to avoid waiver under the exhaustion/waiver principle in Miles v. City of Florence, 190 Or App 500 (2003). Conte v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 326 (2012).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. ORS 197.610(2) provides that a local government need not provide notice of hearing to DLCD if the local government concludes that no statewide planning goals apply. However, the failure to adopt in the final decision express findings that no goals apply is not a basis for remand, where no statute requires express findings that the goals do not apply and the petitioner fails to demonstrate that any goals in fact do apply. Conte v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 326 (2012).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. The statewide planning goals normally do not apply directly as approval criteria for permit applications governed by acknowledged comprehensive plans and land use regulations. Gottman v. Clackamas County, 64 Or LUBA 358 (2011).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. An argument that a decision approving a boundary line adjustment under an acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations violates Goal 4 provides no basis for reversal, where petitioner offers no legal theory for why Goal 4 applies to such a decision. Generally, unless a land use decision adopts new or amended comprehensive plan or land use regulation provisions, a post-acknowledgement land use decision is governed by the acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations and need not apply the statewide planning goals directly. Lulay v. Linn County, 60 Or LUBA 432 (2010).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Under OAR 660-031-0040 when renewing a state agency permit the agency is not required to make a determination of compliance with the statewide planning goals, unless the renewal involves a substantial modification or intensification of the permitted activity. Tualatin Riverkeepers v. ODEQ, 55 Or LUBA 569 (2008).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Under OAR 660-018-0050(2), the Department of Environmental Quality's state agency coordination rule, a land use compatibility statement (LUCS) is the primary vehicle to ensure that agency permits are consistent with the statewide planning goals. In circumstances where the state agency coordination rules exempt permit renewals from the requirement to obtain a LUCS, the rules also exempt the agency from the requirement to make a determination that the renewed permit complies with the applicable goals. Tualatin Riverkeepers v. ODEQ, 55 Or LUBA 569 (2008).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. In renewing a discharge permit under the Department of Environmental Quality's state agency coordination rules, nothing in those rules requires the agency to determine that the renewed permit complies with the statewide planning goals in circumstances where it is unclear that such determinations were made regarding the original permit. Tualatin Riverkeepers v. ODEQ, 55 Or LUBA 569 (2008).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. A state agency permit renewal decision that concludes, based on substantial evidence, that the renewed permit does not involve a substantial modification to or intensification of the permitted activity, and thus no land use compatibility statement is required from the affected local government, is not a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction under ORS 197.015(11)(a)(B), because it is not an agency decision with respect to which the agency is required to apply the goals. Tualatin Riverkeepers v. ODEQ, 55 Or LUBA 569 (2008).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. OAR 660-014-0060 requires that local governments apply acknowledged comprehensive plans and ordinances to annexation decisions in lieu of the statewide planning goals, unless the plan and ordinance do not "control the annexation." A comprehensive plan policy need not be a mandatory approval criterion to "control the annexation" for purposes of OAR 660-014-0060; it is sufficient that the policy provides relevant guidance with respect to annexations. Costco Wholesale Corporation v. City of Beaverton, 50 Or LUBA 476 (2005).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Under OAR 660-014-0060, which requires that local governments apply acknowledged comprehensive plans and ordinances to annexation decisions in lieu of the statewide planning goals, unless the plan and ordinance do not "control the annexation," whether the plan and ordinances control the annexation depends on whether the plan and ordinances include substantive standards guiding a city's determination whether or not to annex land, not whether the plan and ordinances include procedures specific to annexations. Patterson v. City of Independence, 49 Or LUBA 589 (2005).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where a county approves formation of a special district and the county's comprehensive plan is acknowledged, the statewide planning goals do not apply, notwithstanding language in ORS 199.462(1) governing formation of special districts that requires consideration of the statewide planning goals. Kneeland v. Douglas County, 48 Or LUBA 347 (2005).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. As a general principle, goal compliance issues raised by a post-acknowledgment plan amendment must be addressed and resolved at the time the plan amendment is adopted. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 47 Or LUBA 160 (2004).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. At least where the record includes sufficient information regarding proposed or contemplated uses to determine whether a post-acknowledgment plan amendment is consistent with applicable goals, the local government must address and resolve whether the amendment is consistent with those goals at the time the amendment is adopted, and cannot defer that consideration to a proceeding that is not a post-acknowledgment plan amendment proceeding. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 47 Or LUBA 160 (2004).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Annexation decisions are governed by comprehensive plan annexation criteria or, if no such comprehensive plan criteria have been adopted, by the statewide planning goals. Where a city annexation decision is adopted without applying either its comprehensive plan or the statewide planning goals, the decision must be remanded. Morsman v. City of Madras, 45 Or LUBA 16 (2003).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. An application to amend the county comprehensive plan list of non-significant aggregate sites to include a proposed new mining site is subject to review for compliance with any potentially applicable statewide planning goals. Beaver State Sand and Gravel v. Douglas County, 43 Or LUBA 140 (2002).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Absent a showing that amendments regulating natural resources not on the city's acknowledged Goal 5 inventory are intended to create or amend or have the effect of creating or amending a Goal inventory, such amendments need not comply with Goal 5 or the Goal 5 rule. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. A UGB amendment adopted pursuant to acknowledged local code provisions that implement Goal 14 is nonetheless subject to direct review for compliance with Goal 14 unless such review would necessarily invalidate some provision of the acknowledged code. Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 199 (2000).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. A county urbanization policy that was adopted to implement Goal 14 must be interpreted consistently with Goal 14's prohibition against approval of urban uses on rural land. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 37 (2000).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. In approving applications for permits for uses that are specifically allowed in rural EFU zones by ORS 215.213 and 215.283, counties are not required to apply the case-by-case urban/rural analysis that is required under Goal 14 and 1000 Friends of Oregon v. LCDC (Curry Co.), 301 Or 447, 724 P2d 268 (1986), on non-EFU-zoned rural lands. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 37 (2000).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. That a challenged plan amendment is consistent with other provisions of an acknowledged comprehensive plan may have some bearing on whether the plan, as amended, continues to comply with all applicable statewide planning goals; however, such consistency does not obviate goal compliance review. Volny v. City of Bend, 37 Or LUBA 493 (2000).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. A comprehensive plan amendment that increases the required right-of-way for major arterials from 80 feet to 100 feet may reduce the supply of buildable land and commercial sites and thus requires findings that address Statewide Planning Goals 9 and 10. Volny v. City of Bend, 37 Or LUBA 493 (2000).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. OAR 660-023-0180, which governs comprehensive plan amendments for mineral and aggregate resources, establishes the procedures required to comply with Goal 5 but does not obviate the requirement to address other statewide planning goals. Turner Community Association v. Marion County, 37 Or LUBA 324 (1999).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where a county's comprehensive plan contains or is required to contain provisions that by their terms apply to a decision vacating a county road within city limits, the county must apply those provisions. If any such provisions apply, the county's road vacation decision is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lincoln County, 36 Or LUBA 288 (1999).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where LCDC requires a county to adopt comprehensive plan amendments implementing a statewide planning goal by a certain date, and the county fails to implement the goal as of that date, the goal becomes directly applicable to county decisions pursuant to ORS 197.646, even if the goal did not become "effective" as to that county when LCDC adopted the goal. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lincoln County, 36 Or LUBA 288 (1999).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where a city approves a development plan for a university district as part of a quasi-judicial proceeding, but does not incorporate it into the city's comprehensive plan or land use regulations, the development plan is not a comprehensive plan or land use regulation, and thus amendments to that plan are not subject to review for compliance with statewide planning goals or the Transportation Planning Rule. Brome v. City of Corvallis, 36 Or LUBA 225 (1999).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Petitioners' argument that a proposed golf course expansion violates Goal 14 because it constitutes an expansion of an urban use onto rural EFU-zoned land provides no basis for reversal or remand, because Goal 14 does not apply to a permit to expand a use allowed in an EFU zone. DLCD v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 88 (1999).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. LUBA will reject an assignment of error alleging that a post-acknowledgment plan amendment violates Goal 5, where petitioner does not demonstrate that the decision affects a Goal 5 resource in one of the ways specified in OAR 660-023-0250(3). Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where petitioner fails to assign error to detailed findings explaining why certain acknowledged comprehensive plan provisions constitute "specific policies" that, under ORS 197.835(7)(b), make it unnecessary for the city to demonstrate compliance with statewide planning goals when amending city land use regulations to implement those policies, LUBA will reject an assignment of error alleging the city erred by failing to demonstrate that the new and amended land use regulations comply with the statewide planning goals. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. A land development ordinance amendment adopting a half-acre minimum lot size for a flood hazard zone is not reviewable for compliance with Goal 5 where the acknowledged comprehensive plan calls for a half-acre minimum in the flood hazard zone. Barnard Perkins Corp. v. City of Rivergrove, 34 Or LUBA 660 (1998).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. ORS 197.835 does not exempt amendments to land use regulations from compliance with applicable administrative rules that implement statutory provisions. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 34 Or LUBA 498 (1998).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Goal 11 prohibits relying on "establishment or extension of a water system" as a basis for allowing higher residential density outside UGBs. Where a local government approves a rural subdivision with a higher density based on provision of water service, it must explain why the apparently applicable Goal 11 prohibition does not apply. DeShazer v. Columbia County, 34 Or LUBA 416 (1998).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. A legislative comprehensive plan amendment must comply with the statewide planning goals, and that requirement is not met simply because subsequent development applications would be reviewed pursuant to acknowledged criteria. Fogarty v. City of Gresham, 34 Or LUBA 309 (1998).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. An amendment to an acknowledged comprehensive plan must be reviewed for compliance with the statewide planning goals, notwithstanding that the acknowledged plan has an acknowledged process for amending the plan, where the amendment can be reviewed for compliance with the statewide planning goals without necessarily challenging the acknowledged process itself. Fogarty v. City of Gresham, 34 Or LUBA 309 (1998).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where a local government's amendment of its comprehensive plan potentially affects the plan's compliance with a statewide planning goal, the local government is required to find and explain why (1) the proposed action does not implicate the goal, (2) the proposed action complies with the goal, or (3) the land subject to the proposed action meets the standards for a goal exception. Doty v. Jackson County, 34 Or LUBA 287 (1998).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. A plan amendment redesignating land as commercial on the basis of a nonconforming use is subject to review for compliance with applicable statewide planning goals, notwithstanding an acknowledged comprehensive plan policy that directs designation of such land as commercial rather than recognizing the nonconforming use, where a goals compliance challenge to the amendment is not an indirect compliance challenge to the comprehensive plan policy itself. Geaney v. Coos County, 34 Or LUBA 189 (1998).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Goal 14 is applicable to a plan amendment redesignating rural land as commercial, where the land is outside the UGB and the commercial designation would permit any commercial use of any size or intensity, including large commercial uses such as a Wal-Mart store that are urban in character and intensity. Geaney v. Coos County, 34 Or LUBA 189 (1998).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. In reviewing a county's legislative comprehensive plan amendment, LUBA does not require detailed findings, but Goal 2 requires a local government to explain why the amendment complies with applicable Statewide Planning Goals. The required explanation can appear in findings, in the record or in the brief the local government files with LUBA. Valerio v. Union County, 33 Or LUBA 604 (1997).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Under ORS 197.625, when a county code provision has not yet been acknowledged by LCDC, a land use application is subject to that provision, as well as to the applicable land use goal and its implementing rules. Evans v. Multnomah County, 33 Or LUBA 555 (1997).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where the county's decision to apply overlay zoning directly implements plan policies that were previously determined to comply with the statewide planning goals, and the policies are sufficiently specific to provide the basis for case-by-case evaluation of development applications, ORS 197.835(7)(b) does not require the local government to apply the goals independently to the decision. Cuddeback v. City of Eugene, 32 Or LUBA 418 (1997).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. The statewide goals apply independently to a county's zoning amendment where the comprehensive plan specifies that zone changes must comply with applicable statewide goals. Doob v. Josephine County, 32 Or LUBA 364 (1997).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. The Statewide Planning Goals do not apply directly to the approval of a permit under the county's acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations. McArthur v. Lane County, 31 Or LUBA 309 (1996).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. After the December 5, 1994 effective date of amendments to Statewide Planning Goal 11, local governments may not rely on acknowledged comprehensive plan or ordinance provisions to establish goal compliance if those provisions violate the Goal 11 amendments. DeShazer v. Columbia County, 31 Or LUBA 300 (1996).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. When an earlier acknowledged comprehensive plan amendment imposes a condition that any proposed conditional use or use variance shall require a revised exception to the Statewide Planning Goals, a new plan amendment is required before additional conditional uses can be allowed, since taking an exception necessitates a plan amendment. Leathers v. Marion County, 31 Or LUBA 220 (1996).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Goal 4 does not apply to the adoption of a city tree-cutting regulation that has no application to acknowledged forestlands or lands suitable for commercial forest uses. Ramsey v. City of Portland, 30 Or LUBA 212 (1995).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Not every regulation that arguably furthers the objectives of Goal 5 applies Goal 5. Ramsey v. City of Portland, 30 Or LUBA 212 (1995).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. If it is obvious from the record that a particular goal does not apply to a proposed comprehensive plan amendment, it is not a basis for remand that the local government has not actually stated in its written decision that the goal does not apply. Marcott Holdings, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 30 Or LUBA 101 (1995).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Goal 6 is limited by its terms to discharges of pollutants from future development itself. It does not apply to all such discharges that may occur consequentially as a result of the development. Marcott Holdings, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 30 Or LUBA 101 (1995).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Once a local government's comprehensive plan and land use regulations are acknowledged under ORS 197.251, the Statewide Planning Goals no longer apply directly to its land use decisions, other than to those decisions which amend the acknowledged plan or regulations. Central Eastside Industrial Council v. Portland, 29 Or LUBA 429 (1995).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where a county zoning district was acknowledged by LCDC as a forest zone, not a farm/forest zone, a regulation subsequently adopted by LCDC to apply immediately to uses in forest zones applies to uses within that zoning district. Testa v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 383 (1995).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. All comprehensive plan amendments must comply with the Statewide Planning Goals. When adopting a comprehensive plan amendment, it is the local government's obligation to explain in its findings why the plan amendment complies with the goals or why arguably applicable goal standards need not be addressed and satisfied. O'Rourke v. Union County, 29 Or LUBA 303 (1995).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. If a local government's comprehensive plan and land use regulations are acknowledged as being in compliance with the statewide planning goals, and the challenged decision approving a residential subdivision does not amend the local government's plan or land use regulations, the statewide planning goals to do not apply to the challenged decision. McCrary v. City of Talent, 29 Or LUBA 110 (1995).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where a local government does not identify specific provisions in its comprehensive plan which it contends provide the basis for challenged land use regulation amendments, under ORS 197.835(5)(b), LUBA is required to reverse or remand the land use regulation amendments if they do not comply with applicable provisions of the Statewide Planning Goals. Churchill v. Tillamook County, 29 Or LUBA 68 (1995).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where respondents do not identify specific provisions in the applicable comprehensive plan, which they contend provide the basis for challenged zone changes, under ORS 197.825(5)(b) LUBA is required to reverse or remand the zone changes if they do not comply with applicable provisions of the Statewide Planning Goals or their implementing rules. Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 28 Or LUBA 670 (1995).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. That LUBA may consider a statewide planning goal that is implemented by a particular plan or code provision, in determining whether the local government's interpretation of the plan or code provision should be affirmed under ORS 197.829(4), does not make that goal an approval standard for decisions made under an acknowledged plan and land use regulations. Knee Deep Cattle Company v. Lane County, 28 Or LUBA 288 (1994).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. If a local government is presented with a plan or land use regulation provision that must be interpreted, and there is a reasonable interpretation that is consistent with the "state statute, land use goal or rule the comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation implements," that interpretation may not be rejected by the local government in favor of an interpretation that is inconsistent with those statutes, goals or rules. Historical Development Advocates v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 617 (1994).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Comprehensive plan amendments must comply with the Statewide Planning Goals. ORS 197.175(2)(a). Where a challenged comprehensive plan amendment does not address Goal 9 (Economic Development), and Goal 9 appears to be relevant to the challenged decision, LUBA will remand the decision. Graville Properties, Ltd. v. City of Eugene, 27 Or LUBA 583 (1994).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. The Statewide Planning Goals are not directly applicable to a local government decision that approves a subdivision without amending the local government's acknowledged comprehensive plan. J.C. Reeves Corp. v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 318 (1994).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where petitioners contend a land use regulation amendment fails to comply with the statewide planning goals and implementing rules, and respondents fail to identify specific provisions in the local comprehensive plan that provide the basis for the challenged amendment, LUBA will assume no such provisions exist, and under ORS 197.835(5)(b) LUBA has authority to reverse or remand the land use regulation amendment if it does not comply with the statewide planning goals or implementing rules. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Marion County, 27 Or LUBA 303 (1994).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Where property is the subject of a concurrent comprehensive plan map amendment and zone change, the zone change is made under an unacknowledged plan amendment and must comply with those statewide planning goals applicable to the unacknowledged plan amendment. ORS 197.175(2)(e) and 197.625(3)(b). Roloff v. City of Milton-Freewater, 27 Or LUBA 256 (1994).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. Any amendment to an acknowledged land use regulation must comply with all applicable statewide planning goals, if the comprehensive plan "does not contain specific policies or other provisions which provide the basis for the regulation." ORS 197.835(5)(b). Roloff v. City of Milton-Freewater, 27 Or LUBA 256 (1994).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. A special district decision that finally determines policy questions concerning how the district will provide sewerage service to an area, where that service will occur, and the level of that service, is an exercise of the district's planning duties and responsibilities under ORS 195.020(1) that must comply with the Statewide Planning Goals and is a land use decision subject to LUBA review. DLCD v. Fargo Interchange Service District, 27 Or LUBA 150 (1994).

4.1 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Applicability. If a county's comprehensive plan and land use regulations have been acknowledged by the Land Conservation and Development Commission pursuant to ORS 197.251, the statewide planning goals are directly applicable to a challenged land use decision only if the decision amends the county plan. DLCD v. Fargo Interchange Service District, 27 Or LUBA 150 (1994).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. A local government complies with Goal 14 (effective 04/28/06), and OAR 661-024-0050(4) (effective 04/16/09), where it first demonstrates that the need cannot reasonably be accommodated on land already inside the UGB. Only if land within the UGB cannot reasonably accommodate the identified need would the local government proceed to consider sites outside the UGB to satisfy the identified need. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. When a county amends a zoning ordinance to require a particular study area when applying a maximum residential density standard within that zoning district, the county cannot rely on an earlier LUBA decision that allowed use of a similar study area in a quasi-judicial decision affecting a single property. Instead, the county must establish in amending the zoning ordinance that mandating the particular study area in all cases in that zone in the future is consistent with the maximum residential density standard and Goal 5, which the maximum residential density standard was adopted to implement. ODFW v. Crook County, 72 Or LUBA 316 (2015).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. A county must justify its decision to replace an ambiguous existing maximum residential density standard with a similarly worded but much more methodologically precise maximum residential standard and may not simply rely on the similar wording to conclude that the new standard is consistent with the county's comprehensive plan and Goal 5. ODFW v. Crook County, 72 Or LUBA 316 (2015).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. Where a city's acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations have been acknowledged to comply with the statewide planning goals, an amendment of the city's land use regulations is only directly reviewable for compliance with the statewide planning goals where "[t]he comprehensive plan does not contain specific policies or other provisions which provide the basis for the regulation * * *." ORS 197.835(7)(b). Oregon Coast Alliance v. City of Dunes City, 65 Or LUBA 358 (2012).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. Goals 9 and 10 do not apply to a city decision on a conditional use application for a single family dwelling, and the city is not obligated to consider whether denying the conditional use application impacts the city's obligations under Goals 9 and 10 to maintain adequate inventories of commercially, industrially and residentially zoned lands. Rudell v. City of Bandon, 64 Or LUBA 201 (2011).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. A local government need not simply copy a general rule standard into its zoning ordinance. Local governments frequently adopt a variety of specific standards to comply with more general administrative rule standards, and they are free to do so if the more specific standards are sufficient to ensure compliance with the more general rule standards. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. The guidelines to the Statewide Planning Goals are not standards that must be satisfied to approve a post-acknowledgment plan amendment, and thus alleged inconsistency between a plan amendment and a guideline to Goal 9 is not a basis to reverse or remand the plan amendment. People for Responsible Prosperity v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181 (2006).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. Nothing in the rules for conducting periodic review under OAR Chapter 660, Division 25 preempts local procedures or indicates that plan amendments adopted pursuant to those rules may not also be subject to local code requirements governing plan amendments. City of Woodburn v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 423 (2003).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. A county decision that approves the redesignation of property from a nonresource zone to rural residential zone does not implicate Goal 3, even though the county may have erred in its original decision to zone the property for nonresource use rather than agricultural use and LCDC may have erred in acknowledging the nonresource designation for the property. Caldwell v. Klamath County, 45 Or LUBA 548 (2003).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. A county does not err by refusing to apply Goal 3 or by failing to require an exception to Goal 3 to allow nonresource-zoned property to be rezoned for rural residential use, where the nonresource zoning designation for that property was acknowledged and the proposed rural residential zoning designation is consistent with that initial determination. Caldwell v. Klamath County, 45 Or LUBA 548 (2003).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. Under OAR 731-015-0075, an ODOT Class 3 project to improve a highway interchange must comply with any affected local government's comprehensive plan and, if the project does not comply, any comprehensive plan amendments that are necessary to bring the project into compliance must be adopted before ODOT issues its Revised Environmental Assessment for the interchange project. Witham Parts and Equipment Co. v. ODOT, 42 Or LUBA 435 (2002).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. Where petitioners' interpretational challenge of a city's finding that proposed development complies with code provisions implementing Goal 5 is, in essence, an argument that the city's code provisions are insufficient to implement Goal 5, LUBA will reject the challenge as an impermissible collateral attack on the city's acknowledged Goal 5 regulations. Crowley v. City of Bandon, 41 Or LUBA 87 (2001).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. Read in conjunction with the "safe harbor" provisions of OAR 660-013-0140, the requirement at OAR 660-013-0160(5) that a local government achieve full compliance with the Airport Planning Rule in amending its comprehensive plan and land use regulations applies only when the local government amends its plan or land use regulations to add different requirements than the plan or land use regulations previously imposed. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 38 Or LUBA 291 (2000).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. The "air, rail, water and pipeline transportation plan" required by OAR 660-012-0020(2)(e) to be included in a local government's Transportation System Plan need not include any information other than that specified in the rule, i.e., the location and extent of existing or planned facilities. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 38 Or LUBA 291 (2000).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. That a challenged plan amendment is consistent with other provisions of an acknowledged comprehensive plan may have some bearing on whether the plan, as amended, continues to comply with all applicable statewide planning goals; however, such consistency does not obviate goal compliance review. Volny v. City of Bend, 37 Or LUBA 493 (2000).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. OAR 660-023-0180, which governs comprehensive plan amendments for mineral and aggregate resources, establishes the procedures required to comply with Goal 5 but does not obviate the requirement to address other statewide planning goals. Turner Community Association v. Marion County, 37 Or LUBA 324 (1999).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goal/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. A county's transportation plan is inconsistent with the Transportation Planning Rule where it fails to inventory existing and committed bicycle and pedestrian facilities in the county, assess the capability and condition of those facilities, develop a system of planned improvements to those facilities, and depict planned improvements on a map, as required by OAR 660-012-0020. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 131 (1999).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goal/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. A letter from an ODOT employee regarding negotiations between ODOT and the county does not constitute an affirmative waiver of issues related to minimum street width standards under OAR 660-012-0045(7), where it is unclear what was resolved between the parties and whether the county implemented the parties' resolution. Even if petitioner ODOT had waived that issue, such waiver would not apply to petitioner DLCD. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 131 (1999).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goal/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. The requirement at OAR 660-012-0045(7) that the county evaluate whether its street width standards are the minimum consistent with operational needs is not satisfied by a county procedure to consider, on a case-by-case basis, whether certain street widths should be reduced. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 131 (1999).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goalss/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. Application of criteria included in an acknowledged comprehensive plan governing redesignation of resource lands does not obviate the requirement that comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendments comply with the statewide planning goals. DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 728 (1997).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. LUBA may review a local government decision under rules adopted after the date of a challenged decision if a remand would be based on a failure to comply with rules that have been superseded. Brown v. Jefferson County, 33 Or LUBA 418 (1997).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. In adopting land use regulations, including emergency and temporary land use regulations, a city is bound by the substantive and procedural requirements established by ORS 197.610 and Statewide Planning Goals 1 and 2. These statutory and Goal requirements must be followed notwithstanding contrary city charter provisions. Western PCS, Inc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 33 Or LUBA 369 (1997).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. Goal 9 does not require that a city find that its "regulations will result in there being an adequate supply of sites for telecommunication facilities." Western PCS, Inc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 33 Or LUBA 369 (1997).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. A land use regulation does not "prohibit new telecommunication" facilities where such facilities are allowed as a permitted or conditional use in all zones and variances are allowed for otherwise applicable height limits and setback requirements. Western PCS, Inc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 33 Or LUBA 369 (1997).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. While Goal 11 requires that a local government "plan and develop a timely, orderly and efficient arrangement of public facilities," a local government need not provide an expedited process for public facilities and retains its ability to ensure the appropriate juxtaposition of land uses. Western PCS, Inc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 33 Or LUBA 369 (1997).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. The decision to vacate 105 feet of a public road is not a "plan," as that term is used in ORS 197.250. The county's land use "plans, programs, rules or regulations affecting land use" are contained in its acknowledged comprehensive plan and implementing regulations. Pacific Western Co. v. Lincoln County, 32 Or LUBA 317 (1997).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. LUBA may review a local government decision under LCDC rules adopted after the date of the decision if a remand would be based on a failure to comply with rules since superseded. However, LUBA cannot apply rules before LCDC adopts them. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 488 (1996).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. Under ORS 197.646(3), there is no grace period prior to required local government compliance with amendments to statutes, rules or Statewide Planning Goals. DLCD v. Lincoln County, 31 Or LUBA 240 (1996).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. Goal 6 requires a finding that a proposed use will be able to comply with applicable environmental standards, and is not satisfied by findings stating only that the proposed use will be required through conditions to comply with the standards. Marcott Holdings, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 30 Or LUBA 101 (1995).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. The Goal 9 rule applies only to plan and land use amendments adopted during periodic review, but it provides interpretive guidance in applying Goal 9 to quasi-judicial changes to acknowledged comprehensive plans or land use regulations that affect continued compliance with Goal 9. Marcott Holdings, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 30 Or LUBA 101 (1995).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. Statewide Planning Goal "guidelines" are simply suggested approaches that local governments may use in achieving compliance with the goals; they are not requirements with which local governments must comply. ORS 197.015(9); Goal 2, Part III. Churchill v. Tillamook County, 29 Or LUBA 68 (1995).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. The Goal 2 requirement for "ultimate policy choices" does not mean local governments cannot adopt ambiguous or subjective development standards or complex development review processes. Where LCDC interprets a particular Statewide Planning Goal to require that certain uses be subject only to clear and objective standards, it says so in an implementing rule. Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 28 Or LUBA 670 (1995).

4.2 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Compliance With. LCDC does not require that local governments adopt comprehensive plans and land use regulations that restate, word for word, the statewide planning goals or the administrative rules which implement those goals. Comprehensive plans and land use regulations must "comply" with the goals and rules. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

4.3 Statewide Planning Goals / LCDC Rules – Definitions. The informal adoption by a statement in a quasi-judicial decision of a definition of the term "firearms training facility," which term is found in both a state administrative rule and the county's zoning ordinance, does not constitute the amendment of an acknowledged land use regulation. J.C. Reeves Corp. v. Washington County, 31 Or LUBA 115 (1996).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. A petitioner's challenge to a county's amendments to its comprehensive plan that expand the allowable locations in the county that could be the subject of an application to change the plan designation to rural commercial and rural industrial, that argue that the county's adopted and acknowledged rural commercial and rural industrial zones impermissibly allow urban uses in contravention of Goal 14 are an impermissible collateral attack on an acknowledged land use regulation where no provisions of the county's code were amended by the challenged decision. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 79 Or LUBA 253 (2019).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Where a local code provision, which is acknowledged to comply with Goal 5, allows the construction of a reservoir for surface mining in conjunction with an irrigation district, but requires that sites proposed for that use be added to the local government's inventory of non-significant mineral sites through a post-acknowledgment plan amendment (PAPA), such a PAPA does not allow "new uses that could be conflicting uses" with a Goal 5 resource, and therefore does not require further analysis under Goal 5, where the construction of a reservoir is otherwise allowed for a recreation-oriented facility without a PAPA. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 79 Or LUBA 380 (2019).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Where a local government adopts an ordinance that repeals and readopts, verbatim, 34 previously adopted and acknowledged land use ordinances, solely to correct a problem with the publication notice for the readopted ordinances, the repeal and readoption of the 34 ordinances does not accomplish any "change" or amendment to the acknowledged ordinances that would require that the re-adoption be processed as a post-acknowledgment plan amendment under ORS 197.610 et seq. Repeal and verbatim readoption of a previously acknowledged ordinance does not change the acknowledged status of the ordinance, such that pursuant to ORS 197.175(2)(e) the statewide planning goals then apply directly to decisions made under the readopted ordinance. Squier v. Multnomah County, 71 Or LUBA 98 (2015).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. OAR 660-033-0140 provides that certain permits on agricultural and forest land are void after two years if the use is not initiated within that time period. Where the county development code includes language that is nearly identical to much of the language in OAR 660-033-0140, it is reasonable to conclude the code was adopted to implement OAR 660-033-0140. Gould v. Deschutes County, 67 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Where a county makes it sufficiently clear that it adopted its similarly worded version of OAR 660-033-0140 to apply in all county zones, including those that apply to agricultural and forest lands, the county code version of OAR 660-033-0140 applies in place of OAR 660-033-0140 on agricultural and forest lands after the county code version of OAR 660-033-0140 is acknowledged. Gould v. Deschutes County, 67 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. The statewide planning goals normally do not apply directly as approval criteria for permit applications governed by acknowledged comprehensive plans and land use regulations. Gottman v. Clackamas County, 64 Or LUBA 358 (2011).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Under ORS 197.625(1) and (2), where an amendment to the text of a local government's land use ordinance is appealed to LUBA, the 21-day deadline for appealing LUBA's decision to the Court of Appeals would have to expire before the ordinance would be considered acknowledged under ORS 197.625(2). Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 63 Or LUBA 75 (2011).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Where a local government adopts a new zone in one legislative decision and then applies that new zone to property in a separate legislative decision, which is then appealed to LUBA, a challenge that the new zone is contrary to the statewide planning goals may be precluded by acknowledgment of the first decision. However, acknowledgment does not insulate the new zone from a facial challenge on statutory or constitutional grounds, advanced in the appeal of the second legislative decision that for the first time applies the new zone to specific properties. Barnes v. City of Hillsboro, 61 Or LUBA 375 (2010).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. ORS 197.625(3) permits a post-acknowledgment land use regulation amendment to take effect as soon at it is adopted, and before the amendment is deemed acknowledged under ORS 197.625(1), if the amendment was "adopted in substantial conformance with ORS 197.610 and 197.615." Where a post-acknowledgment plan amendment to an erosion control ordinance is appealed to LUBA and is affirmed, LUBA's decision has the legal effect of establishing that the post-acknowledgment plan amendment was adopted in substantial compliance with ORS 197.610 and 197.615. Whether the post-acknowledgment plan amendment was adopted in substantial compliance with ORS 197.610 and 197.615 may not be raised in a subsequent LUBA appeal of a subdivision decision that applied the amended erosion control ordinance. Montgomery v. City of Dunes City, 60 Or LUBA 274 (2010).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. An argument that a decision approving a boundary line adjustment under an acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations violates Goal 4 provides no basis for reversal, where petitioner offers no legal theory for why Goal 4 applies to such a decision. Generally, unless a land use decision adopts new or amended comprehensive plan or land use regulation provisions, a post-acknowledgement land use decision is governed by the acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations and need not apply the statewide planning goals directly. Lulay v. Linn County, 60 Or LUBA 432 (2010).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. ORS 197.610(1) and OAR 660-018-0020(1)(c) and (2) require that a local government provide the Department of Land Conservation and Development with a copy of the proposed text of any post acknowledgment comprehensive plan or land use regulation amendment. Where a local government's notice of its post acknowledgment action does not include the proposed text, remand is required. SEIU v. City of Happy Valley, 58 Or LUBA 261 (2009).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Even if a local code provision is deemed by its acknowledgment to comply with any applicable statewide planning goals, acknowledgment does not mean that the provision is deemed to comply with applicable state statutes. Jouvenat v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 378 (2009).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. ORS 197.625(3) was adopted in response to the Court of Appeals' decision in Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 118 Or App 246, 249, 846 P2d 1178 (1993), so that post-acknowledgement plan and land use regulation amendments would take effect on adoption. Under Von Lubken v. Hood River County, post-acknowledgement plan and land use regulation amendments did not take effect until they were acknowledged. NWDA v. City of Portland, 58 Or LUBA 533 (2009).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. OAR 660-018-0020 does not require that the Department of Land Conservation and Development be provided a redlined version of a post-acknowledgment comprehensive plan amendment. In addition, OAR 660-018-0020 does not provide that any failure on a local government's part to adequately identify the text to be repealed or adopted by a post-acknowledgment comprehensive plan amendment has the legal consequence of requiring that the post-acknowledgment comprehensive plan amendment be viewed as an entirely new comprehensive plan such that unamended portions of the comprehensive plan must be shown to comply with the statewide planning goals. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. An argument that the Department of Land Conservation and Development erred in acknowledging the city's riparian protection ordinance is a collateral attack on the acknowledgment that cannot be advanced in an appeal of a permit decision applying the acknowledged ordinance. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 55 Or LUBA 350 (2007).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Where LCDC approves a periodic review work task and no appeal of that approval is filed with the Court of Appeals, the work task is deemed acknowledged under OAR 660-025-0160(7). Where the LCDC approval of the work task is appealed to the Court of Appeals and affirmed, the work task is acknowledged when the appellate judgment is issued. Where plan amendment that was adopted to respond to the periodic review work task is appealed to LUBA, LUBA has no jurisdiction to review the plan amendment for compliance with the statewide planning goals and therefore acknowledgement of that plan amendment is not delayed until the completion of LUBA's review under ORS 197.625. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 52 Or LUBA 341 (2006).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Under Friends of Neabeack Hill v. City of Philomath, 139 Or App 39, 911 P2d 250 (1996), LUBA may apply ORS 197.829(1)(d) to review a local government's interpretation of an acknowledged code provision that implements a statewide planning goal, statute or rule only if the code provision is ambiguous. If the code provision is subject to more than one reasonable interpretation, one of which is consistent with the goal, statute or rule implemented, the local government cannot choose an interpretation that is inconsistent with the goal, statute or rule implemented. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 52 Or LUBA 582 (2006).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. That LCDC acknowledged a 1999 decision including resource land within an urban unincorporated community (UUC) does not mean that LCDC concurred with the county's apparent intent to later plan and zone the land for non-resource uses. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 50 Or LUBA 444 (2005).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. While the acknowledgment process shields local governments from collateral attacks on acknowledged plans and ordinances, any errors the local government may have made in that process do not obviate goal and rule requirements that govern subsequent plan and zoning amendments. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 50 Or LUBA 444 (2005).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Lands that are planned and zoned for resource use under Goals 3 and 4 may be redesignated for nonresource use by applying an acknowledged comprehensive plan policy that establishes standards for such redesignations. Where such a specific policy and local standards have been acknowledged, they apply in place of more general statewide planning goals standards that would otherwise apply to such a redesignation. Sommer v. Josephine County, 49 Or LUBA 134 (2005).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Arguments that an acknowledged comprehensive plan policy that rates certain soils as unsuitable for commercial forestry is inconsistent with the county soil survey or uses inaccurate figures are impermissible collateral attacks on the policy. Doob v. Josephine County, 48 Or LUBA 227 (2004).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Where it is undisputed that a city has adopted a Wetlands Resource Plan that has been acknowledged by LCDC, the acknowledged Wetlands Resource Plan and implementing regulations apply in reviewing an application for subdivision approval and neither Goal 5 nor its implementing regulations apply directly. Doob v. City of Grants Pass, 48 Or LUBA 245 (2004).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Where a county approves formation of a special district and the county's comprehensive plan is acknowledged, the statewide planning goals do not apply, notwithstanding language in ORS 199.462(1) governing formation of special districts that requires consideration of the statewide planning goals. Kneeland v. Douglas County, 48 Or LUBA 347 (2005).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Where the county's comprehensive plan makes it clear that it relied on a particular zoning district as its program to protect an existing mining operation from conflicting uses, and that zone allows mining and dwellings as conditional uses, the county does not err in requiring that a conditional use application to reopen that mine after it had been closed for over 10 years to demonstrate that the mine would be compatible with nearby dwellings. Any error that the county may have committed in subjecting an existing mine with no conflicts to conditional use review in the future if the mine closed was rendered irrelevant by LCDC's acknowledgment of the comprehensive plan. Dundas v. Lincoln County, 43 Or LUBA 407 (2002).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. A code provision that allows a farm dwelling on a 160-acre rangeland parcel, rather than the minimum 320 acres specified in OAR 660-033-0135(1)(a), may be inconsistent with the rule. However, the county may rely on its code, acknowledged in 2001 to comply with Goal 3 and the Goal 3 rule, notwithstanding any inconsistency with the rule. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 42 Or LUBA 149 (2002).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. LCDC's 1985 acknowledgement of a county's rural residential zone has the legal effect of establishing that the rural residential zoning district may be applied consistent with Goal 14 to rural lands outside a UGB. However, the 1985 acknowledgment does not have the legal effect of establishing that all future applications of the zoning district to particular properties, no matter what the circumstances, will necessarily comply with Goal 14. DLCD v. Klamath County, 40 Or LUBA 221 (2001).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Where a regional transportation plan that is submitted to LCDC for acknowledgment review under ORS 197.251 is also appealed to LUBA, and the issues raised in the petition for review arguably are within LCDC's jurisdiction under ORS 197.825(2)(c), it is appropriate to suspend the LUBA appeal for 120 days pursuant to ORS 197.840(1) and (4). Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 39 Or LUBA 807 (2001).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Acknowledgement of a land use ordinance establishes only that it is in compliance with the statewide planning goals; it does not exempt a local government from complying with statutory requirements. Neighbors for Sensible Dev. v. City of Sweet Home, 39 Or LUBA 766 (2001).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. A permit application may be approved based on adopted standards and criteria that are not yet acknowledged. However, under ORS 197.625(3), if the standards and criteria are not ultimately acknowledged, any improvements that have been made in reliance on a permit issued under the unacknowledged standards and criteria may have to be removed. Western States v. Multnomah County, 37 Or LUBA 835 (2000).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. New land use regulations can only become acknowledged under ORS 197.625(2) if the ordinance adopting those new land use regulations is "affirmed on appeal under ORS 197.830 to 197.855." Where LUBA remands the adopting ordinance because a portion of the new land use regulations is found to be defective, without specifically affirming the remaining portions of those regulations, no part of the ordinance is considered acknowledged under ORS 197.625. Western States v. Multnomah County, 37 Or LUBA 835 (2000).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Although a decision may qualify as a land use decision subject to LUBA review, ORS 197.825(2)(c) provides that LUBA lacks jurisdiction to consider statewide planning goal compliance issues in conducting that review, where the challenged decision is also subject to review by LCDC under ORS 197.251. Commercial Real Estate Economic Coalition v. Metro, 37 Or LUBA 171 (1999).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. LUBA has no jurisdiction to review provisions of an acknowledged comprehensive plan for compliance with the Transportation Planning Rule, where those plan provisions are not amended by the challenged decision and are not affected by the challenged decision in a way that affects their compliance with the statewide planning goals. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 608 (1998).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Where petitioners' arguments are directed at unamended provisions of an acknowledged comprehensive plan rather than the comprehensive plan amendments adopted by the challenged decision, petitioners present no basis for reversal or remand. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 608 (1998).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. ORS 197.835 does not exempt amendments to land use regulations from compliance with applicable administrative rules that implement statutory provisions. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 34 Or LUBA 498 (1998).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Application of criteria included in an acknowledged comprehensive plan governing redesignation of resource lands does not obviate the requirement that comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendments comply with the statewide planning goals. DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 728 (1997).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. The Statewide Planning Goals do not apply directly to the approval of a permit under the county's acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations. McArthur v. Lane County, 31 Or LUBA 309 (1996).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Once a local government's comprehensive plan and land use regulations are acknowledged under ORS 197.251, the Statewide Planning Goals no longer apply directly to its land use decisions, other than to those decisions which amend the acknowledged plan or regulations. Central Eastside Industrial Council v. Portland, 29 Or LUBA 429 (1995).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Where a county zoning district was acknowledged by LCDC as a forest zone, not a farm/forest zone, a regulation subsequently adopted by LCDC to apply immediately to uses in forest zones applies to uses within that zoning district. Testa v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 383 (1995).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. If a local government's comprehensive plan and land use regulations are acknowledged as being in compliance with the statewide planning goals, and the challenged decision approving a residential subdivision does not amend the local government's plan or land use regulations, the statewide planning goals to do not apply to the challenged decision. McCrary v. City of Talent, 29 Or LUBA 110 (1995).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Where a local government's acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations apply a freshwater wetland designation to certain property, the local government's application of regulations governing freshwater wetlands to development of the subject property is not error, even though comprehensive plan inventory documents suggest the property is in fact a saltwater marsh. ONRC v. City of Seaside, 29 Or LUBA 39 (1995).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. When adopting a comprehensive plan map amendment, a city can rely on its acknowledged plan and regulations as providing a sufficient number of large parcels of industrially designated land to comply with a plan policy requiring the designation of a sufficient number of such parcels, where the plan map amendment does not affect the inventory or use of such parcels. Salem Golf Club v. City of Salem, 28 Or LUBA 561 (1995).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. For ORS 197.829(4) to apply to LUBA's review of a governing body's interpretation of its own code, the connection between the local code provision and the statewide planning goal it is arguably designed to implement must be a close one. ORS 197.829(4) was not adopted to allow LUBA to reconsider the propriety of the original acknowledgment of comprehensive plans and land use regulations. Friends of the Metolius v. Jefferson County, 28 Or LUBA 591 (1995).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. After acknowledgment, a city is not required to apply the statewide planning goals to land use decisions that do not amend its acknowledged plan or land use regulations. Therefore, a city decision to provide city sewer and water service to development outside city limits does not concern the application of the statewide planning goals. Fraser v. City of Joseph, 28 Or LUBA 217 (1994).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. ORS 197.829(4) was not adopted to allow LUBA to reconsider the propriety of the original acknowledgment of comprehensive plans and land use regulations. Identification of an allegedly incorrect interpretation of such acknowledged comprehensive plan or land use regulation provisions is a condition precedent for invoking review under ORS 197.829(4). Historical Development Advocates v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 617 (1994).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Post-acknowledgment local code amendments which are not adopted to satisfy periodic review requirements are deemed acknowledged under ORS 197.625, if such amendments are not appealed to LUBA. Historical Development Advocates v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 617 (1994).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review LCDC acknowledgment orders. ORS 197.825(2)(c). Subject to review by the appellate courts, once an LCDC acknowledgment order is issued, it forecloses an appeal to LUBA on any issue that was raised or could have been raised in the LCDC acknowledgment proceedings concerning goal compliance. Redland/Viola/Fischer's Mill CPO v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 560 (1994).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. The Statewide Planning Goals are not directly applicable to a local government decision that approves a subdivision without amending the local government's acknowledged comprehensive plan. J.C. Reeves Corp. v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 318 (1994).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. If a county's comprehensive plan and land use regulations have been acknowledged by the Land Conservation and Development Commission pursuant to ORS 197.251, the statewide planning goals are directly applicable to a challenged land use decision only if the decision amends the county plan. DLCD v. Fargo Interchange Service District, 27 Or LUBA 150 (1994).

4.4 Statewide Planning Goals/ LCDC Rules – Acknowledgment. Where the county plan and zone designations applied to certain rural property at the time of acknowledgment permit a level of activity that requires sewer service, a petitioner may not challenge proposed development allowed by the acknowledged plan and land use regulations on the basis that the allowed development violates Goals 11 and 14. DLCD v. Fargo Interchange Service District, 27 Or LUBA 150 (1994).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. When a county acknowledges that no evidence in the record supports a determination that an adequate flow of water exists, and essentially follows the third Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992), option, it must comply with all of the third Rhyne option and defer its decision making to a proceeding that provides the statutorily required notice and hearing. Wachal v. Linn County, 78 Or LUBA 227 (2018).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. Where a local government has adopted and acknowledged a Citizen Involvement Program (CIP) that implements Goal 1, the only way a petitioner can demonstrate a violation of Goal 1 is by demonstrating that the local government failed to comply with the CIP. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. A county ordinance that adopts a text amendment to a comprehensive plan that discontinues a coastal advisory committee that is provided for in the comprehensive plan, and replaces it with a process for "appointing advisory committees to address specific land use issues" does not violate the requirements of Statewide Planning Goal 1 (Citizen Involvement) to provide for "clearly define[d] * * * procedures by which the general public will be involved in the on-going land-use planning process" and for the "continuity of citizen participation and of information that enables citizens to identify and comprehend issues." Oregon Coast Alliance v. Clatsop County, 75 Or LUBA 277 (2017).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. Arguments that a concept plan fails to comply with Statewide Planning Goal 1 (Citizen Involvement) provide no basis for reversal or remand for lack of compliance with Goal 1 where the concept plan does not amend or affect the city's acknowledged Citizen Involvement Program. Graser-Lindsey v. City of Oregon City, 74 Or LUBA 488 (2016).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. A county's use of a "redline" and "track changes" approach to show text that is being added and deleted, as well as marginal notes to further explain the amendments is sufficient to comply with the Goal 1 requirement that "information necessary to reach policy decisions" be in an "understandable form." Stevens v. Clackamas County, 68 Or LUBA 490 (2013).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. While Goal 1 requires ODOT to make use of existing local citizen involvement programs in amending the Oregon Highway Plan, it does not require ODOT to create new local citizen involvement programs, or mandate that local governments create or invoke local citizen involvement programs in coordinating future OHP future amendments to the Oregon Highway Plan. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. A city's failures to follow comprehensive plan and land use regulation provisions that were adopted to implement Goal 1 may constitute substantive or procedural errors; however, without more, any such errors do not constitute a violation of the city's Goal 1 obligation to develop a citizen involvement program. Jaffer v. City of Monmouth, 51 Or LUBA 633 (2006).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. Goal 10 (Housing) requires local governments to inventory available residential buildable lands, and Goal 2 (Land Use Planning) requires those inventories to be part of the comprehensive plan. Where the residential buildable lands inventory in the comprehensive plan is not useable, and an applicant presents evidence regarding the current inventory of buildable lands, Goal 1 (Citizen Involvement), Goal 2 and Goal 10 require that the comprehensive plan be amended to incorporate that inventory. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 50 Or LUBA 367 (2005).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. Goal 10 (Housing), Goal 2 (Land Use Planning) and Goal 1 (Citizen Involvement) require that a population projection that forms the basis of a city's residential lands needs analysis be incorporated into the comprehensive plan. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 50 Or LUBA 367 (2005).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. A citizen participation requirement for appointment of a three-person citizens' advisory committee when considering major land use regulation amendments is a procedural requirement. A petitioner who wishes to assign error to the local government's failure to appoint such a committee must have objected to that failure during the proceedings below. Dobson v. City of Newport, 47 Or LUBA 267 (2004).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. Where a planning commission fails to formally appoint a three-person citizens' advisory committee from the community at large when considering major land use regulation amendment, as required by an applicable citizen involvement comprehensive plan requirement, that failure does not constitute reversible error where the planning commission in fact seeks the advice of four members of the city's design review committee who are citizens of the community. Where no party disputes that the design review committee members are members of the community at large, the planning commission's decision to seek input from the design review committee either constitutes de facto compliance with the citizen involvement requirement or renders any failure to formally appoint a citizens advisory committee a procedural error that resulted in no prejudice to the petitioner or other citizens of the community. Dobson v. City of Newport, 47 Or LUBA 267 (2004).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. The Land Conservation and Development Commission has exclusive jurisdiction to review allegations that a county's proceedings under periodic review failed to comply with Goal 1 and LCDC's rules for conducting periodic review. Manning v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 1 (2003).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. Amendments to Metro's Regional Framework Plan and the Metro Code that do not amend or affect Metro's citizen involvement program can violate Goal 1 only if the decision is inconsistent with Metro's citizen involvement program. Homebuilders Assoc. v. Metro, 42 Or LUBA 176 (2002).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. Where amendments to a local government's comprehensive plan or land use regulations do not amend or affect the local government's acknowledged citizen involvement program, the only way a petitioner can demonstrate a violation of Goal 1 is by demonstrating a failure to comply with the acknowledged CIP. Casey Jones Well Drilling, Inc. v. City of Lowell, 34 Or LUBA 263 (1998).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. A city violates Goal 1 when it fails to follow its acknowledged citizen involvement program in adopting a temporary land use regulation. Western PCS, Inc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 33 Or LUBA 369 (1997).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. Where amendments to a local government's comprehensive plan or land use regulations do not amend or affect the local government's acknowledged Citizen Involvement Program (CIP), the only way a petitioner can demonstrate a violation of Goal 1 is by demonstrating a failure to comply with the acknowledged CIP. Churchill v. Tillamook County, 29 Or LUBA 68 (1995).

5. Goal 1 – Citizen Involvement. A local government does not violate Goal 1 or comprehensive plan policies implementing Goal 1 by adopting a decision six weeks after the final planning staff report is available, where a great deal of citizen involvement and participation preceded issuance of the final staff report. Friends of Cedar Mill v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 477 (1995).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Nothing in Goal 2 specifies that an agreement between a county and city to manage land within a UGB is incorporated by law into the local governments' comprehensive plans or codes, or mandates that the local governments take action to do so, and a mere statement in the county code or comprehensive plan that the agreement governs certain procedures is not sufficient to demonstrate that the latter is a part of the former. City of Albany v. Linn County, 81 Or LUBA 104 (2020).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. County and city comprehensive plans that contain conflicting definitions may nevertheless be consistent with each other, as required by Goal 2, where the county will evaluate consistency with the city comprehensive plan at the development stage and thereby ensure that the plans are applied in a consistent manner. City of Albany v. Linn County, 81 Or LUBA 104 (2020).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. The Goal 2 requirement that acknowledged comprehensive plans be the "basis" for land use decisions is not violated by citation to an adopted, but unacknowledged housing strategy document, where the cited portion of the document directly implements, in almost identical language, policy recommendations in the city's acknowledged housing needs analysis. Crowley v. City of Hood River, 77 Or LUBA 117 (2018).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Language in a city's acknowledged housing needs analysis finding an existing deficit of affordable housing in the city, and recommending that the city identify surplus city land for development with government-subsidized housing, provides a policy basis for the city to rezone public land from an open space zone to a residential zone that allows high density residential development. Crowley v. City of Hood River, 77 Or LUBA 117 (2018).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A city's process in adopting amendments to a subarea plan to approve a proposal to construct a new bridge does not violate Goal 2 where the city provided opportunities for review and comment on the proposed plan amendments by the public, and provided notice to neighborhood associations of the plan amendment proceedings, despite a very compressed period of time for public input regarding a fairly complex proposal. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A city errs in finding compliance with annexation standards based on a projection of housing need from a Portland State University study rather than on projections of housing need in the city's own acknowledged housing inventory. J4J Misc PAC v. City of Jefferson, 75 Or LUBA 120 (2017).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. LUBA is not required to affirm a county's interpretation of an exception to Goal 4 that is part of the county's comprehensive plan, where that interpretation is contrary to the exception statutes at ORS 197.732, Goal 2, and the rule that implements Goal 2 at OAR 660-004-0018. ORS 197.829(1)(d). Hood River Valley Residents v. Hood River County, 75 Or LUBA 452 (2017).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A county's interpretation of an irrevocably committed exception as allowing all uses on the exception site that are allowed in the zone that was applied to the site when the exception was approved is inconsistent with the ORS 197.732(1)(b) description of an exception as "a comprehensive plan provision that * * * is applicable to specific properties or situations and does not establish a planning or zoning policy of general applicability." Hood River Valley Residents v. Hood River County, 75 Or LUBA 452 (2017).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A decision by the city that it will not approve any road that is located in the conceptual location approved in a previously approved conceptual development plan, and that is also shown in the city's adopted transportation systems plan and the adopted area refinement plan for the city, would not be a land use decision that is "in compliance with the acknowledged plan and land use regulations." ORS 197.175(2)(d). GPA 1 LLC v. City of Corvallis, 74 Or LUBA 527 (2016).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Where a road is proposed in the conceptual location approved in a previously approved conceptual development plan, and is also shown in the city's adopted transportation systems plan and the adopted area refinement plan for the city, the city has a heightened obligation under Commonwealth Properties v. Washington County, 35 Or App 387, 400, 582 P2d 1384 (1978), to either (1) approve the proposed alignment that is consistent with the planned and approved location, or (2) make it very clear which of five other alternative proposed alignments the city will accept. GPA 1 LLC v. City of Corvallis, 74 Or LUBA 527 (2016).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A plan amendment that designates 33 acres for high-density residential development is not inconsistent with a plan policy requiring a minimum of 28 acres of high-density residential, including seven acres to provide public open space, notwithstanding the failure to specifically designate seven acres for open space, where the 33 designated acres can supply the required seven acres of open space. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. In adopting zoning that makes existing manufactured dwelling parks non-conforming uses in a high-density residential zone, a city is not required to consider in isolation a comprehensive plan policy requiring conservation of existing affordable housing, but may consider and balance other plan policies that promote competing policy objectives. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Remand is necessary where a city deletes two refinement plan policies requiring protection of existing manufactured dwelling parks, and zones the parks to make them non-conforming uses, but the findings do not explain how the amendments are consistent with a comprehensive plan policy requiring conservation of existing affordable housing. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A decision that adopts a refinement plan that describes a 15-inch wastewater pipeline that is not included in the city's acknowledged public facilities plan does not present a Goal 2 consistency problem or violation of Goal 11, where under the acknowledged plan 15-inch pipelines need not be included in the plan and the petitioner's argument that the plan must include the proposed pipeline represents a collateral attack on the acknowledged public facilities plan. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Goal 2 is not violated by adopting a plan amendment that references unacknowledged land use regulations. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Neither a petitioner nor a city may rely on an adopted planning document that had not taken effect at the time of the city's decision to argue that the question of whether a proposed comprehensive plan map amendment is in the public interest has been conclusively answered by the adopted but ineffective planning document. Vest v. City of Molalla, 66 Or LUBA 155 (2012).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Although previously adopted and acknowledged city public facilities plans identified as future public facilities projects the replacement of existing transmission lines and construction of a treatment plant, where a project that the city includes in a new public facilities plan proposes a larger diameter transmission pipe than any previous plan, more miles of pipeline than some previous plans, and relocation of the transmission pipe, the project that is included in the new public facilities plan has not previously been included in an adopted and acknowledged plan and the parties are not precluded from challenging the project. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 66 Or LUBA 392 (2012).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Where the text of an ordinance adopts and incorporates documents that are dated "September 2011" but the documents that are actually attached to the ordinance are dated "May 2012," and the ordinance and record viewed as whole make clear that the city council intended to adopt the more recent versions of the documents that were actually attached to the adopted ordinance, the mistaken reference in the text of the ordinance to the former versions of those documents is simply a typographical error that does not amount to a failure to comply with Goal 2's consistency requirements. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 66 Or LUBA 392 (2012).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Where a comprehensive plan amendment to the city's public facilities chapter includes a public facilities project as one of the improvements to be constructed within the twenty-year planning period, but a public facilities plan adopted concurrently with the comprehensive plan amendment and incorporated into the comprehensive plan fails to identify the project as a "short term" or "long term" project or to identify the project at all, the amendment means the comprehensive plan is internally inconsistent in violation of Goal 2. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 66 Or LUBA 392 (2012).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Nothing in Goal 2, Goal 11, or an urban growth management agreement between the city and the county for lands within the urban growth boundary requires the city to consider the impacts of a public facilities project on a county-identified Goal 5 resource, where the county was given an opportunity to and did not raise any concerns about the project's impact on a county-identified Goal 5 resource. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 66 Or LUBA 392 (2012).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A local government's reliance on a draft economic opportunities analysis that has not been adopted as a part of the local government's comprehensive plan to conclude that new regulations will not affect the city's supply of industrial land runs afoul of Statewide Planning Goal 2, even if the draft economic opportunities analysis is part of the record and could provide an adequate factual base to support the decision. Gunderson, LLC v. City of Portland, 62 Or LUBA 403 (2011).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Based on the Court of Appeals' decisions in 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of Dundee, 203 Or App 207, 216, 124 P3d 1249 (2005) and D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 165 Or App 1, 22, 994 P2d 1205 (2000), it would be error for a local government to ignore available commercial and industrial land data in its acknowledged comprehensive plan and rely instead on different data that is not part of the acknowledged comprehensive plan to conclude that a land use regulation amendment will leave the local government with an adequate supply of commercial and industrial land. However, if the local government also adopts adequate findings based on the commercial and industrial land data in its acknowledged comprehensive plan that the land use regulation amendment will not leave the local government with an inadequate supply of commercial and industrial land, the local government's additional findings that rely on data that is not included in the comprehensive plan provide no basis for reversal or remand. McDougal Bros. Investments v. City of Veneta, 59 Or LUBA 207 (2009).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. An argument that a county erred by changing a proposed zoning ordinance text amendment approximately a month before the change was adopted provides no basis for reversal or remand where a detailed explanation of the proposed change was provided shortly after the change was introduced, many written comments were received and one of the petitioners submitted detailed comments opposing the proposed change. Carver v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Although Goal 2 requires that "ultimate policy choices" be included in the comprehensive plan, Goal 2 does not dictate the manner in which a local government must make its ultimate policy choices or the form in which the city must express ultimate policy choices. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 52 Or LUBA 341 (2006).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Although the use of different planning periods in different regional planning documents might constitute an internal conflict that would violate the Goal 2 (Land Use Planning) internal plan consistency requirement, the statewide planning goals do not mandate identical planning periods in all planning documents in all circumstances and it is petitioners' obligation to demonstrate that the use of different planning periods in the particular planning documents constitutes a conflict that violates Goal 2. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Springfield, 50 Or LUBA 134 (2005).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A city may rely on a recent buildable lands inventory (BLI) that is a completed final document in demonstrating that a proposed transportation project will not result in a deficiency of buildable land under Goal 10 (Housing), even if that BLI has not yet been incorporated into the comprehensive plan. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of Dundee, 49 Or LUBA 601 (2005).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. When a city's population passes 2,500, more types of needed housing must be addressed, but the city does not have to amend its housing inventory before it can adopt any land use decision that will affect housing. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of Dundee, 49 Or LUBA 601 (2005).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A city's decision to rezone land to allow for future residential development notwithstanding the existence of an airport overlay zone on that property that currently prohibits residential uses does not violate Goal 2's requirement that land use regulations be consistent. Holcombe v. City of Florence, 45 Or LUBA 59 (2003).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A city's finding that additional residential land is needed to accommodate anticipated population growth is not inconsistent with a 1997 buildable lands inventory that sufficient residential land is available, where (1) a 2000 comprehensive plan indicates that during the late 1990s, there was a significant and unanticipated population increase that was not reflected in the 1997 buildable lands inventory, and (2) the 2000 comprehensive plan includes policies that allow for the designation of additional residential land to address housing needs resulting from that unanticipated growth. Holcombe v. City of Florence, 45 Or LUBA 59 (2003).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Neither Goal 10 nor Goal 14 require a finding of "demonstrated need" for additional residential land within the meaning of Goal 2, Part II or Goal 14, factors 1 and 2 before the city may amend its comprehensive plan map to allow property to be zoned for residential rather than industrial uses. Holcombe v. City of Florence, 45 Or LUBA 59 (2003).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review a regional transportation plan to determine whether it is consistent with a regional framework plan consistency requirement, where such consistency is also required by Goal 2 and LCDC has jurisdiction to review the regional framework plan and regional transportation plan for compliance with Goal 2. Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 40 Or LUBA 426 (2001).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A local government must rely on the housing inventory contained in its acknowledged comprehensive plan to determine whether rezoning property from multi-family residential to commercial use will cause the local government's housing inventory to violate Goal 10. Craig Realty Group v. City of Woodburn, 39 Or LUBA 384 (2001).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Metro's Regional Framework Plan, a master plan that incorporates and coordinates Metro's various functional plans, is a planning document of the type contemplated by Goal 2 that Metro must rely upon in making its required need determination for expanding the urban growth boundary, even though the 1997 population and demand figures in the plan do not reflect subsequent updates. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A demonstration of need for a UGB amendment must be based upon and consistent with the local government's planning documents adopted pursuant to the Goal 2-mandated planning process. In order to amend the UGB based on different population and capacity projections than those in the local government's comprehensive plan, the local government must amend the plan to include those different projections. Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 199 (2000).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Neither Goal 2 nor ORS 197.175(2) require that zoning ordinance amendments that are necessary to implement a comprehensive plan map amendment be adopted at the same time as the plan amendment. Neighbors for Livability v. City of Beaverton, 37 Or LUBA 408 (1999).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Findings that express confidence that particular existing zoning districts could be applied to implement a conditional plan map amendment are legally irrelevant, where the decision to amend the zoning map to implement the new plan map designation is deferred to a later date. Neighbors for Livability v. City of Beaverton, 37 Or LUBA 408 (1999).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. The lack of an available implementing zoning district at the time a conditional plan map amendment is adopted does not provide a basis for reversal or remand. In that event, at the time the city amends its zoning map to implement the conditional plan map amendment, it will be required to (1) adopt a new implementing zoning district or amend an existing zoning district so that it could be applied, or (2) adopt further plan map amendments that may be required to allow adoption of an implementing zoning district. Neighbors for Livability v. City of Beaverton, 37 Or LUBA 408 (1999).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Goal 2 does not forbid a comprehensive plan map amendment that will revert in two years to the previously existing acknowledged plan map designations, under specified conditions. Neighbors for Livability v. City of Beaverton, 37 Or LUBA 408 (1999).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Where a comprehensive plan map amendment adopts a plan map designation that authorizes several zoning districts, LUBA will assume the city will later apply the zoning districts that will comply with housing goals, rather than zoning districts that might violate those housing goals. If inappropriate zoning districts are applied later, the decisions adopting those zoning districts can be corrected through an appeal of those zoning map decisions. Neighbors for Livability v. City of Beaverton, 37 Or LUBA 408 (1999).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A local government does not violate the Goal 2 consistency requirement by using updated population projections instead of population projections in its comprehensive plan to determine the size of the urban land need under the urban reserve rule, OAR 660-021-0030, where the two projections serve different purposes and use of the updated projections does not undermine or conflict with the comprehensive plan or implementing regulations. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. In reviewing a county's legislative comprehensive plan amendment, LUBA does not require detailed findings, but Goal 2 requires a local government to explain why the amendment complies with applicable Statewide Planning Goals. The required explanation can appear in findings, in the record or in the brief the local government files with LUBA. Valerio v. Union County, 33 Or LUBA 604 (1997).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. A city violates Goal 2 when it adopts a temporary land use regulation without following the hearing and opportunity for review and comment requirements of Goal 2. Western PCS, Inc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 33 Or LUBA 369 (1997).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Statewide Planning Goal "guidelines" are simply suggested approaches that local governments may use in achieving compliance with the goals; they are not requirements with which local governments must comply. ORS 197.015(9); Goal 2, Part III. Churchill v. Tillamook County, 29 Or LUBA 68 (1995).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. The Goal 2 requirement for "ultimate policy choices" does not mean local governments cannot adopt ambiguous or subjective development standards or complex development review processes. Where LCDC interprets a particular Statewide Planning Goal to require that certain uses be subject only to clear and objective standards, it says so in an implementing rule. Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 28 Or LUBA 670 (1995).

6.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Generally. Where the only inventory of historic structures maintained by a city has not been adopted as part of the city's acknowledged comprehensive plan, a post-acknowledgment decision not to designate an inventoried building as a historical landmark is not a de facto post-acknowledgment plan amendment, even though the decision may ultimately allow the building to be demolished. Historical Development Advocates v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 617 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Where an acknowledged comprehensive plan addresses matters relevant to a state agency's program, the state agency is not required to demonstrate compliance with the plan and with the goals under ORS 197.180(1). Schaefer v. OAB, 81 Or LUBA 819 (2020).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The fact that an overlay zone that a county applies to lands adjacent to an airport extends into a city and the existence of an intergovernmental agreement between the county and the city regarding airport planning coordination do not give the city "planning authority" over the airport and, therefore, do not make the city an "affected city or county" for purposes of OAR 738-130-0015(1), OAR 731-015-0015(2), and those SAC programs. Schaefer v. OAB, 81 Or LUBA 819 (2020).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. A state agency SAC program's identification of "activities" that "significantly affect land use" for purposes of the SAC program does not relate to or answer the jurisdictional question of whether LUBA has jurisdiction over a decision because the decision creates "actual, qualitatively or quantitatively significant impact on present or future land uses" under the "significant impacts" test articulated in Peterson v. City of Klamath Falls, 279 Or 249, 566 P2d 1193 (1977). Schaefer v. OAB, 81 Or LUBA 819 (2020).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Although providing notice of proposed zoning ordinance text amendments and an extended open record period, alone, will not necessarily fulfill a county's Goal 2 coordination requirement if, in a given case, the local government input is not given meaningful consideration, where the county responds to legitimate issues raised by local governments and incorporates some of the comments it receives into the amendments, LUBA will conclude that the county has met its Goal 2 coordination requirement. City of Albany v. Linn County, 81 Or LUBA 104 (2020).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Where a city has made it clear in its comprehensive plan and in dealings over the years with a water district and a sanitary district that as a condition of the city providing city water and sewer services to water and sanitary district customers the properties receiving such services would have to annex to the city in the future, and the districts have no plans to provide water or sewer service to the disputed area, the city's decision to annex and withdraw that territory from the districts was adequately coordinated under Goal 2, although the city and the districts may dispute the desirability of that annexation. Roads End Water District v. City of Lincoln City, 67 Or LUBA 452 (2013).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Where evidence in the record shows that in one year during a multi-year planning process the city and county met five times to coordinate on joint projects, including the water public facilities planning process, the city satisfied its Goal 2 obligation to coordinate with the county in adopting the city's public facilities plan. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 66 Or LUBA 392 (2012).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Nothing in Goal 2, Goal 11, or an urban growth management agreement between the city and the county for lands within the urban growth boundary requires the city to consider the impacts of a public facilities project on a county-identified Goal 5 resource, where the county was given an opportunity to and did not raise any concerns about the project's impact on a county-identified Goal 5 resource. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 66 Or LUBA 392 (2012).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Where an interchange area management planning effort was a joint Oregon Department of Transportation (ODOT)/city effort, in satisfying its OAR 734-051-0155(5)(c) obligation to coordinate with affected property owners ODOT is not required to repeat the public outreach effort that was made before the city adopted the interchange area management plan. Parker Johnstone Wilsonville Honda v. ODOT, 62 Or LUBA 116 (2010).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Under Statewide Planning Goal 2, a local government is obligated to coordinate its plans with affected local governments and address the legitimate concerns of affected government units. However, a local government is not required to coordinate between the local government's proposed stormwater master plan and a plan that is adopted by the board of directors of a water control district in a non-public meeting and process that is merely a unilateral attempt by the water control district to dictate a particular outcome in an ongoing dispute between the local government and the water control district. Santiam Water Control District v. City of Stayton, 62 Or LUBA 149 (2010).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Under ORS 197.015(5), comprehensive plans are "coordinated" when the needs of all levels of government have been considered and accommodated as much as possible, and the local government has balanced the needs of all affected governmental units and selected a particular course of action from among the competing proposed courses of action. Santiam Water Control District v. City of Stayton, 62 Or LUBA 149 (2010).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. A city satisfies its Goal 2 and Airport Planning Rule coordination responsibilities where the city considers an airport's and the Federal Aviation Administration's (FAA's) concerns about a zoning district that allows through the fence access for residential development next to a public airport and the city requires that any applicant for such residential development secure a through the fence agreement with the airport and a letter of support from the FAA. Port of St. Helens v. City of Scappoose, 58 Or LUBA 122 (2008).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The Goal 2 coordination requirement requires that a local government's comprehensive plan be coordinated with the plans of affected governmental units. While a water district is an affected governmental unit, when the water district does not identify any plan that the local government must coordinate with, the local government does not violate the coordination requirement by failing to coordinate with the water district. Santiam Water Control District v. City of Stayton, 54 Or LUBA 553 (2007).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Where an urban growth management agreement between a county and city requires that each jurisdiction consider the comments of the other in certain specified proceedings, the local government need only consider those "legitimate concerns" that present issues that are relevant to the matter that is before it. Borton v. Coos County, 52 Or LUBA 46 (2006).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Where a city amends its transportation system plan to include an access management plan that was previously prepared by ODOT, it is the city's obligation to comply with the OAR 660-012-0015(5) requirement for coordination with affected private providers of transportation services. While the city may be able to rely on ODOT's coordination efforts at the time the access management plan was adopted, the city must establish that such coordination in fact occurred. Rhodes v. City of Talent, 50 Or LUBA 415 (2005).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The Goal 2 coordination requirement is satisfied where the hearings officer adopts lengthy findings addressing the city's concerns and explaining why the hearings officer believed he could not or should not accommodate the city's requests. The hearings officer is not required to accede to the city's requests. City of Damascus v. Clackamas County, 50 Or LUBA 514 (2005).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The Goal 2 coordination requirement applies when comprehensive plans and land use regulations are being adopted or amended, not when a local government applies the plan and land use regulations to grant tentative subdivision approval. Ghena v. City of Grants Pass, 50 Or LUBA 552 (2005).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The Goal 2 coordination requirement is not satisfied by a response to affected governmental bodies' concerns regarding a legislative text amendment that allows a dog control facility in county parks will be addressed when the facility is actually constructed, where the text amendment makes dog control facilities outright permitted uses, which can be constructed without notice or hearing at which such concerns can be raised and addressed. Cox v. Polk County, 49 Or LUBA 78 (2005).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. There is nothing in the language of ORS 197.025(1) and 268.385(1) that imposes a higher obligation on the Metropolitan Service District in performing its coordination obligation than is imposed under the Goal 2 coordination obligation. Therefore, in performing periodic review of a regional plan amendment, the Land Conservation and Development Commission will resolve the question of whether the Metropolitan Service District properly coordinated its decision, and LUBA does not have jurisdiction to consider that issue in a LUBA appeal of the same regional plan amendment. City of Sandy v. Metro, 48 Or LUBA 363 (2005).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. A city's failure to enter into an urban services agreement with a rural fire protection district prior to annexing property located within the fire district does not violate either Goal 2 or Goal 11. West Side Rural F.P.D v. City of Hood River, 43 Or LUBA 546 (2003).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. When a city invites comments from and meets with affected agencies, and the city incorporates some of the agencies' concerns and requests into its final decision, the Goal 2 coordination requirement is met. ODOT v. City of Klamath Falls, 39 Or LUBA 641 (2001).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The coordination requirement at OAR 660-012-0015(5) provides that the adopting local government must provide notice and an opportunity to comment to affected local governments. However, the rule does not require that the adopting local government provide additional notice and opportunity to comment each time the proposal is modified. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 38 Or LUBA 291 (2000).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Allowing affected local governments only seven days to comment on a revised UGB amendment master plan is consistent with the Goal 2 coordination requirement, where the local governments had opportunity to comment on the original master plan, the revisions reflect and attempt to accommodate those comments, and the affected local governments failed to request any additional time to comment on the revisions. Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 199 (2000).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The duty to coordinate under Goal 2 and ORS 197.015(5) does not mandate success in accommodating the needs or legitimate interests of all affected governmental agencies, but it does mandate a reasonable effort to accommodate those needs and legitimate interests "as much as possible." For LUBA to be able to determine that this coordination obligation has been satisfied, a local government must respond in its findings to "legitimate concerns" that are expressed by affected governmental agencies. Turner Community Association v. Marion County, 37 Or LUBA 324 (1999).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. An affected local government raises a legitimate concern where the concern is explained in sufficient detail to (1) communicate the expectation of some sort of response from the local government and (2) provide the decision maker with a sufficient understanding of the concern that an appropriate response can be included in the decision. Turner Community Association v. Marion County, 37 Or LUBA 324 (1999).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The requirement at OAR 660-021-0020 that a local government coordinate with affected governmental units in including lands within urban reserves is coextensive with the Goal 2 coordination requirement. Under either requirement, the local government must consider and accommodate as much as possible the needs of affected jurisdictions, and must respond in its findings to the legitimate concerns raised by those jurisdictions. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. A local government fails to satisfy the requirement of the Transportation Planning Rule, OAR 660-012-0060, to coordinate with affected jurisdictions, where it amends its comprehensive plan to allow a shopping mall designed to be a regional destination point, but limits its coordination efforts to ODOT and the surrounding county. Citizens for Florence v. City of Florence, 35 Or LUBA 255 (1998).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Where there is no particularized showing that a challenged decision will have any more effect on adjoining cities and counties than other jurisdictions in the metropolitan region, the Goal 2 coordination obligation is met by providing DLCD and the responsible regional agency notice and an opportunity to comment. Barnard Perkins Corp. v. City of Rivergrove, 34 Or LUBA 660 (1998).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The Goal 2 coordination requirement is fulfilled when written notice of a proposed land use plan amendment is provided to all potentially affected governmental units, and the notice explains the proposed action and invites written comment. Coordination does not require a local government to compel the governmental units to reply. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. A county fails to satisfy the Goal 2 coordination requirement of exchange of information when it rejects the state's request to postpone county population projections until the state completes its own projections, because the rejection eliminates any possibility of exchanging information or balancing the needs of other affected agencies. DLCD v. Douglas County, 33 Or LUBA 216 (1997).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The Goal 2 coordination requirement must be met by adopted findings that respond to state agency concerns. A statement in the record that county staff rejected state agency concerns does not satisfy the coordination requirement. DLCD v. Douglas County, 33 Or LUBA 216 (1997).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. County findings which do not accede to every request made by the Oregon Parks and Recreation Department regarding the proposed development, but explain the concerns raised by that agency, comment specifically on those concerns, and add conditions which the county determined appropriate to address the concerns raised, are sufficient to establish compliance with the Goal 2 coordination requirement. Brown v. Coos County, 31 Or LUBA 142 (1996).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. When, prior to an appeal to LUBA, a city satisfies the coordination requirement of OAR 660-12-060(3) by consulting with the county, and the development proposal does not change between LUBA's remand order and a second appeal, the city is not required to consult with the county again during the proceedings on remand. Melton v. City of Cottage Grove, 30 Or LUBA 331 (1996).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The coordination obligation imposed by Statewide Planning Goal 2 (Land Use Planning), and similarly worded local government comprehensive plan provisions, does not require that a local government accede to every concern expressed by a state agency, but does require that a local government adopt findings responding to legitimate concerns expressed by a state agency. ONRC v. City of Seaside, 29 Or LUBA 39 (1995).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Letters from state and federal agency personnel that are not addressed to the local government, and the oral comments of an individual member of a regional government council, may raise substantive issues but do not trigger a coordination obligation under Goal 2. Friends of Cedar Mill v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 477 (1995).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The coordination requirement of OAR 660-12-060(3) should be interpreted the same as the coordination provision in Goal 2, which requires the jurisdiction developing plan or land use regulation provisions (1) to exchange information with other affected governmental units; and (2) to consider and accommodate the needs of such governmental units as much as possible in formulating or revising the plan or regulations. Melton v. City of Cottage Grove, 28 Or LUBA 1 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. If a city located outside the Metro UGB wishes to plan to capture growth currently anticipated to occur within the Metro UGB, it must specifically coordinate that desire with Metro and the affected units of government within the Metro UGB. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The coordination required by Goal 2 is achieved by balancing the needs of all affected governmental units and selecting a particular course of action from among the competing proposed courses of action. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Providing notice of a post-acknowledgment plan or land use regulation amendment to the Department of Land Conservation and Development under ORS 197.610(1) is inadequate to satisfy a local government's coordination obligations. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. A sanitary district's obligation to provide sewer service, and a person's right to receive such sewer service, are subject to county comprehensive plan and land use regulation limitations on the provision of such sewer service. Bear Creek Valley San. Auth. v. City of Medford, 27 Or LUBA 328 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. A city and county may conclude the consequences of allowing sewer service to be provided without first securing consents to annexation outweigh any difficulties requiring such consents to annexation will pose for a sanitary district's use of local improvement districts to pay the cost of providing sewer service. Coordination under Goal 2 does not require that all affected governmental units agree on the proposal. Bear Creek Valley San. Auth. v. City of Medford, 27 Or LUBA 328 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. A city's unilateral decision to amend its acknowledged comprehensive plan policies concerning provision of urban services within an unincorporated area, such that the amended city plan is inconsistent with the acknowledged comprehensive plans of a county and another city, violates Goal 2 and improperly exercises coordination authority assigned to the Metropolitan Service District under ORS 197.190(1) and 268.385(1). Washington County v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 204 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Although Goal 2 requires that special district plans and actions related to land use must be consistent with city and county comprehensive plans, the goal does not establish any hierarchy for consistency between city and county plans. City of Portland v. Washington County, 27 Or LUBA 176 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The statutory and Goal 2 obligations to coordinate require an exchange of information between affected governmental units and the planning jurisdiction and a balancing of the needs of all governmental units and citizens of the state, to reach a course of action that is consistent with the comprehensive plans of affected governmental units. City of Portland v. Washington County, 27 Or LUBA 176 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Because cities and counties generally do not directly assert planning interests outside their municipal boundaries, changes in the acknowledged comprehensive plans of nearby jurisdictions generally will have only indirect consequences on the city's or county's comprehensive plan and will not amount to a conflict or result in an inconsistency. City of Portland v. Washington County, 27 Or LUBA 176 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. A city comprehensive plan amendment that simply makes a planning recommendation for an unincorporated area outside the city is unlikely to be "inconsistent" with the county comprehensive plan for that unincorporated area. City of Portland v. Washington County, 27 Or LUBA 176 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Where a proposed comprehensive plan amendment is opposed by one or more affected local governments, but will not actually conflict with the affected local government's plan, the entity proposing the comprehensive plan amendment satisfies its coordination obligation under Goal 2 by following the two steps set out in Rajneesh v. Wasco County, 13 Or LUBA 202 (1985). After having done so, the entity proposing the change may adopt the plan amendment. City of Portland v. Washington County, 27 Or LUBA 176 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. A local government that lacks ORS 197.190(1) coordination responsibility may not alter the acknowledged status quo by adopting or amending a comprehensive plan provision that is inconsistent with the acknowledged comprehensive plan of an affected local government. City of Portland v. Washington County, 27 Or LUBA 176 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. Although Goal 2 requires all units of government to coordinate their land use planning, ORS 197.190(1) imposes an overriding coordination responsibility on counties and the Metropolitan Service District to ensure that the plans within their boundaries make up an integrated comprehensive plan for the entire area of the county or Metropolitan Service District. City of Portland v. Washington County, 27 Or LUBA 176 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. In the circumstance where affected jurisdictions (1) have acknowledged plans which directly assert overlapping planning interests, and (2) cannot agree on "coordinated, consistent" plan amendments, only the county or Metropolitan Service District with ORS 197.190(1) coordination authority may unilaterally direct a change in the acknowledged status quo. City of Portland v. Washington County, 27 Or LUBA 176 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. The Metropolitan Service District may, under ORS 197.190(1) and 268.385(1), determine that a proposed amendment to an acknowledged comprehensive plan in an area of overlapping planning interests is "coordinated" under ORS

197.015(5) and Goal 2, even though the amendment is inconsistent with the acknowledged plan of another jurisdiction. Pursuant to ORS 268.380(2), Metro may require any existing acknowledged comprehensive plans that are inconsistent with the newly amended comprehensive plan to be amended to maintain consistency, as required by Goal 2. City of Portland v. Washington County, 27 Or LUBA 176 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. ORS 197.190(1) and 268.385(1) and Goal 2 directly impose plan coordination and consistency obligations on the Metropolitan Service District. Metropolitan area goals and objectives and functional plans may supplement Metro's coordination authority and obligation, but they are not a necessary precondition to Metro's exercise of its coordination authority, where a city's or county's adoption of a particular plan amendment will necessitate changes in one or more acknowledged comprehensive plans to maintain plan consistency under Goal 2. City of Portland v. Washington County, 27 Or LUBA 176 (1994).

6.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Coordination. ORS 197.190(1) and 268.285(1) both require that a Metropolitan Service District decision to coordinate be an action taken "through its governing body." Where the product of a Metro sponsored mediation is not formally adopted by the Metro governing body, it does not constitute an exercise of Metro's coordination obligation under those statutes. City of Portland v. Washington County, 27 Or LUBA 176 (1994).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. ORS 197.732(2)(c)(D) and OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d) require a finding that the proposed uses authorized by the proposed exception are "compatible with other adjacent uses or will be so rendered through measures designed to reduce adverse impacts." To establish compliance with OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d), the county's finding that the likely adverse impacts of the proposed uses allowed under the proposed exception are similar to the impacts of the existing uses must be supported by substantial evidence. The absence of evidence that the impacts would be different is not a basis to conclude that the impacts would be similar. Where this unsupported presumption that the impacts would be similar is the foundation of the much of the county's subsequent analysis, the presumption is not supported by substantial evidence, and remand is necessary for the county to adopt more adequate findings regarding compatibility, supported by substantial evidence. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. ORS 197.732(2)(c)(D) and OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d) require a finding that the proposed uses authorized by the proposed exception are "compatible with other adjacent uses or will be so rendered through measures designed to reduce adverse impacts." The potential adverse impacts of different types of liquid bulk terminals affiliated with a deepwater port, such as an oil terminal versus a fertilizer export operation, could be different enough to require a separate analysis. Adequate findings regarding compatibility would start by identifying the likely adverse impacts of typical uses authorized under approved use categories, evaluating each use category separately, and if necessary specific types of uses within each category. The findings should also address the characteristics of uses on adjoining areas, and assess vulnerability to potential externalities from industrial uses in the exception area. Informed by those analyses, the county can then reach sustainable conclusions regarding whether the proposed uses are compatible with adjoining uses, or can be rendered compatible via identified measures. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. OAR 660-004-0010(2) does not provide authority for the proposition that an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 4 is unnecessary to plan and zone an inventoried Statewide Planning Goal 5 aggregate site on forest land for mining rather than for forest uses. Rather, OAR 660-004-0010(2) simply makes it clear that a decision under Statewide Planning Goal 5 not to protect Goal 5 resource need not be supported by an exception to Goal 5. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Because of the way Statewide Planning Goal 5 is written, a decision to protect a significant aggregate resource site on forest land for mining, and to apply planning and zoning map designations to allow mining in a way that is not fully consistent with Statewide Planning Goal 4, does not require an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 4. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Pursuant to OAR 660-004-0018(4)(a), where a city finds that "[e]xisting plan and zoning designations" will be maintained for land subject to a Goal 15 exception, but does not explain why "existing plan and zoning designations" "limit the uses * * * public facilities and services, and activities" to only those that are justified in the exception, remand is required for the city to explain why the land subject to an exception to Goal 15 satisfies the requirement in OAR 660-004-0018(4)(a) that the plan and zone designations "limit the uses * * * public facilities and services, and activities" to those justified in the exception, or apply plan and zone designations that limit the uses to the transportation facilities that are justified in the exception. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Where a petitioner argues a Geographic Information System map in the record suggests that a portion of the Willamette River Greenway included in a city's Goal 15 exception is located outside the city limits, but within county limits, and therefore the county is also required to join in or approve its own Goal 15 exception, petitioner fails to allege a basis for remand or reversal because as a matter of law the official Willamette River Greenway overlay zone boundary is the boundary mapped by the Oregon Department of Transportation, which confirms the greenway overlay zone is entirely within city limits. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Where LUBA remands a comprehensive plan amendment to adopt limited, technical changes to the analysis of economic, social, environmental and energy (ESEE) consequences that was adopted to support an exception to Goal 3, the county does not err in limiting the scope of remand to exclude new issues raised on remand regarding new conflicts with agricultural uses that the petitioner argues should be considered in a revised ESEE analysis, where the alleged new conflicts have nothing to do with the limited, technical changes to the ESEE required by LUBA's remand. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. An LCDC acknowledgement order that includes findings that characterize an industrial zone that the county applied to land subject to an exception to Goal 4 as "rural zoning," supports a conclusion that as a matter of law LCDC did not acknowledge the zone to comply with Goal 14. Rather, the uses authorized by the zone were intended to be limited to uses that are appropriate outside an urban growth boundary. Hood River Valley Residents v. Hood River County, 75 Or LUBA 452 (2017).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Nothing in OAR chapter 660, division 4, requires a county to identify one specific proposed use when adopting a reasons exception, or precludes a county from identifying a wide range of uses as the proposed "use." Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Adopting a reasons exception for an open-ended range of unspecified industrial uses, justified under three separate, partially overlapping "reasons," is a permissible approach, but compared to justifying a single proposed use under a single reason, the broader approach complicates an already difficult process, when the analysis moves to determining whether the proposal complies with the reasonable accommodation, ESEE and compatibility standards, and at the end of the process when the local government must apply zoning that limits uses to those allowed in the reasons exception. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. In taking a reasons exception, a local government must ensure that there is a close, direct relationship between the reason that is advanced to justify the exception, the proposed use or uses that fit within that reason and are analyzed under the exception standards, and the uses that are ultimately authorized by the zoning applied to the exception area. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. OAR 660-004-0018(4) provides that in taking a reasons exception a local government shall adopt zoning that limits the uses to those justified in the exception. Complying with OAR 660-004-0018(4) is difficult when the reasons exception is intended to authorize a broad array of unspecified rural industrial uses, under three separate reasons, because it may be unclear which specific industrial uses are allowed in the exception area and whether they have been justified in the exception. That difficulty might be overcome if the exceptions document that is incorporated into the comprehensive plan, the conditions imposed, and the approval standards and plan policies that will apply to any proposed industrial use are sufficient to ensure that only uses justified in the reasons exception are allowed. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d) requires findings that the use proposed for an exception area will be rendered compatible with adjacent uses through measures designed to reduce adverse impacts. However, merely identifying a local process that in the future will identify the proposed use, identify the adverse impacts of that use and then identify and impose specific measures to reduce impacts is insufficient to comply with OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d), because it represents a deferral of compliance with the exception standard. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Even if there may be circumstances where it is permissible to defer to a later permit proceeding consideration of goal compliance issues that tangentially arise in processing a post-acknowledgment plan amendment that does not require a goal exception, it is clearly impermissible to approve a goal exception while deferring to a later permit proceeding a determination that a Goal 2 exception standard is or is not met. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. That the county initially adopted a problematic interpretation of the criteria for applying a limited use overlay zone to limit uses allowed on land for which a reasons exception is taken does not provide a basis for reversal or remand, where the county adopted an alternative interpretation that is consistent with the text of the zone change criteria. Devin Oil Co. v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 104 (2012).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Under a zone change criterion that requires a finding that the proposed base zone is "best suited" to accommodate the proposed use, in order to apply a limited use overlay zone to limit uses of the property to uses justified in a reasons exception, the fact that other base zones would also accommodate the proposed use does not undermine the county's finding that the proposed tourist commercial zone is best suited, where there is no evidence that the other zones are better suited than the tourist commercial zone, and the reasons exception was expressly justified based on tourist commercial uses and application of the tourist commercial base zone. Devin Oil Co. v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 104 (2012).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. LUBA will affirm a governing body's interpretation of a code standard allowing imposition of a limited use overlay zone if "it is required to limit the uses permitted in the proposed zone" by the reasons exception rule at OAR chapter 660, division 4, to employ the overlay zone to limit uses to ensure consistency with Statewide Planning Goal 12 (Transportation), and the need to take an exception to Goal 12, even though the county took reasons exceptions only to other statewide planning goals, where the county's interpretation is not inconsistent with the express language, purpose or underlying policy of the code standard. Devin Oil Co. v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 104 (2012).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. While OAR 660-004-0018(4) requires that a reasons exception must limit uses authorized to those justified in the exception, the rule does not expressly require that the local government use the mechanism of an overlay zone to achieve that end, or preclude the use of appropriate conditions imposed under the plan or zoning amendments as part of the reasons exception. Devin Oil Co., Inc. v. Morrow County, 62 Or LUBA 247 (2010).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. LUBA will reverse under ORS 197.829(1) a governing body's interpretation that a Limited Use overlay zone is applied to limit uses in exception areas only when the applicant requests it, and that instead conditions of approval can be applied to limit uses, when (1) the Limited Use overlay zone is expressly intended for that purpose, (2) nothing in the code suggests an alternative mechanism to limit uses or authorizes attaching conditions of approval to limit uses in exception areas, and (3) under the county's interpretation and the criteria that govern designation of the overlay zone there are no circumstances under which the overlay zone could be applied. Devin Oil Co., Inc. v. Morrow County, 62 Or LUBA 247 (2010).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Where a county approves an exception for a transportation facility that will cross privately owned and federally owned EFU-zoned land, the county must approve the exception for both the privately and federally owned land. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. The statewide planning goal exception standards are set out at ORS 197.732 (statutory standard), Goal 2, Part II (goal standard); OAR chapter 660, division 4 (general administrative rule standard); OAR 660-012-0070) (transportation improvements on rural land); OAR chapter 660, division 14 (urban development of rural land). Those different exception standards vary somewhat in their wording and level of detail, and where a Goal 14 exception is required to allow residential development on rural land, OAR 660-014-040 is the more particular standard and the exception standard that applies to such Goal 14 exceptions. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 215 Or App 414, 422-23, 171 P3d 368 (2007). Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 61 Or LUBA 240 (2010).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. A net reduction in potential development density on rural land could be a sufficient reason under OAR 660-014-0040(2) to allow existing rural residential zoning to be relocated and reduced in size. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 61 Or LUBA 240 (2010).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Where a county's EFU zone does not permit solid waste disposal sites, but the statutory EFU zone does allow solid waste disposal sites, under the holding in DLCD v. Yamhill County, 183 Or App 556, 53 P3d 462 (2002), a county may not approve an exception to Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands) to allow a solid waste disposal site on EFU-zoned property. Rather, the county must amend its EFU zone to allow solid waste disposal sites if it wishes to authorize that use on its EFU-zoned land. Waste Not of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 61 Or LUBA 423 (2010).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. When a goal exception is taken to facilitate proposed development, any comprehensive plan policies that implement the goal for which the exception is taken no longer govern that development. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Remand is necessary where the local government adopts exceptions to Statewide Planning Goals 11 and 14 to approve a destination resort, but fails to address comprehensive plan transportation policies that appear to implement Statewide Planning Goal 12 (Transportation), for which the local government did not adopt an exception, and the decision fails to explain why those policies are either satisfied or not applicable. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. In rezoning existing exception areas, OAR 660-004-0018(2)(b) does not require a county to evaluate all of the various uses potentially allowed in the new rural zone when (1) the rezone is from one nonresource zone to another nonresource zone, (2) the site is already developed with an existing use, and (3) the purpose of the rezone is to conform the zoning designation more closely to that existing use. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 56 Or LUBA 408 (2008).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Where an existing exception area is rezoned to allow redevelopment of a developed site or development of a vacant site, OAR 660-004-0018(2)(b) may require the county to evaluate at least those uses in the new zone that are more intensive than uses allowed in the old zone and impose appropriate conditions if necessary to assure that the new zoning complies with the rule. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 56 Or LUBA 408 (2008).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. LUBA will affirm findings that rezoning a vacant exception area from rural industrial to rural commercial is consistent with OAR 660-004-0018(2)(b), notwithstanding that the applicant does not propose a specific commercial use to evaluate, where the county concludes that any allowable use in the commercial zone would not commit nearby resource lands to nonresource use or be incompatible with such uses, given that the property is isolated and buffered from nearby resource uses by a highway, a river, and residential development. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 56 Or LUBA 408 (2008).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. A county does not err by failing to consider and approve an exception to Goals 3 and 4, where the application for a comprehensive plan and zoning map designation that would allow rural residential development is based on a code provision that allows rural nonagricultural and nonforest lands to be designated for rural residential use. Rutigliano v. Jackson County, 47 Or LUBA 470 (2004).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Under Goal 2, Part II(c)(4) an exception to allow a parkway on agricultural land requires that impacts on adjacent uses be reduced to a compatible level. Where a petitioner argues the challenged decision fails to do so and respondents identify no findings addressing this requirement, remand is required. Friends of Eugene v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 239 (2003).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Petitioner's argument that land formerly within a city's urban growth boundary is necessarily subject to an exception to Goal 3 provides no basis for remand where it is not clear that the property was subject to a Goal 3 exception when included in the UGB and, even if it was, petitioner does not explain why removal of the property from the UGB would leave the property subject to a Goal 3 exception as a matter of law. Manning v. Marion County, 42 Or LUBA 56 (2002).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Rural nonresource property for which a Goal 2 exception has not been taken is not subject to the Goal 14 safe harbor provisions of OAR 660-004-0040. DLCD v. Klamath County, 40 Or LUBA 221 (2001).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. In adopting an exception to the statewide planning goals to allow rural residential use of forestland, a local government must comply with the requirements of OAR 660-004-0018(2)(b) regarding rural uses in exception areas. Rural residential zoning, in itself, does not demonstrate that the exception area will not commit nearby resource uses to nonresource uses and that the exception area is compatible with nearby resource uses, particularly when nearby rural residential uses are used to justify a conclusion that the exception area is committed to nonresource use. DLCD v. Coos County, 39 Or LUBA 432 (2001).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Before amending an urban growth boundary to add land with predominantly Class I soils to meet an identified need for commercial land, a county must determine whether alternatives to adding a site with predominantly Class I soils can reasonably accommodate the identified need. That alternatives analysis under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b)(B) is a multi-factor analysis and rejecting alternative sites solely because they have soils that may increase development costs is error. DLCD v. Douglas County, 38 Or LUBA 542 (2000).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Land that is already included within a UGB is assumed to be available for urban development. That assumption is not rendered invalid simply because sites that are planned and zoned for residential, industrial and commercial use have soil or other characteristics that make them less than ideal to develop. DLCD v. Douglas County, 38 Or LUBA 542 (2000).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Alternative sites to meet an identified need for commercially planned and zoned land may not be rejected solely because they have soils limitations that the USDA estimates may result in an average 39 percent development cost increase for some small commercial buildings. The estimated 39 percent cost increase is an average, so it may be lower in particular cases, and any added cost may be offset by other advantages the sites may possess. DLCD v. Douglas County, 38 Or LUBA 542 (2000).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Where petitioner argues that a Goal 3 exception to allow a subdivision of 10 five-acre lots on rural land also requires an exception to Goal 14, but petitioner fails to explain why such a subdivision constitutes an urban use and fails to challenge the county's findings that the proposal would be served by rural services, LUBA will reject the argument. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 489 (2000).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. ORS 197.732(6), which applies to LUBA's and LCDC's review of goal exception decisions, does not require LUBA to perform a comprehensive and independent evaluation of a proposed goal exception, but is satisfied by a reasoned opinion. Laurance v. Douglas County, 33 Or LUBA 292 (1997).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. The county's failure to provide adequate notice of a proposed goal exception under ORS 197.732(5) is a procedural error that will not result in reversal or remand where the record demonstrates that petitioners' substantial rights were not prejudiced. Middleton v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 423 (1996).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. At a minimum, ORS 197.732(5) requires that the county's notice of a proposed goal exception must include a brief summary of the issues involved in the proposed exception, in addition to the list of applicable criteria required by ORS 197.763(3)(b). Middleton v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 423 (1996).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. ORS 215.431(1) and (2) allow delegation by a county governing body to the county planning commission or hearings officer of the authority to conduct hearings and make decisions on applications for plan amendments, subject to appeal to the county governing body. However, under ORS 215.413(5)(a), ORS 215.431(1) and (2) do not apply to any plan amendment for which an exception to any of the Statewide Planning Goals is required. Young v. Douglas County, 31 Or LUBA 545 (1996).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. Under OAR 660-04-020(2)(d), an exception to Goal 3 may be approved so long as compatibility with adjacent uses will be achieved through measures designed to reduce adverse impacts; compliance with the compatibility standard need not be actually achieved prior to approval of the exception. Schrock Farms, Inc. v. Linn County, 31 Or LUBA 57 (1996).

6.3.1 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Generally. A county governing body's interpretation that an otherwise applicable code permit standard requiring "Class I-IV soils [to] be preserved and maintained for farm use" is not applicable to land for which an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands) has been adopted as part of the acknowledged county comprehensive plan, is not "clearly wrong," and is within the governing body's discretion under ORS 197.829. Reeves v. Yamhill County, 28 Or LUBA 123 (1994).

6.3.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Developed. Findings and argument that forest uses are "impractical" on the subject property due to existing development and due to fire buffers that would be required along some of the property's borders and around some of the existing development do not demonstrate that the property is "physically developed to the extent that it is no longer available" for forest uses, as required by ORS 197.732(2)(a) and OAR 660-004-0025(1) for a physically developed exception to Goal 4, and such a conclusion is not supported by substantial evidence where at least 87 percent of the property's area is available for forestry and where the applicant does not attempt to quantify the amount of buffer that would be required to conduct forest uses or the amount by which that buffer would decrease the property available for forest uses. Dooley v. Wasco County, 81 Or LUBA 44 (2020).

6.3.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Developed. The county did not err in concluding that the "unique resource" at issue, a deepwater river port whose upland portions are located within the existing exception area, is still "located on agricultural or forest land" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(a). Although "Agricultural Land" for purposes of Goal 3 and its implementing administrative rule does not include land areas subject to exceptions to Goal 3, it does not necessarily follow that agricultural land, as that term is used in OAR 660-004-0022 or other parts of the Goal 2 exception rule is subject to the same restriction. At least for the limited purpose of evaluating the need for and compliance with exception standards to allow new or changed uses contrary to the resource goals, land within an exception area potentially remains "agricultural land" subject to Goal 3, and where the original exception did not take an exception to Goal 4 the site potentially remains "forest land." Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

6.3.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Developed. An LCDC acknowledgement order that includes findings that characterize an industrial zone that the county applied to land subject to an exception to Goal 4 as "rural zoning," supports a conclusion that as a matter of law LCDC did not acknowledge the zone to comply with Goal 14. Rather, the uses authorized by the zone were intended to be limited to uses that are appropriate outside an urban growth boundary. Hood River Valley Residents v. Hood River County, 75 Or LUBA 452 (2017).

6.3.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Developed. Where a county adopts both irrevocably committed and physically developed exceptions to the statewide planning goals, but the only issues raised below were directed at the physically developed exceptions, ORS 197.763(1) precludes the petitioner from challenging the irrevocably committed exceptions for the first time at LUBA. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 56 Or LUBA 408 (2008).

6.3.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Developed. Under OAR 660-004-0025(2), the "uses allowed by the applicable goal" that cannot be used to justify a physically developed exception are not limited to the uses set forth in OAR 660-004-0028(3)(b) and (c), which apply to irrevocably committed exceptions. Cotter v. Clackamas County, 53 Or LUBA 25 (2006).

6.3.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Developed. Under OAR 660-004-0025(2), the phrase "uses allowed by the applicable goal" does not exclude uses conditionally allowed in forest zones under OAR 660-006-0025 merely because such uses are subject to review to analyze impacts to adjacent forest lands. Cotter v. Clackamas County, 53 Or LUBA 25 (2006).

6.3.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Developed. A local government decision approving a physically developed exception under OAR 660-04-025 to Goals 3 and 4 will be remanded where the findings do not establish that the property is physically developed with non-resource uses. DLCD v. Columbia County, 32 Or LUBA 221 (1996).

6.3.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Developed. The county's denial of a developed exception will be upheld when the county finds that the physical characteristics of the property do not render it irrevocably committed to nonresource uses; there is continuing resource use of properties to the north, east and west; and the existence of public facilities and services installed to serve the residence on the site do not irrevocably commit the remainder of the site to nonresource uses. Sandgren v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 454 (1995).

6.3.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Developed. Even if petitioners' evidence supports a conclusion that a resource parcel is not adequate for commercial timber production, that conclusion does not justify an exception to Goals 3 and 4 since it does not establish that all uses allowed by the applicable goals are impracticable. Sandgren v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 454 (1995).

6.3.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Developed. The standards for approving a physically developed exception to Statewide Planning Goals 3 and 4 are demanding. The county must find that the property has been physically developed to such an extent that all Goal 3 or 4 resource uses are precluded. Uses established in accordance with the goals cannot be used to justify such an exception. Sandgren v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 454 (1995).

6.3.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Developed. The bias under Goals 3 and 4 in favor of commercial agricultural and forest enterprises does not mean a local government may assume that noncommercial farm and forest uses are not "uses allowed by the applicable goal" for which a proposed exception area's suitability must be considered in granting an exception. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

6.3.2 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Developed. A local government may not assume that the entire parcel or ownership occupied by an existing dwelling or road is physically developed so that it is not available for uses allowed under the goals. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The mere existence of residential uses near a property proposed for an irrevocably committed exception to Goal 4 does not demonstrate that such property is necessarily committed to nonresource use, and findings that the subject property is enclosed on three of its sides by existing residential development and that use of the subject property for a forestry operation could be potentially disruptive to that residential community are inadequate to describe the relationship of the subject property to adjacent lands, as required by OAR 660-004-0028(2)(c), where the findings do not address the relationship of the subject property to adjacent forest and resource land that are in timber production and forest use and/or that possess soils suitable for forestry production, or the potential for resource use of the subject property in conjunction with the adjacent forest-zoned properties. Dooley v. Wasco County, 81 Or LUBA 44 (2020).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The correct standard under OAR 660-004-0028(3) for an irrevocably committed exception to Goal 4 is not whether commercial forestry operations are practicable on the subject property—counties must consider forest operations that are smaller in scale and generate less revenue than commercial forestry operations—and findings that focus on alleged conflicts with nearby residential uses from conducting commercial forestry on the property are inadequate to demonstrate that forest uses are "impracticable," as required by OAR 660-004-0028(3), where the findings do not consider whether forest operations that are smaller in scale would create similar conflicts that render forest use of the property impracticable; where, given the soil types on the property, the findings do not establish that forest use of the property is impracticable or explain why trees could not be planted on the property; and where the findings rely on conflicts with residential uses resulting from spraying, which are not sufficient, in themselves, to justify an irrevocably committed exception. Dooley v. Wasco County, 81 Or LUBA 44 (2020).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The county did not err in concluding that the "unique resource" at issue, a deepwater river port whose upland portions are located within the existing exception area, is still "located on agricultural or forest land" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(a). Although "Agricultural Land" for purposes of Goal 3 and its implementing administrative rule does not include land areas subject to exceptions to Goal 3, it does not necessarily follow that agricultural land, as that term is used in OAR 660-004-0022 or other parts of the Goal 2 exception rule is subject to the same restriction. At least for the limited purpose of evaluating the need for and compliance with exception standards to allow new or changed uses contrary to the resource goals, land within an exception area potentially remains "agricultural land" subject to Goal 3, and where the original exception did not take an exception to Goal 4 the site potentially remains "forest land." Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. An LCDC acknowledgement order that includes findings that characterize an industrial zone that the county applied to land subject to an exception to Goal 4 as "rural zoning," supports a conclusion that as a matter of law LCDC did not acknowledge the zone to comply with Goal 14. Rather, the uses authorized by the zone were intended to be limited to uses that are appropriate outside an urban growth boundary. Hood River Valley Residents v. Hood River County, 75 Or LUBA 452 (2017).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Where a county adopts both irrevocably committed and physically developed exceptions to the statewide planning goals, but the only issues raised below were directed at the physically developed exceptions, ORS 197.763(1) precludes the petitioner from challenging the irrevocably committed exceptions for the first time at LUBA. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 56 Or LUBA 408 (2008).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Because a committed exception under OAR 660-004-0028 is based primarily on the relationship between the exception area and adjacent lands, arguments that the land within a one-mile radius of the subject property is predominantly farmland does not demonstrate error in the county's findings that adjacent residential development commits the subject property to non-resource use. Scott v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 691 (2008).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Evidence that 73 percent of the parcels within a one-mile radius are less than five acres in size, including 18 lots in the immediate vicinity of the subject property that average 2.5 acres in size, is sufficient to support the county's finding under OAR 660-010-0028(6)(d) that the character of the neighborhood and region is predominantly residential rather than agricultural, notwithstanding that the county might reach a different conclusion if it evaluated a much larger area. Scott v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 691 (2008).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Under OAR 660-004-0028(6)(e), a county must evaluate whether natural or man-made features or impediments, such as roads, separate the exception area from adjacent resource lands. It is immaterial under the rule whether the applicant owns the adjacent resource lands. Scott v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 691 (2008).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Findings supporting an irrevocably committed exception are inadequate, where the county fails to identify any conflicts between adjoining uses and resource use of the property or address whether adjoining parcels were created pursuant to the applicable statewide planning goals. That adjoining farm-zoned parcels have dwellings is an insufficient basis for concluding that a parcel is irrevocably committed to residential use. Lancefield Farm Co. v. Yamhill County, 56 Or LUBA 781 (2008).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Where a county's findings note that property contains a spring and a road and that adjacent lands contain dwellings, but do not otherwise explain why the spring and the road and the adjacent dwellings make resource use of the property impracticable, the county's findings are inadequate to demonstrate compliance with OAR 660-004-0028(2). Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 57 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A county errs in concluding that residential uses of properties in the vicinity of the property have committed the subject property to non-resource use, without explaining why those same residential uses will not result in committing other resource lands in the area to non-resource use. Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 57 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Under OAR 660-004-0028(2)(c), findings must address "the relationship between the exception area and the lands adjacent to it." Findings that discuss lands located within a 2000-foot radius from the proposed exception area but do not discuss the lands adjacent to the exception area are inadequate. Gordon v. Polk County, 54 Or LUBA 351 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The mere presence of adjoining residential uses is not a sufficient basis for concluding that resource lands are irreversibly committed to non-resource uses. Gordon v. Polk County, 54 Or LUBA 351 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. OAR 660-004-0028(6) requires the county's findings to focus on existing adjacent uses and parcel size and ownership patterns on adjacent lands. Findings that analyze parcel sizes within a 2000-foot radius of the property and beyond, but do not discuss adjacent uses and ownership patterns, are inadequate. Gordon v. Polk County, 54 Or LUBA 351 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The focus of OAR 660-004-0028(6)(b) is to determine whether existing public facilities and services on or near the property commit the property to non-resource use. The focus is not on determining whether public facilities and services are available to serve proposed non-resource uses. Gordon v. Polk County, 54 Or LUBA 351 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Under OAR 660-004-0018(2), where the county concludes that residential uses have committed a property to non-resource use but also concludes that residential uses of the exception area will not further commit resource lands to non-resource use, the county must provide an explanation for why residential uses that commit one resource property to residential use will not result in that same residential use committing other resource lands in the area. Gordon v. Polk County, 54 Or LUBA 351 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. If an exception area does not include land on the county's acknowledged inventory of Goal 5 resources, the county need not adopt an exception to Goal 5. Gordon v. Polk County, 54 Or LUBA 351 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Absent evidence of conflicts or similar impediments to resource use, the fact that access to forest land is via a county road that passes through an area of rural residential homes is not a sufficient basis to conclude that the property is irrevocably committed to uses not allowed by Goal 4. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. That a paved county road may not be suitable to transport heavy equipment necessary for grass seed farming does not mean that the road is inadequate to provide access for other agricultural uses, and is not a sufficient basis to conclude that the property is irrevocably committed to non-agricultural uses. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. That some residential neighbors may find pasturing of animals objectionable is not a sufficient basis to conclude that property otherwise suitable for pasturing animals is irrevocably committed to non-farm uses. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. While OAR 660-004-0028(6) does not require detailed descriptions of adjacent existing uses, a finding that "some incidental farm use, limiting to pasturing of horses, occurs to the north" is an inadequate description of adjacent farm uses. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The purpose of the OAR 660-004-0028(6)(b) requirement to identify existing public facilities and services is to determine whether existing public facilities and services on or near the subject property contribute to irrevocably committing the property to non-resource use. The purpose is not to determine whether public facilities and services are available to serve proposed non-resource uses. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A finding that a Goal 14 exception has been taken for some properties in the area of the subject parcel is inadequate to satisfy the OAR 660-004-0028(6)(c)(A) requirement that the findings analyze how the existing development pattern in the area came about and whether findings against the statewide planning goals were made at the time of partitioning or subdividing. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Where a local government concludes that adjoining rural residential development commits resource land to uses not allowed by Goals 3 or 4, OAR 660-004-0018(2) requires the local government to explain why rural residential development of the subject property will not also result in committing other resource lands in the area. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Where in adopting a committed exception under OAR 660-004-0028 the local government includes findings addressing some of the standards for adopting a reasons exception under OAR 660-004-0020(2), LUBA will remand to the local government to either delete those findings or explain what relevance they have to the committed exception. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A county's findings that chemicals are required in the future in order to make forest practices on a property practicable are not supported by substantial evidence where the record does not indicate whether chemicals were already applied to the property or that whatever applications might be necessary have not already occurred. Anderson v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 454 (2006).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Contamination of drinking water through application of herbicides, pesticides and fertilizers on adjacent resource lands is not an occasional inconvenience accompanying rural life that rural residents must be willing to accept, and might provide the basis for a committed exception to Goal 4. Anderson v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 454 (2006).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A county's finding that aerial spraying of chemicals is necessary in order to make forest practices on a 20-acre property practicable is not supported by substantial evidence where the evidence in the record supports a conclusion that manual application is the preferred method of application for properties 40 acres or smaller and the findings do not provide other reasons that manual spraying is not practicable. Anderson v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 454 (2006).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Where the county's conclusion that forest uses are impracticable because of liability risks associated with possible contamination of drinking water through application of chemicals hinges upon its finding that aerial spraying is necessary, and that findings is unsupported by substantial evidence, the challenged decision fails to demonstrate that uses allowed by Goal 4 are impracticable. Anderson v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 454 (2006).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A risk of liability for negligent application of fertilizers on property that might result in contamination of drinking water serving adjacent lands does not provide a sufficient basis to conclude that farm use is impracticable on the subject property. Anderson v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 454 (2006).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Findings supporting a conclusion that a property is irrevocably committed to nonresource use that rely on the property's similarity to other properties already zoned for nonresource use and the presence of residences on adjacent lands are not sufficient to explain why the relationship between the property and adjacent lands make the property impracticable for resource uses. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 730 (2006).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Where a proposed plan amendment, zone change and goal exception would result in a split-zoned parcel with the northern portion planned and zoned for residential use and the southern portion planned and zoned for resource use, and a policy in the county's comprehensive plan at least arguably permits land divisions along boundaries separating exception areas from resource lands, and such a division would result in lots smaller than the minimum lot size permitted by the county's acknowledged Goal 14 exception, the county must adopt Goal 14 findings or, if necessary, adopt a specific exception to Goal 14. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 730 (2006).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A landowner is not legally obligated to withdraw land from forest operations in order to protect adjoining rural residential lands from the potential threat of windthrow, and the potential of such windthrow resulting from logging forest lands is not a basis to conclude that such lands are committed to non-resource uses. Gordon v. Polk County, 50 Or LUBA 647 (2005).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Riparian protection measures required under the Forest Practices Act are not "forest practices" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0028(3)(c), and a county may consider setbacks and other riparian protection measures in determining whether forest land is irrevocably committed to non-resource use. Gordon v. Polk County, 50 Or LUBA 647 (2005).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. That two-acres of a 41-acre parcel are subject to riparian setbacks and other limitations on logging does little to demonstrate that propagation and harvesting of forest products on the parcel is impracticable. Gordon v. Polk County, 50 Or LUBA 647 (2005).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Incidents of trespass and vandalism on forest lands are insufficient to demonstrate that such lands are irrevocably committed to non-resource use, where most of the cited incidents stem not from trespassers but from residential neighbors and their guests who enter the property as invitees. Gordon v. Polk County, 50 Or LUBA 647 (2005).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Some level of trespass and vandalism is an inevitable aspect of maintaining large tracts in forest use, particularly near rural residential areas. Unless such incidents rise to such a level that they actually hinder or preclude forest operations on a significant part of the property, such incidents do not demonstrate that forest use of the property is impracticable. Gordon v. Polk County, 50 Or LUBA 647 (2005).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. In adopting a committed exception to Goal 14, a county does not err in assuming that residential properties less than 2 acres constitute "urban levels of development," to support its conclusion that all rural uses on the subject property are impractical. Doob v. Josephine County, 49 Or LUBA 113 (2005).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Where a local comprehensive plan policy defines "Urban Exception Areas" as lands with acknowledged exceptions to Statewide Planning Goals 3, 4 and 11, the county need not require an exception to Goal 11 where it limits uses in approved exception area to those uses that do not require or impact urban public facilities. Doob v. Josephine County, 49 Or LUBA 113 (2005).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. While a county need not address every possible farm use defined under ORS 215.203(2)(a) in adopting a committed exception to Goal 3, when a party below identifies a particular farm use that may be practicable, the county must address the practicability of that farm use. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The focus of a committed exception under OAR 660-004-0028 is the relationship between the subject property and adjacent uses. Findings that describe and rely upon alleged impacts from rural residential uses up to one-half mile from the subject property, and that provide no description or analysis of adjacent uses, are insufficient to demonstrate that the subject property is committed to nonresource uses. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A county's reliance on reported incidents of vandalism and other crimes in a large rural residential area near a parcel are insufficient to demonstrate that the parcel is committed to nonresource uses, absent evidence that the cited criminal incidents interfere or are likely to interfere with farm or forest uses on the subject property. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Externalities from farm or forest operations such as dust, spray, smoke and noise are inherent aspects of rural life in agricultural or forest zones, and absent evidence that such externalities have or are likely to cause actual conflicts with resource operations, evidence of the possibility of such conflicts with rural residential uses is insufficient to demonstrate that resource uses are impracticable. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The focus of analysis under OAR 660-004-0028 is on existing circumstances that contribute to the practicability of resource use in the exception area, not speculative future circumstances. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Where a county concludes that conflicts with adjoining rural residential development commit a property to nonresource uses, the county's findings addressing OAR 660-004-0018(2)(b)(B) must explain why residential development of the subject property will not present the same risk of committing other adjacent resource lands to nonresource uses. Given the complex nature of that explanation, evidence of conflicts with rural residential uses do not "clearly support" a finding that residential zoning of the subject property will not commit adjacent resource lands, for purposes of ORS 197.835(11)(b). Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Concerns that topsoil might wash down on an adjoining residential area and that resource related truck traffic will have impacts on that residential area are the kinds of discomforts that are part and parcel of rural living and they do not provide a basis for an irrevocably committed exception. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 44 Or LUBA 349 (2003).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Concerns that a property owner's use of large quantities of well water on a resource parcel for farm or forest use might interfere with individual wells used by nearby rural residences does not support a conclusion that farm or forest use of the resource parcel impracticable. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 44 Or LUBA 349 (2003).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Although it may be appropriate to focus exclusively or preponderantly on the poor quality of soils for farm and forest use in deciding whether a particular tract qualifies as agricultural lands or forest lands, such an exclusive or preponderant focus on the tract itself is not appropriate in considering an irrevocably committed exception, where the focus is on the relationship of the adjoining properties to the tract. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 42 Or LUBA 235 (2002).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Speculative impacts on an adjoining rural subdivision from possible future aerial application of herbicides, pesticides and fertilizer and future movement of trucks to and from a 39-acre parcel for future farm and forest use are the occasional inconveniences that rural residents must be willing to accept and do not provide a basis for a committed exception to Goals 3 and 4. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 42 Or LUBA 235 (2002).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A reasons exception for rural housing is not "necessary" under the last sentence of OAR 660-004-0022(2), if the county fails to demonstrate that land inside nearby urban growth boundaries or on nearby exception lands could not accommodate any identified market demand for housing, as required by OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b). Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 42 Or LUBA 235 (2002).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A county errs in concluding that agricultural land is committed to nonfarm uses under OAR 660-004-0028(6), where its conclusion rests preponderantly on the characteristics of the subject property and fails to identify any conflicts or other aspects of the relationship between the subject property and adjoining residential uses that commit the property to nonfarm uses. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 41 Or LUBA 358 (2002).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A finding that existing improvements and the presence of seasonal drainage areas limit farm use of agricultural land is inadequate to demonstrate that the land is irrevocably committed to nonfarm uses, where the finding fails to describe the limitations, or explain why such longstanding limitations now render farm use of the subject property impracticable, given the history of farm use on the property. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 41 Or LUBA 358 (2002).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Findings that address certain rural residential locational criteria in the county's comprehensive plan are inadequate to address the specific requirements of OAR 660-004-0028(6), where the locational criteria do not implement the rule and bear no obvious relationship to the rule's requirements. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 41 Or LUBA 358 (2002).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Absent recent or imminent changes in adjacent rural residential uses, where a neighboring subdivision has been developed for many years and the subject property has been in resource use during much of that time, the existence of those adjacent rural residential uses is insufficient to demonstrate that the subject property is irrevocably committed to nonresource use. DLCD v. Lane County, 39 Or LUBA 445 (2001).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. When the local government does not demonstrate that the uses allowed by the goals are impracticable, there is no need to resolve relevancy and evidentiary challenges to the findings. DLCD v. Coos County, 39 Or LUBA 432 (2001).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Findings supporting an irrevocably committed exception must address adjacent lands that may tend to make resource use of the proposed exception area practicable as well as adjacent lands that may tend to make resource use impracticable. DLCD v. Coos County, 39 Or LUBA 432 (2001).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The mere existence of residential uses near a proposed exception area does not demonstrate that the proposed exception area is committed to nonresource use, especially when most of the nearby properties with residential uses also include resource uses. DLCD v. Coos County, 39 Or LUBA 432 (2001).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A county errs in relying exclusively on rural residential locational criteria in its comprehensive plan in taking a committed exception to Goal 3, instead of the criteria of OAR 660-004-0028, where nothing in the county comprehensive plan purports to waive or supplant any requirement of state law. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 74 (2000).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Where petitioner argues that a Goal 3 exception to allow a subdivision of 10 five-acre lots on rural land also requires an exception to Goal 14, but petitioner fails to explain why such a subdivision constitutes an urban use and fails to challenge the county's findings that the proposal would be served by rural services, LUBA will reject the argument. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 489 (2000).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Findings that characteristics of adjoining uses support an irrevocably committed exception to Goal 3 are inadequate where the findings do not explain (1) how many of the adjoining lots are developed, (2) what activities on those lots have impacts on the proposed exception area, (3) why services provided to those lots impact the proposed exception area, or (4) why adjoining recreational and open space uses make farm use of the proposed exception area impracticable. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 489 (2000).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. While the characteristics of a proposed exception area itself are relevant in addressing the requirements for an irrevocably committed exception, the focus must be on impacts from adjoining properties and it is error to give "exclusive or preponderant weight" to characteristics of the proposed exception area itself. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 489 (2000).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. In adopting an irrevocably committed exception where the proposed exception area has a history of farm use and is currently in farm use, it is not sufficient to rely solely upon long-standing site characteristics or the presence of long-standing adjacent conflicting uses. An adequate demonstration of impracticability must identify recent or imminent changes affecting the subject property that, by themselves or in combination with other factors, render continued farm use of the property impracticable. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 357 (2000).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The mere presence of residential uses on EFU-zoned properties adjacent to a proposed exception area does not demonstrate that the subject property is irrevocably committed to nonfarm uses. In considering residential uses on adjacent properties, the county must identify in its findings the conflicts or other impacts between the residential uses and the subject property that make farm use of the subject property impracticable. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 357 (2000).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. OAR 660-004-0028(6)(c)(B) does not require that the county consider as one farm or forest operation those contiguous, undeveloped parcels under common ownership not zoned for resource use. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. OAR 660-004-0028(6)(c) prohibits impacts from rural residential uses approved pursuant to the statewide land use goals from being used to justify a committed exception for nearby property. Where a county decision relies in part on impacts from nearby residential uses to conclude that the resource lands are irrevocably committed to nonresource use, the findings must establish that those conflicts do not arise from residential areas that were approved pursuant to statewide planning goal exceptions. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A local government is not required to adopt findings addressing the farm tax deferral status of property when considering the "irrevocably committed" factors of OAR 660-004-0028. However, the fact that property is in farm tax deferral is relevant evidence in determining whether it is impracticable to put the property to farm use. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Once a local government reaches a supportable conclusion that growing timber is impracticable on forest land, it does not need to address the practicability of other forest practices described in OAR 660-006-0025(2)(a). Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A conclusion that a property has a negative present net value if converted to forest uses, without explaining what relevance a forest operation's present value has on whether forest uses are impracticable, is inadequate to demonstrate that forest uses are in fact impracticable. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. In reviewing a county's decision that property is irrevocably committed to nonresource uses, LUBA is not required to give any deference to the county's explanation for why it believes the facts demonstrate compliance with the legal standards for a committed exception. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Findings that state there is "sufficient evidence in the form of oral testimony and documentation to support the application," and also state that existing adjacent parcels are "clustered around" two roads are insufficient to adequately describe the characteristics of adjacent lands and the uses located on them as required by OAR 660-004-0028(2)(b) and (6)(a). DLCD v. Wallowa County, 37 Or LUBA 105 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A determination that rural residential uses on EFU property would create a buffer between urban uses and nearby agricultural land is not a proper consideration in granting an exception under OAR 660-004-0028. DLCD v. Wallowa County, 37 Or LUBA 105 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Where a Goal 4 committed exception imposes a zoning district with a five-acre minimum lot size and a lot of record provision that allows development of lots smaller than five acres but does not impose a specific residential density limit, the county governing body exceeds its interpretive discretion in interpreting the exception as imposing a 2.3-acre minimum residential density. Columbia Hills Development Co. v. Columbia County, 36 Or LUBA 691 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A committed-exception zone-change decision that acknowledges the existence of Goal 5 resources on the subject property, but concludes that the county's existing Goal 5 plan provisions will address any conflicts, is not adequate to demonstrate compliance with Goal 5, where the findings do not state which of the county's existing Goal 5 plan provisions ensure continued compliance once the exception is taken, and the findings do not consider whether the zone change may introduce the possibility of new conflicting uses. Pekarek v. Wallowa County, 36 Or LUBA 494 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Until the county has adopted findings that determine precisely what inventoried Goal 5 resource areas are located on the subject property, it is not possible to identify which county Goal 5 resource protection programs affect all or parts of the subject property, and the county is in no position to adopt findings explaining whether a committed-exception zone-change is consistent with the county's existing Goal 5 resource protection provisions. Pekarek v. Wallowa County, 36 Or LUBA 494 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A finding that the soils on the subject property are unsuitable for farm use is an inadequate, unexplained conclusion where the subject property is predominantly Class VI soils and the comprehensive plan provides that such soils have significant importance for grazing. Pekarek v. Wallowa County, 36 Or LUBA 494 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Committed exception findings must explain what it is about existing parcel size and ownership patterns that irrevocably commit resource land to nonresource use, specify the location of parcels created prior to application of the Goals, and distinguish those parcels created pursuant to the Goals. Pekarek v. Wallowa County, 36 Or LUBA 494 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Adequate findings regarding adjacent uses must specifically identify adjacent uses and explain what it is about the adjacent uses that make the farm use of the subject property impracticable. Pekarek v. Wallowa County, 36 Or LUBA 494 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Assuming that the existence of water and sewer lines on adjacent lands may be relevant to whether a property is irrevocably committed to nonresource use, findings must explain what that relevance is. Pekarek v. Wallowa County, 36 Or LUBA 494 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A property need not be capable of supporting a commercial farm by itself to be capable of being put to "farm use" as that term is defined in ORS 215.203. Pekarek v. Wallowa County, 36 Or LUBA 494 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The ultimate issue in LUBA's review of a decision adopting a committed exception under OAR 660-004-0028 is whether the adopted findings that are relevant and supported by substantial evidence are sufficient to demonstrate compliance with the standard of ORS 197.732(1)(b) that uses allowed by the goal are impracticable. Lovinger v. Lane County, 36 Or LUBA 1 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. OAR 660-004-0028 does not require a finding that the characteristics of the proposed exception area are sufficient in and of themselves to commit the property to nonresource use. All factors in the rule must be considered, including the characteristics of the adjacent lands. Lovinger v. Lane County, 36 Or LUBA 1 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. In considering challenges to committed exception findings the question of whether the local government adopted the required findings addressing the characteristics of adjacent lands and the relationship between the exception area and adjacent lands is distinct from the question of whether the adopted findings demonstrate that uses allowed by Goal 3 are impracticable on the subject property. Lovinger v. Lane County, 36 Or LUBA 1 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Under OAR 660-004-0028(6)(c)(A), conflicts with rural residential development in exception areas created pursuant to applicable goals cannot be used to justify a committed exception on the subject property. A finding that a majority of nearby parcels were created before the statewide planning goals is insufficient to demonstrate compliance with this requirement. Lovinger v. Lane County, 36 Or LUBA 1 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The requirement in OAR 660-004-0028(6)(c)(B) that "several contiguous undeveloped parcels" under one ownership shall be considered as one farm or forest operation does not require that a contiguous developed parcel be considered as part of contiguous farm operation. Lovinger v. Lane County, 36 Or LUBA 1 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A Goal 3 committed exception cannot be justified based on a finding that "commercial farming" is impracticable on the subject property. Protection under Goal 3 is not limited to commercial farms. Lovinger v. Lane County, 36 Or LUBA 1 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A Goal 3 committed exception cannot be justified based on a finding that the property is not capable of supporting an economically self-sufficient agricultural operation, or property on which a reasonable farmer could make a living entirely from agricultural use of the land. Farm uses that do not meet that threshold are protected by Goal 3. Lovinger v. Lane County, 36 Or LUBA 1 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. In considering whether farm uses are impracticable, a county may not limit its consideration to "traditional" agricultural uses, where the feasibility of "nontraditional" agricultural uses is raised as an issue before the county. However, where the county's findings nevertheless address the feasibility of "nontraditional" uses, the county's possible misunderstanding of the scope of the required analysis provides no basis for reversal or remand. Lovinger v. Lane County, 36 Or LUBA 1 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A county's findings and reasons do not demonstrate that the relationship between the subject property and adjacent lands has irrevocably committed the subject property to uses not allowed by Goal 3, or that uses allowed by the goal are impracticable where: (1) the property includes prime agricultural soils, (2) the property has a long history of and is currently used for sheep raising and other farm uses; (3) few conflicts between adjacent uses and farm uses on the subject property are identified and (4) the county applied an incorrect legal standard in assessing whether farm uses are impracticable on the subject property. Lovinger v. Lane County, 36 Or LUBA 1 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A finding that property is "not ideal" for rural residential use under current zoning is not sufficient to demonstrate that it is "impracticable" to use the property for such rural residential use, where a rural residence exists on the property and the decision does not explain why proximity to the interstate highway or other abutting uses make continued rural residential use impracticable. James v. Josephine County, 35 Or LUBA 493 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A committed exception to Goal 11 will be remanded, where the effect of taking the exception is to allow urban uses that would not be supported by levels of public facilities and services appropriate for a rural area and the county has not shown that it is impracticable to continue using the property for rural residential use. James v. Josephine County, 35 Or LUBA 493 (1999).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. In light of historical use of the property for grazing, its high-value soils and similarities between the property and adjacent resource lands, the county's unexplained reliance on a winter high-water table and slight to moderate slopes on the property are inadequate to demonstrate that farm use on the property is impracticable in order to justify a committed exception to Goal 3. Wodarczak v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 453 (1998).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A committed exception to Goal 3 is not justified by the mere presence of adjacent residential development, without evidence of conflicts or an explanation why the relationship between that development and the subject property renders farm use impracticable on the property. Wodarczak v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 453 (1998).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. In approving a committed exception to Goal 3, the county is required by OAR 660-004-0018(2) to limit use on the property within the exception area to ensure that the exception does not tend to commit adjacent and nearby resource lands to nonresource uses. Wodarczak v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 543 (1998).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Committed exceptions must be based on facts illustrating how past development has cast a mold for future uses; taking a committed exception requires an analysis of how existing development on some parcels affects practicable uses of others. Brown v. Jefferson County, 33 Or LUBA 418 (1997).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The county's findings do not demonstrate that the subject property is irrevocably committed to non-resource uses where the findings describe the characteristics of the subject property, but do not explain what impact those characteristics have on the practicability of uses on the property. Brown v. Jefferson County, 33 Or LUBA 418 (1997).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Findings that address neighborhood and regional characteristics under OAR 660-04-028(6)(d) by concluding that there will continue to be an increasing demand for additional rural residential homesites in the future are irrelevant to a conclusion that a committed exception is justified. Brown v. Jefferson County, 33 Or LUBA 418 (1997).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Under OAR 660-04-028(3), the appropriate standard for determining whether farm use is impracticable on the subject property is whether the property is capable, now or in the future, of being employed for agricultural production for the purpose of obtaining a profit in money. Brown v. Jefferson County, 33 Or LUBA 418 (1997).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. All the factors listed in OAR 660-04-028(6), including "existing adjacent uses" and "other relevant factors," are applicable to an irrevocably committed exception. DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 313 (1997).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The purported unsuitability of a property for resource use is not an "other relevant factor" for purposes of approving an irrevocably committed exception for that property under OAR 660-04-028(6). DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 313 (1997).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. An irrevocably committed exception under Goal 2 concerns the relationship between the exception area and adjacent lands. Under OAR 660-04-028(6), a county decision granting an exception to Goals 3 and 4 based on a factor that has nothing to do with that relationship is in error. DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 313 (1997).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A local government decision approving an irrevocably committed exception under OAR 660-04-028 to Goals 3 and 4 will be remanded where it does not include findings supported by substantial evidence establishing that uses allowed by Goals 3 and 4 are impracticable. DLCD v. Columbia County, 32 Or LUBA 221 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Conflicts between certain property and rural residential development in exception areas created pursuant to the applicable goals cannot be used to justify a committed exception on the property. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 488 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. To approve an irrevocably committed exception, a county must find that all uses allowed by the goals are impracticable, but this does not mean the findings must anticipate every conceivable objection by specifically addressing each and every use potentially allowable under the applicable goals. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 488 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Where the county attempts to apply a rural residential zoning density in an irrevocably committed exception area, a conclusory finding that redesignation of the subject parcel will not cause adjacent resource lands to satisfy working paper guidelines for irrevocably committed exceptions does not substitute for the actual analysis required under OAR 660-04-018(2)(b)(B) regarding the potential commitment of adjacent resource lands to nonresource use. Johnson v. Lane County, 31 Or LUBA 454 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Findings adopted by the county approving a committed exception to Goals 3 and 4 are inadequate where they contain no discussion or explanation of how the existing uses on adjacent parcels make resource use on the subject property impracticable. Johnson v. Lane County, 31 Or LUBA 454 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Where the county's conclusion that two parcels are not contiguous for purposes of OAR 660-04-028(6)(c)(B) is not factually established in the record and is inconsistent with evidence relied upon by the county regarding nonresource use on adjacent parcels, the county's finding is not supported by substantial evidence in the record. Johnson v. Lane County, 31 Or LUBA 454 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The county's reliance on the existence of adjacent non-resource parcels in justifying a committed exception is impermissible under OAR 660-04-028(6)(c)(A) where the findings do not adequately establish how or when the adjacent parcels were created. Johnson v. Lane County, 31 Or LUBA 454 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. OAR 660-04-028(6)(c)(A) does not categorically prohibit a local government from relying upon the existence of adjacent exception areas in granting a committed exception. Rather, the rule permits consideration of past land divisions that were made without application of the Statewide Planning Goals as one factor in the analysis of whether a committed exception should be allowed if the manner of development on the resulting parcels or other factors makes resource use unsuitable on those parcels or on nearby lands. Johnson v. Lane County, 31 Or LUBA 454 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Where the county's findings regarding parcel size and ownership patterns on lands adjacent to a proposed exception area contain no reference to the analysis required by OAR 660-04-028(6)(c)(A), and do not suggest that the county is relying upon separate incorporated documents to provide that analysis, the county's incorporation of the entire application does not provide a sufficient reference to the specific documents relied upon by the county to satisfy the applicable criteria. Johnson v. Lane County, 31 Or LUBA 454 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. County findings that describe the physical characteristics and existing uses of adjacent lands in approving a committed exception to Goals 3 and 4 are adequate for purposes of OAR 660-04-028(2)(b) and (6)(a). Those rules do not require the county to make findings regarding the ownership of the adjacent parcels or the proximity of developed uses on adjacent lands. Johnson v. Lane County, 31 Or LUBA 454 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The failure of adjacent property owners to manage their lands actively and successfully, the frustrated intentions of a developer in creating a large-capacity water system to serve the subject forest property, the earlier approval of a three-phase subdivision, the property's potential for non-resource use and similar considerations do not support a determination that the property is irrevocably committed to non-resource use. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Columbia County, 31 Or LUBA 47 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Capital expenditures for streets, water lines, electric power, design, engineering and surveying on an adjacent property are not relevant to finding a committed exception unless they detract from management of the subject property for forest uses. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Columbia County, 31 Or LUBA 47 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Under OAR 660-04-028(6)(c)(A), a county may not rely on the developed characteristics of adjacent non-resource parcels created pursuant to applicable goals to justify a committed exception on the subject property. DLCD v. Curry County, 30 Or LUBA 294 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. When property is located in a combined agricultural and forest zone, findings in support of an irrevocably committed exception must establish that all uses allowed by Goals 3 and 4 are impracticable. A finding that the property has never been in agricultural use is insufficient. DLCD v. Curry County, 30 Or LUBA 294 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. A finding that commercial forestry is impracticable on certain property does not justify an irrevocably committed exception to Goal 4. The county must show the property is impracticable for all Goal 4 uses. DLCD v. Curry County, 30 Or LUBA 294 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Under OAR 660-04-028(6)(e), man-made features such as roads may constitute impediments to resource use and may justify an irrevocably committed exception for resource lands. However, the existence of a scenic buffer on the subject property adjacent to a road at the property's edge does not necessarily make resource use of the entire property impracticable. DLCD v. Curry County, 30 Or LUBA 294 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The fact that adjoining properties have different uses, topography or characteristics from the subject property has no bearing on whether it is irrevocably committed to non-resource uses, unless the different uses, topography or characteristics make resource use on the property impracticable. DLCD v. Curry County, 30 Or LUBA 294 (1996).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. In order to justify an irrevocably committed exception, the county must determine, based on an evaluation of the facts, that surrounding residential uses make resource use of the subject property impracticable. DLCD v. Coos County, 30 Or LUBA 229 (1995).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. To justify an irrevocably committed exception on forestland, the county must explain in findings why the facts upon which it relies lead to a conclusion that uses allowed by Goal 4 are impracticable. DLCD v. Coos County, 30 Or LUBA 229 (1995).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Both Goal 4 and Goal 2 require the county to evaluate the practicability of all forest uses on the subject property before determining that such uses are impracticable and taking a committed exception. DLCD v. Coos County, LUBA No. 30 Or LUBA 229 (1995).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. To approve an irrevocably committed exception to Goals 3 and 4, the county must find that all uses allowed by the goals are impracticable, primarily as a result of uses established on adjacent parcels. Sandgren v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 454 (1995).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Findings that address only the practicability of commercial forestry uses, rather than all commercial and noncommercial uses allowed by Goals 3 and 4 on agricultural and forestlands, do not justify an irrevocably committed exception to either Goal 3 or Goal 4. DLCD v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 415 (1995).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Findings must address the practicability of commercial forestry uses on adjacent lands as well as in a proposed exception area to satisfy the requirements for an irrevocably committed exception to either Goal 3 or Goal 4. DLCD v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 415 (1995).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Under OAR 660-04-028(6)(c), findings are necessary on when and how the existing development pattern of adjacent parcels occurred and whether past land divisions were made through application of the goals, in order for the county to determine if it can consider existing uses of any adjacent parcels in deciding whether those uses make resource uses in a proposed exception area impracticable. DLCD v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 415 (1995).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Findings to justify a committed exception to Goals 3 and 4 must address the factors of OAR 660-04-028(6) and must be supported by substantial evidence explaining how conflicts between existing uses and resource uses operate in a particular instance to render the subject property irrevocably committed. DLCD v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 415 (1995).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. In adopting a "committed" exception to Goals 3 and 4, a local government may consider the characteristics of the subject property as one of the "other relevant factors" to be addressed in the analysis required by OAR 660-04-028(1). DLCD v. Curry County, 28 Or LUBA 205 (1994).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The bias under Goals 3 and 4 in favor of commercial agricultural and forest enterprises does not mean a local government may assume that noncommercial farm and forest uses are not "uses allowed by the applicable goal" for which a proposed exception area's suitability must be considered in granting an exception. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. The impracticability standard for committed exceptions is a demanding standard, and findings must do more than recite facts addressing the relevant factors, they must also explain why those facts lead to a conclusion that uses allowed by Goals 3 and 4 are impracticable. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Even where a local government's findings supporting an "irrevocably committed" goal exception address all factors made relevant under OAR 660-04-028, and are supported by substantial evidence in the record, it is still LUBA's responsibility to determine whether the findings demonstrate compliance with the standard of ORS 197.732(1)(b) that "existing adjacent uses and other relevant factors make uses allowed by the applicable goal impracticable." 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Columbia County, 27 Or LUBA 474 (1994).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. Findings that (1) an undisclosed portion of a 143-acre property is occupied by gravel roads, (2) an unspecified number of residences on adjacent properties create the possibility of trespass and complaints regarding forest operations, and (3) two powerline easements separate the property from other forestlands, are insufficient to explain why it is impracticable to use the subject property for uses allowed by Goal 4, as required by ORS 197.732(1)(b) for an irrevocably committed goal exception. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Columbia County, 27 Or LUBA 474 (1994).

6.3.3 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Committed. OAR 660-12-060(4) prohibits using the existence of transportation facilities as a basis for approving (1) exceptions to the requirements of OAR 660-12-065, adopted under OAR 660-12-070; or (2) exceptions to statewide planning goals, adopted under OAR 660-04-022 (reasons exceptions) or OAR 660-04-028 (committed exceptions). OAR 660-12-060(4) does not apply to an exception for a change to an established UGB, adopted under OAR 660-04-010(1)(c)(B). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. In the context of a reasons exception to allow a data center use on agricultural land, while a local government cannot judge whether a property has a service-based locational advantage without a complete understanding of the extent of services in the alternative locations, the absence of an inventory of existing infrastructure in the record does not undermine the decision-maker's conclusion that the exception area provides a "significant comparative advantage," for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c), where alternative sites were not rejected based upon the unavailability of services. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Morrow County, 81 Or LUBA 508 (2020).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Speculation that a reasons exception to allow an industrial use on agricultural land will hasten future zone change applications does not establish that the exception will not "cause only minimal loss of reproductive resource lands" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c); however, the fact that that an equal amount of land elsewhere in the jurisdiction will be rezoned from industrial to agricultural does not demonstrate that that criterion is met where the findings do not discuss the quality or productivity of the resource lands in the proposed exception area or otherwise attempt to describe, in qualitative terms, what removing the agricultural zoning of the proposed exception area means for resource land productivity. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Morrow County, 81 Or LUBA 508 (2020).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. In the context of a reasons exception to allow a data center use on agricultural land, that a site is under contract or currently used for the disposal of wastewater; that a site is in federal ownership and that its ownership transfer timeline is unknown; that much of a site is covered in wetlands and that removal and fill of the wetlands will increase risk and will increase costs in an amount in the tens of thousands of dollars; that a site is too close to other existing or planned data centers to avoid general, undefined issues of facility proximity and interdependence; and that a site is inconsistent with the applicant's objective of ultimately extending services to a particular property do not necessarily establish that those sites "cannot reasonable accommodate the use" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Morrow County, 81 Or LUBA 508 (2020).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. In determining whether to take a reasons exception under ORS 197.732(2)(c), where a local government finds that there is a public need to provide certain residents, many of whom are of limited financial means and mobility, with close access to the proposed uses, the local government does not err in concluding that "[a]reas that do not require a new exception cannot reasonably accommodate the use" under ORS 197.732(2)(c)(B) because the proposed location is the only location that is accessible to the residents. VanSickle v. Klamath County, 80 Or LUBA 241 (2019).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A locational attractor which may support a reasons exception under OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c) need not be located on rural land outside a UGB. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 80 Or LUBA 521 (2019).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. An approximately 80-acre photovoltaic solar power generation facility is not "industrial development" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 80 Or LUBA 521 (2019).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Where the challenged decision is limited to a single site in a remote rural area, is based on a single unique resource, and limits its authorization to five categories of rural industrial uses that are significantly dependent on that resource, nothing in OAR 660-004-0020 or -0022 precludes a county from justifying an amount of land for a range of deepwater port-dependent rural industrial uses based on the best available evidence regarding the types and land needs of likely industrial uses, without knowing exactly which industrial uses will locate in the exception area or exactly how much acreage each use will require. Although the typical reasons exception involves only a single proposed use, the size of which is generally known, and in such cases it is relatively easy to determine "the amount of land for the use being planned" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0020(2)(a), a county may take a reasons exception to allow more than one use, or even a range of uses, the exact nature and size of which may not be known. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Goal 3 does not generally allow industrial uses on agricultural land. Goal 2 defines an "exception" in part as a comprehensive plan amendment to allow a use that "[d]oes not comply with some or all goal requirements applicable to the subject property or situations[.]" Goal 2 does not allow establishment of a zoning policy of general applicability. Where a local government authorizes five broad categories of industrial and commercial uses distinguished by a general type of good or commodity (dry bulk, liquid bulk, breakbulk, etc.), and each use is limited by the requirement that the use be significantly dependent on a deepwater port, that does not mean that as a consequence the county has approved an exception that establishes a "zoning policy of general applicability," contrary to the Goal 2, ORS 197.732(1)(b)(A) and OAR 660-004-0005(1)(a) definition of "exception." Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. The county did not err in concluding that the "unique resource" at issue, a deepwater river port whose upland portions are located within the existing exception area, is still "located on agricultural or forest land" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(a). Although "Agricultural Land" for purposes of Goal 3 and its implementing administrative rule does not include land areas subject to exceptions to Goal 3, it does not necessarily follow that agricultural land, as that term is used in OAR 660-004-0022 or other parts of the Goal 2 exception rule is subject to the same restriction. At least for the limited purpose of evaluating the need for and compliance with exception standards to allow new or changed uses contrary to the resource goals, land within an exception area potentially remains "agricultural land" subject to Goal 3, and where the original exception did not take an exception to Goal 4 the site potentially remains "forest land." Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. The issue of whether a county erred in adopting a reasons exception to Statewide Planning Goal 3 under both the catch-all provision at OAR 660-004-0022(1) and the specific provisions for rural industrial use at OAR 660-004-0022(3) was adequately raised below for purposes of ORS 197.763(1), where a participant argued below that the county cannot adopt exceptions under both provisions but must choose one or the other. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Both the reasons set forth in the catch-all provision at OAR 660-004-0022(1) and the specific reasons set out in OAR 660-004-0022(3) provide non-exclusive lists of acceptable reasons to justify an exception to a statewide planning goal. A county could potentially seek to justify a reasons exception based on the standards set out in OAR 660-004-0022(1) even for a type of use that is subject to specific standards set out in OAR 660-004-0022(3), or vice versa. Consequently, nothing in the rule precludes a county from attempting to justify an exception alternatively under either OAR 660-004-0022(1) or (3). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. The Goal 13 requirement for local governments to "maximize the conservation of all forms of energy" does not impose an affirmative obligation on local governments to promote the development of renewable energy, or provide a basis to conclude that there is a "demonstrated need" to meet a goal requirement, in order to satisfy the standards at OAR 660-004-0022(1)(a) for adopting a reasons exception in order to site a solar energy facility on agricultural land. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. An 80-acre utility-scale solar energy generating facility produces goods or services and thus qualifies as "industrial development" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3), notwithstanding that the facility, once constructed, will require only a few permanent employees. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A county errs to the extent it justifies a reasons exception under OAR 660-044-0022(3)(a) to site an industrial use on agricultural land, based on proximity to and dependency on an electrical substation located within a nearby urban growth boundary, because OAR 660-004-0022(3)(a) applies only to industrial uses that are dependent on resources located on agricultural or forest land. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c) provides a sufficient reason for siting industrial development on resource lands where the use "would have a significant comparative advantage due to its location." The text and context of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c) indicate that the locational attractor that provides a significant comparative advantage justifying industrial development of resource land must also be located on resource land, and therefore an electrical substation located within an urban growth boundary cannot qualify as the locational attractor. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c), which states that a significant comparative advantage due to "location" is a sufficient basis to adopt a reasons exception to site industrial development on resource lands, is not properly interpreted to allow industrial use of resource land to be justified based solely on proximity to resources located within a nearby urban growth boundary (UGB), because under such an interpretation the rule could potentially undermine the integrity of UGBs, and it is unlikely that in drafting the rule the Land Conservation and Development Commission intended that result. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-011-0060(9)(a) and (b) provide examples of "[a]ppropriate reasons and facts for an exception to Goal 11" that are context for determining the scope of the general term "appropriate reasons and facts," but they do not state the only "appropriate reasons and facts for an exception to Goal 11" to extend a sewer system into a rural area to solve a public health problem. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 455 (2016).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-011-0060(9) is not intended to describe the complete universe of situations that could justify a reasons exception to Goal 11. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 455 (2016).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A county decision that it "may be" necessary to allow sewers systems to serve up to 11,000 lots in a 180-square-mile area of the county to address a future potential health hazard if the county later determines that septic systems and other treatment systems are not the best solution does not state "appropriate reasons and facts" for justifying a Goal 11 exception. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 455 (2016).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. In approving an exception to Goal 11 to extend sewers onto rural land in the county, a county's failure to distinguish between 3,353 high groundwater lots that are either already developed with houses or that are vacant but could be developed with houses, and other areas that it is proposing to serve with sewers in order to more easily allow future houses on rural lands but that the record does not demonstrate are located in high groundwater areas, makes the county's ordinance adopting an exception to Goal 11 an ordinance that "establish[es] a planning or zoning policy of general applicability" in contravention of ORS 197.732(1)(b), rather than an ordinance that adopts an exception. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 455 (2016).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A finding that taking an exception to Goal 4 is warranted to allow adaptive reuse of Goal 5 historic structures located on forest lands because allowed uses under Goal 4 will not raise sufficient revenue to offset the cost of maintaining those structures, if supported by substantial evidence, is a sufficient reason why the policy embodied in Goal 4 should not apply to the exception area. King v. Clackamas County, 72 Or LUBA 143 (2015).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Goal 5 imposes obligations on local governments with respect to the preservation of historic resources and requires a local government to act in a way to help willing property owners achieve actual and not merely nominal preservation of historic resources. Such obligations can constitute a demonstrated need based on the requirements of Goal 5 as a basis for taking a reasons exception. King v. Clackamas County, 72 Or LUBA 143 (2015).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Under OAR 660-004-0022, a county does not err in finding that a proposed adaptive reuse of a historic structure has special features or qualities that necessitate its location because the proposed use, adaptive reuse of a historic structure, must occur within the structure and cannot occur elsewhere. King v. Clackamas County, 72 Or LUBA 143 (2015).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d), the relevant inquiry is whether the proposed use requiring an exception is compatible with adjacent uses, not whether the proposed use is more intensive than prior uses. King v. Clackamas County, 72 Or LUBA 143 (2015).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Nothing in OAR chapter 660, division 004, requires a county to identify one specific proposed use when adopting a reasons exception, or precludes a county from identifying a wide range of uses as the proposed "use." Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Adopting a reasons exception for an open-ended range of unspecified industrial uses, justified under three separate, partially overlapping "reasons," is a permissible approach, but compared to justifying a single proposed use under a single reason, the broader approach complicates an already difficult process, when the analysis moves to determining whether the proposal complies with the reasonable accommodation, ESEE and compatibility standards, and at the end of the process when the local government must apply zoning that limits uses to those allowed in the reasons exception. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. In taking a reasons exception, a local government must ensure that there is a close, direct relationship between the reason that is advanced to justify the exception, the proposed use or uses that fit within that reason and are analyzed under the exception standards, and the uses that are ultimately authorized by the zoning applied to the exception area. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-004-0018(4) provides that in taking a reasons exception a local government shall adopt zoning that limits the uses to those justified in the exception. Complying with OAR 660-004-0018(4) is difficult when the reasons exception is intended to authorize a broad array of unspecified rural industrial uses, under three separate reasons, because it may be unclear which specific industrial uses are allowed in the exception area and whether they have been justified in the exception. That difficulty might be overcome if the exceptions document that is incorporated into the comprehensive plan, the conditions imposed, and the approval standards and plan policies that will apply to any proposed industrial use are sufficient to ensure that only uses justified in the reasons exception are allowed. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-004-0022(3)(b) authorizes a reasons exception for rural industrial uses where "the use cannot be located inside an urban growth boundary due to impacts that are hazardous or incompatible with densely populated areas." However, findings that do not address proposed industrial uses or evaluate specific types of hazards or incompatibilities with densely populated areas are an insufficient basis to justify any industrial uses under OAR 660-004-0022(3)(b). Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c) authorizes a reasons exception for rural industrial uses where the use would have a significant comparative advantage due to its location in proximity to certain facilities or resources, which would benefit the county economy. Detailed findings that identify a significant comparative advantage to locating rural industrial uses in proximity to an adjacent industrial site with deep-water port access, power generating facilities, and railroad connections are sufficient to justify a reasons exception for rural industrial uses that benefit from proximity to the identified facilities or resources. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. The "benefit the county economy" standard in OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c), which is applied in taking a reasons exception to allow rural industrial uses where there is a significant comparative advantage due to their location near certain resources, is a more generous standard than the "demonstrated need" standard that applies to reasons exceptions for non-industrial uses. To satisfy the "benefit the county economy" standard the county need not identify a demonstrated need for the industrial use based on the requirements of other statewide planning goals. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. The "minimal loss of productive resources" standard in OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c), which is applied in taking a reasons exception to allow rural industrial uses where there is a significant comparative advantage due to location near certain resources, is concerned with loss of productive resources in the proposed exception area, not resource uses on adjoining lands. Further, the minimal loss standard does not necessarily require evaluation of the actual revenues and employment generated by the current leasehold farmers of the exception area, since such data may not be easy to obtain and can be manipulated. Evaluation of average and potential farm income based on published sources may suffice. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b)(B) requires a finding that other areas that do not require a new exception cannot reasonably accommodate the proposed use. Where the proposed use is an expansion of an existing rural industrial park that has over 445 acres of vacant land that is available for development, the county cannot reject that vacant site under the reasonably accommodate standard simply because the vacant land is not controlled by the applicant. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. That an alternative 445-acre site within an existing industrial park has wetlands does not necessarily establish that the site is unbuildable or cannot "reasonably accommodate" proposed industrial use, absent evidence and findings that the cost of filling and mitigating for wetland areas would be so prohibitive that the cost alone or in combination with other factors renders the site unable to reasonably accommodate industrial use. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Rejecting alternative industrially zoned sites under the reasonable accommodation standard at OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b)(B) is highly problematic when the "proposed use" is an open-ended range of unspecified industrial uses, each with different characteristics and requirements, justified under three separate "reasons." Under that approach, a local government cannot reject an alternative site simply because it cannot reasonably accommodate some industrial uses, but can only reject the alternative site if it cannot reasonably accommodate all of the proposed uses justified under the three reasons. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Where a reasons exception for a 837-acre exception area is justified for proposed large-lot industrial uses of 50 to 300 acres, the county cannot reject alternative industrial sites that could accommodate some large-lot industrial uses simply because such sites are not equal in size to the exception area or cannot accommodate the same number of multiple large-lot industrial uses at a single location, absent findings establishing that multiple large-lot industrial uses must be located together at a single large site. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Findings that a 450-acre vacant site within an urban growth boundary zoned for heavy industrial use cannot reasonably accommodate proposed heavy industrial uses, because the site is more parcelized, is intended for labor intensive uses, and is close to populated areas, are insufficient bases to reject the alternative site, where the findings do not establish that the cost of assembling parcels is prohibitive, and that the proposed industrial uses exclude uses that are labor intensive or compatible with populated areas. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-004-0020(2)(c) requires a comparison of the adverse environmental, economic, social and energy (ESEE) consequences of developing the proposed exception area, with the typical ESEE consequences of developing alternative resource lands. But OAR 660-004-0020(2)(c) does not require detailed evaluation of alternative sites unless such sites are specifically identified during the proceedings below. Where the petitioner did not specifically identify alternatives sites below, the failure of the county's findings to compare ESEE consequences of developing specific alternative sites is not a basis for remand. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. LUBA will reverse under ORS 197.829(1) a governing body's interpretation that a Limited Use overlay zone is applied to limit uses in exception areas only when the applicant requests it, and that instead conditions of approval can be applied to limit uses, when (1) the Limited Use overlay zone is expressly intended for that purpose, (2) nothing in the code suggests an alternative mechanism to limit uses or authorizes attaching conditions of approval to limit uses in exception areas, and (3) under the county's interpretation and the criteria that govern designation of the overlay zone there are no circumstances under which the overlay zone could be applied. Devin Oil Co., Inc. v. Morrow County, 62 Or LUBA 247 (2010).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Substantial evidence supports a county's finding that alternative sites not requiring an exception cannot accommodate a proposed travel plaza, where the record indicates that limited access to the alternative sites precludes use by large trucks. A county does not err in determining reasonable access by large trucks to be an essential or necessary characteristic of a proposed travel plaza. Devin Oil Co., Inc. v. Morrow County, 62 Or LUBA 247 (2010).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. After 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 203 Or App 323, 332-33, 126 P3d 684 (2005), was decided, LCDC amended OAR 660-012-0070 to make it clear that when approving an exception for a transportation facility on rural resource land, OAR 660-012-0070 sets out the exclusive criteria governing such exceptions. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. To approve an exception for a transportation facility on rural resource land, OAR 660-012-0070(4) requires that a county supply reasons why state policy in the applicable goals should not apply and also requires the county to demonstrate that there are transportation needs identified in the county's TSP that cannot reasonably be satisfied by one or more of the non-exception measures specified in the rule. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A county may not rely on transportation needs in a city's transportation system plan to justify an exception for a new rural arterial road through the county, where the county transportation system plan states there is no need for new transportation facilities in the area and does not identify those city transportation needs as county transportation needs. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-012-0070(4) requires that a county determine whether there are reasonable alternative measures to satisfy an identified transportation need that would not require a statewide planning goal exception. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-012-0070(5) imposes a requirement to consider whether a proposed transportation facility on rural resource land could reasonably be sited in alternative locations that would not require an exception. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-012-0070(6) sets out how a county must go about determining whether any identified alternative measures and alternative locations are reasonable under OAR 660-012-0070(4) and OAR 660-

012-0070(5). OAR 660-012-0070(6) requires that certain specified factors and "other relevant factors" be considered and that "thresholds" be identified and applied in rejecting any alternatives as unreasonable. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. As OAR 660-012-0070(4) is currently written, it cannot be assumed that an identified transportation need is necessarily sufficient to provide a reason that justifies "why the state policy in the applicable goals should not apply." Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. For reasons exceptions that are required in order to site "transportation facilities and improvements" on rural lands, the exceptions standards set out at OAR 660-012-0070 apply, rather than the standards set out in OAR 660-004-0020. Foland v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 264 (2010).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Reasons that justify a goal exception under OAR 660-012-0070 may be sufficient to justify a goal exception under Goal 11, OAR 660-011-0060(9) and OAR 660-004-0020 and 660-004-0022. Where a local government reasonably concludes under OAR 660-12-0070 that an on-site septic system would not be adequate to handle the volume of projected waste from a transportation facility, a local government may also be able to rely on the same evidence to conclude that an exception to Goal 11 is justified. Foland v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 264 (2010).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Where a county's EFU zone does not permit solid waste disposal sites, but the statutory EFU zone does allow solid waste disposal sites, under the holding in DLCD v. Yamhill County, 183 Or App 556, 53 P3d 462 (2002), a county may not approve an exception to Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands) to allow a solid waste disposal site on EFU-zoned property. Rather, the county must amend its EFU zone to allow solid waste disposal sites if it wishes to authorize that use on its EFU-zoned land. Waste Not of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 61 Or LUBA 423 (2010).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. There is no legal requirement that an airport owner must enter into a binding commitment to build a runway extension before a county can grant a reasons exception to extend the runway onto land that is subject to Goal 4 (Forest Lands). Brockman v. Columbia County, 59 Or LUBA 302 (2009).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A desire to improve a city airport and encourage economic development in a city may be legitimate reasons for an exception, even though other cities in the county may also be economically depressed. Brockman v. Columbia County, 59 Or LUBA 302 (2009).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Although the statutes and rules that encourage continued operation and vitality of Oregon's airports do not necessarily trump the statewide planning goal exception criteria, it does not follow that a desire to encourage development of an existing airport cannot be a legitimate reason for an exception. Brockman v. Columbia County, 59 Or LUBA 302 (2009).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. That dwellings near an airport were constructed after the airport was built does not mean expansions of the airport onto land that requires a statewide planning goal exception need not satisfy the statewide planning goal exception standard that requires that the use allowed by the exception must be compatible with adjoining uses. Brockman v. Columbia County, 59 Or LUBA 302 (2009).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. In approving a reasons exception to allow extension of an airport runway and additional airport development, the applicant and the county have the burden of proof to establish that the additional air traffic that will be generated by the additional airport development will be compatible with adjoining uses. Brockman v. Columbia County, 59 Or LUBA 302 (2009).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Under OAR 660-004-0010(3), an exception to one statewide planning goal does exempt the local government from the requirements of other goals for which an exception was not taken. However, OAR 660-004-0010(3) does not prohibit a local government from relying on the reasons that justify an exception to one goal to justify an exception to another goal. Depending on the goals and circumstances, the same set of reasons may constitute a partial or complete justification for two or more goal exceptions. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A county may rely on the reasons that justified a Goal 4 exception earlier approved by the county and Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) for a proposed destination resort to justify reasons exceptions to Goals 11 and 14, where the record supports the county's finding that the Goal 4 reasons are still valid and the Goals 11 and 14 exceptions merely implement and complete the earlier county and LCDC approval. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Because Goal 11 and Goal 14 serve congruent policy objectives, the reasons sufficient to justify a Goal 14 exception for a destination resort may also be sufficient to justify an exception to Goal 11 to authorize a community sewer system to serve the destination resort. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Compliance with OAR 660-004-0020(2)(a) is shown by demonstrating that a proposed reasons exception complies with OAR 660-004-0022(3), which specifies appropriate reasons for an exception to the statewide planning goals for "Rural Industrial Development." Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 67 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Where the proposed use of the property is for "Rural Industrial Development" on resource land outside an urban growth boundary, and that use is provided for in OAR 660-004-0022(3), a showing of compliance with OAR 660-004-0022(1) is not required. Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 67 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(c), a local government must determine that the long term environmental, economic, social, and energy consequences of a goal exception are not significantly more adverse than would result from the same proposed use being located on other lands that require a goal exception. Where the petitioner argues that the county did not adequately review other lands that also require a goal exception in determining whether to grant a reasons exception, but petitioner's argument focuses exclusively on lands that would not require a goal exception, petitioner provides no basis for reversal or remand. Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 67 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A finding that the economic success of a proposed wine country hotel would be enhanced by location in a "quiet rural atmosphere among vineyards and near wineries" is insufficient to demonstrate under OAR 660-004-0020(2) that the hotel "requires a location on resource land" as opposed to otherwise suitable non-resource land. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. To establish a "demonstrated need" for a proposed hotel on agricultural land based on the requirements of Goal 9 under OAR 660-004-0022(1)(a) does not necessarily require demonstrating that the county is in violation of its Goal 9 obligations or that the county is faced with a circumstance in which it must choose between violating its Goal 9 or Goal 3 obligations. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. To show a demonstrated need to locate a proposed hotel on resource land based on the general Goal 9 requirement to "provide adequate opportunities * * * for a variety of economic activities," the county must establish that the county has failed or is at risk of failing to provide adequate opportunities for a variety of economic activities, and that taking an exception to Goal 3 to provide for a hotel is a necessary step toward satisfying that goal requirement. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A locally unsatisfied market demand for a particular sub-type of lodging accommodation targeted at a small demographic of users is insufficient to establish that there is a demonstrated need for a proposed hotel to satisfy the Goal 9 requirement that the county provide "adequate opportunities for a variety of economic activities." VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A comprehensive plan amendment that adopts a factual inventory of a county's rural residential lands and rural unincorporated communities does not establish standards for evaluating future reasons exceptions to add rural residential lands or expand unincorporated communities. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 520 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Comprehensive plan policies suggesting that existing rural unincorporated communities and existing rural residential areas may be expanded a local shortage of vacant rural residential lands develops, without regard to whether that shortage is caused by a general "market demand" for rural residential lands, would be inconsistent with OAR 660-004-0022(2) and (4), if such policies could be applied as a sufficient reason to expand rural residential areas without also establishing that the expansion is necessary to satisfy a housing need that is "generated by existing industrial, commercial, or other economic activity in the surrounding area." Wetherell v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 520 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A comprehensive plan policy that the county will "consider" and "support" adding new rural residential lands when certain vacant lands thresholds are met is not inconsistent with OAR 660-004-0022(2) and (4), where it is clear in context that the thresholds are not intended to provide a sufficient reason to approve an exception to designate new rural residential lands. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 520 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Under ORS 660-004-022, the permissible reasons that may be relied on to approve a reasons exception depend on the use or development that the reasons exception is being approved to allow. Rhinhart v. Umatilla County, 53 Or LUBA 402 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Where a county's findings of fact merely show that some constraints must be overcome to farm property, they do not establish sufficient reasons to support a reasons exception to Statewide Planning Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands). Rhinhart v. Umatilla County, 53 Or LUBA 402 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. The first sentence of OAR 660-004-0022(2) prohibits reliance on a continuation of past development patterns in approving a reasons exception to Statewide Planning Goal 3 to allow rural residential development Rhinhart v. Umatilla County, 53 Or LUBA 402 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A generalized market demand for smaller, less expensive farm parcels to allow part-time farming in conjunction with rural residential use is not a permissible reason for adopting a Statewide Planning Goal 3 exception to divide a small farm parcel into smaller farm parcels. Rhinhart v. Umatilla County, 53 Or LUBA 402 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Under OAR 660-004-0022(2) it is not enough to show that persons who might want to buy proposed rural residences might work at nearby rural businesses. Rather, the county must show that the property that the exception is proposed for is needed to meet the market demand for housing that is created by "rural industrial, commercial, or other economic activity in the area." Rhinhart v. Umatilla County, 53 Or LUBA 402 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. In approving a reasons exception for rural residential development, Goal 2, Part II(c)(2) requires a demonstration that sites that do not require an exception cannot reasonably accommodate the use. In making that demonstration, it is error to exclude alternative sites simply because they do not have particular characteristics of the exception site, where those characteristics are not common or necessary attributes of rural residential development. Rhinhart v. Umatilla County, 53 Or LUBA 402 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Where in adopting a committed exception under OAR 660-004-0028 the local government includes findings addressing some of the standards for adopting a reasons exception under OAR 660-004-0020(2), LUBA will remand to the local government to either delete those findings or explain what relevance they have to the committed exception. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Because the provisions OAR 660-004 govern the exception process as it applies to statewide planning goals "except as provided for" in OAR 660-014, it is reasonably clear that the Land Conservation and Development Commission intends that a reasons exception for proposed urban development be evaluated under OAR 660-014, not OAR 660-004. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Given the strong family resemblance between the various rules that interpret and apply Goal 2, Part and ORS 197.732 in different contexts, any cases interpreting OAR 660-004-0022, the goal or the statute are at least potentially helpful in interpreting OAR 660-014-0040(2), or in evaluating a reasons exception under that rule. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Where a local government proceeds to justify an exception under reasons listed in OAR 660-014-0040(2) or OAR 660-004-0022, the decision must demonstrate that each of the elements set out in the listed reason is met. That the listed reasons are not exclusive does not mean that an exception is permissible in circumstances where only some of the elements for each listed reason are met. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Findings addressing the standards for a reasons exception for transportation improvements under OAR 660-012-0070 are also sufficient to satisfy the standards for a reasons exception under OAR 660-004-0020(2), where the findings in fact address the substantive differences between the two standards, and the petitioner does not explain why failure to directly address the OAR 660-004-0020(2) standards warrants reversal or remand. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 52 Or LUBA 418 (2006).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. In justifying a reasons exception under OAR 660-004-0020(2) to allow nonresource uses on resource lands, a local government may choose the preferred alternative as long as the environmental, social, economic and energy consequences are not "significantly more adverse" than would typically result from using other resource lands for the proposed use. A local government is not required to choose the alternative that is "least disruptive to resource land." 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 52 Or LUBA 418 (2006).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. The environmental, economic, social and energy (ESEE) analysis does not elevate economic consequences above the other three types of consequences that must be analyzed. A local government could reach a sustainable conclusion that the long-term ESEE consequences of the preferred alternative "are not significantly more adverse than would typically result from the same proposal being located in other areas requiring a Goal exception," notwithstanding that analysis of economic consequences indicates that another alternative is superior in that respect. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 52 Or LUBA 418 (2006).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Findings that all resource land displaced by a proposed bypass consist of high-value farmlands and are similar in agricultural productivity are sufficient to satisfy the OAR 660-004-0020(2) requirement to determine which resource land is least productive, absent some argument from the petitioner for why an explicit productivity ranking is required. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 52 Or LUBA 418 (2006).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Because OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b)(B)(iv) requires a local government to determine whether the "proposed use" can be "reasonably accommodated without the provision of a proposed public facility or service," it is reasonably clear under the rule that the "proposed use" and the "public facility" are two different things. In the context of a Goal 11 exception to extend public facilities to serve proposed development on lands outside the urban growth boundary, the "proposed use" can only be the proposed development to be served by the facility extension, and not the extended public facility. Todd v. City of Florence, 52 Or LUBA 445 (2006).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. In granting a Goal 11 exception to extend a public sewer system outside the urban growth boundary, OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b) through (d) require a city to evaluate the "proposed use," the development served by that extended sewer facility, even if that development is not subject to the city's approval authority and does not require a goal exception. Todd v. City of Florence, 52 Or LUBA 445 (2006).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. The reasons set out in OAR 660-004-0022(1) are not the exclusive set of reasons that may justify an exception to applicable goals, and it is at least theoretically possible to identify a sufficient reason why the state policy embodied in the applicable goal should not apply that does not require evaluation of the ultimate use or proposed development of the exception area. Todd v. City of Florence, 52 Or LUBA 445 (2006).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. That it is economically advantageous to a developer to rely on public services extended from the urban growth boundary rather than develop such services on site is an insufficient "reason" why the state policy embodied in Goal 11 should not apply. Todd v. City of Florence, 52 Or LUBA 445 (2006).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Goal 11 requires an "orderly and efficient arrangement of public facilities and services." That requirement is little offended by allowing a single sewer system to serve two adjoining areas that each have the legal right and ability to develop urban uses and urban-level public facilities, notwithstanding that one area is within an urban growth boundary and the other outside. Todd v. City of Florence, 52 Or LUBA 445 (2006).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-011-0060(9) requires that a local government adopting an exception to Goal 11 to extend a sewer system outside the urban growth boundary also adopt land use regulations that prohibit the sewer system from serving uses other than those justified in the exception. A provision in an intergovernmental agreement (IGA) that limits sewer access to residential and commercial uses is insufficient to satisfy OAR 660-011-0060(9), because the provision does not limit uses served by the sewer to uses specifically justified in the exception. Todd v. City of Florence, 52 Or LUBA 445 (2006).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. While OAR 660-004-0018(4) requires that local governments adopt a new reasons exception when changing the types or intensities of uses within an area subject to a reasons exception, a decision that simply corrects the official zoning map to accurately reflect prior zoning amendments does not change the types or intensities of uses allowed on the property. Sullivan v. Polk County, 51 Or LUBA 107 (2006).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A local government does not err by interpreting a local "need" standard to impose a much less rigorous standard than the need standard that was included in prior version of Goal 2 for approval of a reasons exception. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 275 (2005).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Identifying a transportation need under OAR 660-012-0070 is sufficient to justify an exception under ORS 197.732(1)(c)(A). The county need not separately demonstrate that the state policies embodied in the applicable goals should not apply. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 49 Or LUBA 640 (2005).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Under OAR 660-012-0070(6), the reasonableness of non-exception alternatives is determined by the thresholds established by the local government, which include consideration of "cost, operational feasibility, economic dislocation and other relevant factors." 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 49 Or LUBA 640 (2005).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. When taking an exception for a transportation facility on rural lands, the more specific provisions of OAR 660-012-0070 apply in place of the more general ESEE analysis requirements of Goal 2, Part II (c)(3), ORS 197.732(1)(c)(C), and OAR 660-004-0020(2)(c). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 49 Or LUBA 640 (2005).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A county does not err in rejecting sites that are smaller than the 70 to 75 acres that an applicant demonstrates are necessary for a proposed agricultural processing facility under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b), notwithstanding that ethanol facilities have been sited on much smaller sites, where the proposed agricultural processing facility will produce a number of other outputs in addition to ethanol and the additional acres are needed for those other aspects of the agricultural processing facility. Concerned Citizens v. Malheur County, 47 Or LUBA 208 (2004).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A county's findings that the complicated ownership of an alternative property and its lack of current rail access make it unsuitable as an alternative to an EFU-zoned parcel for development of an agricultural processing facility are adequate to explain why the property is not a reasonable alternative under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b). Concerned Citizens v. Malheur County, 47 Or LUBA 208 (2004).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A county's finding that developing a proposed EFU-zoned site would not have significantly more adverse environmental, economic, social and energy consequences than developing a nearby site that would also require a statewide planning goal exception is adequate to address OAR 660-004-0020(2)(c), where the nearby site would use the same transportation system and have similar impacts on that transportation system. Concerned Citizens v. Malheur County, 47 Or LUBA 208 (2004).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A county's finding that a proposed agricultural processing facility will be compatible with adjacent uses under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d) notwithstanding that it would produce some airborne particulates is adequate, where the findings establish that only 100 tons of particulates would be generated each year and that DEQ regulations require that the operator use the most advanced technology available to mitigate the impact of those particulates. Concerned Citizens v. Malheur County, 47 Or LUBA 208 (2004).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A county's findings that odors from a proposed agricultural processing facility will not make that facility incompatible with adjacent properties under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d) are adequate, where the findings establish that odors would not normally extend beyond the facility site and would not adversely affect the nearest rural residential area three quarters of a mile away. Concerned Citizens v. Malheur County, 47 Or LUBA 208 (2004).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Applicants for an exception to Goal 3 to rezone land to allow division into two parcels for eventual development of an additional nonfarm dwelling are not seeking approval for a "type of use" that could be approved as a nonfarm dwelling without an exception to Goal 3 and are not prohibited from taking an exception under the Court of Appeals' ruling in DLCD v. Yamhill County, 183 Or App 556, 53 P3d 462 (2002). Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 47 Or LUBA 508 (2004).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Under OAR 660-004-0022(2), a reasons exception for rural residential development cannot be based on market demand for housing unless the housing demand is generated by existing or planned rural industrial, commercial or other economic activity in the area, and where the county makes a finding that the demand results from commercial and industrial development within the UGB, the county errs in concluding that OAR 660-004-0022(2) is satisfied. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 47 Or LUBA 508 (2004).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A reasons exception for rural residential development requires demonstration that areas that don't require an exception cannot reasonably accommodate the proposed use. That standard is not met by applying a less stringent county standard that would allow granting an exception where other parcels already zoned for the proposed use are either unavailable or not as well suited to the proposed use. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 47 Or LUBA 508 (2004).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Findings that establish that a proposed motor speedway must be centrally located in its market area, that it will provide significant local economic benefits, and that it has characteristics that make locating the speedway within nearby urban growth boundaries an unreasonable alternative are sufficient to provide reasons for an exception to Goals 11 and 14. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Findings that establish that a gasoline station is needed to avoid forcing some departing speedway attendees to travel out-of-direction to buy gasoline when such out-of-direction travel would thereby adversely affect transportation facilities, are sufficient to provide a reason justifying and exception to Goal 14 to site the gas station next to a speedway on rural land, where the challenged decision imposes conditions to prevent the gasoline station from becoming a standalone facility that competes with nearby gas stations in urban areas. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A challenged decision establishes sufficient reasons to allow a restaurant and bar next to a speedway on rural land to satisfy significant on-site demand for such facilities, where locational and signage conditions are imposed to limit the possibility that those facilities would compete with nearby facilities inside urban areas for other customers not associated with the speedway. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Identified needs to (1) attract speedway fans early and keep them on site longer to spread traffic impacts, and (2) provide on-site activities for family members accompanying racing spectators may provide sufficient reasons to permit siting indoor and outdoor speedway related recreational facilities on rural land. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Findings that merely suggest that speedway-dependent and related industrial uses may require close proximity to the speedway and state that they may generate sufficient noise to make an urban location inappropriate provide weak reasons for approving a rural location for such industries. However, where petitioner does not challenge that rationale, those findings may provide sufficient reasons for a Goal 14 exception. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Where a county's findings addressing the comparative environmental, economic, social and energy consequences of siting a proposed speedway at the proposed rural location rather than other possible rural locations identify a number of unchallenged energy considerations that favor the proposed rural site, the county's failure to require that the applicant supply a fuel consumption analysis does not provide a basis for remand. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A county may not rely on a previously adopted Goal 3 exception for airport related industrial uses to justify approving a major automobile speedway and speedway related uses on rural agricultural land. Although the same factors that the county relied on to justify Goal 11 and Goal 14 exceptions for the speedway and related uses might justify a new Goal 3 exception, a new Goal 3 exception must be adopted to replace the one that was adopted for the airport related industrial uses. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Although a previously approved Goal 3 reasons exception for a nearby parkway corridor may not by itself provide sufficient reasons to justify a new Goal 3 exception for a new parkway corridor across more acres of agricultural land, it is not legal error for a county to rely on the prior exception as one of its bases for granting a new exception. Friends of Eugene v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 239 (2003).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Under Goal 2, Part II(c)(4) an exception to allow a parkway on agricultural land requires that impacts on adjacent uses be reduced to a compatible level. Where a petitioner argues the challenged decision fails to do so and respondents identify no findings addressing this requirement, remand is required. Friends of Eugene v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 239 (2003).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-004-0022(2) establishes the reasons that may justify a statewide planning goal exception to allow rural residential development on farm or forest land; OAR 660-004-0022(1) establishes reasons that may justify a statewide planning goal exception for uses that are not provided for in other subsections of OAR 660-004-0022. Historical residential use of a property without land use approvals is not a permissible reason for an exception under either OAR 660-004-0022(1) or (2). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 44 Or LUBA 567 (2003).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Reasons. In approving a reasons exception, ORS 197.732(1)(c) requires that an applicant establish that "[a]reas which do not require a new exception cannot reasonably accommodate the [proposed] use." Whether requiring a person who is living on rural resource land without required permit approvals to move to areas that do not require an exception would cause a personal or economic hardship on that person has no bearing on whether there are areas that do not require an exception that could reasonably accommodate a dwelling for that person. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 44 Or LUBA 567 (2003).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Under ORS 197.732(1)(c)(C), a local government must compare the proposed exception area with other alternative areas that also would also require an exception and find that selecting the proposed exception area will not have significantly more adverse environmental, economic, social and energy consequences than selecting one of those alternative areas for an exception. A decision that merely speculates that development of alternative exception sites would have significantly more adverse consequences is insufficient where it is not clear that the local government considered any other potential exception areas. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 44 Or LUBA 567 (2003).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Findings that merely assert that a property is better suited for rural residential use than for farm use are inadequate to support a reasons exception under OAR 660-004-0020 and 660-004-0022. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 42 Or LUBA 126 (2002).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Because OAR 660-004-0022(3) governs reasons exceptions for rural industrial development, and the OAR 660-004-0022(1) provisions for all other uses do not apply, a local government errs in applying OAR 660-004-0022(1) to an application to amend the comprehensive plan map and zoning map to allow rural industrial development. Morgan v. Douglas County, 42 Or LUBA 46 (2002).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. The OAR 660-004-0022(1) requirement for a threshold finding that there is a demonstrated need for a proposed use or activity based on the requirements of Goals 3-19 is not met by a county simply finding that there is a market demand for the proposed use. The county must find that it is unable to satisfy its obligations under Goals 3-19 absent the proposed exception. Morgan v. Douglas County, 42 Or LUBA 46 (2002).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A county may not rely on a finding that an "established industrial use" on a proposed exception site demonstrates that the site has special features or qualities that necessitate the continued location of the use on the site to justify an exception under OAR 660-004-0022(1)(c), where the existing industrial activity was developed in violation of a conditional use permit authorizing a much more limited home occupation and the county does not explain why the approved home occupation constitutes an "established industrial use." Morgan v. Douglas County, 42 Or LUBA 46 (2002).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Sustainable findings under the seven Goal 14 factors state a legally sufficient "reason" justifying why the state policy embodied in Goal 14 should not apply, for purposes of adopting the exception necessary to include resource land within a UGB under OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(i). Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. When taking a reasons exception to allow nonresource uses on resource land, a local government must identify the character of the use for which the exception is proposed in order to determine which approval criteria apply. If the proposed reasons exception involves urban uses, then OAR 660-014-0040 applies. If the proposed reasons exception involves rural uses, then OAR 660-004-0022(1) through (10) provide the applicable approval criteria. DLCD v. Umatilla County, 39 Or LUBA 715 (2001).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A reasons exception allowing rural residential housing must meet the approval criteria of OAR 660-004-0022(2), but approving a community water and sewer system also requires an exception to Goal 11 because such systems are not generally necessary for rural residential housing and must be approved as separate uses. DLCD v. Umatilla County, 39 Or LUBA 715 (2001).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Goal 10 concerns needed housing, and nothing in the Goal 10 rules requires a local government to provide housing for a "recreational golf course lifestyle" absent support for such housing in the local comprehensive plan or Goal 10 inventory. DLCD v. Umatilla County, 39 Or LUBA 715 (2001).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-004-0018(4) requires a new reasons exception when an applicant changes the type or intensity of uses within an area for which a reasons exception was approved. Where a reasons exception to Goal 3 is based on the proposed expansion of an existing truck stop, the county cannot approve a more intensive independent truck stop without a revised exception. Flying J., Inc. v. Marion County, 38 Or LUBA 149 (2000).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. A reasons exception to Goals 3 and 4 must be based on the considerations set forth in Goal 2 and OAR 660-004-0020 and 660-004-0022. Under OAR 660-004-0022, the fact that farm and forest land is not prime timber or agricultural land is not a legally cognizable basis to adopt a reasons exception to Goals 3 and 4. McLane v. Klamath County, 37 Or LUBA 888 (2000).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Under OAR 660-04-022(2), which addresses reasons exceptions for rural residential development, the reasons justifying an exception for rural residential development cannot be based on market demand for housing, except as provided in the rule. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 488 (1996).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. If reasons stated in OAR 660-04-022(1)(a) and (b) or (c) are not the basis for a reasons exception, the county must make clear in its findings that it intends to justify a reasons exception on some other basis. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 488 (1996).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. In the absence of a showing that the county has followed the process set forth in OAR Chapter 660, Division 16, to place a state viewpoint on its Goal 5 inventory, it may not rely on Goal 5 to protect the viewpoint from the impact of growing trees on the subject property. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 488 (1996).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. In order to comply with OAR 660-04-020(2)(d), the county must identify all of the uses on property adjacent to a proposed exception area, not just the residential uses, and explain why the proposed use of the exception area is or will be rendered compatible with those uses. Middleton v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 423 (1996).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Under OAR 660-04-020(2)(c), the county is not required to evaluate the ESEE consequences of locating a proposed use at any of the alternative sites suggested by petitioners where petitioners do not assert that locating the proposed racetrack at any of the alternative sites would produce significantly fewer impacts. Middleton v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 423 (1996).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. The county's findings fail to demonstrate that the proposed use requires the use of resource land, as required by OAR 660-04-020(2)(a), where the findings only indicate that the proposed racetrack requires (1) low density, (2) varied topography with a dirt base, and (3) a 15-to-17-acre minimum size. Middleton v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 423 (1996).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Where the county's findings regarding the alternative sites analysis required by OAR 660-04-020(2)(b) offer little or no support for the conclusions drawn, LUBA will remand the county's decision on that basis alone, and need not reach the substantial evidence challenges. Middleton v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 423 (1996).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. An exception to Goal 4 is not justified under OAR 660-04-022(1)(a) where the county fails to establish that a "need" for the proposed use exists by demonstrating that absent the proposed exception, the county would be unable to satisfy its obligations under one or more of Goals 3-19. Middleton v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 423 (1996).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Where a county makes an unchallenged determination that the "reason" justifying an exception to Goal 3 under ORS 197.732(1)(c)(A) and OAR 660-04-020(2)(a) is the need for a church to serve a congregation located in and around the City of Amity, the county is not required to consider as alternative sites land within the UGBs of other cities in the county. Cox v. Yamhill County, 29 Or LUBA 263 (1995).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. Where a county makes an unchallenged determination that a three-acre site is required for a "reasons" goal exception, a finding that a 4.75-acre site is too small for the proposed use, because only 45-50 percent of the site is buildable, is sufficient to explain why that site is not a reasonable alternative for the proposed use. Cox v. Yamhill County, 29 Or LUBA 263 (1995).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. That a site contains buildings that would have to be removed does not, of itself, mean the site cannot reasonably accommodate a proposed new use under ORS 197.732(1)(c)(B) and OAR 660-04-020(2)(b). Cox v. Yamhill County, 29 Or LUBA 263 (1995).

6.3.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Reasons. OAR 660-12-060(4) prohibits using the existence of transportation facilities as a basis for approving exceptions to the requirements of OAR 660-12-065, adopted under OAR 660-12-070; or (2) exceptions to statewide planning goals, adopted under OAR 660-04-022 (reasons exceptions) or OAR 660-04-028 (committed exceptions). OAR 660-12-060(4) does not apply to an exception for a change to an established UGB, adopted under OAR 660-04-010(1)(c)(B). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. Where a county approves a reasons exception to Goal 11 to allow extension of city water to serve a highway rest area, and imposes a condition of approval requiring city approval, but later modifies the condition to substitute rural irrigation water for city water to be used to irrigate landscaping, the modification does not necessarily change the "type" of public facilities and service and thus require a new reasons exception pursuant to OAR 660-004-0018(4)(b). Generally, a new reasons exception is required under OAR 660-004-0018(4)(b) only for changes that make the exception area less conforming to the goal. Foland v. Jackson County, 70 Or LUBA 247 (2014).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. Because Goal 11 defines "water system" as a system for the provision of piped water for human consumption, modifying a condition of approval so that city water is not used for irrigating landscaping, but used only for human consumption, does not constitute a change in the type or intensity of the "water system" for purposes of OAR 660-044-0018(2)(b) and thus modifying the condition does not require a new reasons exception. Foland v. Jackson County, 70 Or LUBA 247 (2014).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. OAR 660-004-0018(2)(a) and (b) limit new uses on an exception site to "those * * * [t]hat are the same as the existing land uses on the exception site" and those that will maintain the land as "'[r]ural [l]and' as defined by the goals[.]" If the new uses are not the same as the existing land uses or will not maintain the land as rural land, then a reasons exception is required in order to use the site for a new use. Ooten v. Clackamas County, 70 Or LUBA 338 (2014).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. The requirement in OAR 660-004-0018(2)(a) that the proposed uses be the "same as the existing land uses on the exception site" requires the county to consider the uses that were "recognized or justified" in the exception statement. It does not allow the county to consider current uses on the site that were not "recognized or justified" in the exception statement. Ooten v. Clackamas County, 70 Or LUBA 338 (2014).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. OAR 660-004-0018 is clear that an exception to one or more goals does not insulate all future changes in the plan and zone designations of the property subject to the exception from needing an exception for uses not recognized or justified under the exception. Ooten v. Clackamas County, 70 Or LUBA 338 (2014).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. A local government does not err in not applying OAR 660-012-0070(5) and (6), which govern the analysis for transportation improvements that do not require a new exception, to evaluate the petitioner's alternative site for a highway interchange, where the record does not support the petitioner's claim that the new interchange could be located without expanding an existing exception area that was approved for a two-lane rural overpass. In that circumstance, OAR 660-012-0070(7) applies to govern the alternatives analysis when a transportation improvement requires a new exception. Storm v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 415 (2012).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. Where constructing a new highway interchange in an existing exception area would constitute a change in the type of use or change in the intensity of the use justifying an existing exception, OAR 660-012-0070(10) and OAR 660-004-0018(4)(b) require a new exception as a matter of law, even if the existing exception area could accommodate the proposed interchange as a matter of engineering. Storm v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 415 (2012).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. In approving an exception to allow construction of a temporary $25 million highway interchange, a local government is not required to include guarantees that the temporary interchange will not be converted to a permanent interchange or identify reasons to justify the interchange as permanent, where the exception decision approves only a temporary interchange, and any attempt to convert it into a permanent interchange will require a new goal exception. Storm v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 415 (2012).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. In approving a public recreational vehicle (RV) campground under OAR 660-035-0035 and 0040, a local government need not limit infrastructure such as septic RV dumps, water and electric services to the most minimally intensive infrastructure that is possible, to avoid the necessity of taking an exception to Goal 3. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 63 Or LUBA 347 (2011).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. A county does not err in concluding that providing central septic dump sites for recreational vehicles (RVs) in a public RV campground does not require an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 3, where if the county did not provide central RV dump sites it would have to increase the size or number of communal restrooms to meet campers' needs, offsetting any reduction in septic infrastructure. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 63 Or LUBA 347 (2011).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. A county does not err in concluding that providing a water spigot and an electrical outlet in individual campsites in a public recreational vehicle campground does not require an exception to Goal 3, where providing necessary services to campers requires a dispersed water and electric grid in any event, and the additional infrastructure to supply water and electricity to individual sites is not significantly greater than that otherwise required to provide basic services. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 63 Or LUBA 347 (2011).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. OAR 660-034-0040(4), governing local park planning, clearly provides that "some" of the listed park uses permitted in a local park on EFU land require an exception to Goal 3, in the absence of a local master park plan. However, the rule is profoundly ambiguous regarding which of the listed park uses require an exception in the absence of a local master park plan. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. The context provided by Goal 3, the Goal 3 rule on private park/campgrounds, Goal 3 Guideline B.1, and the state agricultural land use policies at ORS 215.243, suggest that the public park uses and facilities listed in OAR 660-034-0035(2)(a) through (g) that require a Goal 3 exception in the absence of a master park plan are those that involve higher-intensity development or infrastructure, where there exist less intensive alternatives that minimize permanent loss of agricultural land to non-agricultural use. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. The provision of full septic, water and electric hookups to individual campsites in a public RV park/campground constitutes higher-intensity development or infrastructure that, in the absence of a master park plan, requires an exception to Goal 3. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. Because the public park rule at OAR 660-034-0035(2) allows a campground "group shelter" in a local public park, but effectively prohibits a "meeting hall" in a local public park, a county cannot approve a fully enclosed, 1,200-square-foot "clubhouse" intended for all-season group activities unless it demonstrates that the clubhouse is properly viewed as a "group shelter" rather than a "meeting hall." Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. Because a commercial use such as a convenience store is not allowed in the EFU zone or on Goal 3 land without a Goal 3 exception, a "camp store" similar in function to a convenience store is not permitted in a local public park on EFU land, in the absence of an exception to Goal 3 or the adoption of a local master park plan. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. Where a county's EFU zone does not permit solid waste disposal sites, but the statutory EFU zone does allow solid waste disposal sites, under the holding in DLCD v. Yamhill County, 183 Or App 556, 53 P3d 462 (2002), a county may not approve an exception to Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands) to allow a solid waste disposal site on EFU-zoned property. Rather, the county must amend its EFU zone to allow solid waste disposal sites if it wishes to authorize that use on its EFU-zoned land. Waste Not of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 61 Or LUBA 423 (2010).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. A comprehensive plan provision prohibiting application of a Rural Residential plan designation to land that is currently designated farm or forest "unless an exception to the applicable Goal 3 or 4 is justified" could be interpreted such that the prohibition does not apply to nonresource land that is not subject to either goal. However, the stronger textual reading is that the qualifier "applicable" simply reflects that the subject property is currently designated under either Goal 3 or Goal 4, whichever is applicable, and an exception to the applicable goal is required in order to redesignate the property to Rural Residential. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 60 Or LUBA 392 (2010).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. OAR 660-034-0035—and by cross-reference OAR 660-034-0040—provide a list of uses that are allowed in state and local parks, some of which are generally not allowed on resource lands without an exception to the resource goals. However, no exception is required if the uses are authorized in a state or local park master plan. Rural Thurston Inc. v. Lane County, 55 Or LUBA 382 (2007).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. By implication, some of the park uses listed in OAR 660-034-0035(2) do not require a goal exception, even if there is no acknowledged park master plan. However, the rule does not specify which uses do or do not require a goal exception in the absence of a park master plan. Rural Thurston Inc. v. Lane County, 55 Or LUBA 382 (2007).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. Park uses listed in OAR 660-034-0035(2) that are passive, low-intensity uses similar to those allowed in campgrounds in resource zones do not require a goal exception to be placed in state or local parks. Rural Thurston Inc. v. Lane County, 55 Or LUBA 382 (2007).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. A county cannot lawfully include resource lands within an urban unincorporated community unless that land remains planned and zoned for resource uses or the county takes an exception to Goals 3 and 4. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 50 Or LUBA 444 (2005).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. A county does not violate the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA) by requiring that an applicant for a church on exclusive farm use land within three miles of an urban growth boundary apply for a statewide planning goal exception as required by OAR 660-033-0130. The exceptions process does not in itself impose a substantial burden on a person's religious exercise and does not constitute unfair delay. Young v. Jackson County, 49 Or LUBA 327 (2005).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. Land that qualifies as "agricultural land" based on soil classification cannot be classified as something other than agricultural land based on existing land use patterns or other factors listed in the definition of "agricultural land" that serve to include lands within the definition of agricultural land that do not otherwise qualify based on the soils classifications. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 47 Or LUBA 508 (2004).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. When a local government demonstrates that land may be included in an urban growth boundary under OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(i) by demonstrating compliance with the seven factors of Goal 14, the local government need not take exceptions to other goals individually. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. Although OAR 661-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(i) nominally requires a local government to apply all seven of the Goal 14 factors, when the local government is proceeding under the "unneeded but committed" exception, the two "need" factors of Goal 14 need not be addressed. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. When a local government amends its urban growth boundary under the "unneeded but committed" exception it demonstrates that the land is committed to urban uses under the five "locational factors" of Goal 14. The local government need not adopt an irrevocably committed exception under OAR 660-004-0028. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. To the extent amendments to physically developed or irrevocably committed exceptions are required to comply with OAR 660-004-0018, the standards applicable to such exception areas are those at OAR 660-004-0018(2). Unlike standards applicable to reasons exception areas, OAR 660-004-0018(2) does not require a new exception when allowing changes to uses, densities or services in physically developed or irrevocably committed exception areas. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 41 Or LUBA 247 (2002).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. Even when the Goal 14 rule on rural residential development at OAR 660-004-0040 does not apply to a proposed plan or zone change for residential development on rural land, a local government must still address whether the proposed residential development is consistent with Goal 14. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 41 Or LUBA 247 (2002).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. Where the applicant presents argument and evidence that property designated and zoned for forest use is not in fact forest land protected by Goal 4, making an exception to that goal unnecessary to rezone the property for residential use, the county errs in denying the rezoning application without addressing the issue or explaining why it believes the subject property is protected by Goal 4. Potts v. Clackamas County, 40 Or LUBA 371 (2001).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. A reasons exception allowing rural residential housing must meet the approval criteria of OAR 660-004-0022(2), but approving a community water and sewer system also requires an exception to Goal 11 because such systems are not generally necessary for rural residential housing and must be approved as separate uses. DLCD v. Umatilla County, 39 Or LUBA 715 (2001).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. OAR 660-004-0018(4) requires a new reasons exception when an applicant changes the type or intensity of uses within an area for which a reasons exception was approved. Where a reasons exception to Goal 3 is based on the proposed expansion of an existing truck stop, the county cannot approve a more intensive independent truck stop without a revised exception. Flying J., Inc. v. Marion County, 38 Or LUBA 149 (2000).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. Because OAR 660-033-0120 and 660-33-0130 prohibit establishment of a church on high-value farmland, the only procedure available to site a church on high-value farmland is to apply for an exception to the applicable goals under Goal 2. Corp. of Presiding Bishop v. Klamath County, 34 Or LUBA 131 (1998).

6.3.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – When Required. When an earlier acknowledged comprehensive plan amendment imposes a condition that any proposed conditional use or use variance shall require a revised exception to the Statewide Planning Goals, a new plan amendment is required before additional conditional uses can be allowed, since taking an exception necessitates a plan amendment. Leathers v. Marion County, 31 Or LUBA 220 (1996).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. A county's interpretation of an irrevocably committed exception as allowing all uses on the exception site that are allowed in the zone that was applied to the site when the exception was approved is inconsistent with OAR 660-004-0018(3), which requires a new reasons exception for a proposed use of land that is different from the use for which an exception was originally taken unless the proposed new use maintains the land as rural land. Hood River Valley Residents v. Hood River County, 75 Or LUBA 452 (2017).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. OAR 660-004-0018(3) applies directly to a proposed change in the use of an exception area, where (1) the proposed change in use is one that will arguably no longer maintain the land as rural land and (2) the zone applied to the exception area does not unambiguously allow urban uses of the exception area. Hood River Valley Residents v. Hood River County, 75 Or LUBA 452 (2017).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. Where a county approves a reasons exception to Goal 11 to allow extension of city water to serve a highway rest area, and imposes a condition of approval requiring city approval, but later modifies the condition to substitute rural irrigation water for city water to be used to irrigate landscaping, the modification does not necessarily change the "type" of public facilities and service and thus require a new reasons exception pursuant to OAR 660-004-0018(4)(b). Generally, a new reasons exception is required under OAR 660-004-0018(4)(b) only for changes that make the exception area less conforming to the goal. Foland v. Jackson County, 70 Or LUBA 247 (2014).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. Because Goal 11 defines "water system" as a system for the provision of piped water for human consumption, modifying a condition of approval so that city water is not used for irrigating landscaping, but used only for human consumption, does not constitute a change in the type or intensity of the "water system" for purposes of OAR 660-044-0018(2)(b) and thus modifying the condition does not require a new reasons exception. Foland v. Jackson County, 70 Or LUBA 247 (2014).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. OAR 660-004-0018(2)(a) and (b) limit new uses on an exception site to "those * * * [t]hat are the same as the existing land uses on the exception site" and those that will maintain the land as "'[r]ural [l]and' as defined by the goals[.]" If the new uses are not the same as the existing land uses or will not maintain the land as rural land, then a reasons exception is required in order to use the site for a new use. Ooten v. Clackamas County, 70 Or LUBA 338 (2014).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. The requirement in OAR 660-004-0018(2)(a) that the proposed uses be the "same as the existing land uses on the exception site" requires the county to consider the uses that were "recognized or justified" in the exception statement. It does not allow the county to consider current uses on the site that were not "recognized or justified" in the exception statement. Ooten v. Clackamas County, 70 Or LUBA 338 (2014).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. OAR 660-004-0018 is clear that an exception to one or more goals does not insulate all future changes in the plan and zone designations of the property subject to the exception from needing an exception for uses not recognized or justified under the exception. Ooten v. Clackamas County, 70 Or LUBA 338 (2014).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. A local government does not err in not applying OAR 660-012-0070(5) and (6), which govern the analysis for transportation improvements that do not require a new exception, to evaluate the petitioner's alternative site for a highway interchange, where the record does not support the petitioner's claim that the new interchange could be located without expanding an existing exception area that was approved for a two-lane rural overpass. In that circumstance, OAR 660-012-0070(7) applies to govern the alternatives analysis when a transportation improvement requires a new exception. Storm v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 415 (2012).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. Where constructing a new highway interchange in an existing exception area would constitute a change in the type of use or change in the intensity of the use justifying an existing exception, OAR 660-012-0070(10) and OAR 660-004-0018(4)(b) require a new exception as a matter of law, even if the existing exception area could accommodate the proposed interchange as a matter of engineering. Storm v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 415 (2012).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. While OAR 660-004-0018(4) requires that a reasons exception must limit uses authorized to those justified in the exception, the rule does not expressly require that the local government use the mechanism of an overlay zone to achieve that end, or preclude the use of appropriate conditions imposed under the plan or zoning amendments as part of the reasons exception. Devin Oil Co., Inc. v. Morrow County, 62 Or LUBA 247 (2010).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. LUBA will reverse under ORS 197.829(1) a governing body's interpretation that a Limited Use overlay zone is applied to limit uses in exception areas only when the applicant requests it, and that instead conditions of approval can be applied to limit uses, when (1) the Limited Use overlay zone is expressly intended for that purpose, (2) nothing in the code suggests an alternative mechanism to limit uses or authorizes attaching conditions of approval to limit uses in exception areas, and (3) under the county's interpretation and the criteria that govern designation of the overlay zone there are no circumstances under which the overlay zone could be applied. Devin Oil Co., Inc. v. Morrow County, 62 Or LUBA 247 (2010).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. While OAR 660-004-0018(4) requires that local governments adopt a new reasons exception when changing the types or intensities of uses within an area subject to a reasons exception, a decision that simply corrects the official zoning map to accurately reflect prior zoning amendments does not change the types or intensities of uses allowed on the property. Sullivan v. Polk County, 51 Or LUBA 107 (2006).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. Simply because OAR 660-004-0018(1) has clarified since 1986 that an exception to one goal does not relieve a local government from other goal requirements does not mean that the converse was true prior to adoption of the rule. Rezoning property located in a Goal 3 exception area adjacent to a UGB requires consideration of Goal 14, even if OAR 660-004-0018(1) was not applicable at the time the Goal 3 exception was taken. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 47 Or LUBA 160 (2004).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. A finding that recreational zoning may be applied to land that is subject to a physically developed exception for industrial uses because some of the uses allowed in an industrial zone may also be allowed in a recreation zone is not responsive to OAR 660-004-0018(2)(a), which requires that the zoning designation must "limit uses, density and public facilities and services to those which are the same as the existing land uses on the exception site." Doty v. Coos County, 42 Or LUBA 103 (2002).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. Findings that conclude that a proposed recreational zoning designation will not permit urban uses on rural land because (1) the anticipated use of the property is allowed in the county's recreation zone, which is acknowledged as a rural zone, and (2) density is limited to the land's "carrying capacity," are inadequate to demonstrate compliance with OAR 660-004-0018(2)(b)(A) because acknowledgement of a zone as being generally in compliance with Goal 14 does not mean that all uses that may be approved under that zone are necessarily rural in nature. Doty v. Coos County, 42 Or LUBA 103 (2002).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. Findings that assume that a proposed recreation use will be less intensive than the former industrial uses but do not address the diverse impacts that could result from recreational use of the property are inadequate to satisfy OAR 660-004-0018(2)(b)(B) and (C) because the uses are dissimilar and result in different impacts on adjacent and nearby resource land. Doty v. Coos County, 42 Or LUBA 103 (2002).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. Whether uses or zones are "identified and authorized by specific related policies" in the local government's plan within the meaning of OAR 660-004-0018, and thus whether a new exception is necessary to expand uses allowed in an exception zone, depends on whether the policy refers to specific uses or zones in relation to the subject property. Geaney v. Coos County, 34 Or LUBA 189 (1998).

6.3.6 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Exceptions/ Exception Rule – Changes to. When a change in the type or intensity of an existing use is proposed for an exception area, the county must (1) make findings showing either that Goal 14 does not apply or the proposal complies with an existing Goal 14 exception; or (2) take a new Goal 14 exception. Leathers v. Marion County, 31 Or LUBA 220 (1996).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. In evaluating whether a proposed solar energy generating facility can be reasonably accommodated on alternative sites that do not require an exception under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b)(B), the applicant cannot limit the scope of the alternative sites analysis by considering only sites near a specific electrical substation owned by a company with which the applicant has entered into a contract to provide electricity. The alternative sites analysis must consider sites that are proximate to other substations or connection points that could reasonably accommodate the proposed use, regardless of whether the applicant has a contract to provide electricity to those substations or connection points. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. Under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b), a county does not err in finding that an analysis of alternative non-resource sites for a proposed adaptive reuse of a Goal 5 historic structure is not required because reuse of a particular historical structure dictates that no alternative site not requiring an exception can reasonably accommodate the adaptive reuse. King v. Clackamas County, 72 Or LUBA 143 (2015).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. Under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(c), a county does not err when determining that permitting adaptive reuse of existing historic structures in the proposed exception area results in fewer adverse consequences, compared to locating the proposal on other resource lands that require an exception, which would require significant new construction of infrastructure and accordingly more adverse consequences. King v. Clackamas County, 72 Or LUBA 143 (2015).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b)(B) requires a finding that other areas that do not require a new exception cannot reasonably accommodate the proposed use. Where the proposed use is an expansion of an existing rural industrial park that has over 445 acres of vacant land that is available for development, the county cannot reject that vacant site under the reasonably accommodate standard simply because the vacant land is not controlled by the applicant. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. That an alternative 445-acre site within an existing industrial park has wetlands does not necessarily establish that the site is unbuildable or cannot "reasonably accommodate" proposed industrial use, absent evidence and findings that the cost of filling and mitigating for wetland areas would be so prohibitive that the cost alone or in combination with other factors renders the site unable to reasonably accommodate industrial use. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. Rejecting alternative industrially zoned sites under the reasonable accommodation standard at OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b)(B) is highly problematic when the "proposed use" is an open-ended range of unspecified industrial uses, each with different characteristics and requirements, justified under three separate "reasons." Under that approach, a local government cannot reject an alternative site simply because it cannot reasonably accommodate some industrial uses, but can only reject the alternative site if it cannot reasonably accommodate all of the proposed uses justified under the three reasons. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. Where a reasons exception for a 837-acre exception area is justified for proposed large-lot industrial uses of 50 to 300 acres, the county cannot reject alternative industrial sites that could accommodate some large-lot industrial uses simply because such sites are not equal in size to the exception area or cannot accommodate the same number of multiple large-lot industrial uses at a single location, absent findings establishing that multiple large-lot industrial uses must be located together at a single large site. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. Findings that a 450-acre vacant site within an urban growth boundary zoned for heavy industrial use cannot reasonably accommodate proposed heavy industrial uses, because the site is more parcelized, is intended for labor intensive uses, and is close to populated areas, are insufficient bases to reject the alternative site, where the findings do not establish that the cost of assembling parcels is prohibitive, and that the proposed industrial uses exclude uses that are labor intensive or compatible with populated areas. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. OAR 660-004-0020(2)(c) requires a comparison of the adverse environmental, economic, social and energy (ESEE) consequences of developing the proposed exception area, with the typical ESEE consequences of developing alternative resource lands. But OAR 660-004-0020(2)(c) does not require detailed evaluation of alternative sites unless such sites are specifically identified during the proceedings below. Where the petitioner did not specifically identify alternatives sites below, the failure of the county's findings to compare ESEE consequences of developing specific alternative sites is not a basis for remand. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. A local government does not err in not applying OAR 660-012-0070(5) and (6), which govern the analysis for transportation improvements that do not require a new exception, to evaluate the petitioner's alternative site for a highway interchange, where the record does not support the petitioner's claim that the new interchange could be located without expanding an existing exception area that was approved for a two-lane rural overpass. In that circumstance, OAR 660-012-0070(7) applies to govern the alternatives analysis when a transportation improvement requires a new exception. Storm v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 415 (2012).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. A fairly detailed explanation for why the consequences of rural residential development of a proposed exception area would be minimal is not sufficient to comply with the OAR 660-014-0040(3)(b) requirement to demonstrate that the consequences of developing the proposed site would not be "significantly more adverse" than would be the case at other potential exception sites, where there is no attempt to compare those identified minimal consequences with the consequences of developing any other potential exception sites. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 61 Or LUBA 240 (2010).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. Where the county and the Land Conservation and Development Commission previously approved a Goal 4 exception for a destination resort under conditions requiring specified on-site accommodations and facilities, and the county imposed an overlay zone to ensure that the resort includes those on-site accommodations and facilities, in later adopting a reasons exception to Goal 14 to complete the proposed resort the county can consider those required accommodations and facilities to be essential characteristics of the proposed use, for purposes of the alternative sites analysis required under OAR 660-014-0040(3)(a). In that circumstance, the county does not err in concluding that alternative sites within urban growth boundaries cannot reasonably accommodate the proposed use. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. A finding that the economic success of a proposed wine country hotel would be enhanced by location in a "quiet rural atmosphere among vineyards and near wineries" is insufficient to demonstrate under OAR 660-004-0020(2) that the hotel "requires a location on resource land" as opposed to otherwise suitable non-resource land. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. Evidence that an alternative site zoned for residential use is needed to satisfy a shortfall in residential lands, and is adjacent to high-density residential development, is sufficient to demonstrate that the alternative site cannot "reasonably accommodate" a proposed need for industrial land, for purposes of OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(ii). Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. Land owned by the federal government and not subject to local zoning and planning need not be considered as an alternative site to proposed industrial development on resource land, for purposes of OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(ii). The rule does not require the local government to consider the speculative possibility that federal land might someday be exchanged or otherwise become subject to the local government's zoning and planning jurisdiction. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. Evidence that an alternative site (1) is needed to satisfy a city's identified need for future residential lands, (2) is surrounded by residential uses, (3) does not have adequate access for industrial uses, and (4) is located far from existing industrial uses, is sufficient to demonstrate that the alternative site cannot "reasonably accommodate" an identified need for industrial land, for purposes of OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(ii). Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. Findings that other resource lands that are potential candidates for inclusion in the UGB are better or more productive resource lands than the subject property, and therefore the environmental, social, energy, and economic (ESEE) consequences of urbanizing other resource lands would be more adverse than urbanizing the subject property, are adequate for purposes of OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(iii). Such findings need not specifically identify and discuss each ESEE consequence with respect to each alternative site, absent issues raised below that would require more detailed discussion. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. It is not inconsistent for findings to reject alternative sites under OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(ii) because proposed industrial uses would conflict with surrounding high-density residential uses, while concluding under OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(iv) that, as limited by conditions of approval, industrial use of the subject property is compatible with rural residential uses that border the subject property on one side. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. The requirement that a proposed development of resource land be compatible with adjacent uses under OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(iv) does not require that all conflicts or adverse impacts be eliminated. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. The impracticability standard of the Metro Code (MC) for locational amendments to the Urban Growth Boundary (UGB) performs a limited version of the functional role that Goal 14, factor 6, and Goal 2, Part II(c)(2), play in the context of more comprehensive UGB amendments: ensuring that agricultural land is included in the UGB only when nonagricultural lands cannot reasonably accommodate the proposed use. Because the MC must be consistent with Goals 2 and 14, the decision is not entitled to deference under ORS 197.829(1). Malinowski Farm v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 633 (2000).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. "Practicable" has two distinct connotations: (1) technical possibility; and (2) prudential balancing of costs and other relevant considerations. An alternative is impracticable where it is either technically infeasible or, based on all relevant considerations, including consideration of cost, it would not be a feasible alternative. Malinowski Farm v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 633 (2000).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. The present development intentions of current owners are not determinative as to whether undeveloped lands may require urban services in the near future. A local government may assume that continued resource use will render near term urbanization of property within the urban growth boundary impracticable, even if the current owners of urbanizable land testify that they do not intend to develop their property for urban uses anytime soon. Malinowski Farm v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 633 (2000).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. In conducting the alternative site analysis required to include lower priority resource lands in the UGB under Goal 2, Part II, and ORS 197.298(3)(a), the relevant question is whether higher priority exception lands can "reasonably accommodate" the identified need, not whether such exception lands can satisfy that need as well as or better than resource lands. Findings that, due to parcelization and existing development patterns, exception lands cannot accommodate as much or as dense residential development per acre as resource lands are not sufficient to establish that exception lands cannot "reasonably accommodate" that residential development. Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 199 (2000).

6.4 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Alternative Courses of Action. In determining whether land is suitable for inclusion in urban reserves, OAR 660-021-0030(2) requires that, prior to including any lower priority land in urban reserves pursuant to OAR 660-021-0030(4), the local government must conduct an alternative sites analysis sufficient to demonstrate that nonresource lands cannot reasonably accommodate the need that justifies the inclusion of land under OAR 660-021-0030(4). D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A local government's findings that a prohibition on establishing new fossil fuel terminals (FFTs) and expanding existing FFTs will "[l]imit development in or near areas prone to natural hazards" is supported by an adequate factual base where most of the local government's industrial zoning is in areas with high levels of liquefaction susceptibility and where the prior ability of FFTs to expand storage capacity has not yielded many seismic upgrades. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 81 Or LUBA 683 (2020).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A local government's findings that there is adequate existing storage capacity to accommodate a modest growth in fossil fuel demand and, therefore, that a prohibition on establishing new fossil fuel terminals (FFTs) and expanding existing FFTs will "[l]imit fossil fuels distribution and storage facilities to those necessary to serve the regional market" are (1) inadequate where natural gas falls under a local government's definition of fossil fuels and where the findings do not address natural gas needs and (2) unsupported by an adequate factual base where the record establishes that natural gas demand will increase and where there is no evidence of the amount of terminal and storage capacity needed for natural gas generally. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 81 Or LUBA 683 (2020).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A local government's findings that a prohibition on establishing new fossil fuel terminals (FFTs) and expanding existing FFTs will not result in any impacts on the intermodal transportation system are unsupported by an adequate factual base where the record establishes that a constriction in one component of an intermodal system, such as a pipeline, may shift demand to other modes, thereby increasing truck traffic. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 81 Or LUBA 683 (2020).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. The inventory of existing bicycle facilities in a revised Transportation System Plan (TSP) does not violate the requirement, under OAR 660-012-0020(3)(a), that TSPs include "[a]n inventory and general assessment of existing and committed transportation facilities and services by function, type, capacity and condition" merely because the inventory includes narrow or substandard bike lanes. In addition, such an inventory does not violate the requirement, under Goal 2, that decisions be supported by an adequate factual base where the local government relies on a Level of Stress (LTS) analysis to reflect the capacity and condition of the facilities and where a petitioner fails to explain why LTS does not reflect capacity and condition. Shaff v. City of Medford, 79 Or LUBA 317 (2019).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A city's findings addressing future regional demand for fossil fuels, the key support for city's prohibition on any expansion of existing fossil fuel terminals, is not supported by an "adequate factual base," as required by Statewide Planning Goal 2, where city ignored uncontradicted projections of moderate growth in demand for fossil fuels, and instead relied on unsupported speculation that demand will actually plateau or decline. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 76 Or LUBA 15 (2017).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. An ordinance that amends the width and features of a buffer area between urban and rural lands is properly viewed as a legislative rather than quasi-judicial decision, where the ordinance was adopted as part of a legislative process that was not bound to result in a decision, the modified buffer affects over 135 acres of land that stretch over one mile in length, and the amendments potentially affect hundreds of property owners. Forest Park Neighborhood Assoc. v. Washington County, 73 Or LUBA 193 (2016).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A landscape architect's conclusory statement that a proposed buffer will "ensure compatibility" between urban and rural agricultural uses is not supported by an adequate factual base, where the record includes uncontroverted testimony that the buffer depends on vegetation growth that will take up to 15 years to effectively screen equestrian jumping events located only 50 feet away from urban residential development, and that horses participating in the events may be panicked by fireworks and other sudden visual and auditory impacts stemming from the unscreened residential uses. Forest Park Neighborhood Assoc. v. Washington County, 73 Or LUBA 193 (2016).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. An exhibit prepared by the applicant's attorney showing that three equestrian centers are located within urban areas does not provide an adequate factual base to support a finding that a 50-foot-wide buffer is sufficient to ensure compatibility between urban residential uses and an adjacent equestrian center, where that testimony is undermined by testimony from the owners of the urban equestrian centers that their operations rely on buffers that are 160 to 300 feet wide, and that a buffer only 50 feet wide would compromise the safety of horse riders. Forest Park Neighborhood Assoc. v. Washington County, 73 Or LUBA 193 (2016).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. The lack of evidentiary support for a finding that a vegetative buffer is superior to a distance buffer at reducing visual incompatibilities is not harmless error, where the only evidence on that point is to the contrary, and under the local government's interpretation of the compatibility standard whether one buffer method is better at reducing or minimizing adverse visual impacts than another method appears to be a legitimate consideration. Forest Park Neighborhood Assoc. v. Washington County, 73 Or LUBA 193 (2016).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Planning staff testimony that two five-foot-high fences on either side of a 50-foot-wide vegetated buffer would discourage human trespass from urban residential development onto adjoining agricultural land provides an adequate factual basis to conclude that the buffer "ensures compatibility" between urban and rural agricultural uses as regards impacts from trespass. Forest Park Neighborhood Assoc. v. Washington County, 73 Or LUBA 193 (2016).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d), the relevant inquiry is whether the proposed use requiring an exception is compatible with adjacent uses, not whether the proposed use is more intensive than prior uses. King v. Clackamas County, 72 Or LUBA 143 (2015).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A city's conclusion that proposed high-density residential zoning complies with Goal 12 and the Transportation Planning Rule is not supported by an adequate factual base, where the city assumed full development under the old zoning but only partial development under the new zoning, for general economic reasons that apply equally to both development scenarios. Absent an explanation for using different background assumptions, a comparison of traffic-generative capacity allowed under new and old zoning under OAR 660-012-0060 must use consistent assumptions. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Where the evidence in the record demonstrates that an applicant for a destination resort map amendment's consultant compared the entirety of the applicant's ownership of land within the county, based on the county's ownership database, to the properties proposed for inclusion on the map of eligible lands, and disqualified several properties from inclusion on the map that included ineligible lands and did not comply with ORS 197.435(7) (the 30 percent rule), a reasonable person could rely on that evidence to conclude that the remaining properties included on the map comply with ORS 197.435(7) and that the proposed map amendment is supported by an adequate factual base. Root v. Klamath County, 68 Or LUBA 124 (2013).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Goal 9 requires local governments to provide adequate opportunities for a variety of economic activities, but does not require local governments to protect one type of economic activity against impacts created by other economic and non-economic uses. Goal 9 does not require that ODOT, in adopting higher mobility standards for state highways, address in its findings whether increased congestion from development allowed under the higher mobility standards will adversely affect existing economic activity. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. The city's reliance on information and studies prepared several years prior to the adoption of a public facilities plan does not, in itself, provide a basis for reversal or remand of the decision. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 66 Or LUBA 392 (2012).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Goal 2 (Land Use Planning) generally requires that comprehensive plan amendments be based on the analyses that are included in the comprehensive plan, rather than analyses that are external to the comprehensive plan. Hawksworth v. City of Roseburg, 64 Or LUBA 171 (2011).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A map adopted by the county does not provide an adequate factual base under Goal 2 for a decision to amend the county's destination resort map where it is not possible to tell by looking at the map where the boundaries of the included properties are located, and the list of properties included in the record identifies properties as entire sections of land within townships and ranges, or numbered parcels within sections, ranges, and townships but the map does not include any section numbers or locations. Root v. Klamath County, 63 Or LUBA 230 (2011).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Based on the Court of Appeals' decisions in 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of Dundee, 203 Or App 207, 216, 124 P3d 1249 (2005), and D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 165 Or App 1, 22, 994 P2d 1205 (2000), it would be error for a local government to ignore available commercial and industrial land data in its acknowledged comprehensive plan and rely instead on different data that is not part of the acknowledged comprehensive plan to conclude that a land use regulation amendment will leave the local government with an adequate supply of commercial and industrial land. However, if the local government also adopts adequate findings based on the commercial and industrial land data in its acknowledged comprehensive plan that the land use regulation amendment will not leave the local government with an inadequate supply of commercial and industrial land, the local government's additional findings that rely on data that is not included in the comprehensive plan provide no basis for reversal or remand. McDougal Bros. Investments v. City of Veneta, 59 Or LUBA 207 (2009).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. It may be that a city's buildable lands inventory (BLI) can be written and structured so that it can be updated without incorporating the update into the city's comprehensive plan. However, where a city's BLI is not the type of BLI that might be updated and relied upon without incorporating the updated BLI into the comprehensive plan, a city decision relying on that BLI update to enlarge the city's urban growth boundary, without first adopting the updated BLI as part of the city's comprehensive plan, is error. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 54 Or LUBA 160 (2007).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Extrapolation of a local government's buildable lands inventory based on assumptions not contained in the comprehensive plan is not compatible with the Goal 2 requirement that decisions be based on the comprehensive plan. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 52 Or LUBA 509 (2006).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A local government may rely on population projections contained in the transportation system plan portion of the comprehensive plan in amending its urban growth boundary. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 52 Or LUBA 509 (2006).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. The city's conclusion that there is a demonstrated need to add 90 acres of residential land to the city's residential buildable lands inventory, based on information submitted by the applicant that uses a planning period to the year 2020, is not inconsistent for purposes of Goal 2 (Land Use Planning) with the buildable lands inventory in the acknowledged comprehensive plan that relies on a planning period that ends in 2004 or 2005. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 50 Or LUBA 367 (2005).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Goal 10 (Housing) requires local governments to inventory available residential buildable lands, and Goal 2 (Land Use Planning) requires those inventories to be part of the comprehensive plan. Where the residential buildable lands inventory in the comprehensive plan is not useable, and an applicant presents evidence regarding the current inventory of buildable lands, Goal 1 (Citizen Involvement), Goal 2 and Goal 10 require that the comprehensive plan be amended to incorporate that inventory. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 50 Or LUBA 367 (2005).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Goal 10 (Housing), Goal 2 (Land Use Planning) and Goal 1 (Citizen Involvement) require that a population projection that forms the basis of a city's residential lands needs analysis be incorporated into the comprehensive plan. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 50 Or LUBA 367 (2005).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A county's population projection is supported by an adequate factual base when it relies on a massive supply of groundwater in the regional aquifer and future acquisition of rights to the aquifer in order to meet future water needs for population growth. Friends of Deschutes County v. Deschutes County, 49 Or LUBA 100 (2005).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A local government may take past and future annexations into account in determining its future growth rate. Friends of Deschutes County v. Deschutes County, 49 Or LUBA 100 (2005).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. ORS 195.036 does not require a county to employ any particular methodology to project future population, and is silent with respect to whether different methodologies may be used for different areas of the county. As long as the county's choice of methodology is supported by an adequate factual base, the county may choose to use different methodologies in different areas of the county. Tipperman v. Union County, 44 Or LUBA 98 (2003).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A reasonable factfinder would not rely on 1990-2000 building permit data to project a higher than historic population increase through the year 2020, where the analysis of building permit data assumes without any basis that each building permit resulted in construction of a permanent non-seasonal dwelling, and fails to adequately take into account the number of abandoned, demolished, removed or replaced dwellings. Tipperman v. Union County, 44 Or LUBA 98 (2003).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A reasonable factfinder would not assume that every new job and student slot created in the county over the next 20 years will be filled by a new immigrant to the county, for purposes of projecting county population increase, particularly given the relatively high rate of unemployment in the county, and the unlikelihood that all new jobs will be full-time or family-wage jobs likely to induce in-migration. Tipperman v. Union County, 44 Or LUBA 98 (2003).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A county's choice to allocate a higher than historic rate of growth to one city, in coordinating the county's 20-year population projection among cities and unincorporated areas, is supported by an adequate factual base, where the record includes evidence that the city was the fastest growing city in the county in the 1990s and is likely to annex rural residential land at a higher rate than other cities. Tipperman v. Union County, 44 Or LUBA 98 (2003).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. The Goal 2 requirement for an adequate factual base does not exist in a vacuum. In alleging a Goal 2 factual base inadequacy at LUBA, a petitioner must establish that some applicable statewide planning goal or other criterion imposes obligations that are of such a nature that a factual base is required to determine if the zoning ordinance amendment is consistent with the goal or other criterion. OCAPA v. City of Mosier, 44 Or LUBA 452 (2003).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Where petitioner alleges that a comprehensive plan amendment violates the Goal 2 requirement for an "adequate factual base," but petitioner makes no attempt to explain why the three-volume record supporting the challenged decision is inadequate to satisfy this general Goal 2 requirement, the assignment of error will be denied. Hubenthal v. City of Woodburn, 39 Or LUBA 20 (2000).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A UGB amendment based on a subregional need to provide affordable housing must ensure that the land included in the UGB will be used to satisfy that need. Adoption of a master plan that imposes zoning and other measures to allow for a significant number of high-density dwellings is sufficient to ensure that the land included in the UGB will be used to satisfy that need, given evidence that the lack of affordable housing in the subregion is the result of the relative absence of high-density dwellings and that such dwellings will be affordable to 83 percent of the employees in the subregion. Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 199 (2000).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A county's 2020 population projection is supported by an adequate factual base, notwithstanding that it is based on 1991-1997 population figures that differ from official state estimates for those years, where a reasonable person could conclude that, when the two sets of figures are adjusted to cover the same period of time, the difference between the county and state figures falls within a statistically acceptable margin of error. DLCD v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 129 (1999).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A county population projection is supported by an adequate factual base, notwithstanding that it is based on assumptions regarding economic growth that are inconsistent with the county's historic economic growth patterns, where a reasonable person could conclude that those historic economic growth patterns are not indicative of the county's long-term economic prospects. DLCD v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 129 (1999).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A county plan amendment imposing a "sequencing" requirement that proposed attached housing be built before completing proposed detached housing is supported by an adequate factual base, where a reasonable decision maker could conclude, based on testimony in the record, that the sequencing requirement is necessary to forestall attempts to underbuild attached housing, which may subvert the county's minimum density standard. West Hills Development Co. v. Washington County, 37 Or LUBA 46 (1999).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Petitioners fail to demonstrate that a county's plan amendment lacks an adequate factual base and is inconsistent with Goal 10 where petitioners merely speculate that the county's plan amendment, which requires that proposed attached housing be built at a site before completing proposed detached housing, will adversely affect the county's buildable lands inventory. West Hills Development Co. v. Washington County, 37 Or LUBA 46 (1999).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Petitioners fail to demonstrate that a county's minimum density standard lacks an adequate factual base or is inconsistent with Goal 10 where petitioners merely speculate that application of the standard will make it impossible to develop certain lands at lower densities. Even if petitioners' speculations are correct, the only probable result is that those lands will be developed at higher densities, which is not inconsistent with Goal 10. West Hills Development Co. v. Washington County, 37 Or LUBA 46 (1999).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. A local government errs in declaring that an intergovernmental agreement no longer controls where by the terms of that agreement it governs until specified recommendations are implemented, and the record shows that the recommendations have been only partially implemented. City of Salem/Marion County v. City of Keizer, 36 Or LUBA 262 (1999).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Petitioner's arguments that four studies supporting a comprehensive plan amendment are old, fail to address certain features, are preliminary, and call for more study do not demonstrate the challenged amendment lacks an adequate factual base, where the challenged decision's factual base is not limited to the four studies. Friends of Cedar Mill v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 477 (1995).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. With regard to providing an explanation of the basis for a challenged legislative decision, the Goal 2 "adequate factual base" requirement will be satisfied if the decision is supported by either (1) findings demonstrating compliance with applicable legal standards, or (2) argument and citations to facts in the record, in respondents' briefs, adequate to demonstrate compliance with applicable legal standards. Redland/Viola/Fischer's Mill CPO v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 560 (1994).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Statewide Planning Goal 2 requires that comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendments have an adequate factual base, regardless of whether they are legislative or quasi-judicial in nature. Rea v. City of Seaside, 27 Or LUBA 443 (1994).

6.5 Goal 2 – Land Use Planning – Adequate Factual Base. Statewide Planning Goal 2 requires that planning decisions and actions have an adequate factual base, regardless of the legislative or quasi-judicial nature of the decision. The Goal 2 requirement for an adequate factual base is equivalent to the requirement for substantial evidence in the whole record. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-033-0140 provides that a decision extending the expiration period for an ORS 215.402 permit decision on farm or forest land is not a "land use decision," and therefore such an extension decision is not within LUBA's jurisdiction. Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. Farms are part of the "existing commercial agricultural enterprise" as that phrase is used in Goal 3 if they contribute to the overall agricultural economy in the area in a substantial way. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 54 Or LUBA 191 (2007).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. Where a county's findings of fact merely show that some constraints must be overcome to farm property, they do not establish sufficient reasons to support a reasons exception to Statewide Planning Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands). Rhinhart v. Umatilla County, 53 Or LUBA 402 (2007).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. The first sentence of OAR 660-004-0022(2) prohibits reliance on a continuation of past development patterns in approving a reasons exception to Statewide Planning Goal 3 to allow rural residential development Rhinhart v. Umatilla County, 53 Or LUBA 402 (2007).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. A generalized market demand for smaller, less expensive farm parcels to allow part-time farming in conjunction with rural residential use is not a permissible reason for adopting a Statewide Planning Goal 3 exception to divide a small farm parcel into smaller farm parcels. Rhinhart v. Umatilla County, 53 Or LUBA 402 (2007).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. Under OAR 660-004-0022(2) it is not enough to show that persons who might want to buy proposed rural residences might work at nearby rural businesses. Rather, the county must show that the property that the exception is proposed for is needed to meet the market demand for housing that is created by "rural industrial, commercial, or other economic activity in the area." Rhinhart v. Umatilla County, 53 Or LUBA 402 (2007).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. In approving a reasons exception for rural residential development, Goal 2, Part II(c)(2) requires a demonstration that sites that do not require an exception cannot reasonably accommodate the use. In making that demonstration, it is error to exclude alternative sites simply because they do not have particular characteristics of the exception site, where those characteristics are not common or necessary attributes of rural residential development. Rhinhart v. Umatilla County, 53 Or LUBA 402 (2007).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. While population forecasts may eventually be used to provide a partial basis for a local government to take future actions that might have an effect upon farmland, the forecasts do not have an effect on farmland, and therefore do not implicate Goal 3. Friends of Deschutes County v. Deschutes County, 49 Or LUBA 100 (2005).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. A Statewide Planning Goal 3 guideline does not impose an approval standard for a permit for a use authorized under ORS 215.283(2) and local implementing regulations. Hiebenthal v. Polk County, 45 Or LUBA 297 (2003).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. A county decision that approves the redesignation of property from a nonresource zone to rural residential zone does not implicate Goal 3, even though the county may have erred in its original decision to zone the property for nonresource use rather than agricultural use and LCDC may have erred in acknowledging the nonresource designation for the property. Caldwell v. Klamath County, 45 Or LUBA 548 (2003).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. A county does not err by refusing to apply Goal 3 or by failing to require an exception to Goal 3 to allow nonresource-zoned property to be rezoned for rural residential use, where the nonresource zoning designation for that property was acknowledged and the proposed rural residential zoning designation is consistent with that initial determination. Caldwell v. Klamath County, 45 Or LUBA 548 (2003).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. Although it may be appropriate to focus exclusively or preponderantly on the poor quality of soils for farm and forest use in deciding whether a particular tract qualifies as agricultural lands or forest lands, such an exclusive or preponderant focus on the tract itself is not appropriate in considering an irrevocably committed exception, where the focus is on the relationship of the adjoining properties to the tract. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 42 Or LUBA 235 (2002).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. Speculative impacts on an adjoining rural subdivision from possible future aerial application of herbicides, pesticides and fertilizer and future movement of trucks to and from a 39-acre parcel for future farm and forest use are the occasional inconveniences that rural residents must be willing to accept and do not provide a basis for a committed exception to Goals 3 and 4. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 42 Or LUBA 235 (2002).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. A reasons exception for rural housing is not "necessary" under the last sentence of OAR 660-004-0022(2), if the county fails to demonstrate that land inside nearby urban growth boundaries or on nearby exception lands could not accommodate any identified market demand for housing, as required by OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b). Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 42 Or LUBA 235 (2002).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. Where a county's legislative decision changes the comprehensive plan designation for a property from Industrial to Primary Agriculture, and the record does not reflect that the county considered other potentially suitable designations or explained why other potentially suitable designations should not be applied, the decision and record are insufficient to demonstrate that applicable criteria were considered. Manning v. Marion County, 42 Or LUBA 56 (2002).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. Where a local comprehensive plan provision is designed to implement, and in fact essentially mirrors, the requirements for compliance with Goal 3, LUBA owes deference to the local government's interpretation only to the extent that interpretation is consistent with Goal 3. Doob v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 275 (1996).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. County comprehensive plan and ordinance amendments affecting a county's exclusive farm use zone(s), adopted after August 7, 1993, are required to implement the requirements of OAR Chapter 660, Division 33 for important farmland. OAR 660-33-150(3) (1993). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Marion County, 27 Or LUBA 303 (1994).

7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Generally. Where OAR 660-33-150(4)(a) (1993) requires a county to complete the process of implementing the requirements of the Goal 3 rule for high-value farmland by October 31, 1995, the county did not err by failing to bring its exclusive farm use zones into compliance with the requirements for high-value farmland in the 1993 version of the Goal 3 rule when it adopted amendments to its EFU zones in November 1993. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Marion County, 27 Or LUBA 303 (1994).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. In Western Oregon, where a ranch leases the subject property and adjacent properties for grazing, and where the adjacent properties are in capability classes I-IV, the subject property is both within and adjacent to a "farm unit," and is therefore "agricultural land" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(b). That the lease is not in writing, the owner of the subject property receives "de minimis" compensation from the ranch, the ranch does not object to an application to amend the subject property's comprehensive plan designation and rezone the subject property for residential uses, and the subject property adds "no significant economic value to grazing operations on the adjacent properties" does not affect the subject property's qualification as "agricultural land." Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 81 Or LUBA 644 (2020).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. In the context of an application to remove property from a county's Goal 5 inventory of significant aggregate resources, where the county has previously determined, in two separate final, acknowledged decisions—one based on area-specific soils mapping and the other based on periodic review which resulted in an updated inventory—that the property should not be included on the county's Goal 3 inventory of agricultural lands; where the county zoned the property for surface mining, a zone that does not implement Goal 3, after one of those previous determinations; and where the ESEE analysis for the property does not specify a post-mining zoning designation or use, a conclusion that the property is not agricultural land is supported by substantial evidence. The county, having previously determined that the property is not agricultural land, is not required to revisit whether the property is agricultural land. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 80 Or LUBA 252 (2019).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. In the context of an application to change the comprehensive plan designation of property to Rural Residential Exception Area, where a comprehensive plan provision provides that "any new Rural Residential Exception Areas need to be justified through initiating a non-resource plan amendment and zone change by demonstrating that the property does not meet the definition of agricultural * * * land," a county correctly determines that an applicant satisfies that provision by producing copies of the county's adopted and acknowledged agricultural lands inventories, which do not include the property. Even where an opponent submits an NRCS soils map into the record, which the opponent argues shows the property's soils constitute agricultural lands, where the NRCS website that the opponent used to prepare the soils map includes a disclaimer regarding the large scale of mapping, stating that "[e]nlargement of maps beyond the scale of mapping can cause misunderstanding of the detail of mapping and accuracy of soil line placement," a reasonable decision-maker would rely on the inventories to conclude that the property is not agricultural land, and a reasonable decision-maker could determine that the NRCS soils map is less credible than the inventories. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 80 Or LUBA 252 (2019).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. OAR 660-033-0030(5) permits use of "[m]ore detailed data on soil capability than is contained in the National Resource Conservation Service" soil maps and surveys to determine whether particular soils qualify as agricultural soils. A more detailed soils study of a 21.59-acre parcel that uses 43 soil data points, five transects and 276 site observations is substantial evidence that the parcel contains predominantly Class VII and VIII soils rather than predominantly Class VI soils as shown by the National Resource Conservation Service soil survey. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 156 (2016).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. As defined by OAR 660-033-020(8), "High Value Farmland" includes tracts with soils that are predominantly prime, unique, Class I and Class II farmland. The OAR 660-033-020(8) definition of High Value Farmland includes all subclassifications of Class II soils, and a tract that has predominantly Class II soils therefore is High Value Farmland. Gottman v. Clackamas County, 64 Or LUBA 358 (2011).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. Where the petitioner fails to challenge findings that explain why the county chose to rely on a consultant's report that estimates the costs of putting land to farm use based on certain assumptions, the petitioner's evidentiary arguments that the county should have used other assumptions fails to establish that the report is flawed or that the county erred in relying on the report. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 60 Or LUBA 131 (2009).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. When considering the profitability of land for farm use, the fair market value of property zoned for agricultural use incorporates a host of nonfarm economic values in addition to the value of the property attributable to its suitability for farm use. Property owned in fee simple grants the owner a bundle of rights and investment potentials, only some of which are related to the economic use of the land in general, or for farm use in particular. The fair market value of any EFU-zoned parcel presumably reflects its potential for nonfarm uses as well. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 60 Or LUBA 131 (2009).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. Even though the county relied on an erroneous calculation of potential mortgage carrying costs associated with attempting to farm the property, because even without the losses from mortgage costs, evidence in the record indicates that the property could not be profitably farmed, the county did not err in finding that the property could not be profitably farmed. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 60 Or LUBA 131 (2009).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. Unlike OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), OAR 660-033-0120(1)(b) does not refer to profitability, so whether a "farm unit" has been or can be farmed "profitably" is not a consideration for purposes of the "farm unit" prong. The question under OAR 660-033-0120(1)(b) is whether the subject property is properly viewed as part of a "farm unit," despite the recent cessation of joint use. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 60 Or LUBA 131 (2009).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. When there is no dispute that a former ranch was part of a farm unit with a long and recent history of farm use, it is difficult to adopt a sustainable conclusion that the property is no longer part of the farm unit absent a finding that something fundamental has changed that would preclude a resumption of a farm operation using the elements of the former ranch. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 60 Or LUBA 131 (2009).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. Testimony that the applicant has not shown why a parcel formerly part of a larger ranch cannot be used in conjunction with adjacent and nearby farm properties is sufficient to raise the issue of compliance with OAR 660-033-0030(3), notwithstanding that the petitioner failed to cite the rule. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 101 (2008).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. LUBA will remand a decision determining that a parcel is not Goal 3 agricultural land for findings under OAR 660-033-0030(3), which requires that the county examine nearby or adjacent land, regardless of ownership, in determining whether a parcel is agricultural land, where the county adopted no findings addressing the rule, and there is evidence in the record that the subject property was formerly used in conjunction with adjacent farm lands and can be so used again. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 101 (2008).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. In determining whether a property is generally unsuitable for the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species, a county's conclusion that any historic agricultural use on the property before that time does not provide a substantial hurdle is supported by substantial evidence where the county chooses to rely on an expert's opinion that proposed nonfarm parcels have not been used for agricultural operation in the past 20 years. Peterson v. Crook County, 52 Or LUBA 160 (2006).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. Where the record reflects that 10 acres of irrigation rights were removed from two 20-acre parcels because (1) irrigating with that water was extremely inefficient, (2) the nonfarm parcels consist of 85 percent bare ground, and (3) moving the irrigation rights back would provide no benefit, county's findings that returning irrigation rights to the property would not render the nonfarm parcels generally suitable for the production of farm crops or livestock is supported by substantial evidence. Peterson v. Crook County, 52 Or LUBA 160 (2006).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. Where the record reflects that at least 75 percent of the parcels proposed for nonfarm dwellings are incapable of supporting grazing, the county is not required to specifically consider whether neighboring ranchers could use the proposed nonfarm parcels in conjunction with other ranch land. Peterson v. Crook County, 52 Or LUBA 160 (2006).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. A 160-acre parcel that was partitioned from and ceased concurrent farm operations with the parent parcel three years prior to being sold for non-farm purposes is not part of a "farm unit" with the parent parcel, and hence "agricultural land" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(b), where different farming regimes operated on each parcel, there is a subsequent history of independent farm operations, and the county determined in allowing the partition that the 160-acre parcel either was the appropriate size for an agricultural operation or that it met the statutory minimum size for an agricultural operation. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 167 (2005).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. A finding that land is not subject to Goal 3 is inadequate, where it does not address the definition of "agricultural land" at OAR 660-033-0020(1) or explain why land with Class III agricultural soils is not "agricultural land" under that definition. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 50 Or LUBA 444 (2005).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. Lands that are planned and zoned for resource use under Goals 3 and 4 may be redesignated for nonresource use by applying an acknowledged comprehensive plan policy that establishes standards for such redesignations. Where such a specific policy and local standards have been acknowledged, they apply in place of more general statewide planning goals standards that would otherwise apply to such a redesignation. Sommer v. Josephine County, 49 Or LUBA 134 (2005).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. Property that is: (1) comprised of land in Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) soils classes other than I-IV; (2) is farmed and intermingled with adjacent lands in capability classes I-IV; (3) contains a barn and farmhouse; and (4) satisfies the farm unit test, is agricultural land, and may not be redesignated as nonresource land. Emmons v. Lane County, 48 Or LUBA 457 (2005).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. Where the question of whether a property qualifies as agricultural land, so that it cannot be considered for a comprehensive plan Rural Use map designation, is governed by the same legal standard that governed a prior local government finding in an earlier decision on the same application that the subject property does not qualify as agricultural land subject to Goal 3, the same issue is presented. If that issue was conclusively resolved in the earlier decision, a different resolution of that issue in the later decision is barred by the Beck v. City of Tillamook waiver principle. Rutigliano v. Jackson County, 47 Or LUBA 470 (2004).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. An ambiguous county code provision that allows lands that were incorrectly identified as agricultural or forest land under Goals 3 and 4 to be rezoned for rural residential use is correctly interpreted to require that an applicant show that a particular property is neither agricultural land nor forest land because land will frequently qualify as both agricultural and forest land and the Land Conservation and Development Commission's rules allow such lands to be zoned for either for exclusive farm use or for forest use. Rutigliano v. Jackson County, 47 Or LUBA 470 (2004).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. Where county comprehensive plan standards for identifying agricultural land implement the Goal 3 definition of agricultural land, and an evidentiary challenge to a finding under the comprehensive plan standards that certain land is agricultural land is inseparable from the question of whether that land is agricultural land under Goal 3, LUBA lacks jurisdiction to address the challenge under the county's comprehensive plan standards. Manning v. Marion County, 45 Or LUBA 1 (2003).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. Any lands designated as "marginal lands" pursuant to ORS 197.247 retain that status, notwithstanding repeal of that statute. Where the local government is considering lands for inclusion in urban reserves that might include marginal lands, it must correctly identify those lands and assign them second priority status pursuant to OAR 660-021-0030(3)(b). Failure to do so is inconsistent with the urban reserve rule because it treats second priority marginal lands as fourth priority resource lands. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. A local government may include third priority "secondary lands" within urban reserves under OAR 660-021-0030(3)(c) only if such lands have been designated as secondary lands pursuant to a statutory or rule-based definition. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. In determining whether a parcel is agricultural land under Goal 3, a local government must: (1) evaluate the soils and suitability of the entire subject property under applicant's ownership, and (2) determine whether the entire subject property is necessary to permit farm practices on nearby lands under OAR 660-33-020(1)(a)(C). DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 728 (1997).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. County findings do not justify a conclusion that the subject property is part of a "farm unit" within the definition of agricultural land set forth in OAR 660-33-020(1)(b) where the findings do not address whether the subject property is intermingled with lands in capability classes I-IV, and do not explain the relationship between the subject property and the remainder of the parcel. Brown v. Coos County, 31 Or LUBA 142 (1996).

7.2.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Generally. Where a local government properly determines certain land is not farm or forestland subject to Statewide Planning Goals 3 and 4, an exception to Goals 3 and 4 is not required to support comprehensive plan and zone map amendments designating such property for residential use. Bates v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 21 (1994).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. Where the county found a boundary line adjustment application is in compliance with a county ordinance that requires that the "resulting parcel sizes do not change the existing land use" because before and after the boundary line adjustment there was one parcel conforming and one parcel non-conforming in size, LUBA will remand the decision. On remand, the county shall consider petitioners' argument and adopt any necessary findings regarding petitioners' argument that the ordinance could be interpreted to require the county to consider whether the "existing land use pattern" is changed when the subject parcel—that was previously deemed "generally unsuitable" for farm use due to its size and soil composition—qualifies for a nonfarm dwelling as a result of the boundary line adjustment because the parcel was expanded to include agricultural soils in a manner that possibly renders the resulting parcel suitable for farm use. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 11 (2018).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. Although the county's approval of the boundary line adjustment for the siting of a nonfarm dwelling could effectively undercut the factual predicate for compliance with a statutory-based standard pursuant to ORS 215.263(4) designed to minimize loss of productive resource lands in exclusive farm use zones to non-resource uses, where petitioner has not cited anything in the county ordinance that constitutes an approval standard for a post-partition boundary line adjustment, even if the adjustment undercuts a factual predicate for the partition approval, this argument provides no basis for reversal or remand. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 11 (2018).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. For purposes of determining whether land in soil capability classes other than Class I-IV soils according to the U.S. Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), is "agricultural land" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), a factor that a local government may consider in addition to the seven factors listed in the rule is whether a reasonable farmer would be motivated to put the land to agricultural use, for the primary purpose of obtaining a profit in money. The suitability for farm use inquiry must also consider the potential for use in conjunction with adjacent or nearby land. OAR 660-033-0030(3). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 368 (2018).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. For purposes of determining whether land is agricultural land under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), a county's findings are not deficient when they do not address whether marijuana production is a viable farm use or crop on the subject property. The analysis under OAR 660-033-0020, which gives effect to Statewide Planning Goal 3, focuses on the land and its suitability for farm use, not on whether a particular crop can be grown on the site regardless of the qualities of the land. Such an analysis would be entirely removed from an analysis of the agricultural qualities of the land, which is contrary to the plain text of the rule, and therefore a county's failure to adopt findings addressing that issue does not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 368 (2018).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. OAR 660-033-0030(5) permits use of "[m]ore detailed data on soil capability than is contained in the National Resource Conservation Service" soil maps and surveys to determine whether particular soils qualify as agricultural soils. A more detailed soils study of a 21.59-acre parcel that uses 43 soil data points, five transects and 276 site observations is substantial evidence that the parcel contains predominantly Class VII and VIII soils rather than predominantly Class VI soils as shown by the National Resource Conservation Service soil survey. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 156 (2016).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. Under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), even if land does not qualify as agricultural land under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(A), because it does not meet the predominantly Class I-VI test, land may qualify as agricultural land "taking into consideration" the factors set out at OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), which include "accepted farming practices." Additionally, under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(b), lands in other classification must be inventoried as agricultural land if they are "adjacent to or intermingled with land in capability classes * * * I-VI within a farm unit * * *." Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 156 (2016).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. A county does not err in relying on a 2007 soil study to conclude that a parcel is not agricultural land under Goal 3, notwithstanding the absence in the record of a 2001 soil study that the applicant's consultant cites, where the 2007 study is intended to stand on its own and petitioners do not identify any critical information missing from the 2007 study that might be found in the 2001 study. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 101 (2008).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. In determining whether a parcel remains "adjacent to or intermingled with" agricultural land within a "farm unit" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(b) notwithstanding that the parcel was recently partitioned from a larger farm parcel and is no longer in common use, the most important consideration is whether there is some significant obstacle to resumed joint operation. Where a 260-acre parcel was recently divided from a 590-acre ranch and was long used in conjunction with other lands within the farm unit, and there appears no reason why the parcel cannot continue to be used in conjunction with the other parcels within the former farm unit, a county has not established that the parcel is not agricultural land under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(b). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 101 (2008).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. Flury v. Land Use Board, 50 Or App 263, 623 P2d 671 (1981), cited and relied on Meyer v. Lord, 37 Or App 59, 586 P2d 367 (1978), in holding that the "predominant soils class" prong of the Goal 3 definition of agricultural lands may be applied to a portion of a parcel. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 71 (2005).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. OAR 660-033-0030(2), which describes how the predominant soils class prong of the Goal 3 agricultural land definition is to be applied when inventorying agricultural land, assumes that the inventories will consider whole lots and parcels rather than portions of lots or parcels. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 71 (2005).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes.

At the time LCDC adopted OAR 660-033-0030(2), which describes how the predominant soils class prong of the Goal 3 agricultural land definition is to be applied when inventorying agricultural land, it also adopted OAR 660-033-0030(4)(c)(B)(i) to expressly state that the "generally unsuitable lands" nonfarm dwelling standard may be applied to a "lot or parcel or portion of a lot or parcel." Because LCDC did not also make it clear that the inventory required by OAR 660-033-0030(2) could apply the predominant soils class prong of the Goal 3 agricultural land definition to portions of existing parcels, that prong must be applied to entire parcels and may not be applied to a portion of a parcel. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 71 (2005).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. A local government may rely on portions of two conflicting expert studies of soil classifications, although explanatory findings may be necessary to identify what portions are relied upon, and to resolve any differences or contradictions between the studies relied upon, so that LUBA may perform its review function. Doob v. Josephine County, 48 Or LUBA 227 (2004).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. Land that qualifies as "agricultural land" based on soil classification cannot be classified as something other than agricultural land based on existing land use patterns or other factors listed in the definition of "agricultural land" that serve to include lands within the definition of agricultural land that do not otherwise qualify based on the soils classifications. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 47 Or LUBA 508 (2004).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. Common ownership with adjacent agricultural lands is an indication that the parcel is part of a farm unit, as that term is used in OAR 660-033-0020(1); however, it is not determinative. Riggs v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 432 (1999).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. LUBA will not conclude that the statutory definition of high-value soils excludes soil complexes in which listed soils form the predominant part, where petitioner fails to establish a sufficient basis to form that conclusion. Tri-River Investment Co. v. Clatsop County, 37 Or LUBA 195 (1999).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. LUBA must affirm a decision denying a permit to site a dog kennel prohibited on high-value farmland, where petitioner fails to challenge the county's alternative finding that the subject property is high-value farmland because it is predominantly composed of a combination of two high-value soils. Tri-River Investment Co. v. Clatsop County, 37 Or LUBA 195 (1999).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. Under the agricultural lands definition, in western Oregon, Class V soils, when intermingled with Class IV soils, are not presumed to be nonagricultural, nor is the presence of Class V soils determinative, in itself, as to whether land is generally unsuitable for farm use. Evenson v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 251 (1999).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. Where a county finds that the subject property's soils constitute "high-value farmland" as that concept is defined by statute, but there is no evidence in the record that supports that ultimate conclusion, the decision must be remanded. Corp. of Presiding Bishop v. Klamath County, 34 Or LUBA 131 (1998).

7.2.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Soil Classes. In determining whether land subject to a proposed comprehensive plan and zone map change is composed of predominantly Class I-IV soils, as required by OAR 660-33-020(1)(a)(A), it is permissible for a local government to examine only the acreage under consideration. DLCD v. Curry County, 28 Or LUBA 205 (1994).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. For purposes of determining whether land in soil capability classes other than Class I-IV soils according to the U.S. Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), is "agricultural land" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), a factor that a local government may consider in addition to the seven factors listed in the rule is whether a reasonable farmer would be motivated to put the land to agricultural use, for the primary purpose of obtaining a profit in money. The suitability for farm use inquiry must also consider the potential for use in conjunction with adjacent or nearby land. OAR 660-033-0030(3). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 368 (2018).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. For purposes of determining whether land is agricultural land under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), a county's findings are not deficient when they do not address whether marijuana production is a viable farm use or crop on the subject property. The analysis under OAR 660-033-0020, which gives effect to Statewide Planning Goal 3, focuses on the land and its suitability for farm use, not on whether a particular crop can be grown on the site regardless of the qualities of the land. Such an analysis would be entirely removed from an analysis of the agricultural qualities of the land, which is contrary to the plain text of the rule, and therefore a county's failure to adopt findings addressing that issue does not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 368 (2018).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), even if land does not qualify as agricultural land under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(A), because it does not meet the predominantly Class I-VI test, land may qualify as agricultural land "taking into consideration" the factors set out at OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), which include "accepted farming practices." Additionally, under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(b), lands in other classification must be inventoried as agricultural land if they are "adjacent to or intermingled with land in capability classes * * * I-VI within a farm unit * * *." Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 156 (2016).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. A 21.59-acre parcel need not be designated as agricultural under the OAR 660-033-0020(1)(b) "adjacent to or intermingled with [agricultural land] within a farm unit" requirement, where the property is comparatively small for eastern Oregon, and there is a major highway bisecting the parcel that makes it much more difficult to put to farm use, the property never contributed significantly to any of the larger farming operations it was a part of in the past and the property is not adjacent to or intermingled with any property that currently constitutes a farm unit. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 156 (2016).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. A finding that an 8.5-acre parcel with Class VI agricultural soils is not "suitable for grazing," and not "other lands" suitable for farm use, and hence not "agricultural land" as defined in OAR 660-033-0020, is supported by substantial evidence, where the undisputed evidence is that the parcel can accommodate only two animal units per month, equivalent to a lease value of $30 per month, yielding less revenue than the annual property taxes. O'Brien v. Lincoln County, 65 Or LUBA 286 (2012).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Where the record indicates that seasonal rather than year-round cattle grazing is a common pattern in an area, and the subject property is currently or was recently leased for seasonal grazing, evidence sufficient to establish that the property is not "suitable for grazing" and thus not agricultural land under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B) must include an evaluation of whether the property is suitable for seasonal grazing. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 62 Or LUBA 80 (2010).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. OAR 660-033-0030(2) and (3) require consideration of adjoining and nearby lands, in determining whether property is suitable for grazing and hence qualifies as agricultural land OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B). Remand is necessary, where the record indicates that adjoining properties support seasonal grazing operations and have similar soils and conditions to the subject property, but the county does not adopt findings considering those adjoining properties or explain why the subject property cannot reasonably be used for seasonal grazing. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 62 Or LUBA 80 (2010).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Where an issue arises whether a petitioner waived his right to raise an issue at LUBA regarding whether a county erroneously found that land is not "other lands" that are suitable for farm use considering the factors set out at OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), a petitioner may not respond that the applicant raised that issue by addressing those factors below. The only issue raised by the applicant was whether the land does not qualify as such lands; the applicant did not raise the issue of whether the land does qualify as such other land. Just v. Linn County, 60 Or LUBA 74 (2009).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Where a local government's findings rely heavily on particular factors set out in OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B) to conclude that land does not qualify as "other lands" that are suitable for farm use under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), and petitioner waived his right to challenge the findings concerning those particular factors because petitioner raised no issue below concerning those particular factors, LUBA will deny an assignment of error that challenges the adequacy of the county's OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B) findings. Just v. Linn County, 60 Or LUBA 74 (2009).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. When considering the profitability of land for farm use, the fair market value of property zoned for agricultural use incorporates a host of nonfarm economic values in addition to the value of the property attributable to its suitability for farm use. Property owned in fee simple grants the owner a bundle of rights and investment potentials, only some of which are related to the economic use of the land in general, or for farm use in particular. The fair market value of any EFU-zoned parcel presumably reflects its potential for nonfarm uses as well. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 60 Or LUBA 131 (2009).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Even though a common practice of ranching may involve trucking cattle from one grazing area to another, the focus of OAR 660-033-0030(3) is on conjoined use of farmland with "nearby or adjacent" properties. In this context, "nearby" means property within a relatively short geographic distance, and property that is almost or nearly adjacent. The county is not required to consider conjoined use with a property that is miles away from the subject property, or separated by a significant number of other parcels. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 60 Or LUBA 131 (2009).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. In determining whether land is "other suitable land" under the Goal 3 definition of agricultural land and considering whether the land can be farmed with the primary purpose of obtaining a profit in money, the county errs in considering the applicant's annual debt-service payments on the $3,000,000 acquisition price that reflects the speculative value of the land for rural residential use rather than its actual value as farm land. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 101 (2008).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Determining whether land is agricultural land under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B) is based on the objective considerations set out in the rule. The particular motivations or financial circumstances of the landowner/applicant are irrelevant. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 101 (2008).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Testimony that the applicant has not shown why a parcel formerly part of a larger ranch cannot be used in conjunction with adjacent and nearby farm properties is sufficient to raise the issue of compliance with OAR 660-033-0030(3), notwithstanding that the petitioner failed to cite the rule. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 101 (2008).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. LUBA will remand a decision determining that a parcel is not Goal 3 agricultural land for findings under OAR 660-033-0030(3), which requires that the county examine nearby or adjacent land, regardless of ownership, in determining whether a parcel is agricultural land, where the county adopted no findings addressing the rule, and there is evidence in the record that the subject property was formerly used in conjunction with adjacent farm lands and can be so used again. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 101 (2008).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. In determining that the land is not "other suitable land" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), a county does not err in relying on uncertainty over whether irrigation necessary to establish a new vineyard is available, combined with high cost of establishing a new commercial vineyard and the higher risks of dry-land viniculture, to conclude that land is not suitable for growing wine grapes. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 101 (2008).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. In determining whether a parcel remains "adjacent to or intermingled with" agricultural land within a "farm unit" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(b) notwithstanding that the parcel was recently partitioned from a larger farm parcel and is no longer in common use, the most important consideration is whether there is some significant obstacle to resumed joint operation.

Where a 260-acre parcel was recently divided from a 590-acre ranch and was long used in conjunction with other lands within the farm unit, and there appears no reason why the parcel cannot continue to be used in conjunction with the other parcels within the former farm unit, a county has not established that the parcel is not agricultural land under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(b). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 101 (2008).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. The considerations listed in OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B)—soil fertility, suitability for grazing, climatic conditions, existing and future availability of water for farm irrigation purposes, existing land use patterns, technological and energy inputs required, and accepted farming practices—are the primary drivers of any determination under the rule whether land is "suitable for farm use" as defined in ORS 215.203(2)(a). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. While profitability is a permissible consideration in determining whether land is agricultural land under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), it is a relatively minor consideration, and one with a large potential for distracting the decision maker and the parties from the primary considerations listed in the rule—soil fertility, suitability for grazing, climatic conditions, existing and future availability of water for farm irrigation purposes, existing land use patterns, technological and energy inputs required, and accepted farming practices. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Substantial evidence supports a county's finding that a 160-acre parcel is not suitable for an independent grazing operation, where the property has never supported an independent grazing operation, and an agricultural consultant's study details significant capital inputs needed to establish a new, independent grazing operation that could not be recovered from income reasonably expected from such a grazing operation. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. In evaluating whether a 160-acre parcel that was grazed for 70 years in conjunction with nearby lands as part of a larger grazing operation is "other suitable land" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B) because it can be put to farm use in conjunction with nearby agricultural lands, the testimony of nearby ranchers that they have successfully ranched the subject property as part of their grazing operation in the past, are willing to do so again, and believe they can do so profitably is generally more than sufficient to establish that the property can be used in conjunction with nearby farm lands. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Where no issue was raised during the initial proceedings or initial appeal to LUBA regarding whether a property could be used as a "woodlot" and thus be put to "farm use" for purposes of ORS 215.203(2), that issue cannot be raised for the first time on appeal of the decision on remand, pursuant to Beck v. City of Tillamook, 313 Or 148, 153, 831 P2d 678 (1992). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. A county could reasonably choose to rely on a consultant's economic analysis to conclude that a 160-acre parcel is not "other suitable land" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B) because it cannot be profitably combined with nearby grazing operations, notwithstanding that nearby ranchers testified that they had successfully used the property in conjunction with their grazing operation in the past and believe they can do so again, where the economic analysis sets out a detailed, if hypothetical, budget demonstrating that such combined use could not be conducted with the primary purpose of obtaining a profit in money, and the nearby ranchers do not provide any similar budget or explanation for why they believe a combined operation would be financially beneficial to them. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. That land might qualify as "wasteland" for purposes of the ORS 215.203(2)(b)(E) definition of "current employment of land for farm use" does not mean that the land is therefore "suitable for farm use as defined by ORS 215.203(2)(a)," for purposes of determining whether the property is agricultural land subject to Goal 3. The ORS 215.203(2)(b)(E) definition of current employment of land for farm use serves different purposes than the definition of farm use at ORS 215.203(2)(a). Doherty v. Wheeler County, 56 Or LUBA 465 (2008).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. OAR 660-033-0020(1) comprehensively addresses the circumstances under which land qualifies as agricultural land subject to Goal 3. The fact that land might qualify as "wasteland" for purposes of the ORS 215.203(2)(b) definition of "current employment of land for farm use" does not establish as a matter of law that the land qualifies as "agricultural land" under OAR 660-033-0020(1). Doherty v. Wheeler County, 56 Or LUBA 465 (2008).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Undisputed evidence that (1) 41 percent of a property is inaccessible to livestock, (2) the portion that is accessible was severely overgrazed and has lost much of its topsoil, (3) the property can support only six cow-calf pairs for a three month grazing season, and (4) fencing the property for grazing would cost $5,000 but yield at most $400 per year in rent is substantial evidence that the property is not suitable for grazing, for purposes of OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a). Doherty v. Wheeler County, 56 Or LUBA 465 (2008).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. In determining whether land must be considered agricultural land under Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands) because the land is suitable for farm use, even though the land is not predominantly NRCS Class I-IV soils, where there is conflicting believable evidence regarding whether the property can be profitably farmed, LUBA will defer to the county's finding that the property is not suitable for farm use. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 604 (2007).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Goal 3's protection is not limited to property that is suitable for large, highly profitable, "commercial" farms that would be sufficiently profitable to provide the sole or primary source of income for a property owner. Land that is suitable for noncommercial but profitable farm use must be protected under Goal 3. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 604 (2007).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. LUBA will not assume a county applied an improper "commercial" agricultural standard in determining that property need not be protected under Goal 3 for farm use, where it is reasonably clear the county used the term "commercial" to distinguish land that is suitable for a profitable vineyard from land that is not suitable for a profitable vineyard, in the sense that a vineyard on the property would not produce grapes of a quality and quantity that could be sold for a price that would exceed the cost of production. Such a distinction is permissible under Wetherell v. Douglas County, 342 Or 666, 160 P3d 614 (2007). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 604 (2007).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Pursuant to Wetherell v. Douglas County, 342 Or 666, 160 P3d 614 (2007), a local government may consider "profitability" in determining whether land is "suitable for farm use" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 646 (2007).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. That a farm use is not commercial-scale in size, intensity or profitability is not a sufficient basis to conclude that land is not suitable for farm use under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 646 (2007).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Under OAR 660-033-0030(3), a local government must consider whether land may be used in conjunction with nearby or adjacent farm lands. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 646 (2007).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. A county's finding that land is not suitable for grazing is not supported by substantial evidence, where the land has a history of grazing, and is bordered by similarly sized parcels currently used for grazing that have the same soils and conditions. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 678 (2007).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. That land is suitable only for seasonal grazing as opposed to year-round grazing does not mean that the land is not "suitable for grazing" as that term is used in the OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B) definition of agricultural land. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 678 (2007).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Findings that do not address a petitioner's argument that property can be used for grazing like surrounding properties fail to demonstrate that the property is not suitable lands for farm use. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 52 Or LUBA 677 (2006).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. OAR 660-033-0030(5) prohibits consideration of "profitability or gross farm income" in determining whether land is agricultural land. That prohibition de-emphasizes if not eliminates the role that the "primary purpose of obtaining a profit in money" language in ORS 215.203(2)(a) definition of farm use might otherwise play in determining whether land is agricultural land. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 167 (2005).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. While counties have some latitude to define a threshold of profitability in determining whether land is subject to a committed exception to Goal 3, counties have no such latitude in determining whether land is agricultural land under OAR 660-033-0030(5), which prohibits counties from considering "profitability or gross farm income" in determining whether land is agricultural land. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 167 (2005).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Goal 3 protects small-scale agricultural uses as well as large-scale uses. While land capable of grazing only a few animals might not constitute land "suitable for grazing" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), the fact that a 160-acre parcel can provide forage to support only 211 animal unit months on a seasonal basis, consistent with its historic use and other grazing operations in the area, is not a sufficient basis to conclude that the parcel is not "agricultural land" under the Goal 3 definition. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 167 (2005).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Where land was once maintained at a level of forage productivity that has suffered in recent years due to neglect, it is inappropriate to take such neglect into account in determining whether the land is "agricultural land" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B). Instead, the county must examine the parcel's capability for grazing assuming appropriate management measures, such as maintaining fences and controlling brush and weeds. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 167 (2005).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. OAR 660-033-0030(3) requires counties to consider whether the subject parcel can be used in conjunction with nearby or adjacent land in other ownerships in determining whether the parcel is "suitable for farm use" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B). Where the subject property has a 70-year history of conjoined use with an adjacent parcel, the fact that the owner of the other parcel is not currently interested in conjoined use is not a sufficient basis to conclude that the subject property is not suitable for farm use. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 167 (2005).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Where a parcel has soils, aspect and other features suitable for a commercial vineyard, the county must consider whether the parcel can support such a vineyard. The fact that any vineyard the property could support would be relatively small in scale and that the soils on the predominant portion of the parcel cannot support a commercial vineyard is not dispositive. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 167 (2005).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. When determining whether land qualifies as agricultural land that must be protected under Goal 3, profitability and gross farm income are not to be considered in applying the considerations specified in OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 275 (2005).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. The structure of OAR 660-033-0020(1), which first applies an objective soil classification threshold to define agricultural land and then applies several other standards to require that land with poorer classification soils nevertheless be inventoried as agricultural land, demonstrates an intent to cast a relatively large net when inventorying agricultural land. At least some properties with soils that are not well suited for farm use are nevertheless to be inventoried as agricultural land. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 275 (2005).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. If new farm uses are beginning to make use of poorer quality lands that historically were not put to farm use in a county, such poorer quality lands may now qualify as agricultural land under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), despite their soil classifications. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 275 (2005).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. That cattle grazing occurs at some level on large tracts of BLM land with the same Class VII soils and vegetative characteristics as the subject property is some evidence that the much smaller subject property could also support some level of grazing. However, that indirect evidence does not compel a conclusion that the property is suitable for grazing, given countervailing evidence that the property is not suitable for farm use under the factors considered in OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B). Wood v. Crook County, 49 Or LUBA 682 (2005).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Whether property with predominantly nonfarm soils should nevertheless be viewed as "other lands suitable for farm use" under a county code standard that replicates the Goal 3 definition of agricultural land, is governed by specific considerations. That a property may have been briefly used as an elk and deer holding facility is not one of the specified considerations. Rutigliano v. Jackson County, 47 Or LUBA 470 (2004).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. The suitability standard requires that the local government consider whether the subject parcel or a portion thereof can reasonably be put to farm use in conjunction with adjacent or nearby lands. The county must not only consider the property's suitability for producing crops but also its suitability for producing livestock, in conjunction with adjoining and nearby properties. Riggs v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 432 (1999).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. County findings which conclude that the subject parcel is not suitable for farming, but do not evaluate each of the factors identified in the applicable comprehensive plan policy implementing Goal 3, are inadequate to establish compliance with the plan. Doob v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 275 (1996).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Where the subject parcel contains soils which are rated Class III when irrigated, the county must consider in its soil evaluation the feasibility of providing irrigation to the parcel. Without such an evaluation, the findings are inadequate to reach a conclusion regarding the suitability of the soil for farm use under the county's comprehensive plan. Doob v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 275 (1996).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. Given the express language in Goal 3 that future availability of water for irrigation must be considered in evaluating suitability of soils for agricultural uses, the county's interpretation that it need not consider potential availability of irrigation in determining soil suitability is incorrect, and LUBA will not defer to that interpretation. Doob v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 275 (1996).

7.2.3 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Suitable Land. In determining whether land subject to a proposed comprehensive plan and zone map change is (1) suitable for farm use, (2) necessary to permit farm use on other agricultural land, or (3) intermingled with lands of Class I-IV soils; as required by OAR 660-33-020(1)(a)(B) to (C) and (b); a local government's analysis must include all property in common ownership with the subject land. DLCD v. Curry County, 28 Or LUBA 205 (1994).

7.2.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Necessary Land. A PAPA that creates a new plan designation and zone and makes a parcel eligible for the new zone if it is at least 20 acres in size and if 60 percent of it is eligible for the new plan designation does not comply with the Goal 3 requirement to protect agricultural lands, even where the PAPA excludes lands zoned EFU from eligibility for the new plan designation, where it does not also exclude lands in other zones which may be necessary to permit farm practices to be undertaken on adjacent or nearby agricultural lands. DLCD v. Douglas County, 80 Or LUBA 98 (2019).

7.2.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Necessary Land. The possibility that certain potential uses might cause some conflicts with existing farm and forest practices does not demonstrate that land is necessary for continued farm and forest operations. The fact that existing farm or forest operators propose conditions of approval for the subject property suggests that the property is not necessary to continue those farm or forest operations. Walker v. Josephine County, 60 Or LUBA 186 (2009).

7.2.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Necessary Land. An adjoining farmer's testimony that a parcel need not remain in farm zoning to allow their farm operations to continue, combined with the absence of any history of combined farm use, is substantial evidence supporting a county's finding that the parcel is not "agricultural land" under the OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(C) definition. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 678 (2007).

7.2.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Necessary Land. When the decision does not describe adjacent or nearby agricultural use, it fails to demonstrate that the property is not necessary to permit adjacent and nearby farm practices to continue. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 52 Or LUBA 677 (2006).

7.2.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Necessary Land. Under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(C), which includes within the definition of "agricultural lands" land that is "necessary" to permit farm practices on adjacent or nearby agricultural lands, the county must consider whether there is some connection between the subject property and adjacent or nearby farm practices such that the subject property must remain as "agricultural land" in order to permit such practices on adjacent or nearby lands to be undertaken. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 167 (2005).

7.2.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Necessary Land. In determining whether a parcel is agricultural land under Goal 3, a local government must: (1) evaluate the soils and suitability of the entire subject property under applicant's ownership, and (2) determine whether the entire subject property is necessary to permit farm practices on nearby lands under OAR 660-33-020(1)(a)(C). DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 728 (1997).

7.2.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Agricultural Land Definition – Other Necessary Land. In determining whether land subject to a proposed comprehensive plan and zone map change is (1) suitable for farm use, (2) necessary to permit farm use on other agricultural land, or (3) intermingled with lands of Class I-IV soils; as required by OAR 660-33-020(1)(a)(B)-(C) and (b); a local government's analysis must include all property in common ownership with the subject land. DLCD v. Curry County, 28 Or LUBA 205 (1994).

7.3.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Commercial Agricultural Enterprise. Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands), LCDC administrative rules concerning Goal 3 and the statutory EFU zone contain a level of detail that frequently requires that counties replicate the statutory and rule language in their EFU zones. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

7.3.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Commercial Agricultural Enterprise. ORS 215.780(1)(a) expressly authorizes counties to adopt an 80-acre minimum parcel size in the EFU zone, and ORS 215.263(2)(b) expressly authorizes counties to approve partitions of EFU-zoned land if the resulting parcels "are not smaller than the minimum size established under ORS 215.780." Additional justification for adopting the statutorily authorized 80-acre minimum parcel size is not required by Goal 3, ORS 215.243 and 215.700. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

7.3.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Commercial Agricultural Enterprise. It is not error for a county to amend its code to recognize that under ORS 215.780(2)(a), a minimum parcel size of less than 80 acres may be authorized by LCDC in the future pursuant to OAR 660-033-0100(2) through (9), if the county is able to justify such smaller minimum parcel sizes in the future. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

7.3.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Commercial Agricultural Enterprise. ORS 215.263 expressly authorizes a number of different kinds of land divisions of EFU-zoned land for development of non-farm uses on parcels that are smaller than the minimum parcel size for land divisions for new farm parcels. A county may include such authorization in its EFU zone and Goal 3, ORS 215.243 and 215.700 do not require that a county adopt findings to justify its decision to include such statutory authorizations. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

7.3.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Commercial Agricultural Enterprise. A county is not obligated to explain its choice to adopt current statutory standards for land divisions in its EFU zone in place of the previously adopted county standards for such land divisions. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

7.3.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Commercial Agricultural Enterprise. Farms are part of the "existing commercial agricultural enterprise" as that phrase is used in Goal 3 if they contribute to the overall agricultural economy in the area in a substantial way. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 54 Or LUBA 191 (2007).

7.3.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Commercial Agricultural Enterprise. In determining the "existing commercial agricultural enterprise," a county must take a broad-based view of the entire agricultural enterprise in a given area, not a limited inventory of one specific crop or farm use. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 54 Or LUBA 191 (2007).

7.3.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Commercial Agricultural Enterprise. A county errs when it defines "the area" to be inventoried under Goal 3 as the entire county but fails to inventory the existing commercial agricultural enterprise in the county, and determine the minimum parcel size necessary to continue that enterprise. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 54 Or LUBA 191 (2007).

7.3.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Commercial Agricultural Enterprise. Under OAR 660-05-005 to 660-06-020 and Still v. Marion County, 22 Or LUBA 331 (1991), there are three steps that must be followed to determine if a proposed partition of EFU land is appropriate. First, an area large enough to accurately represent the existing commercial agricultural enterprise must be identified. Second, the existing commercial agricultural enterprises in the area must be identified. Third, it must be determined that the proposed division will result in parcels of sufficient size to "maintain" or "continue" the identified existing commercial agricultural enterprise in the area. Still v. Marion County, 32 Or LUBA 40 (1996).

7.3.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Commercial Agricultural Enterprise. The county erred by applying a local ordinance to determine, without further explanation, that the relevant area to be considered for purposes of OAR 660-05-015(6)(c) was limited to the zone in which the subject parcel is located. Still v. Marion County, 32 Or LUBA 40 (1996).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands), LCDC administrative rules concerning Goal 3 and the statutory EFU zone contain a level of detail that frequently requires that counties replicate the statutory and rule language in their EFU zones. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. ORS 215.780(1)(a) expressly authorizes counties to adopt an 80-acre minimum parcel size in the EFU zone, and ORS 215.263(2)(b) expressly authorizes counties to approve partitions of EFU-zoned land if the resulting parcels "are not smaller than the minimum size established under ORS 215.780." Additional justification for adopting the statutorily authorized 80-acre minimum parcel size is not required by Goal 3, ORS 215.243 and 215.700. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. It is not error for a county to amend its code to recognize that under ORS 215.780(2)(a), a minimum parcel size of less than 80 acres may be authorized by LCDC in the future pursuant to OAR 660-033-0100(2) through (9), if the county is able to justify such smaller minimum parcel sizes in the future. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. ORS 215.263 expressly authorizes a number of different kinds of land divisions of EFU-zoned land for development of non-farm uses on parcels that are smaller than the minimum parcel size for land divisions for new farm parcels. A county may include such authorization in its EFU zone and Goal 3, ORS 215.243 and 215.700 do not require that a county adopt findings to justify its decision to include such statutory authorizations. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. A county is not obligated to explain its choice to adopt current statutory standards for land divisions in its EFU zone in place of the previously adopted county standards for such land divisions. Friends of Umatilla County v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 12 (2008).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. ORS 215.780(2), the "go below" statute, provides the authority for counties to adopt a minimum lot size for EFU parcels that is lower than the 80-acre minimum lot size prescribed by ORS 215.780(1). Where a local code provision is not adopted pursuant to the procedures set forth in ORS 215.780(2)(a) and (5), it is not a "go below" provision. Jouvenat v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 378 (2009).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. Notwithstanding a local zoning ordinance provision that would allow a property line adjustment between an existing 115-acre parcel and an existing 40-acre parcel to reduce the 40-acre parcel to a 27-acre parcel and increase the 115-acre parcel to a 128-acre parcel, where those parcels are located in an exclusive farm use zone that is subject to an 80-acre minimum parcel size under ORS 215.780(1)(a), the reduction in size of the already substandard 40-acre parcel violates ORS 215.780(1)(a). Phillips v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 194 (2007).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. The minimum lot or parcel size requirements of ORS 215.780(1) for resource lands do not apply to decisions that rezone a portion of a resource parcel to nonresource use but do not partition or subdivide the parcel. DLCD v. Coos County, 39 Or LUBA 432 (2001).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. Consistent with the statutory scheme and policy of ORS 215.243, ORS 215.284(3) requires that a partition must leave a remainder parcel that meets the minimum parcel size, whether or not the remainder parcel is suitable for farm use. Dorvinen v. Crook County, 33 Or LUBA 711 (1997).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. Unless approval is given by LCDC under ORS 215.780(2) for a smaller minimum lot size or sizes, ORS 215.780(1) requires a county to apply minimum lot sizes of 80 acres (designated forestland and non-range farmland) or 160 acres (designated rangeland) in its farm and forest zones. DLCD v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 459 (1994).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. Where a county's EFU zone minimum lot size standard was subject to periodic review by LCDC under the old periodic review provisions of ORS 197.640 to 197.649 (1989), not under the new periodic review provisions of ORS 197.628 to 197.636, the county may not apply a minimum lot size less than that required by ORS 215.780(1) to EFU-zoned land without LCDC approval pursuant to ORS 215.780(2). DLCD v. Wallowa County, 28 Or LUBA 452 (1994).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. ORS 215.780, Goal 3 and OAR 660-33-100 require a county to adopt one or more minimum parcel sizes of specific acreages for exclusive farm use zone(s), and do not allow determinations of minimum parcel sizes in EFU zones through the case-by-case application of performance standards. DLCD v. Wallowa County, 28 Or LUBA 452 (1994).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. The 1993 legislature adopted specific minimum lot and parcel sizes. For forestland and farmland that is not designated rangeland, the minimum lot or parcel size is 80 acres. ORS 215.780(1)(a) and (c). For land zoned for exclusive farm use and designated as rangeland, the minimum lot or parcel size is 160 acres. ORS 215.780(1)(b). DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

7.3.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Minimum Lot Size Standard – Operation and Effect of. The ORS 215.780(2) provisions that allow counties to adopt a minimum lot size smaller than would otherwise be required for farmland and forestland by ORS 215.780(1), require that a county obtain LCDC approval for such smaller lot sizes before adopting such smaller lot sizes. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

7.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Land Divisions. Remand is necessary where petitioners argue that a boundary line adjustment application is governed by a county ordinance addressing the "Sale or Transfer of Land to an Adjacent Owner * * *," under the section on nonconforming uses that apply to "Designated Resource Areas," where the subject parcels are designated for agricultural and forest uses and are zoned exclusive farm use – grazing (FG) and where respondents filed no response brief. Because there is no local interpretation of the applicability of the ordinance, LUBA will remand the decision for the county to interpret the ordinance in the first instance. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 11 (2018).

7.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Land Divisions. Where the county found a boundary line adjustment application is in compliance with a county ordinance that requires that the "resulting parcel sizes do not change the existing land use" because before and after the boundary line adjustment there was one parcel conforming and one parcel non-conforming in size, LUBA will remand the decision. On remand, the county shall consider petitioners' argument and adopt any necessary findings regarding petitioners' argument that the ordinance could be interpreted to require the county to consider whether the "existing land use pattern" is changed when the subject parcel—that was previously deemed "generally unsuitable" for farm use due to its size and soil composition—qualifies for a nonfarm dwelling as a result of the boundary line adjustment because the parcel was expanded to include agricultural soils in a manner that possibly renders the resulting parcel suitable for farm use. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 11 (2018).

7.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Land Divisions. Although the county's approval of the boundary line adjustment for the siting of a nonfarm dwelling could effectively undercut the factual predicate for compliance with a statutory-based standard pursuant to ORS 215.263(4) designed to minimize loss of productive resource lands in exclusive farm use zones to non-resource uses, where petitioner has not cited anything in the county ordinance that constitutes an approval standard for a post-partition boundary line adjustment, even if the adjustment undercuts a factual predicate for the partition approval, this argument provides no basis for reversal or remand. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 11 (2018).

7.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Land Divisions. Approving a boundary line adjustment to a parcel under applicable standards does not "collaterally attack" a previous land partition decision that originally created the subject parcel under different standards, even assuming the adjusted parcel after the boundary line adjustment would not comply with the partition standards that were applied earlier when the parcel was created. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 11 (2018).

7.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Land Divisions. A division of land that creates an EFU-zoned parcel that is smaller than the 80-acre minimum set forth in ORS 215.780(1) violates that statute, and the land division is prohibited as a matter of law. Jouvenat v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 378 (2009).

7.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Land Divisions. A county errs when it defines "the area" to be inventoried under Goal 3 as the entire county but fails to inventory the existing commercial agricultural enterprise in the county, and determine the minimum parcel size necessary to continue that enterprise. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 54 Or LUBA 191 (2007).

7.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Land Divisions. Notwithstanding a local zoning ordinance provision that would allow a property line adjustment between an existing 115-acre parcel and an existing 40-acre parcel to reduce the 40-acre parcel to a 27-acre parcel and increase the 115-acre parcel to a 128-acre parcel, where those parcels are located in an exclusive farm use zone that is subject to an 80-acre minimum parcel size under ORS 215.780(1)(a), the reduction in size of the already substandard 40-acre parcel violates ORS 215.780(1)(a). Phillips v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 194 (2007).

7.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Land Divisions. A code standard prohibiting a property line adjustment on agricultural land where the adjustment is used to qualify a lot or parcel for the siting of a dwelling does not preclude an adjustment that would effectively separate a split-zoned parcel to allow residential development on the non-agriculturally zoned portion of the parcel, where the adjustment will not qualify the agricultural portion of the parcel for a dwelling. Bollam v. Clackamas County, 52 Or LUBA 738 (2006).

7.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Land Divisions. A new nonfarm parcel is not subject to minimum parcel size under ORS 215.780 where the new nonfarm parcel is created from a parent parcel under ORS 215.263(4) and 215.283(3). Dorvinen v. Crook County, 33 Or LUBA 711 (1997).

7.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Land Divisions. Taken together, ORS 215.263(2) and legislative history indicate that the legislature intended ORS 215.284(3) to at least mean that where a remaining parcel suitable for farm use is created from a partition under ORS 215.284(3), the remaining farm parcel must meet the minimum parcel size. Dorvinen v. Crook County, 33 Or LUBA 711 (1997).

7.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Land Divisions. Consistent with the statutory scheme and policy of ORS 215.243, ORS 215.284(3) requires that a partition must leave a remainder parcel that meets the minimum parcel size, whether or not the remainder parcel is suitable for farm use. Dorvinen v. Crook County, 33 Or LUBA 711 (1997).

7.4 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Land Divisions. To the extent a "woodlot parcel" is something other than a farm parcel, the creation of a "woodlot parcel" in an exclusive farm use zone is not authorized by ORS 215.263, Goal 3 or the Goal 3 rule. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Marion County, 27 Or LUBA 303 (1994).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. In the context of a reasons exception to allow a data center use on agricultural land, while a local government cannot judge whether a property has a service-based locational advantage without a complete understanding of the extent of services in the alternative locations, the absence of an inventory of existing infrastructure in the record does not undermine the decision-maker's conclusion that the exception area provides a "significant comparative advantage," for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c), where alternative sites were not rejected based upon the unavailability of services. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Morrow County, 81 Or LUBA 508 (2020).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Speculation that a reasons exception to allow an industrial use on agricultural land will hasten future zone change applications does not establish that the exception will not "cause only minimal loss of reproductive resource lands" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c); however, the fact that that an equal amount of land elsewhere in the jurisdiction will be rezoned from industrial to agricultural does not demonstrate that that criterion is met where the findings do not discuss the quality or productivity of the resource lands in the proposed exception area or otherwise attempt to describe, in qualitative terms, what removing the agricultural zoning of the proposed exception area means for resource land productivity. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Morrow County, 81 Or LUBA 508 (2020).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. In the context of a reasons exception to allow a data center use on agricultural land, that a site is under contract or currently used for the disposal of wastewater; that a site is in federal ownership and that its ownership transfer timeline is unknown; that much of a site is covered in wetlands and that removal and fill of the wetlands will increase risk and will increase costs in an amount in the tens of thousands of dollars; that a site is too close to other existing or planned data centers to avoid general, undefined issues of facility proximity and interdependence; and that a site is inconsistent with the applicant's objective of ultimately extending services to a particular property do not necessarily establish that those sites "cannot reasonable accommodate the use" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Morrow County, 81 Or LUBA 508 (2020).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A petitioner may not also operate an exotic animal rescue facility, which is undisputedly not a "farm use," on EFU land where the petitioner uses his or her EFU-zoned property for certain "farm uses," under ORS 215.203. The existing "farm use[s]" do not "legitimize" the concurrent unpermitted uses, nor do they shield the unpermitted uses from county code enforcement action. A Walk on the Wild Side v. Washington County, 78 Or LUBA 356 (2018).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Where the challenged decision is limited to a single site in a remote rural area, is based on a single unique resource, and limits its authorization to five categories of rural industrial uses that are significantly dependent on that resource, nothing in OAR 660-004-0020 or -0022 precludes a county from justifying an amount of land for a range of deepwater port-dependent rural industrial uses based on the best available evidence regarding the types and land needs of likely industrial uses, without knowing exactly which industrial uses will locate in the exception area or exactly how much acreage each use will require. Although the typical reasons exception involves only a single proposed use, the size of which is generally known, and in such cases it is relatively easy to determine "the amount of land for the use being planned" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0020(2)(a), a county may take a reasons exception to allow more than one use, or even a range of uses, the exact nature and size of which may not be known. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Goal 3 does not generally allow industrial uses on agricultural land. Goal 2 defines an "exception" in part as a comprehensive plan amendment to allow a use that "[d]oes not comply with some or all goal requirements applicable to the subject property or situations[.]" Goal 2 does not allow establishment of a zoning policy of general applicability. Where a local government authorizes five broad categories of industrial and commercial uses distinguished by a general type of good or commodity (dry bulk, liquid bulk, breakbulk, etc.), and each use is limited by the requirement that the use be significantly dependent on a deepwater port, that does not mean that as a consequence the county has approved an exception that establishes a "zoning policy of general applicability," contrary to the Goal 2, ORS 197.732(1)(b)(A) and OAR 660-004-0005(1)(a) definition of "exception." Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The county did not err in concluding that the "unique resource" at issue, a deepwater river port whose upland portions are located within the existing exception area, is still "located on agricultural or forest land" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(a). Although "Agricultural Land" for purposes of Goal 3 and its implementing administrative rule does not include land areas subject to exceptions to Goal 3, it does not necessarily follow that agricultural land, as that term is used in OAR 660-004-0022 or other parts of the Goal 2 exception rule is subject to the same restriction. At least for the limited purpose of evaluating the need for and compliance with exception standards to allow new or changed uses contrary to the resource goals, land within an exception area potentially remains "agricultural land" subject to Goal 3, and where the original exception did not take an exception to Goal 4 the site potentially remains "forest land." Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. ORS 197.732(2)(c)(D) and OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d) require a finding that the proposed uses authorized by the proposed exception are "compatible with other adjacent uses or will be so rendered through measures designed to reduce adverse impacts." To establish compliance with OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d), the county's finding that the likely adverse impacts of the proposed uses allowed under the proposed exception are similar to the impacts of the existing uses must be supported by substantial evidence. The absence of evidence that the impacts would be different is not a basis to conclude that the impacts would be similar. Where this unsupported presumption that the impacts would be similar is the foundation of the much of the county's subsequent analysis, the presumption is not supported by substantial evidence, and remand is necessary for the county to adopt more adequate findings regarding compatibility, supported by substantial evidence. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. ORS 197.732(2)(c)(D) and OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d) require a finding that the proposed uses authorized by the proposed exception are "compatible with other adjacent uses or will be so rendered through measures designed to reduce adverse impacts." The potential adverse impacts of different types of liquid bulk terminals affiliated with a deepwater port, such as an oil terminal versus a fertilizer export operation, could be different enough to require a separate analysis. Adequate findings regarding compatibility would start by identifying the likely adverse impacts of typical uses authorized under approved use categories, evaluating each use category separately, and if necessary specific types of uses within each category. The findings should also address the characteristics of uses on adjoining areas, and assess vulnerability to potential externalities from industrial uses in the exception area. Informed by those analyses, the county can then reach sustainable conclusions regarding whether the proposed uses are compatible with adjoining uses, or can be rendered compatible via identified measures. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Only "transportation facilities and improvements" that meet the requirements of OAR 660-012-0065 are allowed on EFU-zoned "rural land" without an exception to Goals 3, 11 and 14. OAR 660-012-0070 provides that "transportation facilities" that do not meet the requirements of OAR 660-012-0065 cannot be constructed on "rural land" without an exception to the applicable goals. However, OAR 660-012-0070 does not require an exception to the applicable resource and urban goals where the city concurrently includes the land within its urban growth boundary, because the land is no longer "rural land" as defined in that rule. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 215 Or App 414, 171 P3d 368 (2007), which involved a reasons exception to Goals 3, 4 and 14 to develop a hotel on land zoned exclusive farm use (EFU), and its holding which interprets the rules for reasons exceptions, is inapposite where no reasons exception is involved. Similarly, OAR 661-012-0070 and its requirements for exceptions for transportation improvements on rural land do not apply where no exception to a resource goal is sought. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. ORS 215.448(1)(a) to (d) provide standards that apply to a proposed home occupation in "an exclusive farm use zone, forest zone or a mixed farm and forest zone that allows residential uses," and do not apply to an application for a proposed home occupation on property located in a rural residential zone. Willis v. Clackamas County, 76 Or LUBA 244 (2017).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The issue of whether a county erred in adopting a reasons exception to Statewide Planning Goal 3 under both the catch-all provision at OAR 660-004-0022(1) and the specific provisions for rural industrial use at OAR 660-004-0022(3) was adequately raised below for purposes of ORS 197.763(1), where a participant argued below that the county cannot adopt exceptions under both provisions but must choose one or the other. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The Goal 13 requirement for local governments to "maximize the conservation of all forms of energy" does not impose an affirmative obligation on local governments to promote the development of renewable energy, or provide a basis to conclude that there is a "demonstrated need" to meet a goal requirement, in order to satisfy the standards at OAR 660-004-0022(1)(a) for adopting a reasons exception in order to site a solar energy facility on agricultural land. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A county errs to the extent it justifies a reasons exception under OAR 660-044-0022(3)(a) to site an industrial use on agricultural land, based on proximity to and dependency on an electrical substation located within a nearby urban growth boundary, because OAR 660-004-0022(3)(a) applies only to industrial uses that are dependent on resources located on agricultural or forest land. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c) provides a sufficient reason for siting industrial development on resource lands where the use "would have a significant comparative advantage due to its location." The text and context of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c) indicate that the locational attractor that provides a significant comparative advantage justifying industrial development of resource land must also be located on resource land, and therefore an electrical substation located within an urban growth boundary cannot qualify as the locational attractor. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c), which states that a significant comparative advantage due to "location" is a sufficient basis to adopt a reasons exception to site industrial development on resource lands, is not properly interpreted to allow industrial use of resource land to be justified based solely on proximity to resources located within a nearby urban growth boundary (UGB), because under such an interpretation the rule could potentially undermine the integrity of UGBs, and it is unlikely that in drafting the rule the Land Conservation and Development Commission intended that result. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c), which states that a significant comparative advantage due to "location" is a sufficient basis to adopt a reasons exception to site industrial development on resource lands, is not properly interpreted to allow industrial use of resource land to be justified based solely on proximity to resources located within a nearby urban growth boundary (UGB), because under such an interpretation the rule could potentially undermine the integrity of UGBs, and it is unlikely that in drafting the rule the Land Conservation and Development Commission intended that result. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Where LUBA remands a comprehensive plan amendment to adopt limited, technical changes to the analysis of economic, social, environmental and energy (ESEE) consequences that was adopted to support an exception to Goal 3, the county does not err in limiting the scope of remand to exclude new issues raised on remand regarding new conflicts with agricultural uses that the petitioner argues should be considered in a revised ESEE analysis, where the alleged new conflicts have nothing to do with the limited, technical changes to the ESEE required by LUBA's remand. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. For reasons exceptions that are required in order to site "transportation facilities and improvements" on rural lands, the exceptions standards set out at OAR 660-012-0070 apply, rather than the standards set out in OAR 660-004-0020. Foland v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 264 (2010).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. OAR 660-034-0040(4), governing local park planning, clearly provides that "some" of the listed park uses permitted in a local park on EFU land require an exception to Goal 3, in the absence of a local master park plan. However, the rule is profoundly ambiguous regarding which of the listed park uses require an exception in the absence of a local master park plan. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The context provided by Goal 3, the Goal 3 rule on private park/campgrounds, Goal 3 Guideline B.1, and the state agricultural land use policies at ORS 215.243, suggest that the public park uses and facilities listed in OAR 660-034-0035(2)(a) through (g) that require a Goal 3 exception in the absence of a master park plan are those that involve higher-intensity development or infrastructure, where there exist less intensive alternatives that minimize permanent loss of agricultural land to non-agricultural use. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The provision of full septic, water and electric hookups to individual campsites in a public RV park/campground constitutes higher-intensity development or infrastructure that, in the absence of a master park plan, requires an exception to Goal 3. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Because the public park rule at OAR 660-034-0035(2) allows a campground "group shelter" in a local public park, but effectively prohibits a "meeting hall" in a local public park, a county cannot approve a fully enclosed, 1,200-square-foot "clubhouse" intended for all-season group activities unless it demonstrates that the clubhouse is properly viewed as a "group shelter" rather than a "meeting hall." Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Because a commercial use such as a convenience store is not allowed in the EFU zone or on Goal 3 land without a Goal 3 exception, a "camp store" similar in function to a convenience store is not permitted in a local public park on EFU land, in the absence of an exception to Goal 3 or the adoption of a local master park plan. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Where a county's EFU zone does not permit solid waste disposal sites, but the statutory EFU zone does allow solid waste disposal sites, under the holding in DLCD v. Yamhill County, 183 Or App 556, 53 P3d 462 (2002), a county may not approve an exception to Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands) to allow a solid waste disposal site on EFU-zoned property. Rather, the county must amend its EFU zone to allow solid waste disposal sites if it wishes to authorize that use on its EFU-zoned land. Waste Not of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 61 Or LUBA 423 (2010).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A comprehensive plan provision prohibiting application of a Rural Residential plan designation to land that is currently designated farm or forest "unless an exception to the applicable Goal 3 or 4 is justified" could be interpreted such that the prohibition does not apply to nonresource land that is not subject to either goal. However, the stronger textual reading is that the qualifier "applicable" simply reflects that the subject property is currently designated under either Goal 3 or Goal 4, whichever is applicable, and an exception to the applicable goal is required in order to redesignate the property to Rural Residential. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 60 Or LUBA 392 (2010).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Where a county's findings note that property contains a spring and a road and that adjacent lands contain dwellings, but do not otherwise explain why the spring and the road and the adjacent dwellings make resource use of the property impracticable, the county's findings are inadequate to demonstrate compliance with OAR 660-004-0028(2). Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 57 (2007).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A county errs in concluding that residential uses of properties in the vicinity of the property have committed the subject property to non-resource use, without explaining why those same residential uses will not result in committing other resource lands in the area to non-resource use. Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 57 (2007).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Compliance with OAR 660-004-0020(2)(a) is shown by demonstrating that a proposed reasons exception complies with OAR 660-004-0022(3), which specifies appropriate reasons for an exception to the statewide planning goals for "Rural Industrial Development." Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 67 (2007).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Where the proposed use of the property is for "Rural Industrial Development" on resource land outside an urban growth boundary, and that use is provided for in OAR 660-004-0022(3), a showing of compliance with OAR 660-004-0022(1) is not required. Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 67 (2007).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(c), a local government must determine that the long term environmental, economic, social, and energy consequences of a goal exception are not significantly more adverse than would result from the same proposed use being located on other lands that require a goal exception. Where the petitioner argues that the county did not adequately review other lands that also require a goal exception in determining whether to grant a reasons exception, but petitioner's argument focuses exclusively on lands that would not require a goal exception, petitioner provides no basis for reversal or remand. Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 67 (2007).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. To establish a "demonstrated need" for a proposed hotel on agricultural land based on the requirements of Goal 9 under OAR 660-004-0022(1)(a) does not necessarily require demonstrating that the county is in violation of its Goal 9 obligations or that the county is faced with a circumstance in which it must choose between violating its Goal 9 or Goal 3 obligations. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. To show a demonstrated need to locate a proposed hotel on resource land based on the general Goal 9 requirement to "provide adequate opportunities * * * for a variety of economic activities," the county must establish that the county has failed or is at risk of failing to provide adequate opportunities for a variety of economic activities, and that taking an exception to Goal 3 to provide for a hotel is a necessary step toward satisfying that goal requirement. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A locally unsatisfied market demand for a particular sub-type of lodging accommodation targeted at a small demographic of users is insufficient to establish that there is a demonstrated need for a proposed hotel to satisfy the Goal 9 requirement that the county provide "adequate opportunities for a variety of economic activities." VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Under OAR 660-004-0028(2)(c), findings must address "the relationship between the exception area and the lands adjacent to it." Findings that discuss lands located within a 2000-foot radius from the proposed exception area but do not discuss the lands adjacent to the exception area are inadequate. Gordon v. Polk County, 54 Or LUBA 351 (2007).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The mere presence of adjoining residential uses is not a sufficient basis for concluding that resource lands are irreversibly committed to non-resource uses. Gordon v. Polk County, 54 Or LUBA 351 (2007).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. That a paved county road may not be suitable to transport heavy equipment necessary for grass seed farming does not mean that the road is inadequate to provide access for other agricultural uses, and is not a sufficient basis to conclude that the property is irrevocably committed to non-agricultural uses. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. That some residential neighbors may find pasturing of animals objectionable is not a sufficient basis to conclude that property otherwise suitable for pasturing animals is irrevocably committed to non-farm uses. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Where a local government concludes that adjoining rural residential development commits resource land to uses not allowed by Goals 3 or 4, OAR 660-004-0018(2) requires the local government to explain why rural residential development of the subject property will not also result in committing other resource lands in the area. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. In justifying a reasons exception under OAR 660-004-0020(2) to allow nonresource uses on resource lands, a local government may choose the preferred alternative as long as the environmental, social, economic and energy consequences are not "significantly more adverse" than would typically result from using other resource lands for the proposed use. A local government is not required to choose the alternative that is "least disruptive to resource land." 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 52 Or LUBA 418 (2006).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The environmental, economic, social and energy (ESEE) analysis does not elevate economic consequences above the other three types of consequences that must be analyzed. A local government could reach a sustainable conclusion that the long-term ESEE consequences of the preferred alternative "are not significantly more adverse than would typically result from the same proposal being located in other areas requiring a Goal exception," notwithstanding that analysis of economic consequences indicates that another alternative is superior in that respect. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 52 Or LUBA 418 (2006).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings that all resource land displaced by a proposed bypass consist of high-value farmlands and are similar in agricultural productivity are sufficient to satisfy the OAR 660-004-0020(2) requirement to determine which resource land is least productive, absent some argument from the petitioner for why an explicit productivity ranking is required. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 52 Or LUBA 418 (2006).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A risk of liability for negligent application of fertilizers on property that might result in contamination of drinking water serving adjacent lands does not provide a sufficient basis to conclude that farm use is impracticable on the subject property. Anderson v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 454 (2006).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings supporting a conclusion that a property is irrevocably committed to nonresource use that rely on the property's similarity to other properties already zoned for nonresource use and the presence of residences on adjacent lands are not sufficient to explain why the relationship between the property and adjacent lands make the property impracticable for resource uses. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 730 (2006).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Applicants for an exception to Goal 3 to rezone land to allow division into two parcels for eventual development of an additional nonfarm dwelling are not seeking approval for a "type of use" that could be approved as a nonfarm dwelling without an exception to Goal 3 and are not prohibited from taking an exception under the Court of Appeals' ruling in DLCD v. Yamhill County, 183 Or App 556, 53 P3d 462 (2002). Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 47 Or LUBA 508 (2004).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. While a county need not address every possible farm use defined under ORS 215.203(2)(a) in adopting a committed exception to Goal 3, when a party below identifies a particular farm use that may be practicable, the county must address the practicability of that farm use. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The focus of a committed exception under OAR 660-004-0028 is the relationship between the subject property and adjacent uses. Findings that describe and rely upon alleged impacts from rural residential uses up to one-half mile from the subject property, and that provide no description or analysis of adjacent uses, are insufficient to demonstrate that the subject property is committed to nonresource uses. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A county's reliance on reported incidents of vandalism and other crimes in a large rural residential area near a parcel are insufficient to demonstrate that the parcel is committed to nonresource uses, absent evidence that the cited criminal incidents interfere or are likely to interfere with farm or forest uses on the subject property. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Externalities from farm or forest operations such as dust, spray, smoke and noise are inherent aspects of rural life in agricultural or forest zones, and absent evidence that such externalities have or are likely to cause actual conflicts with resource operations, evidence of the possibility of such conflicts with rural residential uses is insufficient to demonstrate that resource uses are impracticable. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The focus of analysis under OAR 660-004-0028 is on existing circumstances that contribute to the practicability of resource use in the exception area, not speculative future circumstances. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Where a county concludes that conflicts with adjoining rural residential development commit a property to nonresource uses, the county's findings addressing OAR 660-004-0018(2)(b)(B) must explain why residential development of the subject property will not present the same risk of committing other adjacent resource lands to nonresource uses. Given the complex nature of that explanation, evidence of conflicts with rural residential uses do not "clearly support" a finding that residential zoning of the subject property will not commit adjacent resource lands, for purposes of ORS 197.835(11)(b). Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A county may not rely on a previously adopted Goal 3 exception for airport related industrial uses to justify approving a major automobile speedway and speedway related uses on rural agricultural land. Although the same factors that the county relied on to justify Goal 11 and Goal 14 exceptions for the speedway and related uses might justify a new Goal 3 exception, a new Goal 3 exception must be adopted to replace the one that was adopted for the airport related industrial uses. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. OAR 660-004-0000(2) does not, as a matter of law, impose a requirement that an applicant for an exception to Goal 3 to permit a single-family dwelling on a 10-acre parcel first exhaust all other potential avenues to obtain approval for that single-family dwelling. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 42 Or LUBA 126 (2002).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings that merely assert that a property is better suited for rural residential use than for farm use are inadequate to support a reasons exception under OAR 660-004-0020 and 660-004-0022. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 42 Or LUBA 126 (2002).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Absent recent or imminent changes in adjacent rural residential uses, where a neighboring subdivision has been developed for many years and the subject property has been in resource use during much of that time, the existence of those adjacent rural residential uses is insufficient to demonstrate that the subject property is irrevocably committed to nonresource use. DLCD v. Lane County, 39 Or LUBA 445 (2001).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. When the local government does not demonstrate that the uses allowed by the goals are impracticable, there is no need to resolve relevancy and evidentiary challenges to the findings. DLCD v. Coos County, 39 Or LUBA 432 (2001).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A county errs in relying exclusively on rural residential locational criteria in its comprehensive plan in taking a committed exception to Goal 3, instead of the criteria of OAR 660-004-0028, where nothing in the county comprehensive plan purports to waive or supplant any requirement of state law. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 39 Or LUBA 74 (2000).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Before amending an urban growth boundary to add land with predominantly Class I soils to meet an identified need for commercial land, a county must determine whether alternatives to adding a site with predominantly Class I soils can reasonably accommodate the identified need. That alternatives analysis under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b)(B) is a multi-factor analysis and rejecting alternative sites solely because they have soils that may increase development costs is error. DLCD v. Douglas County, 38 Or LUBA 542 (2000).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Land that is already included within a UGB is assumed to be available for urban development. That assumption is not rendered invalid simply because sites that are planned and zoned for residential, industrial and commercial use have soil or other characteristics that make them less than ideal to develop. DLCD v. Douglas County, 38 Or LUBA 542 (2000).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Alternative sites to meet an identified need for commercially planned and zoned land may not be rejected solely because they have soils limitations that the USDA estimates may result in an average 39 percent development cost increase for some small commercial buildings. The estimated 39 percent cost increase is an average, so it may be lower in particular cases, and any added cost may be offset by other advantages the sites may possess. DLCD v. Douglas County, 38 Or LUBA 542 (2000).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. In adopting an irrevocably committed exception where the proposed exception area has a history of farm use and is currently in farm use, it is not sufficient to rely solely upon long-standing site characteristics or the presence of long-standing adjacent conflicting uses. An adequate demonstration of impracticability must identify recent or imminent changes affecting the subject property that, by themselves or in combination with other factors, render continued farm use of the property impracticable. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 357 (2000).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The mere presence of residential uses on EFU-zoned properties adjacent to a proposed exception area does not demonstrate that the subject property is irrevocably committed to nonfarm uses. In considering residential uses on adjacent properties, the county must identify in its findings the conflicts or other impacts between the residential uses and the subject property that make farm use of the subject property impracticable. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 357 (2000).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. OAR 660-004-0028(6)(c)(B) does not require that the county consider as one farm or forest operation those contiguous, undeveloped parcels under common ownership not zoned for resource use. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. OAR 660-004-0028(6)(c) prohibits impacts from rural residential uses approved pursuant to the statewide land use goals from being used to justify a committed exception for nearby property. Where a county decision relies in part on impacts from nearby residential uses to conclude that the resource lands are irrevocably committed to nonresource use, the findings must establish that those conflicts do not arise from residential areas that were approved pursuant to statewide planning goal exceptions. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A local government is not required to adopt findings addressing the farm tax deferral status of property when considering the "irrevocably committed" factors of OAR 660-004-0028. However, the fact that property is in farm tax deferral is relevant evidence in determining whether it is impracticable to put the property to farm use. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A reasons exception to Goals 3 and 4 must be based on the considerations set forth in Goal 2 and OAR 660-004-0020 and 660-004-0022. Under OAR 660-004-0022, the fact that farm and forest land is not prime timber or agricultural land is not a legally cognizable basis to adopt a reasons exception to Goals 3 and 4. McLane v. Klamath County, 37 Or LUBA 888 (2000).

7. 6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings that state there is "sufficient evidence in the form of oral testimony and documentation to support the application," and also state that existing adjacent parcels are "clustered around" two roads are insufficient to adequately describe the characteristics of adjacent lands and the uses located on them as required by OAR 660-004-0028(2)(b) and (6)(a). DLCD v. Wallowa County, 37 Or LUBA 105 (1999).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A determination that rural residential uses on EFU property would create a buffer between urban uses and nearby agricultural land is not a proper consideration in granting an exception under OAR 660-004-0028. DLCD v. Wallowa County, 37 Or LUBA 105 (1999).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A generalized statement that livestock operations are incompatible with residential uses is insufficient to show that the particular livestock operations on the property for which an exception is proposed are incompatible with existing residential uses. DLCD v. Wallowa County, 37 Or LUBA 105 (1999).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Pasturing livestock is a "farm use" as that term is defined in ORS 215.203(2), even though the owner's primary purpose in pasturing cattle on the property is to reduce fire potential by reducing ground cover. DLCD v. Wallowa County, 37 Or LUBA 105 (1999).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A committed-exception zone-change decision that acknowledges the existence of Goal 5 resources on the subject property, but concludes that the county's existing Goal 5 plan provisions will address any conflicts, is not adequate to demonstrate compliance with Goal 5, where the findings do not state which of the county's existing Goal 5 plan provisions ensure continued compliance once the exception is taken, and the findings do not consider whether the zone change may introduce the possibility of new conflicting uses. Pekarek v. Wallowa County, 36 Or LUBA 494 (1999).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Until the county has adopted findings that determine precisely what inventoried Goal 5 resource areas are located on the subject property, it is not possible to identify which county Goal 5 resource protection programs affect all or parts of the subject property, and the county is in no position to adopt findings explaining whether a committed-exception zone-change is consistent with the county's existing Goal 5 resource protection provisions. Pekarek v. Wallowa County, 36 Or LUBA 494 (1999).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. In light of historical use of the property for grazing, its high-value soils and similarities between the property and adjacent resource lands, the county's unexplained reliance on a winter high-water table and slight to moderate slopes on the property are inadequate to demonstrate that farm use on the property is impracticable in order to justify a committed exception to Goal 3. Wodarczak v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 453 (1998).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A committed exception to Goal 3 is not justified by the mere presence of adjacent residential development, without evidence of conflicts or an explanation why the relationship between that development and the subject property renders farm use impracticable on the property. Wodarczak v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 453 (1998).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. In approving a committed exception to Goal 3, the county is required by OAR 660-004-0018(2) to limit use on the property within the exception area to ensure that the exception does not tend to commit adjacent and nearby resource lands to nonresource uses. Wodarczak v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 543 (1998).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A local government decision approving an irrevocably committed exception under OAR 660-04-028 to Goals 3 and 4 will be remanded where it does not include findings supported by substantial evidence establishing that uses allowed by Goals 3 and 4 are impracticable. DLCD v. Columbia County, 32 Or LUBA 221 (1996).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A local government decision approving a physically developed exception under OAR 660-04-025 to Goals 3 and 4 will be remanded where the findings do not establish that the property is physically developed with non-resource uses. DLCD v. Columbia County, 32 Or LUBA 221 (1996).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings adopted by the county approving a committed exception to Goals 3 and 4 are inadequate where they contain no discussion or explanation of how the existing uses on adjacent parcels make resource use on the subject property impracticable. Johnson v. Lane County, 31 Or LUBA 454 (1996).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. County findings that describe the physical characteristics and existing uses of adjacent lands in approving a committed exception to Goals 3 and 4 are adequate for purposes of OAR 660-04-028(2)(b) and (6)(a). Those rules do not require the county to make findings regarding the ownership of the adjacent parcels or the proximity of developed uses on adjacent lands. Johnson v. Lane County, 31 Or LUBA 454 (1996).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. In considering the substantiality of evidence supporting a Goal 3 reasons exception for realignment of a highway, LUBA must look at the evidence supporting the challenged decision for the entire four-mile stretch of highway and all the impacted properties, not just the evidence of effects on one of the properties. Schrock Farms, Inc. v. Linn County, 31 Or LUBA 57 (1996).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Under OAR 660-04-020(2)(d), an exception to Goal 3 may be approved so long as compatibility with adjacent uses will be achieved through measures designed to reduce adverse impacts; compliance with the compatibility standard need not be actually achieved prior to approval of the exception. Schrock Farms, Inc. v. Linn County, 31 Or LUBA 57 (1996).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. When property is located in a combined agricultural and forest zone, findings in support of an irrevocably committed exception must establish that all uses allowed by Goals 3 and 4 are impracticable. A finding that the property has never been in agricultural use is insufficient. DLCD v. Curry County, 30 Or LUBA 294 (1996).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The standards for approving a physically developed exception to Statewide Planning Goals 3 and 4 are demanding. The county must find that the property has been physically developed to such an extent that all Goal 3 or 4 resource uses are precluded. Uses established in accordance with the goals cannot be used to justify such an exception. Sandgren v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 454 (1995).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. To approve an irrevocably committed exception to Goals 3 and 4, the county must find that all uses allowed by the goals are impracticable, primarily as a result of uses established on adjacent parcels. Sandgren v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 454 (1995).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Even if petitioners' evidence supports a conclusion that a resource parcel is not adequate for commercial timber production, that conclusion does not justify an exception to Goals 3 and 4 since it does not establish that all uses allowed by the applicable goals are impracticable. Sandgren v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 454 (1995).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The county's denial of a developed exception will be upheld when the county finds that the physical characteristics of the property do not render it irrevocably committed to nonresource uses; there is continuing resource use of properties to the north, east and west; and the existence of public facilities and services installed to serve the residence on the site do not irrevocably commit the remainder of the site to nonresource uses. Sandgren v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 454 (1995).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings that address only the practicability of commercial forestry uses, rather than all commercial and non-commercial uses allowed by Goals 3 and 4 on agricultural and forestlands, do not justify an irrevocably committed exception to either Goal 3 or Goal 4. DLCD v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 415 (1995).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings must address the practicability of commercial forestry uses on adjacent lands as well as in a proposed exception area to satisfy the requirements for an irrevocably committed exception to either Goal 3 or Goal 4. DLCD v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 415 (1995).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings to justify a committed exception to Goals 3 and 4 must address the factors of OAR 660-04-028(6) and must be supported by substantial evidence explaining how conflicts between existing uses and resource uses operate in a particular instance to render the subject property irrevocably committed. DLCD v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 415 (1995).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Where a county makes an unchallenged determination that the "reason" justifying an exception to Goal 3 under ORS 197.732(1)(c)(A) and OAR 660-04-020(2)(a) is the need for a church to serve a congregation located in and around the City of Amity, the county is not required to consider as alternative sites land within the UGBs of other cities in the county. Cox v. Yamhill County, 29 Or LUBA 263 (1995).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. A county governing body's interpretation that an otherwise applicable code permit standard requiring "Class I-IV soils [to] be preserved and maintained for farm use" is not applicable to land for which an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands) has been adopted as part of the acknowledged county comprehensive plan, is not "clearly wrong," and is within the governing body's discretion under ORS 197.829. Reeves v. Yamhill County, 28 Or LUBA 123 (1994).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Where a local government properly determines certain land is not farm or forestland subject to Statewide Planning Goals 3 and 4, an exception to Goals 3 and 4 is not required to support comprehensive plan and zone map amendments designating such property for residential use. Bates v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 21 (1994).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The bias under Goals 3 and 4 in favor of commercial agricultural and forest enterprises does not mean a local government may assume that noncommercial farm and forest uses are not "uses allowed by the applicable goal" for which a proposed exception area's suitability must be considered in granting an exception. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. Even if a local government may establish the level of profitability necessary to qualify as a "farm use," as that term is defined by ORS 215.203, such level may not be set at the same level that would qualify a farm use as a commercial agricultural enterprise. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. The impracticability standard for committed exceptions is a demanding standard, and findings must do more than recite facts addressing the relevant factors, they must also explain why those facts lead to a conclusion that uses allowed by Goals 3 and 4 are impracticable. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

7.6 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Exceptions to. In adopting exceptions to Goals 3 and 4 as post-acknowledgment plan amendments, a local government must also address Goal 5 if the exceptions concern or affect lands included on the local government's acknowledged inventory of Goal 5 resources. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. When considering if a piece of property is "suitable for farm use" within the meaning of OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), the county must consider the parcel in full; it cannot exclude a portion of the property being constrained from farm use from consideration until it evaluates if a reasonable farmer would put the subject property to farm use and/or grazing using the applicable criteria. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 180 (2018).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. When deciding if a property is "suitable for farm use" the county must consider the adjacent or intermingled properties, and property lines or land ownership are not the sole deciding factors. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 180 (2018).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. While counties may use discretion to determine whether an operation is a "commercial farming operation," that does not mean that a county may equate an "existing commercial farming operation" with "farm use." Wachal v. Linn County, 78 Or LUBA 227 (2018).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. ORS 215.203(2)(a) provides that "farm use" includes the "preparation" of "products or by-products raised on * * * land for human or animal use[.]" A straw pressing operation that compresses straw that is initially baled in the field after it is cut such that the bales are easier to transport to their eventual end use as feed but that does not change the straw in any way or change the fact that it is ready for use as feed after it is baled and remains ready for use as feed after it is compressed is "preparation" of the straw within the meaning of ORS 215.203(2)(a). Gilmour v. Linn County, 73 Or LUBA 90 (2016).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. A building accessory to farm use that is allowed under ORS 215.213(1)(e) as a building "customarily provided in conjunction with farm use" is not itself a farm use. Bratton v. Washington County, 65 Or LUBA 461 (2012).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. Determining whether a proposed building is allowed in the EFU zone under ORS 215.213(1)(e) or 215.283(1)(e) as a building "customarily provided in conjunction with farm use" requires the local government to determine whether the land is currently employed for farm use and whether the proposed building is of the type that is customarily combined with the farm use in question. Because those determinations are not clear and objective, a building permit to approve such a building is not subject to the ORS 197.015(10)(b)(B) exception for "building permits issued under clear and objective standards." Bratton v. Washington County, 65 Or LUBA 461 (2012).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. The Supreme Court's decision in Brentmar v. Jackson County, 321 Or 481, 900 P2d 1030 (1995), that uses listed in ORS 215.203(1) may not be subject to local criteria more restrictive than the statute, did not automatically invalidate all final, unappealed land use decisions or conditions attached to those decisions that were issued and final prior to 1995, even if those decisions were inconsistent with the holding in Brentmar. Just v. Linn County, 59 Or LUBA 233 (2009).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. The considerations listed in OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B)—soil fertility, suitability for grazing, climatic conditions, existing and future availability of water for farm irrigation purposes, existing land use patterns, technological and energy inputs required, and accepted farming practices—are the primary drivers of any determination under the rule whether land is "suitable for farm use" as defined in ORS 215.203(2)(a). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. While profitability is a permissible consideration in determining whether land is agricultural land under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), it is a relatively minor consideration, and one with a large potential for distracting the decision maker and the parties from the primary considerations listed in the rule—soil fertility, suitability for grazing, climatic conditions, existing and future availability of water for farm irrigation purposes, existing land use patterns, technological and energy inputs required, and accepted farming practices. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. Substantial evidence supports a county's finding that a 160-acre parcel is not suitable for an independent grazing operation, where the property has never supported an independent grazing operation, and an agricultural consultant's study details significant capital inputs needed to establish a new, independent grazing operation that could not be recovered from income reasonably expected from such a grazing operation. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. In evaluating whether a 160-acre parcel that was grazed for 70 years in conjunction with nearby lands as part of a larger grazing operation is "other suitable land" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B) because it can be put to farm use in conjunction with nearby agricultural lands, the testimony of nearby ranchers that they have successfully ranched the subject property as part of their grazing operation in the past, are willing to do so again, and believe they can do so profitably is generally more than sufficient to establish that the property can be used in conjunction with nearby farm lands. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. A county could reasonably choose to rely on a consultant's economic analysis to conclude that a 160-acre parcel is not "other suitable land" under OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B) because it cannot be profitably combined with nearby grazing operations, notwithstanding that nearby ranchers testified that they had successfully used the property in conjunction with their grazing operation in the past and believe they can do so again, where the economic analysis sets out a detailed, if hypothetical, budget demonstrating that such combined use could not be conducted with the primary purpose of obtaining a profit in money, and the nearby ranchers do not provide any similar budget or explanation for why they believe a combined operation would be financially beneficial to them. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. Where no issue was raised during the initial proceedings or initial appeal to LUBA regarding whether a property could be used as a "woodlot" and thus be put to "farm use" for purposes of ORS 215.203(2), that issue cannot be raised for the first time on appeal of the decision on remand, pursuant to Beck v. City of Tillamook, 313 Or 148, 153, 831 P2d 678 (1992). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 58 Or LUBA 638 (2009).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. A local government errs in concluding that the uses specified in OAR 660-004-0028(3) are impracticable because the property is not capable of supporting commercial levels of agriculture. The test under the rule is not whether the property is capable of supporting commercial levels of agriculture. Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 57 (2007).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. Pasturing livestock is a "farm use" as that term is defined in ORS 215.203(2), even though the owner's primary purpose in pasturing cattle on the property is to reduce fire potential by reducing ground cover. DLCD v. Wallowa County, 37 Or LUBA 105 (1999).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. LUBA does not independently analyze the evidence, but reviews evidence in the record solely to determine whether it was reasonable for the decision maker to rely on that evidence in making a decision. Where the written evidence is conflicting and a video tape makes it clear that only small remnants of past farming or Christmas tree growing efforts on the subject property remain among the piles of debris that have been scattered over the subject property, it is reasonable for a hearings officer to conclude there is no current farm use of the property. Best Buy in Town, Inc. v. Washington County, 35 Or LUBA 446 (1999).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. Whether composting qualifies as a farm use under ORS 215.203(2)(a) is a question of statutory interpretation, not a question of whether agricultural experts believe composting, in the abstract, falls within a scientific definition of farm use. Best Buy in Town, Inc. v. Washington County, 35 Or LUBA 446 (1999).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. A composting operation where all the compost inputs are produced off-site and all of the compost produced is sold for use off-site does not involve "current employment of the land" and for that reason is not a "farm use" as defined by ORS 215.203(2)(a). Best Buy in Town, Inc. v. Washington County, 35 Or LUBA 446 (1999).

7.7.1 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Generally. The 80,000 dollars gross annual income requirement stated in OAR 660-33-135(7) for farm dwellings on high-value farmland is not inconsistent with ORS 215.283(1)(f), although it conflicts with ORS 215.213(2)(b) under Lane County v. LCDC, 138 Or App 635, 910 P2d 414, adh'd to as modified on recons, 140 Or App 368, 914 P2d 1114 (1996), rev'd, 325 Or 569, 942 P2d 278 (1997). Nichols v. Clackamas County, 32 Or LUBA 113 (1996).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. In considering an application for a relative farm help dwelling, a local government is not limited to considering the commercial farming operation occurring on the property on the date the application is filed, and the local government does not err by considering whether a new crop planted after the application is filed, either alone or in combination with the existing operation, is an "existing commercial farming operation" within the meaning of OAR 660-033-0130(9)(a). Wachal v. Linn County, 81 Or LUBA 561 (2020).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. A reasonable person would rely on an applicant's testimony regarding their activities managing a farm and their status as the state license holder for an industrial hemp-growing operation to conclude that the applicant is a farm operator and continues to play the "predominant role" in management and farm use of the farm, for purposes of OAR 660-033-0130(9)(a), even where they have hired another company to prepare the farmland for planting hemp seed and to provide consultation regarding hemp growing. Wachal v. Linn County, 81 Or LUBA 561 (2020).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Any permits for residential development on resource land that were issued prior to the effective date of HB 2106 (2019) are eligible for the five one-year extensions provided in ORS 215.417(2) (2019) only if, on the effective date of that legislation, those permits were still in the initial four-year period of validity or the one two-year extension period provided in ORS 215.417 (2017). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 81 Or LUBA 279 (2020).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. While counties may use discretion to determine whether an operation is a "commercial farming operation," that does not mean that a county may equate an "existing commercial farming operation" with "farm use." Wachal v. Linn County, 78 Or LUBA 227 (2018).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. A finding that the applicant qualifies as a "farm operator" as defined at OAR 660-033-0130(9)(a) is inadequate, where the finding merely assumes the applicant is the farm operator, and does not address issues raised below that the applicant leases the land to a third person who is the actual farm operator. Richards v. Jefferson County, 77 Or LUBA 152 (2018).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. To qualify as a "farm operator" as defined at OAR 660-033-0130(9)(a), in order to gain approval of a farm relative dwelling, the applicant must establish that he or she will "continue to play the predominant role" in farm use of the property. That qualification may not be met if the reason the applicant requires the assistance of a relative is because the applicant is substantially employed off the farm and does not have enough time to conduct farm operations. Richards v. Jefferson County, 77 Or LUBA 152 (2018).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. To gain approval of a farm relative dwelling, the applicant must qualify as the "farm operator" and demonstrate, among other things, that he or she would "continue to play the predominate role" in farm operations. That demonstration requires some evidence regarding the proportionate contributions of the farm operator and the relative to the farm operation. Richards v. Jefferson County, 77 Or LUBA 152 (2018).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Where the record includes no evidence or findings regarding whether a 119-acre parcel with a hay-growing operation constitutes a "commercial farm operation," for purposes of approving a farm relative dwelling under OAR 660-033-00130(9), remand is necessary to address that issue. Richards v. Jefferson County, 77 Or LUBA 152 (2018).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. OAR 660-033-0135(1) authorizes a farm dwelling on a "parcel," which obligates the local government to confirm that the subject property is a unit of land created in one of the ways described in ORS 92 and ORS 215.010, but it does not obligate the local government to determine whether the land use decision or process that created the property was legally correct in the sense that all applicable standards were properly applied and satisfied. Any legal errors in such decisions cannot be challenged in the appeal of a subsequent decision approving a dwelling on the parcel. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 65 Or LUBA 246 (2012).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. The OAR 660-033-0135(1)(d) requirement allowing a farm dwelling on a parcel only if "there is no other dwelling on the subject tract" focuses on the "subject tract" as it exists when the local government approves the farm dwelling; that the parcel was once part of a different tract that included a dwelling does not prohibit approval of the farm dwelling, if the tract the parcel is currently a part of has no dwelling. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 65 Or LUBA 246 (2012).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. OAR 660-033-0135(1)(c) allows a farm dwelling upon a finding that the dwelling will be occupied by persons principally engaged in farm use of the land at a commercial scale. Although the rule is ambiguous regarding whether the "land" means the parcel on which the dwelling would be located or the tract that includes the parcel, based on context it is reasonably clear that the unit of analysis for the "commercial scale" inquiry is the tract. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 65 Or LUBA 246 (2012).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. A county errs in finding that a farm dwelling will be occupied by persons principally engaged in farm use of the land at a "commercial scale" for purposes of OAR 660-033-0135(1)(c) based on evidence of ranching activities on a 17,000-acre ranch that the subject tract is associated with, instead of the tract on which the proposed dwelling will be located. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 65 Or LUBA 246 (2012).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. A county is not required to impose a condition prohibiting use of a farm dwelling if the tract on which it is located is no longer used for farm use at a commercial scale. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 65 Or LUBA 246 (2012).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Seasonal occupation of a farm dwelling is not necessarily inconsistent with a finding that the dwelling will be occupied by persons "principally engaged" in farm use of the property, where the property is located in a high elevation area where pasture and farm use is possible only six months of the year. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 65 Or LUBA 246 (2012).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. A farm dwelling is permitted under OAR 660-033-0135(7)(a) only if the property is "currently employed for the farm use * * * that produced" the requisite $80,000 income in farm products. As worded, the rule does not permit a farm dwelling if the current farm use of the property is significantly different from the farm use that produced the requisite income. Chapman v. Marion County, 60 Or LUBA 377 (2010).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. A hearings officer does not err in rejecting as not credible testimony that a 19-acre farm produced over $80,000 in revenue from hay grown on the property, where the applicant provided no evidence of how much hay was grown on the property, or documentation distinguishing revenue from the sale of hay grown on the property from revenue derived from the resale of $83,000 in hay that the applicant purchased that year, and substantial evidence in the record indicated that to derive $80,000 in revenue solely from hay grown on the property would mean the applicant achieved yields and prices several times higher than average for the county. Chapman v. Marion County, 60 Or LUBA 377 (2010).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. A code provision that allows a farm dwelling on a 160-acre rangeland parcel, rather than the minimum 320 acres specified in OAR 660-033-0135(1)(a), may be inconsistent with the rule. However, the county may rely on its code, acknowledged in 2001 to comply with Goal 3 and the Goal 3 rule, notwithstanding any inconsistency with the rule. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 42 Or LUBA 149 (2002).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. OAR 660-033-0135(1)(c) allows a farm dwelling only if the occupant(s) will be "principally engaged" in farm use, as opposed to principally engaged in nonfarm uses. Consequently, in allowing a farm dwelling under OAR 660-033-0135(1)(c), it is not sufficient for the county to determine that the occupants, as opposed to someone else, will be the primary actors in farm use of the property, where the record shows that the occupants' primary economic livelihood is a nonfarm use. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 42 Or LUBA 149 (2002).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. OAR 660-033-0135(1) provides that a dwelling may be considered customarily provided in conjunction with farm use if it satisfies four standards set forth in the rule. Nothing in the rule requires the county to make a separate determination, in addition to applying the four standards, that the predicate farm use is of the type that is customarily associated with a dwelling. Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 42 Or LUBA 149 (2002).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Income and activities pursuant to a nonfarm business that is authorized by a conditional use permit on land zoned EFU may not be considered, for purposes of determining whether the farm uses proposed to support a farm dwelling are "at a commercial scale." Oregon Natural Desert Assoc. v. Harney County, 42 Or LUBA 149 (2002).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. The OAR 660-033-0140 provisions imposing time limits on and providing standards for extension of certain EFU zone permits, including farm dwelling permits, expressly apply only to permits approved after August 7, 1993. OAR 660-033-0140 does not prohibit extension of farm dwelling permits that were approved prior to August 7, 1993 and does not require that the standards adopted by that rule be applied to any extensions of such previously approved farm dwelling permits. Rochlin v. Multnomah County, 35 Or LUBA 333 (1998).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. OAR 660-033-0135 and 660-033-0140 have no legal effect on the continued validity of farm dwelling permits approved prior to the adoption of those rules or the county's authority to impose time limits on those previously approved permits or to adopt standards for extending those new time limits. Rochlin v. Multnomah County, 35 Or LUBA 333 (1998).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Under ORS 215.428(3), OAR 660-033-0140 may not be applied to applications for farm dwelling permits that were filed prior to the effective date of the rule and were pending on the date the rule became effective. Rochlin v. Multnomah County, 35 Or LUBA 333 (1998).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. The county's findings are inadequate to establish compliance with OAR 660-05-030(4) where they do not show that once the proposed level of farm activity is established on the subject property, the property will be "currently employed for the primary purpose of obtaining a profit in money" as required by ORS 215.203. Still v. Marion County, 32 Or LUBA 40 (1996).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Where a local code requires that a second farm dwelling be shown to be "necessary," absent a definition to the contrary or contrary legislative history, the term "necessary" has the same meaning in the Goal 3 context that it has in the Goal 4 context. Louks v. Jackson County, 28 Or LUBA 501 (1995).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. While adding dwellings to the existing dwellings on one parcel of a multi-parcel commercial orchard may provide additional deterrence to trespass, vandalism and theft on that parcel, those dwellings will not provide deterrence on the other parcels and are not "necessary" for continuation of the commercial farm. Louks v. Jackson County, 28 Or LUBA 501 (1995).

7.7.2 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Farm Uses – Farm Dwellings. Following 1993 legislative amendments, small scale farm or forest dwellings are not allowable under Goals 3 and 4, and ORS 215.304(1) prohibits LCDC from adopting or implementing any rule which would permit counties to allow such small scale farm or forest dwellings. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. That two applicants for conditional use permits for two solar facilities are contemporaneously seeking partition approval to create two 320-acre parcels from the same parent tract for the proposed facilities does not establish that the proposed facilities will not be on a "single tract," for purposes of OAR 660-033-0130(38)(f), where there is no evidence, findings, or conditions that such partitions have or will become final and that the two 320-acre parcels have been or will be conveyed, by deed, to third parties. ODFW v. Lake County, 81 Or LUBA 300 (2020).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A condition of approval requiring an applicant for a conditional use permit for a solar facility to continue working privately with ODFW to agree on a wildlife habitat mitigation plan, outside a public participatory process, and return to the county for approval of the mitigation plan only if the applicant is unable to reach agreement with ODFW, is not sufficient to establish compliance with OAR 660-033-0130(38)(j)(G) for the reasons stated in Gould v. Deschutes County, 216 Or App 150, 171 P3d 1017 (2007), where it does not require a subsequent county proceeding on the mitigation plan and where it does not specify that the subsequent proceeding will be infused with the same participatory rights as the initial conditional use permit proceeding. ODFW v. Lake County, 81 Or LUBA 300 (2020).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. "In-home commercial activities" are not authorized by right in resource zones, even where (1) such activities are accessory to residential uses and would have minimal to no impact on resource lands, (2) such an approach would streamline local permitting by avoiding the conditional use process required for home occupations, and (3) such activities are consistent with a model ordinance prepared by DLCD. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Where certain activities are allowed as accessory to a home occupation use, they may not be allowed through a Type I process (i.e., ministerial review of an application based on clear and objective standards and criteria) that does not provide the review that is required by ORS 215.448(1) and (4). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Where local code amendments allow accessory uses and structures in an EFU zone, arguments that (1) the amendments improperly exempt such structures from a local code requirement that steps be taken to minimize adverse impacts on farm and forest uses and (2) the provisions governing such uses are inconsistent with ORS 215.213(3)(b) provide no basis for reversal or remand where the amended code is comparable to the prior code and where the petitioner does not develop any argument explaining why the amendments are substantive instead of technical. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A marginal lands county is not required to include in its code a requirement to consider the cumulative impacts from existing or potential lot-of-record dwellings in approving dwellings under OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D)(ii) and (iii). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. ORS 215.441 does not provide an independent basis to approve a dwelling within a church on property zoned EFU, and, where a local code provision provides that "[e]xisting churches may be maintained, enhanced or expanded on the same tract," a construction of that provision to independently allow a residential use of a church as an enhancement to the church impermissibly conflicts with ORS 215.203, ORS 215.283, and ORS 215.441. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 80 Or LUBA 183 (2019).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Use. A county fails to correctly apply the farm impacts test at ORS 215.296(1) where it concludes that there are only a few farm or forest uses in the area but does not identify and discuss each farm or forest use, where it does not describe the operations on each of the surrounding properties devoted to farm or forest use, where it does not identify evidence of the unmitigated impacts of the proposed nonfarm use, and where it concludes that such impacts will be reduced but does not identify evidence that significant impacts are avoided. Currie v. Douglas County, 79 Or LUBA 585 (2019).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Where the county found a boundary line adjustment application is in compliance with a county ordinance that requires that the "resulting parcel sizes do not change the existing land use" because before and after the boundary line adjustment there was one parcel conforming and one parcel non-conforming in size, LUBA will remand the decision. On remand, the county shall consider and adopt any necessary findings regarding petitioners' argument that the ordinance could be interpreted to require the county to consider whether the "existing land use pattern" is changed when the subject parcel—that was previously deemed "generally unsuitable" for farm use due to its size and soil composition—qualifies for a nonfarm dwelling as a result of the boundary line adjustment because the parcel was expanded to include agricultural soils in a manner that possibly renders the resulting parcel suitable for farm use. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 11 (2018).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Although the county's approval of the boundary line adjustment for the siting of a nonfarm dwelling could effectively undercut the factual predicate for compliance with a statutory-based standard pursuant to ORS 215.263(4) designed to minimize loss of productive resource lands in exclusive farm use zones to non-resource uses, where petitioner has not cited anything in the county ordinance that constitutes an approval standard for a post-partition boundary line adjustment, even if the adjustment undercuts a factual predicate for the partition approval, this argument provides no basis for reversal or remand. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 11 (2018).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Although it is not clear a proposed "parsonage," which is a portion of a church to include a bedroom, kitchen and bathroom for use by the church's pastor, must be evaluated and approved or denied under the criteria that apply to a nonfarm dwelling under the county's land use ordinance implementing ORS 215.284, those land use standards require the exercise of discretion in approving the development of land. Further, it is possible, even probable, that any application for a proposed residential use associated with a church must be evaluated under the standards at ORS 215.441, and accordingly the county must process such an application according to its procedures that apply to permits. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 33 (2018).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. When considering if a piece of property is "suitable for farm use" within the meaning of OAR 660-033-0020(1)(a)(B), the county must consider the parcel in full; it cannot exclude a portion of the property being constrained from farm use from consideration until it evaluates if a reasonable farmer would put the subject property to farm use and/or grazing using the applicable criteria. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 180 (2018).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. When deciding if a property is "suitable for farm use" the county must consider the adjacent or intermingled properties, and property lines or land ownership are not the sole deciding factors. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 78 Or LUBA 180 (2018).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Based on an ESEE consequences analysis regarding conflicting uses, under OAR 660-023-0040(4) and (5), a county must develop a program to achieve Goal 5, and determine whether to allow, limit, or prohibit conflicting uses. A local government errs in its ESEE analysis and in its ultimate decision to modify its acknowledged Goal 5 program to eliminate the prohibition on churches in the Wildlife Area Combining Zone, when it relied in part on the cost of defending its existing Goal 5 program against a hypothetical Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA) lawsuit to support its decision to achieve Goal 5 by allowing without limits a new conflicting use, without providing an analysis establishing the county's Goal 5 program would be legally vulnerable to losing a hypothetical RLUIPA lawsuit if one were brought. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 395 (2018).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. To allow a conflicting use without limit under OAR 660-023-0040(5)(c), a county's ESEE analysis must (1) demonstrate that the conflicting use is of sufficient importance relative to the resource site, and (2) must indicate why measures to protect the resource "to some extent should not be provided." OAR 660-023-0040(5)(c) does not prohibit the county from allowing a conflicting use without limit, if there is another option that would both fully protect the resource at issue and satisfy the motivations prompting the county to decide in favor of the conflicting use. Instead, OAR 660-023-0040(5)(c) requires the county to justify its choice to allow a conflicting use without limit, and that justification must include a demonstration that alternatives, such as imposing limits or measures to provide some protection for the resource consistent with OAR 660-023-0040(5)(b) should not be provided. Assuming that demonstration is made, OAR 660-023-0040(5) and Goal 5 do not compel the local government to choose alternatives that fully or partially protect the resource. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 395 (2018).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. In the context of a county's Goal 5 analysis, LUBA will reject the county's argument that there are no measures that the county could adopt to protect wildlife habitat from the negative impacts of churches without running afoul of a Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA) requirement–that governments not impose a "substantial burden" on religious exercise–where the county's ESEE analysis includes no evaluation of any measures or any findings on this point, and without actually evaluating any measures that would provide some protection to wildlife resources, it is difficult to understand how the county could reach a conclusion that no measures could be adopted to protect wildlife resources without also imposing a "substantial burden" on religious exercise. In such a circumstance, remand is necessary for the county to adopt an ESEE analysis that either does not rely on the mere threat of RLUIPA litigation, or that actually evaluates whether the county's existing Goal 5 program is inconsistent with the RLUIPA Equal Terms or Substantial Burden requirements, so that the county can consider whether there are measures it can adopt pursuant to OAR 660-023-0040(5)(b) and (c) to reduce impacts on wildlife resources and include those evaluations in the revised ESEE analysis. As part of that analysis, the county may consider, if necessary, whether identified measures would impose a "substantial burden" on the free exercise of religion. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 395 (2018).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Legislative history supports an interpretation of Oregon Laws 2013, chapter 462 (2013 Act), which amended ORS 215.213(2)(b)(A) and (B) (and its counterpart ORS 215.283(2)(b)(A) and (B)), that the default, and longest, assessment look-back period possible to allow a property owner to build a "replacement dwelling" on Exclusive Farm Use (EFU)-zoned land is five years. Section 2 of the 2013 Act provides that a dwelling may be replaced if the dwelling it replaces was assessed ad valorem taxes for the lesser of: (1) the previous five tax years, (2) the previous five tax years except those years where the dwelling had no value as a result of destruction or demolition of the dwelling, or (3) where the dwelling was constructed within the last 5 years, for the rest of that 5-year period. The five-year look-back therefore may not be more than five years and applies to dwellings that were destroyed or demolished. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 76 Or LUBA 250 (2017).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. OAR 660-033-0180(8), the Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) rule that implements Oregon Laws 2013, chapter 462 (the 2013 Act), combines the first part of the 2013 Act's Section 2(2)(b)(A) and Section 2(2)(b)(B) into the rule's Section (B), and ties the first part of Section 2(2)(b)(B) to the five-year tax assessment look-back. Then, the rule's Section (C)(i) eliminates the duplication in the statute and achieves the same limitation the statute achieves, but the rule does not eliminate the statutory requirement to impose a look-back period of five years, essentially giving effect to the "lesser of" language that is not included in the rule. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 76 Or LUBA 250 (2017).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. OAR 660-033-0140(1) provides that a discretionary permit on resource land is void two years from the date of the final decision "if the development action is not initiated within that period." However, reading OAR 660-033-0140(1) to allow the permit approval to remain valid indefinitely once it is initiated within the two-year period is inconsistent with OAR 660-033-0140(2), which allows an extension for one year if the applicant was unable to begin or "continue development during the approval period." The requirement to show that the application was unable to "continue development during the approval period" indicates that simply initiating the development within the two-year period is not sufficient in itself to render the permit valid indefinitely, without the need to seek an extension. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 299 (2016).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Interpreting OAR 660-033-0140(1) to allow a discretionary permit approval to remain valid indefinitely once it is initiated within the initial two-year approval period is inconsistent with OAR 660-033-0140(4), which provides that additional extensions beyond one year may be authorized where applicable criteria have not changed. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 299 (2016).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Where in 2005 an applicant receives discretionary permit approval for three school buildings, and initiates the development action within the initial two-year period set forth in OAR 660-033-0140(1) by constructing two school buildings, but fails to seek extension of the permit or obtain building permits for the third building until seven years after the two-year period expired, long after the school use became a nonconforming use, the applicant can no longer rely on the 2005 approval to authorize issuance of building permits for the third building. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 299 (2016).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Hallways that are intended for human transit rather than human occupancy need not be counted toward the limit prescribed by OAR 660-033-0130(2)(a) on structures with a "design capacity" no greater than 100 people. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 73 Or LUBA 52 (2016).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A local government's determination of the design capacity of a locker room that is based on the number of lockers and projected number of golfers using the locker room lockers at one time is supported by substantial evidence in the record where the applicant's architect provides testimony to support the determination. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 73 Or LUBA 52 (2016).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. OAR 660-033-0130(2)(a) excludes structures that are not "enclosed structures" from the required maximum "design capacity" calculation and a county's exclusion of outdoor decks and patios that are not enclosed is consistent with the express language of the rule. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 73 Or LUBA 52 (2016).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. The text and context of ORS 215.283(2)(c), which allows "private parks, playgrounds, hunting and fishing preserves and campgrounds" on EFU-zoned land, indicate that the qualifier "private" refers to private ownership, not private access. Accordingly, a "private park" for purposes of ORS 215.283(2)(c) is not limited to parks that exclude the public. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 61 (2015).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. The primary use of a "park" allowed under ORS 215.283(2)(c) on EFU-zoned land must be a recreational use of some kind. A proposed wedding event center is not a "park," because weddings and other focal events are not "recreational" uses, even if incidental activities associated with such events, such as dancing and lawn games, could be viewed as recreational activities. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 61 (2015).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. OAR 660-033-0130(18)(a) authorizes expansion of "[e]xisting facilities wholly within a farm use zone," but does not expressly require that the facility existed wholly within a farm use zone in 1996, on the date the rule language was adopted. As written, the rule includes no such temporal qualification, and would allow expansion of a facility that currently exists wholly within a farm use zone, but that did not in 1996. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. ORS 215.283(2)(k) allows a solid waste disposal facility on EFU-zoned land for which a DEQ permit has been granted. Where the record shows that a currently operating facility proposed for expansion had a DEQ permit that has been extended, but does not include a copy of the current DEQ permit, remand is not necessary to remedy that evidentiary defect where the petitioner offers no reason to believe that the landfill is operating without a current permit, and the county imposed a condition requiring the applicant to provide a copy of the current permit prior to undertaking any expansion. Stop the Dump Coalition v. Yamhill County, 72 Or LUBA 341 (2015).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. OAR 660-033-0130(20)(a)'s description of a regular 18-hole golf course permitted as a conditional use on EFU-zoned land, as "generally characterized by a site of about 120 to 150 acres of land," does not impose a strict upper limit of 150 acres. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 71 Or LUBA 297 (2015).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. OAR 660-033-0130(2)(a) prohibits certain enclosed structures, including a clubhouse associated with a golf course, with a "design capacity" greater than 100 people, if located within three miles of an urban growth boundary. "Design capacity" denotes the capacity for human occupation that a structure is designed for, not the number of people anticipated to use the structure at any one time. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 71 Or LUBA 297 (2015).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. "Design capacity" as used in OAR 660-033-0130(2)(a), which limits the design capacity of certain structures on EFU-zoned land within three miles of an urban growth boundary, is not the same concept as "maximum occupancy" as that term is used for purposes of fire and safety codes in issuing a building permit for structures. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 71 Or LUBA 297 (2015).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Structures or portions of a structure that are not intended for human occupancy need not be counted toward the limit prescribed by OAR 660-033-0130(2)(a) on structures with a "design capacity" no greater than 100 people. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 71 Or LUBA 297 (2015).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Establishing that the "design capacity" of a structure does not exceed the 100-person limit prescribed in OAR 660-033-0130(2)(a) will likely require the testimony of an architect or designer, together with any necessary calculations or explanations regarding the designed capacity of the structure. Remand is necessary where the applicant proposes a 10,000-square-foot golf clubhouse structure with restaurant, lounge, pro shop, etc., but provides no design or other evidence regarding the designed capacity of the clubhouse, other than testimony that the applicant expects no more than 50 golfers to use the clubhouse at any one time. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 71 Or LUBA 297 (2015).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. OAR 660-033-0140 provides that certain permits on agricultural and forest land are void after two years if the use is not initiated within that time period. Where the county development code includes language that is nearly identical to much of the language in OAR 660-033-0140, it is reasonable to conclude the code was adopted to implement OAR 660-033-0140. Gould v. Deschutes County, 67 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Where a county makes it sufficiently clear that it adopted its similarly worded version of OAR 660-033-0140 to apply in all county zones, including those that apply to agricultural and forest lands, the county code version of OAR 660-033-0140 applies in place of OAR 660-033-0140 on agricultural and forest lands after the county code version of OAR 660-033-0140 is acknowledged. Gould v. Deschutes County, 67 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Under 2010 legislation, wineries authorized by ORS 215.283(1)(n) and 215.452 may offer "[s]ervices directly related to the sale and promotion of wine," and host "private events." ORS 215.452 limits "gross income from the sale of incidental items and services" to "25 percent of the gross income from the retail sale on-site of wine produced in conjunction with the winery." Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 212 (2012).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. The legislature in 2010 enacted amendments to ORS 215.452, which governs wineries that are a permitted use under ORS 215.283(1)(n), and those amendments failed to adopt a proposal to expressly preserve statutory authority to approve wineries under ORS 215.283(2)(a) as "commercial activities that are in conjunction with farm use." However, LUBA will not infer from that failure a legislative intent to eliminate ORS 215.283(2)(a) as basis for winery approval on EFU-zoned land, where it was common practice before 2010 to approve wineries under ORS 215.283(2)(a) as "commercial activities that are in conjunction with farm use" and the 2010 legislative history suggests that the legislature did not intended to eliminate that common practice. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 212 (2012).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Approval of wineries under ORS 215.283(2)(a) as "commercial activities that are in conjunction with farm use" and approval of wineries under ORS 215.283(1)(n) and 215.452, which specifically authorize "wineries" on EFU-zoned land, are alternative ways to seek approval for a winery. Approval under ORS 215.283(2)(a) for expansions to an existing winery that was originally approved under ORS 215.283(1)(n) and 215.452 that are not permitted under ORS 215.452, has the legal effect of converting ORS 215.283(1)(n) and 215.452 winery into an ORS 215.283(2)(a) winery. Therefore the expanded winery as a whole must comply with the limits imposed on ORS 215.283(2)(a) wineries. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 212 (2012).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. ORS 215.283(1)(r) authorizes "processing of farm crops" as a permitted use in EFU zones. While a winery that only produces wine from wine grapes might qualify for approval under ORS 215.283(1)(r), a winery that includes a tasting room and hosts numerous events at the winery to promote sale of wine is more than "processing of farm crops" and must be approved under ORS 215.283(1)(n), which authorizes wineries that are limited in accordance with ORS 215.452 and 215.453 or under ORS 215.283(2)(a), which authorizes "commercial activities that are in conjunction with farm use." Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 212 (2012).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A winery that is authorized to hold up to 44 public or private events annually to promote and sell wine produced at the winery and to prepare and serve meals at those events, but must limit sale of incidental items and services at the events and winery to no more than "25 percent of the gross income from the on-site sale of wine produced in conjunction with the winery," is permissible under the Supreme Court's and Court of Appeals' decisions in Craven v. Jackson County, because the events, food service and sale of incidental items and services are properly viewed as "incidental" and "secondary" to the winery. However, such a winery is approaching the point where the events, food service and sale of incidental items and services can no longer be said to be "incidental" and "secondary" to the winery. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 212 (2012).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A comprehensive plan policy implementing Statewide Planning Goal 3, which states that the county's policy is to "continue to preserve" for farm use lands with agricultural soils, does not impliedly preclude the county from adopting a text amendment that authorizes in the EFU zone one of the non-farm uses allowed on EFU land under ORS 215.283(2). Authorizing on EFU land non-farm uses listed in ORS 215.283(2) is consistent with Goal 3 as a matter of law. Waste Not of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 65 Or LUBA 142 (2012).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. In approving a public recreational vehicle (RV) campground under OAR 660-035-0035 and 0040, a local government need not limit infrastructure such as septic RV dumps, water and electric services to the most minimally intensive infrastructure that is possible, to avoid the necessity of taking an exception to Goal 3. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 63 Or LUBA 347 (2011).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A county does not err in concluding that providing central septic dump sites for recreational vehicles (RVs) in a public RV campground does not require an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 3, where if the county did not provide central RV dump sites it would have to increase the size or number of communal restrooms to meet campers' needs, offsetting any reduction in septic infrastructure. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 63 Or LUBA 347 (2011).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A county does not err in concluding that providing a water spigot and an electrical outlet in individual campsites in a public recreational vehicle campground does not require an exception to Goal 3, where providing necessary services to campers requires a dispersed water and electric grid in any event, and the additional infrastructure to supply water and electricity to individual sites is not significantly greater than that otherwise required to provide basic services. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 63 Or LUBA 347 (2011).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. It is inappropriate to simply apply the restrictions that govern private park/campgrounds under OAR 660-033-0130(19) to public park/campgrounds governed by a different set of rules, because for whatever reason LCDC has chosen to treat public park/campgrounds more favorably than private park/campgrounds. Nonetheless, the rule governing private campgrounds is the only analogous area of law in which LCDC has attempted to delineate the type or intensity of uses allowed in a campground on EFU land as a conditional use without taking an exception to Goal 3, and is useful context in attempting to determine which local public park uses on EFU land require a Goal 3 exception in the absence of a local master park plan. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. The term "dwelling," as used in ORS 215.284 regarding nonfarm dwellings on farmland, includes any essential or accessory improvements or structures such as a well and septic system, and therefore, like the dwelling itself, those essential or accessory improvements or structures are authorized only on portions of the farm parcel that are generally unsuitable for farm use. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 56 Or LUBA 120 (2008).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Under ORS 215.284, unlike the nonfarm dwelling itself or essential or accessory improvements or structures, driveways or access roads serving the nonfarm dwelling do not have to be located on a portion of the parcel that is generally unsuitable for farm use. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 56 Or LUBA 120 (2008).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. While a parcel may not be considered generally unsuitable "based solely on size or location" without considering whether it can be used in conjunction with other lands, if size or location are not the sole basis for a finding of general unsuitability, then a local government is just required to determine whether the parcel can be used in conjunction with other lands. Williams v. Jackson County, 55 Or LUBA 223 (2007).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. The proper inquiry under ORS 215.284(3)(b) is whether land is generally unsuitable "for the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species," not whether the land is generally unsuitable for "farm use." Williams v. Jackson County, 55 Or LUBA 223 (2007).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A parcel can satisfy the generally unsuitable standard even if portions of the parcel contain areas that, if considered alone, do not satisfy the standard. Williams v. Jackson County, 55 Or LUBA 223 (2007).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. OAR 660-034-0035—and by cross-reference OAR 660-034-0040—provide a list of uses that are allowed in state and local parks, some of which are generally not allowed on resource lands without an exception to the resource goals. However, no exception is required if the uses are authorized in a state or local park master plan. Rural Thurston Inc. v. Lane County, 55 Or LUBA 382 (2007).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. By implication, some of the park uses listed in OAR 660-034-0035(2) do not require a goal exception, even if there is no acknowledged park master plan. However, the rule does not specify which uses do or do not require a goal exception in the absence of a park master plan. Rural Thurston Inc. v. Lane County, 55 Or LUBA 382 (2007).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Park uses listed in OAR 660-034-0035(2) that are passive, low-intensity uses similar to those allowed in campgrounds in resource zones do not require a goal exception to be placed in state or local parks. Rural Thurston Inc. v. Lane County, 55 Or LUBA 382 (2007).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. In determining whether a property is generally unsuitable for the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species, a county's conclusion that any historic agricultural use on the property before that time does not provide a substantial hurdle is supported by substantial evidence where the county chooses to rely on an expert's opinion that proposed nonfarm parcels have not been used for agricultural operation in the past 20 years. Peterson v. Crook County, 52 Or LUBA 160 (2006).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Where the record reflects that 10 acres of irrigation rights were removed from two 20-acre parcels because irrigating with that water was extremely inefficient, (2) the nonfarm parcels consist of 85 percent bare ground, and (3) moving the irrigation rights back would provide no benefit, county's findings that returning irrigation rights to the property would not render the nonfarm parcels generally suitable for the production of farm crops or livestock is supported by substantial evidence. Peterson v. Crook County, 52 Or LUBA 160 (2006).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Where the record reflects that at least 75 percent of the parcels proposed for nonfarm dwellings are incapable of supporting grazing, the county is not required to specifically consider whether neighboring ranchers could use the proposed nonfarm parcels in conjunction with other ranch land. Peterson v. Crook County, 52 Or LUBA 160 (2006).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Where a portion of a lot or parcel is predominantly composed of Class I-IV soils, OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B)(ii) provides that the portion is presumed generally suitable for the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species; where the portion is predominantly composed of soils that are not Class I-IV, but the entire subject property is predominantly composed of Class I-IV soils, the presumption provided for in OAR 660-033-0130(4)(c)(B)(ii) does not apply. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Where local land use regulation implements the statutory requirement in ORS 215.284(2)(b) that a portion of a lot or parcel on which a nonfarm dwelling will be located be generally unsuitable for the production of farm crops, the local regulation must be interpreted to be consistent with the statutory requirement it implements. An interpretation that improvements such as driveways, septic systems and wells may be located on the portion of the property that is suitable for production of farm crops is not consistent with the legislative intent of ORS 215.284(2)(b). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. ORS 215.284(2)(a) requires a demonstration that a proposed nonfarm dwelling or "activities associated with the dwelling" will not force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of accepted farming practices on nearby lands. Improvements such as driveways, wells and septic systems are not "activities associated with the dwelling." However, such improvements must be considered part of the proposed dwelling and thus must be considered when determining compliance with ORS 215.284(2)(a). Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. For purposes of determining whether a nonfarm dwelling proposed in the middle of an existing vineyard will force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of accepted farming practices on "nearby lands," the county's determination of the dwelling's impact on nearby lands must include consideration of the impact of the dwelling on the existing vineyard on the subject property itself. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. An allegation that the county failed to consider the potential impact of a proposed nonfarm dwelling on wells located on nearby properties that serve domestic purposes does not provide a basis to reverse or remand the approval of a nonfarm dwelling, where the applicable approval criterion requires a demonstration of whether the proposal will force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of accepted farming practices. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Although a local land use regulation may not specifically require the justification of a 2,000-acre study area for purposes of determining whether a proposed nonfarm dwelling will "materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area," that regulation implements a statutory requirement, ORS 215.284(2)(d), which has been interpreted to require justification of the scope and contours of any study area used in applying the stability test. To the extent Epp v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 480 (2004), concludes otherwise, it is overruled. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. For purposes of determining whether a proposed nonfarm dwelling will "materially alter the stability of the overall land use pattern of the area," OAR 660-033-0130(4)(a)(D)(ii) requires identification of the "number, location and type" of existing dwellings in an identified study area. Where a petitioner fails to explain why the county's alleged errors in identifying existing dwellings on nearby properties as nonfarm dwellings rather than farm dwellings would render its conclusion regarding the resulting stability of the area inadequate, it fails to provide a basis for reversal or remand of the challenged decision. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 699 (2006).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Findings that the subject property is generally unsuitable for the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species are inadequate where the findings are based on the presence of rock outcroppings and shallow soils, but the findings do not indicate the percentage of the property covered by rock outcroppings and shallow soils. Peterson v. Crook County, 49 Or LUBA 223 (2005).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Where a property had water rights that the applicant transferred to other property, the county must consider the possibility of transferring those rights back to the property and the potential capability of the soils if the water rights were transferred back in determining whether the subject property satisfies the "generally unsuitable" standard under ORS 215.263(5). Peterson v. Crook County, 49 Or LUBA 223 (2005).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A herbaceous forage survey is not substantial evidence upon which a county may rely in determining that a property is "generally unsuitable" for the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species pursuant to ORS 215.263(5), where it impossible to ascertain what area the surveys studied and where the survey does not consider potential herbaceous forage capacity if the properties were irrigated. Peterson v. Crook County, 49 Or LUBA 223 (2005).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A county's conclusion that a proposed nonfarm dwellings will not alter the stability of the land use pattern in the area is not supported by substantial evidence where that conclusion is based on an estimate that 4 or 5 additional nonfarm dwellings could be approved, and that estimate is not supported by any evidence in the record. Peterson v. Crook County, 49 Or LUBA 223 (2005).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. The term "existing facilities" in OAR 660-033-0130 is limited to a facility that will continue in the same use. The rule does not allow an existing residence to be converted to a church merely because it is an existing facility. Young v. Jackson County, 49 Or LUBA 327 (2005).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Where a local code criterion requires that a nonfarm dwelling be situated on a portion of a lot or parcel that is "generally unsuitable for the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species," and the code then spells out the considerations for determining whether a portion of a lot or parcel is "unsuitable for farm use," the term "farm use" is not properly read to require evaluation of the suitability for farm uses other than the production of farm crops and livestock or merchantable tree species. Griffin v. Jackson County, 48 Or LUBA 1 (2004).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. For land to constitute "high-value farmland" under OAR 660-033-0020(8)(d), the land must be (1) west of the Coast Range summit, (2) used in conjunction with a dairy operation on January 1, 1993, and (3) part of a "tract," one or more contiguous parcels in the same ownership, composed predominantly of listed soils. Separately owned parcels are not part of the same "tract" for purposes of OAR 660-033-0020(8)(d), even if those parcels were used together as part of a dairy operation on January 1, 1993. Tallman v. Clatsop County, 47 Or LUBA 240 (2004).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Prohibiting uses that are inconsistent with agriculture on high-value farmland, such as churches, while allowing agricultural-supportive structures and uses on high-value farmland, such as barns, wineries and farm stands, is rationally related to the policy of preserving high-value farmland for agricultural use, and neither treats religious assemblies on unequal terms with nonreligious assemblies nor discriminates against assemblies on the basis of religion in violation of the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Clackamas County, 46 Or LUBA 375 (2004).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Prohibiting establishment of new uses on high-value farmland, such as churches or golf courses, while allowing expansion of existing churches or golf courses on high-value farmland does not treat religious assemblies on unequal terms with nonreligious assemblies or discriminate against assemblies on the basis of religion in violation of the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Clackamas County, 46 Or LUBA 375 (2004).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. OAR 660-004-0000(2) does not, as a matter of law, impose a requirement that an applicant for an exception to Goal 3 to permit a single-family dwelling on a 10-acre parcel first exhaust all other potential avenues to obtain approval for that single-family dwelling. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 42 Or LUBA 126 (2002).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Comparative cost is an inherent consideration in determining under OAR 660-012-0065(5)(a) whether alternative road alignments can be constructed at "reasonable cost." Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 41 Or LUBA 476 (2002).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. In determining under OAR 660-012-0065(5)(a) whether alternative road alignments can be constructed at "reasonable cost," possible benefits to properties that are unrelated to the application need not be considered. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 41 Or LUBA 476 (2002).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. In determining under OAR 660-012-0065(5)(a) whether alternative road alignments to serve seven existing lots can be constructed at "reasonable cost," a county does not err by rejecting as unreasonable an alternative alignment that would cost $285,000 where another alternative could be constructed at $93,000. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 41 Or LUBA 476 (2002).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. The OAR 660-033-0130(18) requirement that expansions of existing nonfarm uses on high-value soils must be limited to the "same tract" prohibits expansion of a church septic system onto a different tract, and the fact that DEQ rules permit such cross-boundary septic system expansions in certain circumstances does not modify or obviate the obligation to comply with OAR 660-033-0130(18). Weaver v. Linn County, 40 Or LUBA 203 (2001).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A church-owned parcel and an adjoining parcel on which the church owns an easement are not within the "same tract" for purposes of OAR 660-033-0130(18), which limits expansion of existing nonfarm uses on high-value soils to the "same tract." To constitute a "tract," the parcels must be in the same ownership, and the easement is legally insufficient to establish an identity of ownership in the two parcels. Weaver v. Linn County, 40 Or LUBA 203 (2001).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. The limitations on activities in public parks imposed by OAR 660-034-0035 do not apply to private parks allowed on agricultural and forest lands under ORS 215.283(2)(c), OAR 660-033-0120 and OAR 660-006-0025(4)(e). Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Unlike Goal 4 and the Goal 4 rule, which limit recreational activities on forest lands to those "appropriate for a forest environment," ORS 215.283(2)(c) and OAR 660-033-0120 contain no express language restricting the scope or intensity of activities allowed in "private parks" on agricultural land. Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Where a neighboring farmer identifies significant changes and significant cost increases to his ranching operation from a proposed motocross race track and off-road vehicle park, the county must find that the proposed park, as conditioned, will not cause those impacts. Such findings are inadequate where the county does not address those identified impacts or explain why the proposed park, as conditioned, will not cause those impacts. Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Conditions imposed on a proposed motocross race track and off-road vehicle park that noise from the park must comply with DEQ standards and not exceed 99 decibels are inadequate to support a finding of compliance with the noninterference standard, where the county does not determine whether compliance with DEQ standards will prevent identified impacts on surrounding farm and forest practices, and the only mechanism for achieving compliance is to limit the noise from individual vehicles to 99 decibels. Without addressing the cumulative noise impacts of multiple vehicles, the county is no position to conclude that identified impacts will not occur. Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A water utility's proposal to solve a water shortage by drilling wells and constructing related facilities on EFU-zoned land need not demonstrate that it is not feasible to solve the water shortage in some other way than drilling wells. Dayton Prairie Water Assoc. v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 14 (2000).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Once a water utility decides to solve a water shortage by drilling wells and constructing related facilities, the wells and related facilities must be located on non-EFU-zoned land, unless it is not feasible to do so. Dayton Prairie Water Assoc. v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 14 (2000).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A utility facility may be located on EFU-zoned land if it is not feasible to locate the utility facility on non-EFU-zoned land and, in that circumstance, ORS 215.213(1)(d) and 215.283(1)(d) do not require that the utility facility be located on the "least suitable" EFU-zoned land. Dayton Prairie Water Assoc. v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 14 (2000).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. In reviewing alternatives to locating a proposed utility facility on a proposed EFU-zoned site, a county is not required to examine alternatives that would also involve using EFU-zoned lands. Dayton Prairie Water Assoc. v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 14 (2000).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Because OAR 660-033-0120 and 660-33-0130 prohibit establishment of a church on high-value farmland, the only procedure available to site a church on high-value farmland is to apply for an exception to the applicable goals under Goal 2. Corp. of Presiding Bishop v. Klamath County, 34 Or LUBA 131 (1998).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Under ORS 215.296(1), a local government must identify farm and forest uses on land surrounding the subject parcel and examine the practices necessary to continue those uses. The absence of findings sufficient to demonstrate compliance with ORS 215.296(1) undermines the conclusion that there will be no conflicts with surrounding farm or forest uses under Goal 5. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. The only difference between ORS 215.284(2) and 215.284(3) is that ORS 215.284(2) permits a nonfarm dwelling on an existing parcel, while ORS 215.284(3) permits a nonfarm dwelling on a newly created parcel. Dorvinen v. Crook County, 33 Or LUBA 711 (1997).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A new nonfarm parcel is not subject to minimum parcel size under ORS 215.780 where the new nonfarm parcel is created from a parent parcel under ORS 215.263(4) and 215.283(3). Dorvinen v. Crook County, 33 Or LUBA 711 (1997).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. OAR 660-33-120 and 660-33-130, which prohibit churches on high-value EFU land, are valid because the uses allowed under the rules are not less restrictive than the uses that would otherwise be allowed under ORS 215.283. DLCD v. Clackamas County, 33 Or LUBA 675 (1997).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Where a statute and local land use ordinance restricts personal use airports to "use by the owner," the applicant may utilize the airport for uses incidental to conducting private business, but not for the applicant's commercial aviation enterprise. Berto v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 658 (1997).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Before a nonfarm dwelling on agricultural land can be approved, findings must be made showing the subject property satisfies the "generally unsuitable" standard and other standards stated in OAR 660-33-130(4)(c)(B). Krieger v. Wallowa County, 31 Or LUBA 96 (1996).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. A county must incorporate into its exclusive farm use zones, or otherwise implement, the restrictions on uses of high-value farmland required by OAR 660-33-020(8), 660-33-080, 660-33-090 and 660-33-120. DLCD v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 459 (1994).

7.8 Goal 3 – Agricultural Lands/ Goal 3 Rule – Nonfarm Uses. Findings of fact stating that accepted farm practices which occurred on adjoining properties have continued after a golf course was constructed do not constitute an improper interpretation of ORS 215.296(1) as being met simply because those past accepted farm practices have continued. Von Lubken v. Hood River County, 28 Or LUBA 362 (1994).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-004-0010(2) does not provide authority for the proposition that an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 4 is unnecessary to plan and zone an inventoried Statewide Planning Goal 5 aggregate site on forest land for mining rather than for forest uses. Rather, OAR 660-004-0010(2) simply makes it clear that a decision under Statewide Planning Goal 5 not to protect Goal 5 resource need not be supported by an exception to Goal 5. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Because of the way Statewide Planning Goal 5 is written, a decision to protect a significant aggregate resource site on forest land for mining, and to apply planning and zoning map designations to allow mining in a way that is not fully consistent with Statewide Planning Goal 4, does not require an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 4. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. A board of county commissioners erroneously interprets a county zoning standard that replicates the OAR 660-006-0025(5)(a) requirement that certain nonforest uses in forest zones must not "[f]orce a significant change in, or significantly increase the cost of" forest practices, where under the board of commissioners' interpretation that standard is treated as a broader "significant impacts" standard that is unconnected to "costs" or "changes in" "forest practices." Oregon Pipeline Company v. Clatsop County, 71 Or LUBA 246 (2015).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Even under the deferential standard of review required by ORS 197.829(1) and Siporen v. City of Medford, 349 Or 247, 260-61, 243 P3d 776 (2010), interpreting a generally worded forest land protection policy so strictly that a use that is expressly allowed as a conditional use in the forest zone could never be approved is inconsistent with the text of the policy and implausible. Oregon Pipeline Company v. Clatsop County, 71 Or LUBA 246 (2015).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-033-0140 provides that a decision extending the expiration period for an ORS 215.402 permit decision on farm or forest land is not a "land use decision," and therefore such an extension decision is not within LUBA's jurisdiction. Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Where property includes a soil type that produces no wood fiber and another soil type that will produce some wood fiber, in determining whether the property qualifies as forest land because it is suitable for commercial forest uses, a local government does not err by considering that the property has both soil types. OAR 660-006-0010 is silent about how a local government must go about deciding whether a property with soils of differing productivity qualifies as suitable for commercial forest uses, and a local government does not err by considering the average productivity of those soils. Anderson v. Coos County, 62 Or LUBA 38 (2010).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Because OAR 660-006-0010 and 660-006-0005(2) require that local governments collect information about the cf/ac/year wood fiber productivity of land, it is appropriate to infer that the Land Conservation and Development Commission intended that that information actually be used in determining whether land qualifies as land that is suitable for commercial forest use. But it is not appropriate to infer that those rules require that only the required information may be considered in deciding whether land is suitable for commercial forest uses. Anderson v. Coos County, 62 Or LUBA 38 (2010).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Where LUBA determines that land with wood fiber productivity of 40 cf/ac/yr to 80 cf/ac/yr is "unlikely to be unsuitable for commercial forest use unless there are additional factors that render those moderately productive soils unsuitable for commercial forest use," a county may not fail to appeal LUBA's decision and in its decision following LUBA's remand of the county's first decision reverse the suitability presumption for land with that level of wood fiber productivity and place the burden of proof on opponents of the applicant seeking a second county decision that the land is not suitable for commercial forest uses. Anderson v. Coos County, 62 Or LUBA 38 (2010).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. An argument that a decision approving a boundary line adjustment under an acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations violates Goal 4 provides no basis for reversal, where petitioner offers no legal theory for why Goal 4 applies to such a decision. Generally, unless a land use decision adopts new or amended comprehensive plan or land use regulation provisions, a post-acknowledgement land use decision is governed by the acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations and need not apply the statewide planning goals directly. Lulay v. Linn County, 60 Or LUBA 432 (2010).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-006-0010, which requires that a forest land inventory include a mapping of forest site class, applies both to a local government's initial inventory of forest lands and to subsequent county decisions that modify that inventory, such as designating forest land as "marginal lands" under ORS 197.247 (1991). Herring v. Lane County, 54 Or LUBA 417 (2007).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. A county's conclusion that OAR 660-010-0010 does not apply to a decision designating forest land as marginal lands under ORS 197.247 (1991) is harmless error, where the decision is supported by an analysis that is based on objective, empirical measurements of forest productivity consistent with the rule's requirements. Herring v. Lane County, 54 Or LUBA 417 (2007).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Where an empirical study conducted according to any applicable Oregon Department of Forestry standards determines that National Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) timber productivity ratings for particular soils do not accurately reflect the actual productivity of soils on the subject parcel, the local government may choose to rely on that study rather than on the NRCS ratings in determining whether the parcel is suitable for commercial forest uses under Goal 4. Just v. Linn County, 52 Or LUBA 145 (2006).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. That National Resource Conservation Service timber productivity ratings for certain soils lists typical characteristics and limitations of such soils, such as southern exposure and rock outcrops, does not mean that a particular parcel may not exhibit more severe limitations than reflected in those ratings. Just v. Linn County, 52 Or LUBA 145 (2006).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. That an Oregon Department of Forestry (ODF) publication requires a "higher intensity soil survey" by a "soil scientist" where there are no trees available for site index calculations does not mean that such a survey is necessary to determine whether property without trees is suitable for commercial forest species under Goal 4, where the survey requirement appears to apply to circumstances in which there is doubt regarding the accuracy of the National Resource and Conservation Service (NRCS) soil maps. The survey requirement has no bearing where it is not disputed that the NRCS soil maps are accurate. Just v. Linn County, 52 Or LUBA 145 (2006).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. A study that evaluates the actual timber productivity of the property, using methods that generate quantitative site index and cubic feet per acre per year data is sufficient to determine whether the property is "suitable for commercial forestry," notwithstanding the absence of published NRCS data for the soils on the property. Just v. Linn County, 52 Or LUBA 145 (2006).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Absent countervailing evidence, expert testimony expressing doubt that Ponderosa pine can be established on a parcel even under intensive management techniques is substantial evidence supporting the local government's conclusion that the property cannot produce Ponderosa pine. Just v. Linn County, 52 Or LUBA 145 (2006).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. A parcel consisting almost entirely of scattered trees interspersed with brush and open areas is not "other forested land" within the meaning of the Goal 4 definition of "forest lands." Just v. Linn County, 52 Or LUBA 145 (2006).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Counties have no inherent authority to allow uses in forest zones free of restrictions imposed by the Goal 4 rule, although counties may regulate more restrictively than required by the rule. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 52 Or LUBA 582 (2006).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-004-0025 divides the universe of uses allowed in forest zones into outright permitted and conditional uses, with limitations on the types of auxiliary and accessory uses allowed. It is inconsistent with the rule for a county to allow as an outright permitted "accessory" use a use that the rule expressly categorizes as a conditional use. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 52 Or LUBA 582 (2006).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Where a county's zoning code, like the Goal 4 rule, categorizes certain less intensive uses as outright permitted uses and similar but more intensive or permanent uses as conditional uses allowable on forest lands, an interpretation that the more intensive use is allowed outright as an accessory use to forest operations free of restrictions imposed on the less-intensive use is inconsistent with the structure of the code. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 52 Or LUBA 582 (2006).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Determining whether a "permanent logging equipment repair and storage" structure that is a listed conditional use under the Goal 4 rule but is not provided for at all under the county's forest zone is allowed as an outright permitted "accessory" use to forest operations requires interpretation of the text and context of the zoning code. Accordingly, LUBA's review of that interpretation is governed by ORS 197.829(1)(d) rather than the principle described in Friends of Neabeack Hill v. City of Philomath, 139 Or App 39, 911 P2d 250 (1996). Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 52 Or LUBA 582 (2006).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Contamination of drinking water through application of herbicides, pesticides and fertilizers on adjacent resource lands is not an occasional inconvenience accompanying rural life that rural residents must be willing to accept, and might provide the basis for a committed exception to Goal 4. Anderson v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 454 (2006).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Where a county has developed a rate of return methodology for distinguishing between forest lands and nonresource lands, but it did not rate some soils that the Natural Resource Conservation Service noted were not suitable for commercial tree production, it may not assume the unrated soils are nonresource lands that fall outside the broad Goal 4 definition of forest land. Sommer v. Josephine County, 49 Or LUBA 134 (2005).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. While OAR 660-006-0005(2) allows a county to rely upon an "alternative method" for determining forest productivity of soils instead of the method provided by the Natural Resource Conservation Service, the alternative methodology must be described or set forth in the record, and there must be evidence that the Oregon Department of Forestry has approved the methodology. Just v. Lane County, 49 Or LUBA 456 (2005).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. It is consistent with OAR 660-006-0005(2) to rely upon timber productivity data generated by the Oregon Department of Forestry (ODF), notwithstanding that the (1) methodology ODF used is not described in the record, and (2) there is no indication that the methodology used conforms to that described in a 1998 ODF publication. ODF is free to follow or approve a different methodology for determining timber productivity than that described in the 1998 ODF publication. Just v. Lane County, 49 Or LUBA 456 (2005).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Arguments that an acknowledged comprehensive plan policy that rates certain soils as unsuitable for commercial forestry is inconsistent with the county soil survey or uses inaccurate figures are impermissible collateral attacks on the policy. Doob v. Josephine County, 48 Or LUBA 227 (2004).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Although it may be appropriate to focus exclusively or preponderantly on the poor quality of soils for farm and forest use in deciding whether a particular tract qualifies as agricultural lands or forest lands, such an exclusive or preponderant focus on the tract itself is not appropriate in considering an irrevocably committed exception, where the focus is on the relationship of the adjoining properties to the tract. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 42 Or LUBA 235 (2002).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Speculative impacts on an adjoining rural subdivision from possible future aerial application of herbicides, pesticides and fertilizer and future movement of trucks to and from a 39-acre parcel for future farm and forest use are the occasional inconveniences that rural residents must be willing to accept and do not provide a basis for a committed exception to Goals 3 and 4. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 42 Or LUBA 235 (2002).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. A reasons exception for rural housing is not "necessary" under the last sentence of OAR 660-004-0022(2), if the county fails to demonstrate that land inside nearby urban growth boundaries or on nearby exception lands could not accommodate any identified market demand for housing, as required by OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b). Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 42 Or LUBA 235 (2002).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. "Forest lands," as that term is used in Goal 4, are not limited to lands that have been acknowledged as forest lands. Dept. of Transportation v. Coos County, 35 Or LUBA 285 (1998).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Where a soil study is needed for approval of a forest template dwelling, OAR 660-006-0005(2) requires that determination of soil capability be based on NRCS data, unless the local government finds that data inaccurate or unavailable, in which case it may consider "equivalent data" generated by an approved method of determining the capability of soils to produce wood fiber. Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. The absence of an NRCS productivity rating for a particular soil means only that NRCS data regarding that soil are "not available" within the meaning of OAR 660-006-0005(2). Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. ORS 215.750 does not, through its text, context or legislative history, limit the meaning of the term "wood fiber" to Douglas fir wood fiber, to the exclusion of other commercial tree species. Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Where a soil study, intended to be an alternative method allowed by OAR 660-006-0005, fails to determine the capability of non-rated soils for producing wood fiber other than Douglas fir, the standard in OAR 660-006-0005 for determining the productivity of the soil by generating equivalent data, has not been met. Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Where an NRCS soil survey does not rate certain soils, that nonrating cannot be used to determine the capacity of the soil for producing wood fiber and cannot be the basis of a conclusion that such soils produce 0-49 cf/ac/yr. The nonrating says nothing in quantitative terms or otherwise about the soil's capacity to produce wood fiber, and therefore is not "equivalent data" as required by OAR 660-006-0005 for an alternative method of soil assessment. Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. To comply with OAR 660-06-025(5)(a), a local government's findings must describe the farm or forest practices on adjacent and nearby forest lands, as well as explain why the proposed use does not significantly affect those practices. Findings that do not address all nearby lands and that simply refer to an adjacent property as a "woodlot" where a "small flock of sheep" is raised are inadequate. Donnelly v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 624 (1997).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Goal 4 does not apply to the adoption of a city tree-cutting regulation that has no application to acknowledged forestlands or lands suitable for commercial forest uses. Ramsey v. City of Portland, 30 Or LUBA 212 (1995).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. Where a county zoning district was acknowledged by LCDC as a forest zone, not a farm/forest zone, a regulation subsequently adopted by LCDC to apply immediately to uses in forest zones applies to uses within that zoning district. Testa v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 383 (1995).

8.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Generally. The general prohibition in the Forest Practices Act against counties applying their land use regulations to forest practices on forestlands located outside an urban growth boundary does not apply to a land use regulation prohibiting or regulating the siting or alteration of dwellings. Sanchez v. Clatsop County, 29 Or LUBA 26 (1995).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A post-acknowledgment plan amendment creating a new plan designation that excludes properties with productivity above roughly 80 cubic acre feet per year from eligibility for the new plan designation does not comply with the Goal 4 requirement to protect lands that are suitable for commercial forest uses because properties with productivity between 40 and 80 cubic acre feet per year are suitable for commercial forest uses unless additional factors make the soil unsuitable for commercial forest uses. DLCD v. Douglas County, 80 Or LUBA 98 (2019).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A PAPA that creates a new plan designation and zone and makes a parcel eligible for the new zone if it is at least 20 acres in size and if 60 percent of it is eligible for the new plan designation does not comply with the Goal 4 requirement to protect forest lands, even where the PAPA excludes lands that are suitable for commercial forest uses from eligibility for the new plan designation, where it does not also exclude nearby or adjacent lands which are necessary to permit forest operations or practices. DLCD v. Douglas County, 80 Or LUBA 98 (2019).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. While the mere presence of trees on property is not itself sufficient to establish that the property constitutes "other forested lands that maintain soil, air, water and fish and wildlife resources" under Goal 4, a county errs by concluding that property does not so qualify merely because it is not "predominately forested." In addition, a county errs by (1) concluding that property need not remain in forest zoning in order to protect wetlands merely because the applicant is "committed to development of the property without any disturbance to wetlands," without clarifying how the decision will ensure that result, and (2) failing to respond to testimony by neighbors that they have observed wildlife in the area and testimony by ODFW staff that they would expect such wildlife to exist. Cattoche v. Lane County, 79 Or LUBA 466 (2019).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. That a county's comprehensive plan was acknowledged in the 1990s to comply with Goal 4 does not shield the county from the obligation, at ORS 197.646(1) and (3), to apply subsequently adopted amendments to Goal 4 or the Goal 4 rule until the county incorporates those amendments into its comprehensive plan. Because the Goal 4 rule was amended in 2008 and 2011 to provide a prioritized list of data sources a county must consider when determining whether land is forest land subject to Goal 4, the county cannot simply apply its acknowledged comprehensive plan standards for identifying forest land, but must also apply the amended Goal 4 rule, until the county incorporates those rule amendments into its comprehensive plan. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 66 Or LUBA 45 (2012).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Because OAR 660-006-0010 provides a set of prioritized, mandatory sources of data and a prescribed alternative method that must be used to determine whether land is forest land subject to Goal 4, the applicability of OAR 660-006-0010 cannot be avoided by concluding, based on different data or different methodology, that land is not forest land subject to Goal 4. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 66 Or LUBA 45 (2012).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Despite some equivocal statements in a soil scientist's report regarding whether soil represents a variant of an existing soil type or a new unknown soil type, the county's conclusion that the soil represents a variant is supported by substantial evidence, where the only evidence on this point is the soil scientist's, and it is reasonably clear that he ultimately concluded that the soil is a variant. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 66 Or LUBA 45 (2012).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Where property includes a soil type that produces no wood fiber and another soil type that will produce some wood fiber, in determining whether the property qualifies as forest land because it is suitable for commercial forest uses, a local government does not err by considering that the property has both soil types. OAR 660-006-0010 is silent about how a local government must go about deciding whether a property with soils of differing productivity qualifies as suitable for commercial forest uses, and a local government does not err by considering the average productivity of those soils. Anderson v. Coos County, 62 Or LUBA 38 (2010).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Because OAR 660-006-0010 and 660-006-0005(2) require that local governments collect information about the cf/ac/year wood fiber productivity of land, it is appropriate to infer that the Land Conservation and Development Commission intended that that information actually be used in determining whether land qualifies as land that is suitable for commercial forest use. But it is not appropriate to infer that those rules require that only the required information may be considered in deciding whether land is suitable for commercial forest uses. Anderson v. Coos County, 62 Or LUBA 38 (2010).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Where LUBA determines that land with wood fiber productivity of 40 cf/ac/yr to 80 cf/ac/yr is "unlikely to be unsuitable for commercial forest use unless there are additional factors that render those moderately productive soils unsuitable for commercial forest use," a county may not fail to appeal LUBA's decision and in its decision following LUBA's remand of the county's first decision reverse the suitability presumption for land with that level of wood fiber productivity and place the burden of proof on opponents of the applicant seeking a second county decision that the land is not suitable for commercial forest uses. Anderson v. Coos County, 62 Or LUBA 38 (2010).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A forestry consultant's conclusion that land is not forest land subject to Goal 4 is not supported by the record, where it is based on an erroneous assumption that the county's comprehensive plan provides a productivity threshold of 80 cubic feet per acre of per year for lands suitable for commercial forestry. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 62 Or LUBA 80 (2010).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Where evidence in the record indicates that the subject property has the potential to produce between 47 and 76 cubic feet per acre per year in wood fiber, the property has moderately productive soils that preclude a finding that the property is not suitable for commercial forestry, unless the county identifies additional factors other than soils that render the property unsuitable for commercial forest use. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 62 Or LUBA 80 (2010).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. The cf/ac/yr of wood fiber data that must be considered in inventorying lands that are suitable for commercial forest use under OAR 660-006-0010 and 660-006-0005(2) are not the only data that may be considered, but they must be considered. Just v. Linn County, 60 Or LUBA 74 (2009).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Where a county considers a variety of evidence in concluding that a tract is not suitable for commercial forest use but does not consider the cf/ac/yr of wood fiber data that must be considered in inventorying lands that are suitable for commercial forest use under OAR 660-006-0010 and 660-006-0005(2), remand is required. Just v. Linn County, 60 Or LUBA 74 (2009).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. LUBA's decisions suggest that lands with wood fiber productivity of less than 20 cf/ac/yr may be unsuitable for commercial forest use unless there are compensating factors that make it suitable, whereas rural land with a wood fiber productivity of over 80 cf/ac/yr is almost certainly suitable for commercial forest use even if there are limiting factors. Land in the middle range is unlikely to be unsuitable for commercial forest use unless there are additional factors that render those moderately suitable soils unsuitable for commercial forest use. Just v. Linn County, 60 Or LUBA 74 (2009).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Whether land qualifies as suitable for commercial forest use need not be based solely on the data described in OAR 660-006-0010 and 660-006-0005(2), and can be based in part on other relevant factors. Just v. Linn County, 60 Or LUBA 74 (2009).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. The possibility that certain potential uses might cause some conflicts with existing farm and forest practices does not demonstrate that land is necessary for continued farm and forest operations. The fact that existing farm or forest operators propose conditions of approval for the subject property suggests that the property is not necessary to continue those farm or forest operations. Walker v. Josephine County, 60 Or LUBA 186 (2009).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. When a local code provision provides that property must be managed for wildlife or fisheries habitat to qualify as "other forested lands," and property is not managed for wildlife or fisheries under the county's management operations, property is not "other forested lands" for purposes of Goal 4 definition of forest lands. Walker v. Josephine County, 60 Or LUBA 186 (2009).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. In amending its inventory of Goal 4 forest lands, a county must consider the wood fiber productivity of the property in cubic feet/acre/year. That cubic feet/acre/year data must be from one of the sources authorized by OAR 660-006-0005(2). If that data is not available or is shown to be inaccurate, equivalent data may be used, as authorized by the rule and approved by the Oregon Department of Forestry. Anderson v. Coos County, 60 Or LUBA 247 (2009).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. If the cubic feet/acre/year wood fiber production analysis required by OAR 660-006-0010 and 660-006-0005(2) is not conclusive in establishing whether the property qualifies as forest lands, a county may then consider other factors, provided those other factors are "not accurately reflected in or accounted for in the data described by OAR 660-006-0010 and 660-006-0005(2)." Anderson v. Coos County, 60 Or LUBA 247 (2009).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A post-acknowledgement plan amendment that adopts a policy for protecting forest land that defines forest lands to exclude certain lands that fall within the statewide planning goal definition of "forest lands" must be remanded. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. An objective measurement of productive capacity is required in determining whether land is "forest land" under the Goal 4 definition, either based on published data for particular soils or on an empirical evaluation if published data is not available or not indicative of the property's actual capacity or potential for producing timber. A purely qualitative evaluation is not sufficient. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 54 Or LUBA 678 (2007).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A county's conclusion that the property is not suitable for commercial forest uses is supported by substantial evidence where the property owner prepared a study of the forestland productivity of the subject property, which was reviewed by a forester from the Department of Forestry (DOF), that indicated that the property is capable of producing only 1.8 cubic feet per acre per year of wood fiber, and the record includes letters from the DOF stating that any attempts to produce commercial stands on the property would be futile. Hecker v. Lane County, 52 Or LUBA 91 (2006).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. An applicant seeking to redesignate property as nonresource by demonstrating that the property is not forest land under the Statewide Planning Goal 4 (Forest Lands) definition of "forest lands" need not rely exclusively on the Natural Resources Conservation Service productivity ratings, and may attempt to contradict those figures with empirical studies of the actual productivity of the soils on the subject property. Hecker v. Lane County, 52 Or LUBA 91 (2006).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Expert testimony is not required in order to satisfy the requirement that a demonstration of forest productivity of a property be shown by empirical evidence; a study, prepared by an applicant seeking to redesignate the subject property as nonresource, which is subsequently reviewed by a Department of Forestry forester, is evidence upon which a reasonable person would rely. Hecker v. Lane County, 52 Or LUBA 91 (2006).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Where an empirical study conducted according to any applicable Oregon Department of Forestry standards determines that National Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) timber productivity ratings for particular soils do not accurately reflect the actual productivity of soils on the subject parcel, the local government may choose to rely on that study rather than on the NRCS ratings in determining whether the parcel is suitable for commercial forest uses under Goal 4. Just v. Linn County, 52 Or LUBA 145 (2006).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. That National Resource Conservation Service timber productivity ratings for certain soils lists typical characteristics and limitations of such soils, such as southern exposure and rock outcrops, does not mean that a particular parcel may not exhibit more severe limitations than reflected in those ratings. Just v. Linn County, 52 Or LUBA 145 (2006).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. That an Oregon Department of Forestry (ODF) publication requires a "higher intensity soil survey" by a "soil scientist" where there are no trees available for site index calculations does not mean that such a survey is necessary to determine whether property without trees is suitable for commercial forest species under Goal 4, where the survey requirement appears to apply to circumstances in which there is doubt regarding the accuracy of the National Resource and Conservation Service (NRCS) soil maps. The survey requirement has no bearing where it is not disputed that the NRCS soil maps are accurate. Just v. Linn County, 52 Or LUBA 145 (2006).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A study that evaluates the actual timber productivity of the property, using methods that generate quantitative site index and cubic feet per acre per year data is sufficient to determine whether the property is "suitable for commercial forestry," notwithstanding the absence of published NRCS data for the soils on the property. Just v. Linn County, 52 Or LUBA 145 (2006).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Absent countervailing evidence, expert testimony expressing doubt that Ponderosa pine can be established on a parcel even under intensive management techniques is substantial evidence supporting the local government's conclusion that the property cannot produce Ponderosa pine. Just v. Linn County, 52 Or LUBA 145 (2006).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A parcel consisting almost entirely of scattered trees interspersed with brush and open areas is not "other forested land" within the meaning of the Goal 4 definition of "forest lands." Just v. Linn County, 52 Or LUBA 145 (2006).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A county errs in construing a comprehensive plan finding that "lands producing less than eighty cubic feet per acre [cf/ac/yr] per year are generally not used for commercial uses" to define a threshold of 80 cf/ac/yr for "forest lands" protected by Goal 4, where the text and context indicate that the finding is a statement of historical fact not a minimum threshold, and the county's interpretation is undercut by the fact that the county's Goal 4 plan designations include lands capable of producing 85 cf/ac/yr as prime timberlands, and lands capable of producing considerably less than 80 cf/ac/yr as nonprime timberlands. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 167 (2005).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Goal 4 does not permit local governments to determine whether land is "forest land" subject to the goal based on the absence of timber productivity ratings for soils or the assumption that unrated soils cannot produce timber. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 167 (2005).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Some measurement of timber productivity is essential to any determination as to whether land is suitable for commercial forest uses under Goal 4, although such measurements need not be expressed in cubic feet per acre per year. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 50 Or LUBA 444 (2005).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A landowner's representation to Curry County that land is "forest land" under Goal 4, in order to obtain a large tract forest dwelling under ORS 215.740, while representing to Coos County that the same land is not "forest land," may be less than forthright, but it does not provide a basis for reversal or remand of a Coos County decision declaring that the land is not forest land. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 50 Or LUBA 444 (2005).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Economic analyses that rely on speculative assumptions regarding economic conditions, prices and costs 60 years in the future are inherently unreliable, and an impermissible means of determining whether land is forest land subject to Goal 4. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 50 Or LUBA 444 (2005).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. The fact that two kinds of commercial tree species on a parcel are infected with incurable diseases is not a basis to conclude that the parcel is not "forest land" under the Goal 4 definition, absent a showing that the property cannot be restocked with non-susceptible commercial tree species or with disease-resistant seedlings. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 50 Or LUBA 444 (2005).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A local government's finding that land is not "other forested lands that maintain soil, air, water and fish and wildlife resources" under the Goal 4 definition is inadequate, where the finding does not address ODFW testimony that the land must remain protected under Goal 4 to protect an adjacent estuary. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 50 Or LUBA 444 (2005).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Where a county has developed a rate of return methodology for distinguishing between forest lands and nonresource lands, but it did not rate some soils that the Natural Resource Conservation Service noted were not suitable for commercial tree production, it may not assume the unrated soils are nonresource lands that fall outside the broad Goal 4 definition of forest land. Sommer v. Josephine County, 49 Or LUBA 134 (2005).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Lands that are planned and zoned for resource use under Goals 3 and 4 may be redesignated for nonresource use by applying an acknowledged comprehensive plan policy that establishes standards for such redesignations. Where such a specific policy and local standards have been acknowledged, they apply in place of more general statewide planning goals standards that would otherwise apply to such a redesignation. Sommer v. Josephine County, 49 Or LUBA 134 (2005).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. That some trees are present on a parcel and that those trees presumably play some role in slowing erosion and supporting air and water quality is not a sufficient basis to conclude that the parcel is "other forested lands that maintain soil, air, water and fish and wildlife resources," under the Goal 4 definition of forest lands. Doob v. Josephine County, 48 Or LUBA 227 (2004).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Where the question of whether a property qualifies as forest land so that it may not be considered for a comprehensive plan Rural Use map designation is not governed by the same legal standard that governed the county's finding in a prior decision on the same application that the subject property does not qualify as forest land subject to Goal 4, the same issue is not presented. Therefore, even if the Goal 4 issue was conclusively resolved in the earlier decision, a different decision concerning whether the property qualifies as forest land in the second decision is not barred by the Beck v. City of Tillamook waiver principle. Rutigliano v. Jackson County, 47 Or LUBA 470 (2004).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. An ambiguous county code provision that allows lands that were incorrectly identified as agricultural or forest land under Goals 3 and 4 to be rezoned for rural residential use is correctly interpreted to require that an applicant show that a particular property is neither agricultural land nor forest land because land will frequently qualify as both agricultural and forest land and the Land Conservation and Development Commission's rules allow such lands to be zoned for either for exclusive farm use or for forest use. Rutigliano v. Jackson County, 47 Or LUBA 470 (2004).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A county does not err in interpreting its code provision to require that it compute the average cubic foot per year production capability based on the percentage of different soil types on the property. Rutigliano v. Jackson County, 47 Or LUBA 470 (2004).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. The presence of some trees on property does not necessarily establish that the subject property is "suitable for commercial forest uses," within the meaning of Goal 4. Palmer v. Lane County, 44 Or LUBA 334 (2003).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. An argument by petitioner that a property's soils are sufficient to produce 20 cu/ft/ac/yr of wood fiber and a finding by a county that a property's soils produce less than 50 cu/ft/ac/yr of wood fiber are not sufficient to establish as a matter of law that the property is or is not forest land, where neither the petitioner nor the county establish that the threshold they rely on is an adopted or acknowledged threshold for determining whether property is forest land subject to Goal 4. Palmer v. Lane County, 44 Or LUBA 334 (2003).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. LUBA will sustain a county finding that property should not be viewed as "other forested lands that maintain soil, air, water and fish and wildlife resources," within the meaning of Goal 4, where (1) the county finds that placing property in a forest zone and allowing forest operations on the property would have more negative impacts on a property's wetlands and fish and wildlife habitat than placing the property in a low density residential zone with a beaches and dunes protective overlay, and (2) petitioner offers no challenge to that reasoning. Palmer v. Lane County, 44 Or LUBA 334 (2003).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Whether property is "suitable for commercial forest uses" under the Goal 4 definition of forest land depends on the property's capability for production of commercial tree species, not necessarily the past or current level of production, or whether the property is or could be part of a commercial-scale timber business. Potts v. Clackamas County, 42 Or LUBA 1 (2002).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Petitioner fails to overcome the county's determination that property is forest land under Goal 4, and fails to demonstrate as a matter of law that land is not "suitable for commercial forest uses," where petitioner's own expert testifies that notwithstanding limitations on productivity the subject property is in a "medium productivity range" and would yield $81,300 worth of commercial timber at 50 years, after an investment of $7,450. Potts v. Clackamas County, 42 Or LUBA 1 (2002).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A comprehensive plan policy that allegedly was adopted to clarify that certain county soils that had never been rated for forest productivity were assumed to be non-forest soils was ineffective to accomplish that purpose, where the plan policy also provided an alternative procedure for determining the suitability of soils for forest use to be applied where "a determination cannot be made" using the county's soil rating system. Doob v. Josephine County, 41 Or LUBA 303 (2002).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Where the applicant presents argument and evidence that property designated and zoned for forest use is not in fact forest land protected by Goal 4, making an exception to that goal unnecessary to rezone the property for residential use, the county errs in denying the rezoning application without addressing the issue or explaining why it believes the subject property is protected by Goal 4. Potts v. Clackamas County, 40 Or LUBA 371 (2001).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. The restrictive definition of cubic feet per acre per year located in OAR 660-006-0005(2) does not operate as an approval criterion for determining whether land is forest land under Goal 4, because that definition is only used in OAR chapter 660 division 6 to govern approval of dwellings in forest zones. Dept. of Transportation v. Coos County, 35 Or LUBA 285 (1998).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. When determining whether land is "forest land" under the Goal 4 suitability standard, if the subject property is smaller than the county's base forest zone minimum parcel size, all of the subject property, not a portion of it, must be considered. DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 728 (1997).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A finding that the subject property contains no identified Goal 5 resources is not adequate to address the Goal 4 requirement that "other forested lands" be designated as forest lands if such lands are needed to maintain soil, water, air, fish and wildlife resources. DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 728 (1997).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Where the county concludes that the subject property is not forestland as defined by Goal 4 by defining "commercial forest use" to mean "profitable forest use," that conclusion is unacceptably vague and not in accord with the Goal 4 definition of "commercial forest land." DLCD v. Coos County, 32 Or LUBA 430 (1997).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Where the county chooses to define "nearby forest lands" for purposes of Goal 4 to only include forestlands that are actually contiguous to the subject property, the county has effectively eliminated the goal requirement that it consider not only adjacent parcels, but also nearby parcels. DLCD v. Coos County, 32 Or LUBA 430 (1997).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. A county's "clarifying policy," which substantively changes the requirements for compliance with the county's policy implementing Goal 4, amounts to an improper amendment of the county's comprehensive plan. Doob v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 275 (1996).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Where the findings indicate that there are soil, air, water, and fish and wildlife resources on the subject property, a county cannot rely solely on a finding that less than a majority of the site is forested to reach a conclusion that the site is not "other forested lands" within the meaning of Goal 4. Brown v. Coos County, 31 Or LUBA 142 (1996).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. In determining whether "other forested lands" exist on a parcel for purposes of Goal 4 analysis, while the amount of actual forested area on the parcel is relevant, it is only part of the equation. Brown v. Coos County, 31 Or LUBA 142 (1996).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Where a local government properly determines certain land is not farm or forestland subject to Statewide Planning Goals 3 and 4, an exception to Goals 3 and 4 is not required to support comprehensive plan and zone map amendments designating such property for residential use. Bates v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 21 (1994).

8.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Land Definition. Where the acknowledged county comprehensive plan includes a methodology for rating forest soil types, a decision identifying and applying a soil type not included in the acknowledged plan provisions, to support a plan map amendment and zone change to nonresource designations, has the effect of improperly amending the acknowledged plan without following post-acknowledgment amendment procedures. Doob v. Josephine County, 27 Or LUBA 293 (1994).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. Where the county makes a finding that an electrical transmission project "will not force a significant change in, or significantly increase the cost of, accepted farming or forest practices on agriculture or forest lands," and "forest practices" are defined pursuant to the Oregon Forest Practices Act, petitioners' argument that the proposed transmission line will remove 36 acres from forest production is not sufficient to explain why the development will result in "a significant change in * * * forest practices * * * on * * * forest lands." OAR 660-006-0025(5). OAR 660-006-0025(5) contemplates the approval of limited non-forest uses on forest land, including the removal of some forest land from production to accommodate a use that is allowed as a conditional use on forest land, including clearing a 100-foot right-of-way with 25 feet of clearance from the ground to the lines, for the purpose of constructing electric transmission lines on forest lands. Tilla-Bay Farms, Inc. v. Tillamook County, 79 Or LUBA 235 (2019).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. The definition of "transmission line" for purposes of ORS 215.276 is inapposite for purposes of determining whether, under OAR 660-006-0025(4)(q), a liquefied natural gas pipeline is a "new distribution line." McCaffree v. Coos County, 70 Or LUBA 15 (2014).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. The text of OAR 660-006-0025(4)(q) reflects that for purposes of conditional uses that are allowed in the Forest zone, all non-electrical lines with rights-of-way of up to 50 feet in width are classified as "new distribution lines." McCaffree v. Coos County, 70 Or LUBA 15 (2014).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. A local government errs in concluding that the uses specified in OAR 660-004-0028(3) are impracticable because the property is not capable of supporting commercial levels of agriculture. The test under the rule is not whether the property is capable of supporting commercial levels of agriculture. Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 57 (2007).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. A metal storage structure placed on a permanent foundation that is designed and intended to support multiple forest operations over multiple growth cycles is not a "temporary on-site structure" within the meaning of OAR 660-006-0025(2)(b), which is limited to temporary structures that are not designed to remain for the entire planting to harvesting growth cycle and are removed when a particular forest practice has concluded. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 52 Or LUBA 582 (2006).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. Counties have no inherent authority to allow uses in forest zones free of restrictions imposed by the Goal 4 rule, although counties may regulate more restrictively than required by the rule. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 52 Or LUBA 582 (2006).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. OAR 660-004-0025 divides the universe of uses allowed in forest zones into outright permitted and conditional uses, with limitations on the types of auxiliary and accessory uses allowed. It is inconsistent with the rule for a county to allow as an outright permitted "accessory" use a use that the rule expressly categorizes as a conditional use. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 52 Or LUBA 582 (2006).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. Riparian protection measures required under the Forest Practices Act are not "forest practices" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0028(3)(c), and a county may consider setbacks and other riparian protection measures in determining whether forest land is irrevocably committed to non-resource use. Gordon v. Polk County, 50 Or LUBA 647 (2005).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. Whether property is "suitable for commercial forest uses" under the Goal 4 definition of forest land depends on the property's capability for production of commercial tree species, not necessarily the past or current level of production, or whether the property is or could be part of a commercial-scale timber business. Potts v. Clackamas County, 42 Or LUBA 1 (2002).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. Under ORS 215.705(4), an application for a dwelling in a mixed farm/forest zone must comply with the siting standards appropriate for the predominant use of the tract on January 1, 1993. A showing that no farm use of the property, as that term is defined in ORS 215.203(2), was occurring on the tract as of January 1, 1993, does not mean that, by default, the property was predominantly in forest use on that date. Gambee v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 420 (2000).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. ORS 215.705(4) requires that a county must determine whether farm or forest uses predominated on a "tract" on January 1, 1993. However, the configuration of the tract is considered as it exists as of the time an application for a dwelling is submitted. Once the scope of the tract is identified, the inquiry turns to whether farm or forest uses predominated on that tract on January 1, 1993. Gambee v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 420 (2000).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. In considering which of two uses, farm or forest, predominate on a tract as of January 1, 1993, a county may consider more than the number of acres devoted to farm or forest use to determine predominant use. However, those considerations must flow from the use that was made of the tract on January 1, 1993. Thus, income from farm and forest uses and the amount of activity directed at those uses may be considered, but historic uses and soil capability may not. Gambee v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 420 (2000).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. Portions of a tract that are used for nonfarm or nonforest activities have no relevance to the inquiry under ORS 215.705(4), which requires a county to determine whether farm or forest uses predominated on a tract as of January 1, 1993. If only a small portion of the property can reasonably be considered to be in farm or forest use, the county need only consider that portion in its determination of predominant use. Gambee v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 420 (2000).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. There is no intrinsic relationship between the size of a parcel and whether the uses on it are "intensively developed" for purposes of the Goal 4 Rule. It is the nature and interrelationship of the uses that determine intensity, not the accidental fact of whether the uses are situated on a larger or smaller parcel. Donnelly v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 624 (1997).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. A local government misconstrues the meaning of "intensively developed recreational uses" under OAR 660-06-025(4)(e) when it assesses intensity as a product of the relative density of the proposed use with respect to the undeveloped portions of the parcel. Donnelly v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 624 (1997).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. For purposes of determining whether an RV camp is "intensively developed" and hence inappropriate "for a forest environment" under the Goal 4 Rule, a local government must compare the proposed use to other campgrounds on forest lands, or establish why it is appropriate to compare the proposed use with RV parks on nonresource lands. Donnelly v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 624 (1997).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. The question under Goal 4 is not whether a campground on forest lands is appropriately rural (i.e., non-urban) in intensity, but whether the campground's intensity of development is "appropriate in a forest environment." Donnelly v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 624 (1997).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. Allowing a 180-day period of occupancy is inconsistent with the Goal 4 rule's limitation on the use of campgrounds to "overnight temporary use." Donnelly v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 624 (1997).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. A requirement that a significant amount of firearms training occur at a firearms training facility is not demanding enough under OAR 660-06-025(4)(m), because it places no limitation on other activities not directly related to or justified by firearms training. J.C. Reeves Corp. v. Washington County, 31 Or LUBA 115 (1996).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. OAR 660-33-030(6) requires that the "more detailed data" upon which the county may rely in determining soil capability for forest uses be related to the SCS soils classification system and, therefore, before the county can rely on more detailed data, the county must establish that the source of the data has the requisite knowledge of the classification system, including the qualifications and expertise to classify soils under the system. Thomas v. Wasco County, 30 Or LUBA 302 (1996).

8.3 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Uses. A finding that soils could be reclassified to Class VII does not establish that the soils are Class VII or that even if they are Class VII, the classification renders the site unsuitable for forest use without evaluation of other relevant factors. Thomas v. Wasco County, 30 Or LUBA 302 (1996).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where the record contains evidence that the fire safety measures required for a proposed solar facility exceed those required for an existing Christmas tree farm and extensive observations of fires involving solar panels but no evidence of incidents of injury to fire suppression personnel from electrified solar panels, a conclusion that the solar facility will not "significantly increase risks to fire suppression personnel" for purposes of OAR 660-006-0025(5)(b) is supported by substantial evidence, even though electrical equipment is present on a solar facility and not present on a Christmas tree farm. York v. Clackamas County, 81 Or LUBA 20 (2020).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. "In-home commercial activities" are not authorized by right in resource zones, even where (1) such activities are accessory to residential uses and would have minimal to no impact on resource lands, (2) such an approach would streamline local permitting by avoiding the conditional use process required for home occupations, and (3) such activities are consistent with a model ordinance prepared by DLCD. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where certain activities are allowed as accessory to a home occupation use, they may not be allowed through a Type I process (i.e., ministerial review of an application based on clear and objective standards and criteria) that does not provide the review that is required by ORS 215.448(1) and (4). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 80 (2019).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A condition of approval requiring an applicant that has applied to site a solar facility in an area currently used for growing Christmas trees to offer a fire safety training course to the local fire district is inadequate to establish that "[t]he proposed use will not * * * significantly increase risks to fire suppression personnel" for purposes of OAR 660-006-0025(5)(b) and local code provisions implementing that rule. Chang v. Clackamas County, 80 Or LUBA 321 (2019).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Petitioner's argument that a proposed detached accessory structure for an "art studio" is not a permissible "accessory" structure allowed in the Impacted Forest Lands (F-2) zone provides no basis for reversal or remand where petitioner cites to no local code, state statute or administrative rule governing forest lands, suggesting limitations on accessory structures to a primary dwelling that is otherwise allowed on forest lands under state law. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 78 Or LUBA 272 (2018).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A petitioner's argument that locating an art studio several hundred feet from an existing dwelling on forest land instead of adjacent to the dwelling and within the dwelling's existing fire breaks does not provide a basis for reversal or remand, where the petitioner does not identify any rule or other requirement that an accessory structure be clustered with the existing dwelling. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 78 Or LUBA 272 (2018).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. LUBA will reject petitioner's argument that a proposed "art studio" is in reality an "accessory dwelling" in the forest zone in violation of state and local law where the county hearings officer imposed several conditions intended to ensure that the proposed "art studio" would not be used as an "accessory dwelling," and petitioner's speculation that the applicant might violate one or more conditions of approval provides no basis for reversal or remand. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 78 Or LUBA 272 (2018).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A hearings officer's finding that land in the forest zone upon which development is proposed is "flat" is not supported by substantial evidence where the finding is supported only by the applicant's assertion that the relevant slope is "less than 3" percent, but the record includes two topographic maps that appear to show that the slope exceeds 10 percent, which if so triggers additional fire safety requirements. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 78 Or LUBA 272 (2018).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. In forest zones ORS 215.760 authorizes "agricultural buildings" as defined by ORS 455.315 but does not authorize "equine facilities," as defined by the statute. A county code provision that purported to define "agricultural building" broadly enough to allow equine facilities in the county's forest zone would be more permissive than ORS 215.760, and would therefore be inconsistent with ORS 215.760. Kaplowitz v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 386 (2016).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where the issue is whether a statute and corresponding code provision that both authorize agricultural buildings and prohibit their conversion to other uses was in effect when a horse barn/arena was constructed in 2000, and the statute and corresponding code provision were first enacted in 2014, LUBA will conclude that the statutory and code authorization and prohibition do not apply to the horse barn/arena. Kaplowitz v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 386 (2016).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A board of county commissioners erroneously interprets a county zoning standard that replicates the OAR 660-006-0025(5)(a) requirement that certain nonforest uses in forest zones must not "[f]orce a significant change in, or significantly increase the cost of" forest practices, where under the board of commissioners' interpretation that standard is treated as a broader "significant impacts" standard that is unconnected to "costs" or "changes in" "forest practices." Oregon Pipeline Company v. Clatsop County, 71 Or LUBA 246 (2015).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Even under the deferential standard of review required by ORS 197.829(1) and Siporen v. City of Medford, 349 Or 247, 260-61, 243 P3d 776 (2010), interpreting a generally worded forest land protection policy so strictly that a use that is expressly allowed as a conditional use in the forest zone could never be approved is inconsistent with the text of the policy and implausible. Oregon Pipeline Company v. Clatsop County, 71 Or LUBA 246 (2015).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. The meaning of "permanent facility for the primary processing of forest products" allowed as a conditional use in forest zones is unclear, but the plain dictionary meanings of "primary" and "processing" indicate that the phrase means the initial or first steps in transforming raw forest products into products for market, manufacturing or other commercial use. Fritch v. Clackamas County, 68 Or LUBA 184 (2013).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. The "primary processing of forest products" allowed as a conditional use in forest zones does not include subsequent steps in the process that constitute manufacturing. Fritch v. Clackamas County, 68 Or LUBA 184 (2013).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. The "primary processing of forest products" allowed as a conditional use in forest zones includes the initial steps employed in a log home manufacturing facility, such as log debarking, milling and curing or kilning of lumber, but does not include the portions of a log home manufacturing facility that involve the partial assembly of log homes. Fritch v. Clackamas County, 68 Or LUBA 184 (2013).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. The "primary processing of forest products" allowed as a conditional use in forest zones does not include the portions of a log home manufacturing facility that involve custom notching and shaping of log ends to form the interlocking components of the walls of a log home. Fritch v. Clackamas County, 68 Or LUBA 184 (2013).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. In approving a wedding venue and event business in a forest zone under a code provision that allows, on a "temporary" basis, uses otherwise not allowable in the applicable zone, a county must consider whether the proposed use is properly characterized as a "home occupation," which is an allowed conditional use in the forest zone, subject to restrictions. If the proposed is properly characterized as a home occupation allowable in the forest zone, then the code does not allow the county to issue a temporary use permit for that use. White v. Lane County, 68 Or LUBA 423 (2013).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where a county fails to implement a new administrative rule, pursuant to ORS 197.646(3) the rule applies directly to county land use decisions until the county amends its code to implement the rule. However, once the county implements the Goal 4 rule at OAR 660-006-0025 by adopting the substance of the rule into its land use code, ORS 197.646(3) does not operate to apply the rule directly to nonforest uses the county approves in a forest zone. White v. Lane County, 68 Or LUBA 423 (2013).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. OAR 660-033-0140 provides that certain permits on agricultural and forest land are void after two years if the use is not initiated within that time period. Where the county development code includes language that is nearly identical to much of the language in OAR 660-033-0140, it is reasonable to conclude the code was adopted to implement OAR 660-033-0140. Gould v. Deschutes County, 67 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where a county makes it sufficiently clear that it adopted its similarly worded version of OAR 660-033-0140 to apply in all county zones, including those that apply to agricultural and forest lands, the county code version of OAR 660-033-0140 applies in place of OAR 660-033-0140 on agricultural and forest lands after the county code version of OAR 660-033-0140 is acknowledged. Gould v. Deschutes County, 67 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. OAR 660-006-0025(4)(q) authorizes a 50-foot right-of-way for gas pipelines in forest zones. It is not inconsistent with OAR 660-006-0025(4)(q), and is expressly authorized by ORS 772.510(3), for a utility provider to obtain a temporary construction easement for stockpiling, storage, etc., in addition to the 50-foot permanent right-of-way authorized under the rule. Citizens Against LNG v. Coos County, 63 Or LUBA 162 (2011).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. LUBA will affirm a hearings officer's determination that a short-term vacation rental operated using a dwelling on a forest-zoned parcel is a commercial "visitor accommodation" use not permitted in the forest zone rather than a residential use permitted in the zone, where the county's code distinguishes between residential tenancies arranged on a month-to-month basis or longer and commercial "visitor accommodations" with a tenancy less than 30 days. Davis v. Jackson County, 63 Or LUBA 486 (2011).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where the Goal 4 rule incorporates a definition in the Oregon Structural Specialty Code, the version of the Code in effect when the Goal 4 rule was adopted controls, not the Code as subsequently amended, to avoid running afoul of constitutional prohibitions on delegating legislative authority. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Jefferson County, 62 Or LUBA 443 (2011).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Under OAR 660-006-0025(4)(w), which authorizes "private accommodations for fishing" limited to no more than "15 guest rooms," LCDC intended to authorize a single fishing lodge with up to 15 "rooms," meaning internal private sleeping areas within a larger structure, not 15 separate cabins with permanent provisions for living, sleeping, cooking and sanitation. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Jefferson County, 62 Or LUBA 443 (2011).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Single family dwellings, with permanent provisions for living, sleeping, cooking and sanitation, do not constitute "guest rooms" or "private accommodations for fishing" under OAR 660-006-0025(4)(w), even if the dwellings are not permanently occupied. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Jefferson County, 62 Or LUBA 443 (2011).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Exclusive owner-occupancy of a "guest room" in a fishing accommodation is likely inconsistent with the intent of OAR 660-006-0025(4)(w), which contemplates a fishing lodge-type accommodation with rooms temporarily rented to and occupied by visitors. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Jefferson County, 62 Or LUBA 443 (2011).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Occupancy of a guest room in a private accommodation for fishing authorized under OAR 660-006-0025(4)(w) for up to six months per year is not "temporary" occupancy for purposes of the rule. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Jefferson County, 62 Or LUBA 443 (2011).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where a proposed private accommodation for fishing is located on a large reservoir, the arms of which are easily accessible by boat but which are controlled by different fishing seasons, the limitation in OAR 660-006-0025(4)(w) that guest rooms at a fishing lodge be occupied during the "fishing season" is not limited to the particular arm of the lake that the lodge is located on. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Jefferson County, 62 Or LUBA 443 (2011).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Depending on the circumstances and a particular proposal for private accommodations for fishing, the county may have to impose conditions necessary to ensure that the accommodations will be occupied "for the purpose of fishing" and not other purposes. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Jefferson County, 62 Or LUBA 443 (2011).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. The requirement that a dwelling sought to be replaced be a "building * * * which is occupied in whole or in part" does not include a requirement for continuous occupancy. Dalton v. Polk County, 61 Or LUBA 27 (2010).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. When a replacement dwelling approval standard requires that the dwelling sought to be replaced have been "lawfully constructed," if there is a final unappealed decision that removed a use restriction from a lawfully established dwelling, the fact that that decision may have been incorrect does not change the fact that dwelling was legally established and may be replaced. Dalton v. Polk County, 61 Or LUBA 27 (2010).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where a proposed replacement dwelling is in a forest zone rather than an EFU-zone, case law regarding the interpretation of "intact" for purposes of establishing that a dwelling sought to be replaced has "intact exterior walls" is not binding on the local government. Dalton v. Polk County, 61 Or LUBA 27 (2010).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. That a park model recreational vehicle (RV) is defined in the state building code as one type of recreational vehicle does not mean that the permanent installation of park model RVs on rural forest land is equivalent to temporary campground use by self-propelled or pull-behind RVs, under Oregon's statewide planning goals, administrative rules, and implementing land use regulations. Campers Cove Resort v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 62 (2010).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A county does not err in failing to define a geographic area of analysis for the impacts of a non-forest use in a forest zone under a code "significant change/increase" standard that does not implement the similar significant change/increase standard applicable to EFU zones and that, unlike the statute, does not require analysis of impacts on "surrounding lands" or any other particular geographic area. Comden v. Coos County, 56 Or LUBA 214 (2008).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Findings that describe the only forest practice that adjoining timber operators identified as impacted by proposed mining on forest land are adequate for purposes of a code significant change/increase standard, where the code standard does not implement the statutory significant change/increase standard, and the petitioners do not explain why the code standard requires an exhaustive description of all forest practices on nearby lands. Comden v. Coos County, 56 Or LUBA 214 (2008).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. LUBA will affirm a county's finding that fire protection measures that typically apply to logging operations are sufficient to ensure that a proposed mining operation in a forest zone will not significantly increase fire hazards, notwithstanding that a permanent mining operation will have greater duration and intensity than a seasonal logging operation, where the petitioners cite to no evidence substantiating their assertion that the nature and intensity of the mining operation require more stringent fire protection measures than logging operations. Comden v. Coos County, 56 Or LUBA 214 (2008).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. In addressing a requirement that a proposed use on forestland not interfere with nearby farming practices, a county must address the impacts on an adjacent parcel when the petitioner alleges that there will be adverse impacts on the adjacent parcel. Tennant v. Polk County, 56 Or LUBA 455 (2008).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. In order to constitute a private park that can be allowed on Goal 4 forestlands pursuant to OAR 660-006-0025, a proposed use must not only be a public recreational use, but also must be appropriate in a forest environment. Tennant v. Polk County, 56 Or LUBA 455 (2008).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. In considering whether a paintball operation is appropriate for a forest environment as an allowed private park on forestlands, the fact that the paintball operation will be noisy does not in itself render the use inappropriate for a forest environment. Tennant v. Polk County, 56 Or LUBA 455 (2008).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. OAR 660-034-0035—and by cross-reference OAR 660-034-0040—provide a list of uses that are allowed in state and local parks, some of which are generally not allowed on resource lands without an exception to the resource goals. However, no exception is required if the uses are authorized in a state or local park master plan. Rural Thurston Inc. v. Lane County, 55 Or LUBA 382 (2007).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. By implication, some of the park uses listed in OAR 660-034-0035(2) do not require a goal exception, even if there is no acknowledged park master plan. However, the rule does not specify which uses do or do not require a goal exception in the absence of a park master plan. Rural Thurston Inc. v. Lane County, 55 Or LUBA 382 (2007).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Park uses listed in OAR 660-034-0035(2) that are passive, low-intensity uses similar to those allowed in campgrounds in resource zones do not require a goal exception to be placed in state or local parks. Rural Thurston Inc. v. Lane County, 55 Or LUBA 382 (2007).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. The scope of "accepted farming or forest practices" that must be evaluated under the no significant change/increase standard is a fact-specific inquiry. A hearings officer does not err in evaluating the scope and intensity of "accepted forest practices" on adjacent lands based on the forest uses currently or recently occurring in the area, and need not assume that forest practices on adjacent parcels will occur at the most intensive level possible. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 53 Or LUBA 290 (2007).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A metal storage structure placed on a permanent foundation that is designed and intended to support multiple forest operations over multiple growth cycles is not a "temporary on-site structure" within the meaning of OAR 660-006-0025(2)(b), which is limited to temporary structures that are not designed to remain for the entire planting to harvesting growth cycle and are removed when a particular forest practice has concluded. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 52 Or LUBA 582 (2006).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Counties have no inherent authority to allow uses in forest zones free of restrictions imposed by the Goal 4 rule, although counties may regulate more restrictively than required by the rule. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 52 Or LUBA 582 (2006).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. OAR 660-004-0025 divides the universe of uses allowed in forest zones into outright permitted and conditional uses, with limitations on the types of auxiliary and accessory uses allowed. It is inconsistent with the rule for a county to allow as an outright permitted "accessory" use a use that the rule expressly categorizes as a conditional use. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 52 Or LUBA 582 (2006).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where two parcels are divided by a fee interest in a strip of land owned by the county for use as a public roadway, the two parcels are not contiguous and are not part of the same "tract." In that circumstance, where one of the parcels already contains a dwelling, the approval of a forest template dwelling on the other parcel does not violate ORS 215.750(4)(d), which prohibits the approval of a forest template dwelling on a "tract" that already includes a dwelling. Lovinger v. Lane County, 51 Or LUBA 29 (2006).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where a strip of land was transferred in fee title to the county for roadway purposes, the resulting units of land lying on either side of that strip do not violate the requirement in ORS 92.014 (1955) that "[n]o person shall create a street or way for the purpose of partitioning a parcel of land without the approval of the agency or body authorized to give approval of plans for subdivision," where the record does not indicate that the roadway was created "for the purpose of partitioning land." Accordingly, the county does not err in determining that one of those resulting units of land is a lawfully created "parcel," and complies with the requirement in ORS 215.705(1)(a) that the lot or parcel on which a forest template dwelling is proposed was lawfully created. Lovinger v. Lane County, 51 Or LUBA 29 (2006).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where the local code fire siting standards require that secondary fuel breaks (i.e., a fuel break extending 130 feet in all directions around structures) "or their equivalent" apply to new residences, the county does not err in determining that secondary fuel breaks are not required in the riparian setback area, where the findings adopted in support of the riparian vegetation setback regulations acknowledge that riparian vegetation provides a sufficient natural barrier against the spread of fire. Lovinger v. Lane County, 51 Or LUBA 29 (2006).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Siting requirements for forest template dwellings that require that impacts and fire risks be "minimized" govern where a proposed dwelling should be sited rather than whether a dwelling should be approved. Fessler v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 844 (2000).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. OAR 629-640-0100(2), an administrative rule implementing the Forest Practices Act (FPA), only applies to an "operation," which is a "commercial activity relating to the growing or harvesting of forest tree species." Because the clearing of a firebreak as a condition of approval for a forest template dwelling is not such an activity, the administrative rule requirements do not apply. Fessler v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 844 (2000).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. The limitations on activities in public parks imposed by OAR 660-034-0035 do not apply to private parks allowed on agricultural and forest lands under ORS 215.283(2)(c), OAR 660-033-0120 and OAR 660-006-0025(4)(e). Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Even if conditioned to prohibit more intensive types of competition, a 25-acre motocross race track is not "appropriate in a forest environment" and thus not within the scope of recreational activities allowed in a "private park" on forest lands under OAR 660-006-0025. Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A single-file off-road vehicle trail system dispersed over 200 acres is a recreational activity "appropriate in a forest environment" and thus allowed in a "private park" under OAR 660-06-0025. Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where a neighboring farmer identifies significant changes and significant cost increases to his ranching operation from a proposed motocross race track and off-road vehicle park, the county must find that the proposed park, as conditioned, will not cause those impacts. Such findings are inadequate where the county does not address those identified impacts or explain why the proposed park, as conditioned, will not cause those impacts. Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Conditions imposed on a proposed motocross race track and off-road vehicle park that noise from the park must comply with DEQ standards and not exceed 99 decibels are inadequate to support a finding of compliance with the noninterference standard, where the county does not determine whether compliance with DEQ standards will prevent identified impacts on surrounding farm and forest practices, and the only mechanism for achieving compliance is to limit the noise from individual vehicles to 99 decibels. Without addressing the cumulative noise impacts of multiple vehicles, the county is no position to conclude that identified impacts will not occur. Utsey v. Coos County, 38 Or LUBA 516 (2000).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A parcel that lies wholly outside the 160-acre template required to site a nonforest dwelling under ORS 215.750 may not be counted as a qualifying parcel, even if that parcel is part of a tract, some part of which lies inside the template. Smith v. Jackson County, 37 Or LUBA 779 (2000).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Transactions that illegally alter access to a forest parcel do not affect whether that parcel was "lawfully created" for purposes of local and statutory provisions allowing the siting of nonforest dwellings on forest lands. Nothing in local or statutory nonforest dwelling provisions requires that, once lawfully created, forest parcels must remain free of involvement in subsequent illegal transactions in order to retain their "lawfully created" status. Tarjoto v. Lane County, 36 Or LUBA 645 (1999).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A full-service 120-space recreational vehicle camp is not a "campground" within the meaning of OAR 660-006-0025(4). Cotter v. Clackamas County, 36 Or LUBA 172 (1999).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A county's finding that a proposed nonforest dwelling is inconsistent with forest uses is inadequate where the finding is so conclusory that it fails to inform the applicant either what steps are necessary to obtain approval or that it is unlikely that the application can be approved. Eddings v. Columbia County, 36 Or LUBA 159 (1999).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where the county followed the wrong local procedure under its code in approving a proposed forest template dwelling and failed to provide required notice of the decision to an adjoining landowner, the county's action resulted in prejudice to the adjoining landowner's substantial rights. Krieger v. Wallowa County, 35 Or LUBA 305 (1998).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where a county's land use decision approving a forest template dwelling consists of a single-page form that contains blanks for the subject property's legal description, zoning, size and the names and addresses of the applicant and any representatives plus signature lines, the decision is not supported by adequate findings. Krieger v. Wallowa County, 35 Or LUBA 305 (1998).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A county's finding of compliance with a standard requiring that a nonforest dwelling not interfere with forest practices is inadequate, where the county merely finds that the proposed dwelling presents no greater risk of fire than posed by existing residential development, and fails to address evidence that the cumulative risk of fire from the proposed dwelling and existing development will require the owner of an adjacent forestry operation to change forestry practices and incur additional costs. Thomas v. Wasco County, 35 Or LUBA 173 (1998).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where a soil study is needed for approval of a forest template dwelling, OAR 660-006-0005(2) requires that determination of soil capability be based on NRCS data, unless the local government finds that data inaccurate or unavailable, in which case it may consider "equivalent data" generated by an approved method of determining the capability of soils to produce wood fiber. Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140(1998).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. The absence of an NRCS productivity rating for a particular soil means only that NRCS data regarding that soil are "not available" within the meaning of OAR 660-006-0005(2). Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. ORS 215.750 does not, through its text, context or legislative history, limit the meaning of the term "wood fiber" to Douglas fir wood fiber, to the exclusion of other commercial tree species. Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where a soil study, intended to be an alternative method allowed by OAR 660-006-0005, fails to determine the capability of non-rated soils for producing wood fiber other than Douglas fir, the standard in OAR 660-006-0005 for determining the productivity of the soil by generating equivalent data, has not been met. Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where an NRCS soil survey does not rate certain soils, that nonrating cannot be used to determine the capacity of the soil for producing wood fiber and cannot be the basis of a conclusion that such soils produce 0-49 cf/ac/yr. The nonrating says nothing in quantitative terms or otherwise about the soil's capacity to produce wood fiber, and therefore is not "equivalent data" as required by OAR 660-006-0005 for an alternative method of soil assessment. Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A golf driving range is not a recreational use auxiliary to forest practices under OAR 660-06-025, where it is proposed as the primary use of the property and does not support or enable a forest practice. McKy v. Josephine County, 33 Or LUBA 687 (1997).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. An incidental conservation benefit such as irrigation does not bring a golf driving range within the conservation uses allowed on forest lands under OAR 660-06-025. McKy v. Josephine County, 33 Or LUBA 687 (1997).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A use proposed in a forest zone must be found within the list of specific uses identified in OAR 660-06-025 and 660-06-027, and cannot be permitted based only on the general description of uses in OAR 660-06-025(1). McKy v. Josephine County, 33 Or LUBA 687 (1997).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where a local government approved a conditional use permit for a nonforest dwelling in 1992, and petitioner's notice of intent to appeal simply identifies the local government's 1994 building permit approval as the appealed decision, petitioner's appeal has the legal effect of appealing only the 1994 building permit decision. Broderson v. Jackson County, 28 Or LUBA 645 (1995).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. Where conditions of a prior nonforest dwelling approval do not require a determination of compliance with any discretionary land use standard, the fact that a building permit may only be issued after it is determined that such conditions are satisfied provides no basis for LUBA's jurisdiction. Broderson v. Jackson County, 28 Or LUBA 645 (1995).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. OAR 660-06-025(4)(i) allows power generation facilities on forestlands without a Goal 4 exception, provided such facilities do not remove more than 10 acres of land from resource use. OAR 660-33-130(23) includes similar provisions for power generation facilities on agricultural lands without a Goal 3 exception, but requires that the power generation facilities not remove more than 20 acres of land from resource use. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. ORS 215.780(1) unambiguously imposes an 80-acre minimum lot size on lands designated for forest use, unless the exceptions provided by ORS 215.780(2) or (3) apply. Neither of those exceptions allows the creation of parcels smaller than 80 acres for homestead dwellings. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

8.4 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Nonforest Uses. A local government interpretation of one of its forest zones in a manner that would permit asphalt batch plants to operate permanently, so long as there were periodic interruptions, does not conflict with the Goal 4 rule, which envisions both permanent and temporary asphalt batch plants. Zippel v. Josephine County, 27 Or LUBA 11 (1994).

8.5.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Generally. ORS 92.190(3) embodies a requirement that, where local governments choose to provide an alternative procedure for property line adjustments other than using replat procedures, that alternative procedure must include local government approval of some kind. However, ORS 197.190(3) does not specify any particular procedures or form of approval, and does not necessarily require that final approval be obtained prior to recordation of the adjustment deeds. Given the absence of more specific statutory requirements a county does not err in verifying property as a legal lot, notwithstanding that the property lines were adopted in 2007 without prior county approval, where following recordation of the deeds, the county preliminarily verified the adjustments as lawful and issued a final approval in 2017 when the property owner applied for, and the county approved, a development permit. This process, although partially post-hoc, is consistent with ORS 92.190(3). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 486 (2018).

8.5.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Generally. Oregon Laws 2008, chapter 12, legislatively overruled the holding in Phillips v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 194, aff'd, 213 Or App 498, 162 P3d 338 (2007), which provided that it was unlawful to adjust property boundaries in a way that results in parcels that fail to comply with applicable minimum parcel sizes. Oregon Laws 2008, chapter 12, authorizes property line adjustments of substandard size lots and parcels, even if the resulting lots or parcels continue to fail to comply with applicable minimum parcel sizes. Oregon Laws 2008, chapter 12, section 6 made that legislation retroactive to "property line adjustments approved before, on or after the effective date of this 2008 Act." Therefore, Oregon Laws 2008, chapter 12 applies to a property line adjustment that took place in 2007, because the property line adjustment was "approved * * * before, on or after" the effective date of the 2008 Act. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 486 (2018).

8.5.1 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Generally. Where an approval standard for partitioning timber zoned property into nonresource parcels requires that the subject property be "generally unsuitable land for the production of farm or forest products," and petitioner does not challenge a county determination that the subject property is generally suitable for farm use, that determination provides an independent basis for affirming the county's decision to deny the partition. Newsome v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 578 (1994).

8.5.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Under ORS 215.780(2)(e)(A), in determining whether to approve the creation of a forest-zoned parcel that is less than the 80-acre minimum parcel size, the county may consider only the parcel that is the subject of the partition application, not a tax lot or other property that the subject parcel was adjacent to but not part of on November 4, 1993. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 19 (2019).

8.5.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. ORS 92.190(3) embodies a requirement that, where local governments choose to provide an alternative procedure for property line adjustments other than using replat procedures, that alternative procedure must include local government approval of some kind. However, ORS 197.190(3) does not specify any particular procedures or form of approval, and does not necessarily require that final approval be obtained prior to recordation of the adjustment deeds. Given the absence of more specific statutory requirements a county does not err in verifying property as a legal lot, notwithstanding that the property lines were adopted in 2007 without prior county approval, where following recordation of the deeds, the county preliminarily verified the adjustments as lawful and issued a final approval in 2017 when the property owner applied for, and the county approved, a development permit. This process, although partially post-hoc, is consistent with ORS 92.190(3). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 486 (2018).

8.5.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Oregon Laws 2008, chapter 12, legislatively overruled the holding in Phillips v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 194, aff'd, 213 Or App 498, 162 P3d 338 (2007), which provided that it was unlawful to adjust property boundaries in a way that results in parcels that fail to comply with applicable minimum parcel sizes. Oregon Laws 2008, chapter 12, authorizes property line adjustments of substandard size lots and parcels, even if the resulting lots or parcels continue to fail to comply with applicable minimum parcel sizes. Oregon Laws 2008, chapter 12, section 6 made that legislation retroactive to "property line adjustments approved before, on or after the effective date of this 2008 Act." Therefore, Oregon Laws 2008, chapter 12 applies to a property line adjustment that took place in 2007, because the property line adjustment was "approved * * * before, on or after" the effective date of the 2008 Act. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 486 (2018).

8.5.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. A petitioner fails to raise an issue with the specificity that is required by ORS 197.763(1) when the arguments in the cited record pages merely allege without developed explanation that the subject parcel was created by partition in 1980 as a sub-standard size parcel in the FF-20 zone, and therefore may not raise the issue that the post-partition zoning of the property to a zone that requires a 20-acre minimum parcel size means that the one-acre parcels approved by the county in 1980 were not lawfully created. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 75 Or LUBA 151 (2017).

8.5.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Assignment in August 1979 of a zoning designation that required a minimum lot size of 20 acres to property that was previously partitioned in April 1979 into one-acre parcels does not mean that the parcel was not "lawfully created" in April 1979 when the county approved the partition application. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 75 Or LUBA 151 (2017).

8.5.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. ORS 215.750 and OAR 660-006-005(5) allow a county to approve a forest template dwelling if, after applying a 160-acre template centered on the subject property, at least 11 other "lots or parcels that existed on January 1, 1993, are" within the 160-acre area. A hearings officer's finding that the applicant met the 11-lot requirement by counting three parcels with boundaries that were later reconfigured pursuant to property line adjustment after January 1, 1993, as long as the parcels as they existed on January 1, 1993 were "partly or completely within the template boundaries," and counting a fourth parcel that was partitioned into two parcels after January 1, 1993 as one parcel is consistent with the statute and the rule, where the administrative rule history of OAR 660-006-0005(5) indicates the Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) did not intend to prohibit an applicant from relying on the January 1, 1993 configuration of a later-reconfigured parcel so long as "the effect of" later properly line adjustments was not "to qualify a lot, parcel or tract for the siting of a dwelling." Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 75 Or LUBA 151 (2017).

8.5.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. The minimum lot or parcel size requirements of ORS 215.780(1) for resource lands do not apply to decisions that rezone a portion of a resource parcel to nonresource use but do not partition or subdivide the parcel. DLCD v. Coos County, 39 Or LUBA 432 (2001).

8.5.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. When determining whether land is "forest land" under the Goal 4 suitability standard, if the subject property is smaller than the county's base forest zone minimum parcel size, all of the subject property, not a portion of it, must be considered. DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 728 (1997).

8.5.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. Unless approval is given by LCDC under ORS 215.780(2) for a smaller minimum lot size or sizes, ORS 215.780(1) requires a county to apply minimum lot sizes of 80 acres (designated forestland and non-range farmland) or 160 acres (designated rangeland) in its farm and forest zones. DLCD v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 459 (1994).

8.5.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. The 1993 legislature adopted specific minimum lot and parcel sizes. For forestland and farmland that is not designated rangeland, the minimum lot or parcel size is 80 acres. ORS 215.780(1)(a) and (c). For land zoned for exclusive farm use and designated as rangeland, the minimum lot or parcel size is 160 acres. ORS 215.780(1)(b). DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

8.5.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. The ORS 215.780(2) provisions that allow counties to adopt a minimum lot size smaller than would otherwise be required for farmland and forestland by ORS 215.780(1), require that a county obtain LCDC approval for such smaller lot sizes before adopting such smaller lot sizes. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

8.5.2 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Land Divisions – Minimum Lot Sizes. ORS 215.780(1) unambiguously imposes an 80-acre minimum lot size on lands designated for forest use, unless the exceptions provided by ORS 215.780(2) or (3) apply. Neither of those exceptions allows the creation of parcels smaller than 80 acres for homestead dwellings. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

8.6 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Multiple Resource Lands. Where a county zoning district was acknowledged by LCDC as a forest zone, not a farm/forest zone, a regulation subsequently adopted by LCDC to apply immediately to uses in forest zones applies to uses within that zoning district. Testa v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 383 (1995).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. The mere existence of residential uses near a property proposed for an irrevocably committed exception to Goal 4 does not demonstrate that such property is necessarily committed to nonresource use, and findings that the subject property is enclosed on three of its sides by existing residential development and that use of the subject property for a forestry operation could be potentially disruptive to that residential community are inadequate to describe the relationship of the subject property to adjacent lands, as required by OAR 660-004-0028(2)(c), where the findings do not address the relationship of the subject property to adjacent forest and resource land that are in timber production and forest use and/or that possess soils suitable for forestry production, or the potential for resource use of the subject property in conjunction with the adjacent forest-zoned properties. Dooley v. Wasco County, 81 Or LUBA 44 (2020).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. The correct standard under OAR 660-004-0028(3) for an irrevocably committed exception to Goal 4 is not whether commercial forestry operations are practicable on the subject property—counties must consider forest operations that are smaller in scale and generate less revenue than commercial forestry operations—and findings that focus on alleged conflicts with nearby residential uses from conducting commercial forestry on the property are inadequate to demonstrate that forest uses are "impracticable," as required by OAR 660-004-0028(3), where the findings do not consider whether forest operations that are smaller in scale would create similar conflicts that render forest use of the property impracticable; where, given the soil types on the property, the findings do not establish that forest use of the property is impracticable or explain why trees could not be planted on the property; and where the findings rely on conflicts with residential uses resulting from spraying, which are not sufficient, in themselves, to justify an irrevocably committed exception. Dooley v. Wasco County, 81 Or LUBA 44 (2020).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings and argument that forest uses are "impractical" on the subject property due to existing development and due to fire buffers that would be required along some of the property's borders and around some of the existing development do not demonstrate that the property is "physically developed to the extent that it is no longer available" for forest uses, as required by ORS 197.732(2)(a) and OAR 660-004-0025(1) for a physically developed exception to Goal 4, and such a conclusion is not supported by substantial evidence where at least 87 percent of the property's area is available for forestry and where the applicant does not attempt to quantify the amount of buffer that would be required to conduct forest uses or the amount by which that buffer would decrease the property available for forest uses. Dooley v. Wasco County, 81 Or LUBA 44 (2020).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. The county did not err in concluding that the "unique resource" at issue, a deepwater river port whose upland portions are located within the existing exception area, is still "located on agricultural or forest land" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(a). Although "Agricultural Land" for purposes of Goal 3 and its implementing administrative rule does not include land areas subject to exceptions to Goal 3, it does not necessarily follow that agricultural land, as that term is used in OAR 660-004-0022 or other parts of the Goal 2 exception rule is subject to the same restriction. At least for the limited purpose of evaluating the need for and compliance with exception standards to allow new or changed uses contrary to the resource goals, land within an exception area potentially remains "agricultural land" subject to Goal 3, and where the original exception did not take an exception to Goal 4 the site potentially remains "forest land." Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. ORS 197.732(2)(c)(D) and OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d) require a finding that the proposed uses authorized by the proposed exception are "compatible with other adjacent uses or will be so rendered through measures designed to reduce adverse impacts." To establish compliance with OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d), the county's finding that the likely adverse impacts of the proposed uses allowed under the proposed exception are similar to the impacts of the existing uses must be supported by substantial evidence. The absence of evidence that the impacts would be different is not a basis to conclude that the impacts would be similar. Where this unsupported presumption that the impacts would be similar is the foundation of the much of the county's subsequent analysis, the presumption is not supported by substantial evidence, and remand is necessary for the county to adopt more adequate findings regarding compatibility, supported by substantial evidence. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. ORS 197.732(2)(c)(D) and OAR 660-004-0020(2)(d) require a finding that the proposed uses authorized by the proposed exception are "compatible with other adjacent uses or will be so rendered through measures designed to reduce adverse impacts." The potential adverse impacts of different types of liquid bulk terminals affiliated with a deepwater port, such as an oil terminal versus a fertilizer export operation, could be different enough to require a separate analysis. Adequate findings regarding compatibility would start by identifying the likely adverse impacts of typical uses authorized under approved use categories, evaluating each use category separately, and if necessary specific types of uses within each category. The findings should also address the characteristics of uses on adjoining areas, and assess vulnerability to potential externalities from industrial uses in the exception area. Informed by those analyses, the county can then reach sustainable conclusions regarding whether the proposed uses are compatible with adjoining uses, or can be rendered compatible via identified measures. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 78 Or LUBA 547 (2018).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 215 Or App 414, 171 P3d 368 (2007), which involved a reasons exception to Goals 3, 4 and 14 to develop a hotel on land zoned exclusive farm use (EFU), and its holding which interprets the rules for reasons exceptions, is inapposite where no reasons exception is involved. Similarly, OAR 661-012-0070 and its requirements for exceptions for transportation improvements on rural land do not apply where no exception to a resource goal is sought. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. ORS 215.448(1)(a) to (d) provide standards that apply to a proposed home occupation in "an exclusive farm use zone, forest zone or a mixed farm and forest zone that allows residential uses," and do not apply to an application for a proposed home occupation on property located in a rural residential zone. Willis v. Clackamas County, 76 Or LUBA 244 (2017).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. A finding that taking an exception to Goal 4 is warranted to allow adaptive reuse of Goal 5 historic structures located on forest lands because allowed uses under Goal 4 will not raise sufficient revenue to offset the cost of maintaining those structures, if supported by substantial evidence, is a sufficient reason why the policy embodied in Goal 4 should not apply to the exception area. King v. Clackamas County, 72 Or LUBA 143 (2015).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. A comprehensive plan provision prohibiting application of a Rural Residential plan designation to land that is currently designated farm or forest "unless an exception to the applicable Goal 3 or 4 is justified" could be interpreted such that the prohibition does not apply to nonresource land that is not subject to either goal. However, the stronger textual reading is that the qualifier "applicable" simply reflects that the subject property is currently designated under either Goal 3 or Goal 4, whichever is applicable, and an exception to the applicable goal is required in order to redesignate the property to Rural Residential. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 60 Or LUBA 392 (2010).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Where a county's findings note that property contains a spring and a road and that adjacent lands contain dwellings, but do not otherwise explain why the spring and the road and the adjacent dwellings make resource use of the property impracticable, the county's findings are inadequate to demonstrate compliance with OAR 660-004-0028(2). Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 57 (2007).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. A county errs in concluding that residential uses of properties in the vicinity of the property have committed the subject property to non-resource use, without explaining why those same residential uses will not result in committing other resource lands in the area to non-resource use. Gordon v. Polk County, 55 Or LUBA 57 (2007).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. A prior exception to Goal 4 did not also serve as an exception to Goal 14 or authorize the proposed use of the property. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 55 Or LUBA 545 (2008).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Under OAR 660-004-0028(2)(c), findings must address "the relationship between the exception area and the lands adjacent to it." Findings that discuss lands located within a 2000-foot radius from the proposed exception area but do not discuss the lands adjacent to the exception area are inadequate. Gordon v. Polk County, 54 Or LUBA 351 (2007).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. The mere presence of adjoining residential uses is not a sufficient basis for concluding that resource lands are irreversibly committed to non-resource uses. Gordon v. Polk County, 54 Or LUBA 351 (2007).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Absent evidence of conflicts or similar impediments to resource use, the fact that access to forest land is via a county road that passes through an area of rural residential homes is not a sufficient basis to conclude that the property is irrevocably committed to uses not allowed by Goal 4. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Where a local government concludes that adjoining rural residential development commits resource land to uses not allowed by Goals 3 or 4, OAR 660-004-0018(2) requires the local government to explain why rural residential development of the subject property will not also result in committing other resource lands in the area. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 53 Or LUBA 420 (2007).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. A county's findings that chemicals are required in the future in order to make forest practices on a property practicable are not supported by substantial evidence where the record does not indicate whether chemicals were already applied to the property or that whatever applications might be necessary have not already occurred. Anderson v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 454 (2006).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. A county's finding that aerial spraying of chemicals is necessary in order to make forest practices on a 20-acre property practicable is not supported by substantial evidence where the evidence in the record supports a conclusion that manual application is the preferred method of application for properties 40 acres or smaller and the findings do not provide other reasons that manual spraying is not practicable. Anderson v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 454 (2006).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Where the county's conclusion that forest uses are impracticable because of liability risks associated with possible contamination of drinking water through application of chemicals hinges upon its finding that aerial spraying is necessary, and that findings is unsupported by substantial evidence, the challenged decision fails to demonstrate that uses allowed by Goal 4 are impracticable. Anderson v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 454 (2006).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings supporting a conclusion that a property is irrevocably committed to nonresource use that rely on the property's similarity to other properties already zoned for nonresource use and the presence of residences on adjacent lands are not sufficient to explain why the relationship between the property and adjacent lands make the property impracticable for resource uses. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 730 (2006).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. A landowner is not legally obligated to withdraw land from forest operations in order to protect adjoining rural residential lands from the potential threat of windthrow, and the potential of such windthrow resulting from logging forest lands is not a basis to conclude that such lands are committed to non-resource uses. Gordon v. Polk County, 50 Or LUBA 647 (2005).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Riparian protection measures required under the Forest Practices Act are not "forest practices" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0028(3)(c), and a county may consider setbacks and other riparian protection measures in determining whether forest land is irrevocably committed to non-resource use. Gordon v. Polk County, 50 Or LUBA 647 (2005).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. That two-acres of a 41-acre parcel are subject to riparian setbacks and other limitations on logging does little to demonstrate that propagation and harvesting of forest products on the parcel is impracticable. Gordon v. Polk County, 50 Or LUBA 647 (2005).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Incidents of trespass and vandalism on forest lands are insufficient to demonstrate that such lands are irrevocably committed to non-resource use, where most of the cited incidents stem not from trespassers but from residential neighbors and their guests who enter the property as invitees. Gordon v. Polk County, 50 Or LUBA 647 (2005).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Some level of trespass and vandalism is an inevitable aspect of maintaining large tracts in forest use, particularly near rural residential areas. Unless such incidents rise to such a level that they actually hinder or preclude forest operations on a significant part of the property, such incidents do not demonstrate that forest use of the property is impracticable. Gordon v. Polk County, 50 Or LUBA 647 (2005).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. The focus of a committed exception under OAR 660-004-0028 is the relationship between the subject property and adjacent uses. Findings that describe and rely upon alleged impacts from rural residential uses up to one-half mile from the subject property, and that provide no description or analysis of adjacent uses, are insufficient to demonstrate that the subject property is committed to nonresource uses. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. A county's reliance on reported incidents of vandalism and other crimes in a large rural residential area near a parcel are insufficient to demonstrate that the parcel is committed to nonresource uses, absent evidence that the cited criminal incidents interfere or are likely to interfere with farm or forest uses on the subject property. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Externalities from farm or forest operations such as dust, spray, smoke and noise are inherent aspects of rural life in agricultural or forest zones, and absent evidence that such externalities have or are likely to cause actual conflicts with resource operations, evidence of the possibility of such conflicts with rural residential uses is insufficient to demonstrate that resource uses are impracticable. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. The focus of analysis under OAR 660-004-0028 is on existing circumstances that contribute to the practicability of resource use in the exception area, not speculative future circumstances. Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Where a county concludes that conflicts with adjoining rural residential development commit a property to nonresource uses, the county's findings addressing OAR 660-004-0018(2)(b)(B) must explain why residential development of the subject property will not present the same risk of committing other adjacent resource lands to nonresource uses. Given the complex nature of that explanation, evidence of conflicts with rural residential uses do not "clearly support" a finding that residential zoning of the subject property will not commit adjacent resource lands, for purposes of ORS 197.835(11)(b). Friends of Douglas County v. Douglas County, 46 Or LUBA 757 (2004).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Absent recent or imminent changes in adjacent rural residential uses, where a neighboring subdivision has been developed for many years and the subject property has been in resource use during much of that time, the existence of those adjacent rural residential uses is insufficient to demonstrate that the subject property is irrevocably committed to nonresource use. DLCD v. Lane County, 39 Or LUBA 445 (2001).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. When the local government does not demonstrate that the uses allowed by the goals are impracticable, there is no need to resolve relevancy and evidentiary challenges to the findings. DLCD v. Coos County, 39 Or LUBA 432 (2001).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings supporting an irrevocably committed exception must address adjacent lands that may tend to make resource use of the proposed exception area practicable as well as adjacent lands that may tend to make resource use impracticable. DLCD v. Coos County, 39 Or LUBA 432 (2001).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. The mere existence of residential uses near a proposed exception area does not demonstrate that the proposed exception area is committed to nonresource use, especially when most of the nearby properties with residential uses also include resource uses. DLCD v. Coos County, 39 Or LUBA 432 (2001).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Before amending an urban growth boundary to add land with predominantly Class I soils to meet an identified need for commercial land, a county must determine whether alternatives to adding a site with predominantly Class I soils can reasonably accommodate the identified need. That alternatives analysis under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b)(B) is a multi-factor analysis and rejecting alternative sites solely because they have soils that may increase development costs is error. DLCD v. Douglas County, 38 Or LUBA 542 (2000).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Land that is already included within a UGB is assumed to be available for urban development. That assumption is not rendered invalid simply because sites that are planned and zoned for residential, industrial and commercial use have soil or other characteristics that make them less than ideal to develop. DLCD v. Douglas County, 38 Or LUBA 542 (2000).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Alternative sites to meet an identified need for commercially planned and zoned land may not be rejected solely because they have soils limitations that the USDA estimates may result in an average 39 percent development cost increase for some small commercial buildings. The estimated 39 percent cost increase is an average, so it may be lower in particular cases, and any added cost may be offset by other advantages the sites may possess. DLCD v. Douglas County, 38 Or LUBA 542 (2000).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Once a local government reaches a supportable conclusion that growing timber is impracticable on forest land, it does not need to address the practicability of other forest practices described in OAR 660-006-0025(2)(a). Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. A conclusion that a property has a negative present net value if converted to forest uses, without explaining what relevance a forest operation's present value has on whether forest uses are impracticable, is inadequate to demonstrate that forest uses are in fact impracticable. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. In reviewing a county's decision that property is irrevocably committed to nonresource uses, LUBA is not required to give any deference to the county's explanation for why it believes the facts demonstrate compliance with the legal standards for a committed exception. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 62 (2000).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. A reasons exception to Goals 3 and 4 must be based on the considerations set forth in Goal 2 and OAR 660-004-0020 and 660-004-0022. Under OAR 660-004-0022, the fact that farm and forest land is not prime timber or agricultural land is not a legally cognizable basis to adopt a reasons exception to Goals 3 and 4. McLane v. Klamath County, 37 Or LUBA 888 (2000).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. A local government decision approving an irrevocably committed exception under OAR 660-04-028 to Goals 3 and 4 will be remanded where it does not include findings supported by substantial evidence establishing that uses allowed by Goals 3 and 4 are impracticable. DLCD v. Columbia County, 32 Or LUBA 221 (1996).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. A local government decision approving a physically developed exception under OAR 660-04-025 to Goals 3 and 4 will be remanded where the findings do not establish that the property is physically developed with non-resource uses. DLCD v. Columbia County, 32 Or LUBA 221 (1996).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings adopted by the county approving a committed exception to Goals 3 and 4 are inadequate where they contain no discussion or explanation of how the existing uses on adjacent parcels make resource use on the subject property impracticable. Johnson v. Lane County, 31 Or LUBA 454 (1996).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. County findings that describe the physical characteristics and existing uses of adjacent lands in approving a committed exception to Goals 3 and 4 are adequate for purposes of OAR 660-04-028(2)(b) and (6)(a). Those rules do not require the county to make findings regarding the ownership of the adjacent parcels or the proximity of developed uses on adjacent lands. Johnson v. Lane County, 31 Or LUBA 454 (1996).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. An exception to Goal 4 is not justified under OAR 660-04-022(1)(a) where the county fails to establish that a "need" for the proposed use exists by demonstrating that absent the proposed exception, the county would be unable to satisfy its obligations under one or more of Goals 3-19. Middleton v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 423 (1996).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. At a minimum, ORS 197.732(5) requires that the county's notice of a proposed goal exception must include a brief summary of the issues involved in the proposed exception, in addition to the list of applicable criteria required by ORS 197.763(3)(b). Middleton v. Josephine County, 31 Or LUBA 423 (1996).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. The failure of adjacent property owners to manage their lands actively and successfully, the frustrated intentions of a developer in creating a large-capacity water system to serve the subject forest property, the earlier approval of a three-phase subdivision, the property's potential for non-resource use and similar considerations do not support a determination that the property is irrevocably committed to non-resource use. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Columbia County, 31 Or LUBA 47 (1996).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Capital expenditures for streets, water lines, electric power, design, engineering and surveying on an adjacent property are not relevant to finding a committed exception unless they detract from management of the subject property for forest uses. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Columbia County, 31 Or LUBA 47 (1996).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. When property is located in a combined agricultural and forest zone, findings in support of an irrevocably committed exception must establish that all uses allowed by Goals 3 and 4 are impracticable. A finding that the property has never been in agricultural use is insufficient. DLCD v. Curry County, 30 Or LUBA 294 (1996).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. A finding that commercial forestry is impracticable on certain property does not justify an irrevocably committed exception to Goal 4. The county must show the property is impracticable for all Goal 4 uses. DLCD v. Curry County, 30 Or LUBA 294 (1996).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. In order to justify an irrevocably committed exception, the county must determine, based on an evaluation of the facts, that surrounding residential uses make resource use of the subject property impracticable. DLCD v. Coos County, 30 Or LUBA 229 (1995).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. To justify an irrevocably committed exception on forestland, the county must explain in findings why the facts upon which it relies lead to a conclusion that uses allowed by Goal 4 are impracticable. DLCD v. Coos County, 30 Or LUBA 229 (1995).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Both Goal 4 and Goal 2 require the county to evaluate the practicability of all forest uses on the subject property before determining that such uses are impracticable and taking a committed exception. DLCD v. Coos County, 30 Or LUBA 229 (1995).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. The standards for approving a physically developed exception to Statewide Planning Goals 3 and 4 are demanding. The county must find that the property has been physically developed to such an extent that all Goal 3 or 4 resource uses are precluded. Uses established in accordance with the goals cannot be used to justify such an exception. Sandgren v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 454 (1995).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. To approve an irrevocably committed exception to Goals 3 and 4, the county must find that all uses allowed by the goals are impracticable, primarily as a result of uses established on adjacent parcels. Sandgren v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 454 (1995).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Even if petitioners' evidence supports a conclusion that a resource parcel is not adequate for commercial timber production, that conclusion does not justify an exception to Goals 3 and 4 since it does not establish that all uses allowed by the applicable goals are impracticable. Sandgren v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 454 (1995).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. The county's denial of a developed exception will be upheld when the county finds that the physical characteristics of the property do not render it irrevocably committed to nonresource uses; there is continuing resource use of properties to the north, east and west; and the existence of public facilities and services installed to serve the residence on the site do not irrevocably commit the remainder of the site to nonresource uses. Sandgren v. Clackamas County, 29 Or LUBA 454 (1995).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings that address only the practicability of commercial forestry uses, rather than all commercial and non-commercial uses allowed by Goals 3 and 4 on agricultural and forestlands, do not justify an irrevocably committed exception to either Goal 3 or Goal 4. DLCD v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 415 (1995).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings must address the practicability of commercial forestry uses on adjacent lands as well as in a proposed exception area to satisfy the requirements for an irrevocably committed exception to either Goal 3 or Goal 4. DLCD v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 415 (1995).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings to justify a committed exception to Goals 3 and 4 must address the factors of OAR 660-04-028(6) and must be supported by substantial evidence explaining how conflicts between existing uses and resource uses operate in a particular instance to render the subject property irrevocably committed. DLCD v. Coos County, 29 Or LUBA 415 (1995).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Where a local government properly determines certain land is not farm or forestland subject to Statewide Planning Goals 3 and 4, an exception to Goals 3 and 4 is not required to support comprehensive plan and zone map amendments designating such property for residential use. Bates v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 21 (1994).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. The bias under Goals 3 and 4 in favor of commercial agricultural and forest enterprises does not mean a local government may assume that noncommercial farm and forest uses are not "uses allowed by the applicable goal" for which a proposed exception area's suitability must be considered in granting an exception. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. The impracticability standard for committed exceptions is a demanding standard, and findings must do more than recite facts addressing the relevant factors, they must also explain why those facts lead to a conclusion that uses allowed by Goals 3 and 4 are impracticable. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. In adopting exceptions to Goals 3 and 4 as post-acknowledgment plan amendments, a local government must also address Goal 5 if the exceptions concern or affect lands included on the local government's acknowledged inventory of Goal 5 resources. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

8.7 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Exceptions to. Findings that (1) an undisclosed portion of a 143-acre property is occupied by gravel roads, (2) an unspecified number of residences on adjacent properties create the possibility of trespass and complaints regarding forest operations, and (3) two powerline easements separate the property from other forestlands, are insufficient to explain why it is impracticable to use the subject property for uses allowed by Goal 4, as required by ORS 197.732(1)(b) for an irrevocably committed goal exception. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Columbia County, 27 Or LUBA 474 (1994).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. ORS 215.750 and OAR 660-006-0005(5) allow a county to approve a forest template dwelling if, after applying a 160-acre template centered on the subject property, at least seven other "lots or parcels that existed on January 1, 1993, are" within the 160-acre area. A hearings officer's interpretation of a local code provision implementing the statute and the rule to conclude that an applicant failed to meet the seven-lot requirement because two parcels that existed on January 1, 1993, were later reconfigured pursuant to a major partition is inconsistent with the statute and the rule because the administrative rule history of the rule indicates that LCDC did not intend to prohibit an applicant from relying on a post-January 1, 1993 reconfiguration of a parcel so long as "the effect of" the later reconfiguration was not "to qualify a lot, parcel or tract for the siting of a dwelling." Tugaw v. Jackson County, 81 Or LUBA 458 (2020).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Where a local code provision implementing OAR 660-006-0029 requires the decision-maker "to identify the building site" for a forest template dwelling by "weigh[ing] together" (1) the requirement to minimize the amount of forest lands used and (2) fire-safety development design standards, written testimony previously submitted in a different land use proceeding by lay individuals with personal knowledge that suggests that serious slope issues have prevented improving one alternative access route because of inability or expense of meeting local road design standards is substantial evidence that improving that alternative access route is impracticable where no contrary evidence is introduced into the record in the current proceeding. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 81 Or LUBA 400 (2020).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Any permits for residential development on resource land that were issued prior to the effective date of HB 2106 (2019) are eligible for the five one-year extensions provided in ORS 215.417(2) (2019) only if, on the effective date of that legislation, those permits were still in the initial four-year period of validity or the one two-year extension period provided in ORS 215.417 (2017). Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 81 Or LUBA 279 (2020).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A county errs in accepting with the applicant's final written argument, for purposes of determining whether at least three dwellings existed on surrounding lots or parcels on January 1, 1993, and therefore whether the subject property qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750, an email from a contractor who worked on one of the surrounding dwellings , even where the email is intended to provide context for evidence submitted by opponents, and thereby rebut opponents' arguments concerning that evidence. Under ORS 197.763(6)(e), new evidence may not be submitted with an applicant's final written argument and, under ORS 197.763(9), such an email is evidence rather than argument. In addition, opponents are not precluded from raising a county's admission of new evidence with the applicant's final written argument as procedural error on appeal to LUBA merely because they failed to object during the local proceedings, where the opportunity to object was provided after the county had already considered evidence, deliberated, and made its oral decision, and where the record was closed and no further testimony was allowed. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Where a county determines that a property qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750 because at least three dwellings existed on surrounding lots or parcels on January 1, 1993, based on a statement of the applicant, a recollection of the prior owner of one of the surrounding dwellings, an email from a contractor who worked on one of the surrounding dwellings, and a statement by the tax assessor that its records showed a dwelling in place on January 1, 1993, but where LUBA concludes that the county erred in accepting the email, where LUBA cannot determine whether the county would have reached the same conclusion without the email, and where the county's findings failed to address evidence that the tax rolls indicate existence of the dwelling as of July 1993 rather than January 1993, LUBA will remand for the county to adopt adequate findings. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Absent a legal definition for how the center point of a property must be established for purposes of determining whether it qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750, a county errs by not explaining the basis for its conclusion that its chosen method is the most appropriate and by not addressing opponents' arguments challenging that method. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A county errs in accepting with the applicant's final written argument, for purposes of determining whether at least three dwellings existed on surrounding lots or parcels on January 1, 1993, and therefore whether the subject property qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750, an email from a contractor who worked on one of the surrounding dwellings , even where the email is intended to provide context for evidence submitted by opponents, and thereby rebut opponents' arguments concerning that evidence. Under ORS 197.763(6)(e), new evidence may not be submitted with an applicant's final written argument and, under ORS 197.763(9), such an email is evidence rather than argument. In addition, opponents are not precluded from raising a county's admission of new evidence with the applicant's final written argument as procedural error on appeal to LUBA merely because they failed to object during the local proceedings, where the opportunity to object was provided after the county had already considered evidence, deliberated, and made its oral decision, and where the record was closed and no further testimony was allowed. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Where a county determines that a property qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750 because at least three dwellings existed on surrounding lots or parcels on January 1, 1993, based on a statement of the applicant, a recollection of the prior owner of one of the surrounding dwellings, an email from a contractor who worked on one of the surrounding dwellings, and a statement by the tax assessor that its records showed a dwelling in place on January 1, 1993, but where LUBA concludes that the county erred in accepting the email, where LUBA cannot determine whether the county would have reached the same conclusion without the email, and where the county's findings failed to address evidence that the tax rolls indicate existence of the dwelling as of July 1993 rather than January 1993, LUBA will remand for the county to adopt adequate findings. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Absent a legal definition for how the center point of a property must be established for purposes of determining whether it qualifies for a forest template dwelling under ORS 215.750, a county errs by not explaining the basis for its conclusion that its chosen method is the most appropriate and by not addressing opponents' arguments challenging that method. Eng v. Wallowa County, 79 Or LUBA 421 (2019).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Petitioner's argument that a proposed detached accessory structure for an "art studio" is not a permissible "accessory" structure allowed in the Impacted Forest Lands (F-2) zone provides no basis for reversal or remand where petitioner cites to no local code, state statute or administrative rule governing forest lands, suggesting limitations on accessory structures to a primary dwelling that is otherwise allowed on forest lands under state law. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 78 Or LUBA 272 (2018).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A petitioner's argument that locating an art studio several hundred feet from an existing dwelling on forest land instead of adjacent to the dwelling and within the dwelling's existing fire breaks does not provide a basis for reversal or remand, where the petitioner does not identify any rule or other requirement that an accessory structure be clustered with the existing dwelling. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 78 Or LUBA 272 (2018).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. LUBA will reject petitioner's argument that a proposed "art studio" is in reality an "accessory dwelling" in the forest zone in violation of state and local law where the county hearings officer imposed several conditions intended to ensure that the proposed "art studio" would not be used as an "accessory dwelling," and petitioner's speculation that the applicant might violate one or more conditions of approval provides no basis for reversal or remand. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 78 Or LUBA 272 (2018).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A hearings officer's finding that land in the forest zone upon which development is proposed is "flat" is not supported by substantial evidence where the finding is supported only by the applicant's assertion that the relevant slope is "less than 3" percent, but the record includes two topographic maps that appear to show that the slope exceeds 10 percent, which if so triggers additional fire safety requirements. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 78 Or LUBA 272 (2018).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A county hearings officer errs in denying a forest template dwelling application on the sole basis that petitioner had not provided a fire safety inspection, where the applicable ordinance provision entitled "Wildfire Safety Requirements" requires "[o]ther measures as recommended by the fire agency commenting on the application or the County Fire Safety Inspector," and no fire agency recommended any measures or a fire inspection in any submitted comments. Blu Dutch LLC v. Jackson County, 78 Or LUBA 495 (2018).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Even though an applicant provides evidence of ownership of 200 or more acres in western Oregon after the application is deemed complete, a hearings officer correctly concludes that an application for a forest template dwelling satisfies ORS 215.740(3), where nothing in the statute or local development ordinances requires an applicant for a large tract forest dwelling to prove ownership of the parcel at the time an application is submitted. Blu Dutch LLC v. Jackson County, 78 Or LUBA 495 (2018).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A hearings officer correctly interprets ORS 215.740(3) in concluding that the minimum acreage requirement that applies to an application for a forest template dwelling is the minimum acreage for the applicant's tracts located in western Oregon where the forest template dwelling is proposed to be located, rather than the non-contiguous parcel located in an adjacent county designated as eastern Oregon. ORS 215.740 allows an owner seeking a dwelling on a tract that is located in western Oregon to rely on non-contiguous land in another adjacent county to meet the minimum acreage requirements; it does not require that the minimum acreage requirements for the non-contiguous county be the applicable standard. Blu Dutch LLC v. Jackson County, 78 Or LUBA 495 (2018).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A county decision to approve a dwelling on forest land under local land use regulations that implement ORS 215.705, 215.740 or 215.750 is a "permit" decision as defined at ORS 215.402(4), because the local code and statutes impose discretionary approval standards on such development. To remove any doubt, ORS 215.402(4) defines "permit" to include approvals of development under ORS 215.700 to 215.780, a range which includes ORS 215.705, 215.740 and 215.750. Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A hearings officer's conclusion that the subject property was "lawfully created" is supported by substantial evidence in the record that includes (1) a set of receipts for 1980 recording fees for the final partition plat for submittal of a survey, (2) a set of 1980 recorded deeds, and (3) the recorded final partition plat, despite the fact that the final partition plat was not recorded until 1996, where a reasonable person could rely on that evidence to conclude the subject property was created in conformance with all applicable ordinances. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 75 Or LUBA 151 (2017).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. ORS 215.750 and OAR 660-006-005(5) allow a county to approve a forest template dwelling if, after applying a 160-acre template centered on the subject property, at least 11 other "lots or parcels that existed on January 1, 1993, are" within the 160-acre area. A hearings officer's finding that the applicant met the 11-lot requirement by counting three parcels with boundaries that were later reconfigured pursuant to property line adjustment after January 1, 1993, as long as the parcels as they existed on January 1, 1993 were "partly or completely within the template boundaries," and counting a fourth parcel that was partitioned into two parcels after January 1, 1993 as one parcel is consistent with the statute and the rule, where the administrative rule history of OAR 660-006-0005(5) indicates the Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) did not intend to prohibit an applicant from relying on the January 1, 1993 configuration of a later-reconfigured parcel so long as "the effect of" later properly line adjustments was not "to qualify a lot, parcel or tract for the siting of a dwelling." Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 75 Or LUBA 151 (2017).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. ORS 215.750 and OAR 660-006-0027(3) authorize local governments to approve forest template dwellings if at least three dwellings existed within a specified 160-acre area and those dwellings continue to exist at the time forest template dwelling approval is requested. But neither the statute nor the rule defines the key term "dwelling" and neither the statute nor the rule explicitly addresses whether a long abandoned, derelict structure may qualify as a "dwelling," for purposes of qualifying for a forest template dwelling. West v. Multnomah County, 70 Or LUBA 235 (2014).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. ORS 215.750 and OAR 660-006-0027(3) authorize local governments to approve forest template dwellings if at least three dwellings existed within a specified 160-acre area and those dwellings continue to exist at the time forest template dwelling approval is requested. A hearings officer's interpretation of the word "dwelling" in local laws adopted to implement ORS 215.750 and OAR 660-006-0027(3) such that a former dwelling that has been vacant for many years and is in a state of disrepair that would preclude use as a residence does not qualify as a "dwelling" for purposes of satisfying ORS 215.750 and OAR 660-006-0027(3) is more consistent with the underlying purpose of the statute and rule. That underlying purpose is to allow forest template dwellings in circumstances where there is existing limited residential development on forest lands, and the hearings officer's interpretation is more consistent with that underlying purpose than interpreting the word "dwelling" to include long abandoned structures, no matter how derelict and uninhabitable as a dwelling in its current condition. West v. Multnomah County, 70 Or LUBA 235 (2014).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. ORS 215.750 and OAR 660-006-0027(3) authorize local governments to approve forest template dwellings if at least three dwellings existed within a specified 160-acre area and those dwellings continue to exist at the time forest template dwelling approval is requested. Where the record supports a hearings officer's finding that a dwelling that was constructed in 1906 has been unoccupied for many years prior to an application for approval of a forest template dwelling, the hearings officer correctly found that the 1906 dwelling was a nonconforming use in the county's forest zone that was first applied long after the 1906 dwelling was constructed. And the hearings officer correctly found that under local laws adopted to implement ORS 215.750 and OAR 660-006-0027(3), the forest template dwelling applicant must establish that the right to continue residential use of the 1906 dwelling was not lost through interruption or abandonment for two years or more before the 1906 dwelling could be counted as a dwelling that "continues to exist" at the time the application for approval of a forest template dwelling was filed. West v. Multnomah County, 70 Or LUBA 235 (2014).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. As defined in ORS 215.010(1), the word "parcel" includes units of land that have been "lawfully established." When the word "parcel" is used elsewhere in ORS Chapter 215, it means that in order for a unit of land to qualify as a "parcel" it must have been created in compliance with applicable partitioning laws or created prior to the enactment of those laws. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 58 Or LUBA 315 (2009).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A county's conclusion that the word "parcel" used in ORS 215.750(1)(c) should not have the meaning given it in ORS 215.010(1) is without support where ORS 215.010 specifies that the word "parcel" * * * "as used in" Chapter 215 has that meaning. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 58 Or LUBA 315 (2009).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. ORS 215.750 does not prohibit a local government from applying a local code provision requiring an applicant for a forest template dwelling to demonstrate that the dwelling is "necessary for and accessory to" the forest use. Greenhalgh v. Columbia County, 54 Or LUBA 626 (2007).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Applying the contextual analysis that is required by Maxwell v. Lane County, 178 Or App 210, 35 P3d 1128 (2001), adh'd to as modified on recons, 179 Or App 409, 40 P3d 532 (2002), even though ORS 215.750(1) does not expressly state that the references in that statute to "lots" are limited to lawfully created lots, and even though the relevant definitions in ORS 92.010 do not expressly require that a lot must be a lawfully created lot, if those statutes are read in context with ORS 92.012, 92.018(1), 92.025(1) and ORS 215.010(1)(a), it is sufficiently clear that when the legislature used the term "lot" in ORS 215.750(1) it did not mean to include unlawfully created lots. Reeves v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 4 (2006).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. County authority to approve forest template dwellings derives from ORS 215.750(1). In exercising the authority granted by ORS 215.750(1), a county may not apply a county definition of "lot" to recognize lots that could not be recognized under ORS 215.750(1). The county may not set a lower standard for approving forest template dwellings under county legislation than the standard that is set by ORS 215.750. Reeves v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 4 (2006).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Findings concluding that a proposed dwelling will not significantly increase fire hazards in a forest zone are not necessarily adequate to also show that the dwelling will not significantly increase fire suppression costs or risks to fire suppression personnel. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 53 Or LUBA 290 (2007).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A hearings officer errs in concluding, based on expert testimony that isolated dwellings force firefighters to choose either to abandon such homes or to devote insufficient resources to defend them, that the proposed isolated dwelling will not significantly increase fire suppression costs or risks to fire suppression personnel because firefighters would simply abandon the dwelling. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 53 Or LUBA 290 (2007).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Remand is necessary where the applicant's forest consultant recommends vegetation removal as necessary to ensure compliance with approval criteria for a large tract forest dwelling, but the hearings officer does not adopt a condition of approval to that effect or explain why such measures are not necessary to ensure compliance with approval criteria. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 53 Or LUBA 290 (2007).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Under a code standard requiring that a forest dwelling be located at a site that minimizes the risks associated with wildfire, remand is necessary where the opponents' expert testified that the preferred site is isolated and will incur significantly more risk and cost to firefighters over alternative sites, there is no rebuttal of that testimony, and the findings do not state a sufficient basis to reject that testimony. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 53 Or LUBA 290 (2007).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Where the purpose of code standards for siting a large tract forest dwelling is to identify a site that minimizes the loss of forest lands to non-forest uses, it is appropriate to favor sites that are already developed for non-forest uses over undeveloped sites, because developed sites do not require additional loss of forest lands to forest uses. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 53 Or LUBA 290 (2007).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Under a code standard requiring that a proposed forest dwelling not significantly change or increase the cost of farm or forest practices on nearby resource lands, the hearings officer's failure to separately analyze more distant properties in the study area or identify its outer boundaries is not reversible error, where the hearings officer found no significant impacts on parcels adjacent to the subject property and, given the homogeneity of the surrounding area, significant impacts on non-adjoining parcels are unlikely. Sisters Forest Planning Comm. v. Deschutes County, 48 Or LUBA 78 (2004).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. The OAR 660-006-0029(1) requirement to identify a dwelling location that "least impacts" resource operations and "minimizes" wildfire risks and adverse impacts on resource use entails some discussion of alternative locations for the dwelling on the parcel and a demonstration that the preferred location is, on balance, equal or superior to other potential locations on the parcel. Sisters Forest Planning Comm. v. Deschutes County, 48 Or LUBA 78 (2004).

8. 8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Even if a code provision is properly interpreted to require that a proposed forest dwelling be located within 300 feet of the road that provides access to the subject property, a decision that locates the dwelling within 300 feet of a road that does not currently provide access to the property is consistent with that provision, where the decision conditions approval on constructing a secondary access route from the dwelling site to that road. Sisters Forest Planning Comm. v. Deschutes County, 48 Or LUBA 78 (2004).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. When viewed alone, the word "within" in a code provision that requires that dwellings must be within a template area to be counted is ambiguous, because it could mean the dwelling must be at least partially within or it could mean the dwelling must be entirely within. However, where a related provision specifies that "all or part of" a parcel must be within the template, the failure to include the "all or part of" modifier provides contextual support for interpreting the provision without the modifier as requiring that the entire dwelling must be within the template area. Worman v. Multnomah County, 47 Or LUBA 410 (2004).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Forest restocking requirements imposed by OAR 660-006-0029 do not constitute approval criteria that determine whether a dwelling may be approved on property zoned for forest use. Hodge Oregon Properties, LLC v. Lincoln County, 46 Or LUBA 290 (2004).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Under OAR 660-033-0140(5) a forest template dwelling permit is valid for four years and can be extended for two additional years. Although OAR 660-033-0140(3) provides that such an extension of a permit for a forest template dwelling "is not subject to appeal as a land use decision," a county decision that grants a one-year extension of a forest template dwelling two years after it was issued, pursuant to general local legislation that allows permits to be extended, is a land use decision and is reviewable by LUBA. Butori v. Clatsop County, 45 Or LUBA 677 (2003).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. More detailed soils maps may be used to demonstrate that less detailed mapping by NRCS is "inaccurate," within the meaning of OAR 660-006-0005(2). Carlson v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 897 (2000).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. OAR 660-006-0005(2) controls how a decision maker must apply the legal standards for approval of dwellings on forest land that are contained in ORS 215.750. Carlson v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 897 (2000).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Under OAR 660-006-0005(2), NRCS data must be used to demonstrate compliance with ORS 215.750 unless NRCS data are shown to be inaccurate or unavailable. Carlson v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 897 (2000).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. The requirement of OAR 660-006-0005(2) that data from an alternative methodology must be equivalent to NRCS data means that the data must be expressed as "cubic feet per acre per year," or an equivalent measure. OAR 660-006-0005(2) does not require that the alternative methodology must be equivalent to the methodology that is employed by NRCS. Carlson v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 897 (2000).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Where reports submitted as an alternative method for establishing the capability of soils to grow trees under OAR 660-006-0005(2) take the position that the soils on the subject property will produce between 0 and 49 cubic feet per acre per year of wood fiber, that data is sufficiently quantified to constitute data that is equivalent to NRCS data, where the ultimate legal standard is whether the predominant soils are capable of producing less than 49 cubic feet per acre per year of wood fiber. Carlson v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 897 (2000).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A county may reasonably rely on a report based on consideration of a broad sample of native tree species to determine whether the predominant soils on the property are capable of producing more than 49 cubic feet per acre per year of wood fiber of any kind where there is not reasonable basis presented for believing that planting one or more nonnative tree species on the predominate soils would produce more than 49 cubic feet per acre per year of wood fiber. Carlson v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 897 (2000).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. The requirement for Oregon Department of Forestry (ODF) approval of an alternative method of determining soils productivity is not met by ODF approval of a report prepared in a prior proceeding where the scope of that ODF approval is uncertain. The fact that "site visits" and "library research" formed the basis for the prior report and a later report does not allow the county to assume the alternative method in the later report is approved by ODF. Carlson v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 897 (2000).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Where a county finds in its initial decision that the soils on a property are less productive than the same types of soils on adjoining properties due to slope and soil wetness, and no party challenges that finding, the county need not consider that issue in making a decision on remand from LUBA of its initial decision. Carlson v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 897 (2000).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A county's improper reliance on poor past management practices in concluding a property is not suitable for commercial forest use provides no basis for reversal or remand, where there is other evidence in the record that a reasonable person could rely on to reach that conclusion. Dept. of Transportation v. Coos County, 35 Or LUBA 285 (1998).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. The permissive terms of ORS 215.750 do not prohibit a local government from adding forest template dwelling criteria that are more restrictive than statutory standards. Yontz v. Multnomah County, 34 Or LUBA 367 (1998).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A local government is not obligated by ORS 215.750(1) to allow the establishment of nonforest dwellings. If a local government chooses to allow nonforest dwellings, it is not obligated to allow nonforest dwellings under the alternative template test specified at ORS 215.750(5). Yontz v. Multnomah County, 34 Or LUBA 367 (1998).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Where a soil study is needed for approval of a forest template dwelling, OAR 660-006-0005(2) requires that determination of soil capability be based on NRCS data, unless the local government finds that data inaccurate or unavailable, in which case it may consider "equivalent data" generated by an approved method of determining the capability of soils to produce wood fiber. Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. The absence of an NRCS productivity rating for a particular soil means only that NRCS data regarding that soil are "not available" within the meaning of OAR 660-006-0005(2). Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. ORS 215.750 does not, through its text, context or legislative history, limit the meaning of the term "wood fiber" to Douglas fir wood fiber, to the exclusion of other commercial tree species. Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Where a soil study, intended to be an alternative method allowed by OAR 660-006-0005, fails to determine the capability of non-rated soils for producing wood fiber other than Douglas fir, the standard in OAR 660-006-0005 for determining the productivity of the soil by generating equivalent data, has not been met. Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Where an NRCS soil survey does not rate certain soils, that nonrating cannot be used to determine the capacity of the soil for producing wood fiber and cannot be the basis of a conclusion that such soils produce 0-49 cf/ac/yr. The nonrating says nothing in quantitative terms or otherwise about the soil's capacity to produce wood fiber, and therefore is not "equivalent data" as required by OAR 660-006-0005 for an alternative method of soil assessment. Carlson v. Benton County, 34 Or LUBA 140 (1998).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. The statutory definition of "public road" at ORS 368.001(5) is not applicable to approval of a forest template dwelling required by ORS 215.750(5) to be located on a tract that abuts a "road." Interpretation of a local code requirement that such dwellings be located on a "public road" is controlled by local legislative intent rather than by statute. Petersen v. Yamhill County, 33 Or LUBA 584 (1997).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Under ORS 215.750(4) and OAR 660-06-027(5)(a), contiguous parcels that would otherwise qualify for forest template dwellings on each parcel may qualify for only one dwelling if the parcels are part of a tract. Parsons v. Clackamas County, 32 Or LUBA 147 (1996).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. The mere conveyance of three contiguous parcels in a tract does not reconfigure the parcel boundaries for purposes of OAR 660-06-005(4). Parsons v. Clackamas County, 32 Or LUBA 147 (1996).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Unlike the lot-of-record statutes, the forest template dwelling provisions of ORS 215.750 specify no date by which parcels qualifying for template dwellings must have been created; thus, the lot-of-record rules set forth in OAR 660-06-005(4) regarding the parcels' date of creation do not apply to forest template dwellings. Parsons v. Clackamas County, 32 Or LUBA 147 (1996).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Where a local code requires that a second farm dwelling be shown to be "necessary," absent a definition to the contrary or contrary legislative history, the term "necessary" has the same meaning in the Goal 3 context that it has in the Goal 4 context. Louks v. Jackson County, 28 Or LUBA 501 (1995).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Following 1993 legislative amendments, small scale farm or forest dwellings are not allowable under Goals 3 and 4, and ORS 215.304(1) prohibits LCDC from adopting or implementing any rule which would permit counties to allow such small scale farm or forest dwellings. DLCD v. Douglas County, 28 Or LUBA 242 (1994).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. Where an applicable comprehensive plan policy requires that residential uses adjacent to forestlands have adequate setbacks and fire prevention measures, a local government decision approving a forest dwelling must be supported by findings establishing what setbacks and fire prevention measures are required and why they are adequate. Furler v. Curry County, 27 Or LUBA 546 (1994).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A reasonable person could not conclude that a proposed forest dwelling satisfies a "necessary for forest use" standard because the subject property is "quite remote," where the evidence in the record shows only that the subject property is five miles from an urban growth boundary and a 35 minute drive from a city. Furler v. Curry County, 27 Or LUBA 546 (1994).

8.8 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Dwellings. A finding that a proposed forest dwelling will occupy only a small portion of the subject property is relevant to a determination of compliance with an "accessory to forest use" standard, but is not sufficient, in itself, to support a determination of compliance with the standard. Furler v. Curry County, 27 Or LUBA 546 (1994).

8.9 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Lots of Record. Under a local code definition of "same ownership" for purposes of applying the local government's lot of record standards, a life estate is a "greater than possessory interest" where, in addition to possession, the life estate holder has the right alienate or encumber the property and to retain rents, profits, and other income generated by the property, and where the life estate is not, by the terms of the conveyance or reservation, qualified and limited to only a possessory interest. Ellis v. Multnomah County, 81 Or LUBA 84 (2020).

8.9 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Lots of Record. When a previous approval for a partition required that the parcels not be used for residential purposes unless legal access was provided to the parcels, a current application for a lot of record dwelling cannot be approved unless the proposed dwelling satisfies the access standards that applied at the time of the partition or satisfies current standards. The fact that the applicant has an easement for residential use does not mean that the easement satisfies the local government standards for legal access. Estremado v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 148 (2010).

8.9 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Lots of Record. Unlike the lot-of-record statutes, the forest template dwelling provisions of ORS 215.750 specify no date by which parcels qualifying for template dwellings must have been created; thus, the lot-of-record rules set forth in OAR 660-06-005(4) regarding the parcels' date of creation do not apply to forest template dwellings. Parsons v. Clackamas County, 32 Or LUBA 147 (1996).

8.9 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Lots of Record. A code provision allowing establishment of a dwelling on certain "lots of record," if the "lot or parcel" does not already have a dwelling, is impermissibly less strict than ORS 215.705(1)(b), which requires that the "tract" not have a dwelling. ORS 215.010(2) defines "tract" as "one or more contiguous lots or parcels under the same ownership." DLCD v. Josephine County, 28 Or LUBA 459 (1994).

8.10 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rules – Forest Practices Act. Where the county makes a finding that an electrical transmission project "will not force a significant change in, or significantly increase the cost of, accepted farming or forest practices on agriculture or forest lands," and "forest practices" are defined pursuant to the Oregon Forest Practices Act, petitioners' argument that the proposed transmission line will remove 36 acres from forest production is not sufficient to explain why the development will result in "a significant change in * * * forest practices * * * on * * * forest lands." OAR 660-006-0025(5). OAR 660-006-0025(5) contemplates the approval of limited non-forest uses on forest land, including the removal of some forest land from production to accommodate a use that is allowed as a conditional use on forest land, including clearing a 100-foot right-of-way with 25 feet of clearance from the ground to the lines, for the purpose of constructing electric transmission lines on forest lands. Tilla-Bay Farms, Inc. v. Tillamook County, 79 Or LUBA 235 (2019).

8.10 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Practices Act. A comprehensive plan policy statement that a local government "will rely" on the Forest Practices Act (FPA) to protect surface waters and fish and wildlife does not have the effect of making the FPA requirements into approval criteria for a forest template dwelling. Fessler v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 844 (2000).

8.10 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Practices Act. OAR 629-640-0100(2), an administrative rule implementing the Forest Practices Act (FPA), only applies to an "operation," which is a "commercial activity relating to the growing or harvesting of forest tree species." Because the clearing of a firebreak as a condition of approval for a forest template dwelling is not such an activity, the administrative rule requirements do not apply. Fessler v. Yamhill County, 38 Or LUBA 844 (2000).

8.10 Goal 4 – Forest Lands/ Goal 4 Rule – Forest Practices Act. The general prohibition in the Forest Practices Act against counties applying their land use regulations to forest practices on forestlands located outside an urban growth boundary does not apply to a land use regulation prohibiting or regulating the siting or alteration of dwellings. Sanchez v. Clatsop County, 29 Or LUBA 26 (1995).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. In conducting an ESEE analysis under OAR 660-023-0040(4), a local government does not err by analyzing multiple groups of similar resources and similarly zoned properties within a single resource site. Restore Oregon v. City of Portland, 80 Or LUBA 158 (2019).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. In conducting an ESEE analysis under OAR 660-023-0040(4), a local government does not err by estimating the economic impact to properties that would be affected by protecting the resource site based on assumptions that lead to a conclusion of greater economic impact to those properties than if the ESEE analysis used different assumptions that were applied in estimating the economic impact to other properties, nor does the local government err in failing to consider the cost of environmental remediation that will be incurred to develop specific properties. Restore Oregon v. City of Portland, 80 Or LUBA 158 (2019).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. While local governments have substantial discretion in determining the scope of the impacts that they may consider in conducting an ESEE analysis under OAR 660-023-0040(4), they may not fail to evaluate both the impacts of the resource site on conflicting uses and the impacts of the conflicting uses on the resource site. ODOT v. Grant County, 80 Or LUBA 192 (2019).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. In conducting an ESEE analysis under OAR 660-023-0040(4), a local government does not err by characterizing a proposed limitation on a conflicting use as a negative impact of the resource site on the conflicting use, even where the proposed limitation is already required under the local code, where the local code could be amended in the future to remove that requirement. ODOT v. Grant County, 80 Or LUBA 192 (2019).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Petitioners fail to establish that the city erred in concluding that rezoning a property to neighborhood commercial is consistent with Statewide Planning Goal 5 when the rezoning the subject property constitutes a PAPA for purposes of applying Goal 5, which provides that local governments are not required to apply Goal 5 in consideration of a PAPA unless the PAPA affects a Goal 5 resource by allowing new uses that "could be conflicting uses with a particular significant Goal 5 resource site on an acknowledged resource list." The city's PAPA is a very limited one, that in relevant part simply applies the zones implementing the city's comprehensive plan designations that the acknowledged comprehensive plan has already designated for the corresponding uses. Because the challenged PAPA simply implements that acknowledged plan designation choice with the exercise of little or no discretion, the PAPA does not authorize any "new uses" for purposes of OAR 660-023-0250(3) and Goal 5. Renken v. City of Oregon City, 79 Or LUBA 82 (2019).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. LUBA will stay a city decision approving the demolition of historic contributing structures when, without a stay, demolition of the three buildings could begin immediately. A designated historic district is the sum of its parts, including specific historic contributing structures. A designated historic contributing structure is irreplaceable and its destruction is irreversible and causes an injury that cannot be compensated adequately in money damages. Niederer v. City of Albany, 79 Or LUBA 1016 (2019).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where a city decision approves demolition of three "historic contributing structures" and a petitioner moves to stay the decision pending a LUBA proceeding, although arguments that the structures are "degenerated into derelicts" and have been categorized as "dangerous buildings" by the police department may go to the merits of the city's decision, they do not bear on LUBA's consideration of whether petitioner will suffer "irreparable injury" under to ORS 197.845(1) and OAR 661-010-0068 and, therefore, whether a stay should be granted. Niederer v. City of Albany, 79 Or LUBA 1016 (2019).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. How to (1) plan and zone an inventoried significant mineral and aggregate resource site, and (2) plan and zone any adjoining areas that may be needed for processing or buffers or to otherwise mitigate identified conflicts are separate questions from what property is properly included on a comprehensive plan Statewide Planning Goal 5 inventory of significant aggregate sites. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-004-0010(2) does not provide authority for the proposition that an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 4 is unnecessary to plan and zone an inventoried Statewide Planning Goal 5 aggregate site on forest land for mining rather than for forest uses. Rather, OAR 660-004-0010(2) simply makes it clear that a decision under Statewide Planning Goal 5 not to protect Goal 5 resource need not be supported by an exception to Goal 5. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Because of the way Statewide Planning Goal 5 is written, a decision to protect a significant aggregate resource site on forest land for mining, and to apply planning and zoning map designations to allow mining in a way that is not fully consistent with Statewide Planning Goal 4, does not require an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 4. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A city commission's interpretation of its code to permit the city to exercise its property rights under ORS 197.772(1) to refuse to consent to historic landmark designation separately from the city's grant of authority to the historic review board to consider and approve applications for historic landmark designations is plausible, and therefore must be affirmed under ORS 197.829(1) and Siporen v. City of Medford, 349 Or 247, 261, 243 P3d 776 (2010). Therefore, the historic review board must terminate consideration of a neighborhood association's application to designate city-owned property as a historic landmark when the city manager refuses to consent to the proposed historic landmark designation. McLoughlin Neighborhood Association v. City of Oregon City, 77 Or LUBA 377 (2018).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A city commission's interpretation of a city manager's general authority to exercise "supervision over all city property" to be broad enough to include authority for the city manager to refuse to consent to a proposed historic landmark designation for city-owned property is not reversible under ORS

197.835(9)(a)(D) ("[i]mproperly construed the applicable law"). McLoughlin Neighborhood Association v. City of Oregon City, 77 Or LUBA 377 (2018).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The ORS 197.772(2) right to refuse to consent to historic designation of property, which is given to "property owners," is not limited to owners of private property. A city may refuse to consent to historic designation of city-owned property, where a neighborhood organization files an application to designate that city-owned property as an historic landmark. McLoughlin Neighborhood Association v. City of Oregon City, 77 Or LUBA 377 (2018).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where an applicant for a historic landmark designation advances three arguments why a property owner may not refuse to consent under ORS 197.722(1) and thereby terminate consideration of the application, the historic review board errs by terminating consideration of the application without adopting findings that respond to those arguments. McLoughlin Neighborhood Assoc. v. City of Oregon City, 76 Or LUBA 180 (2017).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A 2,000-acre study area may be appropriate for calculating residential density for purposes of a density standard applied in inventoried big game habitat. But where the adequacy of that study area is questioned, and the county simply relies on an overbroad reading of a LUBA decision in an appeal of a prior quasi-judicial decision, remand is required. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 76 Or LUBA 396 (2017).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where parties raise legitimate questions about how a study area will be used to calculate residential density and the local government fails to address those questions when it adopts the amendments governing use of the study area, the study area does not comply with the OAR 660-023-0050(1) requirement for "specific standards," or the OAR 660-023-0050(2) requirement for "clear and objective" standards. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 76 Or LUBA 396 (2017).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A county does not necessarily err by distinguishing between a large part of the county where few people live and a smaller part of the county where the majority of the county's population lives as a basis for adopting programs with differing levels of protection for big game habitat. But a significant increase in permissible residential densities in the smaller more heavily impacted area must be justified. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 76 Or LUBA 396 (2017).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Goal 5 does not allow a comprehensive plan Goal 5 program to defer to a future date conflict resolution and program development on a case by case basis. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 76 Or LUBA 396 (2017).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where a county repeals an existing comprehensive plan policy to protect upland game bird habitat, without any explanation for doing so, remand is required. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 76 Or LUBA 396 (2017).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. In adopting a post-acknowledgment plan amendment, under OAR 660-023-0250(3)(b) a city is not required to apply Goal 5 directly "unless the [amendment] affects a Goal 5 resource." In changing the comprehensive plan and zoning map designations to allow higher intensity uses, a city may not assume the overlay protections that were previously applied to protect the Goal 5 resources from lower intensity uses will be adequate to ensure that no Goal 5 resource will be affected. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 75 Or LUBA 38 (2017).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. When a county amends a zoning ordinance to require a particular study area when applying a maximum residential density standard within that zoning district, the county cannot rely on an earlier LUBA decision that allowed use of a similar study area in a quasi-judicial decision affecting a single property. Instead, the county must establish in amending the zoning ordinance that mandating the particular study area in all cases in that zone in the future is consistent with the maximum residential density standard and Goal 5, which the maximum residential density standard was adopted to implement. ODFW v. Crook County, 72 Or LUBA 316 (2015).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A county must justify its decision to replace an ambiguous existing maximum residential density standard with a similarly worded but much more methodologically precise maximum residential standard and may not simply rely on the similar wording to conclude that the new standard is consistent with the county's comprehensive plan and Goal 5. ODFW v. Crook County, 72 Or LUBA 316 (2015).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A post-acknowledgment plan amendment that makes only minor changes to a program to protect riparian areas may require little or no analysis under the Goal 5 rule, where the changes are consistent with Goal 5 safe harbor provisions for protecting riparian areas, or allow only types of public facilities that the safe harbor rules expressly allow in riparian areas. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. LUBA will deny an assignment of error that challenges the county's decision that Goal 5 does not apply to a proposed post-acknowledgement plan amendment to amend the county's map of lands eligible for a destination resort because the county failed to compare the location of "other inventoried Goal 5 resources" to the properties proposed to be included on the map where petitioners do not identify any inventoried Goal 5 resource that proposed plan amendment "would affect" under OAR 660-023-0250(3). Root v. Klamath County, 68 Or LUBA 124 (2013).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where the Metro Code requires that a city retain its Goal 5 protections for tree groves unless removing those protections "would allow no more than a de minimis increase in the amount of development that could occur in areas identified as upland wildlife habitat," a city does not err in comparing the area of each tree grove where development would occur with the remaining area of each tree grove, rather than comparing the area of each tree grove where development would occur with the entire area identified as upland habitat Metro-wide or within the entire city. Metro v. City of Lake Oswego, 68 Or LUBA 136 (2013).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where the Metro Code requires that a city retain its Goal 5 protections for tree groves unless removing those protections "would allow no more than a de minimis increase in the amount of development that could occur in areas identified as upland wildlife habitat," a city erroneously applies the de minimis limitation by assuming, based on speculation that the owner of the large house will not want to further divide the property, that a one-acre lot with a large house on it in a zone that allows 7,500-square-foot lots will not be divided and developed with additional residences. Metro v. City of Lake Oswego, 68 Or LUBA 136 (2013).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where a comprehensive plan policy adopted to implement Goal 5 is just as open ended and aspirational as Goal 5 itself and in unchallenged findings the city explains Goal 5 has been fully implemented through the Goal 5 resource inventory and ESEE evaluation process, petitioner fails to establish that the policy must be considered directly in approving a conditional use permit. Friends of the Hood River Waterfront v. City of Hood River, 67 Or LUBA 179 (2013).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A city is not required to apply Goal 5 to a decision to annex property, where the annexation decision does not change the county planning and zoning designations of the property and does not make any of the changes specified in OAR 660-023-0250(3)(a) to (c) that would require application of Goal 5. Roads End Water District v. City of Lincoln City, 67 Or LUBA 452 (2013).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A county ordinance adopted solely to protect erodible soils and federally listed threatened species, neither of which are resources listed in the county's Goal inventory, does not amend the county's program to protect Goal 5 resources such as riparian areas, even if the ordinance would likely have the unintended effect of also protecting some inventoried Goal 5 resources. Hatley v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 265 (2012).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A condition specifying future use of a reclaimed mining site is not inconsistent with OAR 660-023-0180(5)(f), which limits post-mining uses to farm uses under ORS 215.203, uses listed under ORS 215.283(1), and fish and wildlife habitat uses, where the condition requires reclamation for "fish and wildlife habitat" and eventual use "as a public park, if allowed by law." While ORS 215.203 and 215.283(1) do not currently allow public parks, the condition would only call for use as a public park if the statutes are amended to allow such a use. Protect Grand Island Farms v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 291 (2012).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where a local government amends its program to achieve Goal 5 with respect to inventoried natural resources, by adopting additional measures to protect those resources from an identified conflicting use, and thus adjusting the balance initially struck in its initial ESEE analysis to limit conflicting uses, the local government must address the requirements of the Goal 5 rule at OAR chapter 660, division 23, revisit portions of its ESEE analysis as necessary and adopt findings based on that ESEE analysis explaining its choice to impose additional limitations on conflicting uses. Cosner v. Umatilla County, 65 Or LUBA 9 (2012).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Because OAR 660-023-0190(2) expressly authorizes counties to proceed on a case-by-case basis to complete the Goal 5 inventory process with respect to energy resources, a county is not obligated to undertake a county-wide inventory of wind energy resources as a precondition to adopting legislative amendments protecting other types of Goal 5 resources from development impacts of wind energy facilities. Cosner v. Umatilla County, 65 Or LUBA 9 (2012).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Before it is appropriate to consider the non-regulatory ESEE Consequences Determination portion of Goal 5 planning for a site as context for interpreting the regulatory Resource Protection Program there must first be an ambiguity in the Resource Protection Program. Mark Latham Excavation Inc. v. Deschutes County, 65 Or LUBA 32 (2012).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where Goal 11 and 14 exceptions are necessary to complete a previously approved destination resort that is authorized under the county's acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations, and the resort as completed is substantially similar to the resort as originally approved, the Goal 11 and 14 exceptions do not propose "new uses" that could be conflicting uses with a significant Goal 5 resource site and thus the county does not err in failing to apply the requirements of Goal 5 and the Goal 5 rule. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Under ORS 660-023-0250(3), a local government must consider Goal 5 if a post-acknowledgment plan amendment "would affect a Goal 5 resource." The threshold question under ORS 660-023-0250(3) is whether the plan amendment would either (1) amend a resource list or a portion of an acknowledged plan or land use regulation adopted in order to protect a significant Goal 5 resource or to address specific requirements of Goal 5 or (2) allow new uses that could be conflicting uses with a particular significant Goal 5 resource site on an acknowledged resource list. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A post-acknowledgment plan amendment that allows additional categories of conflicting uses that were already allowed under the acknowledged comprehensive plan allows new conflicting uses within the meaning of ORS 660-023-0250(3)(b), and the decision adopting the post acknowledgment plan amendment must therefore apply Goal 5. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A local government with an acknowledged Goal 5 inventory is not required to update that inventory when adopting a post-acknowledgment plan amendment that does not itself alter the acknowledged Goal 5 inventory. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where a county adopted a comprehensive plan policy that called for a 160-acre minimum lot size to protect big game winter range, but subsequently amended its zoning ordinance to provide for an 80-acre minimum lot size in the same area, that inconsistency created a plan/zoning ordinance conflict. If the county wishes to eliminate the inconsistency in favor of the 80-acre minimum lot size, it must demonstrate that the 80-acre minimum lot size leaves the county's Goal 5 program to protect big game winter range consistent with Goal 5. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where a county attempts to take advantage of the riparian corridor safe harbor authorized by OAR 660-023-0090(8) but defines "water dependent" and "water related" slightly differently than the statewide planning goal definitions of those terms, any ambiguity created by the different wording must be resolved consistently with the statewide planning goal definitions. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Under ORS 660-023-0250(3), a local government must consider Goal 5 if a post-acknowledgment plan amendment "would affect a Goal 5 resource." The threshold question under ORS 660-023-0250(3) is whether the plan amendment would either (1) amend a resource list or a portion of an acknowledged plan or land use regulation adopted in order to protect a significant Goal 5 resource or to address specific requirements of Goal 5 or (2) allow new uses that could be conflicting uses with a particular significant Goal 5 resource site on an acknowledged resource list. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Under OAR 660-023-0030(3), where a local government determines that it does not have adequate information about a potential Goal 5 site, the local government "shall not regulate land uses in order to protect such sites." Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The additional new roadways and traffic that might be associated with a destination resort are properly viewed as a new use, notwithstanding that new roadways and traffic could also be generated by other uses. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The new roadways and traffic that might be associated with a destination resort could be a conflicting use with inventoried big game habitat, where the evidentiary record is insufficient to support a conclusion that such roadways and traffic would not conflict with inventoried big game habitat. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A local government with an acknowledged Goal 5 inventory is not required to update that inventory when adopting a post-acknowledgment plan amendment that does not itself alter the acknowledged Goal 5 inventory. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A finding that a proposed aggregate site may have a large basalt outcrop in the middle of the site is not supported by substantial evidence, where the only evidence supporting the finding is data from an off-site well and that finding is inconsistent with a deep boring that is near the center of the site and between the center of the site and the off-site well that the finding relied on. Westside Rock v. Clackamas County, 56 Or LUBA 601 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. To qualify as a "significant" aggregate resource site under OAR 660-023-0180(3)(d)(B)(ii), "the average thickness of the aggregate layer within the mining area" must exceed 25 feet. Where a county's findings suggest the county may have erroneously concluded that boulders should not be considered in determining whether the requisite 25-foot-thick layer is present on a proposed aggregate resource site, remand is necessary so that the county can either (1) adopt findings under OAR 660-0023-0180(3) that do not discount aggregate significance based on the possible presence of boulders or (2) explain why the presence of boulders properly affects the determination of significance under OAR 660-0023-0180(3). Westside Rock v. Clackamas County, 56 Or LUBA 601 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where an applicant seeking to establish that a proposed mining site qualifies as a significant aggregate resource site does not argue to the county that opponents' data from off-site wells is consistent with data from the applicant's on-site wells or that the data from the off-site wells is unreliable because it was not collected under the supervision of a geologist, it is not unreasonable for the county to rely on the opponents' evidence to conclude that the two on-site borings were not sufficient to establish that a 117-acre mining site qualifies as a significant aggregate resource site. Westside Rock v. Clackamas County, 56 Or LUBA 601 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Two 25-foot-deep test pits that show an overburden of several feet on top of 20+ feet of aggregate material do not establish that there is an aggregate layer of more than 25 feet and they do not establish that the aggregate layer that is present on the site is less than 25 feet deep. The 25-foot-deep pit can only confirm the geology of the 25 feet below the surface where the test pit was dug. Westside Rock v. Clackamas County, 56 Or LUBA 601 (2008).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-023-0250(3)(a) identifies the circumstances in which a post acknowledgment plan amendment must address Statewide Planning Goal 5. Under that rule, Goal 5 must be addressed if the amendment either (1) "amends * * * a portion of an acknowledged plan or land use regulation [that was] adopted in order to protect a significant Goal 5 resource," or (2) "allows new uses that could be conflicting uses with a particular significant Goal 5 resource site on an acknowledged resource list[.]" Wood v. Crook County, 55 Or LUBA 165 (2007).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where a county limits application of its Goal 5 program to protect big game winter habitat to exclusive farm use zoned properties, a decision years later to remove exclusive farm use zoning amends an acknowledged land use regulation that was adopted to protect a Goal 5 resource, and under OAR

660-023-0250(3)(a) that rezoning decision must be justified under Goal 5. Wood v. Crook County, 55 Or LUBA 165 (2007).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. An argument that the Department of Land Conservation and Development erred in acknowledging the city's riparian protection ordinance is a collateral attack on the acknowledgment that cannot be advanced in an appeal of a permit decision applying the acknowledged ordinance. Brodersen v. City of Ashland, 55 Or LUBA 350 (2007).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. If an exception area does not include land on the county's acknowledged inventory of Goal 5 resources, the county need not adopt an exception to Goal 5. Gordon v. Polk County, 54 Or LUBA 351 (2007).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The extent to which a local government must undertake the standard Goal 5 process in adopting a post-acknowledgment plan amendment pursuant to OAR 660-023-0250(3) will depend on the nature of the amendment. For example, amendments that trigger the Goal 5 rule because they allow new uses that could conflict with significant Goal 5 resources under OAR 660-023-0250(3)(b) will not require the local government to redo the inventory process, the first step of the standard Goal 5 process. NWDA v. City of Portland, 50 Or LUBA 310 (2005).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where a local government already has an acknowledged program to achieve Goal 5 with respect to a particular resource site, and is considering whether proposed new uses that could conflict with the site are consistent with Goal 5, the local government need not in all cases undertake all steps of the standard Goal 5 process, or fully engage in steps it undertakes. NWDA v. City of Portland, 50 Or LUBA 310 (2005).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where the local government already has an acknowledged program to achieve Goal 5 with respect to a particular resource site, it has already made key choices about the relative importance of the site and a range of conflicting uses. In adopting amendments to allow new uses that could conflict with the site, the local government need not reconsider or re-justify those key choices. Where the new uses have similar impacts to the site that were considered in adopting the acknowledged program, the local government may simply choose to rely on its existing program to ensure compliance with Goal 5. NWDA v. City of Portland, 50 Or LUBA 310 (2005).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A local government's failure to conduct an explicit ESEE (economic, social, environmental and energy) analysis is not a basis for reversal or remand, where the decision adopts extensive findings finding compliance with statewide planning goals and comprehensive plan provisions governing economic, social, environmental and energy matters, and those findings appear to constitute, in all but name, an ESEE analysis. NWDA v. City of Portland, 50 Or LUBA 310 (2005).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A county's decision to amend its deer winter range map redesignating property from "critical" deer habitat to

"impacted deer winter range" is supported by substantial evidence where the county makes a reasonable choice to rely on the applicant's expert, who conducted only one site visit and reviewed data that had previously been prepared by the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, and concluded that the proposal would not significantly impact deer winter range. Anthony v. Josephine County, 50 Or LUBA 573 (2005).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A finding that a proposed mine will have adverse effects on the livability, value and enjoyment of residential uses within the impact area might play some role in the required considerations under OAR 660-023-0180, but that finding is not, in and of itself, either a proper consideration under OAR 660-023-0180 or a sufficient basis for denying the requested permit. Hellberg v. Morrow County, 49 Or LUBA 423 (2005).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A city is not required to demonstrate that annexation of an open space area that includes Goal 5 resources is consistent with Goal 5, where the annexation decision does not rezone the area, amend the plan designation, or otherwise affect the uses allowed in the territory or the protection of open space and natural resources. Cutsforth v. City of Albany, 49 Or LUBA 559 (2005).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where a post-acknowledgment plan amendment allows new uses that could conflict with significant Goal 5 resource sites, and thus triggers application of the Goal 5 rule under OAR 660-023-0250(3), the city need not in all cases repeat the entire Goal 5 process, including the ESEE analysis. In many cases no more is required than an explanation for why the existing program to protect Goal 5 resources continues to be sufficient to protect those resources. NWDA v. City of Portland, 47 Or LUBA 533 (2004).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-023-00180(4) establishes different requirements for evaluating conflicts between mining and agricultural practices and between mining and other uses. Therefore, a finding that proposed mining activities conflicts with nonagricultural uses will not be significant because air quality and traffic standards will be met does not necessarily establish that those conflicts will not either force a significant change in accepted agricultural practices or significantly increase the cost of those agricultural practices. Eugene Sand and Gravel, Inc. v. Lane County, 44 Or LUBA 50 (2003).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The standard for reviewing conflicts between mining and accepted agricultural practices set out in OAR 660-023-0180(4)(c) is limited to "farm uses," as that term is defined in ORS 215.203(2). Uses identified as non-farm uses permitted under ORS 215.213(1) are not farm uses or agricultural practices that must be evaluated under that standard. Eugene Sand and Gravel, Inc. v. Lane County, 44 Or LUBA 50 (2003).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where an applicant identifies groundwater as a "discharge" to be considered as a conflict pursuant to OAR 660-023-0180(4)(b)(A), that applicant may not argue on appeal to LUBA that (1) groundwater is not a "discharge" within the meaning of that rule; or (2) that the impact of mining on groundwater may only be considered under OAR 660-023-0180(4)(b)(D) if the mining site is located within a critical groundwater area and is designated as such on the county's Goal 5 inventory of significant Goal 5 sites. Eugene Sand and Gravel, Inc. v. Lane County, 44 Or LUBA 50 (2003).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-023-0180(4) does not change an applicant's evidentiary burden to demonstrate that measures proposed to minimize of the impacts of mining are reasonable, practical and achievable. Eugene Sand and Gravel, Inc. v. Lane County, 44 Or LUBA 50 (2003).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-023-0180 establishes a comprehensive regulatory scheme for reviewing mining applications. A county errs when it denies an application for mining in part because it does not comply with local approval criteria that are unrelated to OAR 660-023-0180. Eugene Sand and Gravel, Inc. v. Lane County, 44 Or LUBA 50 (2003).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where LUBA cannot determine from the appealed decision or the record whether an approved parkway corridor crosses an inventoried Goal 5 significant vegetation and wildlife area, the decision must be remanded. Friends of Eugene v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 239 (2003).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The statement in OAR 660-016-0005(a) that a local government is not required to "justify in its comprehensive plan a decision not to include a particular site" in its Goal 5 inventory simply means that the local government need not amend its comprehensive plan to justify a decision not to include a site on its Goal 5 inventory. The rule does not relieve local governments of the obligation to adopt adequate findings justifying a quasi-judicial decision to deny an application to include a site on the Goal 5 inventory. Hegele v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 357 (2003).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-023-0180 prohibits application of local government standards to post-acknowledgment plan amendment to add a site to the plan inventory of significant aggregate sites, unless such standards (1) were adopted after 1989 and (2) provide "specific criteria" for proposals to amend the plan inventory of aggregate sites. A general agricultural policy requiring that nonagricultural development be based on demonstrated public need is not a "specific criteri[on]" regarding proposals to amend the aggregate inventory and therefore OAR 660-023-0180 prohibits application of the policy. Hegele v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 357 (2003).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. No reasonable person could interpret a plan policy stating that the county plans to participate with other counties in a regional aggregate needs analysis as imposing a requirement that an applicant seeking to amend the county's aggregate inventory must establish a "public need" for aggregate. Hegele v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 357 (2003).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Goal 5 does not impose decisional criteria that are independent of the criteria set out in OAR chapter 660, division 23. No Tram to OHSU v. City of Portland, 44 Or LUBA 647 (2003).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The obligation to review proposed amendments to comprehensive plan and land use regulation provisions to ensure compliance with Goal 5 is implicated only in the circumstances described in OAR 660-023-0250(3). No Tram to OHSU v. City of Portland, 44 Or LUBA 647 (2003).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A change in the level of review of a particular use from conditional use review to an allowed use does not mean that the use is a "new use" as that term is used in OAR 660-023-0250(3)(a) that must be considered as a potentially conflicting use subject to review to ensure that the existing program to protect Goal 5 resources remain effective. No Tram to OHSU v. City of Portland, 44 Or LUBA 647 (2003).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The conflicts analysis that is mandated by OAR 660-023-0180(4)(b)(B) is limited to local roads that are used for access and egress. Where a proposed aggregate mine will use a state highway for access and egress, there are no road conflicts to be considered under the rule. Friends of the Applegate v. Josephine County, 44 Or LUBA 786 (2003).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A statement that a party assumes for the sake of argument that a proposed mining area is subject to a Goal 5 rule governing lands that consist of more than 35 percent soils classified as Class I or II is insufficient to raise, with the required specificity, an issue regarding whether the proportion of Class I or II soils may be less than 35 percent, and therefore that the rule does not apply to the proposed mining area. Beaver State Sand and Gravel v. Douglas County, 43 Or LUBA 140 (2002).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. An application to amend the county comprehensive plan list of non-significant aggregate sites to include a proposed new mining site is subject to review for compliance with any potentially applicable statewide planning goals. Beaver State Sand and Gravel v. Douglas County, 43 Or LUBA 140 (2002).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Other than to require that the county "maintain a record" of a determination that a mining site is non-significant, OAR 660-023-0030(6) does not address or provide any criteria with respect to a request to add a mining site to the county's comprehensive plan list of non-significant sites, and does not authorize the county to approve or deny that request based on concerns regarding the impacts of mining. Beaver State Sand and Gravel v. Douglas County, 43 Or LUBA 140 (2002).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Read in context, the ORS 215.298 provision allowing a mining operation on EFU-zoned lands if the site is on an "inventory" in a comprehensive plan is a reference to a Goal 5 "inventory" of mineral sites. Because under the 1982 Goal 5 rule the term "inventory" referred to an inventory of significant mineral sites, ORS 215.298 allows mining in an EFU zone only if the site is on a comprehensive plan inventory of significant mineral sites, not if the site is on a separate list of nonsignificant sites. Beaver State Sand and Gravel v. Douglas County, 43 Or LUBA 140 (2002).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where a city's tree preservation ordinance was identified during acknowledgment as an implementing measure to achieve compliance with Statewide Planning Goal 5, a decision that amends the tree preservation ordinance concerns the application of Goal 5 and is therefore a statutory land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 453 (2002).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Absent a showing that amendments regulating natural resources not on the city's acknowledged Goal 5 inventory are intended to create or amend or have the effect of creating or amending a Goal inventory, such amendments need not comply with Goal 5 or the Goal 5 rule. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Under OAR 660-023-0250(3), a local government cannot adopt a post-acknowledgment plan amendment that amends the program to protect significant Goal 5 resources without establishing that the amendment complies with Goal 5 and the Goal 5 rule, even if the amendment merely increases the level of protection afforded inventoried Goal 5 resources. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Code provisions that were previously acknowledged to comply with Goal 5 and are carried forward into a new code without substantive change do not constitute an "amendment" of a Goal 5 regulation and thus do not trigger an obligation to establish that those amendments comply with the Goal 5 rule. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A zoning classification that implements a Goal 5 plan designation and is applied to an inventoried Goal 5 resource site is among the regulations that "protect a significant Goal 5 resource" for purposes of OAR 660-023-0250(3). Therefore, a substantive amendment to such a zoning classification must be evaluated under the Goal 5 rule. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where petitioners' interpretational challenge of a city's finding that proposed development complies with code provisions implementing Goal 5 is, in essence, an argument that the city's code provisions are insufficient to implement Goal 5, LUBA will reject the challenge as an impermissible collateral attack on the city's acknowledged Goal 5 regulations. Crowley v. City of Bandon, 41 Or LUBA 87 (2001).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. OAR chapter 660, division 23, generally supersedes OAR chapter 660, division 16, subject to specified exceptions. Therefore, a county does not err in considering whether a proposed use affecting an inventoried Goal 5 resource is consistent with OAR chapter 660, division 23, notwithstanding that the county's unacknowledged Goal 5 regulations were adopted pursuant to division 16 rather than division 23. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 41 Or LUBA 53 (2001).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A "safe harbor" provision at OAR 660-023-0090(8) allowing local governments to adopt ordinances implementing Goal 5 that allow an "existing structure" in a riparian area to be repaired or replaced is not properly interpreted to require a threshold inquiry into whether the "existing structure" was lawfully approved or developed. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 41 Or LUBA 53 (2001).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Land use regulations may be adopted to comply with Goals 6 and 7 and related federal law requirements, without first complying with the Goal 5 planning requirements under OAR chapter 660, division 23, where the land use regulations are limited to those that may be required by Goals 6 and 7 and any related federal law requirements. Rest-Haven Memorial Park v. City of Eugene, 39 Or LUBA 282 (2001).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The text and context of OAR 660-023-0180(4)(a) establish that the impact area for purposes of identifying conflicting uses with proposed aggregate mining is the 1,500-foot ring around the mining area, excluding the mining site itself. Stockwell v. Benton County, 38 Or LUBA 621 (2000).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Although ORS 215.296(10) allows a local government to impose additional standards on a conditional use permit for aggregate mining, it does not apply to a comprehensive plan amendment designating a significant resource site and establishing a surface mining overlay pursuant to the Goal 5 rules. Stockwell v. Benton County, 38 Or LUBA 621 (2000).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The conditional use approval criteria from local government ordinances do not apply to post-acknowledgement plan amendments pursuant to the Goal 5 rules. Stockwell v. Benton County, 38 Or LUBA 621 (2000).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. ORS 197.625(3)(b) requires that approval of a land use subject to an unacknowledged land use standard include findings of compliance with applicable goals. Until the land use standard is acknowledged to comply with applicable goals, the local government cannot rely solely upon the regulatory scope of that standard to avoid addressing compliance with potentially applicable goals. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 37 Or LUBA 922 (2000).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Petitioners' argument during local proceedings that OAR 660-023-0180 does not prohibit a county from applying its land use regulations to a proposed mining operation is not sufficient to raise an issue that LCDC's adoption of OAR 660-023-0180 is inconsistent with other statutory requirements. Turner Community Association v. Marion County, 37 Or LUBA 324 (1999).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-023-0180, which governs comprehensive plan amendments for mineral and aggregate resources, establishes the procedures required to comply with Goal 5 but does not obviate the requirement to address other statewide planning goals. Turner Community Association v. Marion County, 37 Or LUBA 324 (1999).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. If a county has not yet amended its comprehensive plan and land use regulations to comply with OAR 660-023-0180, OAR 660-023-0180(7) requires that the county directly apply the substantive requirements and procedures of OAR 660-023-0180 to consideration of a post-acknowledgment plan amendment concerning mining authorization. Morse Bros., Inc. v. Columbia County, 37 Or LUBA 85 (1999).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The scope of additional conflicts that may be considered under OAR 660-023-0180(4)(b)(F), is a question of state law and a county's interpretation of OAR 660-023-0180(4)(b)(F) is not entitled to the deferential standard of review required by ORS 197.829(1) and Clark v. Jackson County, 313 Or 508, 836 P2d 710 (1992). Morse Bros., Inc. v. Columbia County, 37 Or LUBA 85 (1999).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-023-0180(4)(b)(F), which allows the county to consider land use conflicts with a proposed mine if such conflicts must be considered under a county mining ordinance adopted pursuant to ORS 517.780, does not permit a county to apply its comprehensive plan and land use regulations as decisional criteria for the proposed mine, notwithstanding a general provision in the mining ordinance that requires compliance with the county comprehensive plan and land use regulations. Morse Bros., Inc. v. Columbia County, 37 Or LUBA 85 (1999).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A conflict or inconsistency with a comprehensive plan or land use regulation provision is not the kind of conflict that may be considered under OAR 660-023-0180(4)(b). The conflicts that may considered under the rule include conflicts between land uses. Morse Bros., Inc. v. Columbia County, 37 Or LUBA 85 (1999).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where access to a mining site is via a "local road," OAR 660-023-0180(4)(b)(B) allows a county to consider conflicts with that local road. However, where access to a mining site is via an arterial highway there are no local roads used for access and egress to the mining site and OAR 660-023-0180(4)(b)(B) does not permit the county to consider conflicts with other roads. Morse Bros., Inc. v. Columbia County, 37 Or LUBA 85 (1999).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A local government may not expand the 1,500-foot impact area required by OAR 660-023-0180(4)(a) based on potential conflicts that exceed the scope of conflicts that may be considered under OAR 660-023-0180(4)(b). Morse Bros., Inc. v. Columbia County, 37 Or LUBA 85 (1999).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-023-0180(4)(d) directs that a county proceed to "determine the ESEE consequences of either allowing, limiting, or not allowing mining at the site," only where conflicts with a mining site are properly identified under OAR 660-023-0180(4)(b) and there are not "reasonable and practical measures" that would minimize those conflicts. Morse Bros., Inc. v. Columbia County, 37 Or LUBA 85 (1999).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. LUBA will grant a city's motion for a voluntary remand in order to reconsider its Goal 5 determinations in light of petitioner's concerns, even though LUBA would owe no deference to the city's interpretation and application of Goal 5. Hribernick v. City of Gresham, 35 Or LUBA 329 (1998).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. LUBA will reject an assignment of error alleging that a post-acknowledgment plan amendment violates Goal 5, where petitioner does not demonstrate that the decision affects a Goal 5 resource in one of the ways specified in OAR 660-023-0250(3). Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Goal 5 is not implicated by a city decision that merely adopts an existing acknowledged county airport plan. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 35 Or LUBA 30 (1998).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The new Goal 5 rule applies to applications filed on or after September 1, 1996. Where an application was filed in March 1997 but the old Goal 5 rule was applied, the decision must be remanded. Kelley v. City of Cascade Locks, 34 Or LUBA 374 (1998).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The purpose of the boundary delineation and mapping required by the first step of the Goal 5 rule is to make both feasible and meaningful the next step of the Goal 5 analysis: identifying the mutual impacts of Goal 5 resource sites and conflicting uses. Doty v. Jackson County, 34 Or LUBA 287 (1998).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Because the three steps of the Goal 5 analysis are so sequentially dependent, a flaw at step one renders subsequent steps equally flawed. Doty v. Jackson County, 34 Or LUBA 287 (1998).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where a comprehensive plan does not provide for a proposed expansion of a mining site, a conditional use permit is insufficient to permit the expansion. In that circumstance, OAR 660-023-0180 requires a post-acknowledgment plan amendment and Goal 5 analysis. Trademark Construction, Inc. v. Marion County, 34 Or LUBA 202 (1998).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. The Goal 5 rule does not mandate protection of resource use over conflicting uses. Implicit in the fact that the Goal 5 rule permits the local government to deny an application to mine a significant aggregate site is that in some circumstances, conflicting uses may prevail over resource use. Trademark Construction, Inc. v. Marion County, 34 Or LUBA 202 (1998).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Not every regulation that arguably furthers the objectives of Goal 5 applies Goal 5. Ramsey v. City of Portland, 30 Or LUBA 212 (1995).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where challenged post-acknowledgment comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendments do not directly affect a local government's acknowledged Goal 5 inventory, and petitioner does not identify any inventoried Goal 5 resources allegedly affected by the challenged amendments, petitioner provides no basis for reversal or remand. Churchill v. Tillamook County, 29 Or LUBA 68 (1995).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Goal 5 establishes a comprehensive planning process that requires a local government to inventory the location, quality and quantity of listed resources within its territory; identify conflicting uses for the inventoried resources; (3) determine the ESEE consequences of the conflicting uses; and (4) develop programs to achieve the goal of resource protection. Gage v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 307 (1994).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where, during local comprehensive plan map amendment and zone change proceedings, petitioner advised the local government that Statewide Planning Goal 5 requires an analysis regarding only a nearby aggregate operation, petitioner affirmatively waived any Goal 5 issues unrelated to the nearby aggregate operation. DLCD v. Curry County, 28 Or LUBA 205 (1994).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. Where post-acknowledgment legislative land use regulation amendments make portions of a county's acknowledged program for wetlands protection inapplicable to rural wetlands, the county must demonstrate, either in the decision or through argument and citations to the record in its brief, that with regard to rural wetlands, the amendments result in a program that complies with Goal 5 and the Goal 5 rule. Redland/Viola/Fischer's Mill CPO v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 560 (1994).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. In adopting exceptions to Goals 3 and 4 as post-acknowledgment plan amendments, a local government must also address Goal 5 if the exceptions concern or affect lands included on the local government's acknowledged inventory of Goal 5 resources. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

9.1 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Generally. A local government operates within its interpretive discretion in finding that plan policies committing it to complete the Goal 5 process for 1B resource sites in the future refer to comprehensive legislative proceedings and do not obligate the local government to do so for individual sites in permit proceedings. Such an interpretation also is consistent with the Goal 5 rule. OAR 660-16-000(5)(b). Zippel v. Josephine County, 27 Or LUBA 11 (1994).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. In the context of an application to remove property from a county's Goal 5 inventory of significant aggregate resources, where the county has previously determined, in two separate final, acknowledged decisions—one based on area-specific soils mapping and the other based on periodic review which resulted in an updated inventory—that the property should not be included on the county's Goal 3 inventory of agricultural lands; where the county zoned the property for surface mining, a zone that does not implement Goal 3, after one of those previous determinations; and where the ESEE analysis for the property does not specify a post-mining zoning designation or use, a conclusion that the property is not agricultural land is supported by substantial evidence. The county, having previously determined that the property is not agricultural land, is not required to revisit whether the property is agricultural land. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 80 Or LUBA 252 (2019).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Although the holding in Beaver State Sand and Gravel vs. Douglas County, 187 Or App 241, 65 P3d 1123 (2003), determined that ORS 215.298(2) prohibits surface mining on EFU-zoned lands unless the property is included on a Goal 5 inventory of significant aggregate resources, nothing in OAR 660-023-0180 prohibits a local government from otherwise maintaining a "Non-Significant Mining Mineral and Aggregate Inventory," adding properties to that inventory, or allowing surface mining on properties included on that inventory pursuant to local code provisions regulating surface mining, and a local government is not required to apply any rules implementing Goal 5 to its decision to add property to that inventory. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 80 Or LUBA 252 (2019).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. When Community Plan adopted as part of the county's comprehensive plan includes a Significant Natural and Cultural Resources (SNR) Map, and an applicant for development of property that is included on the SNR Map provides the county with additional information identifying "the location of the natural resource(s)," as required by the applicable approval criteria, the requirement to precisely identify the location of the protected resource does not amount to an amendment of the SNR Map. Warren v. Washington County, 78 Or LUBA 107 (2018).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. When the hearings officer makes findings on a wildlife habitat area located within a Significant Natural and Cultural Resources (SNR) Map, the hearings officer's task is to consider all of the evidence in the record and determine whether the applicable approval criteria are satisfied. A hearings officer's task is not to determine whether intervenor's submittals in support of the application are "supported by substantial evidence in the record." Rather, the hearings officer must weigh the evidence submitted against the applicable standards and criteria, and make that determination. Warren v. Washington County, 78 Or LUBA 107 (2018).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Only the portion of a proposed mining site that qualifies as "significant," under OAR 660-023-0180(3)(a), is properly included on a county's comprehensive plan inventory of significant aggregate resource sites under Statewide Planning Goal 5. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. In determining whether a local government inventoried elk habitat as a significant Statewide Planning Goal 5 resource and adopted a program to protect that inventoried significant elk habitat, or instead determined not to inventory the elk habitat as significant or to defer adopting a protection program, LUBA considers what the local government actually adopted rather than the labels or terminology the local government used in adopting the comprehensive plan. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where petitioner fails to identify any zoning or subdivision regulations that would govern the city's decision whether or not to remove 35 trees from a city park and does not contend the park or trees in the park are inventoried as significant Goal 5 resources or identify any Goal 5 program that would apply to protect the trees at issue, petitioner fails to carry her burden to demonstrate that the challenged decision is a "land use decision" subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Carlson v. City of Brookings, 77 Or LUBA 497 (2018).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. A county does not necessarily err by distinguishing between a large part of the county where few people live and a smaller part of the county where the majority of the county's population lives as a basis for adopting programs with differing levels of protection for big game habitat. But a significant increase in permissible residential densities in the smaller more heavily impacted area must be justified. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 76 Or LUBA 396 (2017).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where a property owner initially objects to designation of property as a historic resource, but later withdraws that objection or consents to the designation, the designation is not "imposed on the property" within the meaning of ORS 197.772(3). However, where a property owner objects to designation, and at later stages of the designation proceeding is simply silent regarding designation, that silence does not mean that the owner withdrew the objection or consented to the designation. Lake Oswego Preservation Society v. City of Lake Oswego, 70 Or LUBA 103 (2014).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where pursuant to ORS 197.772(3) a local government removes property from an inventory of historic resources at the request of the property owner, code provisions implementing Goal 5 that would otherwise require evaluation of whether removal is consistent with Goal 5 do not apply. Removal under ORS 197.772(3) and removal under Goal 5 and implementing regulations are alternatives. Lake Oswego Preservation Society v. City of Lake Oswego, 70 Or LUBA 103 (2014).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Because OAR 660-023-0190(2) expressly authorizes counties to proceed on a case-by-case basis to complete the Goal 5 inventory process with respect to energy resources, a county is not obligated to undertake a county-wide inventory of wind energy resources as a precondition to adopting legislative amendments protecting other types of Goal 5 resources from development impacts of wind energy facilities. Cosner v. Umatilla County, 65 Or LUBA 9 (2012).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. In order to add a site to a local government's inventory of significant aggregate sites, an applicant must demonstrate that threshold amounts of aggregate are present on the site based on a "representative set of samples of aggregate material in the deposit on the site" under OAR 660-023-0180(3)(a). Where nothing in the Goal 5 rule specifies any particular standards that govern the methodology used to collect "a representative set of samples," a county does not err in accepting and relying on samples collected using methods that a reasonable professional geologist would employ to determine the quantity of aggregate present on the site. Protect Grand Island Farms v. Yamhill County, 64 Or LUBA 179 (2011).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Under OAR 660-023-0180(3)(d)(B)(ii), in Yamhill County, an aggregate resource is not "significant" within the meaning of OAR 660-023-0180(3) unless "the average thickness of the aggregate layer within the mining area exceeds 25 feet." Where aggregate is present both above and below an intervening layer of clay, it is not inconsistent with the text or purpose of the rule for a local government to consider the intervening clay layer to constitute "overburden" for purposes of mining the lower aggregate deposit. Protect Grand Island Farms v. Yamhill County, 64 Or LUBA 179 (2011).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. A decision that merely adds an aggregate site to a comprehensive plan inventory of significant aggregate resource sites may not trigger application of the transportation planning rule (TPR) in any of the ways described in OAR 660-012-0060(1). But when the county decides to allow mining of the site and places an overlay zone on the site to allow mining, that zone change authorizes a new, more traffic-intensive use of the property and may trigger application of the TPR. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where the challenged decision approves (1) a comprehensive plan amendment adding a site to the county's Goal 5 inventory of significant sites, and (2) a zone change to allow mining of the site, because the zone change application is consolidated with, and dependent upon, the plan amendment, the goal-post rule at ORS 215.427(3) does not operate to "freeze" the standards that apply to the zone change to those applicable on the date the application was filed. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Because the end of the planning period plays an important role under the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) at OAR 660-012-0060(1) in determining whether proposed plan or zone amendments significantly affect transportation facilities, when the county amends its transportation system plan to change the planning period from 2020 to 2030, the county must apply the new planning period in determining whether the proposed plan/zone change complies with the TPR. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. If there is sufficient information on the location, quality and quantity of a Goal 5 resource to determine that it is "significant," OAR 660-016-0000(5)(c) requires a local government to include the site on its resource inventory, and "proceed through the remainder of the Goal 5 process." Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. The estimated quantity and quality of mineral resources determined to be present on a site play a larger role in the Goal 5 planning process than merely determining whether the resources cross a threshold of significance. Those estimates are also central to the Conflict Resolution/ESEE Consequences and Program to Achieve the Goal phases of Goal 5 planning under OAR chapter 660, division 16. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. With respect to quantity, absent some indication that a local government believed the estimated quantity to represent a maximum and took that maximum estimated quantity into account in its ESEE analysis and ultimate decisions regarding the Program to Achieve the Goal, a new or amended ESEE analysis is not required simply because the applicant discovers that a larger amount of inventoried mineral is present at the site than was originally estimated. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. While an amended ESEE analysis under Goal 5 will generally be required to mine mineral resources other than those that are included on the site's inventory, an amended ESEE analysis will not be needed for incidental mining of non-inventoried mineral resources. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. If a local government can establish that, had it known of the presence, quality and quantity of a non-inventoried mineral resource when it adopted the original ESEE analysis and Program to Achieve the Goal for a site based on other inventoried mineral resources, the differences between inventoried and non-inventoried resources are sufficiently minimal in terms of extraction methods, conflicts, etc., that the local government would have chosen to balance conflicts in the same way, and would have adopted the same Program to Achieve the Goal, mining of the non-inventoried mineral resource can be accurately viewed as "incidental" and such mining may proceed without an amended ESEE analysis for the site. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where a site is included on a local government's Goal 5 inventory based on one type of mineral resource, a local government's decision that mining of a different non-inventoried mineral resource on the site may proceed without an amended ESEE analysis under Goal 5 will be remanded where the quantity of the non-inventoried mineral resource is five times the amount of the inventoried mineral resource and the mining of the non-inventoried resource may leave a significantly larger and more visible headwall that will conflict with nearby uses more than if only the inventoried mineral resource were removed. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. A proposed aggregate resource site is significant if it meets any one of the criteria at subsections (a) to (c) of OAR 660-023-0180(3). Delta Property Company v. Lane County, 58 Or LUBA 409 (2009).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Even if an aggregate resource site is found to be "significant" under OAR 660-023-0180(3)(a) or (b), OAR

660-023-0180(3)(d) dictates that such aggregate resource sites are not "significant," within the meaning of OAR 660-023-0180(3), if (1) more than 35 percent of the site's soils are rated Class I by the Natural Resource and Conservation Service or (2) more than 35 percent of the site's soils are rated Class II or a combination of Class I and II by the Natural Resource and Conservation Service and the average thickness of the aggregate layer does not exceed specified minimums in the rule. Delta Property Company v. Lane County, 58 Or LUBA 409 (2009).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where OAR 660-023-0180(3)(d)(B) applies, and the requisite average thickness of the aggregate layer is not shown to be present, an aggregate resource site is not "significant," within the meaning of OAR 660-023-0180(3). Delta Property Company v. Lane County, 58 Or LUBA 409 (2009).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where a county has amended its comprehensive plan and land use regulations to include procedures and requirements for the consideration of post-acknowledgement plan amendments concerning aggregate resources, and the comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendments are acknowledged in periodic review as implementing OAR 660-023-0180, the provisions of OAR 660-023-0180(6) do not apply directly to an application to add a property to the county's inventory of significant aggregate resources. Stern v. Josephine County, 58 Or LUBA 511 (2009).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where applicable, OAR 660-023-0180(6)(a) requires satisfaction of conditional use criteria and the provisions of ORS 215.296 and ORS 215.402 to 215.416 only where an aggregate site has already been placed on the county's inventory of significant aggregate resources; it does not require satisfaction of those provisions where a county is making the initial decision whether to place a site on the county's inventory. Stern v. Josephine County, 58 Or LUBA 511 (2009).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. For purposes of OAR 660-023-0180(3)(d) (the 35% Rule) and local ordinances implementing the rule, as long as aggregate is present in the requisite quantity and mining is not conclusively prohibited on the property by federal, state or local law, the county is not required to determine the likelihood of a successful permitting process in determining whether a site is "significant" under the 35% Rule. Stern v. Josephine County, 58 Or LUBA 511 (2009).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. A local government with an acknowledged Goal 5 inventory is not required to update that inventory when adopting a post-acknowledgment plan amendment that does not itself alter the acknowledged Goal 5 inventory. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Under OAR 660-023-0030(3), where a local government determines that it does not have adequate information about a potential Goal 5 site, the local government "shall not regulate land uses in order to protect such sites." Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. A local government with an acknowledged Goal 5 inventory is not required to update that inventory when adopting a post-acknowledgment plan amendment that does not itself alter the acknowledged Goal 5 inventory. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. A finding that a proposed aggregate site may have a large basalt outcrop in the middle of the site is not supported by substantial evidence, where the only evidence supporting the finding is data from an off-site well and that finding is inconsistent with a deep boring that is near the center of the site and between the center of the site and the off-site well that the finding relied on. Westside Rock v. Clackamas County, 56 Or LUBA 601 (2008).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. To qualify as a "significant" aggregate resource site under OAR 660-023-0180(3)(d)(B)(ii), "the average thickness of the aggregate layer within the mining area" must exceed 25 feet. Where a county's findings suggest the county may have erroneously concluded that boulders should not be considered in determining whether the requisite 25-foot-thick layer is present on a proposed aggregate resource site, remand is necessary so that the county can either (1) adopt findings under OAR 660-0023-0180(3) that do not discount aggregate significance based on the possible presence of boulders or (2) explain why the presence of boulders properly affects the determination of significance under OAR 660-0023-0180(3). Westside Rock v. Clackamas County, 56 Or LUBA 601 (2008).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where an applicant seeking to establish that a proposed mining site qualifies as a significant aggregate resource site does not argue to the county that opponents' data from off-site wells is consistent with data from the applicant's on-site wells or that the data from the off-site wells is unreliable because it was not collected under the supervision of a geologist, it is not unreasonable for the county to rely on the opponents' evidence to conclude that the two on-site borings were not sufficient to establish that a 117-acre mining site qualifies as a significant aggregate resource site. Westside Rock v. Clackamas County, 56 Or LUBA 601 (2008).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Two 25-foot-deep test pits that show an overburden of several feet on top of 20+ feet of aggregate material do not establish that there is an aggregate layer of more than 25 feet and they do not establish that the aggregate layer that is present on the site is less than 25 feet deep. The 25-foot-deep pit can only confirm the geology of the 25 feet below the surface where the test pit was dug. Westside Rock v. Clackamas County, 56 Or LUBA 601 (2008).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. A decision that adds an aggregate mining site to the county's comprehensive plan inventory of significant mineral and aggregate resources and adopts background documents to the comprehensive plan, is a plan text amendment rather than a plan map amendment, and therefore under the county's code the decision is subject to procedures and standards applicable to legislative plan amendments. Rickreall Community Water Assoc. v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 76 (2006).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. The final steps in the analysis required under OAR 660-023-0180 to review requests for mining are limited and structured: (1) the county must determine whether there are any conflicts with the proposed mining, (2) if there are conflicts the county must consider whether there are measures that would minimize those conflicts, (3) if conflicts cannot be minimized, the county must determine the economic, social, environmental and energy consequences of allowing, limiting or not allowing mining. Hellberg v. Morrow County, 49 Or LUBA 423 (2005).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Adoption of an ordinance that authorizes demolition of a structure that the city's Goal 5 historic inventory classifies as "noncontributing" and that is not protected under the city's historic resource protection program does not alter the Goal 5 inventory or "amend" the city's "resource list" within the meaning of OAR 660-023-0250(3)(a). NWDA v. City of Portland, 47 Or LUBA 533 (2004).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where a local government has repealed its Goal 5 inventory of aggregate sites, the owner of EFU-zoned property listed on the repealed inventory is not entitled to a conditional use permit to mine the site under ORS 215.298(2). Copeland Sand & Gravel, Inc. v. Jackson County, 46 Or LUBA 653 (2004).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. The lack of specific evidence on whether aggregate samples tested by a laboratory were "representative," as required by OAR 660-023-0180(3)(a), does not provide a basis for reversal or remand, where the samples came from an existing quarry and there is no suggestion in the record that the sample was not representative or that the quality of rock in the existing quarry was not uniform. Bryant v. Umatilla County, 45 Or LUBA 653 (2003).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Notwithstanding that OAR 660-023-0180(3)(a) requires that aggregate samples meet ODOT specifications for sodium sulfate soundness, where it is undisputed that ODOT in fact has not promulgated any such specifications, the failure of the applicant to test aggregate samples for sodium sulfate soundness does not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Bryant v. Umatilla County, 45 Or LUBA 653 (2003).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. The OAR 660-016-0000 requirement to identify the "location" of the resource within an identified "impact area" is intended to assist the local government to determine the "significance" of the resource and whether it should be included on the Goal 5 inventory. If found to be "significant," the resource must be included on the Goal 5 inventory. The OAR 660-016-0000 requirements are not intended to be a shortcut to the conflict identification and ESEE analysis required under OAR 660-016-0005 and 0010. Hegele v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 357 (2003).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. The valid inventory description for site-specific resources required by OAR 660-016-0000(2) refers to resource sites rather than smaller parcels such as tax lots. Ramsey v. Multnomah County, 44 Or LUBA 722 (2003).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. A county decision establishing a one-half-mile radius impact area around proposed dwellings within a Goal 5 wildlife habitat area is supported by substantial evidence, where the county relies on studies that human impacts extend one-half mile from dwellings and elk prefer to be at least one-half mile from humans. Doty v. Jackson County, 43 Or LUBA 34 (2002).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Other than to require that the county "maintain a record" of a determination that a mining site is non-significant, OAR 660-023-0030(6) does not address or provide any criteria with respect to a request to add a mining site to the county's comprehensive plan list of non-significant sites, and does not authorize the county to approve or deny that request based on concerns regarding the impacts of mining. Beaver State Sand and Gravel v. Douglas County, 43 Or LUBA 140 (2002).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Read in context, the ORS 215.298 provision allowing a mining operation on EFU-zoned lands if the site is on an "inventory" in a comprehensive plan is a reference to a Goal 5 "inventory" of mineral sites. Because under the 1982 Goal 5 rule the term "inventory" referred to an inventory of significant mineral sites, ORS 215.298 allows mining in an EFU zone only if the site is on a comprehensive plan inventory of significant mineral sites, not if the site is on a separate list of nonsignificant sites. Beaver State Sand and Gravel v. Douglas County, 43 Or LUBA 140 (2002).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Absent a showing that amendments regulating natural resources not on the city's acknowledged Goal 5 inventory are intended to create or amend or have the effect of creating or amending a Goal inventory, such amendments need not comply with Goal 5 or the Goal 5 rule. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Code provisions protecting historic structures that are described in the county's inventory as significant, important or contributing to the significance of the overall resource are not properly interpreted to protect an accessory structure on the subject property that is not mentioned in the county's inventory. Paulson v. Washington County, 40 Or LUBA 345 (2001).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. A local ordinance that institutes a process to remove property from a Goal 5 historic resources inventory but fails to include a method to determine whether the historic designation was "imposed" on the property, within the meaning of ORS 197.772(3), is inconsistent with that statute. Demlow v. City of Hillsboro, 39 Or LUBA 307 (2001).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. A local government may not apply only local code provisions to an application to remove property from a historic resources inventory, where the local code provisions are inconsistent with statutory provisions permitting removal of certain properties from a historic resources inventory. Demlow v. City of Hillsboro, 39 Or LUBA 307 (2001).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. In addressing OAR 660-016-0000(2) and (3) for a proposed aggregate site expansion, the county must determine whether the aggregate resource on the subject site is of comparable or superior quality to aggregate resource sites already included on the acknowledged inventory, regardless of the availability of those sites for mining. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. For a local government to properly evaluate the quality and quantity of aggregate resources on a parcel, test holes or borings must be "representative." To be representative, a reasonable person must conclude that the local government's findings as to the quantity and quality of the resource throughout the subject property are supported by substantial evidence. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. A finding that the subject property contains no identified Goal 5 resources is not adequate to address the Goal 4 requirement that "other forested lands" be designated as forest lands if such lands are needed to maintain soil, water, air, fish and wildlife resources. DLCD v. Curry County, 33 Or LUBA 728 (1997).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where a county has an acknowledged Goal 5 program, which includes an acknowledged inventory, and rural wetlands are included in a special category that is not part of that inventory, amendments to the county's ordinance that modify protections to rural wetlands do not change the county's procedures for inventorying Goal 5 resources and do not conflict with Goal 5 because they continue to provide interim protection of resources in a special category. Redland/Viola/Fischer's Mill CPO v. Clackamas County, 33 Or LUBA 152 (1997).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. In approving a comprehensive plan amendment, the county's analysis and findings regarding potential effects of an aggregate operation on surrounding lands are sufficient to support a 1B listing on the county's Goal 5 inventory. Because listing the site as a potential aggregate resource does not actually permit a mining operation, the county is not required to address the requirements of ORS 215.296 as part of its decision. O'Rourke v. Union County, 32 Or LUBA 447 (1997).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. In the absence of a showing that the county has followed the process set forth in OAR chapter 660, division 16, to place a state viewpoint on its Goal 5 inventory, it may not rely on Goal 5 to protect the viewpoint from the impact of growing trees on the subject property. DLCD v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 488 (1996).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Because listing a 1B site adds the site to the Goal 5 inventory and under ORS 215.298(2), inventoried sites are available to be mined under a conditional use permit, a 1B site that has not yet been subjected to a Goal 5 significance review process nonetheless may be mined under a conditional use permit. O'Rourke v. Union County, 31 Or LUBA 174 (1996).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where an issue raised by petitioners regarding the county's decision to include intervenor's site in its Goal 5 inventory was decided in a prior LUBA appeal of the same decision, that issue cannot be raised again. O'Rourke v. Union County, 31 Or LUBA 174 (1996).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. A 1B designation on the county's Goal 5 inventory means that inadequate information exists on the site to determine its nature and, therefore, a county cannot rely on a site being listed as a 1B site to conclude that aggregate uses are allowed outright. Tognoli v. Crook County, 30 Or LUBA 272 (1996).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. OAR 660-16-000(3) recognizes practical limitations on information gathering with respect to both quantity and quality of aggregate resources at sites other than the one being evaluated under Goal 5 regulations. Palmer v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 436 (1995).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. If a local government adds an aggregate site to its comprehensive plan inventory as a "1B" site, a statement in the inventory that the site "will be reviewed through the Goal 5 process before [the local government's] next periodic review" satisfies the requirement of OAR 660-16-000(5)(b) that the plan include a "time-frame" for completing the Goal 5 process. O'Rourke v. Union County, 29 Or LUBA 303 (1995).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. The analysis of resource location, quality and quantity and determination of site significance mandated by OAR 660-16-000(1) to (4) are required to be completed only if the 1A (do not put on inventory) or 1C (place on inventory and complete Goal 5 process) options are chosen. The 1B option is to be used where the available information indicates the possible existence of a resource site, but is not sufficient to perform the analysis required by OAR 660-16-000(1) to (4). O'Rourke v. Union County, 29 Or LUBA 303 (1995).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. A decision to list a site on a plan aggregate resources inventory as a "1B" site simply indicates the possible existence of an aggregate resource site. Such a decision, of itself, neither plans for nor regulates the development of aggregate resources and, therefore, OAR 660-16-030(1) does not apply. O'Rourke v. Union County, 29 Or LUBA 303 (1995).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. If the local governing body's interpretation of its comprehensive plan as not already designating the subject property as a 1B aggregate resources site, or providing a method of doing so without amending the acknowledged plan, is not clearly wrong, LUBA will defer to the governing body's interpretation. O'Rourke v. Union County, 29 Or LUBA 303 (1995).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. In adopting post-acknowledgment comprehensive plan amendments, other than amendments to the plan's acknowledged Goal 5 inventory itself, a local government is entitled to rely on its acknowledged Goal 5 inventory and need not consider possible impacts on alleged Goal 5 resource sites that are not included on the Goal 5 inventory. Friends of Cedar Mill v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 477 (1995).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where petitioner challenges a local government's failure to address the impact of a plan amendment on resources petitioner believes should be included on the local government's acknowledged Goal 5 inventory, but does not challenge the adequacy of the local government's findings concerning inventoried Goal 5 resources affected by the proposed plan amendment, petitioner fails to demonstrate the plan amendment violates Goal 5. Friends of Cedar Mill v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 477 (1995).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Where the only inventory of historic structures maintained by a city has not been adopted as part of the city's acknowledged comprehensive plan, a post-acknowledgment decision not to designate an inventoried building as a historical landmark is not a de facto post-acknowledgment plan amendment, even though the decision may ultimately allow the building to be demolished. Historical Development Advocates v. City of Portland, 27 Or LUBA 617 (1994).

9.2 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Inventory. Under the Goal 5 rule, 1B sites are those for which some information exists, but that information is not adequate to identify the site with particularity. For 1B sites, the local government must include the site in its plan as a special category and commit to complete the Goal 5 process in the future. However, the Goal 5 rule provides that special implementing measures are neither appropriate nor required for 1B sites. Zippel v. Josephine County, 27 Or LUBA 11 (1994).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. In redesignating and rezoning protected habitat from forest land to marginal land under former ORS 197.247 (1991), a local government errs by excluding adjacent forest land from the impact area under OAR 661-023-0040(3) without establishing that it is not also protected habitat. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 205 (2019).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where a post-acknowledgement plan amendment would increase the amount of impervious surfaces permitted on the subject property, resulting in increased runoff volume, and the city's stormwater manual states that stormwater treatment facilities are designed to capture and treat only 80 percent of runoff volume, a conclusory finding that "the City standards will adequately collect and treat stormwater runoff" is inadequate to demonstrate, for purposes of OAR 660-023-0250(3)(b), that the city standards will eliminate the possibility of conflicts with a nearby creek which is a Goal 5 resource. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 79 Or LUBA 22 (2019).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where an economic, social, environmental and energy (ESEE) analysis identifies conflicting uses as the commercial and high-density residential development allowed under a proposed post-acknowledgement plan amendment, and concludes that the greater development intensity and imperviousness may result in greater direct impacts on water quality and water temperature in a nearby creek which is a Goal 5 resource, arguments that the ESEE analysis does not specifically address pollution from stormwater provide no basis for reversal or remand because OAR 660-023-0040(2) does not require a more detailed identification of conflicting uses. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 79 Or LUBA 22 (2019).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Petitioners fail to establish that the city erred in concluding that rezoning a property to neighborhood commercial is consistent with Statewide Planning Goal 5 when the rezoning the subject property constitutes a PAPA for purposes of applying Goal 5, which provides that local governments are not required to apply Goal 5 in consideration of a PAPA unless the PAPA affects a Goal 5 resource by allowing new uses that "could be conflicting uses with a particular significant Goal 5 resource site on an acknowledged resource list." The city's PAPA is a very limited one, that in relevant part simply applies the zones implementing the city's comprehensive plan designations that the acknowledged comprehensive plan has already designated for the corresponding uses. Because the challenged PAPA simply implements that acknowledged plan designation choice with the exercise of little or no discretion, the PAPA does not authorize any "new uses" for purposes of OAR 660-023-0250(3) and Goal 5. Renken v. City of Oregon City, 79 Or LUBA 82 (2019).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where a local code provision, which is acknowledged to comply with Goal 5, allows the construction of a reservoir for surface mining in conjunction with an irrigation district, but requires that sites proposed for that use be added to the local government's inventory of non-significant mineral sites through a post-acknowledgment plan amendment (PAPA), such a PAPA does not allow "new uses that could be conflicting uses" with a Goal 5 resource, and therefore does not require further analysis under Goal 5, where the construction of a reservoir is otherwise allowed for a recreation-oriented facility without a PAPA. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 79 Or LUBA 380 (2019).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Under OAR 660-023-0040, in determining whether a post-acknowledgement plan amendment (PAPA) will allow uses that could conflict with a Goal 5 resource, a local government must evaluate all uses allowed outright or conditionally in the zones applied to the subject property, not just those uses proposed by the applicant. In addition, while a local government may conclude that existing regulations are sufficient to eliminate the possibility of such conflicts, a local government errs by concluding the PAPA will not allow potentially conflicting uses merely because the applicant's development plan limits development to a certain extent. Such a determination must instead be based on the uses allowed outright or conditionally in the zones applied to the subject property, regardless of the property's ownership, limitations in specific proposed development, or limitations imposed in the PAPA approval. Cattoche v. Lane County, 79 Or LUBA 466 (2019).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(b) a local government must determine existing or approved land uses that may be adversely affected by mining at an inventoried significant aggregate resource site, including conflicts with Statewide Planning Goal 5 resource sites that are shown on an acknowledged inventory of significant resource sites for which the requirements of Statewide Planning Goal 5 have been completed. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Based on an ESEE consequences analysis regarding conflicting uses, under OAR 660-023-0040(4) and (5), a county must develop a program to achieve Goal 5, and determine whether to allow, limit, or prohibit conflicting uses. A local government errs in its ESEE analysis and in its ultimate decision to modify its acknowledged Goal 5 program to eliminate the prohibition on churches in the Wildlife Area Combining Zone, when it relied in part on the cost of defending its existing Goal 5 program against a hypothetical Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA) lawsuit to support its decision to achieve Goal 5 by allowing without limits a new conflicting use, without providing an analysis establishing the county's Goal 5 program would be legally vulnerable to losing a hypothetical RLUIPA lawsuit if one were brought. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 395 (2018).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. To allow a conflicting use without limit under OAR 660-023-0040(5)(c), a county's ESEE analysis must (1) demonstrate that the conflicting use is of sufficient importance relative to the resource site, and (2) must indicate why measures to protect the resource "to some extent should not be provided." OAR 660-023-0040(5)(c) does not prohibit the county from allowing a conflicting use without limit, if there is another option that would both fully protect the resource at issue and satisfy the motivations prompting the county to decide in favor of the conflicting use. Instead, OAR 660-023-0040(5)(c) requires the county to justify its choice to allow a conflicting use without limit, and that justification must include a demonstration that alternatives, such as imposing limits or measures to provide some protection for the resource consistent with OAR 660-023-0040(5)(b) should not be provided. Assuming that demonstration is made, OAR 660-023-0040(5) and Goal 5 do not compel the local government to choose alternatives that fully or partially protect the resource. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 395 (2018).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. In the context of a county's Goal 5 analysis, LUBA will reject the county's argument that there are no measures that the county could adopt to protect wildlife habitat from the negative impacts of churches without running afoul of a Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA) requirement–that governments not impose a "substantial burden" on religious exercise–where the county's ESEE analysis includes no evaluation of any measures or any findings on this point, and without actually evaluating any measures that would provide some protection to wildlife resources, it is difficult to understand how the county could reach a conclusion that no measures could be adopted to protect wildlife resources without also imposing a "substantial burden" on religious exercise. In such a circumstance, remand is necessary for the county to adopt an ESEE analysis that either does not rely on the mere threat of RLUIPA litigation, or that actually evaluates whether the county's existing Goal 5 program is inconsistent with the RLUIPA Equal Terms or Substantial Burden requirements, so that the county can consider whether there are measures it can adopt pursuant to OAR 660-023-0040(5)(b) and (c) to reduce impacts on wildlife resources and include those evaluations in the revised ESEE analysis. As part of that analysis, the county may consider, if necessary, whether identified measures would impose a "substantial burden" on the free exercise of religion. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 395 (2018).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. The Goal 5 rule, at OAR chapter 660, division 23, includes a "standard" process for inventorying, evaluating and protecting natural resources, at OAR 660-023-0030 to 660-023-0050, that includes rules for evaluating the ESEE consequences for allowing, limiting, or prohibiting uses that conflict with a natural resource site. The Goal 5 rule also includes "special" standards and procedures for specific types of Goal 5 resources, including those that govern aggregate mineral resources, at OAR 660-023-0180. According to OAR 660-023-0020(1), sometimes both the standard process and a special process apply; sometimes the special process supersedes the standard process in whole, or in part, and in case of conflict the specific process controls. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 77 Or LUBA 452 (2018).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a) requires the local government to identify conflicts with existing and approved uses located within a determined "impact area" limited in size to 1,500 feet from the boundaries of the mining area, unless factual information indicates "significant potential conflicts" beyond 1,500 feet. After deciding to allow mining under OAR 660-023-0180(5), the county must also go on to consider whether to allow, limit, or prevent new or future conflicting uses within the impact area pursuant to OAR 660-023-0180(7). For this limited inquiry, the county must conduct the analysis pursuant to the standard ESEE process in OAR 660-023-0040 and-0050. OAR 660-023-0040(3) requires local governments to "determine an impact area for each significant resource site. The impact area shall be drawn to include only the area in which allowed uses could adversely affect the identified resource," which means that unlike the impact area determined under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a), the impact area determined under OAR 660-023-0040(3) is not initially limited to 1,500 feet and the geographic extent of the impact area is determined by evaluating whether "allowed uses could adversely affect the identified resource," rather than evaluating whether there is factual information indicating "significant potential conflicts" beyond an initial 1,500 feet. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 77 Or LUBA 452 (2018).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Petitioners have not established that a county's failure to determine an impact area for purposes of OAR 660-023-0180(7) pursuant to the standard ESEE process at OAR 660-023-0040(3) is more than harmless error, where it is not clear that an impact area determined under OAR 660-023-0040(3) would be larger or different than the one the county established under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a), petitioners have not identified any new conflicting uses within a more expansive impact area that could adversely impact the mining site and that therefore should have been limited or prevented based on the arguably more sensitive OAR 660-023-0040(3) test, compared to the "significant potential conflict" test that the county employed under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a), and because the applicant is the only party that could possibly be harmed by employing a potentially smaller impact area as determined under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a), and the applicant is not challenging that potentially smaller impact area but rather is actively defending it on appeal. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 77 Or LUBA 452 (2018).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. In the context of a post-acknowledgment plan amendment to inventory a significant aggregate site and allow mining of that site under Goal 5, if the local government concludes based on its ESEE analysis that new conflicting uses should be allowed within the impact area under the existing comprehensive plan and land use regulations, the local government's program to achieve the goal in that regard may consist of simply relying on its acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations to protect the resource site from new conflicting uses pursuant to OAR 660-023-0040(2)(a). Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 77 Or LUBA 452 (2018).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. A county does not necessarily err by distinguishing between a large part of the county where few people live and a smaller part of the county where the majority of the county's population lives as a basis for adopting programs with differing levels of protection for big game habitat. But a significant increase in permissible residential densities in the smaller more heavily impacted area must be justified. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 76 Or LUBA 396 (2017).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. OAR 660-023-0030 to 660-023-0050 call for a step by step planning process that results in an analysis of the consequences of allowing, limiting, or prohibiting uses that conflict with inventoried Goal 5 resource sites. But after that planning process is complete, the rule does not require separately considering the cumulative impacts of all identified conflicting uses. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 76 Or LUBA 396 (2017).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where the record includes only speculative testimony that mining would impact sage grouse causing them to relocate and conflict with grazing operations beyond the proposed one-half-mile mining impact area, thus justifying a larger impact area, a county finding that mining would neither impact sage grouse nor cause them to relocate nor result in conflicts with distant farming operations is supported by substantial evidence, where the record includes testimony from the manager of a nearby grazing operation that there were no nearby sage grouse and the proposed mine would not have any impacts on grazing. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 72 Or LUBA 45 (2015).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where a city's acknowledged Goal 5 program to protect wetlands and natural resources already allows trails and bicycle and pedestrian ways in wetland and natural resources overlay districts, the city's adoption of a transportation system plan that authorizes a regional trail through wetland and natural resource areas does not authorize a new "conflicting use" for purposes of OAR 660-023-0250(3)(b) and thus does not require further analysis under Goal 5 or the Goal 5 rule. Terra Hydr Inc. v. City of Tualatin, 68 Or LUBA 279 (2013).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. In determining the size of an impact area under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a) and whether "factual information indicates significant potential conflicts beyond" the 1,500-foot impact area set out in the rule, a county reasonably concludes that the record does not include "factual information indicating significant potential conflicts" beyond one mile from the subject mine site, where the county reasonably relies on expert evidence from a hydrologist to conclude that blasting would not cause damage to wells either within or beyond one mile from the site. Poto v. Linn County, 67 Or LUBA 162 (2013).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. In determining the size of an impact area under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a) and whether "factual information indicates significant potential conflicts beyond" the 1,500-foot impact area set out in the rule, nothing in ORS 215.301 obligates a county to expand the impact area to include a planted vineyard located within one mile of the mine site. ORS 215.301 is a law, and cannot reasonably be understood to be the "factual information" referenced in OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a). Poto v. Linn County, 67 Or LUBA 162 (2013).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. In considering conflicts with agricultural practices under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(b), nothing in ORS 215.301 mandates that the outcome of a county's conflicts analysis must be that batching is a conflict that cannot be minimized. If the evidence showed absolutely no conflicts between a batching plant and a vineyard located closer than two miles from the property, under the Goal 5 rule the county could add the site to its inventory of Significant Resource Sites with All Conflicts Minimized, but would be prohibited from approving batching under ORS 215.301 unless the exemption in ORS 215.301(2) applies. Poto v. Linn County, 67 Or LUBA 162 (2013).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where there is no evidence in the record that diesel exhaust from trucks traveling to and from a proposed mining site on a public road will have a significant effect on berry farming on a nearby farm or will significantly increase the cost of berry farming, a local government reasonably concludes that there will be no significant effect on crops growing along the public road. Protect Grand Island Farms v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 291 (2012).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where the local government relied on the applicant's proposal to use a retrenching method to determine that dewatering from the mining operation will not affect groundwater levels of nearby wells and therefore not conflict with agricultural irrigation practices, but no condition of approval requires the retrenching method to be used, remand is required in order for the local government to condition its approval on use of the retrenching method. Protect Grand Island Farms v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 291 (2012).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Floodwater that enters and leaves a mining operation during a flood event is not an "other discharge" as that phrase is used in OAR 660-023-0180(5)(b)(A). Protect Grand Island Farms v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 291 (2012).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Remand is necessary to address testimony from a neighboring rancher that noise from blasting operations at a proposed quarry will force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of the neighboring ranching operations, where the county's conclusion that cattle will not be grazing during the months when blasting occurs is based on a presumption in the applicant's expert's report that is not supported by anything in the record and that presumption is contradicted by other evidence in the record. Nash v. Deschutes County, 63 Or LUBA 27 (2011).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. A local government errs in concluding that it is not required to apply Statewide Planning Goal 5 to a post acknowledgement plan amendment (PAPA) that adds lands to the county's map of lands eligible for a destination resort by relying on an ESEE analysis that was completed and adopted 16 years prior to the proposed PAPA and that does not include any analysis of the new lands proposed for inclusion on the destination resort map. Root v. Klamath County, 63 Or LUBA 230 (2011).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. The fact that the entire Goal 5 planning document that a local government adopted for a site was adopted as part of the comprehensive plan does not necessarily mean that the identification of conflicts and ESEE analysis portions of that document that were not included in the Program to Achieve the Goal must be given regulatory effect. Whether those portions of the ESEE analysis have regulatory effect depends on the text of those portions of the ESEE analysis and their context. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where the zoning ordinance definition of "noise-sensitive uses" is ambiguous and could be interpreted to include the entire parcel where the use is located or more narrowly to include only the use's structure, and there is some contextual support for limiting the use to the structure, LUBA will defer to the local government's decision to adopt the more narrow interpretation. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. In determining the size of an impact area under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a) and whether "factual information indicates significant potential conflicts beyond" the 1,500-foot impact area set out in the rule, a county must evaluate evidence submitted regarding land that is located beyond the 1,500-foot impact area and potentially some distance from the mining site. Walker v. Deschutes County, 59 Or LUBA 488 (2009).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Remand is necessary to address testimony from a neighboring rancher that noise from blasting rock at a proposed quarry will force a significant change in or significantly increase the cost of ranching practices, where the findings do not address that testimony or noise impacts in general, but instead rely on fencing and a 200-foot buffer area to conclude that mining would not impact nearby grazing operations. Walker v. Deschutes County, 59 Or LUBA 488 (2009).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where sage grouse habitat is not a significant resource shown on a county's Goal 5 inventory of significant resources, the county need not consider impacts of a mining operation on sage grouse habitat, except to the extent impacts on habitat also result in impacts to a sage grouse breeding site that is listed in the county's Goal 5 inventory. Walker v. Deschutes County, 59 Or LUBA 488 (2009).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. A county reasonably concludes that the record does not include "factual information indicating significant potential conflicts" with respect to whether a proposed quarry will disrupt sage grouse flights to and from a protected breeding site, where the only evidence suggesting that grouse flights come near the quarry site is a map the significance of which is subject to conflicting expert testimony. Walker v. Deschutes County, 59 Or LUBA 488 (2009).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. OAR 660-023-0180(5)(b)(A) requires a county to consider conflicts due to noise, dust, etc. with "existing" uses that are sensitive to such discharges. There is no basis under the rule for a county to conclude that Native American cultural and religious visits to pictograms and native burial sites are not "existing" uses because those visits do not occur on a regular basis. Walker v. Deschutes County, 59 Or LUBA 488 (2009).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. A condition requiring that the applicant for mining restrict rock blasting for up to three days after being notified of Native American cultural or religious visits to a nearby site is sufficient to ensure that noise from blasting will not conflict with such visits. Walker v. Deschutes County, 59 Or LUBA 488 (2009).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. A county's failure to first determine the degree of adverse effects of blasting-generated dust on a nearby residence before conducting its ESEE analysis, as required by OAR 660-023-0180(5)(d)(A), is not reversible error, where the county's ESEE analysis finds that a condition of approval restricting blasting times to periods when the wind blows away from the residence will minimize or eliminate adverse impacts on the residence. That finding, if supported by the record, means that the county did not need to conduct an ESEE analysis at all with respect to impacts of dust on the residence. Walker v. Deschutes County, 59 Or LUBA 488 (2009).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. If a mineral and aggregate site is found to be significant under OAR 660-023-0180(3), then local governments must determine whether mining will be allowed. That in turn requires a number of additional determinations regarding: (1) an impact area, conflicts, and (3) whether conflicts can be minimized. OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a) - (c). If all identified conflicts can be minimized, mining must be allowed. OAR 660-023-0180(5)(c). If all identified conflicts cannot be minimized, the local government must then determine the economic, social, environmental, and energy consequences of allowing mining notwithstanding that the conflicts cannot be minimized. OAR 660-023-0180(5)(d). Delta Property Company v. Lane County, 58 Or LUBA 409 (2009).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. As part of its identification of uses that conflict with the Goal 5 resource, a reasonable decision maker could determine that, given the evidence of long term and consistent opposition to the mine, the impacts from the mine on nearby residents would engender legal action and social and economic pressure on the mine that would conflict with the Goal 5 resource. Hegele v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 1 (2008).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. The language of OAR 660-016-0005(1) and the Court of Appeals' interpretation of that rule in Hegele v. Crook County, 190 Or App 376, 379, 78 P3d 1254 (2003) support the conclusion that conflicting uses may be uses that, while not specifically listed in the zoning district as allowed land uses, are nevertheless uses that could conflict with a Goal 5 resource. Hegele v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 1 (2008).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. A county errs in identifying "recreational visitors, motorists, and bicycles" that are not incidental to or associated with the nearby residential uses as uses that conflict with the Goal 5 resource, where the evidence in the record regarding those activities is limited to such activities as incidental to residential uses. Hegele v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 1 (2008).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where there are unchallenged findings that an aggregate mine presents no actual risk of contamination to groundwater wells, a county is not obligated to adopt findings addressing the possibility that potential users of groundwater wells may perceive a risk of contamination. The mere perception of a risk is too tenuous and indirect to constitute a "negative impact" that must be analyzed under OAR 660-016-0005 and OAR 660-016-0010. Rickreall Community Water Assoc. v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 76 (2006).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where a local government determines that there are no conflicting uses allowed under the applicable zoning districts, the local government need not undertake an ESEE analysis, but must simply adopt appropriate policies and ordinance provisions, such as zoning, to ensure preservation of the resource site. Cox v. Polk County, 49 Or LUBA 78 (2005).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. The final steps in the analysis required under OAR 660-023-0180 to review requests for mining are limited and structured: (1) the county must determine whether there are any conflicts with the proposed mining, (2) if there are conflicts the county must consider whether there are measures that would minimize those conflicts, (3) if conflicts cannot be minimized, the county must determine the economic, social, environmental and energy consequences of allowing, limiting or not allowing mining. Hellberg v. Morrow County, 49 Or LUBA 423 (2005).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. A county's obligation under OAR 660-023-0180(4)(c) to consider reasonable measures to minimize conflicts associated with mining and its obligation under OAR 660-023-0180(4)(d) to consider economic, social, environmental and energy consequences of allowing, limiting or not allowing mining are "findings" obligations, and they do not place an obligation on the county to produce evidence regarding an application for mining. Hellberg v. Morrow County, 49 Or LUBA 423 (2005).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. OAR 660-016-0005 does not limit the size of the impact area or the types of conflicting uses that may be considered. Under the rule, a local government may consider visual impacts of proposed mining on residential use in the area as a "conflicting use," even if such conflicts do not rise to the level of nuisance or trespass claims. Hegele v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 357 (2003).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where a staff report and evidentiary hearings focus on an area within 500 feet of the subject property as the relevant "impact area" for purposes of conducting the conflicts identification and ESEE analysis required by OAR 660-016-0005 and OAR 660-016-0010, the county may not deny an application under Goal 5 based on conflicts in a 15-square-mile area that is identified for the first time in its final decision, without offering the applicant an opportunity to submit evidence and argument responsive to the larger impact area. Hegele v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 357 (2003).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. In determining whether conflicting uses can be minimized pursuant to OAR 660-023-0180(4), a local government may draw reasonable inferences from expert testimony to determine that a numerical standard for minimization, such as for turbidity, cannot be satisfied. Molalla River Reserve, Inc. v. Clackamas County, 42 Or LUBA 251 (2002).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Under OAR 660-023-0180(4)(b) and OAR 660-023-0180(4)(c) a local government may either determine that there are no potential conflicts associated with a proposed aggregate mining proposal or that, although there are potential conflicts associated with the proposed aggregate mining, the conflicts can be minimized. The options available under these two rules are separate and distinct, and a decision that does not make it clear which option is being selected must be remanded. Turner Community Association v. Marion County, 37 Or LUBA 324 (1999).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Until the county has adopted findings that determine precisely what inventoried Goal 5 resource areas are located on the subject property, it is not possible to identify which county Goal 5 resource protection programs affect all or parts of the subject property, and the county is in no position to adopt findings explaining whether a committed-exception zone-change is consistent with the county's existing Goal 5 resource protection provisions. Pekarek v. Wallowa County, 36 Or LUBA 494 (1999).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where a conflicting use is proposed on property within the boundaries of a Goal 5 resource site, it is not sufficient for the county to consider only the location and quality of the resource on the subject property. It must also consider the location and quality of the resource in the area that is potentially subject to impacts from conflicting residential uses on the subject property. Doty v. Jackson County, 34 Or LUBA 287 (1998).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where a local government fails to identify the location and quality of winter range habitat potentially affected by proposed residences in the area, it is impossible to meaningfully evaluate the impact of conflicting residential uses on winter range habitat. Doty v. Jackson County, 34 Or LUBA 287 (1998).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. A local government is required to consider all potential uses and their conflicts with a proposed Goal 5 use where the number of potential uses is limited. However, if it is evident that a use was effectively considered as part of a larger category of uses, the failure to specify the individual use by name or to relate it to a specific local code section is not an error. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. The level of precision required in the conflicting use analysis required by the Goal 5 rule is difficult to determine. The process is fluid and subject to refinement based on new information. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. In performing an ESEE consequences analysis, the local government is not required to quantify every conceivable conflict between the resource use and every conflicting use. The requirement is more general and is guided by Columbia Steel Castings Co. v. City of Portland, 314 Or 424, 840 P2d 71 (1992), which requires that the local government must be aware of the general nature and scope of the identified conflicts and their interplay. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Under ORS 215.296(1), a local government must identify farm and forest uses on land surrounding the subject parcel and examine the practices necessary to continue those uses. The absence of findings sufficient to demonstrate compliance with ORS 215.296(1) undermines the conclusion that there will be no conflicts with surrounding farm or forest uses under Goal 5. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. Where a county comprehensive plan's Goal 5 ESEE analyses adequately describe the resource site and the conflicting uses, and their interaction, analysis of smaller parcels within the site is not required. Buhler Ranch v. Wallowa County, 33 Or LUBA 594 (1997).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. A county's Goal 5 ESEE analysis is sufficient if it addresses the uses identified by the county as conflicting. Palmer v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 436 (1995).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. A local government decision changing the comprehensive plan and zone designations of land with identified Goal 5 resources, must identify conflicting uses potentially allowable under the proposed new designations. Welch v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 439 (1994).

9.3 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Conflicting Use Identification. A local government may not simply assume a new residential plan designation will have less impacts on identified Goal 5 resources on the subject property than are allowable under the existing industrial plan designation, without considering limitations on industrial activity on the subject property that are imposed by an overlay district. Welch v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 439 (1994).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. In conducting an ESEE analysis under OAR 660-023-0040(4), a local government does not err by analyzing multiple groups of similar resources and similarly zoned properties within a single resource site. Restore Oregon v. City of Portland, 80 Or LUBA 158 (2019).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. In conducting an ESEE analysis under OAR 660-023-0040(4), a local government does not err by estimating the economic impact to properties that would be affected by protecting the resource site based on assumptions that lead to a conclusion of greater economic impact to those properties than if the ESEE analysis used different assumptions that were applied in estimating the economic impact to other properties, nor does the local government err in failing to consider the cost of environmental remediation that will be incurred to develop specific properties. Restore Oregon v. City of Portland, 80 Or LUBA 158 (2019).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. While local governments have substantial discretion in determining the scope of the impacts that they may consider in conducting an ESEE analysis under OAR 660-023-0040(4), they may not fail to evaluate both the impacts of the resource site on conflicting uses and the impacts of the conflicting uses on the resource site. ODOT v. Grant County, 80 Or LUBA 192 (2019).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. In conducting an ESEE analysis under OAR 660-023-0040(4), a local government does not err by characterizing a proposed limitation on a conflicting use as a negative impact of the resource site on the conflicting use, even where the proposed limitation is already required under the local code, where the local code could be amended in the future to remove that requirement. ODOT v. Grant County, 80 Or LUBA 192 (2019).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. In redesignating and rezoning protected habitat from forest land to marginal land under former ORS 197.247 (1991), a local government errs by excluding adjacent forest land from the impact area under OAR 661-023-0040(3) without establishing that it is not also protected habitat. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 205 (2019).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. An attorney-land-use-consultant-prepared ESEE analysis including numerous plans, reports, and other documents supporting the redesignation and rezoning of protected habitat from forest land to marginal land under former ORS 197.247 (1991) is not sufficient to rebut expert testimony including (1) a letter authored by an ODFW biologist that generally discusses the cumulative impact of development on habitat and (2) general ODFW guidance related to levels of residential density in areas of peripheral big game habitat absent evidence of the attorney land use consultant's expertise. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 80 Or LUBA 205 (2019).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Where an economic, social, environmental and energy (ESEE) analysis identifies conflicting uses as the commercial and high-density residential development allowed under a proposed post-acknowledgement plan amendment, and concludes that the greater development intensity and imperviousness may result in greater direct impacts on water quality and water temperature in a nearby creek which is a Goal 5 resource, arguments that the ESEE analysis does not specifically address pollution from stormwater provide no basis for reversal or remand because OAR 660-023-0040(2) does not require a more detailed identification of conflicting uses. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 79 Or LUBA 22 (2019).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. It is not sufficient for petitioners to simply point out that the sound study that was prepared to develop a Statewide Planning Goal 5 program to protect an aggregate resource site does not measure noise in precisely the manner required by the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) rules, without any attempt to show that any deviations from required sound measuring locations could have the effect of allowing noise levels that violate DEQ standards. Where the applicant's expert took the position that the selected sound measuring locations did not have the effect of inflating the ambient noise level or otherwise rendering those sound measurements inaccurate, at least some effort to challenge the expert's position is required to show the deviations may have led to inaccurate sound readings for purposes of determining if DEQ noise standards will be met. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Based on an ESEE consequences analysis regarding conflicting uses, under OAR 660-023-0040(4) and (5), a county must develop a program to achieve Goal 5, and determine whether to allow, limit, or prohibit conflicting uses. A local government errs in its ESEE analysis and in its ultimate decision to modify its acknowledged Goal 5 program to eliminate the prohibition on churches in the Wildlife Area Combining Zone, when it relied in part on the cost of defending its existing Goal 5 program against a hypothetical Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA) lawsuit to support its decision to achieve Goal 5 by allowing without limits a new conflicting use, without providing an analysis establishing the county's Goal 5 program would be legally vulnerable to losing a hypothetical RLUIPA lawsuit if one were brought. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 395 (2018).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. To allow a conflicting use without limit under OAR 660-023-0040(5)(c), a county's ESEE analysis must (1) demonstrate that the conflicting use is of sufficient importance relative to the resource site, and (2) must indicate why measures to protect the resource "to some extent should not be provided." OAR 660-023-0040(5)(c) does not prohibit the county from allowing a conflicting use without limit, if there is another option that would both fully protect the resource at issue and satisfy the motivations prompting the county to decide in favor of the conflicting use. Instead, OAR 660-023-0040(5)(c) requires the county to justify its choice to allow a conflicting use without limit, and that justification must include a demonstration that alternatives, such as imposing limits or measures to provide some protection for the resource consistent with OAR 660-023-0040(5)(b) should not be provided. Assuming that demonstration is made, OAR 660-023-0040(5) and Goal 5 do not compel the local government to choose alternatives that fully or partially protect the resource. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 395 (2018).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. In the context of a county's Goal 5 analysis, LUBA will reject the county's argument that there are no measures that the county could adopt to protect wildlife habitat from the negative impacts of churches without running afoul of a Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA) requirement–that governments not impose a "substantial burden" on religious exercise–where the county's ESEE analysis includes no evaluation of any measures or any findings on this point, and without actually evaluating any measures that would provide some protection to wildlife resources, it is difficult to understand how the county could reach a conclusion that no measures could be adopted to protect wildlife resources without also imposing a "substantial burden" on religious exercise. In such a circumstance, remand is necessary for the county to adopt an ESEE analysis that either does not rely on the mere threat of RLUIPA litigation, or that actually evaluates whether the county's existing Goal 5 program is inconsistent with the RLUIPA Equal Terms or Substantial Burden requirements, so that the county can consider whether there are measures it can adopt pursuant to OAR 660-023-0040(5)(b) and (c) to reduce impacts on wildlife resources and include those evaluations in the revised ESEE analysis. As part of that analysis, the county may consider, if necessary, whether identified measures would impose a "substantial burden" on the free exercise of religion. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 77 Or LUBA 395 (2018).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. The Goal 5 rule, at OAR chapter 660, division 23, includes a "standard" process for inventorying, evaluating and protecting natural resources, at OAR 660-023-0030 to 660-023-0050, that includes rules for evaluating the ESEE consequences for allowing, limiting, or prohibiting uses that conflict with a natural resource site. The Goal 5 rule also includes "special" standards and procedures for specific types of Goal 5 resources, including those that govern aggregate mineral resources, at OAR 660-023-0180. According to OAR 660-023-0020(1), sometimes both the standard process and a special process apply; sometimes the special process supersedes the standard process in whole, or in part, and in case of conflict the specific process controls. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 77 Or LUBA 452 (2018).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a) requires the local government to identify conflicts with existing and approved uses located within a determined "impact area" limited in size to 1,500 feet from the boundaries of the mining area, unless factual information indicates "significant potential conflicts" beyond 1,500 feet. After deciding to allow mining under OAR 660-023-0180(5), the county must also go on to consider whether to allow, limit, or prevent new or future conflicting uses within the impact area pursuant to OAR 660-023-0180(7). For this limited inquiry, the county must conduct the analysis pursuant to the standard ESEE process in OAR 660-023-0040 and OAR 660-023-0050. OAR 660-023-0040(3) requires local governments to "determine an impact area for each significant resource site. The impact area shall be drawn to include only the area in which allowed uses could adversely affect the identified resource," which means that unlike the impact area determined under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a), the impact area determined under OAR 660-023-0040(3) is not initially limited to 1,500 feet and the geographic extent of the impact area is determined by evaluating whether "allowed uses could adversely affect the identified resource," rather than evaluating whether there is factual information indicating "significant potential conflicts" beyond an initial 1,500 feet. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 77 Or LUBA 452 (2018).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Petitioners have not established that a county's failure to determine an impact area for purposes of OAR 660-023-0180(7) pursuant to the standard ESEE process at OAR 660-023-0040(3) is more than harmless error, where it is not clear that an impact area determined under OAR 660-023-0040(3) would be larger or different than the one the county established under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a), petitioners have not identified any new conflicting uses within a more expansive impact area that could adversely impact the mining site and that therefore should have been limited or prevented based on the arguably more sensitive OAR 660-023-0040(3) test, compared to the "significant potential conflict" test that the county employed under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a), and because the applicant is the only party that could possibly be harmed by employing a potentially smaller impact area as determined under OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a), and the applicant is not challenging that potentially smaller impact area but rather is actively defending it on appeal. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 77 Or LUBA 452 (2018).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. In the context of a post-acknowledgment plan amendment to inventory a significant aggregate site and allow mining of that site under Goal 5, if the local government concludes based on its ESEE analysis that new conflicting uses should be allowed within the impact area under the existing comprehensive plan and land use regulations, the local government's program to achieve the goal in that regard may consist of simply relying on its acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations to protect the resource site from new conflicting uses pursuant to OAR 660-023-0040(2)(a). Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 77 Or LUBA 452 (2018).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Where a county's ESEE analysis relies on an inflated estimate of the number of acres of big game habitat added to its Goal 5 inventory and greater existing residential densities in an area to justify allowing significantly increased residential densities on big game habitat in that area, remand is required for a better explanation of the county's rationale for increasing those residential densities. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 76 Or LUBA 396 (2017).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Where state agencies took the position before the county that two different county EFU zones were equally valuable for big game habitat, and without explanation the county amended its comprehensive plan Goal 5 protection program to allow significantly increased residential densities in one of those zones, remand is required for an explanation of the county's rationale. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 76 Or LUBA 396 (2017).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. OAR 660-023-0030 to 660-023-0050 call for a step by step planning process that results in an analysis of the consequences of allowing, limiting, or prohibiting uses that conflict with inventoried Goal 5 resource sites. But after that planning process is complete, the rule does not require separately considering the cumulative impacts of all identified conflicting uses. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Crook County, 76 Or LUBA 396 (2017).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. In order for the Goal 5 requirement at OAR 660-010-005 and OAR 660-023-0050(2) of an evaluation of the economic, social, environmental, and energy (ESEE) consequences of a plan amendment for a property which includes wetlands to apply, the wetlands must be on an acknowledged inventory of "Goal 5 resources." Absent any evidence in the record that the wetlands are included on a county inventory of Goal 5 resources, Goal 5 does not apply to require an ESEE analysis of wetlands on subject property. Landwatch Lane County v. Lane County, 75 Or LUBA 258 (2017).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Where the issue of whether a county erred by removing property from its Goal 5 inventory of Deer General Winter Range was clearly resolved against petitioner in a prior appeal, petitioner's attempt to revive that issue in a subsequent appeal is barred under the holding in Beck v. City of Tillamook, 313 Or 148, 153, 831 P2d 678 (1992), and constitutes a position presented "without probable cause to believe the position was well-founded in law * * *" under ORS 197.830(15)(b). Wood v. Crook County, 75 Or LUBA 494 (2017).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Where a county's Goal 5 ESEE analysis and program make a decision to fully allow uses that conflict with inventoried wildlife habitat, and the county zones the property to fully allow those conflicting uses, the county is not required to remove the property from its wildlife habitat inventory. But where the county does remove the property from its wildlife habitat inventory and LUBA rejects all challenges to the Goal 5 ESEE analysis and program and remands on a different issue, in a subsequent appeal of the county's decision on remand a petitioner may not assign error to the county's removal of the property from its wildlife habitat inventory because that is a resolved issue under Beck v. Tillamook County, 313 Or 148, 153, 831 P2d 678 (1992). Wood v. Crook County, 74 Or LUBA 278 (2016).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Where a Goal 5 ESEE analysis is based on the uses authorized by a particular zoning district, but the program ultimately adopted by the county includes an amended version of the zoning district, adopting the amended version of the zoning district is not error, where petitioner neither alleges nor demonstrates that the amended zoning district allows any uses that are not allowed by the pre-amendment zoning district. Wood v. Crook County, 74 Or LUBA 278 (2016).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(c), a county does not err when determining that permitting adaptive reuse of existing historic structures in the proposed exception area results in fewer adverse consequences, compared to locating the proposal on other resource lands that require an exception, which would require significant new construction of infrastructure and accordingly more adverse consequences. King v. Clackamas County, 72 Or LUBA 143 (2015).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. OAR 660-023-0180(7) requires that a local government conduct an ESEE analysis to determine whether to allow, limit or prevent new conflicting uses within the impact area of a Goal 5 resource. Where a petitioner raised general issues of compliance with OAR 660-023-0180(7) during the proceedings below, but in its findings the county declined to conduct an ESEE analysis to determine whether to allow, limit or prevent new conflicting uses, on appeal to LUBA the petitioner may challenge the county's finding that it need not conduct an ESEE analysis. The petitioner is not required to anticipate that the county will adopt findings concluding that no ESEE analysis is required. Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 72 Or LUBA 275 (2015).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Nothing in OAR 660-023-0180(7), which requires that a local government conduct an ESEE analysis to determine whether to allow, limit or prevent new conflicting uses within the impact area of a Goal 5 mining resource, allows a county to postpone the ESEE analysis to a future land use proceeding after it has approved the comprehensive plan and zoning changes to allow the mining use that triggers application of OAR 660-023-0180(7). Rogue Advocates v. Josephine County, 72 Or LUBA 275 (2015).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Where in an initial appeal LUBA concluded that the ESEE Consequences Determination portion of Goal 5 planning for a site was not part of the regulatory Resource Protection Program, any attempt in the decision on remand from LUBA to give regulatory effect to parts of that ESEE Consequences Determination portion of Goal 5 planning for a site will be rejected on appeal to LUBA. Mark Latham Excavation Inc. v. Deschutes County, 65 Or LUBA 32 (2012).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Before it is appropriate to consider the non-regulatory ESEE Consequences Determination portion of Goal 5 planning for a site as context for interpreting the regulatory Resource Protection Program there must first be an ambiguity in the Resource Protection Program. Mark Latham Excavation Inc. v. Deschutes County, 65 Or LUBA 32 (2012).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Where in its initial decision the county applies the old Goal 5 rule at OAR chapter 660, division 16, instead of the new Goal 5 rule, and no issue was raised about that position in the first appeal to LUBA, the county is arguably constrained on appeal of its decision on remand from arguing that the old Goal 5 rule does not apply and instead the new Goal 5 rule applies. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. A local government errs in concluding that it is not required to apply Statewide Planning Goal 5 to a post acknowledgement plan amendment (PAPA) that adds lands to the county's map of lands eligible for a destination resort by relying on an ESEE analysis that was completed and adopted 16 years prior to the proposed PAPA and that does not include any analysis of the new lands proposed for inclusion on the destination resort map. Root v. Klamath County, 63 Or LUBA 230 (2011).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. The fact that the entire Goal 5 planning document that a local government adopted for a site was adopted as part of the comprehensive plan does not necessarily mean that the identification of conflicts and ESEE analysis portions of that document that were not included in the Program to Achieve the Goal must be given regulatory effect. Whether those portions of the ESEE analysis have regulatory effect depends on the text of those portions of the ESEE analysis and their context. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. A county's failure to first determine the degree of adverse effects of blasting-generated dust on a nearby residence before conducting its ESEE analysis, as required by OAR 660-023-0180(5)(d)(A), is not reversible error, where the county's ESEE analysis finds that a condition of approval restricting blasting times to periods when the wind blows away from the residence will minimize or eliminate adverse impacts on the residence. That finding, if supported by the record, means that the county did not need to conduct an ESEE analysis at all with respect to impacts of dust on the residence. Walker v. Deschutes County, 59 Or LUBA 488 (2009).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. If a mineral and aggregate site is found to be significant under OAR 660-023-0180(3), then local governments must determine whether mining will be allowed. That in turn requires a number of additional determinations regarding: (1) an impact area, (2) conflicts, and (3) whether conflicts can be minimized. OAR 660-023-0180(5)(a) - (c). If all identified conflicts can be minimized, mining must be allowed. OAR 660-023-0180(5)(c). If all identified conflicts cannot be minimized, the local government must then determine the economic, social, environmental, and energy consequences of allowing mining notwithstanding that the conflicts cannot be minimized. OAR 660-023-0180(5)(d). Delta Property Company v. Lane County, 58 Or LUBA 409 (2009).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. At a minimum, the analysis of the ESEE consequences of allowing or prohibiting the mining operation should address the four ESEE factors (economic, social, environmental and energy), and should address the evidence petitioner submitted on those points. Hegele v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 1 (2008).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. The mere fact that a local government did not repeat the entire Goal 5 ESEE analysis process in adopting post-acknowledgement plan and land use regulation amendments does not provide a basis for remand. A local government must consider the new plan and land use regulation provisions and any new conflicting uses allowed and explain how its existing Goal 5 program continues to be adequate to protect its inventoried Goal 5 resources. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Remand is necessary where the county's ESEE findings evaluate impacts of dust from daily mining activities on nearby residences, but fail to evaluate dust generated by blasting or determine whether such impacts may be minimized or reduced. Walker v. Deschutes County, 55 Or LUBA 93 (2007).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Under OAR 660-016-0005(1), if the only identified negative impact is from the resource to an allowed use, then the allowed use is not a "conflicting use" for purposes of the rule. Such negative impacts on an allowed use are considered only when conducting the analysis of economic, social, environmental and energy consequences under OAR 660-016-0005(3). Rickreall Community Water Assoc. v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 76 (2006).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. OAR 660-010-0010(3) requires local governments to include in the comprehensive plan a statement of "reasons" that support the decision to protect a resource site, allow conflicting uses fully, or limit conflicting uses. That "reasons" statement may consist of a summary, and the local government need not incorporate the entire ESEE analysis into the comprehensive plan as its "reasons." Rickreall Community Water Assoc. v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 76 (2006).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. OAR 660-023-0007 exempts the determination of a "program to protect historic resources" from the requirement to conduct an ESEE (economic, social, environmental and energy) analysis. The scope of that exemption is ambiguous, and could plausibly exempt (1) a local government's entire historic resources "program," as that rule broadly defines that term, or (2) only those parts of the program that "protect" historic resources, which a rule definition narrowly limits to local government review of applications for demolition or alteration of historic resources. Given the intertwined nature of most historic resources programs, the better reading of OAR 660-023-0007 is that it comprehensively exempts from the ESEE analysis adoption or modification of the "program," not merely those parts of the program that require local government review of applications for demolition or alteration of historic resources. NWDA v. City of Portland, 50 Or LUBA 310 (2005).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Where a local government determines that there are no conflicting uses allowed under the applicable zoning districts, the local government need not undertake an ESEE analysis, but must simply adopt appropriate policies and ordinance provisions, such as zoning, to ensure preservation of the resource site. Cox v. Polk County, 49 Or LUBA 78 (2005).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. The final steps in the analysis required under OAR 660-023-0180 to review requests for mining are limited and structured: (1) the county must determine whether there are any conflicts with the proposed mining, (2) if there are conflicts the county must consider whether there are measures that would minimize those conflicts, (3) if conflicts cannot be minimized, the county must determine the economic, social, environmental and energy consequences of allowing, limiting or not allowing mining. Hellberg v. Morrow County, 49 Or LUBA 423 (2005).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. A county's obligation under OAR 660-023-0180(4)(c) to consider reasonable measures to minimize conflicts associated with mining and its obligation under OAR 660-023-0180(4)(d) to consider economic, social, environmental and energy consequences of allowing, limiting or not allowing mining are "findings" obligations, and they do not place an obligation on the county to produce evidence regarding an application for mining. Hellberg v. Morrow County, 49 Or LUBA 423 (2005).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Because OAR 660-023-0200(7) provides that local governments are not required to apply the ESEE process in order to determine a program to protect historic resources, it follows that a local government is also not required to apply the ESEE process when the city allows a new use that could conflict with a particular historic resource. NWDA v. City of Portland, 47 Or LUBA 533 (2004).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. The OAR 660-016-0000 requirement to identify the "location" of the resource within an identified "impact area" is intended to assist the local government to determine the "significance" of the resource and whether it should be included on the Goal 5 inventory. If found to be "significant," the resource must be included on the Goal 5 inventory. The OAR 660-016-0000 requirements are not intended to be a shortcut to the conflict identification and ESEE analysis required under OAR 660-016-0005 and 0010. Hegele v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 357 (2003).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. OAR 660-016-0005 does not limit the size of the impact area or the types of conflicting uses that may be considered. Under the rule, a local government may consider visual impacts of proposed mining on residential use in the area as a "conflicting use," even if such conflicts do not rise to the level of nuisance or trespass claims. Hegele v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 357 (2003).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Where a staff report and evidentiary hearings focus on an area within 500 feet of the subject property as the relevant "impact area" for purposes of conducting the conflicts identification and ESEE analysis required by OAR 660-016-0005 and OAR 660-016-0010, the county may not deny an application under Goal 5 based on conflicts in a 15-square-mile area that is identified for the first time in its final decision, without offering the applicant an opportunity to submit evidence and argument responsive to the larger impact area. Hegele v. Crook County, 44 Or LUBA 357 (2003).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Under OAR 660-023-0180(4)(d), a local government, as part of its decision-making obligations, must conduct the environmental, social, energy, and environmental (ESEE) determination and, based on that determination, decide whether to allow, limit, or not allow mining. The burden of conducting the ESEE determination cannot be shifted to the applicant. Molalla River Reserve, Inc. v. Clackamas County, 42 Or LUBA 251 (2002).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. The level of precision required in the conflicting use analysis required by the Goal 5 rule is difficult to determine. The process is fluid and subject to refinement based on new information. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. In performing an ESEE consequences analysis, the local government is not required to quantify every conceivable conflict between the resource use and every conflicting use. The requirement is more general and is guided by Columbia Steel Castings Co. v. City of Portland, 314 Or 424, 840 P2d 71 (1992), which requires that the local government must be aware of the general nature and scope of the identified conflicts and their interplay. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Even though noise levels may be legally increased on a parcel under DEQ regulations, an ESEE analysis must consider the economic impact of actual increased noise throughout the impact area. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Where a county comprehensive plan's Goal 5 ESEE analyses adequately describe the resource site and the conflicting uses, and their interaction, analysis of smaller parcels within the site is not required. Buhler Ranch v. Wallowa County, 33 Or LUBA 594 (1997).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. Where the county identifies Big Game Habitat Range as a Goal 5 resource that conflicts with a proposed aggregate operation, it must identify the evidence upon which it relies to support its finding that the proposed quarry will have insignificant impacts on big game more than one-quarter mile away. Palmer v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 436 (1995).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. A county's Goal 5 ESEE analysis is sufficient if it addresses the uses identified by the county as conflicting. Palmer v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 436 (1995).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. The county's finding, made as part of its Goal 5 ESEE analysis, that an aggregate site located within a Big Game Habitat Range is not uniquely suited to wildlife must be supported by substantial evidence, not just a statement that the wildlife can "freely relocate" to other parts of the Big Game Habitat Range. Palmer v. Lane County, 29 Or LUBA 436 (1995).

9.4 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – ESEE Consequence Determination. A local government may not simply assume a new residential plan designation will have less impacts on identified Goal 5 resources on the subject property than are allowable under the existing industrial plan designation, without considering limitations on industrial activity on the subject property that are imposed by an overlay district. Welch v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 439 (1994).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where comprehensive plan provisions provide, using mandatory language, that certain resource plan and zoning designations shall be used to conserve or protect fish and wildlife habitat from conflicting uses and that land use proposals that have undesirable impacts on those resources shall be reviewed during the plan and zone amendment processes, a local governing body errs in interpreting those provisions to conclude that it may apply nonresource plan and zoning designations to property mapped as fish and wildlife habitat and that any impacts may be evaluated and, if necessary, mitigated during subsequent review of development proposals. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Linn County, 81 Or LUBA 338 (2020).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a significant resource overlay zone provision requires that (1) resource sites not be altered or impacted to a degree that destroys their significance, (2) the proposed development not result in the loss of habitat for threatened or endangered species, (3) all feasible alternatives to the development that would not result in a substantial adverse impact on identified resource values be considered and rejected, (4) the development be sited on the property in such a manner that minimizes adverse impacts on identified resources, and (5) documentation be provided regarding requirements for state or federal permits or licenses and that appropriate resource management agencies have reviewed the development proposal against their plans, policies, and programs, the local government does not err in concluding that that provision applies at the development stage rather than the PAPA stage. VanSickle v. Klamath County, 80 Or LUBA 241 (2019).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a local code provision, which is acknowledged to comply with Goal 5, allows the construction of a reservoir for surface mining in conjunction with an irrigation district, but requires that sites proposed for that use be added to the local government's inventory of non-significant mineral sites through a post-acknowledgment plan amendment (PAPA), such a PAPA does not allow "new uses that could be conflicting uses" with a Goal 5 resource, and therefore does not require further analysis under Goal 5, where the construction of a reservoir is otherwise allowed for a recreation-oriented facility without a PAPA. Bishop v. Deschutes County, 79 Or LUBA 380 (2019).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. How to (1) plan and zone an inventoried significant mineral and aggregate resource site, and (2) plan and zone any adjoining areas that may be needed for processing or buffers or to otherwise mitigate identified conflicts are separate questions from what property is properly included on a comprehensive plan Statewide Planning Goal 5 inventory of significant aggregate sites. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. In determining whether a local government inventoried elk habitat as a significant Statewide Planning Goal 5 resource and adopted a program to protect that inventoried significant elk habitat, or instead determined not to inventory the elk habitat as significant or to defer adopting a protection program, LUBA considers what the local government actually adopted rather than the labels or terminology the local government used in adopting the comprehensive plan. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. The OAR 660-023-0180(1)(b) requirement to minimize conflicts does not require an absolute guarantee that a proposed mining operation will never violate Oregon Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) standards. A local government does not err by finding that DEQ noise standards will be met, based on the applicant's sound study, and by imposing a condition of approval that mining be monitored for noise in the future and any changes in mining be made in the future to fully comply with DEQ noise standards, without requiring that mining cease until the mine fully complies with DEQ noise standards. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. OAR 340-225-0040 and OAR 340-225-0050 modeling requirements to determine whether a proposed mining operation will comply with ambient air quality and new source air particulate standards are not mere procedural requirements an applicant is free to ignore. The applicant and local government must either perform the required modeling or demonstrate that the modeling is unnecessary to demonstrate the proposed mining will comply with the air particulate standards. Save TV Butte v. Lane County, 77 Or LUBA 22 (2018).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. In adopting a post-acknowledgment plan amendment, under OAR 660-023-0250(3)(b) a city is not required to apply Goal 5 directly "unless the [amendment] affects a Goal 5 resource." In changing the comprehensive plan and zoning map designations to allow higher intensity uses, a city may not assume the overlay protections that were previously applied to protect the Goal 5 resources from lower intensity uses will be adequate to ensure that no Goal 5 resource will be affected. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 75 Or LUBA 38 (2017).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. LUBA will reject an interpretation of a county Wildlife Area overlay zone, which implements Statewide Planning Goal 5 to protect winter range in part by prohibiting new churches in winter range, to the effect that the WA overlay zone prohibits churches in winter range areas only where the underlying base zone categorizes churches as a conditional use, but that interpretation would allow churches in winter range areas if the underlying base zone categorizes churches as something other than a conditional use, given that conflicts between churches and winter range are the same whether churches are categorized as permitted or conditional uses. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 75 Or LUBA 284 (2017).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A hearings officer Misconstrues the text and context of a county's Wildlife Area (WA) overlay zone, in concluding that prohibitions on certain new uses, including churches, in winter range areas are limited exclusively to areas where the underlying base zone categorizes such uses as conditional uses, where other provisions of the WA overlay zone make it clear that the prohibition on new uses in winter range is not limited to uses categorized as conditional uses in the underlying base zone. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 75 Or LUBA 284 (2017).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. To address a historic design standard requiring that new construction be "compatible with the appearance and character of the historic district," adequate findings must, at a minimum, (1) describe the appearance and character of the historic district, as relevant, (2) describe the appearance and character of the proposed structure, and (3) explain why the proposed structure is or is not compatible with the appearance and character of the historic district. Kliewer v. City of Bend, 73 Or LUBA 321 (2016).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. To address a historic design standard requiring that new construction be "compatible with the appearance and character of the historic district," the decision-maker is not required to reference the description of the appearance and character of a historic district included in the nomination to the federal historic register, but that description is a relevant and convenient source. Because the decision-maker must base the compatibility analysis on something, unless the decision-maker duplicates some of the descriptive work in the federal register nomination, there may be no practical substitute for considering the federal register nomination. Kliewer v. City of Bend, 73 Or LUBA 321 (2016).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Remand for more adequate findings is required where a historic design standard requires a finding that the relationship of new construction to the street and open space between buildings is compatible with the adjacent historic buildings and the historic character of the surrounding area, but the findings address only compliance with code setback requirements, and fail to identify or address compatibility with adjacent historic buildings and the historic character of the surrounding area. Kliewer v. City of Bend, 73 Or LUBA 321 (2016).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A finding that the height of new construction is "similar" to dwellings within a historic district is insufficient to establish compliance with a standard requiring that new construction not exceed the height of historic buildings in the surrounding area, where the surrounding area includes both historic and non-historic buildings, and the findings do not identify what buildings the height is compared to, or find that the height of new construction does not exceed the height of the tallest historic building in the surrounding area. Kliewer v. City of Bend, 73 Or LUBA 321 (2016).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(iii) excludes from LUBA's jurisdiction a land use compatibility statement (LUCS) that identifies required local land use reviews that the applicant must obtain in order to carry out the proposed activity. However, where a LUCS suggests that the applicant could seek an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 5 in order to eliminate the requirement to obtain a permit to develop within a Goal 5 resource area, the suggestion to obtain a Goal 5 exception does not identify a type of required local land use review for purposes of ORS 197.015(10)(b)(H)(iii). Todd v. Clackamas County, 73 Or LUBA 369 (2016).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A computer-generated map that is based on adopted Goal 5 paper maps may be used as a convenient starting point for determining whether property is within a Goal 5 resource area, although if there is conflict between the digital map and the adopted Goal 5 paper maps, the latter control. Todd v. Clackamas County, 73 Or LUBA 369 (2016).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A finding that taking an exception to Goal 4 is warranted to allow adaptive reuse of Goal 5 historic structures located on forest lands because allowed uses under Goal 4 will not raise sufficient revenue to offset the cost of maintaining those structures, if supported by substantial evidence, is a sufficient reason why the policy embodied in Goal 4 should not apply to the exception area. King v. Clackamas County, 72 Or LUBA 143 (2015).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Goal 5 imposes obligations on local governments with respect to the preservation of historic resources and requires a local government to act in a way to help willing property owners achieve actual and not merely nominal preservation of historic resources. Such obligations can constitute a demonstrated need based on the requirements of Goal 5 as a basis for taking a reasons exception. King v. Clackamas County, 72 Or LUBA 143 (2015).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Under OAR 660-004-0022, a county does not err in finding that a proposed adaptive reuse of a historic structure has special features or qualities that necessitate its location because the proposed use, adaptive reuse of a historic structure, must occur within the structure and cannot occur elsewhere. King v. Clackamas County, 72 Or LUBA 143 (2015).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b), a county does not err in finding that an analysis of alternative non-resource sites for a proposed adaptive reuse of a Goal 5 historic structure is not required because reuse of a particular historical structure dictates that no alternative site not requiring an exception can reasonably accommodate the adaptive reuse. King v. Clackamas County, 72 Or LUBA 143 (2015).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. OAR 660-023-0040(1) provides that an ESEE analysis "should enable reviewers to gain a clear understanding of the conflicts and the consequences to be expected" when developing a program to protect Goal 5 resources. A challenge to this "clear understanding" requirement that challenges the summary of the ESEE analysis rather than the adopted ESEE analysis itself provides no basis for reversal or remand, where the ESEE analysis identifies conflicts and consequences and identifies possible mitigation measures. ODFW v. Crook County, 72 Or LUBA 316 (2015).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. OAR 660-023-0040(5)(b) requires that when allowing conflicting uses fully the local government must show why measures to protect the resource to some extent should not be provided. Where a local government adopts a lengthy discussion regarding the extremely poor quality of a site for wildlife habitat and how wildlife that may be attracted to the site pose a serious risk of danger to airplanes landing and taking off from the airport, the decision adequately explains why the site should not be protected to some extent for wildlife habitat under Goal 5. ODFW v. Crook County, 72 Or LUBA 316 (2015).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. OAR 660-023-0180(5)(g) requires the local government to allow "a currently approved" aggregate processing operation at a site that was previously included on the county's inventory of significant aggregate sites to process material from a new or expansion site without requiring a reauthorization of the existing processing operation, except in limited circumstances where limits on processing of material from a different site were established at the time the existing site was approved by the local government. Pioneer Asphalt, Inc. v. Umatilla County, 71 Or LUBA 65 (2015).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where OAR 660-023-0180(5)(g) does not define "currently approved," a county's interpretation of the phrase as meaning that a permit authorizing an existing aggregate processing operation was issued and remains effective is not inconsistent with the rule. Pioneer Asphalt, Inc. v. Umatilla County, 71 Or LUBA 65 (2015).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Evidence in the record consisting of (1) a permit issued in 1992 authorizing an aggregate processing operation on a site that is included on the county's inventory, and (2) subsequent annual review letters from the county confirming that the conditions of the permit are met and renewing the permit are substantial evidence supporting a county's conclusion that the aggregate processing operation is "currently approved" within the meaning of OAR 660-023-0180(5)(g). Pioneer Asphalt, Inc. v. Umatilla County, 71 Or LUBA 65 (2015).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. ORS 197.772(3) is silent regarding what procedure should be followed when a property owner requests removal of a property from a Goal 5 inventory of historic resources, pursuant to the statute. Because such removal constitutes a comprehensive plan amendment, the local government does not err in following the code procedures applicable for a comprehensive plan amendment, including local appeals to the governing body. Lake Oswego Preservation Society v. City of Lake Oswego, 70 Or LUBA 103 (2014).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a local government approves an asphalt parking lot under a historic site review standard requiring that proposed development conform with the "character" of the historic district, LUBA will affirm the local government's interpretation that an asphalt parking lot conforms to the character of the district, because asphalt is a common building material in the district, even if asphalt paving is not itself a described feature of the historic district. Knapp v. City of Jacksonville, 70 Or LUBA 259 (2014).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Substantial evidence supports a finding that the value of proposed development outweighs the value of retaining rather than demolishing an historic structure, notwithstanding opponents' arguments that the city did not give weight to the architectural value of the structure, where the record indicates that the structure was designated only for its cultural, not architectural, significance. Rushing v. City of Salem, 70 Or LUBA 448 (2014).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Under a historic demolition permit standard requiring a finding that the value of proposed development outweighs the value of retaining the historic resource, evidence that there are better sites in the city for the proposed development, a playground, is irrelevant to the question posed by the standard, which requires a comparison of the value of constructing the playground on the site against the value of retaining the historic resource. Rushing v. City of Salem, 70 Or LUBA 448 (2014).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A city's finding that a historic resource is not capable of generating a reasonable economic return is supported by substantial evidence, where the applicant submitted detailed studies showing that the cost of rehabilitating the structure to meet current building codes would far exceed the reasonable rental value, notwithstanding conflicting testimony by opponents that rehabilitation costs could be lower, and rental returns higher, than the applicant's experts estimated. Rushing v. City of Salem, 70 Or LUBA 448 (2014).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. LUBA will affirm a city council's determination that a good faith effort to lease an historic building is sufficient to satisfy a historic resource demolition permit standard requiring the applicant to demonstrate a good faith effort to "sell" the resource, where the city's findings explain that only the structure, and not the underlying land, is a designated historic resource, the city lacks authority to require the owner to sell the land, and the structure cannot be relocated intact. Rushing v. City of Salem, 70 Or LUBA 448 (2014).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A post-acknowledgment plan amendment that makes only minor changes to a program to protect riparian areas may require little or no analysis under the Goal 5 rule, where the changes are consistent with Goal 5 safe harbor provisions for protecting riparian areas, or allow only types of public facilities that the safe harbor rules expressly allow in riparian areas. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a city's acknowledged Goal 5 program to protect wetlands and natural resources already allows trails and bicycle and pedestrian ways in wetland and natural resources overlay districts, the city's adoption of a transportation system plan that authorizes a regional trail through wetland and natural resource areas does not authorize a new "conflicting use" for purposes of OAR 660-023-0250(3)(b) and thus does not require further analysis under Goal 5 or the Goal 5 rule. Terra Hydr Inc. v. City of Tualatin, 68 Or LUBA 279 (2013).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A county ordinance adopted solely to protect erodible soils and federally listed threatened species, neither of which are resources listed in the county's Goal inventory, does not amend the county's program to protect Goal 5 resources such as riparian areas, even if the ordinance would likely have the unintended effect of also protecting some inventoried Goal 5 resources. Hatley v. Umatilla County, 66 Or LUBA 265 (2012).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a local government amends its program to achieve Goal 5 with respect to inventoried natural resources, by adopting additional measures to protect those resources from an identified conflicting use, and thus adjusting the balance initially struck in its initial ESEE analysis to limit conflicting uses, the local government must address the requirements of the Goal 5 rule at OAR chapter 660, division 23, revisit portions of its ESEE analysis as necessary and adopt findings based on that ESEE analysis explaining its choice to impose additional limitations on conflicting uses. Cosner v. Umatilla County, 65 Or LUBA 9 (2012).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where in an initial appeal LUBA concluded that the ESEE Consequences Determination portion of Goal 5 planning for a site was not part of the regulatory Resource Protection Program, any attempt in the decision on remand from LUBA to give regulatory effect to parts of that ESEE Consequences Determination portion of Goal 5 planning for a site will be rejected on appeal to LUBA. Mark Latham Excavation Inc. v. Deschutes County, 65 Or LUBA 32 (2012).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Before it is appropriate to consider the non-regulatory ESEE Consequences Determination portion of Goal 5 planning for a site as context for interpreting the regulatory Resource Protection Program there must first be an ambiguity in the Resource Protection Program. Mark Latham Excavation Inc. v. Deschutes County, 65 Or LUBA 32 (2012).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Representations by a former owner that it only intended to mine 25 acres of an 80-acre site are insufficient legislative history to establish that the acknowledged Resource Protection Program for the site limits mining to 25 acres, where the programs for other sites expressly limited mining geographically but the program for the 80-acre site zoned all 80 acres for mining and imposed no express geographical limits. Mark Latham Excavation Inc. v. Deschutes County, 65 Or LUBA 32 (2012).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A decision that merely adds an aggregate site to a comprehensive plan inventory of significant aggregate resource sites may not trigger application of the transportation planning rule (TPR) in any of the ways described in OAR 660-012-0060(1). But when the county decides to allow mining of the site and places an overlay zone on the site to allow mining, that zone change authorizes a new, more traffic-intensive use of the property and may trigger application of the TPR. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A local government's interpretation of its code to allow the setback distance from a wetland to be measured from the city's Goal 5 maps is correct where the applicable language allows the setback to be measured from either the Goal 5 map or a wetland delineation that is provided by the property owner, where a wetland delineation is submitted by an applicant who is not a property owner and is later withdrawn. Willamette Oaks LLC v. Lane County, 64 Or LUBA 328 (2011).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Maps based on a city's GIS database that do not differ in any material respect from the city's Goal 5 map and are not a smaller scale than the city's adopted Goal 5 map provide substantial evidence regarding the location of wetland boundaries. Willamette Oaks LLC v. Lane County, 64 Or LUBA 328 (2011).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where the challenged decision approves (1) a comprehensive plan amendment adding a site to the county's Goal 5 inventory of significant sites, and (2) a zone change to allow mining of the site, because the zone change application is consolidated with, and dependent upon, the plan amendment, the goal-post rule at ORS 215.427(3) does not operate to "freeze" the standards that apply to the zone change to those applicable on the date the application was filed. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Because the end of the planning period plays an important role under the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) at OAR 660-012-0060(1) in determining whether proposed plan or zone amendments significantly affect transportation facilities, when the county amends its transportation system plan to change the planning period from 2020 to 2030, the county must apply the new planning period in determining whether the proposed plan/zone change complies with the TPR. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where in its initial decision the county applies the old Goal 5 rule at OAR chapter 660, division 16, instead of the new Goal 5 rule, and no issue was raised about that position in the first appeal to LUBA, the county is arguably constrained on appeal of its decision on remand from arguing that the old Goal 5 rule does not apply and instead the new Goal 5 rule applies. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a site is included on a local government's Goal 5 inventory based on one type of mineral resource, a local government's decision that mining of a different non-inventoried mineral resource on the site may proceed without an amended ESEE analysis under Goal 5 will be remanded where the quantity of the non-inventoried mineral resource is five times the amount of the inventoried mineral resource and the mining of the non-inventoried resource may leave a significantly larger and more visible headwall that will conflict with nearby uses more than if only the inventoried mineral resource were removed. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A local government's zoning ordinance definitions of "dust-sensitive uses" and "noise-sensitive uses" apply in place of the broader consideration of "dust-sensitive uses" and "noise-sensitive uses" that the local government employed during the conflict identification/ESEE consequences phase of its Goal 5 planning, where the zoning ordinance Surface Mining Zone is the heart of the local government's ultimate Program to Achieve the Goal and there is no suggestion that the local government intended the broader consideration of "dust-sensitive uses" and "noise-sensitive uses" in the earlier Goal 5 planning phase that led up to the Program to Achieve the Goal to apply in place of the zoning ordinance definitions. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. The fact that the entire Goal 5 planning document that a local government adopted for a site was adopted as part of the comprehensive plan does not necessarily mean that the identification of conflicts and ESEE analysis portions of that document that were not included in the Program to Achieve the Goal must be given regulatory effect. Whether those portions of the ESEE analysis have regulatory effect depends on the text of those portions of the ESEE analysis and their context. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where the zoning ordinance definition of "noise-sensitive uses" is ambiguous and could be interpreted to include the entire parcel where the use is located or more narrowly to include only the use's structure, and there is some contextual support for limiting the use to the structure, LUBA will defer to the local government's decision to adopt the more narrow interpretation. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a local government's Goal 5 Program to Achieve the Goal for a particular mineral and aggregate site requires "ongoing incremental reclamation (subject to [Department of Geology and Mineral Industries] review and approval)" the local government likely could interpret that requirement to allow it to write a condition requiring "ongoing incremental reclamation" but expressly providing that DOGAMI is free to determine whether "ongoing incremental reclamation" is possible or desirable and that DOGAMI may modify or waive that requirement altogether in its permitting process as DOGAMI sees fit. However, the county cannot simply abandon the requirement for "ongoing incremental reclamation" by claiming it lacks expertise in reclamation and does not understand the meaning of that requirement. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a zoning ordinance expressly prohibits a county from issuing a use permit as a precondition of commencing mining until the applicant secures a state agency approval for a reclamation plan, the local government's failure to include such a requirement in the conditions attached to its conditional use and site plan approval decision is harmless error. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Conditions of approval are not too vague under the Court of Appeals' reasoning in Sisters Forest Planning Committee v. Deschutes Cty., 198 Or App 311, 108 P3d 1175 (2005), where the conditions of approval are not any more vague than many of the standards they were imposed to address. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A requirement that mining "not be allowed closer than one-quarter mile from any noise or dust sensitive use" is properly interpreted to impose a minimum setback, leaving the applicant to select the mining site so long as the site selected is at least one-quarter mile from any noise or dust sensitive use. Any attempt by the local government to interpret the standard to allow it unbridled discretion to enlarge the one-quarter-mile setback would likely run afoul of the ORS 215.416(8)(a) requirement that permit applications be approved or denied based on "standards." Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a zoning ordinance requires a mining permit applicant to demonstrate that a proposed mining operation can meet certain state standards and a state standard prohibits mining "without taking reasonable precautions to prevent particulate matter from becoming airborne," and a local government interprets that state standard to require that the applicant successfully prevent all particulate matter from becoming airborne, the local government erroneously interprets the state standard. The state standard only requires that the applicant take reasonable precautions; it does not require the elimination of all airborne particulate matter. Hoffman v. Deschutes County, 61 Or LUBA 173 (2010).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where sage grouse habitat is not a significant resource shown on a county's Goal 5 inventory of significant resources, the county need not consider impacts of a mining operation on sage grouse habitat, except to the extent impacts on habitat also result in impacts to a sage grouse breeding site that is listed in the county's Goal 5 inventory. Walker v. Deschutes County, 59 Or LUBA 488 (2009).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A post-acknowledgment plan amendment that allows additional categories of conflicting uses that were already allowed under the acknowledged comprehensive plan allows new conflicting uses within the meaning of ORS 660-023-0250(3)(b), and the decision adopting the post acknowledgment plan amendment must therefore apply Goal 5. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Under OAR 660-023-0030(3), where a local government determines that it does not have adequate information about a potential Goal 5 site, the local government "shall not regulate land uses in order to protect such sites." Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where the Goal 5 program requires that the riparian setback be determined from the "top of high bank," as characterized by "an abrupt or noticeable change from a steeper grade to a less steep grade," a hearings officer errs in locating the top of high bank without addressing whether the location is characterized by an abrupt or noticeable change in grade. The Piculell Group v. City of Eugene, 56 Or LUBA 298 (2008).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A conclusion that the 374-foot elevation corresponds to the top of high bank, characterized by "an abrupt or noticeable change from a steeper grade to a less steep grade," is not supported by substantial evidence, where evidence in the record indicates that the 374-foot elevation is one point on a barely perceptible slope with no perceptible change in grade. The Piculell Group v. City of Eugene, 56 Or LUBA 298 (2008).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Remand is necessary where one element of the test for determining the location of top of high bank is contingent on a finding that "natural conditions prevail," but the hearings officer locates the top of high bank under that element without finding or explaining why "natural conditions prevail." The Piculell Group v. City of Eugene, 56 Or LUBA 298 (2008).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A hearings officer correctly relied upon the city's Goal 5 resource map to identify the boundary of a protected riparian area, and rejected the applicant's argument that the riparian setback can be determined on a case-by-case basis depending on the location of existing riparian vegetation, where nothing in the city's Goal 5 program suggests that the location of resource sites can be "refined" based on a site-by-site analysis. The Piculell Group v. City of Eugene, 56 Or LUBA 298 (2008).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A county may use an area larger than the subject property as the denominator in applying a one-dwelling-per-160-acres standard intended to protect deer wintering range, if the area chosen is justified based on applicable code or comprehensive plan provisions, or shown to be consistent with the text, context and purpose of the standard. Young v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 704 (2008).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a county's code and comprehensive plan are silent regarding how a one-dwelling-per-160-acres wildlife habitat standard is to be calculated, the county does not err in averaging residential density within the same 2000-acre study area that is used for the stability standard. Young v. Crook County, 56 Or LUBA 704 (2008).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife (ODFW) testifies that that county's Goal 5 program to protect Other Winter Range relies upon resource zoning to limit residential density, and the findings do not address that testimony or explain why the county believes it can rezone Other Winter Range land to nonresource use without amending the county's Goal 5 program, LUBA will remand the decision to address the issue. Lofgren v. Jackson County, 55 Or LUBA 126 (2007).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A finding that rural residential development will have "minimal impact" on wildlife habitat is not supported by substantial evidence, where the only evidence relied upon is a study that addressed a different proposal under which one-fifth of the property would have been placed in a conservation easement, and the county fails to impose or require such a condition or easement, or explain why the proposed development satisfies the minimal impact standard without such a condition. Lofgren v. Jackson County, 55 Or LUBA 126 (2007).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a county limits application of its Goal 5 program to protect big game winter habitat to exclusive farm use zoned properties, a decision years later to remove exclusive farm use zoning amends an acknowledged land use regulation that was adopted to protect a Goal 5 resource, and under OAR 660-023-0250(3)(a) that rezoning decision must be justified under Goal 5. Wood v. Crook County, 55 Or LUBA 165 (2007).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a county inventoried big game habitat, identified conflicting uses, analyzed the ESEE consequences, and identified the subject property as a 3B site (allow the uses which conflict with the resource site fully), the county governing body's interpretation that its code exempts 3B sites from further ESEE analysis is entitled to deference. Kemp v. Union County, 50 Or LUBA 61 (2005).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. OAR 660-023-0007 exempts the determination of a "program to protect historic resources" from the requirement to conduct an ESEE (economic, social, environmental and energy) analysis. The scope of that exemption is ambiguous, and could plausibly exempt (1) a local government's entire historic resources "program," as that rule broadly defines that term, or (2) only those parts of the program that "protect" historic resources, which a rule definition narrowly limits to local government review of applications for demolition or alteration of historic resources. Given the intertwined nature of most historic resources programs, the better reading of OAR 660-023-0007 is that it comprehensively exempts from the ESEE analysis adoption or modification of the "program," not merely those parts of the program that require local government review of applications for demolition or alteration of historic resources. NWDA v. City of Portland, 50 Or LUBA 310 (2005).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a local government determines that there are no conflicting uses allowed under the applicable zoning districts, the local government need not undertake an ESEE analysis, but must simply adopt appropriate policies and ordinance provisions, such as zoning, to ensure preservation of the resource site. Cox v. Polk County, 49 Or LUBA 78 (2005).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where the "resource protection program" is zoning that protects open space, when a local government amends the zone to allow a new use that could conflict with preservation of open spaces, it must either apply Goal 5 or take an exception to Goal 5. If it applies Goal 5, it must either demonstrate that the new use is not a conflicting use or, if it is, conduct an ESEE analysis sufficient to determine whether to protect the resource fully, allow conflicting uses, or limit conflicting uses. Cox v. Polk County, 49 Or LUBA 78 (2005).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Findings that a text amendment adding a new use to a park zone are inadequate to address protection of historic sites under Goal 5, where the findings address only one of several parks with historic sites, and fail to explain why allowing a new potentially conflicting use on or near historic sites is consistent with Goal 5. Cox v. Polk County, 49 Or LUBA 78 (2005).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Comprehensive plan language stating that the county will contact the state fish and wildlife agency "for any matter which could affect existing or potential wildlife habitat" within general deer winter range areas does not authorize the county to waive a plan policy imposing an 80-acre density limitation to such areas after consulting with the agency. Wood v. Crook County, 49 Or LUBA 682 (2005).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. That the county's Goal 5 program initially applied regulations protecting big game habitat to areas zoned for resource use does not mean that such regulations are automatically lifted from a parcel of land that the county rezones from a resource zone to a newly created nonresource zone. Wood v. Crook County, 49 Or LUBA 682 (2005).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Adoption of an ordinance that authorizes demolition of a structure that the city's Goal 5 historic inventory classifies as "noncontributing" and that is not protected under the city's historic resource protection program does not alter the Goal 5 inventory or "amend" the city's "resource list" within the meaning of OAR 660-023-0250(3)(a). NWDA v. City of Portland, 47 Or LUBA 533 (2004).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Because OAR 660-023-0200(7) provides that local governments are not required to apply the ESEE process in order to determine a program to protect historic resources, it follows that a local government is also not required to apply the ESEE process when the city allows a new use that could conflict with a particular historic resource. NWDA v. City of Portland, 47 Or LUBA 533 (2004).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a post-acknowledgment plan amendment allows new uses that could conflict with significant Goal 5 resource sites, and thus triggers application of the Goal 5 rule under OAR 660-023-0250(3), the city need not in all cases repeat the entire Goal 5 process, including the ESEE analysis. In many cases no more is required than an explanation for why the existing program to protect Goal 5 resources continues to be sufficient to protect those resources. NWDA v. City of Portland, 47 Or LUBA 533 (2004).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. ORS 197.467 requires imposition of a conservation easement to protect Goal 5-designated resources on the site of a proposed destination resort, and that requirement is not obviated by the fact that the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife has indicated that it will not require a conservation easement. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 44 Or LUBA 745 (2003).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A county errs in interpreting a one dwelling per 40 acres density standard intended to protect Goal 5 wildlife habitat to be satisfied if the average dwelling density over a 1.2-million-acre area of the county does not exceed the standard, where the county's interpretation gives the standard no regulatory effect until over 28,000 dwellings are built in the area, and is inconsistent with the purpose of the standard to protect wildlife habitat. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 44 Or LUBA 745 (2003).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A local standard imposing a one-dwelling-per-40-acres density limitation on Goal 5-protected wildlife habitat must be construed in a way that is consistent with its purpose and context to allow no more than one dwelling per 40 acres on the subject property. As applied to a destination resort, such a standard may effectively prohibit a resort that proposes 200 single-family residential lots in a 500-acre area. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 44 Or LUBA 745 (2003).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A plan provision that simply repeats the Goal 5 rule requirement that resource sites be preserved, where no conflicting uses are identified, does not apply directly to protect a resource site where no conflicts are identified, where the plan makes clear that it is the "results and conclusions" of applying that plan provision and others that constitutes the county's program to protect Goal 5 resource sites. Dundas v. Lincoln County, 43 Or LUBA 407 (2002).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where the county's comprehensive plan makes it clear that it relied on a particular zoning district as its program to protect an existing mining operation from conflicting uses, and that zone allows mining and dwellings as conditional uses, the county does not err in requiring that a conditional use application to reopen that mine after it had been closed for over 10 years to demonstrate that the mine would be compatible with nearby dwellings. Any error that the county may have committed in subjecting an existing mine with no conflicts to conditional use review in the future if the mine closed was rendered irrelevant by LCDC's acknowledgment of the comprehensive plan. Dundas v. Lincoln County, 43 Or LUBA 407 (2002).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a county considers the impacts that a proposed rezoning would have on inventoried Goal 5 resources, and concludes that the existing Goal 5 protection program continues to be adequate to protect those resources, the county's conclusion satisfies Goal 5. Doty v. Coos County, 42 Or LUBA 103 (2002).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Under OAR 660-023-0250(3), a local government cannot adopt a post-acknowledgment plan amendment that amends the program to protect significant Goal 5 resources without establishing that the amendment complies with Goal 5 and the Goal 5 rule, even if the amendment merely increases the level of protection afforded inventoried Goal 5 resources. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Code provisions that were previously acknowledged to comply with Goal 5 and are carried forward into a new code without substantive change do not constitute an "amendment" of a Goal 5 regulation and thus do not trigger an obligation to establish that those amendments comply with the Goal 5 rule. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A zoning classification that implements a Goal 5 plan designation and is applied to an inventoried Goal 5 resource site is among the regulations that "protect a significant Goal 5 resource" for purposes of OAR 660-023-0250(3). Therefore, a substantive amendment to such a zoning classification must be evaluated under the Goal 5 rule. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A "safe harbor" provision at OAR 660-023-0090(8) allowing local governments to adopt ordinances implementing Goal 5 that allow an "existing structure" in a riparian area to be repaired or replaced is not properly interpreted to require a threshold inquiry into whether the "existing structure" was lawfully approved or developed. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 41 Or LUBA 53 (2001).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. The terms and not the title of a code provision setting forth certain exceptions to prohibited activities in riparian areas control the scope of the exceptions in that provision. LUBA will affirm a hearings officer's interpretation to that effect where the text and context of the provision indicate that the provision applies more broadly than its title suggests. Tylka v. Clackamas County, 41 Or LUBA 53 (2001).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Code provisions protecting historic structures that are described in the county's inventory as significant, important or contributing to the significance of the overall resource are not properly interpreted to protect an accessory structure on the subject property that is not mentioned in the county's inventory. Paulson v. Washington County, 40 Or LUBA 345 (2001).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A code provision allowing a historic resource to be relocated if it is on land that is "needed to accommodate" a planned transportation project is not properly interpreted in context to require the county to determine if an alternative alignment would not require relocation, where a related code provision prohibits the county from considering alternative alignments. Paulson v. Washington County, 40 Or LUBA 345 (2001).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Remand is appropriate where the local government approves an aggregate mine that appears to impact an inventoried Goal 5 groundwater resource without addressing issues raised below regarding whether the proposed mine complies with local provisions that were adopted to protect Goal 5 resources. Jorgensen v. Union County, 37 Or LUBA 738 (2000).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Under OAR 660-023-0180(4)(b) and OAR 660-023-0180(4)(c) a local government may either determine that there are no potential conflicts associated with a proposed aggregate mining proposal or that, although there are potential conflicts associated with the proposed aggregate mining, the conflicts can be minimized. The options available under these two rules are separate and distinct, and a decision that does not make it clear which option is being selected must be remanded. Turner Community Association v. Marion County, 37 Or LUBA 324 (1999).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Under OAR 660-023-0180(4)(f) where a proposed aggregate mining operation will be located on Class I, II or Unique Farm land, the comprehensive plan must be amended to limit post-mining uses to uses listed under ORS 215.213(1) or 215.283(1) and fish and wildlife habitat uses. A decision authorizing mining that does not so limit post-mining uses must be remanded. Turner Community Association v. Marion County, 37 Or LUBA 324 (1999).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A committed-exception zone-change decision that acknowledges the existence of Goal 5 resources on the subject property, but concludes that the county's existing Goal 5 plan provisions will address any conflicts, is not adequate to demonstrate compliance with Goal 5, where the findings do not state which of the county's existing Goal 5 plan provisions ensure continued compliance once the exception is taken, and the findings do not consider whether the zone change may introduce the possibility of new conflicting uses. Pekarek v. Wallowa County, 36 Or LUBA 494 (1999).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A land development ordinance amendment adopting a half-acre minimum lot size for a flood hazard zone is not reviewable for compliance with Goal 5 where the acknowledged comprehensive plan calls for a half-acre minimum in the flood hazard zone. Barnard Perkins Corp. v. City of Rivergrove, 34 Or LUBA 660 (1998).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A Goal 5 program requiring a 100-yard setback from the crests of certain moraines satisfies the OAR 660-16-010(3) requirement for "clear and objective standards" where the crest of a moraine can be located using accepted survey techniques. Buhler Ranch v. Wallowa County, 33 Or LUBA 594 (1997).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. A Goal 5 program requirement for a "suitable visual buffer" does not satisfy the OAR 660-16-010(3) requirement for "clear and objective standards." Such a requirement must clearly specify the outcome to be achieved by the screening and the vantage point from which the proposed dwelling must be screened. Buhler Ranch v. Wallowa County, 33 Or LUBA 594 (1997).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Where a county has an acknowledged Goal 5 program, which includes an acknowledged inventory, and rural wetlands are included in a special category that is not part of that inventory, amendments to the county's ordinance that modify protections to rural wetlands do not change the county's procedures for inventorying Goal 5 resources and do not conflict with Goal 5 because they continue to provide interim protection of resources in a special category. Redland/Viola/Fischer's Mill CPO v. Clackamas County, 33 Or LUBA 152 (1997).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. LUBA will defer to the local governing body's interpretation that under its code provisions governing permits for the demolition of historic properties, the planning director's determination regarding compliance with pre-application requirements is not reviewable by the historic review board or appealable to the governing body. Save Amazon Coalition v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 238 (1995).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Whereas ORS 358.653(1) imposes a duty on state agencies and local governments that have a proprietary interest in historically significant properties to consult with the state Historic Preservation Office prior to seeking demolition of such properties, it does not establish requirements for state agencies and local governments to follow in carrying out their authority to regulate property under the ownership and control of other entities. Save Amazon Coalition v. City of Eugene, 29 Or LUBA 238 (1995).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. The provisions of ORS 358.920 to 358.950 and 97.740 to 97.760 concerning excavation of archaeological sites are not approval standards a local government must address in approving a planned development, so long as the local government does not approve the planned development in a way that obviates the applicant's responsibility to comply with those statues, without demonstrating (1) the statutes do not apply to the excavation or construction that may be carried out under the challenged decision, or (2) the statutory requirements have been met. ONRC v. City of Seaside, 29 Or LUBA 39 (1995).

9.5 Goal 5 – Open Spaces and Natural Resources/ Goal 5 Rule – Resource Protection Programs. Code provisions that provide interim resource protection to property not on a local government's acknowledged Goal 5 resource inventories, until the Goal 5 planning process can be carried out, do not implement Goal 5. Therefore, local interpretations of such code provisions are not subject to reversal by LUBA under ORS 197.829(4). Gage v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 307 (1994).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. The relevant Goal 6 inquiry for a decision that amends comprehensive plan and zoning map designations, without approving any particular new development, is whether there is a reasonable expectation that applicable state and federal environmental quality standards can be met at the time the property is developed in the future. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 75 Or LUBA 38 (2017).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. In approving a change in the comprehensive plan and zoning map designations for a property to allow construction of a medical office building, a city only needs to establish that it is reasonable to expect that federal and state environmental standards will be met in the future when permits for the medical office building are sought. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 74 Or LUBA 176 (2016).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. At the post-acknowledgment plan amendment stage, a local government only need show it is reasonable to expect that applicable state and federal environmental quality standards can be met in order to show compliance with Statewide Planning Goal 6 (Air, Water and Land Resources Quality). Graser-Lindsey v. City of Oregon City, 74 Or LUBA 488 (2016).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. ORS 468B.025(1)(b) is a prohibitory statute, and applies whether or not a concept plan or any zoning ordinance expressly includes the prohibition. Failing to include that prohibition in the concept plan does not mean that the concept plan fails to comply with Goal 6. Graser-Lindsey v. City of Oregon City, 74 Or LUBA 488 (2016).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. Goal 6 requires that the local government establish that there is a reasonable expectation that the use for which land use approval is requested will also be able to comply with the state and federal environmental quality standards that it must satisfy to be built. Hess v. City of Corvallis, 70 Or LUBA 283 (2014).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. Findings supporting a legislative decision that amends the Oregon Highway Plan to provide a process for modifying mobility standards need not address issues raised below regarding whether future decisions approving higher mobility standards will cause increased congestion of specific transportation facilities and increase pollution contrary to Goal 6, where Goal 6 will apply directly to any future decisions approving higher mobility standards for specific transportation facilities, and such issues cannot be meaningfully addressed in a legislative decision adopting general amendments to the Oregon Highway Plan. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. Before a local government is obligated to consider whether a land use regulation amendment implicates its obligations under Goal 6 to ensure that the amendment will not lead to violation of air quality standards, there must be at least some minimal basis for suspecting that the land use regulation amendment will have impacts on air quality that would threaten to violate air quality standards. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 116 (2009).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. Goal 6 does not require that a local government anticipate and precisely duplicate state and federal environmental permitting requirements in approving a post-acknowledgment plan amendment for an aggregate mine. The local government is only required to establish that there is a reasonable expectation that the proposed mine will be able to comply with the applicable state and federal environmental quality standards. Friends of the Applegate v. Josephine County, 44 Or LUBA 786 (2003).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. An argument that rezoning a property violates Goal 6 because the property allegedly contains hazardous waste provides no basis for reversal or remand under Goal 6 because that goal is not directed at existing site conditions. Goal 6 is directed at "waste and process discharges from future development." Swyter v. Clackamas County, 40 Or LUBA 166 (2001).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. Proposed development of a property with existing environmental hazards does not violate Goal 6 where those hazards are attributable to past uses of the property rather than to "future development," and where the local government adopts findings and imposes conditions adequate to demonstrate that the proposed development will not violate state or federal environmental standards. Neighbors for Livability v. City of Beaverton, 40 Or LUBA 52 (2001).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. Land use regulations may be adopted to comply with Goals 6 and 7 and related federal law requirements, without first complying with the Goal 5 planning requirements under OAR chapter 660, division 23, where the land use regulations are limited to those that may be required by Goals 6 and 7 and any related federal law requirements. Rest-Haven Memorial Park v. City of Eugene, 39 Or LUBA 282 (2001).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. If a local government's watershed is already in violation of applicable state environmental standards, it may not amend its comprehensive plan to allow future development that will compound that violation without either finding that the amendment is consistent with Goal 6 or taking an exception to Goal 6. Citizens for Florence v. City of Florence, 35 Or LUBA 255 (1998).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. In determining whether a proposed quarry expansion should be approved, the local government must find it is feasible to comply with applicable environmental standards addressing air and water quality and noise. In doing so, it is appropriate to impose conditions of approval and defer responsibility for monitoring compliance to planning and engineering staff at a later stage of development. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. Goal 6 is limited by its terms to discharges of pollutants from future development itself. It does not apply to all such discharges that may occur consequentially as a result of the development. Marcott Holdings, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 30 Or LUBA 101 (1995).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. Goal 6 requires a finding that a proposed use will be able to comply with applicable environmental standards, and is not satisfied by findings stating only that the proposed use will be required through conditions to comply with the standards. Marcott Holdings, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 30 Or LUBA 101 (1995).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. When a property's plan and zone designations are changed to allow a particular use, Goal 6 requires the local government to adopt findings explaining why it is reasonable to expect that applicable state and federal environmental quality standards can be met by the proposed use. Goal 6 does not require the local government to demonstrate its decision will not cause any adverse environmental impact on individual properties. Salem Golf Club v. City of Salem, 28 Or LUBA 561 (1995).

10. Goal 6 – Air, Water and Land Resource Quality. Where a city fails to consider (1) pollutant sources other than those associated with automobile emissions, and (2) the cumulative impacts of waste and process discharges from the uses to be established in a UGB expansion area and the discharges from existing sources, the city lacks an adequate factual base for determining the proposed UGB amendment complies with Goal 6 with regard to impacts on air quality. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

11. Goal 7 – Natural Disasters and Hazards. Where a decision includes findings addressing Goal 7 and petitioner argues the city erred by not adopting findings that address a comprehensive plan policy adopted to implement Goal 7, but does not argue the plan policy imposes any obligation beyond those imposed by Goal 7, the findings challenge does not demonstrate remandable error. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 75 Or LUBA 38 (2017).

11. Goal 7 – Natural Disasters and Hazards. Where findings in support of comprehensive plan and zoning map amendments point out that the affected property is already planned and zoned for development and subject to overlay zones that impose development restrictions to address natural hazards, as required by Goal 7, and in challenging those findings petitioner makes no attempt to explain why those restrictions will be inadequate to address any wildfire concerns posed by newly authorized uses, petitioner's argument is insufficiently developed to state a basis for remand. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 75 Or LUBA 38 (2017).

11. Goal 7 – Natural Disasters and Hazards. Where a petitioner argues that a county decision that adopts a new zoning district without applying that new zoning district to any property violates Goal 7, but fails to identify what part of Goal 7 is implicated by such a decision, the petitioner provides no basis for reversal or remand. Carver v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

11. Goal 7 – Natural Disasters and Hazards. A county could reasonably conclude that numerous standards that it adopted to reduce the fire risk associated with constructing dwelling on forested lands are sufficient to comply with Goal 7, even though the focus of those standards is on protecting dwellings from forest fires, where some of the standards are to reduce the fire risk to forests from such dwellings. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

11. Goal 7 – Natural Disasters and Hazards. Goal 7 requires local governments to evaluate risks from natural hazards and to avoid or prohibit development in areas "where the risk to public safety cannot be mitigated." A county may reasonably conclude that wildfire risk from destination resorts will be mitigated by the fire siting standards that apply to destination resorts under the county's zoning ordinance. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 72 (2008).

11. Goal 7 – Natural Disasters and Hazards. A county's interpretation that a comprehensive plan policy, which implements Statewide Planning Goal 7 (Natural Disasters and Hazards), requires regulation of development in known areas potentially subject to natural disasters and is aimed at reducing risks to life and property that are caused by natural hazards, is not applicable in the context of a determination whether development is appropriate in a beaches and dunes area, pursuant to a comprehensive plan policy that implements Statewide Planning Goal 18 (Beaches and Dunes), which is aimed at reducing impacts that may be caused by the proposed development. Borton v. Coos County, 52 Or LUBA 46 (2006).

11. Goal 7 – Natural Disasters and Hazards. A city finding that plan amendments that authorize residential and nonresidential development in a floodplain does not offend Goal 7 because residential development is already allowed in the floodplain under the acknowledged comprehensive plan is sufficient to demonstrate that the plan amendment does not violate Goal 7. That the development authorized in the acknowledged comprehensive plan is residential development and the city does not consider land in a floodplain for purposes of meeting its housing obligations under Goal 10 does not mean that the land could not be developed residentially under the acknowledged comprehensive plan. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 134 (2004).

11. Goal 7 – Natural Disasters and Hazards. Land use regulations may be adopted to comply with Goals 6 and 7 and related federal law requirements, without first complying with the Goal 5 planning requirements under OAR chapter 660, division 23, where the land use regulations are limited to those that may be required by Goals 6 and 7 and any related federal law requirements. Rest-Haven Memorial Park v. City of Eugene, 39 Or LUBA 282 (2001).

11. Goal 7 – Natural Disasters and Hazards. Goal 7 prohibits development in known areas of natural hazards without appropriate safeguards. A county's decision designating land from agricultural to commercial uses to allow siting of an RV park within a floodplain provides "appropriate safeguards," where the county imposes conditions designed to minimize potential flood damage, including requiring that RVs be removed from the park in advance of floods. Smith v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 801 (2000).

11. Goal 7 – Natural Disasters and Hazards. Goal 7, which restricts or discourages development in areas subject to natural disasters and hazards, is not applicable where a local government vacates a right-of-way within an area potentially subject to hazards, absent a showing that the vacation of the right-of-way itself authorizes or encourages development. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lincoln County, 36 Or LUBA 288 (1999).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. A local government need not interpret the term "protect" the same way in the context of a statewide planning goal that does not protect a specific, unique natural resource or specific recreation area that it does in the context of a goal that does protect those things, even where the definitions of "protect" in the latter goal and in the local government's comprehensive plan are identical. Crowley v. City of Hood River, 81 Or LUBA 490 (2020).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Where the Court of Appeals determines that LUBA's decision was "unlawful in substance" pursuant to ORS 197.850(9)(a) because LUBA affirmed the city's interpretation of Goal 8, Policy 1, and according to the court, the city's interpretation of Goal 8, Policy 1 is not affirmable under ORS 197.829(1) because the city's interpretation does not "plausibly account for the text and context of the policy," the appropriate disposition according to OAR 661-010-0071(2)(d) is for LUBA to remand the decision to the city for further proceedings, specifically for the city to adopt a sustainable interpretation of Goal 8, Policy 1, and apply that policy, as interpreted to the application before it. Crowley v. City of Hood River, 79 Or LUBA 77 (2019).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. ORS 197.435(5)(b) defines overnight lodgings, which are required at destination resorts. The overnight lodgings described in the first sentence of ORS 197.435(5)(b) are owned by the destination resort, whereas the "individually owned units" described in the second sentence of ORS 197.435(5)(b) are overnight lodgings that are not owned by the destination resort. Neither the resort-owned overnight lodgings authorized by the first sentence nor the individually owned overnight lodgings authorized by the second sentence must be "separately" owned. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 76 Or LUBA 6 (2017).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. To qualify as a "separate rentable unit for overnight lodging" within the meaning of ORS 197.445(4), which requires a minimum number of overnight lodging units at destination resorts, a bedroom in an individually (privately) owned cabin with its own bathroom and lockable interior and exterior doors must actually be a "separate unit." The fact that the bedroom may be a "separately rentable accommodation" as described in the first sentence of ORS 197.435(5)(b)'s definition of "overnight lodgings" is irrelevant, since the first sentence of ORS 197.435(5)(b) governs overnight lodgings that are owned by the destination resort, not individually (privately) owned overnight lodgings. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 76 Or LUBA 6 (2017).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. The purpose of the destination resort statutes is to ensure that the statutory minimum number of overnight lodging units is actually available to tourists seeking to use destination resort facilities and that the maximum 2.5 residences to each overnight lodging unit ratio is preserved. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 76 Or LUBA 6 (2017).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. The Goal 8 (Recreation Needs) adoption history shows the purpose of the second sentence of ORS 197.435(5)(b), which authorizes individually owned overnight lodging units at destination resorts, was to allow individually owned homes to be counted as overnight lodging units in very limited circumstances. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 76 Or LUBA 6 (2017).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. A city is not required to adopt findings addressing Goal 8 when adopting a zoning ordinance amendment to prohibit and strictly regulate transient occupancy vacation rentals where the city's comprehensive plan includes no indication that the city relied on transient occupancy vacation rental dwellings to meet its Goal 8 "recreational facilities" obligations under Goal 8. Whittemore v. City of Gearhart, 75 Or LUBA 374 (2017).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Notwithstanding that the destination resort statutes at ORS 197.435 to 197.467 do not expressly authorize expansion of an existing destination resort, the statutes expressly allow destination resorts to be developed in phases, and therefore a proposal to expand an existing resort by adding the equivalent of a second phase that otherwise complies with all applicable approval criteria is consistent with the destination resort statutes. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 540 (2016).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Where the applicant for a proposal to expand an existing destination resort relies upon "lockoff rooms" in the existing resort in combination with new lockoff rooms to satisfy the statutory requirement to provide at least 150 overnight lodging units, at a ratio of residential to lodging units that does not exceed 2.5 to 1, a petitioner's challenge to that proposal is not a collateral attack against the existing resort. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 540 (2016).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Lockoff rooms, individual bedrooms in a single-family dwelling, are not "individually owned units" for purposes of the destination resort statute at ORS 197.435(5)(b), because individual bedrooms in a dwelling are not "individually owned." Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 540 (2016).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Renting individual bedrooms in a house, with common areas and kitchen facilities, does not qualify as providing "overnight lodgings" required in a destination resort, because renting individual rooms in a house is similar to providing accommodations in dormitory rooms, and ORS 197.435(5)(b) provides that "dormitory rooms and similar accommodations do not qualify as "overnight lodgings." Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 540 (2016).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. A plan amendment that designates 33 acres for high-density residential development is not inconsistent with a plan policy requiring a minimum of 28 acres of high-density residential, including seven acres to provide public open space, notwithstanding the failure to specifically designate seven acres for open space, where the 33 designated acres can supply the required seven acres of open space. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. The Goal 8 requirement that local governments shall plan to meet recreational needs "in coordination with private enterprise" is probably intended to require coordination with private recreational services and facilities, not general business or industrial enterprises. Failure of a city to meet with the owners of industrial parcels prior to planning a new regional trail through those parcels does not violate the Goal 8 coordination requirement, where the city conducted an extensive public outreach with property owners in the area and petitioners cite no reason why the parcel owners could not have participated in that outreach. Terra Hydr Inc. v. City of Tualatin, 68 Or LUBA 279 (2013).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Under ORS 197.455(2), the map of lands eligible for destination resort siting that is adopted pursuant to the mapping criteria at ORS 197.455(1) is the "sole basis" for determining whether land is eligible for resort siting, and those mapping criteria are not revisited at the time of destination resort siting. Nonetheless, three of the ORS 197.455(1) mapping criteria include prohibitions and exceptions focused on the specifics of resort development that are difficult to meaningfully address at the mapping stage. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 66 Or LUBA 192 (2012).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Nothing in the destination resort statutes prohibits a county from placing a site that is classified Fire Regime Condition Class 3 on its map of lands eligible for destination resort siting, as long as conditions or similar restrictions are imposed as part of the mapping decision that effectively ensure that prior to resort development the county has adopted a wildfire protection plan consistent with ORS 197.455(1)(f). Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 66 Or LUBA 192 (2012).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Where the county adds a site to its map of lands eligible for destination resort siting, concludes based on site-specific traffic studies that destination resort development will significantly affect nearby transportation facilities within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060, identifies the transportation improvements needed to ensure that allowed land uses are consistent with the performance standards of affected facilities, and requires the destination resort applicant to provide those improvements prior to development, the county has not deferred a determination of compliance with OAR 660-012-0060, but instead complied with the rule. That the county prudently imposed conditions requiring a second analysis and requiring additional improvements if needed at the time of development does not constitute an impermissible deferral of compliance with OAR 660-012-0060. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 66 Or LUBA 192 (2012).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. In concluding that a decision adding a site to the county's map of lands eligible for destination resort development complies with the Transportation Planning Rule, the county may "adopt" measures demonstrating that allowed land uses are consistent with the performance standard of affected transportation facilities within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060(2)(a) by adopting conditions requiring that the destination resort applicant pay for and provide transportation improvements prior to resort development, and need not require that the improvements be in place on the date the county adds the site to its map of eligible lands. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 66 Or LUBA 192 (2012).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. The requirement at ORS 197.460(4) that an applicant for destination resort siting provide a traffic study that includes measures to mitigate a proportionate share of adverse impacts on transportation facilities is different from, and does not replace, the obligation to evaluate transportation impacts under OAR 660-012-0060 in amending the comprehensive plan map of lands eligible for destination resort siting. While a county might err if it relied entirely on ORS 197.460(4) to ensure compliance with OAR 660-012-0060, there is no error in citing ORS 197.460(4) as an additional basis to conclude that OAR 660-012-0060 is satisfied. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 66 Or LUBA 192 (2012).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Where a local government rezones private property that once supported a private golf course, but which is not in the local government's park plan or Goal 8 inventory, Goal 8 does not require the local government to consider acquisition of that property to establish a new public golf course to satisfy a "recreational golf need." Smith v. City of Salem, 61 Or LUBA 87 (2010).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. OAR 660-034-0040(4), governing local park planning, clearly provides that "some" of the listed park uses permitted in a local park on EFU land require an exception to Goal 3, in the absence of a local master park plan. However, the rule is profoundly ambiguous regarding which of the listed park uses require an exception in the absence of a local master park plan. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. A self-contained development providing visitor-oriented accommodations and developed recreational facilities, including a golf course, that a county previously approved as a "destination resort" under Goal 8 is a "destination resort" as that term is used in Goal 8 and under ORS 197.435 through 197.467. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. The standards for approving a destination resort under Goal 8 and ORS 197.435 through 197.467 function as a "safe harbor" that allows local governments to approve resorts that meet minimum standards, without the necessity of adopting exceptions to Goals 11 and 14. However, the statutory process is not the only means of approving a destination resort, and counties continue to have the option of approving a destination resort subject to exceptions to Goals 3, 4, 11 and 14. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. OAR chapter 660, division 034 governs "State and Local Park Planning." Where a local comprehensive plan recreation element is being adopted or amended in part to implement particular local park master plans, the detailed planning requirements of OAR 660-34-0040(1)(a) and (b) would apply. But OAR 660-34-0040(1)(a) and (b) do not apply when adopting comprehensive plan provisions that establish a city's policy for how it will decide how many acres it will devote to parks, what kinds of parks it will build and when it will build them. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 52 Or LUBA 341 (2006).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. OAR 660-034-0040(1) leaves local governments the option of including any existing park master plans for particular parks in their comprehensive plan. However, OAR 660-034-0040(1) does not make all comprehensive planning for parks and recreation under Goal 8 optional. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 52 Or LUBA 341 (2006).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Any parks and recreation planning obligation that is imposed by the ORS 197.015(6) definition of "comprehensive plan" does not necessarily have to "indicate specific locations of any [recreational] area, activity or use." Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 52 Or LUBA 341 (2006).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Goal 8 is "[t]o satisfy the recreational needs of the citizens of the state and visitors and, where appropriate, to provide for the siting of necessary recreational facilities including destination resorts." While it might be consistent with Goal 8 to do so, Goal 8 does not mandate that comprehensive plans include a list of park, open space and recreation facilities that will be constructed during the planning period or include an estimate of the costs of such facilities. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 52 Or LUBA 341 (2006).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. While Goal 8 requires a city to plan for recreational facilities consistent with availability of resources, nothing in Goal 8 requires a city to fully fund identified recreational improvements, or ensure that those improvements are available concurrently with projected growth. NWDA v. City of Portland, 47 Or LUBA 533 (2004).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Where ORS 197.435 requires that the county locate and exclude all high value crop areas from a destination resort zone overlay and the county's analysis of the high value crop areas is limited to farms that actually demonstrated the ability to grow high value crops, rather than those capable of producing them, the county's analysis is inconsistent with Goal 8 and the statute. Boyer v. Baker County, 35 Or LUBA 223 (1998).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. The statutory order of operations for confirming that a destination resort overlay amendment meets the requirements of Goal 8 and ORS 197.435(2) is to first map the concentrations of commercial farms and then determine which farms could produce the requisite $1,000 per-acre per-year yield. Boyer v. Baker County, 35 Or LUBA 223 (1998).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. A destination resort overlay zone based on the mapping and excluding of all high value farmland by definition also excludes "unique or prime farmland" as defined in ORS 197.455(1). Boyer v. Baker County, 35 Or LUBA 223 (1998).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. When LUBA reviews a post-acknowledgment comprehensive plan or land use regulation amendment for compliance with Goal 8, the relevant concern is whether the amendment has direct or secondary effects on "recreation areas, facilities and opportunities" inventoried and designated by the acknowledged plan to meet the local government's recreational needs. Goal 8 does not require that there will be no adverse effects on any recreational activity occurring in the vicinity of the proposed amendment. Salem Golf Club v. City of Salem, 28 Or LUBA 561 (1995).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Where a proposed transportation facility includes open space and pedestrian and bicycle facilities to satisfy comprehensive plan policies implementing Goal 8, petitioner's speculation that those facilities might be eliminated in the future in favor of more traffic lanes provides no basis for reversal or remand. Such changes would require a plan amendment and a demonstration that the altered facility complies with the plan policies. Friends of Cedar Mill v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 477 (1995).

12. Goal 8 – Recreational Needs. Where an acknowledged comprehensive plan inventories certain property as a county park available to meet present and future recreational needs and includes a policy requiring that such property be designated and zoned for recreational use, it is inconsistent with Goal 8 to interpret the plan to allow changing the designation and zoning of that property to non-recreational uses without amending the plan text and demonstrating the amended plan remains in compliance with Goal 8. Sahagian v. Columbia County, 27 Or LUBA 592 (1994).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goal 9 does not require local governments to accommodate any and all economic activities, or prevent local governments from restricting some economic activity based on a balancing of competing economic interests or other policy objectives. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 76 Or LUBA 15 (2017).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5) allow local governments to specify "size, topography or proximity" as site suitability characteristics and to limit consideration of alternative sites to land that has the specified characteristics. But OAR 660-024-0060(5) does not provide local governments with authority to geographically limit the scope of the required alternatives analysis to "subregions," a practice that was invalidated by Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 173 Or App 321, 21 P3d 1108 (2001), and City of West Linn v. LCDC, 200 Or App 269, 113 P3d 935, rev den, 339 Or 609 (2005). DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. It is one thing to say the alternative sites for meeting an identified short-term subregional need for jobs or shopping opportunities must be located within a specified "proximity" of the shoppers and potential employees that generate the identified need or that alternative sites for meeting that need must be within some stated "proximity" of necessary or supporting improvements. But it is quite another thing to say that the short-term, subregional need for jobs and shopping opportunities can only be satisfied on lands that are located within the subregion. The most obvious flaw in that latter reasoning is that for some of those subregional shoppers and potential employees near the boundaries of the subregion, lands in adjoining subregions will be closer (more proximate) than at least some of the more distant lands inside the subregion. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A site suitability characteristic that property must be 22 acres in size to allow development of a "Lifestyle Center" is not appropriate under Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5), where the city fails to explain why a general subregional need for between 27 and 37.9 acres of land for commercial development must be satisfied by the "Lifestyle Center" proposed by the UGB amendment applicant on a single 22-acre site. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. The fourth paragraph of Goal 9 (Economic Development) does not require that uses near all lands zoned commercial or industrial must be limited to compatible uses. That compatibility requirement only applies "where the local government has designated certain commercial or industrial zoned land for specific commercial or industrial uses with special site requirements." Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. In amending a transportation systems plan (TSP) to locate a bypass through an industrial area, a local government is not obligated to adopt findings regarding the post-amendment adequacy of its inventory of commercial and industrial lands, where the acknowledged zoning district that applies to those lands already anticipates that at least some of those lands may be used for transportation facilities. Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. The OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) safe harbor permits local government to "estimate that the current number of jobs in the urban area" will grow at a rate based on "the most recent forecast published by the Oregon Employment Department." A county errs by amending its UGB in 2015, based on OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a), but using the pre-2008 recession number of jobs rather than the 2015 number of jobs. Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. The OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) safe harbor does not preclude taking into account additional demand for employment land that may be generated by regional forces that may have little or nothing to do with a city's population growth. The Goal 9 rule, OAR 660-009-0015 (1) and (2), expressly permits such considerations. Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Petitioner has the burden of demonstrating error in the decision on appeal. Where LUBA cannot understand either petitioner's or respondent's arguments on a subassignment of error, LUBA will deny the subassignment of error. Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A city must rely on its acknowledged Goal 9 inventory and Goal 9 elements to demonstrate that after a proposed plan amendment the city's comprehensive plan continues to comply with Goal 9, and the city cannot rely instead upon an unacknowledged economic opportunities analysis to make that demonstration. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Amendments that adopt new site design or similar development standards for commercial or industrial uses can trigger an obligation to evaluate the adequacy of a city's Goal 9 inventory only if (1) the amendments physically reduce the acreage of land in the Goal 9 inventory, or (2) threaten to convert lands inventoried for Goal 9 uses to uses not protected by the goal. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A Metro regional trail that is 22 miles long and includes a multi-use pathway, trailheads, parking, restrooms, shelters, picnic areas, interpretative and educational facilities etc. can constitute a "park" that is prohibited in regionally significant industrial areas, where the proposed trail falls within the broad definition of "park" as defined in the Metro Code, and treating the regional trail as a "park" is consistent with Metro Framework Plan provisions intended to protect regionally significant industrial areas from public amenities intended to serve persons other than workers or residents in the industrial area. Terra Hydr Inc. v. City of Tualatin, 68 Or LUBA 279 (2013).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A Metro regional trail that includes a multi-use pathway, trailheads, parking, restrooms, shelters, picnic areas, interpretative and educational facilities etc. can constitute a "park" that is prohibited in a city industrial zone, where the proposed trail falls within the broad code definition of "park." That the industrial zone allows bicycle and pedestrian paths in greenways and natural areas does not mean that the proposed regional trail is allowed in the industrial zone, where the trail is not located in a greenway or natural area and is more than a bicycle and pedestrian path. Terra Hydr Inc. v. City of Tualatin, 68 Or LUBA 279 (2013).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A Metro regional trail that is 22 miles long, connects rivers, parks and natural areas, and includes a number of recreational and educational facilities, is most accurately characterized as a "park" for purposes of a Metro Plan prohibition on parks in regionally significant industrial areas, rather than a transportation facility or "public facility" that is allowed in industrial areas, where the regional trail is not intended to provide transportation for the residents and workers of the industrial area, but is primarily a community recreational amenity. Terra Hydr Inc. v. City of Tualatin, 68 Or LUBA 279 (2013).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Where petitioner makes no attempt to identify specific or general vacation rental dwelling licensing requirements that might have Goal 9 implications, and any Goal 9 impacts of applying those licensing requirements to annexed property appear to be highly speculative and indirect, LUBA will reject petitioner's argument that it was error for the city to fail to adopt findings addressing Goal 9 to support its legislative annexation decision. Roads End Water District v. City of Lincoln City, 67 Or LUBA 452 (2013).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goal 9 requires local governments to provide adequate opportunities for a variety of economic activities, but does not require local governments to protect one type of economic activity against impacts created by other economic and non-economic uses. Goal 9 does not require that ODOT, in adopting higher mobility standards for state highways, address in its findings whether increased congestion from development allowed under the higher mobility standards will adversely affect existing economic activity. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goals 9 and 10 do not apply to a city decision on a conditional use application for a single family dwelling, and the city is not obligated to consider whether denying the conditional use application impacts the city's obligations under Goals 9 and 10 to maintain adequate inventories of commercially, industrially and residentially zoned lands. Rudell v. City of Bandon, 64 Or LUBA 201 (2011).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. ORS 197.829(1)(d) authorizes LUBA to reject an interpretation of a comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation that implements a statute, land use goal or rule, if the interpretation is contrary to a state statute, land use goal or rule that the comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation implements. ORS 197.829(1)(d) is not a vehicle to allow LUBA to reverse an interpretation of a code definition that implements and is consistent with Goal 18, based on arguments that if that interpretation is applied in other cases it might impact the adequacy of the city's Goal 9 and 10 inventories of commercial, industrial and residential lands. Rudell v. City of Bandon, 64 Or LUBA 201 (2011).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Where petitioners argue the city erroneously assumed that future industrial development would result in 10 employees per acre in arriving at an estimate of the gross buildable acres needed, but it is clear from the city's findings that its estimate of gross buildable acres needed did not rely on that assumption, petitioner's assignment of error provides no basis for reversal or remand. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 5 (2010).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. As defined by OAR 660-009-0005(11), site characteristics "means the attributes of a site necessary for a particular industrial or other employment use to operate." OAR 660-009-0015(2) directs that identification of needed industrial sites in an economic opportunities analysis is to be "based on the site characteristics typical of expected uses." The choice of the word "typical" in OAR 660-009-0015(2) strongly suggests that LCDC intended the word "necessary" in OAR 660-009-0005(11) to mean something other than "cannot be done without." While "typical" attributes would likely include those attributes that are absolutely necessary to construct and operate a business, "typical" attributes would also likely include those attributes that while not "necessary," in the dictionary sense of the word, are nevertheless typically required for a business to operate successfully. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 5 (2010).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. As defined by OAR 660-009-0005(11), site characteristics "means the attributes of a site necessary for a particular industrial or other employment use to operate." OAR 660-009-0015(2) directs that identification of needed industrial sites in an economic opportunities analysis is to be "based on the site characteristics typical of expected uses." A site characteristic may be listed in an economic opportunities analysis if the site characteristic (1) is typical of the expected industrial or employment uses, and (2) has some meaningful connection with the operation of the expected industrial or employment uses. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 5 (2010).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A city's decision to list a minimum parcel size of five acres and location no more than one eighth of a mile from an arterial as typical industrial site characteristics in its economic opportunities analysis will be remanded where there are no findings that explain why those attributes are typical site characteristics and the evidentiary record is not sufficient to establish that they are typical site characteristics. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 5 (2010).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. The safe harbor established by OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) is only available to local governments when addressing the requirements of Goal 9, OAR chapter 660, division 9, Goal 14 and, if applicable, ORS 197.296, when determining its employment needs for purposes of a UGB amendment under OAR chapter 660, division 24. As OAR chapter 660, division 24 is now written, the OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) safe harbor is simply not available for decisions that adopt or amend economic opportunities analyses, without also amending a UGB. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 5 (2010).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. In relying on the OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) safe harbor in amending an economic opportunities analysis to estimate employment growth, the Oregon Employment Department job growth projection rate authorized by OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a)(A) and the coordinated population forecast projection rate authorized by OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a)(B) are mutually exclusive alternatives. A local government must select one or the other and may not switch back and forth between those two projection methodologies in projecting employment growth, if the local government is seeking the protection of the OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) safe harbor. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 5 (2010).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Where a city's stated rationale for its 20-year employment projections in its economic opportunities analysis is the OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) safe harbor, the city may not adopt an alternative legal rationale for the 20-year employment projections for the first time in its brief at LUBA. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 5 (2010).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goal 9, paragraph 3 provides in relevant part that comprehensive plans must provide for an adequate supply of sites for industrial and commercial uses. Where a city enacts zoning amendments that are likely to reduce the supply of buildable industrial and commercial lands, even if the administrative rules at OAR Chapter 660, division 9 do not apply to the decision, the city has an obligation to demonstrate that despite any such reductions in development potential for industrial and commercial lands, the city's land supply inventories continue to comply with Goal 9. Gunderson, LLC v. City of Portland, 62 Or LUBA 403 (2011).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Where amendments to the comprehensive plan require planting of vegetation on-site or off-site to mitigate the effects of development on industrial land, a local government must quantify the amount of land that the mitigation requirements will remove from potential industrial development and evaluate the impact of that reduction on the local government's supply of industrial lands. Gunderson, LLC v. City of Portland, 62 Or LUBA 403 (2011).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A local government's reliance on a draft economic opportunities analysis that has not been adopted as a part of the local government's comprehensive plan to conclude that new regulations will not affect the city's supply of industrial land runs afoul of Statewide Planning Goal 2, even if the draft economic opportunities analysis is part of the record and could provide an adequate factual base to support the decision. Gunderson, LLC v. City of Portland, 62 Or LUBA 403 (2011).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. An economic opportunities analysis that does not indicate any definite planning period or include projections about future demand for industrial or commercial land based on employment or other need projected over any specific period of time does not provide an adequate factual base to support a decision that the city has an adequate supply of land under Goal 9. Gunderson, LLC v. City of Portland, 62 Or LUBA 403 (2011).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370, 444 (2002), and Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, Or LUBA 670, 691 (1995), do not stand for the principle that lands that are included in a local government's Goal 9 inventory of buildable lands for commercial and industrial development may not be subject to discretionary permit approval standards. Those cases simply hold that where a local government amends its comprehensive plan and land use regulations in ways that may call the assumptions that underlie its Goal 9 inventory into question, the local government must consider whether its Goal 9 inventory will remain adequate after the amendments are adopted. McDougal Bros. Investments v. City of Veneta, 59 Or LUBA 207 (2009).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A new tree cutting regulation that applies to commercial and industrial development does not violate the Goal 9 requirement that there be an adequate inventory of land for commercial and industrial development, where the new tree cutting regulations, as they apply to commercial and industrial lands, include a standard that provides "[a]pplication of the standards of this section shall not result in a reduction of overall building square footage or loss of density." McDougal Bros. Investments v. City of Veneta, 59 Or LUBA 207 (2009).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. It is premature to argue that a legislative decision that adopts a new Airport Related zoning district violates a city's obligation to protect industrial and commercial land from incompatible uses under Statewide Planning Goal 9 and violates Goals 10 and 14 by impermissibly converting industrially zoned land, for which there is a shortage, to a residential airpark use, which is not needed under Goal 10. Such arguments must await a city decision that actually applies the new Airport Related zoning district to some property in the city. Port of St. Helens v. City of Scappoose, 58 Or LUBA 122 (2008).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Where a planning and zoning criterion requires that commercial retail uses be limited to those appropriate in "type and size" to serve the needs of businesses in a designated employment area, and a local government applies a zoning district that would allow any retail sales business that does not exceed 60,000 square feet in size, LUBA will remand for a better explanation for why the size limitation is sufficient to ensure compliance with the "type and size" limitation. SEIU v. City of Happy Valley, 58 Or LUBA 261 (2009).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Where a property's existing plan designation is exclusive farm use, a change in that plan designation does not implicate the planning obligations imposed by OAR 660-009-0010(4) because that rule only applies where the existing comprehensive plan designation is industrial or employment. SEIU v. City of Happy Valley, 58 Or LUBA 261 (2009).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. While Goal 9 itself has no specific requirements directed at rural or resource lands, and the Goal 9 rule explicitly states that comprehensive plans for rural areas are not required to plan for industrial or employment uses, Goal 9 in general applies throughout the state including rural areas and requires counties to "provide adequate opportunities * * * for a variety of economic activities." VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. To establish a "demonstrated need" for a proposed hotel on agricultural land based on the requirements of Goal 9 under OAR 660-004-0022(1)(a) does not necessarily require demonstrating that the county is in violation of its Goal 9 obligations or that the county is faced with a circumstance in which it must choose between violating its Goal 9 or Goal 3 obligations. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goal 9 does not require local governments to provide for every kind of productive economic activity, or to adopt regulations that allow for every market demand to be satisfied. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. To show a demonstrated need to locate a proposed hotel on resource land based on the general Goal 9 requirement to "provide adequate opportunities * * * for a variety of economic activities," the county must establish that the county has failed or is at risk of failing to provide adequate opportunities for a variety of economic activities, and that taking an exception to Goal 3 to provide for a hotel is a necessary step toward satisfying that goal requirement. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A locally unsatisfied market demand for a particular sub-type of lodging accommodation targeted at a small demographic of users is insufficient to establish that there is a demonstrated need for a proposed hotel to satisfy the Goal 9 requirement that the county provide "adequate opportunities for a variety of economic activities." VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Zoning text amendments that make it much more likely that a commercial zone will be developed with non-Goal 9 uses are not necessarily consistent with the goal simply because the zone continues to allow commercial uses. Sorensen v. City of Creswell, 54 Or LUBA 468 (2007).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A city does not err in concluding that zoning text amendments that make it much more likely that a recreation commercial zone will be developed with noncommercial uses are consistent with the city's Goal 9 obligations, where the city's comprehensive plan indicates that there is a surplus of 18.8 vacant acres in the zone over the estimated 20-year need for recreational commercial uses. Sorensen v. City of Creswell, 54 Or LUBA 468 (2007).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. The guidelines to the Statewide Planning Goals are not standards that must be satisfied to approve a post-acknowledgment plan amendment, and thus alleged inconsistency between a plan amendment and a guideline to Goal 9 is not a basis to reverse or remand the plan amendment. People for Responsible Prosperity v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181 (2006).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. General, diffuse arguments based on Statewide Planning Goal 9 that do not cite or quote any specific Goal 9 language are insufficient to allow meaningful review of arguments that a plan amendment allowing new Goal 9 uses is inconsistent with Goal 9. People for Responsible Prosperity v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181 (2006).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Where the issue raised at LUBA is the adequacy of a city's findings to address specific planning requirements of LCDC's Goal 9 rule, but no party mentioned the Goal 9 rule or otherwise raised any issues regarding the substantive requirements of the Goal 9 rule, that issue was waived and may not be raised for the first time at LUBA. Cornelius First v. City of Cornelius, 52 Or LUBA 486 (2006).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A general allegation during local rezoning proceedings that statewide planning goals have not been addressed is not sufficient to raise the very specific issue that Goal 9 and OAR 660-009-0015 may require preparation of an economic opportunities analysis. Jaffer v. City of Monmouth, 51 Or LUBA 633 (2006).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Local governments must address Goal 9 not only when post-acknowledgment plan amendments redesignate land to or from industrial or commercial use, but also when amendments effectively convert lands planned and zoned for industrial or commercial uses to nonindustrial and noncommercial uses. Grahn v. City of Newberg, 50 Or LUBA 219 (2005).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A post-acknowledgment plan amendment that authorizes on a specific parcel a transportation facility that (1) is permitted in the industrial zone and (2) serves industrial uses in the area is consistent with Goal 9, notwithstanding any current or longterm shortage in the city's industrial lands inventory. Grahn v. City of Newberg, 50 Or LUBA 219 (2005).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A plan amendment that authorizes a use permitted in an industrial zone and does not change the plan designation or zoning of any industrial-zoned property does not "change the plan designation" within the meaning of OAR 660-009-0010(4) and thus does not trigger the requirements of the Goal 9 rule. Grahn v. City of Newberg, 50 Or LUBA 219 (2005).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A post-acknowledgement plan amendment that redesignates more than two acres for commercial use must follow one of the three courses of action set out at OAR 660-009-0010(4). Although one of those permissible courses of action is to demonstrate that the post-acknowledgement plan amendment is consistent with the part of the acknowledged comprehensive plan that was adopted to implement the Goal 9 administrative rule, where the proposed action appears to be inconsistent with implementation strategies in the plan, the city must amend its acknowledged comprehensive plan following the planning requirements of OAR 660-009-0015 through 660-009-0025 and in doing so it must prepare an economic opportunities analysis. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 134 (2004).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Nothing in either Goal 9 or Goal 14 requires a city to take into account the supply and demand for commercial and industrial lands in portions of the regional UGB outside the city's planning jurisdiction in deciding whether to rezone industrial lands within the city to allow commercial uses. Friends of Marion County v. City of Keizer, 45 Or LUBA 236 (2003).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A rezoning decision that leaves the city with only 55 buildable acres of industrial land is consistent with Goal 9, where the record shows that the city needs only 38.5 acres of land within the relevant planning period. The city may assume that all lands zoned for industrial uses are available for industrial uses for purposes of Goal 9, notwithstanding that the city's industrial zones allow a limited set of non-industrial uses. Friends of Marion County v. City of Keizer, 45 Or LUBA 236 (2003).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Nothing in the Goal 9 rule suggests that a county must conduct the "Economic Opportunities Analysis" required by OAR 660-009-0015(4) at the time of periodic review, in the context of establishing a population forecast pursuant to ORS 195.036. Tipperman v. Union County, 44 Or LUBA 98 (2003).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. It is consistent with the Goal 9 requirement for an adequate supply of sites of "suitable sizes" for a city to preserve the limited supply of large commercial sites in the city, notwithstanding a relative abundance of smaller commercial-zoned sites. Walker v. City of Dayton, 44 Or LUBA 766 (2003).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. While Goal 9 does not require local governments to make land available for all kinds of economic uses, it grants local governments considerable discretion in shaping the economic future of their communities. Goal 9 authorizes a city to protect its initial choice to include one of the relatively few large commercial-zoned sites in its commercial lands inventory, and to deny a request to redesignate that site to noncommercial uses. Walker v. City of Dayton, 44 Or LUBA 766 (2003).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Where petitioners make a facially plausible showing that new tree protection and water resource regulations are likely to reduce the development potential for residential, commercial and industrial lands, the city has an obligation to demonstrate that despite any such reductions in development potential the city's inventories continue to comply with Goals 9 and 10. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goals 9 and 10 do not prohibit increases in regulatory burdens or require local governments to refrain from imposing any particular level of regulatory burden. Therefore, incorporation of comprehensive plan policies into the zoning code pursuant to ORS 197.195, in order to apply those policies as approval criteria to limited land use decisions, does not violate Goals 9 and 10 even if application of such policies as approval criteria would impose additional regulatory burdens on development of Goal 9 and 10 lands. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goal 9 does not obligate a local government to adopt a decision ensuring that large format retail uses will be approved. Rather, the local government's decision must demonstrate that it considered the impact of its decision on broad categories of commercial and industrial uses in light of competing policy objectives. Home Depot, Inc. v. City of Portland, 37 Or LUBA 870 (2000).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A comprehensive plan amendment that increases the required right-of-way for major arterials from 80 feet to 100 feet may reduce the supply of buildable land and commercial sites and thus requires findings that address Statewide Planning Goals 9 and 10. Volny v. City of Bend, 37 Or LUBA 493 (2000).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. The Statewide Planning Goal 9 administrative rule requires that comprehensive plans be amended to comply with the rule at the time of periodic review. Where a local government adopts a comprehensive plan amendment that identifies a future shortfall of commercial lands, neither the Goal 9 rule nor Goal 9 itself requires that the local government correct that shortfall outside of the context of periodic review. Volny v. City of Bend, 37 Or LUBA 493 (2000).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goal 9 does not require that a city find that its "regulations will result in there being an adequate supply of sites for telecommunication facilities." Western PCS, Inc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 33 Or LUBA 369 (1997).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. A land use regulation does not "prohibit new telecommunication" facilities where such facilities are allowed as a permitted or conditional use in all zones and variances are allowed for otherwise applicable height limits and setback requirements. Western PCS, Inc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 33 Or LUBA 369 (1997).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goal 9, paragraph 3, which requires "an adequate supply of sites," applies to all commercial sites, not just vacant, buildable commercial sites. Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 30 Or LUBA 360 (1996).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goal 9, paragraph 3, which requires "an adequate supply of sites," is implemented by both OAR 660-09-015(2) and (3). Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 30 Or LUBA 360 (1996).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. When the city's inventory of both developed and undeveloped land was considered at the time the city determined its inventory of vacant, buildable commercial land was adequate, the city must consider the impact of restricting redevelopment of developed land in determining whether its inventory of vacant, buildable commercial land is still adequate. Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 30 Or LUBA 360 (1996).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. When the city's inventory of both developed and undeveloped land was considered at the time the city determined its supply of vacant, buildable industrial land was adequate, the city must consider the impact of restricting redevelopment of developed land in determining whether its supply of vacant, buildable industrial land is still adequate. Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 30 Or LUBA 360 (1996).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. The Goal 9 rule applies only to plan and land use amendments adopted during periodic review, but it provides interpretive guidance in applying Goal 9 to quasi-judicial changes to acknowledged comprehensive plans or land use regulations that affect continued compliance with Goal 9. Marcott Holdings, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 30 Or LUBA 101 (1995).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Because OAR 660-09-025(1) allows a fair degree of imprecision in both the number and acreage of sites needed to accommodate industrial and commercial uses, as well as broad site categories, it is not necessary in cases involving very minor changes in acreages to support Goal 9 findings with extensive analysis. Marcott Holdings, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 30 Or LUBA 101 (1995).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Legislative changes to acknowledged comprehensive plans or land use regulations that reduce a local government's supply of industrially designated land must be supported by (1) findings demonstrating the remaining industrially designated land is adequate to satisfy the requirements of Goal 9, (2) argument establishing compliance with Goal 9 based on plan provisions, code provisions and evidence in the record, or (3) both. Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 28 Or LUBA 670 (1995).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goal 9, paragraph 3 requires that a local government's inventory of suitable commercial and industrial sites be adequate not just with regard to total acreage, but also with regard to size, type, location and service levels, to provide for a "variety of industrial and commercial uses consistent with plan policies." Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 28 Or LUBA 670 (1995).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goal 9, paragraph 4 does not impose a requirement that uses near all lands zoned for commercial or industrial use be limited to those compatible with commercial and industrial uses in general, but rather applies only where a local government has designated certain commercial or industrial zoned land for specific commercial or industrial uses with special site requirements. OAR 660-09-025(4). Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 28 Or LUBA 670 (1995).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. Goal 9 does not require that a post-acknowledgment plan amendment changing the designation of urban land from Industrial-Commercial to Industrial be supported by a demonstration that the proposed industrial use of the land is necessary to the local economy or will provide products that existing producers cannot supply. Salem Golf Club v. City of Salem, 28 Or LUBA 561 (1995).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. OAR Chapter 660, Division 9 applies only to plan and land use regulation amendments adopted during periodic review. OAR 660-09-010(2). Melton v. City of Cottage Grove, 28 Or LUBA 1 (1994).

13. Goal 9 – Economy of the State/ Goal 9 Rule. OAR 660-09-025 does not require the adoption of specific implementing plan designations and zoning districts, concurrent with the adoption of a UGB amendment, in all instances. OAR 660-09-025 simply establishes certain Goal 9 driven requirements that are applicable at the time certain local governments adopt measures implementing a UGB amendment. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where comprehensive plan and local code provisions provide that the comprehensive plan may be amended only when "[t]here is a demonstrated public need for the change," the governing body may rely on a 12-acre deficit of High Density Residential (HDR) land identified in its acknowledged Buildable Lands Inventory (BLI) to conclude that that there is a "public need" to approve an application to redesignate six acres of land to HDR, even where, subsequent to the adoption and acknowledgment of its BLI, the governing body has approved applications to rezone other lands, totaling 92 acres, to HDR. Carson Property LUBA Appeal, Inc. v. City of Corvallis, 81 Or LUBA 175 (2020).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where comprehensive plan and local code provisions provide that the comprehensive plan may be amended only when "[t]here is a demonstrated public need for the change," and where another comprehensive plan provision states that the desired land use pattern in the urban growth boundary includes "[n]eighborhoods with a mix of uses, diversity of housing types, pedestrian scale, a defined center and shared public areas," the governing body does not err in concluding that that there is a "public need" to redesignate the subject property to High Density Residential (HDR) because the property is in a neighborhood of low- and medium-density housing and because introducing HDR zoning into the area will allow higher-density housing in a new location within the jurisdiction and potentially increase housing supply and diversity, even where the jurisdiction's acknowledged Buildable Lands Inventory and other, more recent data indicate that there is no deficit of HDR land in the jurisdiction. Carson Property LUBA Appeal, Inc. v. City of Corvallis, 81 Or LUBA 175 (2020).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where a cross-petitioner seeks a remedy not available to it by statute, it is an obstacle to LUBA's review of the cross-assignment of error. LUBA lacks authority to affirm in part, and reverse in part a local government's approval of cross-petitioner's project application. ORS 197.835(1). Even assuming that the city erred by applying Willamette Greenway standards to cross-petitioner's housing project application, because they are not "clear and objective," the city's decision approving the development could not be reversed because it is not "prohibited as a matter of law." If LUBA agreed with cross-petitioners, the correct disposition would be remand, except that remand was not requested and would have no effect on the city's decision approving the application. In such a situation, LUBA will consider the request a contingent cross-assignment of error. Hulme v. City of Eugene, 79 Or LUBA 218 (2019).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The city's comprehensive plan housing goal, Goal 10, and its policies and implementing measures, provide further contextual support for the city's interpretation of its code regarding a prohibition on lot size adjustment "[t]o allow an increase in density in the [low density residential] RL zone" by using as the denominator the gross acreage of a subdivision as a whole, rather than the acreage of individual properties. One of the Goal 10 housing goals is to "[p]romote the efficient use of vacant land by encouraging infill development which is sensitive to existing neighborhoods, and by encouraging new development which achieves the density allowed by the comprehensive plan." The city's interpretation is consistent with Goal 10 and the policies and implementing measures because it interprets "density" and "acre" to allow new infill development of vacant land to achieve a density that is allowed by the comprehensive plan. Hunt v. City of the Dalles, 78 Or LUBA 509 (2018).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Nothing in ORS 197.296 requires that the city omit from its buildable lands inventory land that is developable with residential uses if that land is subject to local regulations that prohibit or restrict development. Rather, consideration of such regulations may result in an estimate of a lower development capacity than would otherwise exist if the regulations did not exist. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 77 Or LUBA 56 (2018).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. ORS 197.307(4) specifies regulations that cities may apply to development of needed housing on land included in the UGB and on the BLI. It does not apply to the city's initial determination of what land is included in a city's inventory. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 77 Or LUBA 56 (2018).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. That a city's acknowledged buildable lands inventory indicates that the city already has an adequate supply of land zoned for R-3 (high density residential) does not undermine the city council's conclusion that rezoning additional land to R-3 is necessary to address an identified shortage of affordable housing, where the city finds that the private housing market has been unable to address the need for affordable housing despite an adequate supply, and that rezoning surplus public land to R-3, to be donated to a housing agency, is necessary to facilitate development of affordable housing. Crowley v. City of Hood River, 77 Or LUBA 117 (2018).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. ORS 197.307(4) provides in relevant part that "a local government may adopt and apply only clear and objective standards, conditions and procedures regulating the development of needed housing on buildable land described in subsection (3) of [ORS 197.307]." Warren v. Washington County, 76 Or LUBA 295 (2017).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Statewide Planning Goal 10 (Housing) and two statutes, ORS 197.307(3) and ORS 197.296, work together to require local and regional governments to plan and zone sufficient buildable land to accommodate "needed housing." Warren v. Washington County, 76 Or LUBA 295 (2017).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The needed housing statutes are set out at ORS 197.295 through 197.314. ORS 197.296(3)(b) requires that local governments inventory the supply of buildable lands with urban growth boundaries and "[c]onduct an analysis of housing need by type and density range, in accordance with ORS 197.303 and statewide planning goals and rules relating to housing, to determine the number of units and amount of land needed for each needed housing type for the next 20 years." However, the needed housing planning obligations set out at ORS 197.296 et seq. apply directly to the Metropolitan Service District (Metro) and do not apply directly to the individual local governments within Metro's jurisdiction. Housing Land Advocates v. City of Happy Valley, 75 Or LUBA 227 (2017).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The purpose of OAR chapter 660, division 7 is to clarify the more general planning obligations with regard to ensuring an adequate supply of buildable lands and planning for a mix of housing types that are set out in a number of statutes, Goal 10 (Housing), and LCDC administrative rules. Housing Land Advocates v. City of Happy Valley, 75 Or LUBA 227 (2017).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The "mix" of housing requirement of the Metro Housing Rule at OAR 660-007-0030(1) is that jurisdictions must designate sufficient buildable lands to provide an opportunity for at least 50 percent of new housing to be attached single-family housing or multiple family housing. The minimum residential "density" requirement of OAR 660-007-0035(1) is that certain specified Metro cities must provide for an overall density of six or more dwelling units per net buildable acre. Housing Land Advocates v. City of Happy Valley, 75 Or LUBA 227 (2017).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A finding that a proposed 31-lot subdivision will provide some housing is not sufficient to establish that the proposal complies with the mix and density requirements of OAR chapter 660, division 7, which is what OAR 660-007-0060(2)(a) requires. Housing Land Advocates v. City of Happy Valley, 75 Or LUBA 227 (2017).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Applying a zone that allows both single-family and multi-family dwellings is consistent with the OAR 660-007-0030(1) "mix" requirement for "the opportunity for at least 50 percent of new housing to be attached single family housing or multiple family housing." Housing Land Advocates v. City of Happy Valley, 75 Or LUBA 227 (2017).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Under OAR 660-007-0060(2)(a), when adopting a post-acknowledgment plan or zoning map amendment, the focus is on "the amendment." OAR 660-007-0060(2)(a) only requires that the amendment itself must comply with the minimum six dwelling units per acre density standard. If that amendment, considered with all other post-acknowledgment plan and land use regulation amendments, causes the city's supply of residentially zoned land, viewed as a whole, to fall under the "six or more dwelling units per net buildable acre" standard, the mechanism under OAR chapter 660, division 7 to correct that overall imbalance is periodic review. Housing Land Advocates v. City of Happy Valley, 75 Or LUBA 227 (2017).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Under Metro Code 3.07.120(e) "[A] city or county may reduce the minimum zoned capacity of a single lot or parcel so long as the reduction has a negligible effect on the city's or county's overall minimum zoned residential capacity." A finding that the area of the property affected is small when compared with the area of the entire city is not the comparison required by Metro Code 3.07.120(e). Metro Code 3.07.120(e) requires a comparison of (1) the reduction of the "minimum zoned capacity" of the subject property with (2) the "city's * * * overall minimum zoned residential capacity." Housing Land Advocates v. City of Happy Valley, 75 Or LUBA 227 (2017).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A unitary application for development of a road is not "needed housing" as defined in ORS 197.303(1). The definition includes a non-exclusive list of "housing types" in subsections (a) through (e), and a road is simply not a "housing type[;]" it is a road. GPA 1, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 73 Or LUBA 339 (2016).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. ORS 197.307(4) requires a local government to apply only clear and objective conditions to proposed needed housing on buildable land. Conditions subject to ORS 197.307(4) include conditions imposed in earlier land use decisions that still govern development of buildable land. Accordingly, a local government may apply a condition of an earlier land use decision to needed housing on buildable land only if the condition is clear and objective. Group B, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 72 Or LUBA 74 (2015).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A condition that prohibits the location of an assisted living facility within 135 feet of a property line is ambiguous and requires interpretation to determine whether the condition also prohibits the location of multi-family residential development within the 135-foot setback. Accordingly, the condition is not "clear and objective," and pursuant to ORS 197.307(4) cannot be applied to deny proposed development of needed housing. Group B, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 72 Or LUBA 74 (2015).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Under ORS 197.307(6), a local government may impose unclear, subjective or discretionary standards and conditions on needed housing only if it offers an alternative path that allows needed housing subject only to clear and objective standards and conditions. It is not consistent with ORS 197.307(6) for a local government to require an applicant for needed housing to either (1) demonstrate that needed housing is consistent with an unclear and subjective condition of a 1981 development approval, or (2) apply under discretionary standards to modify the 1981 development approval to eliminate the unclear and subjective condition. Group B, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 72 Or LUBA 74 (2015).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A local government may not require an applicant for needed housing to seek approval under discretionary standards to modify a condition of approval that was imposed on the subject property in an earlier decision approving planned development, unless the condition was imposed on development of needed housing and the predecessor-in-interest chose the discretionary planned development path in lieu of an alternate path for needed housing subject only to clear and objective standards and conditions, consistent with the two-track framework embodied in ORS 197.307(6). Group B, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 72 Or LUBA 74 (2015).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. ORS 197.307(7) authorizes a local government to impose "special conditions" on needed housing. However, pursuant to ORS 197.307(4), any "special conditions" imposed on needed housing must be clear and objective. Group B, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 72 Or LUBA 74 (2015).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A street design standard stating that "cul-de-sacs should not serve more than 18 dwelling units" is not a clear and objective approval standard that can be applied to approve or deny needed housing for purposes of ORS 197.307(4), where in order to apply the standard to deny proposed housing accessed by an existing cul-de-sac the local government had to interpret the street design standard to determine (1) whether it applied at all to the proposed needed housing, and (2) whether it imposes a mandatory approval standard. Group B, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 72 Or LUBA 74 (2015).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where a county applies a new rural zone that effectively prohibits new residential uses within a rural unincorporated community, the county may have to consider whether application of the new zone is consistent with its obligations under Statewide Planning Goal 10 (Housing), if the county has relied upon vacant lands within the rural unincorporated community to meet its Goal 10 obligation to provide an adequate inventory of buildable lands within urban growth boundaries. Seabreeze Associates Limited Partnership v. Tillamook County, 71 Or LUBA 218 (2015).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where a county applies a new rural zone that effectively prohibits new residential uses within a rural unincorporated community, the county may have to consider whether application of the new zone is consistent with its comprehensive plan Housing Element if the county relies upon vacant land within that community to meet an identified need to serve local, rural housing needs. Seabreeze Associates Limited Partnership v. Tillamook County, 71 Or LUBA 218 (2015).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The ORS 197.307(4) obligation to apply only clear and objective standards and conditions to "needed housing" applies only to "needed housing on buildable land." Because "buildable land," as defined, is limited to land within urban growth boundaries, ORS 197.307(4) does not apply to land within a rural unincorporated community. Seabreeze Associates Limited Partnership v. Tillamook County, 71 Or LUBA 218 (2015).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. If a county has relied on vacant lands within a rural unincorporated community to satisfy its obligation under Goal 10 to provide an adequate supply of building lands, in applying a new zone to that community that effectively prohibits new residential development, and which may effectively shift residential demand to other communities, OAR 660-008-0030(10) would require the county to "consider the needs of the relevant region in arriving at a fair allocation of housing types and densities." Seabreeze Associates Limited Partnership v. Tillamook County, 71 Or LUBA 218 (2015).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where a city comprehensive plan's Housing Element and Housing Inventory identifies single-family second homes as needed housing, but does not identify vacation rental dwellings as needed housing, the needed housing statute is not implicated by a city ordinance that amends the zoning code's regulations governing vacation rental of dwellings. Oregonians in Action v. City of Lincoln City, 71 Or LUBA 234 (2015).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Under Goal 10, the Goal 10 administrative rule and state statutes, local governments are limited in the kinds of standards they may apply to applications for "needed housing." Where an application is an application for "needed housing," it is entitled to the Goal, rule and statutory protections given to applications for "needed housing," even if the application would replace one kind of "needed housing" with another kind of "needed housing." Parkview Terrace Development LLC v. City of Grants Pass, 70 Or LUBA 37 (2014).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where an applicant identifies seven land use regulation standards and takes the position that they are not "clear and objective," and for that reason may not be applied to deny its application for approval of "needed housing," a city errs by applying those standards to deny the request for approval of needed housing without explaining in its findings why the city believes it is entitled to apply those standards to deny the application for needed housing. Parkview Terrace Development LLC v. City of Grants Pass, 70 Or LUBA 37 (2014).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The ORS 197.307(4) requirement that "needed housing" be subject only to "clear and objective" approval standards applies to all approval standards and is not limited to aesthetic criteria. Parkview Terrace Development LLC v. City of Grants Pass, 70 Or LUBA 37 (2014).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A standard that requires that a proposal comply "with applicable elements of the Comprehensive Plan, including: Traffic Plan, Water Plan, Sewer Plan, Storm Drainage Plan, Bicycle Plan, and Park Plan" is not "clear and objective" and may not be applied to deny an application for needed housing. Parkview Terrace Development LLC v. City of Grants Pass, 70 Or LUBA 37 (2014).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A standard that requires that "[p]otential land use conflicts have been mitigated through specific conditions of development" is not "clear and objective" and may not be applied to deny an application for needed housing. Parkview Terrace Development LLC v. City of Grants Pass, 70 Or LUBA 37 (2014).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A standard that requires "[a]dequate basic urban services are available, or can be made available by the applicant as part of a proposed development, or are scheduled by the City Capital Improvement Plan" is not "clear and objective" and may not be applied to deny an application for needed housing. Parkview Terrace Development LLC v. City of Grants Pass, 70 Or LUBA 37 (2014).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A standard that requires "[p]rovision of public facilities and services to the site will not cause service delivery shortages to existing development" is not "clear and objective" and may not be applied to deny an application for needed housing. Parkview Terrace Development LLC v. City of Grants Pass, 70 Or LUBA 37 (2014).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A standard requires that "[t]he characteristics of existing adjacent development have been determined and considered in the development of the site plan" is not "clear and objective" and may not be applied to deny an application for needed housing. Parkview Terrace Development LLC v. City of Grants Pass, 70 Or LUBA 37 (2014).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A standard that requires "[t]raffic conflicts and hazards are minimized on-site and off-site" is not "clear and objective" and may not be applied to deny an application for needed housing. Parkview Terrace Development LLC v. City of Grants Pass, 70 Or LUBA 37 (2014).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A standard that requires "[t]here are adequate provisions for maintenance of open space and other common areas" is not "clear and objective" and may not be applied to deny an application for needed housing. Parkview Terrace Development LLC v. City of Grants Pass, 70 Or LUBA 37 (2014).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Goal 10 requires the city to inventory buildable lands, and where a city has done that inventory, even if due to recent annexations and rezoning of annexed lands there is no longer a shortage of lands designated medium-high density, rezoning additional lands to create a surplus of medium-high density residential land is not inconsistent with Goal 10. Hess v. City of Corvallis, 70 Or LUBA 283 (2014).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A zoning text amendment that merely lists other existing development standards that may or may not apply to needed housing on their own terms cannot be challenged on the basis that the unamended development standards may include subjective or unclear standards applicable to needed housing, in violation of ORS 197.307(4) and Goal 10. If the existing unamended development standards violate ORS 197.307(4), such violations can be challenged only in an appeal of a decision that adopts, amends or applies those standards. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where a city adds 28 acres of land to its Goal 10 inventory to meet an identified need for residential land, the city's alleged failure to conduct public facilities planning to support future residential development of the inventoried lands may violate Goal 11, but does not violate Goal 10 or indicate that the city's Goal 10 inventory is inadequate. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Whether a new standard requiring a five-acre minimum development area violates the ORS 197.307(4) and Goal 10 prohibition on standards that have the effect of discouraging needed housing through "unreasonable" cost or delay cannot be meaningfully addressed on appeal of the legislative decision adopting the new standard, because depending on numerous variables the new standard may cause little or no cost or delay to needed housing. Such a standard can only be meaningfully challenged under the statute and goal in an as-applied challenge. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The ORS 197.307(4) and Goal 10 prohibition on subjective and unclear standards or standards that cause unreasonable delay in providing needed housing is not violated by a code provision that requires peer review of applications proposing a major modification to a development standard. The statute and rule prohibitions do not apply when an applicant for needed housing seeks a variance to a clear and objective approval standard. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. That a local code provision prohibiting grading or development on portions of a site that exceed 20 percent slopes requires some interpretation in order to apply the provision does not necessarily mean that the provision is not clear and objective, or that it requires a subjective, value-laden analysis. SE Neighbors Neighborhood Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 68 Or LUBA 51 (2013).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Nothing in the language of ORS 197.307, the needed housing statute, prohibits a city from offering a discretionary process for approval of a proposal for needed housing as long as the non-discretionary process remains available to an applicant. The needed housing statute protects an applicant for a permit for needed housing from the city's imposition of discretionary standards without its agreement, but an applicant may agree to be bound by discretionary standards without running afoul of the statute. SE Neighbors Neighborhood Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 68 Or LUBA 51 (2013).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A legislative annexation decision that leaves existing county comprehensive plan and land use regulations in place, including county residential comprehensive plan and zoning map designations, does not implicate Goal 10. Roads End Water District v. City of Lincoln City, 67 Or LUBA 452 (2013).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A zone change application is not "an application for development of needed housing" within the meaning of ORS 197.307(3)(b) and is not subject to the prohibition in ORS 197.307(6) (2009) against applying criteria that are not "clear and objective" to such applications. EEC Holdings LLC v. City of Eugene, 65 Or LUBA 179 (2012).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. To the extent a code definition of "foredune" is an "approval standard" for purposes of the requirement at ORS 197.307(6) that approval standards applied to needed housing must be clear and objective, where the code defines "foredune" to include the "lee or reverse slope" that definition is sufficiently clear and objective, as the slope of a property is an objectively determinable fact that does not involve subjective, value-laden analysis. Rudell v. City of Bandon, 64 Or LUBA 201 (2011).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Goals 9 and 10 do not apply to a city decision on a conditional use application for a single family dwelling, and the city is not obligated to consider whether denying the conditional use application impacts the city's obligations under Goals 9 and 10 to maintain adequate inventories of commercially, industrially and residentially zoned lands. Rudell v. City of Bandon, 64 Or LUBA 201 (2011).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. ORS 197.829(1)(d) authorizes LUBA to reject an interpretation of a comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation that implements a statute, land use goal or rule, if the interpretation is contrary to a state statute, land use goal or rule that the comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation implements. ORS 197.829(1)(d) is not a vehicle to allow LUBA to reverse an interpretation of a code definition that implements and is consistent with Goal 18, based on arguments that if that interpretation is applied in other cases it might impact the adequacy of the city's Goal 9 and 10 inventories of commercial, industrial and residential lands. Rudell v. City of Bandon, 64 Or LUBA 201 (2011).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Under the Federal Fair Housing Act Amendments of 1988 (FHAA), "a refusal to make reasonable accommodations in rules, policies, practices, or services, when such accommodations may be necessary to afford [a handicapped] person equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling" constitutes discrimination against that person and a violation of the FHAA. Phillips v. Lane County, 62 Or LUBA 92 (2010).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A hearing official decision to grant an accommodation under the Federal Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988 (FHAA) to allow a proposed group care home to house up to 20 residents provides no basis for remand, even if the accommodation was not warranted under the FHAA, where the local government's regulations concerning group homes do not impose a numerical limit on the number of residents that could occupy a group care home. Phillips v. Lane County, 62 Or LUBA 92 (2010).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where the OAR 660-008-0005(6) definition of "redevelopable land" specifically encompasses land on which the local government determines there is a "strong likelihood" that the lots will be redeveloped more intensively, a local government does not err in excluding land from its analysis of "redevelopable land" where it concludes that there is not a strong likelihood that redevelopment will occur on any lands within the city due to the arrangement of existing development and market factors. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 211 (2010).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. OAR 660-008-0005(2) contains a presumption that land is "buildable land" unless it possesses one or more of the characteristics listed in the rule—topography, placement of buildings, and access issues—in which case the city may exclude it from the definition of buildable land, as long as the city explains why one or more of the listed factors render the excluded land undevelopable for residential uses. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 211 (2010).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where ORS 197.296 does not apply, Goal 10 and its implementing statute and rules do not require a city to concurrently address a current, unmet need for more affordable housing when it conducts an evaluation of its residential land needs. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 211 (2010).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A local code requirement that an applicant for a dwelling in a certain zone show that "it is safe to build" the dwelling is a standard that is not "clear and objective" as required by ORS 197.307(6), and the local government may not deny the dwelling application based on an alleged failure to satisfy that standard. Rudell v. City of Bandon, 62 Or LUBA 279 (2010).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The provisions in ORS 197.307 that relate directly to "needed housing," as defined in ORS 197.303(1), including the ORS 197.307(6) requirement that approval standards that are applied to needed housing must be clear and objective, are made inapplicable by ORS 197.303(2) to cities with populations under 2,500. Montgomery v. City of Dunes City, 60 Or LUBA 274 (2010).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A local government does not improperly defer rezoning of land within an urban growth boundary to the maximum planned residential density under OAR 660-008-0025 where the local government has zoned the lands challenged by petitioner R-3 and R-4, the R-3 zone allows densities that are twice the maximum planned residential density and the R-4 zone allows more than three times the maximum planned residential density. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 116 (2009).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A zoning ordinance standard that makes the number of required parking spaces for multiple family development depend on the number of bedrooms in each unit does not violate the ORS 197.307(6) requirement that approval standards applied to needed housing must be clear and objective. The parking requirement is more properly viewed as a performance standard rather than an approval standard. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 116 (2009).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Even if a zoning ordinance standard that makes the number of required parking spaces for multiple family development depend on the number of bedrooms in each unit is properly viewed as an approval standard that under ORS 197.307(6) must be clear and objective, making the required number of parking spaces depend on the number of bedrooms in each multiple family unit is sufficiently "clear and objective" to comply with ORS 197.307(6). Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 116 (2009).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. It is premature to argue that a legislative decision that adopts a new Airport Related zoning district violates a city's obligation to protect industrial and commercial land from incompatible uses under Statewide Planning Goal 9 and violates Goals 10 and 14 by impermissibly converting industrially zoned land, for which there is a shortage, to a residential airpark use, which is not needed under Goal 10. Such arguments must await a city decision that actually applies the new Airport Related zoning district to some property in the city. Port of St. Helens v. City of Scappoose, 58 Or LUBA 122 (2008).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. It may be that a city's buildable lands inventory (BLI) can be written and structured so that it can be updated without incorporating the update into the city's comprehensive plan. However, where a city's BLI is not the type of BLI that might be updated and relied upon without incorporating the updated BLI into the comprehensive plan, a city decision relying on that BLI update to enlarge the city's urban growth boundary, without first adopting the updated BLI as part of the city's comprehensive plan, is error. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 54 Or LUBA 160 (2007).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The obligation to adopt findings under OAR 660-007-0060(2), part of the Metropolitan Housing Rule, is triggered only by plan and land use regulation amendments that are either intended to comply with the construction and density mix standards in the rule or that impact local government provisions complying with those standards. J.T. Smith Companies v. City of West Linn, 54 Or LUBA 339 (2007).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A legislative decision that establishes a floor area ratio (FAR) standard for residential housing does not trigger application of the construction and density mix standards in OAR chapter 660, division 7, where the petitioner fails to demonstrate that the FAR standard affects the city's obligation to provide for an overall density of eight or more dwelling units per acre. J.T. Smith Companies v. City of West Linn, 54 Or LUBA 339 (2007).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Absent a focused challenge from petitioners, staff reports analyzing proposed floor area ratio (FAR) standards for residential development and concluding that the FAR standards would have no impact on future residential construction and development are sufficient to demonstrate that the FAR standards are consistent with Goal 10. J.T. Smith Companies v. City of West Linn, 54 Or LUBA 339 (2007).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A city properly relies on its established buildable lands inventory (BLI) to determine that a comprehensive plan amendment will not violate Goal 10 (Housing), even if the findings reference a more recent BLI that is not adopted in the comprehensive plan, where the reference is merely to explain that the city is not relying on the more recent BLI. Columbia Empire Farms, Inc. v. City of Dundee, 53 Or LUBA 39 (2006).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. When a city has a 170-acre "reserve" that is zoned residential, but is not included in the city's buildable lands inventory as future residential land, the city does not violate Goal 10 (Housing) by adopting a comprehensive plan change that devotes approximately 17 acres of the 170-acre "reserve" to non-residential transportation uses. Columbia Empire Farms, Inc. v. City of Dundee, 53 Or LUBA 39 (2006).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where there is uncertainty about when a proposed bypass will be approved, funded, or constructed, a city is not required to consider the indirect impacts of the bypass, such as increased housing demand due to shorter commute times to a regional center, on the city's residential lands inventory. Columbia Empire Farms, Inc. v. City of Dundee, 53 Or LUBA 39 (2006).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. ORS 215.416(8)(a) simply requires that permit approval standards be included in a county's land use regulations. The ORS 215.416(8)(b) requirement that permit standards that apply to needed housing be "clear and objective" does not apply to permits for other kinds of development. Clark v. Coos County, 53 Or LUBA 325 (2007).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Extrapolation of a local government's buildable lands inventory based on assumptions not contained in the comprehensive plan is not compatible with the Goal 2 requirement that decisions be based on the comprehensive plan. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 52 Or LUBA 509 (2006).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A local government may rely on population projections contained in the transportation system plan portion of the comprehensive plan in amending its urban growth boundary. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 52 Or LUBA 509 (2006).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Particular housing types are "needed housing" for purposes of ORS 197.303 through 197.307 if the local comprehensive plan identifies a need for that housing type at particular price ranges and rent levels. Concerned Homeowners v. City of Creswell, 52 Or LUBA 620 (2006).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where a city's UGB includes a surplus of 185 acres of land that is available for annexation and rezoning for residential use to meet the city's needs during its planning period, the city's decision to rezone less than one acre of residentially zoned land in the city for commercial use does not violate Goal 10. Jaffer v. City of Monmouth, 51 Or LUBA 633 (2006).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The lands that a city is relying on to meet its needs for residentially planned and zoned land for the planning period must be included inside the city's urban growth boundary. However, all of the land that the city is relying on to meet its need for residentially planned and zoned land is not required to be located within the city limits at the beginning of the planning period. Jaffer v. City of Monmouth, 51 Or LUBA 633 (2006).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The city's conclusion that there is a demonstrated need to add 90 acres of residential land to the city's residential buildable lands inventory, based on information submitted by the applicant that uses a planning period to the year 2020, is not inconsistent for purposes of Goal 2 (Land Use Planning) with the buildable lands inventory in the acknowledged comprehensive plan that relies on a planning period that ends in 2004 or 2005. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 50 Or LUBA 367 (2005).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Goal 10 (Housing) requires local governments to inventory available residential buildable lands, and Goal 2 (Land Use Planning) requires those inventories to be part of the comprehensive plan. Where the residential buildable lands inventory in the comprehensive plan is not useable, and an applicant presents evidence regarding the current inventory of buildable lands, Goal 1 (Citizen Involvement), Goal 2 and Goal 10 require that the comprehensive plan be amended to incorporate that inventory. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 50 Or LUBA 367 (2005).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Goal 10 (Housing), Goal 2 (Land Use Planning) and Goal 1 (Citizen Involvement) require that a population projection that forms the basis of a city's residential lands needs analysis be incorporated into the comprehensive plan. Lengkeek v. City of Tangent, 50 Or LUBA 367 (2005).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Goal 10 requires that local governments make assumptions about the types and density of housing it expects over its planning period. Once those assumptions are adopted as part of the comprehensive plan, subsequent amendments to the comprehensive plan and land use regulations must ensure that the amendments do not render the assumptions invalid. 4-J Land Co., LLC v. City of Sandy, 50 Or LUBA 525 (2005).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. It is not sufficient under Goal 10 to demonstrate that it remains theoretically possible to achieve anticipated development densities notwithstanding amendments to residential zoning standards. To be consistent with Goal 10, the local government must show that the amendments will not alter the types or densities of development that its acknowledged planning documents anticipate will actually occur during the planning period. 4-J Land Co., LLC v. City of Sandy, 50 Or LUBA 525 (2005).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where a city has adopted a buildable lands inventory and a housing needs analysis to comply with Goal 10's requirement for a housing needs projection, even though the city may not have been required to adopt the inventory and analysis under ORS 197.296, when the city subsequently amends its comprehensive plan and land use regulations it must ensure that those amendments do not render the assumptions in the inventory and analysis invalid. 4-J Land Co., LLC v. City of Sandy, 50 Or LUBA 525 (2005).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A petitioner's challenge that a city may not rely on housing that is subject to conditional use and planned development standards that are not clear and objective to meet its needed housing goals will be rejected, where those standards are not a product of the comprehensive plan or land use regulation on appeal. 4-J Land Co., LLC v. City of Sandy, 50 Or LUBA 525 (2005).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Secondary effects from transportation projects such as noise or visual impacts do not render nearby residential lands "unavailable" or "unsuitable" for residential development, thereby taking them out of the definition of "buildable land." 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of Dundee, 49 Or LUBA 601 (2005).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A city may rely on a recent buildable lands inventory (BLI) that is a completed final document in demonstrating that a proposed transportation project will not result in a deficiency of buildable land under Goal 10 (Housing), even if that BLI has not yet been incorporated into the comprehensive plan. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of Dundee, 49 Or LUBA 601 (2005).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. When a city's population passes 2,500, more types of needed housing must be addressed, but the city does not have to amend its housing inventory before it can adopt any land use decision that will affect housing. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of Dundee, 49 Or LUBA 601 (2005).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Coordination requirements regarding a planned transportation corridor are not "approval standards" within the meaning of ORS 197.307(6), and therefore are not required to be "clear and objective." 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of Newberg, 49 Or LUBA 626 (2005).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The city need not address Goal 10 impacts from a relocated transportation corridor when the impacts on the supply of buildable land from the relocated corridor will be less than impacts from the original corridor. Any challenge is an impermissible collateral attack on the earlier decision. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of Newberg, 49 Or LUBA 626 (2005).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A local code standard that prohibits development in wetlands does not violate the ORS 197.307(6) requirement for "clear and objective" approval standards for needed housing. Where an applicant seeks a variance to that local code prohibition against development in wetlands, ORS 197.307(6) does not prohibit application of subjective variance approval standards. Linstromberg v. City of Veneta, 47 Or LUBA 99 (2004).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A city finding that plan amendments that authorize residential and nonresidential development in a floodplain does not offend Goal 7 because residential development is already allowed in the floodplain under the acknowledged comprehensive plan is sufficient to demonstrate that the plan amendment does not violate Goal 7. That the development authorized in the acknowledged comprehensive plan is residential development and the city does not consider land in a floodplain for purposes of meeting its housing obligations under Goal 10 does not mean that the land could not be developed residentially under the acknowledged comprehensive plan. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 134 (2004).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A city may rely on the residential buildable lands inventory in its acknowledged comprehensive plan and need not update that inventory when adopting a post-acknowledgment plan amendment. Where that inventory shows a surplus of residential buildable lands both before and after a plan amendment that designates some of those lands to allow other uses, the city may rely on that remaining surplus to find the plan amendment is consistent with Goal 10 housing planning requirements. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 134 (2004).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A city decision that results in the potential for development of more high-density housing than is identified as needed in the acknowledged comprehensive plan does not offend Goal 10. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 134 (2004).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Neither Goal 10 nor Goal 14 require a finding of "demonstrated need" for additional residential land within the meaning of Goal 2, Part II or Goal 14, factors 1 and 2 before the city may amend its comprehensive plan map to allow property to be zoned for residential rather than industrial uses. Holcombe v. City of Florence, 45 Or LUBA 59 (2003).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Although market demand for rural residential housing is not sufficient to establish "need" for such housing for purposes of taking an exception to statewide planning goals governing rural resource lands, there is no reason why market demand cannot suffice to establish "need" for rural residential housing for purposes of a local rezoning standard, nor any reason why such need must be evaluated against the county's Goal 10 inventory. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 43 Or LUBA 97 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Given that ORS 197.299 requires Metro to review the supply of residential land within the Metro UGB at least every five years, Metro is not obligated to provide a quasi-judicial UGB amendment process, in addition to a legislative process, to ensure that the Metro UGB as a whole maintains an adequate supply of residential land. Homebuilders Assoc. v. Metro, 42 Or LUBA 176 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. While the courts have held that Metro can consider housing need on a subregional basis, at least in some circumstances, no legislation compels Metro to do so, or prohibits Metro from relying exclusively on legislative reviews of the entire regional UGB to ensure compliance with Goals 10 and 14. Homebuilders Assoc. v. Metro, 42 Or LUBA 176 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The speculative possibility that a subregional housing shortage will arise in the interim between the five-year UGB reviews required by ORS 197.299, and that Metro will decline to initiate a legislative proceeding to address that interim shortage, is an insufficient basis to establish that a quasi-judicial UGB amendment process is essential to ensure continued compliance with Goals 10 and 14. Homebuilders Assoc. v. Metro, 42 Or LUBA 176 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Even assuming that the ORS 197.307(6) prohibition against procedures that "discourage needed housing through unreasonable cost or delay" applies to Metro, which does not process applications for development of needed housing, petitioner's speculation that Metro will delay initiating a legislative UGB amendment for housing needs is insufficient to establish that Metro's failure to also provide for a quasi-judicial UGB amendment process for housing need will result in "unreasonable delay." Homebuilders Assoc. v. Metro, 42 Or LUBA 176 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Land use regulation purpose or applicability provisions that by their terms or the terms of other related code provisions do not apply as approval criteria for needed housing are not "standards" that must, pursuant to ORS 197.307(6), be clear and objective. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where a city adopts a comprehensive update to its zoning code in an effort to comply with the ORS 197.307(6) requirement that standards applied to needed housing statutes be "clear and objective," and in so doing carries forward preexisting standards that are not clear and objective, such standards are subject to review under ORS 197.307(6), and such review does not constitute an impermissible collateral attack on those standards. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A code amendment that grants discretionary authority for city staff to impose conditions on approval of needed housing may constitute or contain "standards" or "procedures for approval" that must, under ORS 197.307(6), be clear and objective. Such standards are subject to review in an appeal of the city's legislative decision adopting the amendment. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Even numerical standards such as setbacks and height limitations may not be clear and objective, if the reference point from which the setback or limitation is measured is stated in undefined descriptive terms. Absent reasonable means of locating the reference point, a needed housing standard requiring a 100-foot setback from any "rare animal population" is not clear and objective. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A needed housing standard requiring that new dwellings be within a 4-minute response time for emergency medical services is not clear and objective, where the city did not adopt a map or otherwise provide a clear and objective way to determine whether proposed needed housing is located in an area meeting the standard. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The needed housing statute at ORS 197.307 is not concerned with the timing of development, nor does it require that all areas of the city be immediately available for development of needed housing under clear and objective standards. The statute is not offended by a standard that effectively requires needed housing developers to apply under discretionary standards designed to address public safety concerns until emergency services are extended to currently unserved portions of the city. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Imposing a clear and objective standard that is impossible or virtually impossible to satisfy is a prohibition in the guise of a standard, and offends ORS 197.307 if the standard effectively forces the needed housing applicant to seek approval for needed housing under an alternative set of discretionary approval criteria. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The needed housing statute at ORS 197.307 does not require a conflict mechanism for resolving potential conflicts between clear and objective criteria. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Although ORS 197.307(6) prohibits standards or procedures that alone or cumulatively discourage needed housing through unreasonable cost or delay, it will be difficult to establish in an appeal of a legislative decision adopting standards or procedures that they cause unreasonable cost or delay and have the effect of discouraging needed housing. In most cases, such challenges can only be brought and meaningfully reviewed in the context of an "as-applied" challenge to a quasi-judicial decision. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Any cost or delay attributable to a standard or procedure that is unreasonable as a matter of law, i.e., lacks a rational basis, violates the statutory prohibition on standards or procedures that discourage needed housing through unreasonable cost or delay. An informational requirement that needed housing applicants prepare a geotechnical study lacks a rational basis, where the required geotechnical study functions only to supply the city with potentially expensive information that has no bearing on any approval standard. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where petitioners make a facially plausible showing that new tree protection and water resource regulations are likely to reduce the development potential for residential, commercial and industrial lands, the city has an obligation to demonstrate that despite any such reductions in development potential the city's inventories continue to comply with Goals 9 and 10. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Goals 9 and 10 do not prohibit increases in regulatory burdens or require local governments to refrain from imposing any particular level of regulatory burden. Therefore, incorporation of comprehensive plan policies into the zoning code pursuant to ORS 197.195, in order to apply those policies as approval criteria to limited land use decisions, does not violate Goals 9 and 10 even if application of such policies as approval criteria would impose additional regulatory burdens on development of Goal 9 and 10 lands. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The Goal 10 coordination requirement at OAR 660-008-0030(1) that local governments coordinate with other governments in the region "in arriving at a fair allocation of housing types and densities" applies only if a local government ordinance affects the allocation of housing types and densities. Not all local government programs with arguable impacts on housing or Goal 10 will trigger the OAR 660-008-0030(1) coordination requirement. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Eugene, 41 Or LUBA 370 (2002).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The housing needs projection required by the Goal 10 rule is the same housing needs analysis that is required by ORS 197.296(3) for conducting a review of an urban growth boundary. Because the Goal 10 rule requires that the housing needs projection must be "consistent with Goal 14 requirements," the housing needs analysis under ORS 197.296(3) must be consistent with Goal 14 requirements. DLCD v. City of McMinnville, 41 Or LUBA 210 (2001).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. LCDC's choice to adopt rules that require the housing needs analysis required by ORS 197.296(3) to be "consistent with Goal 14 requirements" is essentially a choice to require that, where the analysis identifies a significant deficit in the supply of buildable land within the UGB, the city must complete the statutory process at ORS 197.296(4) through (7) and adopt one or more of the actions described in the statute to remedy the identified deficit. Because the statute and rule prescribe an iterative process highly integrated with Goal 14, the city cannot achieve finality with respect to the housing needs analysis under ORS 197.296(3) without also taking action under ORS 197.296(4) through (7). DLCD v. City of McMinnville, 41 Or LUBA 210 (2001).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Although rezoning a 1.94-acre parcel from residential to commercial may not violate Goal 10, a local government errs in finding that Goal 10 is irrelevant to the rezoning request. Swyter v. Clackamas County, 40 Or LUBA 166 (2001).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Goal 10 concerns needed housing, and nothing in the Goal 10 rules requires a local government to provide housing for a "recreational golf course lifestyle" absent support for such housing in the local comprehensive plan or Goal 10 inventory. DLCD v. Umatilla County, 39 Or LUBA 715 (2001).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A local government must rely on the housing inventory contained in its acknowledged comprehensive plan to determine whether rezoning property from multi-family residential to commercial use will cause the local government's housing inventory to violate Goal 10. Craig Realty Group v. City of Woodburn, 39 Or LUBA 384 (2001).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A local government's determination that there is sufficient land designated multi-family residential to satisfy Goal 10 is supported by substantial evidence when the acknowledged Goal 10 housing inventory establishes that the city has a 238-acre surplus of land designated for multi-family development, and the proposal is to rezone only eight acres from multi-family residential to commercial. Craig Realty Group v. City of Woodburn, 39 Or LUBA 384 (2001).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The requirement under ORS 197.307(6) for clear and objective approval standards applies to "needed housing," as that concept is defined by statute and administrative rule. An argument that new land use regulations are not clear and objective provides no basis for reversal or remand, where petitioner fails to demonstrate that the new land use regulations apply to "needed housing." Rest-Haven Memorial Park v. City of Eugene, 39 Or LUBA 282 (2001).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Pursuant to ORS 197.480(5), a local government can apply clear and objective criteria for the placement and design of manufactured home parks. A local provision requiring that each home in manufactured home parks be within 500 feet of a fire hydrant capable of providing a defined minimum flow is a clear and objective criterion. Doob v. Josephine County, 39 Or LUBA 276 (2001).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. That a local government has neither conducted the inventory and needs analysis required by ORS 197.480 nor made a determination of needed housing with respect to manufactured home parks does not prohibit the local government from approving a manufactured home park, or waive the local government's obligation to comply with ORS 197.480. Doob v. Josephine County, 39 Or LUBA 276 (2001).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Goal 10 does not prohibit including more land that is planned and zoned for multi-family development than is identified as needed in the comprehensive plan. Hubenthal v. City of Woodburn, 39 Or LUBA 20 (2000).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Criteria governing an application to rezone property to allow for the siting of a mobile home park need not comply with requirements in ORS 197.307 and 197.480 for "clear and objective" standards regulating the siting of needed mobile homes when a city has otherwise planned and designated sufficient land to satisfy the need for mobile home parks within its jurisdiction. Evergreen Development, Inc. v. City of Coos Bay, 38 Or LUBA 470 (2000).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A city is not required to permit the siting of mobile home or manufactured dwelling parks in all zones that permit residential densities of 6 to 12 units per acre. ORS 197.480(1) merely requires that areas designated for those residential densities contain enough land to accommodate the city's identified need for mobile home or manufactured dwelling parks. The accommodation may be achieved by allowing the parks only in one such zone. Evergreen Development, Inc. v. City of Coos Bay, 38 Or LUBA 470 (2000).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. ORS 197.307(6) does not prohibit a city from requiring an applicant for a zone change to demonstrate a need for that change where the city establishes that it has already designated sufficient land to accommodate its need for mobile home parks. Evergreen Development, Inc. v. City of Coos Bay, 38 Or LUBA 470 (2000).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Unless a local government's findings establish a relationship between a housing study in the record and its acknowledged Goal 10 inventory, a local government may not rely on that study to support a finding that the loss of 41 acres of intermediate density housing is consistent with its acknowledged Goal 10 inventory. DLCD v. City of Warrenton, 37 Or LUBA 933 (2000).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Goal 10 and OAR chapter 660, division 8 include a requirement that a local government ensure that amendments to its acknowledged land use regulations do not "discourage needed housing through unreasonable cost or delay." However, Goal 10 does not require that all house plans be held harmless from increased costs. Homebuilders Association v. City of Portland, 37 Or LUBA 707 (2000).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Goal 10 and OAR 660-008-0015 are not violated where the record demonstrates that increased housing costs that may be attributable to an amended land use regulation can be avoided or minimized and that there are many existing house plans to comply with the amended land use regulation. Homebuilders Association v. City of Portland, 37 Or LUBA 707 (2000).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The requirement under Goal 10 that land use regulations allow flexibility of housing "types" does not necessarily extend to protect particular housing design features. Where petitioner does not demonstrate that amended land use regulations so heavily regulate the permissible "design" of dwellings that the Goal 10 requirement for flexibility of housing "types" is violated, LUBA will reject the challenge. Homebuilders Association v. City of Portland, 37 Or LUBA 707 (2000).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A petitioner's arguments that amended land use regulations violate a comprehensive plan policy by increasing housing costs and discouraging infill development provide no basis for remand, where the plan policy encourages both infill and preserving neighborhood livability and the city's findings explain that the regulations are needed to ensure that infill housing development can be accommodated in neighborhoods without eroding livability. Homebuilders Association v. City of Portland, 37 Or LUBA 707 (2000).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A plan goal requiring preservation of neighborhood diversity does not require diversity of housing designs where, in context, the word "diversity" is properly interpreted to refer to "age, income, race and ethnic background" of the people in the neighborhood rather than housing designs. Homebuilders Association v. City of Portland, 37 Or LUBA 707 (2000).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A comprehensive plan amendment that increases the required right-of-way for major arterials from 80 feet to 100 feet may reduce the supply of buildable land and commercial sites and thus requires findings that address Statewide Planning Goals 9 and 10. Volny v. City of Bend, 37 Or LUBA 493 (2000).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A decision amending an acknowledged comprehensive plan housing inventory without amending existing approval standards that are applied to needed housing is not required to demonstrate that those existing approval standards are "clear and objective," as required by ORS 197.307(6). Volny v. City of Bend, 37 Or LUBA 493 (2000).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Subjective conditional use criteria designed to balance or mitigate the impacts of development on property or the adjoining community are not "clear and objective criteria and standards" that can be applied to approve or deny manufactured dwelling parks under ORS 197.480(5). Multi/Tech Engineering v. Josephine County, 37 Or LUBA 314 (1999).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where a county fails to implement ORS 197.480 to designate residential areas in which manufactured dwelling parks can be located as allowed uses subject only to clear and objective criteria, and the county's ordinance subjects all manufactured dwelling parks to subjective conditional use criteria, the county cannot apply those criteria to approve or deny a manufactured dwelling park. Multi/Tech Engineering v. Josephine County, 37 Or LUBA 314 (1999).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A county plan amendment imposing a "sequencing" requirement that proposed attached housing be built before completing proposed detached housing is supported by an adequate factual base, where a reasonable decision maker could conclude, based on testimony in the record, that the sequencing requirement is necessary to forestall attempts to underbuild attached housing, which may subvert the county's minimum density standard. West Hills Development Co. v. Washington County, 37 Or LUBA 46 (1999).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Petitioners fail to demonstrate that a county's plan amendment lacks an adequate factual base and is inconsistent with Goal 10 where petitioners merely speculate that the county's plan amendment, which requires that proposed attached housing be built at a site before completing proposed detached housing, will adversely affect the county's buildable lands inventory. West Hills Development Co. v. Washington County, 37 Or LUBA 46 (1999).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Petitioners fail to demonstrate that a county's minimum density standard lacks an adequate factual base or is inconsistent with Goal 10 where petitioners merely speculate that application of the standard will make it impossible to develop certain lands at lower densities. Even if petitioners' speculations are correct, the only probable result is that those lands will be developed at higher densities, which is not inconsistent with Goal 10. West Hills Development Co. v. Washington County, 37 Or LUBA 46 (1999).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A decision to remove 40 acres of land from a city's inventory of multi-family residential land must be shown to be consistent with the inventory of buildable lands in the housing element of the city's comprehensive plan. A general finding that there are other available lands that would satisfy residential needs is inadequate to explain why the city's inventory of multi-family residential land remains adequate to meet the city's needs despite a decision to remove 40 acres from that inventory. Mulford v. Town of Lakeview, 36 Or LUBA 715 (1999).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. In determining whether rezoning of land from multi-family to single-family residential uses is consistent with Goal 10 and the city's obligation to provide for multi-family dwellings, the relevant inquiry is not limited by the amount of land designated for multi-family residential uses. The city can take into account multi-family dwellings that have been approved in other zones in determining whether the proposed rezoning is consistent with the city's obligation to provide a sufficient number of multi-family dwellings. Herman v. City of Lincoln City, 36 Or LUBA 521 (1999).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Substantial evidence supports a city's rezoning of land from multi-family to single-family residential uses, where the city's inventory indicates a need for 1,081 multi-family dwellings, and a reasonable person could conclude that the number of existing and approved multi-family dwellings exceeds 1,081 units, notwithstanding flaws in the city's analysis that render the exact number of those dwellings uncertain. Herman v. City of Lincoln City, 36 Or LUBA 521 (1999).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A county's conclusory finding that goals protecting housing are not violated by rezoning rural residential property for industrial use because proximity of the property to commercial and industrial uses and an interstate highway makes use of the property for rural residential uses impracticable is inadequate, where the record includes no evidence of conflicts with those uses that might make rural residential uses impracticable. James v. Josephine County, 35 Or LUBA 493 (1999).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where petitioners do not develop their argument that Statewide Planning Goal 10 and an implementing comprehensive plan housing protection goal categorically prohibit changing the zoning or planning designations of rural residential lands to allow rural industrial use, LUBA will reject the argument. James v. Josephine County, 35 Or LUBA 493 (1999).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A comprehensive plan amendment that significantly reduces the supply of residential land implicates Goal 10. Findings that fail to discuss the current housing inventory and needs, anticipated population growth, or whether available vacant land is buildable are inadequate to demonstrate consistency with Goal 10. Citizens for Florence v. City of Florence, 35 Or LUBA 255 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A legislative amendment that changes mobile home parks from a conditional use to a use in a floating zone which has not been applied to any particular site conflicts with ORS 197.480(1) and (2), which require that the city zone specific lands for mobile home parks, commensurate with the need for such parks. Creswell Court v. City of Creswell, 35 Or LUBA 234 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. It is inconsistent with Goal 10 to remove an entire category of housing types from a local government's future housing stock without supporting that decision by a buildable lands inventory and housing needs projections. Creswell Court v. City of Creswell, 35 Or LUBA 234 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A housing needs projection based on the unsupported assumption that the entirety of the city's future population growth will consist of middle to upper income residents is inconsistent with Goal 10. Creswell Court v. City of Creswell, 35 Or LUBA 234 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where a local government's acknowledged comprehensive plan identifies a need "for housing within an urban growth boundary at particular price ranges and rent levels," any housing types that are determined to be necessary to meet that need are considered "needed housing," within the meaning of ORS 197.303(1). Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Even if high-cost housing could be excluded from "needed housing" under ORS 197.303(1), where such high-cost housing is included in the housing needs identified in the comprehensive plan, it constitutes "needed housing" within the meaning of the statute. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. OAR 660-008-0005 permits a local government to exclude lands with slopes in excess of 25 percent from its buildable lands inventory for housing. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where a city's buildable lands inventory does not include underdeveloped residential lands, it need not consider whether more restrictive land use regulations will have impacts on them. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where a city's decision adopts more restrictive land use regulations affecting residential lands, it must consider the impact of those regulations on unincorporated lands inside the UGB, if the city relies on such land to meet its identified housing needs. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Legislative history makes it clear that "needed housing" is not to be subjected to standards, conditions or procedures that involve subjective, value-laden analyses designed to balance or mitigate impacts of the development on (1) the property to be developed or (2) the adjoining properties or community. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A city's failure to clearly and objectively identify the information that must be submitted in support of an application for approval to construct needed housing does not violate the statutory requirement for "clear and objective" "procedures for approval." Under ORS 227.178(2) the city is required to notify the applicant of exactly what information is missing from the application within 30 days of receipt of the application. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A city code provision that allows it to impose conditions on applications to construct "needed housing" to "mitigate any potential negative impacts caused by the development" violates the statutory requirement for "clear and objective" procedures for such applications. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A code requirement that vegetation included in a planting plan be "native vegetation" is a sufficiently clear and objective standard under ORS 197.307(6). That the requirement includes an option to use "similar species" in place of "native vegetation" does not mean the requirement is not clear and objective. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A code requirement that needed housing site grading "shall consider the sensitive nature of these areas," "[retain] existing grades to the greatest extent possible [and] avoid an artificial appearance by creating smooth flowing contours of varying gradients" is not "clear and objective," within the meaning of ORS 197.307(6). Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Local code standards requiring that trees of a particular diameter be "incorporated into the project design whenever possible" and that development must preserve "the maximum number of existing trees" and that "building envelopes must be located and sized to preserve the maximum number of trees" are sufficiently clear and objective to comply with ORS 197.307(6). Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A post-construction enforcement provision that potentially affects "needed housing" does not violate ORS 197.307(6), because the statute only limits "standards, special conditions and procedures" when reviewing applications for needed housing. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A local building design requirement to "cut buildings into hillsides to reduce visual bulk" is sufficiently clear and objective to comply with ORS 197.307(6), where the requirement includes a diagram making it clear that achieving a level building pad is to be accomplished by cutting rather than by filling or by a combination of cutting and filling. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. A code requirement for a detailed geotechnical study with an application to develop hillside lands could be applied in a way that would result in "unreasonable cost or delay" affecting needed housing, in contravention of ORS 197.307(6). However, the code requirement need not necessarily be applied in that manner and, therefore, the code requirement itself does not violate ORS 197.307(6), even though application of that requirement in particular cases might. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. The ORS 197.307(3) requirement for clear and objective conditions and standards for certain housing when regulating for appearance or aesthetic purposes does not apply to regulations adopted to regulate for other purposes, even if those regulations may also regulate for appearance or aesthetic purposes. Rogue Valley Assoc. of Realtors v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 139 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. OAR 660-008-0015 requires that local governments apply nondiscretionary approval standards to needed housing. A standard that requires that the color, material and appearance of new exterior siding and roofing be "similar to" the color, material and appearance of existing siding and roofing in the community is not nondiscretionary. Barnard Perkins Corp. v. City of Rivergrove, 34 Or LUBA 660 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where plan amendments undermine assumptions that support acknowledged plan provisions directed at Goal 10 requirements, the local government must demonstrate that the plan as amended still complies with Goal 10. Barnard Perkins Corp. v. City of Rivergrove, 34 Or LUBA 660 (1998).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. When the size of the city's buildable lands inventory was calculated, deemed adequate and acknowledged on the assumption there would be redevelopment resulting in 2,400 multiple family units within a mile of downtown, the city must, before adopting new regulations which undermine that assumption, consider the impact of the new regulations on the city's buildable lands inventory. Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 30 Or LUBA 360 (1996).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. When adopting post-acknowledgment plan and zone map amendments affecting residentially designated land within an urban growth boundary, a local government must demonstrate that it continues to satisfy its Goal 10 obligation to maintain an adequate inventory of buildable lands. Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 28 Or LUBA 670 (1995).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Under OAR 660-08-015(12) and (13), a buildable lands inventory may include "redevelopable" residentially designated land that is already built upon. However, land which has a mixed-use comprehensive plan designation, rather than a residential plan designation, cannot be included in a buildable lands inventory. OAR 660-08-020(1). Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 28 Or LUBA 670 (1995).

14. Goal 10 – Housing/ Goal 10 Rule. Where a city has a population of less than 2,500 people, the city's comprehensive plan and land use regulations do not implement the "needed housing" provisions of either ORS 197.307(6) or Goal 10 and, therefore, the city's interpretation of its plan and land use regulations is not subject to reversal or remand on the basis of inconsistency with statutory and goal standards relating to "needed housing." Shelter Resources, Inc. v. City of Cannon Beach, 27 Or LUBA 229 (1994).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A stipulation in the applicant's application materials to adopt regulations in the future to ensure that a sewer system will not serve rural users is insufficient to demonstrate compliance with OAR 660-011-0060(3)(b) and Goal 11 where the applicant provides no explanation of why the stipulation is enforceable. Jacobus v. Klamath County, 81 Or LUBA 785 (2020).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Goal 11 neither prevents the interconnection of communication facilities and services that serve both urban and rural areas nor limits the use of communication facilities and services to the needs of the rural area in which they are located. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Tillamook County, 81 Or LUBA 633 (2020).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. In the context of a reasons exception to allow a data center use on agricultural land, while a local government cannot judge whether a property has a service-based locational advantage without a complete understanding of the extent of services in the alternative locations, the absence of an inventory of existing infrastructure in the record does not undermine the decision-maker's conclusion that the exception area provides a "significant comparative advantage," for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c), where alternative sites were not rejected based upon the unavailability of services. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Morrow County, 81 Or LUBA 508 (2020).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Speculation that a reasons exception to allow an industrial use on agricultural land will hasten future zone change applications does not establish that the exception will not "cause only minimal loss of reproductive resource lands" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c); however, the fact that that an equal amount of land elsewhere in the jurisdiction will be rezoned from industrial to agricultural does not demonstrate that that criterion is met where the findings do not discuss the quality or productivity of the resource lands in the proposed exception area or otherwise attempt to describe, in qualitative terms, what removing the agricultural zoning of the proposed exception area means for resource land productivity. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Morrow County, 81 Or LUBA 508 (2020).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. In the context of a reasons exception to allow a data center use on agricultural land, that a site is under contract or currently used for the disposal of wastewater; that a site is in federal ownership and that its ownership transfer timeline is unknown; that much of a site is covered in wetlands and that removal and fill of the wetlands will increase risk and will increase costs in an amount in the tens of thousands of dollars; that a site is too close to other existing or planned data centers to avoid general, undefined issues of facility proximity and interdependence; and that a site is inconsistent with the applicant's objective of ultimately extending services to a particular property do not necessarily establish that those sites "cannot reasonable accommodate the use" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Morrow County, 81 Or LUBA 508 (2020).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Only "transportation facilities and improvements" that meet the requirements of OAR 660-012-0065 are allowed on EFU-zoned "rural land" without an exception to Goals 3, 11 and 14. OAR 660-012-0070 provides that "transportation facilities" that do not meet the requirements of OAR 660-012-0065 cannot be constructed on "rural land" without an exception to the applicable goals. However, OAR 660-012-

0070 does not require an exception to the applicable resource and urban goals where the city concurrently includes the land within its urban growth boundary, because the land is no longer "rural land" as defined in that rule. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. OAR 660-011-0060(9)(a) and (b) provide examples of "[a]ppropriate reasons and facts for an exception to Goal 11" that are context for determining the scope of the general term "appropriate reasons and facts," but they do not state the only "appropriate reasons and facts for an exception to Goal 11" to extend a sewer system into a rural area to solve a public health problem. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 455 (2016).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. OAR 660-011-0060(9) is not intended to describe the complete universe of situations that could justify a reasons exception to Goal 11. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 455 (2016).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A county decision that it "may be" necessary to allow sewers systems to serve up to 11,000 lots in a 180-square-mile area of the county to address a future potential health hazard if the county later determines that septic systems and other treatment systems are not the best solution does not state "appropriate reasons and facts" for justifying a Goal 11 exception. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 455 (2016).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. In approving an exception to Goal 11 to extend sewers onto rural land in the county, a county's failure to distinguish between 3,353 high groundwater lots that are either already developed with houses or that are vacant but could be developed with houses, and other areas that it is proposing to serve with sewers in order to more easily allow future houses on rural lands but that the record does not demonstrate are located in high groundwater areas, makes the county's ordinance adopting an exception to Goal 11 an ordinance that "establish[es] a planning or zoning policy of general applicability" in contravention of ORS 197.732(1)(b), rather than an ordinance that adopts an exception. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 455 (2016).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Where a county approves a reasons exception to Goal 11 to allow extension of city water to serve a highway rest area, and imposes a condition of approval requiring city approval, but later modifies the condition to substitute rural irrigation water for city water to be used to irrigate landscaping, the modification does not necessarily change the "type" of public facilities and service and thus require a new reasons exception pursuant to OAR 660-004-0018(4)(b). Generally, a new reasons exception is required under OAR 660-004-0018(4)(b) only for changes that make the exception area less conforming to the goal. Foland v. Jackson County, 70 Or LUBA 247 (2014).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Because Goal 11 defines "water system" as a system for the provision of piped water for human consumption, modifying a condition of approval so that city water is not used for irrigating landscaping, but used only for human consumption, does not constitute a change in the type or intensity of the "water system" for purposes of OAR 660-044-0018(2)(b) and thus modifying the condition does not require a new reasons exception. Foland v. Jackson County, 70 Or LUBA 247 (2014).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Where a city adds 28 acres of land to its Goal 10 inventory to meet an identified need for residential land, the city's alleged failure to conduct public facilities planning to support future residential development of the inventoried lands may violate Goal 11, but does not violate Goal 10 or indicate that the city's Goal 10 inventory is inadequate. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A decision that adopts a refinement plan that describes a 15-inch wastewater pipeline that is not included in the city's acknowledged public facilities plan does not present a Goal 2 consistency problem or violation of Goal 11, where under the acknowledged plan 15-inch pipelines need not be included in the plan and the petitioner's argument that the plan must include the proposed pipeline represents a collateral attack on the acknowledged public facilities plan. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Goal 11 requires the city to adopt a public facilities plan for areas within its urban growth boundary. A public facility plan is consistent with Goal 11 where the plan includes future projects and improvements to serve areas inside the city's existing urban growth boundary. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 68 Or LUBA 173 (2013).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. OAR 660-011-0010(1)(g) requires a public facility plan to include "[a] discussion of the provider's existing funding mechanisms and the ability of these and possible new mechanisms to fund the development of each public facility project or system." A city's multiple page discussion of its existing Capital Improvement Program, systems development charges, leasing revenue and use of utility user fees to fund development of public facility project satisfies the requirement of the rule. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 68 Or LUBA 173 (2013).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. OAR 660-011-0010(1)(f) requires a public facility plan to include "[a]n estimate of when each facility project will be needed[.]" A public facility plan that identifies each project as a "short term project (years 1-5)" or a "long term project (years 6-20)" satisfies the requirements of the rule. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 68 Or LUBA 173 (2013).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A hearings officer does not err in concluding that connecting a dwelling to a rural sewer service district's existing system constitutes either the establishment of a "new community sewer system" or a "new extension of a sewer system from within an urban growth boundary." Purtzer v. Jackson County, 67 Or LUBA 205 (2013).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. The Goal 11 requirement to provide "timely, orderly and efficient arrangement of public facilities and services" is not particularly concerned with the performance standards governing state highways, a concern that is more specifically addressed under Goal 12 and the Transportation Planning Rule. Goal 11 does not add anything new or different to the specific Goal 12 requirements with respect to the performance of state highways, and findings addressing Goal 11 are not inadequate simply because they fail to consider whether modified highway performance standards are consistent with Goal 11. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Nothing in Goal 2, Goal 11, or an urban growth management agreement between the city and the county for lands within the urban growth boundary requires the city to consider the impacts of a public facilities project on a county-identified Goal 5 resource, where the county was given an opportunity to and did not raise any concerns about the project's impact on a county-identified Goal 5 resource. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 66 Or LUBA 392 (2012).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. OAR 660-011-0015(3) allows the city to incorporate by reference private water service providers' planning documents. Where there is no evidence that the private service providers' planning documents are inadequate to meet the requirements of OAR 660-011-0010(a), the city is entitled to rely on those planning documents to assess the private service providers' systems. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 66 Or LUBA 392 (2012).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. OAR 660-011-0010 requires the city to provide in its public facility plan an identification of "significant public facility projects which are to support the land uses designated in the acknowledged comprehensive plan." A public facility plan is inconsistent with OAR 660-011-0010 where the plan includes future projects and improvements to serve areas outside the city's existing urban growth boundary. Central Oregon Landwatch v. City of Bend, 66 Or LUBA 392 (2012).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. If a particular urban use of rural land authorized under an exception to Goal 14 does not require urban levels or sources of water, it is consistent with Goal 11 to allow the urban use to be served with non-urban levels or sources of water, and no exception to Goal 11 is required. Foland v. Jackson County, 64 Or LUBA 265 (2011).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Nothing in Goal 11 or the Goal 11 rule requires a local government to amend its public facilities plan to include a new bridge that an applicant agrees to construct at its expense to mitigate the traffic effects of a zone change and planned unit development. Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 63 Or LUBA 75 (2011).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Reasons that justify a goal exception under OAR 660-012-0070 may be sufficient to justify a goal exception under Goal 11, OAR 660-011-0060(9) and OAR 660-004-0020 and 660-004-0022. Where a local government reasonably concludes under OAR 660-12-0070 that an on-site septic system would not be adequate to handle the volume of projected waste from a transportation facility, a local government may also be able to rely on the same evidence to conclude that an exception to Goal 11 is justified. Foland v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 264 (2010).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. OAR 660-011-0065 does not purport to identify the universe of Goal 11 concerns regarding extension of water systems onto rural land. Where the extension of a water system onto rural lands is proposed to facilitate an urban use of that land, the extension is prohibited without an exception to Goal 11. Foland v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 264 (2010).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A county adequately ensures consistency with the Goal 11 prohibition on a "sewer system" that serves more than one parcel on rural lands, where the county approves a sewer system for a proposed public RV park/campground on two existing parcels, but conditions approval on consolidation of the two parcels into a single parcel. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. The standards for approving a destination resort under Goal 8 and ORS 197.435 through 197.467 function as a "safe harbor" that allows local governments to approve resorts that meet minimum standards, without the necessity of adopting exceptions to Goals 11 and 14. However, the statutory process is not the only means of approving a destination resort, and counties continue to have the option of approving a destination resort subject to exceptions to Goals 3, 4, 11 and 14. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A county may rely on the reasons that justified a Goal 4 exception earlier approved by the county and Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) for a proposed destination resort to justify reasons exceptions to Goals 11 and 14, where the record supports the county's finding that the Goal 4 reasons are still valid and the Goals 11 and 14 exceptions merely implement and complete the earlier county and LCDC approval. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Because Goal 11 and Goal 14 serve congruent policy objectives, the reasons sufficient to justify a Goal 14 exception for a destination resort may also be sufficient to justify an exception to Goal 11 to authorize a community sewer system to serve the destination resort. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Where Goal 11 and 14 exceptions are necessary to complete a previously approved destination resort that is authorized under the county's acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations, and the resort as completed is substantially similar to the resort as originally approved, the Goal 11 and 14 exceptions do not propose "new uses" that could be conflicting uses with a significant Goal 5 resource site and thus the county does not err in failing to apply the requirements of Goal 5 and the Goal 5 rule. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. The first sentence of Goal 11 simply requires planning for "a timely, orderly and efficient arrangement of public facilities and services." That language does not prohibit providing public facility capacity that exceeds current or planned demand. SEIU v. City of Happy Valley, 58 Or LUBA 261 (2009).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. The second sentence of Goal 11 provides that "[u]rban and rural development shall be guided and supported by types and levels of urban and rural public facilities and services appropriate for, but limited to, the needs and requirements of the urban, urbanizable, and rural areas to be served." That language does not bar construction of urban public facilities or services that will have more capacity than is presently needed or needed in the planning period. SEIU v. City of Happy Valley, 58 Or LUBA 261 (2009).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Where a planning and zoning criterion requires that commercial retail uses be limited to those appropriate in "type and size" to serve the needs of businesses in a designated employment area, and a local government applies a zoning district that would allow any retail sales business that does not exceed 60,000 square feet in size, LUBA will remand for a better explanation for why the size limitation is sufficient to ensure compliance with the "type and size" limitation. SEIU v. City of Happy Valley, 58 Or LUBA 261 (2009).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A decision annexing new territory to a city in order to extend city sewer to the new territory is not a "modification" of a project in a public facilities plan for purposes of the Goal 11 rule, and therefore OAR 660-011-0045 does not require an amendment to the public facilities plan, where the annexation decision does not make any modification to existing sewer projects in the plan or make any decisions regarding such projects. Link v. City of Florence, 58 Or LUBA 348 (2009).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. That an annexation may ultimately lead to a city extending sewer service to urbanizable lands along a different route than contemplated in the city's public facilities plan does not demonstrate that the annexation is "unreasonable" under Portland Gen. Elec. Co. v. City of Estacada, 194 Or 145, 241 P2d 1129 (1952). Link v. City of Florence, 58 Or LUBA 348 (2009).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Even where a development does not propose residential uses, a proposed RV Park that plans a community wastewater treatment system is a "planned unit development" as that term is used in OAR 660-011-0060(1)(f), and is prohibited by OAR 660-011-0060(2) without an exception to Goal 11. Baxter v. Coos County, 58 Or LUBA 624 (2009).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Where the applicant proposes to install a community wastewater treatment system that will dispose of wastewater generated by all of the proposed uses and buildings in the RV Park, it is a "sewer system" as that term is used in OAR 660-011-0060(1)(f) and is prohibited by OAR 660-011-0060(2) without an exception. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 55 Or LUBA 545 (2008).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Because OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b)(B)(iv) requires a local government to determine whether the "proposed use" can be "reasonably accommodated without the provision of a proposed public facility or service," it is reasonably clear under the rule that the "proposed use" and the "public facility" are two different things. In the context of a Goal 11 exception to extend public facilities to serve proposed development on lands outside the urban growth boundary, the "proposed use" can only be the proposed development to be served by the facility extension, and not the extended public facility. Todd v. City of Florence, 52 Or LUBA 445 (2006).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. In granting a Goal 11 exception to extend a public sewer system outside the urban growth boundary, OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b) through (d) require a city to evaluate the "proposed use," the development served by that extended sewer facility, even if that development is not subject to the city's approval authority and does not require a goal exception. Todd v. City of Florence, 52 Or LUBA 445 (2006).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. The reasons set out in OAR 660-004-0022(1) are not the exclusive set of reasons that may justify an exception to applicable goals, and it is at least theoretically possible to identify a sufficient reason why the state policy embodied in the applicable goal should not apply that does not require evaluation of the ultimate use or proposed development of the exception area. Todd v. City of Florence, 52 Or LUBA 445 (2006).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. That it is economically advantageous to a developer to rely on public services extended from the urban growth boundary rather than develop such services on site is an insufficient "reason" why the state policy embodied in Goal 11 should not apply. Todd v. City of Florence, 52 Or LUBA 445 (2006).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Goal 11 requires an "orderly and efficient arrangement of public facilities and services." That requirement is little offended by allowing a single sewer system to serve two adjoining areas that each have the legal right and ability to develop urban uses and urban-level public facilities, notwithstanding that one area is within an urban growth boundary and the other outside. Todd v. City of Florence, 52 Or LUBA 445 (2006).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. OAR 660-011-0060(9) requires that a local government adopting an exception to Goal 11 to extend a sewer system outside the urban growth boundary also adopt land use regulations that prohibit the sewer system from serving uses other than those justified in the exception. A provision in an intergovernmental agreement (IGA) that limits sewer access to residential and commercial uses is insufficient to satisfy OAR 660-011-0060(9), because the provision does not limit uses served by the sewer to uses specifically justified in the exception. Todd v. City of Florence, 52 Or LUBA 445 (2006).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A decision that changes the comprehensive plan and zoning map designations for a parcel to allow residential development with a two-acre minimum lot size does not violate the OAR 660-011-0065(2) prohibition against allowing increased residential development density outside urban growth boundaries due to the presence of a community water system, where the two-acre minimum lot size applies under the changed plan and zoning map designations with or without a community water system. Holloway v. Clatsop County, 52 Or LUBA 644 (2006).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. ORS 223.314 provides a statutory exclusion from the statutory definition of land use decision. But that exclusion only applies to the extent "a plan * * * adopted pursuant to ORS 223.309" is adopted for the limited purpose of supplying the public facility list that is required by ORS 223.309 as a precondition of adopting a systems development charge methodology. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Springfield, 50 Or LUBA 109 (2005).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Goal 11 does not prohibit local governments from pursuing separate, contemporaneous decision making processes—one to adopt a regional sewerage plan to comply with ORS 223.309 and state and federal environmental regulations and another to adopt corresponding amendments to the regional comprehensive plan to comply with the local governments' planning obligations. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Springfield, 50 Or LUBA 109 (2005).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. So long as sewerage facilities recommended in a regional sewerage plan cannot be built until the applicable comprehensive plan is amended to recommend those facilities, the regional sewerage plan may be adopted before the comprehensive plan is amended and the decision to adopt that regional sewerage plan to comply with state and federal environmental regulations and the requirements of ORS 223.309 for adoption of a systems development charge methodology is not a land use decision that is reviewable by LUBA. The reviewable land use decision will be adopted when the corresponding comprehensive plan amendments are adopted. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Springfield, 50 Or LUBA 109 (2005).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A Goal 11 Public Facility Plan that includes a single listing for a "water pollution control facility treatment project" as a significant public facility project is inadequate where that project is actually many different projects to be constructed in different phases over a 15-year period at a cost of $120 million. To comply with Goal 11, the significant public facility project components of that larger project must be broken down and identified in the public facility plan. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Springfield, 50 Or LUBA 134 (2005).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Where a local comprehensive plan policy defines "Urban Exception Areas" as lands with acknowledged exceptions to Statewide Planning Goals 3, 4 and 11, the county need not require an exception to Goal 11 where it limits uses in approved exception area to those uses that do not require or impact urban public facilities. Doob v. Josephine County, 49 Or LUBA 113 (2005).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Absent an exception to Goal 11, a county cannot apply a zone that allows clustered residential development served by communal water supply and sewage treatment or disposal facilities on rural lands outside unincorporated communities. Wood v. Crook County, 49 Or LUBA 682 (2005).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Neither Goal 11 nor Goal 14 identifies annexation or application of city zoning as the decision points at which (1) a specific development proposal must be approved and (2) any public service or facility inadequacies at the property must be corrected. Just v. City of Lebanon, 45 Or LUBA 179 (2003).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Findings that establish that a proposed motor speedway must be centrally located in its market area, that it will provide significant local economic benefits, and that it has characteristics that make locating the speedway within nearby urban growth boundaries an unreasonable alternative are sufficient to provide reasons for an exception to Goals 11 and 14. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A county may not rely on a previously adopted Goal 3 exception for airport related industrial uses to justify approving a major automobile speedway and speedway related uses on rural agricultural land. Although the same factors that the county relied on to justify Goal 11 and Goal 14 exceptions for the speedway and related uses might justify a new Goal 3 exception, a new Goal 3 exception must be adopted to replace the one that was adopted for the airport related industrial uses. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Assuming that a public park is a "public facility or service" governed by Goal 11, because a public park is permitted by statute on EFU land without taking an exception to Goal 11, a public park is also allowed on rural land zoned other than EFU without taking an exception to Goal 11, or requiring that the park serve only rural lands. Stallkamp v. City of King City, 43 Or LUBA 333 (2002).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A public stormwater facility is or can be a "utility facility necessary for public service" allowed by statute in the EFU zone. Such a facility is also allowed on rural lands zoned other than EFU without taking an exception to Goal 11 or requiring that the stormwater facility serve only rural lands. Stallkamp v. City of King City, 43 Or LUBA 333 (2002).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A city's failure to enter into an urban services agreement with a rural fire protection district prior to annexing property located within the fire district does not violate either Goal 2 or Goal 11. West Side Rural F.P.D v. City of Hood River, 43 Or LUBA 546 (2003).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Although Goal 11 does not require lot-by-lot approvals of individual septic systems at the time property is rezoned, a local government's findings must establish that it is feasible to provide adequate individual sewage disposal systems. DLCD v. Klamath County, 38 Or LUBA 769 (2000).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Where issues of the availability of public facilities and services are raised, the local government must determine the need for and the existence of an appropriate level of service to support the proposed development before making a finding that the goal has been satisfied. Riggs v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 432 (1999).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. To determine whether sufficient services are available to support a proposed rural development, the local government shall (1) determine the type of services that are currently available, if any; (2) determine the appropriate level of service for the proposed development; and (3) determine the feasibility of providing such service, if it does not already exist. Riggs v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 432 (1999).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A proposed subdivision in which the dwellings will connect to existing water lines within a water district's existing service area does not violate Goal 11's prohibition on the "establishment or extension of a water line." DeShazer v. Columbia County, 35 Or LUBA 689 (1999).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A committed exception to Goal 11 will be remanded, where the effect of taking the exception is to allow urban uses that would not be supported by levels of public facilities and services appropriate for a rural area and the county has not shown that it is impracticable to continue using the property for rural residential use. James v. Josephine County, 35 Or LUBA 493 (1999).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A finding that a proposed subdivision will be connected to the city's storm drainage system is not supported by substantial evidence, where the proposed drainage system stops short of the city's storm drainage system and a condition of approval requiring paved access to the subdivision is not adequate to ensure that the storm drainage connection will be constructed along with that paved access. Hunt v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 467 (1999).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Goal 11 applies when a local government redesignates land to allow for more intensive uses that place greater demand on public facilities than uses allowed under an existing designation. Goal 11 is not implicated when a local government redesignates land to allow a shopping center that will place fewer demands on public facilities than the residential uses allowed under the current designation. Citizens for Florence v. City of Florence, 35 Or LUBA 255 (1998).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Goal 11 prohibits relying on "establishment or extension of a water system" as a basis for allowing higher residential density outside UGBs. Where a local government approves a rural subdivision with a higher density based on provision of water service, it must explain why the apparently applicable Goal 11 prohibition does not apply. DeShazer v. Columbia County, 34 Or LUBA 416 (1998).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Where it is not apparent that provision of water to a rural subdivision merely constitutes attachment to an existing proximate water supply rather than an "extension" of the water system, which is prohibited by Goal 11, LUBA will remand the decision for Goal 11 findings. DeShazer v. Columbia County, 34 Or LUBA 416 (1998).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. That a proposed mine expansion might impact a water supply does not implicate Goal 11. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. The county's finding that the same level of public facilities and services that will be available to the subject property is presently available to all the surrounding land is not helpful to a determination of compliance with Goals 11 and 14 where the finding does not explain whether or how the goals were applied to the surrounding properties. Brown v. Jefferson County, 33 Or LUBA 418 (1997).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. While Goal 11 requires that a local government "plan and develop a timely, orderly and efficient arrangement of public facilities," a local government need not provide an expedited process for public facilities and retains its ability to ensure the appropriate juxtaposition of land uses. Western PCS, Inc. v. City of Lake Oswego, 33 Or LUBA 369 (1997).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. The Goal 11 prohibition on extending sewer systems from inside urban growth boundaries to land outside those boundaries does not invalidate or prohibit a county requirement that all new subdivisions be connected to municipal sewer systems. Gisler v. Deschutes County, 33 Or LUBA 272 (1997).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Goal 11 prohibits justifying higher residential densities than would otherwise be permitted in a rural-residential zone on the basis that water service can be extended to serve the lots. DeShazer v. Columbia County, 31 Or LUBA 300 (1996).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. That a water district agrees to provide water service to the subject parcel, or that a water main extends to the boundaries of the parcel, does not establish that a proposed partition will not require the extension of a water system. DeShazer v. Columbia County, 31 Or LUBA 300 (1996).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. After the December 5, 1994 effective date of amendments to Statewide Planning Goal 11, local governments may not rely on acknowledged comprehensive plan or ordinance provisions to establish goal compliance if those provisions violate the Goal 11 amendments. DeShazer v. Columbia County, 31 Or LUBA 300 (1996).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Under Goal 11, county land use regulations may not rely upon the extension of a water system, where "extension" refers to either an extension of a water system beyond district boundaries or a connection of a water system to individual properties, to authorize a higher residential density than would be authorized without a water system. DLCD v. Lincoln County, 31 Or LUBA 240 (1996).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Under Goal 11, county land use regulations may not rely upon the prior and future establishment of a water system to authorize a higher residential density than would be authorized without a water system. DLCD v. Lincoln County, 31 Or LUBA 240 (1996).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Because OAR 660-22-070 applies only to "unincorporated communities," the schedule for compliance with Goal 11 amendments set forth in OAR 660-22-070 does not apply to property not within unincorporated communities. DLCD v. Lincoln County, 31 Or LUBA 240 (1996).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Where a local government redesignates and rezones what had previously been designated and zoned as agricultural or forestland, and applies a zoning district allowing residential development on existing lots much smaller than 10 acres, the local government must address compliance with Goals 11 and 14. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. ORS 197.175(2), Goals 11 and 14 and OAR Chapter 660, Division 11 provide authority for a city and county to adopt a comprehensive plan policy requiring that owners of unincorporated property within an urban growth boundary sign consents to annexation in order to receive sewer service. Bear Creek Valley San. Auth. v. City of Medford, 27 Or LUBA 328 (1994).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Where amendments to an exclusive farm use (EFU) zoning district do not change the maximum allowable density of nonfarm dwellings in PUDs, but may have the effect of increasing the numbers of, and circumstances in which, residential PUDs may be approved on EFU-zoned land, the county must consider these potential secondary effects of the amendments in determining whether the EFU zone, as amended, complies with Goals 11 and 14. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Marion County, 27 Or LUBA 303 (1994).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. The comprehensive plan provisions comprising a city's urban growth management program are clearly designed to implement Statewide Planning Goals 11 and 14. Therefore, a city errs in interpreting such plan provisions to allow the extension of urban sewage treatment service outside an urban growth boundary. DLCD v. City of Donald, 27 Or LUBA 208 (1994).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. Where the county plan and zone designations applied to certain rural property at the time of acknowledgment permit a level of activity that requires sewer service, a petitioner may not challenge proposed development allowed by the acknowledged plan and land use regulations on the basis that the allowed development violates Goals 11 and 14. DLCD v. Fargo Interchange Service District, 27 Or LUBA 150 (1994).

15. Goal 11 – Public Facilities and Services/ Goal 11 Rule. A comprehensive plan policy that "urban services shall only be established within recognized urban growth boundaries" implements Goals 11 and 14. Because Goals 11 and 14 prohibit the extension of urban level services outside of urban growth boundaries, LUBA will not defer to a local government interpretation of that plan policy as allowing extension of service from an urban sewage treatment plant to a rural area. ORS 197.829(4). DLCD v. Fargo Interchange Service District, 27 Or LUBA 150 (1994).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The inventory of existing bicycle facilities in a revised Transportation System Plan (TSP) does not violate the requirement, under OAR 660-012-0020(3)(a), that TSPs include "[a]n inventory and general assessment of existing and committed transportation facilities and services by function, type, capacity and condition" merely because the inventory includes narrow or substandard bike lanes. In addition, such an inventory does not violate the requirement, under Goal 2, that decisions be supported by an adequate factual base where the local government relies on a Level of Stress (LTS) analysis to reflect the capacity and condition of the facilities and where a petitioner fails to explain why LTS does not reflect capacity and condition. Shaff v. City of Medford, 79 Or LUBA 317 (2019).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Arguments that a revised Transportation System Plan (TSP) fails to comply with the requirement, under OAR 660-012-0035(4), that it be designed to achieve adopted standards for reducing reliance on the automobile because it applies benchmarks that the local government failed to meet over the prior planning period provide no basis for reversal or remand where, as under OAR 660-012-0016, -0055(1)(b), and -0055(6), such benchmarks are established in the Regional Transportation Plan and the TSP is merely required to be consistent therewith. Shaff v. City of Medford, 79 Or LUBA 317 (2019).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Arguments that a revised Transportation System Plan (TSP) fails to provide a "safe and convenient" bicycle network, as required under OAR 660-12-0045(3)(d), because (1) the safety analysis on which the local government relied in selecting projects is biased toward improving the safety of motor vehicle travel and (2) the revised TSP does not allocate sufficient funding for construction of bicycle safety projects, fail to demonstrate noncompliance with Goal 12 or the Goal 12 rule where a petitioner fails to identify a requirement that a particular study method be used, where the TSP sets forth numerous bicycle facility projects and establishes a preference for separating bicycle traffic from automobile traffic on heavily travelled roads, and where the local code includes regulations requiring pedestrian and bicycle facility improvements in conjunction with new development. Shaff v. City of Medford, 79 Or LUBA 317 (2019).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Arguments that a revised Transportation System Plan (TSP) does not provide for a more energy efficient transportation system, and fails to forecast or plan for an increase in bicycle modal share, fail to demonstrate a violation of Goal 13 since Goal 13 does not state requirements with respect to other land use provisions, even where those provisions have incidental impacts on energy use and conservation, and therefore does not require a maximization of alternative modes. Shaff v. City of Medford, 79 Or LUBA 317 (2019).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A fossil fuel terminal (FFT) qualifies as a "transportation facility" for purposes of Statewide Planning Goal 12, and the Transportation Planning Rule at OAR 660-012-0060, because FFTs move or assist in the movement of goods, notwithstanding that they also involve storage of fossil fuels. However, a local government's failure to recognize that FFTs are transportation facilities is not reversible error, so long as amendments comply with the substantive requirements of Goal 12 and the Transportation Planning Rule. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 76 Or LUBA 15 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Zoning ordinance text amendments that reclassify fossil fuel terminals (FFTs) from the general land use category of "Warehouse and Freight Movement," to a new land use category does not "change the functional classification of an existing or planned transportation facility" or "change standards implementing a functional classification system," pursuant to the Transportation Planning Rule at OAR 660-012-0060(1), because the land use categories included are not part of a functional classification scheme, a scheme that sorts the universe of transportation facilities into a hierarchical classification scheme and assigns different function, capacity, mobility or access standards to each classification. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 76 Or LUBA 15 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city's zoning ordinance text amendments that essentially downzone the development potential for fossil fuel terminals (FFTs) within a city's industrial districts, effectively freezing the development capacity of FFTs at current levels is not the type of amendment that could directly cause increased traffic compared to the unamended zoning regulations (which allow unrestricted expansion or siting of FFTs), and therefore does not implicate OAR 660-012-0060(1)(c). The OAR 660-012-0060(1)(c) requirement for local governments to evaluate impacts on transportation facilities when amendments "significantly affect[] a transportation facility" does not require governments to evaluate the possibility that downzoning the intensity of one particular type of land use at one location may indirectly cause compensatory development and related traffic generation elsewhere in the city. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 76 Or LUBA 15 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city's zoning ordinance text amendments must be consistent with Statewide Planning Goal 12 and the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR), even if the city's Transportation System Plan (TSP) is acknowledged to comply with Goal 12, the amendments do not amend the city's TSP, and the amendments are not found to have a "significant effect on a transportation facility" as defined by OAR 660-012-0060(1). A zoning amendment that changes the zoning classification for a specific type of transportation facility, particularly one that has regional and statewide significance, could potentially affect whether the local TSP remains in compliance with applicable Goal 12 or TPR requirements that are in addition to those imposed under OAR 660-012-0060. If so, the local government is obliged to consider that question in adopting the zoning amendment. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 76 Or LUBA 15 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. While nothing may require the city to directly apply the Oregon Transportation Plan (OTP) to a city zoning code amendment where the city prohibits new or expanded fossil fuel terminals, the OTP represents a state-level body of information and policy guidance that speaks directly to the state's interest in maintaining and improving the flow of goods and services throughout the state, and thus may be a pertinent consideration in determining whether the amendment is consistent with the Goal 12 requirement to facilitate the flow of goods and services in the state. Columbia Pacific v. City of Portland, 76 Or LUBA 15 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Only "transportation facilities and improvements" that meet the requirements of OAR 660-012-0065 are allowed on EFU-zoned "rural land" without an exception to Goals 3, 11 and 14. OAR 660-012-0070 provides that "transportation facilities" that do not meet the requirements of OAR 660-012-0065 cannot be constructed on "rural land" without an exception to the applicable goals. However, OAR 660-012-0070 does not require an exception to the applicable resource and urban goals where the city concurrently includes the land within its urban growth boundary, because the land is no longer "rural land" as defined in that rule. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0035(4) requires local governments to design their transportation system plans to achieve adopted standards for reducing reliance on cars. Although a city errs in finding that OAR 660-012-0035(4) does not apply to specific projects or to targeted amendments to a transportation system plan (TSP), where the findings also (1) identify adopted standards within the city's TSP, the city's comprehensive plan, and revised code that include measures to reduce reliance on cars, and (2) additionally conclude that the amendments comply with OAR 660-012-0035(4), and petitioner neither challenges those findings nor identifies any adopted standards in the TSP, comprehensive plan or revised code that the TSP amendments fail to satisfy, petitioners' arguments provide no basis for reversal or remand. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where petitioners argue that the city's calculation of future travel demand that relies on projections in the adopted and acknowledged regional transportation analysis prepared by state, regional and local governments is not supported by substantial evidence and petitioners fail to point to any evidence that contradicts or undercuts the city's traffic models based on the regional transportation analysis, petitioners have failed to set forth a basis for remand or reversal. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 215 Or App 414, 171 P3d 368 (2007), which involved a reasons exception to Goals 3, 4 and 14 to develop a hotel on land zoned exclusive farm use (EFU), and its holding which interprets the rules for reasons exceptions, is inapposite where no reasons exception is involved. Similarly, OAR 661-012-0070 and its requirements for exceptions for transportation improvements on rural land do not apply where no exception to a resource goal is sought. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city's decision to add new facilities to the transportation system does not violate Oregon Highway Plan (OHP) policies, which direct that state and local governments should implement higher priority measures first unless a lower priority measure such as adding new facilities to the transportation system is (1) more cost effective or (2) it "clearly better supports safety, growth management, or other livability and economic viability considerations." OHP policies are not absolute, and a city can rely on a less cost-effective and lower priority measure that "clearly better supports safety, growth management, or other livability and economic viability considerations." Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Although proposed development of a new bridge will cost close to the total amount that the region expects to receive in funding from all sources over the next 20 years, and although there is no evidence that full funding can be expected, a decision to approve comprehensive plan amendments to facilitate the bridge does not necessarily violate an Oregon Highway Plan (OHP) policy that requires state and local government to approve major improvements to state highway facilities in local comprehensive plans and transportation system plans only if the improvements "would be a cost-effective means to achieve the objective," because the OHP policy is not a mandatory criterion, but an evaluation factor the Oregon Department of Transportation will use in their evaluation of a project for inclusion in the OHP. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060(2)(c) allows a local government to mitigate significant effects by, among other methods, "[a]mending the [transportation system plan] TSP to modify the * * * performance standards of the transportation facility." Where a local government adopts amendments to its TSP that include findings that "[s]ome of the intersections on the State roadway system will also not meet the State [M]obility [T]argets, for which the State proposes to adopt Alternative Mobility Targets into the Oregon Highway Plan," the amendments to the TSP are sufficient to satisfy the mitigation requirement in the Transportation Planning Rule. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where an existing state highway off-ramp will likely be closed in order to construct a new proposed bridge, and the decision to adopt amendments to a city's transportation system plan (TSP) does not actually close the highway off-ramp, a city does not err when it adopts amendments to the city's TSP that state that the "City will not support close of the [existing highway off ramp] until a facility plan has been adopted that addresses access to the southwest portion of [the city]." The potential future decision to close the existing off-ramp will require future coordination between the Oregon Department of Transportation (ODOT) and the city, and presumably will require a new TSP amendment, at which point the city and ODOT will be required to demonstrate that closure of the highway off-ramp satisfies the Transportation Planning Rule at OAR 660-012-0060. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-024-0050(6) requires that when land is added to an urban growth boundary (UGB), the local government "must assign appropriate urban plan designations to the added land, consistent with the need determination and the requirements of section (7) of this rule, if applicable." OAR 660-024-0050(7) provides lands included with a UGB for a public facility "must be planned and zoned for the intended use and must remain planned and zoned for that use unless the city removes the land from the UGB." A city decision to retain the land's existing Exclusive Farm Use zoning until the land is annexed into the city is inconsistent with the OAR 660-024-0050(7) requirement to adopt concurrent plan and zone re-designation "for [that] intended use." Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Pursuant to OAR 660-004-0018(4)(a), where a city finds that "[e]xisting plan and zoning designations" will be maintained for land subject to a Goal 15 exception, but does not explain why "existing plan and zoning designations" "limit the uses * * * public facilities and services, and activities" to only those that are justified in the exception, remand is required for the city to explain why the land subject to an exception to Goal 15 satisfies the requirement in OAR 660-004-0018(4)(a) that the plan and zone designations "limit the uses * * * public facilities and services, and activities" to those justified in the exception, or apply plan and zone designations that limit the uses to the transportation facilities that are justified in the exception. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city's process in adopting amendments to a subarea plan to approve a proposal to construct a new bridge does not violate Goal 2 where the city provided opportunities for review and comment on the proposed plan amendments by the public, and provided notice to neighborhood associations of the plan amendment proceedings, despite a very compressed period of time for public input regarding a fairly complex proposal. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. On remand from LUBA to address issues regarding compliance with the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) at OAR 660-012-0060, a hearings officer errs in refusing to consider a new issue raised on remand regarding testimony that access to the approved mining haul road across adjoining property and access point on a county road are no longer available for development purposes, due to intervening changes in ownership of the adjoining land. Such a new issue is within the scope of LUBA's remand, because the locations of the haul road and access point are important predicates for compliance with the TPR. Setniker v. Polk County, 75 Or LUBA 1 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. LUBA will reject an assignment of error based on OAR 660-012-0035(3)(b), where petitioner makes no attempt to explain why the OAR 660-012-0035(3)(b) transportation system planning obligation has any bearing on or relevance to a quasi-judicial comprehensive plan and zoning map amendment that makes no changes to the city's acknowledged transportation system plan. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 75 Or LUBA 38 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In determining whether comprehensive plan and zoning map amendments will significantly affect existing and planned transportation facilities under the transportation planning rule, an applicant may make use of a theoretical worst case scenario development proposal under existing planning and zoning without actually requesting and obtaining approval of that worst case scenario development proposal. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 75 Or LUBA 38 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In developing a worst case traffic generation scenario under existing planning and zoning, to address the transportation planning rule and show that the proposed planning and zoning will have no greater traffic impact than the existing planning and zoning, it is permissible to assume development under the existing planning and zoning will take advantage of the full array of opportunities under existing regulations. Nicita v. City of Oregon City, 75 Or LUBA 38 (2017).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In amending a transportation systems plan (TSP) to locate a bypass through an industrial area, a local government is not obligated to adopt findings regarding the post-amendment adequacy of its inventory of commercial and industrial lands, where the acknowledged zoning district that applies to those lands already anticipates that at least some of those lands may be used for transportation facilities. Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0015(3)(a), which requires that "[l]ocal TSPs shall establish a system of transportation facilities and services adequate to meet identified local transportation needs and shall be consistent with regional TSPs and adopted elements of the state TSP," does not require, at the time a transportation facility is identified as needed in the TSP, that the local government establish that the facility is "viable," in the sense that all necessary siting permits will be issued in the future if that facility is sited in the location shown on the amended TSP. Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/Goal 12 Rule. Arguments that a proposed concept plan that is part of the comprehensive plan fails to comply with Statewide Planning Goal 12 (Transportation) provide no basis for reversal or remand of a decision to adopt the concept plan where the concept plan relies on and is consistent with a previously adopted Transportation System Plan that is consistent with Goal 12. Graser-Lindsey v. City of Oregon City, 74 Or LUBA 488 (2016).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In comparing uses across different zoning districts for purposes of determining whether a rezone "significantly affects" a transportation facility under the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR), consistent assumptions must be used, with the only variables reflecting the different zoning standards. Where the opposition traffic expert used different assumptions about development under the original zone and the new zone that are not based on the differences between the two zones, that testimony does not undermine reliance on the applicant's expert's conclusion that the new zone does not allow more traffic-intensive uses than the old zone. Save Downtown Canby v. City of Canby, 70 Or LUBA 68 (2014).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) at OAR 660-012-0060 requires analysis of whether a zone change would significantly affect a transportation facility by, among other things, affecting the functional classification or performance standards of the facility as "measured through the end of the planning period." However, nothing in OAR 660-012-0060 requires an analysis of potential safety conflicts between site access and a nearby pedestrian crossing, much less an analysis of such conflicts through the end of the planning period. Save Downtown Canby v. City of Canby, 70 Or LUBA 68 (2014).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. While a railroad is a "transportation facility" as defined under the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR), nothing in the TPR requires local governments to adopt functional classifications or performance standards for railroads. Because OAR 660-012-0060(1) defines the ways that a plan amendment can "significantly affect" a transportation facility exclusively in terms of functional classifications or performance standards, absent any functional classification or performance standards for railroads OAR 660-012-0060(1) does not apply to require a local government to evaluate whether a plan amendment significantly affects a railroad. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In order to determine whether a redesignation "significantly affects" a transportation facility within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060(1) a local government should compare the most traffic-generative use reasonably allowed in the current zone with the most traffic-generative use reasonably allowed in the new zone. Comparing the amount of traffic generated by the current uses of the property with the most-traffic generative use allowed in the new zone does not answer the question posed by OAR 660-012-0060(1), and may in fact provide misleading answers, unless the current uses of the property happen to be the most traffic-intensive uses allowed in the current zone. Ooten v. Clackamas County, 70 Or LUBA 338 (2014).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) at OAR 660-012-0060 does not require that estimates of background traffic levels include consideration of the traffic impacts from a proposed golf course adjacent to property that is the subject of a zone change application, because the golf course is a conditional use in the current zone in which it will be developed. Reading v. Douglas County, 70 Or LUBA 458 (2014).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city's conclusion that proposed high-density residential zoning complies with Goal 12 and the Transportation Planning Rule is not supported by an adequate factual base, where the city assumed full development under the old zoning but only partial development under the new zoning, for general economic reasons that apply equally to both development scenarios. Absent an explanation for using different background assumptions, a comparison of traffic-generative capacity allowed under new and old zoning under OAR 660-012-0060 must use consistent assumptions. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060(6)(a) allows a local government to reduce by 10 percent the estimated traffic generated under new zoning for a mixed-use, pedestrian friendly area, but only if the new zone prohibits uses that rely on automobile trips, such as motels. A city may still take advantage of the 10 percent reduction notwithstanding that the new zone allows hotels, given the significant differences between motels and hotels. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Remand is necessary where the city assumes, without explanation, a 10 percent reduction in estimated traffic when zoning new areas for high-density uses, but assumes no similar reduction in comparing traffic generated under existing high-density zoning. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a local government finds that a zone change will not generate more traffic than allowed under the existing zoning, and thus cannot significantly affect a transportation facility within the meaning of the Transportation Planning Rule, it is not reversible error for the local government to also adopt measures to ensure that development under the new zoning does not exceed estimated traffic levels. While such measures cannot substitute for compliance with the Rule, adoption of such precautionary measures are not erroneous. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Raising a general transportation issue under a local zoning change approval criterion that addresses a number of concerns, without citing the transportation planning rule (TPR) or any of the substantive requirements of the TPR, is not sufficient to preserve a technical TPR argument for review at LUBA. Savage v. City of Astoria, 68 Or LUBA 225 (2013).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where planning staff initially takes a position that a zoning amendment proposal does not comply with an applicable approval standard, but later changes its position and takes the position that the proposal complies with the approval standard, the planning staff's initial position may be sufficient to preserve the issue of whether the proposal complies with the applicable approval standard for LUBA review. But where planning staff takes the position that a proposed zone change complies with the transportation planning rule (TPR) and never changes its position regarding the TPR, the staff position is not sufficient to preserve an issue of TPR compliance for LUBA review. Savage v. City of Astoria, 68 Or LUBA 225 (2013).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A Metro regional trail that is 22 miles long, connects rivers, parks and natural areas, and includes a number of recreational and educational facilities, is most accurately characterized as a "park" for purposes of a Metro Plan prohibition on parks in regionally significant industrial areas, rather than a transportation facility or "public facility" that is allowed in industrial areas, where the regional trail is not intended to provide transportation for the residents and workers of the industrial area, but is primarily a community recreational amenity. Terra Hydr Inc. v. City of Tualatin, 68 Or LUBA 279 (2013).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060, which requires that amendments to an acknowledged functional plan, comprehensive plan or land use regulation that significantly effect a transportation facility must put in place measures to offset that significant effect, does not apply to a local government's adoption of a transportation system plan (TSP). Terra Hydr Inc. v. City of Tualatin, 68 Or LUBA 279 (2013).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a city's bureau of transportation has adopted a rule that requires that development not cause signalized and stop-controlled intersections to operate below a specified level of service (LOS), and petitioner cites no authority that access drives that are not stop controlled or signalized are subject to the LOS requirement, LUBA will reject petitioner's argument that it was error for city to fail to find that access drives would operate within the specified LOS. Lowery v. City of Portland, 68 Or LUBA 339 (2013).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. One option a local government has to determine whether a zoning map amendment significant affects a transportation facility within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060(1)(c) is to first evaluate whether the new zone authorizes more traffic intensive uses, compared to the old zone. If the two zones authorize the exact same set of uses, then the local government could conclude, without more, that development under the new zone will not generate more traffic than under the old zone, and no further inquiry is necessary for purposes of OAR 660-012-0060(1)(c). Save Downtown Canby v. City of Canby, 67 Or LUBA 385 (2013).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a local government rezones property from a commercial zone that allows the same set of use categories as the old commercial zone, but the new zone has much larger maximum building footprint and other development standards intended to allow larger scale commercial development, the local government is required to consider whether the larger scale development allowed under the new zone could generate additional traffic compared to smaller scale development under the old zone and, if so, conduct further analysis as required by OAR 660-012-0060. Save Downtown Canby v. City of Canby, 67 Or LUBA 385 (2013).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. That the city's transportation facilities were found to be sufficient to support planned and allowed uses when the city originally adopted its zoning ordinance is not a sufficient basis to conclude that a zoning map amendment is consistent with OAR 660-012-0060. Save Downtown Canby v. City of Canby, 67 Or LUBA 385 (2013).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. While Goal 1 requires ODOT to make use of existing local citizen involvement programs in amending the Oregon Highway Plan, it does not require ODOT to create new local citizen involvement programs, or mandate that local governments create or invoke local citizen involvement programs in coordinating future OHP future amendments to the Oregon Highway Plan. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Findings supporting a legislative decision that amends the Oregon Highway Plan to provide a process for modifying mobility standards need not address issues raised below regarding whether future decisions approving higher mobility standards will cause increased congestion of specific transportation facilities and increase pollution contrary to Goal 6, where Goal 6 will apply directly to any future decisions approving higher mobility standards for specific transportation facilities, and such issues cannot be meaningfully addressed in a legislative decision adopting general amendments to the Oregon Highway Plan. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Goal 9 requires local governments to provide adequate opportunities for a variety of economic activities, but does not require local governments to protect one type of economic activity against impacts created by other economic and non-economic uses. Goal 9 does not require that ODOT, in adopting higher mobility standards for state highways, address in its findings whether increased congestion from development allowed under the higher mobility standards will adversely affect existing economic activity. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The Goal 11 requirement to provide "timely, orderly and efficient arrangement of public facilities and services" is not particularly concerned with the performance standards governing state highways, a concern that is more specifically addressed under Goal 12 and the Transportation Planning Rule. Goal 11 does not add anything new or different to the specific Goal 12 requirements with respect to the performance of state highways, and findings addressing Goal 11 are not inadequate simply because they fail to consider whether modified highway performance standards are consistent with Goal 11. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Goal 13 is mostly a planning goal, and includes few substantive requirements that could directly conflict with Oregon Highway Plan amendments that increase mobility standards for state highways. To the extent higher mobility standards encourage denser development that causes increased traffic congestion, that is not inconsistent with Goal 13. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Oregon Highway Plan (OHP) amendments that provide a process to adopt alternative mobility standards for state highways where it is infeasible to comply with the OHP mobility standard do not eliminate or conflict with the OAR 660-012-0035 requirement for local governments to consider system alternatives in adopting a transportation system plan. The OHP process and OAR 660-012-0035 requirement to evaluate system alternatives are cumulative, not conflicting. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Oregon Highway Plan (OHP) amendments to the "no further degradation" standard to allow "small increases" in average daily traffic to already failing state highways do not conflict with the general OAR 660-012-0015(1) obligation to adopt transportation plans that identify transportation facilities "adequate to meet identified state transportation needs." The "no further degradation" standard is applied under the specific provisions of OAR 660-012-0060, and the "small increases" exception to that standard was adopted in coordination with LCDC amendments to OAR 660-012-0060. Because the "small increases" exception is consistent with the specific requirements of OAR 660-012-0060, it does not violate the general requirements of OAR 660-012-0015. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where the county adds a site to its map of lands eligible for destination resort siting, concludes based on site-specific traffic studies that destination resort development will significantly affect nearby transportation facilities within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060, identifies the transportation improvements needed to ensure that allowed land uses are consistent with the performance standards of affected facilities, and requires the destination resort applicant to provide those improvements prior to development, the county has not deferred a determination of compliance with OAR 660-012-0060, but instead complied with the rule. That the county prudently imposed conditions requiring a second analysis and requiring additional improvements if needed at the time of development does not constitute an impermissible deferral of compliance with OAR 660-012-0060. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 66 Or LUBA 192 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In concluding that a decision adding a site to the county's map of lands eligible for destination resort development complies with the Transportation Planning Rule, the county may "adopt" measures demonstrating that allowed land uses are consistent with the performance standard of affected transportation facilities within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060(2)(a) by adopting conditions requiring that the destination resort applicant pay for and provide transportation improvements prior to resort development, and need not require that the improvements be in place on the date the county adds the site to its map of eligible lands. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 66 Or LUBA 192 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The requirement at ORS 197.460(4) that an applicant for destination resort siting provide a traffic study that includes measures to mitigate a proportionate share of adverse impacts on transportation facilities is different from, and does not replace, the obligation to evaluate transportation impacts under OAR 660-012-0060 in amending the comprehensive plan map of lands eligible for destination resort siting. While a county might err if it relied entirely on ORS 197.460(4) to ensure compliance with OAR 660-012-0060, there is no error in citing ORS 197.460(4) as an additional basis to conclude that OAR 660-012-0060 is satisfied. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 66 Or LUBA 192 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government may "adopt" measures under OAR 660-012-0060(2)(a) requiring a private developer to pay for and provide needed transportation improvements, and such measures need not be supported by evidence that the road authority for that facility has accepted the proposed improvement or evidence that private funding is available. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 66 Or LUBA 192 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government does not err in not applying OAR 660-012-0070(5) and (6), which govern the analysis for transportation improvements that do not require a new exception, to evaluate the petitioner's alternative site for a highway interchange, where the record does not support the petitioner's claim that the new interchange could be located without expanding an existing exception area that was approved for a two-lane rural overpass. In that circumstance, OAR 660-012-0070(7) applies to govern the alternatives analysis when a transportation improvement requires a new exception. Storm v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 415 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where constructing a new highway interchange in an existing exception area would constitute a change in the type of use or change in the intensity of the use justifying an existing exception, OAR 660-012-0070(10) and OAR 660-004-0018(4)(b) require a new exception as a matter of law, even if the existing exception area could accommodate the proposed interchange as a matter of engineering. Storm v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 415 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A petitioner's arguments that the local government misconstrued OAR 660-012-0070(5) and (6) and adopted inadequate findings not supported by substantial evidence do not provide a basis for reversal or remand, where OAR 660-012-0070(7) governs the local government's decision instead of OAR 660-012-0070(5) and (6), and the two sets of rules have different substantive terms, requirements and standards. Storm v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 415 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In approving an exception to allow construction of a temporary $25 million highway interchange, a local government is not required to include guarantees that the temporary interchange will not be converted to a permanent interchange or identify reasons to justify the interchange as permanent, where the exception decision approves only a temporary interchange, and any attempt to convert it into a permanent interchange will require a new goal exception. Storm v. Yamhill County, 66 Or LUBA 415 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where the Court of Appeals remands a decision to LUBA to address the proper application of the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR), at OAR 660-012-0060, and on remand to LUBA the parties dispute the meaning of a TPR provision, LUBA need not resolve that dispute when during the pendency of the appeal the TPR is amended to delete the disputed TPR provision, and the TPR as amended will govern the local proceedings on remand from LUBA. Setniker v. Polk County, 65 Or LUBA 49 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. LUBA will affirm a governing body's interpretation of a code standard allowing imposition of a limited use overlay zone if "it is required to limit the uses permitted in the proposed zone" by the reasons exception rule at OAR chapter 660, division 4, to employ the overlay zone to limit uses to ensure consistency with Statewide Planning Goal 12 (Transportation), and the need to take an exception to Goal 12, even though the county took reasons exceptions only to other statewide planning goals, where the county's interpretation is not inconsistent with the express language, purpose or underlying policy of the code standard. Devin Oil Co. v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 104 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where the county's decision on remand and supporting findings state that a condition is imposed requiring the applicant to construct a left-turn lane, a condition to that effect has been adequately imposed, notwithstanding that the county did not expressly amend the list of conditions imposed in its initial decision to include the requirement to construct a left-turn lane. Devin Oil Co. v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 104 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. LUBA will affirm a governing body's interpretation of a local code provision to require only consideration of current adequacy of transportation facilities, notwithstanding local traffic analysis guidelines that require analysis of impacts from future planned uses, where the county interprets the guidelines to be non-mandatory, and that interpretation is not inconsistent with the express language, purpose or policy of the relevant local provisions. Devin Oil Co. v. Morrow County, 65 Or LUBA 104 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Uncontradicted evidence that a legislative text amendment allowing for the expansion of existing landfills would not affect the county's transportation facilities, because traffic generated by landfill expansion is not a net increase but simply replaces traffic generated by portions of the existing landfill that are at capacity and will be closed, is sufficient to demonstrate that the text amendment does not "significantly affect" any transportation facility within the meaning of the Transportation Planning Rule at OAR 660-012-0060(1). Waste Not of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 65 Or LUBA 142 (2012).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Raising a number of transportation issues, without any specific reference to the regimented transportation planning analysis that is required under the transportation planning rule, is not sufficient to preserve the right to assign error at LUBA based on the city's failure to apply the regimented transportation planning analysis that is required by the transportation planning rule. Rosenzweig v. City of McMinnville, 64 Or LUBA 402 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A decision that merely adds an aggregate site to a comprehensive plan inventory of significant aggregate resource sites may not trigger application of the transportation planning rule (TPR) in any of the ways described in OAR 660-012-0060(1). But when the county decides to allow mining of the site and places an overlay zone on the site to allow mining, that zone change authorizes a new, more traffic-intensive use of the property and may trigger application of the TPR. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Because the end of the planning period plays an important role under the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) at OAR 660-012-0060(1) in determining whether proposed plan or zone amendments significantly affect transportation facilities, when the county amends its transportation system plan to change the planning period from 2020 to 2030, the county must apply the new planning period in determining whether the proposed plan/zone change complies with the TPR. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where the county's initial 2006 decision relies upon a traffic study to demonstrate compliance with the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) at OAR 660-012-0060(1)(c), and the decision is remanded but the county takes no action on remand until 2010, the county need not require that the traffic study be updated to reflect current 2010 traffic conditions. The focus of OAR 660-012-0060(1)(c) is on the end of the planning period, based on projected traffic growth from a base condition, and for purposes of the rule it does not matter whether growth is projected from 2006 or 2010. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a local government relies upon conditions limiting traffic through a failing intersection turning movement from 4:00 to 6:00 p.m. to ensure compliance with the Transportation Planning Rule, but undisputed expert evidence shows that the turning movement is also failing during the a.m. peak hour and the off-peak p.m. hour of 3:00 to 4:00 p.m., the conditions are insufficient to ensure compliance with the rule. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A condition requiring an aggregate company's trucks to avoid a particular intersection is likely to be effective, where the employer has sufficient authority to require its employees and contract haulers to avoid the intersection and, despite some economic incentives for noncompliance, a reasonable decision maker could rely on the condition to be effective to prevent impacts on the intersection. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060(2)(e) and 660-012-0060(3) provide a complementary and non-exclusive set of measures to ensure that uses allowed by a plan amendment are consistent with the function, capacity and performance standards of a transportation facility. Depending on the situation, one or both will apply to authorize use of measures to ensure compliance with the Transportation Planning Rule, and there is no gap between the two rule provisions or circumstance where neither provision applies and no mitigatory measures are possible. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where on remand a county relies for the first time on signalization of an intersection to ensure compliance with the Transportation Planning Rule, the issue of whether the county could rely on signalization could not have been raised in the initial appeal, and is not waived under Beck v. City of Tillamook, 313 Or 148, 153, 831 P2d 678 (2002). Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Under the Transportation Planning Rule at OAR 660-012-0060(1) and (4), a local government generally can rely only upon "planned facilities or improvements" to ensure compliance with the rule, and cannot assume that unplanned, unfunded facility improvements will be put in place prior to the end of the planning period. Setniker v. Polk County, 63 Or LUBA 38 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In general, in order to determine whether a land use regulation amendment significantly affects a transportation facility under OAR 660-012-0060(1)(c)(B) or (C), a comparison is required between the traffic associated with the most traffic-intensive uses allowed under the existing zoning with traffic associated with the most traffic-intensive uses allowed under the proposed zoning. Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 63 Or LUBA 75 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In determining whether a proposed zone change significantly affects a transportation facility under OAR 660-012-0060(1), a proper baseline for comparison of the differences in traffic generated under the current zone and the proposed zone is development that is proposed concurrently with the zone change, where that zone change decision includes a condition of approval that imposes a vehicle trip cap to limit the transportation impacts from development under the new zone to transportation impacts that would have been generated under the current zone. Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 63 Or LUBA 75 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. To the extent DLCD v. City of Warrenton, 37 Or LUBA 933, 940-42 (2000), suggests that proposed zoning conditions of approval that limit the number of additional trips that could otherwise be expected under a proposed zoning map amendment cannot be considered when determining whether the proposed conditional rezoning will significantly affect a transportation facility, that suggestion is incorrect. Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 63 Or LUBA 75 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060(1)(a) is directed at decisions that change the functional classification of a transportation facility included in a TSP through an amendment to the TSP, and does not apply where no such plan amendment is sought. Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 63 Or LUBA 75 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. If a mitigation measure under OAR 660-012-0060(2) or (3) would require transportation improvements that are inconsistent with a local government's adopted TSP, then a local government might be required to amend its TSP in order to comply with Statewide Planning Goal 2 (Land Use Planning). Willamette Oaks LLC v. City of Eugene, 63 Or LUBA 75 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Although amendments to county standards for mapping sites that are eligible for destination resort siting are comprehensive plan amendments, and therefore potentially could result in significant affects on transportation facilities that could implicate OAR 660-012-0060, altering the standards for adding sites to the map in the future has no impact on transportation facilities. It is the future map amendments themselves that might significantly affect a transportation facility and implicate OAR 660-012-0060, and a county must consider OAR 660-012-0060 at the time those comprehensive plan amendments are adopted in the future. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 63 Or LUBA 123 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government errs in adopting a finding of significant affect under OAR 660-012-0060(1) (TPR) on unspecified transportation facilities, unsupported by any analysis at all, and then requiring that the TPR be addressed at the time of specific destination resort development. Such an approach is substantially equivalent to the approach of deferring the OAR 660-012-0060(1) determination to a later development stage that was rejected in Willamette Oaks, LLC v. City of Eugene, 232 Or App 29, 36, 220 P3d 445 (2009), and is inadequate to satisfy the TPR. Root v. Klamath County, 63 Or LUBA 230 (2011).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city does not err by requiring that an applicant for development approval dedicate and construct a road extension through the area proposed for development where the transportation system plan shows the road extension. It does not matter that the extension shown on the transportation system plan is conceptual. Reeves v. City of Wilsonville, 62 Or LUBA 142 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where an assignment of error and the argument in support of that assignment of error does not specifically mention a transportation system plan policy that requires a public hearing before selecting a roadway alignment, the issue of whether that policy has been violated is adequately stated for LUBA review where the petitioner does include an argument that a public hearing is required and was not provided and in the petition for review cites to pages in the record where another party specifically cites the transportation system plan policy. Reeves v. City of Wilsonville, 62 Or LUBA 142 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A condition of zone change approval limiting use of the property to a proposed travel plaza is insufficient to ensure consistency with the Transportation Planning Rule at OAR 660-012-0060, where the record indicates that even limited to the travel plaza the zone change will significantly affect nearby transportation facilities, and the county failed to require other mitigation or improvements necessary to ensure that allowed uses are consistent with the capacity and performance measures of affected intersections. Devin Oil Co., Inc. v. Morrow County, 62 Or LUBA 247 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. To approve an exception for a transportation facility on rural resource land, OAR 660-012-0070(4) requires that a county supply reasons why state policy in the applicable goals should not apply and also requires the county to demonstrate that there are transportation needs identified in the county's TSP that cannot reasonably be satisfied by one or more of the non-exception measures specified in the rule. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A county may not rely on transportation needs in a city's transportation system plan to justify an exception for a new rural arterial road through the county, where the county transportation system plan states there is no need for new transportation facilities in the area and does not identify those city transportation needs as county transportation needs. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0070(4) requires that a county determine whether there are reasonable alternative measures to satisfy an identified transportation need that would not require a statewide planning goal exception. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0070(5) imposes a requirement to consider whether a proposed transportation facility on rural resource land could reasonably be sited in alternative locations that would not require an exception. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0070(6) sets out how a county must go about determining whether any identified alternative measures and alternative locations are reasonable under OAR 660-012-0070(4) and OAR 660-012-0070(5). OAR 660-012-0070(6) requires that certain specified factors and "other relevant factors" be considered and that "thresholds" be identified and applied in rejecting any alternatives as unreasonable. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. As OAR 660-012-0070(4) is currently written, it cannot be assumed that an identified transportation need is necessarily sufficient to provide a reason that justifies "why the state policy in the applicable goals should not apply." Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In determining whether a plan amendment would significantly affect a transportation facility, the impact must be measured at the end of the planning period. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a county approves an exception for a transportation facility that will cross privately owned and federally owned EFU-zoned land, the county must approve the exception for both the privately and federally owned land. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 62 Or LUBA 302 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. For reasons exceptions that are required in order to site "transportation facilities and improvements" on rural lands, the exceptions standards set out at OAR 660-012-0070 apply, rather than the standards set out in OAR 660-004-0020. Foland v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 264 (2010).

16 16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A rest area is a facility that "assists in the movement of people and goods" and thus falls within the Transportation Planning Rule definition of "transportation facilities" set out at OAR 660-012-0005(30). Foland v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 264 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In considering alternative measures and locations under OAR 660-012-0070(4) and (5), a local government may rely on applicant-identified required characteristics that a proposed location must possess, or thresholds, in order to address the identified transportation need, as long as the local government justifies any such thresholds. If an alternative measure or location not requiring an exception does not satisfy a threshold, then the local government is not required to consider it in determining whether to approve an exception. OAR 660-012-0070(6)(b). Foland v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 264 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0070(7) implements Goal 2, Part II(c)(3) and requires a local government to evaluate whether there are alternative sites, which would also require an exception, that would have fewer adverse impacts than the proposed site. Foland v. Jackson County, 61 Or LUBA 264 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Even where no authority requires findings in support of a legislative decision, there must be enough in the way of findings or accessible material in the record to show that applicable criteria were applied and required considerations considered. Where the record of the legislative rezoning decision includes no findings or accessible material supporting the local government's view that the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) does not apply to the decision, the local government can avoid remand only if it demonstrates in its response brief, as a matter of law, that the TPR does not apply to the rezoning decision and is not a required consideration. Barnes v. City of Hillsboro, 61 Or LUBA 375 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. An ordinance that applies a new Airport zone to an existing airport that is a nonconforming use in the former industrial zone may "significantly affect" nearby transportation facilities within the meaning of the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR), where under the former industrial zone it would be difficult to expand the nonconforming use airport and under the new zone an airport is an outright permitted use that can be easily expanded or intensified. Barnes v. City of Hillsboro, 61 Or LUBA 375 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In many cases, determining whether a zoning change "significantly affects" a transportation facility for purposes of the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) can be accomplished by comparing the most traffic-intensive uses allowed in the old zone against the most traffic-intensive uses allowed in the new zone. If the reasonable "worst-case" scenario under the new zone would result in fewer impacts on transportation facilities than the reasonable "worst-case" scenario under the old zone, then no further inquiry under the TPR is required. Barnes v. City of Hillsboro, 61 Or LUBA 375 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where an ordinance applies a new Airport zone to an existing airport that is a nonconforming use in the former industrial zone, and the surrounding transportation system is designed and planned to accommodate the existing nonconforming use airport, the most meaningful approach to determining whether the zone change "significantly affects" a transportation facility within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060 may be a comparison of the traffic impacts of the airport use under the city's Transportation System Plan with the airport as it may reasonably be expanded under the new Airport zone. Barnes v. City of Hillsboro, 61 Or LUBA 375 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. When a prior ordinance and settlement agreement require a city to apply a 20-year planning horizon for evaluating transportation impacts and improvements, the city does not err by applying a 20-year planning horizon in a study that was conducted in preparation for the application submittal instead of applying a 20-year planning horizon measured from the date of the decision. Citizens for Responsible Development v. City of The Dalles, 60 Or LUBA 12 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. When the proposed development is for a Wal-Mart that includes a full service grocery department, a city does not err in applying the Institute of Transportation Engineers (ITE) land use category for a "shopping center" rather than the ITE category for a "free standing discount store" because free standing discount stores do not include full service grocery departments. Citizens for Responsible Development v. City of The Dalles, 60 Or LUBA 12 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. When a traffic impact analysis (TIA) states that it was based on ODOT recommended guidelines but fails to follow those ODOT guidelines, and the final decision relies on that TIA and does not respond to opponents' challenges to the failure to comply with the ODOT guidelines, the decision to rely on a TIA is not reasonable and the decision is not supported by substantial evidence. Citizens for Responsible Development v. City of The Dalles, 60 Or LUBA 12 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. When relying on a condition of development under OAR 660-012-0060(2)(e) to approve development that would significantly affect a transportation facility, a local government cannot rely on a suggestion in a letter from ODOT when the suggestion is not reflected as a condition of approval. Walker v. Josephine County, 60 Or LUBA 186 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Under Dept. of Transportation v. Coos County, 158 Or App 568, 976 P2d 68 (1999), a comprehensive plan or land use regulation amendment that would generate traffic that would worsen the operation of an intersection that was already performing at a failing level of service D, but would not change that level of service to level of service F, would not "significantly affect" that failing intersection, within the meaning of the version of OAR 660-012-0060 that was at issue in Dept. of Transportation v. Coos County. Eder v. Crook County, 60 Or LUBA 204 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Under DLCD v. City of Warrenton, 37 Or LUBA 933 (2000), a land use regulation amendment that would generate traffic that would worsen the volume to capacity ratio of a transportation facility that was already operating at a failing volume to capacity ratio would "significantly affect" that transportation facility, within the meaning of the 1998 version of OAR 660-012-0060. Eder v. Crook County, 60 Or LUBA 204 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Under Department of Transp. v. City of Klamath Falls, 177 Or App 1, 9, 34 P3d 667 (2001) and the 1998 version of OAR 660-012-0060, a comprehensive plan or land use regulation amendment would "significantly affect" a transportation facility that was not already failing but was projected to fail during the planning period, if that amendment would cause the performance standard to be "violated sooner than it otherwise would be during the planning period." Eder v. Crook County, 60 Or LUBA 204 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where petitioner assigns error under OAR 660-012-0060, arguing that the county inadequately mitigated for the traffic impacts of a proposed destination resort, but petitioner neither assigns error to the county's finding that the destination resort will not "significantly affect" the transportation facilities within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060 nor challenges the legal reasoning that the county adopted in support of that finding, LUBA will deny the assignment of error. Eder v. Crook County, 60 Or LUBA 204 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a local code only requires that subdivision applicants provide a traffic study if the local government requests one, a cryptic statement in a letter that a subdivision applicant planned to provide a traffic study was not sufficient to trigger a requirement under the code that the applicant provide a traffic study or make it unnecessary for the local government to request a traffic study before denying the application for subdivision approval for failure to provide a traffic study. Montgomery v. City of Dunes City, 60 Or LUBA 274 (2010).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A condition of rezoning approval that defers consideration of compliance with OAR 660-012-0060 to a subsequent review process at the time actual development of the property is proposed is permissible, provided that the zone change is effectively conditioned to prohibit traffic or other impacts inconsistent with the requirements of OAR 660-012-0060. Willamette Oaks, LLC v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 60 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a local government considering an application for a zone change defers consideration of compliance with OAR 660-012-0060 to a later review process that does not involve a comprehensive plan amendment or zone change, the local government must ensure that the Department of Land Conservation and Development (DLCD) receives notice of the subsequent review process by imposing an overlay zone or a condition of approval on the zone change that requires such notice to DLCD. Willamette Oaks, LLC v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 60 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government's interpretation of its land use regulations to limit application of (1) its land use regulation's requirement for preparation of a transportation impact analysis and (2) its minimum level of service standard to zone change decisions and certain planned unit development decisions cannot be sustained, where the text of the relevant land use regulation sections is inconsistent with that interpretation. Siporen v. City of Medford, 59 Or LUBA 78 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a comprehensive plan policy calls for a local government to "review parking requirements for residential development with the purpose of reducing the required number of spaces per unit," a legislative decision that amends parking space requirements for multiple family dwellings to increase the required number of parking spaces must be remanded so that the local government can adopt findings that explain how that legislative decision is consistent with the comprehensive plan policy. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 116 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where there is (1) a lack of evidence that the additional parking spaces that would be required under a legislative land use regulation amendment will materially increase the total number of vehicle trips, (2) some evidence that the legislative amendment will not cause trips to increase materially, and (3) petitioner does not identify which transportation facilities it believes will be significantly affected by the amendment, a local government's brief finding that the legislative amendment will not significantly affect transportation facilities is adequate. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 116 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government's legislative land use regulation amendment that increases the required number of off-street parking spaces for multiple family dwellings could impact the local government's plan to comply with OAR 660-012-0045(5)(c)(A), which requires that the local government have a parking plan which "[a]chieves a 10% reduction in the number of parking spaces per capita in the MPO." Where such a legislative land use decision is not supported by findings that address OAR 660-012-0045(5)(c)(A), the decision must be remanded. Home Builders Association v. City of Eugene, 59 Or LUBA 116 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Remand is necessary where the local government adopts exceptions to Statewide Planning Goals 11 and 14 to approve a destination resort, but fails to address comprehensive plan transportation policies that appear to implement Statewide Planning Goal 12 (Transportation), for which the local government did not adopt an exception, and the decision fails to explain why those policies are either satisfied or not applicable. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a city does not rely on the ORS 836.640 through 836.642 "through the fence" pilot program to adopt an Airport Related zoning district that authorizes airpark residential development with through the fence access to an airport, arguments that ORS 836.640 through 836.642 do not authorize the kind of through the fence access that is permitted in the city's new Airport Related zoning district provide no basis for reversal or remand. Port of St. Helens v. City of Scappoose, 58 Or LUBA 122 (2008).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city's legislative decision to adopt a new Airport Related zoning district without applying the new zoning district to any property is not reversible where petitioner fails to demonstrate that the zone could in no circumstances be applied to property in the future without violating applicable legal standards. Port of St. Helens v. City of Scappoose, 58 Or LUBA 122 (2008).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city satisfies its Goal 2 and Airport Planning Rule coordination responsibilities where the city considers an airport's and the Federal Aviation Administration's (FAA's) concerns about a zoning district that allows through the fence access for residential development next to a public airport and the city requires that any applicant for such residential development secure a through the fence agreement with the airport and a letter of support from the FAA. Port of St. Helens v. City of Scappoose, 58 Or LUBA 122 (2008).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Remand is necessary where a county approves a truck stop with restaurant and truck wash based on a traffic study that, without explanation, uses a trip generation category of "Gasoline/Service Station" rather than the apparently more appropriate category of "Gasoline/Service Station with Car Wash," and fails to take into account trips generated by the restaurant. Western Land & Cattle, Inc. v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 295 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A finding that a proposed truck stop will not create a traffic hazard is not supported by substantial evidence, where the traffic impact analysis finds that the nearest intersection presents only a "marginal safety concern" but fails to take into account the 1,000 daily truck and vehicle trips the proposed truck stop will send through the intersection, and there is no evidence that the additional traffic will not significantly decrease the intersection's safety or significantly increase the crash rate. Western Land & Cattle, Inc. v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 295 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A code provision stating that permitted types of traffic impact mitigation "may include such improvements" as paving, curbing, contributions to traffic signals, etc. is not an exclusive list, and does not preclude a county from requiring an applicant to contribute money toward a future improvement project instead of requiring the applicant to actually construct the improvement. Western Land & Cattle, Inc. v. Umatilla County, 58 Or LUBA 295 (2009).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Under OAR 660-012-0060(2)(e), if imposition of conditions of approval would require transportation improvements that are inconsistent with the acknowledged TSP, a local government may be required to amend its adopted transportation system plan, either pursuant to OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d) or simply to ensure that the amendment complies with the Goal 2 (Land Use Planning) consistency requirement. Lufkin v. City of Salem, 56 Or LUBA 719 (2008).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. When a local government fails to make a finding as to whether a proposed zone change will cause a significant effect on a transportation facility, the decision must be remanded for such a determination. ODOT v. City of Madras, 55 Or LUBA 347 (2007).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The absence of explicit conditions of approval mandating that a rezoning applicant construct necessary transportation improvements is not necessarily reversible error, where the local government expressly incorporates the traffic analysis that requires the improvements, and thus the decision itself requires the improvements. However, remand is necessary to adopt conditions of approval where the decision does not purport to incorporate the traffic analysis or require the necessary improvements to be constructed. Nygaard v. City of Warrenton, 55 Or LUBA 648 (2008).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Remand is necessary where the rezoning decision relies on conditions of approval to comply with OAR 660-012-0060(4)(b)(B), which requires that the city ensure that necessary transportation improvements are actually funded, but fails to impose any such conditions. Nygaard v. City of Warrenton, 55 Or LUBA 648 (2008).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a local government finds that OAR 660-012-0060 is satisfied, the findings adopt and incorporate the applicant's traffic impact analysis (TIA), and the TIA includes mitigation measures, the local government does not err in failing to expressly impose a condition of approval requiring those mitigation measures to be implemented. Hildenbrand v. City of Adair Village, 54 Or LUBA 734 (2007).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In determining whether a plan or land use regulation amendment will "significantly affect a transportation facility" under the OAR 661-012-0060(1)(c)(C) non-degradation test, a city does not err in allowing the before and after volume to capacity (v/c) ratio to be computed to two decimal places rather than three decimal places. Rice v. City of Monmouth, 53 Or LUBA 55 (2006).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Under OAR 660-012-0060(4), a local government errs in relying on conceptual highway improvements for which there is no funding mechanism in place or a written statement from the Oregon Department of Transportation that such improvements are reasonably likely to be provided by the end of the planning period, to conclude that plan amendments will not "significantly affect" the highway. Rickreall Community Water Assoc. v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 76 (2006).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A condition of approval requiring that an applicant's employees avoid a failing intersection and instead use a much longer circuitous route to the site is inadequate to ensure that the proposed amendment will not "significantly affect" that intersection, where the condition does not take into account non-employee traffic generated by the proposed use, and there is no mechanism to monitor compliance by employees. Rickreall Community Water Assoc. v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 76 (2006).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. While OAR 660-012-0060 requires that local governments evaluate traffic impacts of uses allowed under a comprehensive plan designation or zoning district amendment, with focus on the most traffic-intensive uses among the uses allowed under the amendment, the rule does not require local governments to assume the most-traffic intensive use will occur at the maximum theoretically possible intensity. Rickreall Community Water Assoc. v. Polk County, 53 Or LUBA 76 (2006).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city's interpretation that its community service overlay (CSO) zoning designation functions as a conditional use rather than a traditional overlay zone is sustainable under Church v. Grant County, 187 Or App 518, 69 P3d 759 (2003), and ORS 197.829(1). Therefore, because the CSO zone overlay can only be applied to approve a specific use, and unlike other city overlay zones, the CSO zone does not require a zoning map amendment, the CSO designation does not trigger the obligation to address the transportation planning rule. Oregon Transfer Company v. City of Milwaukie, 53 Or LUBA 119 (2006).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Even if the city's use of a community service overlay (CSO) zoning designation may constitute an "end run" around the transportation planning rule, because the city's code is acknowledged, any challenge to the CSO zoning designation is an impermissible attack on the city's acknowledged code. Oregon Transfer Company v. City of Milwaukie, 53 Or LUBA 119 (2006).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A code provision that encourages the city to expand local maritime activities is not a "minimum acceptable performance standard" for purposes of the OAR 660-012-0060(1)(c)(B) requirement that plan amendments not reduce a transportation facility's performance below the minimum acceptable performance standard identified in the transportation system plan or comprehensive plan. People for Responsible Prosperity v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181 (2006).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Findings addressing the standards for a reasons exception for transportation improvements under OAR 660-012-0070 are also sufficient to satisfy the standards for a reasons exception under OAR 660-004-0020(2), where the findings in fact address the substantive differences between the two standards, and the petitioner does not explain why failure to directly address the OAR 660-004-0020(2) standards warrants reversal or remand. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 52 Or LUBA 418 (2006).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060(3) allows a local government to approve a plan amendment that would significantly affect a transportation facility that is already expected to perform below its identified performance standard at the end of the planning period, if the applicant mitigates that impact so that there will be no further degradation of the performance of that facility at the end of the planning period. However, OAR 660-012-0060(3) does not require an absolute guarantee that a facility improvement that would be hastened by a required financial contribution mitigation will actually be built. Where the facility to be benefited is already included in the relevant transportation system plans and the TSP anticipates that the facility will be funded at some point in the planning period, that is sufficient. Cornelius First v. City of Cornelius, 52 Or LUBA 486 (2006).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a specific financial contribution mitigation is identified that would satisfy the mitigation requirement of OAR 660-012-0060(3)(c) to prevent a plan amendment from resulting in further degradation of a transportation facility located in a neighboring city that is already expected to be failing at the end of the planning period, a city does not err by authorizing the neighboring city to instead apply that financial contribution to fund other intersection improvements that would also result in the plan amendment satisfying the OAR 660-012-0060(3)(c) non-degradation standard. Cornelius First v. City of Cornelius, 52 Or LUBA 486 (2006).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a city amends its transportation system plan to include an access management plan that was previously prepared by ODOT, it is the city's obligation to comply with the OAR 660-012-0015(5) requirement for coordination with affected private providers of transportation services. While the city may be able to rely on ODOT's coordination efforts at the time the access management plan was adopted, the city must establish that such coordination in fact occurred. Rhodes v. City of Talent, 50 Or LUBA 415 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Transportation system planning and transportation project planning under the transportation planning rule may not always constitute separate and distinct phases with no overlap. But where a transportation system plan already calls for highway improvements and petitioner does not explain why additional transportation systems alternatives analyses are required, LUBA will reject petitioner's argument that the city was obligated to conduct additional transportation systems alternatives analyses under OAR 660-012-0035(1). Rhodes v. City of Talent, 50 Or LUBA 415 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where the drawings that accompany an access management plan are unclear, LUBA will assume that the more detailed construction plans that will be necessary to construct proposed improvements will call for improvements that are consistent with applicable design standards, where there is nothing in the record that suggests otherwise. Rhodes v. City of Talent, 50 Or LUBA 415 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where an access management plan appears to deviate slightly from two applicable design standards, and the city's decision does not explain why such deviation is permissible, LUBA will remand for that explanation. Rhodes v. City of Talent, 50 Or LUBA 415 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A transportation system plan policy that "construction of transportation facilities shall be timed to coincide with community needs" suggests that community needs should not be allowed to outstrip the capacity of transportation facilities and that transportation facilities should not unnecessarily predate the community's need for those facilities. Where a city's decision includes no findings interpreting the transportation system plan policy or explaining why the proposed improvements are timely under the policy, LUBA will remand so that the city can adopt those findings. Rhodes v. City of Talent, 50 Or LUBA 415 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d) requires a comparison of traffic impacts allowed under pre- and post-amendment plan and zoning, usually by comparing the most traffic intensive use allowed in each zone. However, the proper point of comparison is "allowed land uses," not uses allowed under a specific development plan, particularly development plans that can be modified at any time without a plan amendment or zone change. Griffiths v. City of Corvallis, 50 Or LUBA 588 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. While it could potentially be error for a local government to evaluate only "likely" uses rather than "allowed land uses" in comparing traffic impacts under OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d), where the local government in fact evaluates both, any error in evaluating likely uses is harmless error. Griffiths v. City of Corvallis, 50 Or LUBA 588 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/Goal 12 Rule. Where a petitioner argues at the local level that the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) applies to the challenged decision because a condition of approval of a previous zone change arguably requires application of the TPR, the decision maker is required to at least address the issue in its decision and explain why the TPR does not apply. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Medford, 49 Or LUBA 52 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. An amendment of a city's zoning map to change the zoning designation of property is an amendment of a land use regulation and, therefore, is subject to OAR 660-012-0060(1). Just v. City of Lebanon, 49 Or LUBA 180 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where ODOT does not explain why it changed its mind and concluded that a zoning map amendment does not implicate the transportation planning rule, a city may not approve a change in zoning that will allow more intense development without requiring a transportation impact analysis to determine whether the potential additional traffic may "significantly affect a transportation facility." Just v. City of Lebanon, 49 Or LUBA 180 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0050(1) exempts certain ODOT projects from the transportation planning rule, but that rule does not excuse a city from considering whether its decision to rezone property may be subject to the transportation planning rule. Just v. City of Lebanon, 49 Or LUBA 180 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city may not defer its obligations to determine whether a rezoning decision will "significantly affect a transportation facility" or its decision whether to impose measures to mitigate that impact to a later date when specific development is proposed for the property, where the rezoning decision does not include a condition of approval that the transportation planning rule requirement be considered at that later stage and the city's land use regulations do not require that the transportation planning rule be considered at that later stage. Just v. City of Lebanon, 49 Or LUBA 180 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. If the adopted transportation system plan assumes that property will be rezoned in the future to allow more intense development, the city may assume at the time of the assumed rezoning that the zone change has no significant impact on transportation facilities. However, a city may not assume that its rezoning decision will have no significant impact on transportation facilities where (1) it has not adopted the transportation system plan required by the transportation planning rule and (2) the transportation plan the city has adopted does not assume the property will be developed under the more intense zoning. Just v. City of Lebanon, 49 Or LUBA 180 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a city has not adopted a transportation system plan, as required by the transportation planning rule, a zoning map change cannot significantly affect a city transportation facility under OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d) by causing the performance of a city transportation facility to fall "below the minimum acceptable level identified in the [transportation system plan]." If the city has no transportation system plan for the city transportation facility, there is no minimum acceptable performance level to violate. Just v. City of Lebanon, 49 Or LUBA 180 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0055(4)(b) does not require that a city that has not adopted a transportation system plan must first prepare such a plan before amending its land use regulations. Just v. City of Lebanon, 49 Or LUBA 180 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Even if a city has not adopted a transportation system plan to establish performance standards for city transportation facilities, the Oregon Highway Plan establishes performance standards for state transportation facilities. Therefore, when amending its zoning map under OAR 660-012-0060 a city must consider whether the new zoning would allow development that will exceed those performance standards and thereby "significantly affect" those state transportation facilities within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060(2). Just v. City of Lebanon, 49 Or LUBA 180 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where the city's acknowledged transportation system plan (TSP) assumed that the subject property would develop at urban densities allowed under a city comprehensive plan designation, and did not assume that the property would develop under the pre-existing low-density county zoning, in conducting the comparison of traffic impacts allowed under the amended and unamended plan and zoning under OAR 660-012-0060 it is appropriate to use the city plan designation assumed in the TSP rather than the county zone. Mason v. City of Corvallis, 49 Or LUBA 199 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The focus of OAR 660-012-0060(1) is on the land uses that are allowed under the amended plan and zoning regulations, not on the particular uses that the applicant may contemplate. Absent adequate justification for a different approach, the local government must assume that the property will develop at the most traffic-intensive use allowed under the amended plan and zoning, in determining whether the amendments "significantly affect" a transportation facility. Mason v. City of Corvallis, 49 Or LUBA 199 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government may assume that property will not develop under the most traffic-intensive uses allowed in the amended plan and zoning regulations for purposes of OAR 660-012-0060, where the presence of steep slopes, wetlands, significant natural features or other limitations on development potential make it highly improbable that the site can be developed with the most traffic-intensive uses allowed under the amended plan and zoning regulations. Mason v. City of Corvallis, 49 Or LUBA 199 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Implicit in OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d) is a causative element that triggers application of the rule only when the amendments (1) allow uses that generate more traffic than uses allowed under the unamended plan and zoning and (2) the additional traffic would reduce a facility's performance standards below the minimum acceptable level. Where the amended plan and zoning would generate less traffic than the unamended plan and zoning, then the amendment cannot significantly affect a transportation facility within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d). Mason v. City of Corvallis, 49 Or LUBA 199 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The requirements of OAR 660-012-0060 only apply to amendments "to functional plans, acknowledged comprehensive plans and land use regulations." Where a city took separate actions to approve a master plan of development and to amend its comprehensive plan to conform to the master plan of development and petitioners only appealed the master plan of development approval decision to LUBA, the requirements of OAR 660-012-0060 did not apply to the only decision that was before LUBA in that appeal. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. City of Brookings, 49 Or LUBA 273 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city land use regulation requirement that a master plan of development demonstrate that transportation facilities are "adequate," does not require any particular level of internal or external roadway connectivity. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. City of Brookings, 49 Or LUBA 273 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Arguments that application of a city zoning district to an annexed area will conflict with Goal 12 are misdirected, where the challenged decision merely annexes the area but does not rezone it. Cutsforth v. City of Albany, 49 Or LUBA 559 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0040 merely requires that cities' transportation system plans (TSP) include a financing program. The rule does not require that the financing program must be amended every time the TSP is amended. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of Newberg, 49 Or LUBA 626 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Identifying a transportation need under OAR 660-012-0070 is sufficient to justify an exception under ORS 197.732(1)(c)(A). The county need not separately demonstrate that the state policies embodied in the applicable goals should not apply. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 49 Or LUBA 640 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Under OAR 660-012-0070(6), the reasonableness of non-exception alternatives is determined by the thresholds established by the local government, which include consideration of "cost, operational feasibility, economic dislocation and other relevant factors." 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 49 Or LUBA 640 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. When taking an exception for a transportation facility on rural lands, the more specific provisions of OAR 660-012-0070 apply in place of the more general ESEE analysis requirements of Goal 2, Part II (c)(3), ORS 197.732(1)(c)(C), and OAR 660-004-0020(2)(c). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 49 Or LUBA 640 (2005).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government may not avoid the obligation to adopt findings addressing whether a proposed plan amendment complies with the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) by relying on subsequent permit approvals to address traffic impacts of uses allowed by the amendment, where the criteria governing permit approvals do not require compliance with the TPR or include standards similar to TPR standards. Staus v. City of Corvallis, 48 Or LUBA 254 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. An attempt to incorporate documents in the record as findings of compliance with the Transportation Planning Rule fails, where the decision purports to incorporate hundreds of pages of minutes and written testimony without adequately identifying those documents, and the incorporation is qualified in a manner that makes it difficult or impossible to understand the facts relied upon and the justification for the decision. Staus v. City of Corvallis, 48 Or LUBA 254 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A condition of rezoning approval that prohibits any development until a master plan is approved, under criteria identical to OAR 660-012-0060, is sufficient to ensure that traffic generated by uses allowed by the rezoning decision will be consistent with the function, capacity and performance standards of affected transportation facilities, and thus ensure compliance with OAR 660-012-0060 and Goal 12. Citizens for Protection of Neighborhoods v. City of Salem, 47 Or LUBA 111 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060 does not require preparation or analysis of a traffic impact statement, although depending on the nature of the proposed plan amendment and the local government's approach to finding or ensuring compliance with the rule, some kind of traffic generation or traffic impact analysis may be necessary. Citizens for Protection of Neighborhoods v. City of Salem, 47 Or LUBA 111 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Although a petitioner waived its right to challenge a decision for failure to apply Goal 12 (Transportation) or the Transportation Planning Rule, LUBA will consider the legal arguments that the petitioner presents under that assignment of error when LUBA considers petitioner's arguments concerning nearly identically worded county code transportation standards under a different assignment of error. Concerned Citizens v. Malheur County, 47 Or LUBA 208 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A county does not improperly defer a determination that a rezoning decision will not significantly affect transportation facilities under county code provisions that parallel the Transportation Planning Rule, where (1) the rezoning decision effectively precludes development of the rezoned site without site design review, (2) the rezoning decision prohibits uses that would generate traffic that would be inconsistent with highway facility functional classifications or exceed levels of service and (3) any future site design review determination that the development of the site would not significantly affect transportation facilities would be a discretionary permit decision that would be appealable to LUBA. Concerned Citizens v. Malheur County, 47 Or LUBA 208 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Unless required by local standards, a city is not required to ensure that development permitted outright under existing plan and zoning standards will not cause transportation facilities to fall below operational thresholds during the relevant planning period. Heilman v. City of Corvallis, 47 Or LUBA 305 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a city's functional classification scheme distinguishes street types based on the type or source of traffic, and requires that the majority of trips on a neighborhood collector serve traffic that starts and ends within the neighborhood, in rezoning land to higher-intensity commercial uses the city must evaluate whether the rezoning "significantly affects" the collector within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060(2)(c), by allowing levels of travel that are inconsistent with the functional classification of that facility. NWDA v. City of Portland, 47 Or LUBA 533 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where two traffic studies indicate that post-acknowledgment plan amendments may cause a transportation facility to fall below the minimum acceptable performance standard, and the respondent cites no evidence to the contrary that a reasonable person would rely upon, remand is necessary for the city to address whether the plan amendment will "significantly affect" that transportation facility within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d). NWDA v. City of Portland, 47 Or LUBA 533 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Nothing in the Transportation Planning Rule at OAR Chapter 660, Division 12 requires that a local government amend its transportation system plan before or contemporaneously with adopting a new fund to finance identified transportation improvements. NWDA v. City of Portland, 47 Or LUBA 533 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Because OAR 734-051-0155(4)(d) requires that access management plans shall be consistent with a city's transportation system plan and because OAR 734-051-0155(4)(k) requires that the access management plan be "adopted into" the city's transportation system plan, the city's adoption of the access management plan "concerns the adoption, amendment or application of * * * [a] comprehensive plan provision" within the meaning of ORS 197.015(10)(a) and, for that reason, is a land use decision subject to LUBA's jurisdiction. Rhodes v. City of Talent, 47 Or LUBA 574 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city errs by adopting an access management plan without adopting that access management plan as part of its transportation system plan and without following the procedures for a post acknowledgment plan amendment. Rhodes v. City of Talent, 47 Or LUBA 574 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The OAR 660-012-0060 requirement that plan and land use regulation amendments "shall assure that allowed land uses are consistent with the identified function, capacity, and performance standards" of transportation facilities is written in the present tense. That the rule is written in the present tense is some indication that the rule drafters did not intend to require only that the traffic that would be generated by a plan amendment "will be" consistent with the function, capacity and performance standards of affected transportation facilities at the end of the planning period, but intended to require such consistency throughout the planning period. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 134 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060, which governs amendments to comprehensive plans, serves a different purpose than the standards that apply to development of a transportation system plan. OAR 660-012-0060 was adopted to prevent local governments from allowing new uses that are not provided for in the plan and code, or anticipated in the TSP, which are inconsistent with the function and capacity of transportation facilities. The transportation system plan may be unconcerned with temporary failures of transportation facilities caused by already allowed uses, because there may be little the local government can do to address such temporary failures. But it does not follow that OAR 660-012-0060 is also unconcerned with temporary facility failures, or that its regulatory concerns are confined to those that animate the standards for developing a TSP. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 134 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060(1) provides a set of flexible tools that local governments must use to "assure" that allowed uses are consistent with the function, capacity and performance standards of transportation facilities. Those tools must be applied to mitigate both "temporary" failures that might be caused by plan amendments and to assure that such amendments do not hasten permanent failures. Jaqua v. City of Springfield, 46 Or LUBA 134 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Under OAR 660-012-0040(4), LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review "timing and financing provisions" in a transportation financing program. However, LUBA does have jurisdiction to review a city decision that determines that a particular facility alternative is consistent with its transportation system plan, notwithstanding that such a decision may be driven in part by timing or financing considerations. Ramsey v. City of Philomath, 46 Or LUBA 241 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city decision that elects to construct a transportation facility that completes part but omits part of a recommended facility in a city's transportation system plan will be affirmed by LUBA where the facility to be constructed can be viewed as a first phase of the planned-for facility and the city's decision to construct the facility in phases is not inconsistent with the TSP. Ramsey v. City of Philomath, 46 Or LUBA 241 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. If after a first phase of a transportation system plan recommended facility is constructed a city determines to abandon the final phase, the city must amend the transportation system plan to reflect that choice. Ramsey v. City of Philomath, 46 Or LUBA 241 (2004).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A threshold question under OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d) is whether development under proposed zoning will cause greater traffic impacts than development under existing zoning. If not, the inquiry under OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d) ends there. If so, the local government must go on to evaluate whether the increased traffic will cause affected transportation facilities to fall below applicable performance standards. Friends of Marion County v. City of Keizer, 45 Or LUBA 236 (2003).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In evaluating whether development under proposed zoning will cause greater traffic impacts than development under existing zoning for purposes of OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d), the local government must use consistent assumptions. Friends of Marion County v. City of Keizer, 45 Or LUBA 236 (2003).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where the challenged decision increases the proportion of commercial-zoned lands in an area and decreases the proportion of industrial-zoned lands in that area, and does not alter the types of uses allowed in those commercial and industrial zones, a consistent comparison of traffic impacts for purposes of OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d) requires the local government to assume that the same uses will develop in industrial zones under the existing and proposed zoning, and the same uses will develop in commercial zones under the existing and proposed zoning. Friends of Marion County v. City of Keizer, 45 Or LUBA 236 (2003).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. An erroneous assumption in a supplemental study regarding traffic impacts of development under proposed zoning for purposes of OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d) is harmless error, where the initial traffic study reached the same conclusion of compliance with the rule using the correct assumption, and petitioner offers no reason to believe that remand to correct the erroneous assumption in the supplemental study will alter that ultimate conclusion. Friends of Marion County v. City of Keizer, 45 Or LUBA 236 (2003).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where the challenged decision rezones 32 acres of land from a light industrial zone that allows traffic-intensive office uses to a heavy industrial zone that does not allow such office uses, the local government is not required to assume the proposed heavy industrial zone will be developed with office uses not allowed in the zone, for purposes of comparing traffic impacts under OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d). Friends of Marion County v. City of Keizer, 45 Or LUBA 236 (2003).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The Oregon Department of Transportation's (ODOT's) general observation during local proceedings that it did not believe the city had adequately addressed the requirements of OAR 660-012-0060, which was followed up with specific concerns that the city addressed to ODOT's satisfaction, is not sufficient to allow a petitioner at LUBA to raise for the first time on appeal specific issues other than the specific concerns identified by ODOT. Thomas v. City of Veneta, 44 Or LUBA 5 (2003).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A county population projection that does not itself "significantly affect" a transportation facility in any of the four ways described in OAR 660-012-0060 need not comply with that rule or local equivalents, notwithstanding that the population projection may set the stage for later decisions that will significantly affect transportation facilities. Tipperman v. Union County, 44 Or LUBA 98 (2003).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0070(8) requires that a local government describe the adverse effects that the accessibility associated with an urban transportation facility may have on rural lands and adopt "measures which minimize [such] accessibility." Where an assignment of error is essentially a collateral challenge to a parkway that is already included in a transportation system plan rather than to the realignment of a portion of that already-approved parkway that is approved by the challenged decision, the assignment of error provides no basis for reversal or remand. Friends of Eugene v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 239 (2003).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a county has alternative performance measures that have been approved by LCDC under OAR 660-012-0035(5), which establish a year 2015 target internal vehicle miles traveled (VMT) of 3,224,037 miles and establish a VMT/capita of 10.9, a decision to amend a transportation system plan such that the expect VMT/capita for 2015 remains at 10.9 but the expected internal VMT for the year 2015 increases slightly to 3,232,977 miles does not violate the alternative performance measures. Friends of Eugene v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 239 (2003).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A transportation system plan amendment that improves the expected performance of 13 intersections as compared to the existing transportation system plan does not significantly affect a transportation facility within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060(2) and does not implicate the remedial measures that are required under OAR 660-012-0060(1), notwithstanding that a facility improvement that will be required to keep another section of roadway from failing within the planning period is placed in a less certain funding category. Friends of Eugene v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 239 (2003).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The Oregon Highway Plan Major Improvements Policy imposes a priority system favoring protection of the existing transportation system and improvements to or added capacity for the existing transportation system before building new transportation facilities. A transportation system plan amendment does not violate that priority policy where the findings demonstrate that for several decades those higher priority measures have been taken and are now inadequate to address local and regional traffic needs. Friends of Eugene v. City of Eugene, 44 Or LUBA 239 (2003).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In determining whether swapping plan designations between two similar areas of a parcel would result in a net increase in traffic impacts for purposes of the OAR 660-012-0060 requirement that plan amendments not "significantly affect" a transportation facility, a local government must consider the development potential of each area as zoned and planned, but need not consider extrinsic limitations on development, such as security concerns arising from threats of terrorism, that cast doubt on whether one of the areas could be developed to its full potential, under its existing designation. Excelsior Investment Co. v. City of Medford, 44 Or LUBA 553 (2003).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Amendments to a city's comprehensive plan and land use regulations that result in an aerial tram being listed as a "basic utility" and an allowed use in the city's open space zone do not change the functional classification of the rights-of-way that the tram will pass over and, therefore, those amendments do not "substantially affect" a transportation facility within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060. No Tram to OHSU v. City of Portland, 44 Or LUBA 647 (2003).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a transportation plan has been submitted to LCDC for acknowledgment review and LCDC has conducted that review with regard to Goal 12 and the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR), LUBA does not have authority to thereafter review the regional transportation plan for compliance with the TPR. That limit on LUBA's scope of review is not affected by the fact that the TPR was adopted to implement both Goal 12 and the ORS 197.712(2)(e) obligation concerning public facility plans, where the statutory obligation is not shown to impose transportation planning obligations that are different than those imposed by Goal 12. Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 40 Or LUBA 426 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Findings concluding that traffic from proposed industrial development will not change the functional classification of affected transportation facilities under OAR 660-012-0060(2)(a) and (b) are not sufficient to also conclude, for purposes of OAR 660-012-0060(2)(c), that levels of travel from the proposed development are consistent with the functional classification of affected facilities. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Depending on how functional classifications are defined in the pertinent transportation plan, evidence that levels of traffic generated by proposed development will violate the performance measure of affected transportation facilities may also be relevant to determining whether the development "significantly affects" a facility under OAR 660-012-0060(2)(c) by allowing levels of travel inconsistent with the functional classification of a transportation facility. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A finding that the proposed buildout of a subdivision will take longer than originally anticipated, and will generate less traffic during the planning period, is insufficient to demonstrate that the proposed development will not significantly affect a transportation facility that is projected to fail under increases in background traffic, where the proposed development, even if built out at a slower pace, may cause the facility to fail earlier than it otherwise would. DLCD v. Klamath County, 40 Or LUBA 221 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. For an amendment to significantly affect a transportation facility under OAR 660-012-0060, the amendment must play a causative role in reducing the applicable performance standards below the minimum acceptable level. The focus of the inquiry is on the transportation impacts allowed by the amendment, not on impacts from uses already allowed by the existing plan or zoning. ODOT v. City of Klamath Falls, 39 Or LUBA 641 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Although a local government may rely on improvements identified in its transportation system plan to avoid a finding of significant effect, a local government may not avoid the requirements of OAR 660-012-0060(1) by assuming the existence of unplanned future transportation improvements. ODOT v. City of Klamath Falls, 39 Or LUBA 641 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Even if a transportation facility would fall below the applicable performance standard without the proposed amendment, a proposed plan amendment significantly affects the transportation facility if it would reduce the performance standard below the applicable performance standard sooner than would otherwise occur. ODOT v. City of Klamath Falls, 39 Or LUBA 641 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government may proceed under an assumption that a plan amendment significantly affects a transportation facility without making a specific determination under OAR 660-012-0060(2)(c) that the amendment is inconsistent with the functional classification of the facility. Although such a course creates difficulty in determining what level of mitigation is necessary under OAR 660-012-0060(1)(a) through (d), a condition that prevents the amendment from affecting the facility at all until necessary improvements are made overcomes that difficulty and complies with OAR 660-012-0060(1)(a). ODOT v. City of Klamath Falls, 39 Or LUBA 641 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The transportation planning rule does not apply to the amendment of the Metro UGB where the amendment only converts rural land to urbanizable land, and does not alter the types or intensity of allowed land uses, reduce the performance standards of transportation facilities, or otherwise "significantly affect" a transportation facility within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060. Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 39 Or LUBA 539 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The requirement under OAR 660-012-0065(3)(o) that the travel capacity and level of service of transportation facilities sited on rural EFU-zoned land must "be limited to that necessary to support rural land uses identified in the acknowledged comprehensive plan" is satisfied where the proposed facility would serve seven lot of record dwellings, the comprehensive plan authorizes rural dwellings and the EFU zoning statutes specifically authorize lot of record dwellings in EFU zones. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 39 Or LUBA 478 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. An existing road cannot be rejected as an alternative under OAR 660-012-0065(5)(a) because it is (1) unsafe, (2) does not meet "applicable standards," or (3) has not previously been "approved by a registered professional engineer." Under the rule, the county must also establish that the existing road cannot be improved to be "safe," meet "applicable standards," and be "approved by a registered professional engineer" "at a reasonable cost, not considering raw land costs, with available technology." Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 39 Or LUBA 478 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A decision that an existing road need not be considered as an alternative under OAR 660-012-0065(5)(a) is not supported by substantial evidence where there is no attempt to identify how costly it would be to address safety problems and bring the road up to applicable standards so that it could be approved by a registered engineer. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 39 Or LUBA 478 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0065(5)(a) prohibits consideration of "land costs," in determining whether the cost of an alternative is reasonable. "Land costs" are not limited to purchase of the fee title and include purchase of an easement. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 39 Or LUBA 478 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a zoning map is part of the city's zoning ordinance, an amendment of the zoning map constitutes a land use regulation amendment, within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060, and must meet the requirements of OAR 660-012-0060(1) if the zoning map amendment will significantly affect a transportation facility. Adams v. City of Medford, 39 Or LUBA 464 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a city's finding that a zoning map amendment will not significantly affect transportation facilities is based on a lengthy transportation impact study, and petitioner attacks that finding based on other evidence of questionable relevance without developing any arguments challenging the transportation impact study, petitioner provides no basis for reversal or remand. Adams v. City of Medford, 39 Or LUBA 464 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government may rely on existing or planned facilities to determine whether its transportation facilities are adequate to handle additional traffic that will be generated by a proposed amendment. Craig Realty Group v. City of Woodburn, 39 Or LUBA 384 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. If a local government relies on planned-for facilities to accommodate additional vehicle trips that will be generated by a proposed plan amendment, then the local government must find that those planned-for facilities will be built or improved on a schedule that will accommodate those additional trips. Craig Realty Group v. City of Woodburn, 39 Or LUBA 384 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. If a proposed amendment will generate additional trips that cannot be absorbed by existing or planned-for facilities, then a local government must adopt one or more of the strategies set out in OAR 660-012-0060(1) to make the proposal consistent with "the identified function, capacity and level of service of the [affected] facility," as is required by OAR 660-012-0060(1). Craig Realty Group v. City of Woodburn, 39 Or LUBA 384 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A determination by a local government that a proposed amendment will not currently significantly affect a transportation facility is insufficient to satisfy OAR 660-012-0060(1), because the rule requires a demonstration of no significant effect over the entire relevant planning period. Craig Realty Group v. City of Woodburn, 39 Or LUBA 384 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government may rely on a transportation facility improvement that is not fully set out in the local transportation systems plan, where that improvement has been identified and deferred to a future refinement plan pursuant to OAR 660-012-0025. Craig Realty Group v. City of Woodburn, 39 Or LUBA 384 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060 has no applicability to a decision vacating a county road, where the decision does not amend a functional plan, comprehensive plan or land use regulation. Mekkers v. Yamhill County, 39 Or LUBA 367 (2001).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government may not explicitly rely on a traffic study to demonstrate compliance with Goal 12 and then ignore a portion of the traffic study that describes anticipated deterioration in level of service. DLCD v. Klamath County, 38 Or LUBA 769 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where development will result in a change in the level of service and reduce performance standards of the facility below the minimum acceptable level of service over the relevant planning horizon, the proposed amendment "significantly affects" a transportation facility. DLCD v. Klamath County, 38 Or LUBA 769 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The establishment of a new public use airport runway, along with associated road realignment and expansion of the airport boundary, is considered to be part of the "expansion of a public use airport," pursuant to OAR 660-012-0065(3)(n). Lentz v. Lane County, 38 Or LUBA 669 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. As long as the expansion of the public use airport continues to serve the same class of airplanes pursuant to OAR 660-012-0065, the expansion is considered to be consistent with Goals 3, 4, 11, and 14, and an exception to those goals is not required. Lentz v. Lane County, 38 Or LUBA 669 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The "air, rail, water and pipeline transportation plan" required by OAR 660-012-0020(2)(e) to be included in a local government's Transportation System Plan need not include any information other than that specified in the rule, i.e., the location and extent of existing or planned facilities. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 38 Or LUBA 291 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The coordination requirement at OAR 660-012-0015(5) provides that the adopting local government must provide notice and an opportunity to comment to affected local governments. However, the rule does not require that the adopting local government provide additional notice and opportunity to comment each time the proposal is modified. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 38 Or LUBA 291 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060(1) and (2) contemplate that any mitigation measures that may be necessary to ensure that land uses allowed by amendments remain consistent with a facility's function, capacity and performance standards are considered after the local government has determined whether the proposed plan amendment significantly affects a transportation facility within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060(2). It is inconsistent with that scheme to consider such mitigation measures as a means of avoiding the conclusion that an amendment significantly affects a transportation facility. DLCD v. City of Warrenton, 37 Or LUBA 933 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where an applicable transportation systems plan adopts particular performance standards, a local government errs by not using those standards to analyze whether a proposed amendment significantly affects a transportation facility, as defined by OAR 660-012-0060(2). DLCD v. City of Warrenton, 37 Or LUBA 933 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0045(5)(c) requires local governments to adopt legislation to comply with the rule's parking reduction requirements; it is not an independent decisional criterion applicable to every quasi-judicial application involving parking. Douglas v. City of Lake Oswego, 37 Or LUBA 826 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A zoning ordinance text amendment that, as conditioned, would not permit development that would add more traffic to the transportation system than could be added under the zoning ordinance before the text amendment does not "significantly affect a transportation system," within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060(2) (1998). Marine Street LLC v. City of Astoria, 37 Or LUBA 587 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060(2) (1998) does not require that a local government consider whether a proposed zoning text amendment to raise the permissible building height on one property will in some general way encourage development in the future on nearby properties that may, in turn, "significantly affect a transportation facility. Marine Street LLC v. City of Astoria, 37 Or LUBA 587 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government's failure to adopt a transportation system plan (TSP) by the date required by OAR 660-012-0055 does not preclude the local government from amending the transportation element of its comprehensive plan until it adopts a TSP, where it is clear under the comprehensive plan that the transportation element is a separate policy document than the TSP, and the amendments to the transportation element are not intended to and do not have the effect of adopting a TSP. Volny v. City of Bend, 37 Or LUBA 493 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A comprehensive plan amendment that changes a minor arterial to a major arterial changes the functional classification of a transportation facility and thus requires findings of compliance with OAR 660-012-0060. Volny v. City of Bend, 37 Or LUBA 493 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The focus of OAR 660-012-0060 is on protecting transportation facilities from impacts inconsistent with their identified function, capacity and level of service, not on protecting adjacent residential land uses from the adverse impacts of transportation facilities. Volny v. City of Bend, 37 Or LUBA 493 (2000).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government's decision to rezone land to allow an industrial use generating up to 120 truck trips per day through local streets and a state highway must demonstrate compliance with Goal 12. LUBA will not exercise its authority under ORS 197.835(11)(b) to affirm the decision notwithstanding inadequate findings of compliance with Goal 12, where the parties cannot identify traffic studies or other evidence in the record sufficient to make it "obvious" or "inevitable" that the decision complies with Goal 12's requirement for a safe, convenient and economic transportation system. Mulford v. Town of Lakeview, 36 Or LUBA 715 (1999).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local provision that merely recites language from the Transportation Planning Rule, OAR 660-012-0045(2)(g), is not adequate to implement that rule, where the local provision does not contain any operative terms actually implementing the rule, and does not ensure that all amendments to land use designations, densities and design standards are consistent with the function, capacity and level of service of transportation facilities, as the rule requires. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 686 (1999).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Findings and conditions that require only external pedestrian improvements, and that require pedestrians in one part of the development to leave the subject property in order to go to another part of the development, are inadequate to demonstrate compliance with the Transportation Planning Rule's requirement for internal pedestrian facilities and clustering of buildings. Terra v. City of Newport, 36 Or LUBA 582 (1999).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a plan policy, implementing the Transportation Planning Rule, requires that the parking spaces per capita ratio must be reduced by 10 percent but does not specify how the starting point for computing the reduction must be computed, a city council interpretation that the starting point computation may include approved but not yet constructed parking spaces is within the city's interpretive discretion under ORS 197.829. Baughman v. City of Portland, 36 Or LUBA 353 (1999).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a city approves a development plan for a university district as part of a quasi-judicial proceeding, but does not incorporate it into the city's comprehensive plan or land use regulations, the development plan is not a comprehensive plan or land use regulation, and thus amendments to that plan are not subject to review for compliance with statewide planning goals or the Transportation Planning Rule. Brome v. City of Corvallis, 36 Or LUBA 225 (1999).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/Goal 12 Rule. A county's transportation plan is inconsistent with the Transportation Planning Rule where it fails to inventory existing and committed bicycle and pedestrian facilities in the county, assess the capability and condition of those facilities, develop a system of planned improvements to those facilities, and depict planned improvements on a map, as required by OAR 660-012-0020. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 131 (1999).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/Goal 12 Rule. A letter from an ODOT employee regarding negotiations between ODOT and the county does not constitute an affirmative waiver of issues related to minimum street width standards under OAR 660-012-0045(7), where it is unclear what was resolved between the parties and whether the county implemented the parties' resolution. Even if petitioner ODOT had waived that issue, such waiver would not apply to petitioner DLCD. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 131 (1999).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/Goal 12 Rule. The requirement at OAR 660-012-0045(7) that the county evaluate whether its street width standards are the minimum consistent with operational needs is not satisfied by a county procedure to consider, on a case-by-case basis, whether certain street widths should be reduced. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 131 (1999).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city does not err by failing to require that a subdivision access road be improved to particular city standards, where the applicable city criterion merely requires that the subdivision provide "paved" access. Hunt v. City of Ashland, 35 Or LUBA 467 (1999).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Under OAR 660-012-0060(2)(d), a plan amendment "significantly affects" a transportation facility if it would reduce the level of service of that facility below the minimum identified acceptable level of service. Under that definition, a plan amendment that would further degrade a facility that is already operating below the minimum identified acceptable level of service "significantly affects" that facility. Dept. of Transportation v. Coos County, 35 Or LUBA 285 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-012-0060 does not require that a local government impose exactions to ensure that impacts from a plan amendment do not violate Transportation Planning Rule Level of Service requirements. Dept. of Transportation v. Coos County, 35 Or LUBA 285 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Compliance with OAR 660-012-0060 does not deprive a property of all beneficial use, where the current comprehensive plan and zoning designations allow a range of uses that may generate any amount of traffic and are not subject to the rule. Dept. of Transportation v. Coos County, 35 Or LUBA 285 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The Transportation Planning Rule, OAR 660-012-0060, requires that when a plan amendment "significantly affects" a transportation facility the local government must either ensure that the amendment is consistent with its transportation plan or amend its plan. Citizens for Florence v. City of Florence, 35 Or LUBA 255 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. When a land use allowed by a comprehensive plan amendment would "significantly affect" a transportation facility, a local government may not avoid the requirements of the Transportation Planning Rule, OAR 660-012-0060, by conditioning the amendment on improvements that maintain the facility above the thresholds provided in OAR 660-012-0060(2). Citizens for Florence v. City of Florence, 35 Or LUBA 255 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government's reliance on a traffic study using a method not currently preferred but nonetheless required by the state Department of Transportation (ODOT) does not provide a basis for reversal or remand, where traffic analysis under either of two methods recognized by ODOT supports the conclusion reached by the local government. Citizens for Florence v. City of Florence, 35 Or LUBA 255 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government fails to satisfy the requirement of the Transportation Planning Rule, OAR 660-012-0060, to coordinate with affected jurisdictions, where it amends its comprehensive plan to allow a shopping mall designed to be a regional destination point, but limits its coordination efforts to ODOT and the surrounding county. Citizens for Florence v. City of Florence, 35 Or LUBA 255 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. When a local government has not adopted requirements in the Transportation Planning Rule at OAR 660-012-0045 regarding pedestrian and bicycle facilities, those requirements apply directly to local government land use decisions. Citizens for Florence v. City of Florence, 35 Or LUBA 255 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Although Oregon Laws 1997, chapter 859 (HB 2605) repeals two sections of the legislation that directed DLCD to adopt the Airport Planning Rule (APR), the 1997 legislation does not completely supersede the APR or DLCD's authority to adopt rules regarding airport planning. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 35 Or LUBA 30 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where the TPR and Airport Planning Rule specifically require that a jurisdiction include areas of its airport that extend beyond its corporate limits, a city action doing so does not violate the ORS 221.720 limitation of a city's municipal power to its city limits. Northwest Aggregates Co. v. City of Scappoose, 35 Or LUBA 30 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where petitioner adequately raised the issue of whether a street would continue to function as a local street, failure to specify the TPR or comprehensive plan provision that required that the street continue to function as a local street does not result in waiver of the issue. Hannah v. City of Eugene, 35 Or LUBA 1 (1998) (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Requiring that a street be connected to allow through traffic does not inevitably mean the street will cease to function as a local street, where there are identified measures that can be used to discourage non-local traffic. Hannah v. City of Eugene, 35 Or LUBA 1 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A city's findings are adequate to demonstrate compliance with a criterion requiring that development approval not result in "unreasonable congestion," where the findings acknowledge that the required street connectivity will change the nature of the traffic on the street but also discuss "traffic calming measures" that are incorporated into the design. Hannah v. City of Eugene, 35 Or LUBA 1 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. An applicant does not carry his burden to demonstrate compliance with transportation-related criteria, where the findings supporting denial identify a flaw in the applicant's evidence resulting from conducting a traffic study in the summer when school trips would not be reflected in the study. Lee v. City of Oregon City, 34 Or LUBA 691 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Petitioner's allegations that decreases in potential housing density could affect transportation facilities are insufficient to show the challenged decision will "significantly affect a transportation facility," within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060(1), where petitioner fails to identify any allegedly affected transportation facilities. Barnard Perkins Corp. v. City of Rivergrove, 34 Or LUBA 660 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The Transportation Planning Rule requirements set forth at OAR 660-012-0045(2) by their terms apply directly to local codes, not local comprehensive plans. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 608 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Under OAR 660-012-0045(2) local codes must require compliance with ODOT access standards or require that an applicant obtain an access permit from ODOT as a condition of approval. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 608 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The OAR 660-012-0045(2)(g) requirement that local governments adopt "regulations assuring that amendments to land use designations, densities, and design standards are consistent with the functions, capacities and levels of service of facilities identified in the TSP" is not satisfied by a plan provision that fails to refer to the Transportation Planning Rule by name or number and that imposes a different threshold for application of the rule standard than is required by the rule. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 608 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The requirement of OAR 660-012-0015(2)(a) that regional TSPs be consistent with the state TSP is violated by a comprehensive plan amendment that purports to require that ODOT provide access under circumstances that are not consistent with ODOT policies. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 608 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The term "rural community" as used in OAR 660-012-0045(3) of the Transportation Planning Rule is broader than the term "rural community" as defined in OAR 660-022-0010(7) of the Unincorporated Communities rules. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 608 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. An amendment to a future streets plan does not significantly affect a transportation facility, and the TPR does not apply, where the record demonstrates that the decision does not change a functional classification or any standards relating to functional classifications and traffic levels would not be increased. Fogarty v. City of Gresham, 34 Or LUBA 309 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Plan map and zoning amendments that significantly affect a transportation facility must be consistent with the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR). Therefore findings must address Goal 12 and the TPR as they apply to all access to the subject property unless the local government restricts access by imposing conditions of approval. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. When a city finds a proposed development will not result in levels of travel or access inconsistent with the existing functional classification, the development does not "significantly affect a transportation facility" under OAR 660-12-060(2)(c), and OAR 660-12-060(1) does not apply. Melton v. City of Cottage Grove, 30 Or LUBA 331 (1996).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. When, prior to an appeal to LUBA, a city satisfies the coordination requirement of OAR 660-12-060(3) by consulting with the county, and the development proposal does not change between LUBA's remand order and a second appeal, the city is not required to consult with the county again during the proceedings on remand. Melton v. City of Cottage Grove, 30 Or LUBA 331 (1996).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where evidence identified in the city's brief clearly supports a finding that a proposed development will not significantly affect a transportation facility, LUBA will affirm that part of the city's decision under ORS 197.835(9), notwithstanding the city's failure to make the required finding. Marcott Holdings, Inc. v. City of Tigard, 30 Or LUBA 101 (1995).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where petitioners claim a local government decision authorizing improvements to a public right-of-way violates the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR), but fail to establish how the TPR applies to the challenged decision or how the proposed road improvements will frustrate compliance with the TPR, LUBA will deny petitioners' assignment of error. Leathers v. Washington County, 29 Or LUBA 343 (1995).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-12-045(4)(b) establishes minimum standards for preferential access to transit that local government regulations must meet, not maximum limitations beyond which local government regulation is prohibited. Common Ground v. City of Gresham, 29 Or LUBA 164 (1995).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The requirements of OAR 660-12-045(4)(b)(B) and (C), for "clustering" buildings around transit stops and locating buildings "as close as possible" to transit stops, are not satisfied by requiring that buildings on designated transit streets abut sidewalks and that no more than 50 percent of the frontage on transit streets be occupied by auto parking and maneuvering areas. Common Ground v. City of Gresham, 29 Or LUBA 164 (1995).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Local government prohibitions against auto parking and maneuvering areas between a building and a transit street, and limitation of such areas to no more than 50 percent of the frontage along a transit street, are not inconsistent with or prohibited by OAR 660-12-045(4)(b). Common Ground v. City of Gresham, 29 Or LUBA 164 (1995).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The requirements of OAR 660-12-045(3)(b) for facilities providing safe and convenient pedestrian and bicycle access are minimum requirements. Nothing in OAR 660-12-045(3)(b) or any other provision of the TPR prohibits local government adoption of architectural standards "to provide street safety and a comfortable pedestrian environment," even if they are not required by the TPR. Common Ground v. City of Gresham, 29 Or LUBA 164 (1995).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. In adopting a quasi-judicial comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendment, a local government is obligated either to demonstrate compliance with the Transportation Planning Rule (TPR) or, alternatively, establish that the TPR does not apply. ONRC v. City of Seaside, 29 Or LUBA 39 (1995).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a comprehensive plan amendment adopts a map indicating a street may be considered to receive a "Green Street" classification in the future, and future application of the "Green Street" classification will itself require a plan amendment, petitioners' challenge to the plan amendment based on Goal 12 and the Transportation Planning Rule is premature. Opus Development Corp. v. City of Eugene, 28 Or LUBA 670 (1995).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a comprehensive plan map amendment to allow a proposed concrete batch plant will result in all aggregate and concrete trucks entering the subject property via a road that provides the sole access to certain existing dwellings, Goal 12 requires the local government to demonstrate the amendment will result in use of the road being safe and adequate. Salem Golf Club v. City of Salem, 28 Or LUBA 561 (1995).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where a local government finds that a proposed road alignment is consistent with plan policies calling for a balanced transportation system designed to minimize energy impacts because it will shorten travel distance to a light rail station, that the facility will also shorten travel distance to a major arterial does not, of itself, mean the plan policies are violated. Friends of Cedar Mill v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 477 (1995).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Realigning a proposed minor arterial to run along an adjoining right-of-way does not "significantly affect a transportation facility" by changing "the functional classification of an existing or planned transportation facility," as those concepts are used in OAR 660-12-060(2). Friends of Cedar Mill v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 477 (1995).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where petitioner alleges a realigned minor arterial will in fact operate as a major arterial, but fails to challenge the local government's findings explaining why it believes the realigned roadway is properly classified as a minor arterial, petitioner provides no basis for reversal or remand. Friends of Cedar Mill v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 477 (1995).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Nothing in the Transportation Planning Rule authorizes local governments to exempt any type of retail, office or institutional buildings from the building orientation and location requirements of OAR 660-12-045(4)(b). Sensible Transportation v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 375 (1994).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The building orientation and location requirements of OAR 660-12-045(4)(b) apply to new buildings located near transit stops, regardless of whether such buildings are located on a transit street. Sensible Transportation v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 375 (1994).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The OAR 660-12-045(4)(b)(C) requirement that certain new buildings be located "as close as possible" to transit stops is not satisfied by code setback limitations that (1) allow a new building on a small lot fronting on a transit street to be situated 100 feet away from the transit street, or (2) require only that half of a new building on a large lot fronting on a transit street be located on the front half of such lot. Sensible Transportation v. Washington County, 28 Or LUBA 375 (1994).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. Where the deadlines established by OAR 660-12-055(1) and (2) for adoption of regional and local transportation system plans (TSPs) have not yet passed, and the local government has not yet adopted a TSP, the requirements of OAR 660-12-045(2) and (3) for regulations implementing TSPs are inapplicable to a decision amending the local code. Melton v. City of Cottage Grove, 28 Or LUBA 1 (1994).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. That an amendment to an acknowledged local code may result in decreasing the level of service at an interchange does not, of itself, mean the amendment "significantly affects a transportation facility" under OAR 660-12-060(2). Melton v. City of Cottage Grove, 28 Or LUBA 1 (1994).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. That the record shows a code amendment will affect a site that has direct access onto a particular road is a sufficient basis for requiring the local government's determination under OAR 660-12-060(2)(c), that the amendment does not allow land uses resulting in "levels of travel or access * * * inconsistent with the functional classification of a transportation facility," to include consideration of impacts on that road. Melton v. City of Cottage Grove, 28 Or LUBA 1 (1994).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. The coordination requirement of OAR 660-12-060(3) should be interpreted the same as the coordination provision in Goal 2, which requires the jurisdiction developing plan or land use regulation provisions (1) to exchange information with other affected governmental units; and (2) to consider and accommodate the needs of such governmental units as much as possible in formulating or revising the plan or regulations. Melton v. City of Cottage Grove, 28 Or LUBA 1 (1994).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-12-060(1) is applicable to comprehensive plan amendments which significantly affect a transportation facility. Compliance with this rule provision must be addressed when a UGB amendment is adopted; it cannot be deferred to future annexation decisions within the UGB expansion area. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. OAR 660-12-060(4) prohibits using the existence of transportation facilities as a basis for approving (1) exceptions to the requirements of OAR 660-12-065, adopted under OAR 660-12-070; or (2) exceptions to statewide planning goals, adopted under OAR 660-04-022 (reasons exceptions) or OAR 660-04-028 (committed exceptions). OAR 660-12-060(4) does not apply to an exception for a change to an established UGB, adopted under OAR 660-04-010(1)(c)(B). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

16. Goal 12 – Transportation/ Goal 12 Rule. A local government can show an amendment to its acknowledged comprehensive plan and zoning maps complies with Goal 12 (Transportation) by establishing either (1) there is a safe and adequate transportation system to serve development under the proposed map designations, or (2) development of the property under the proposed designations will not create greater or different transportation demands and impacts than development under the existing, acknowledged designations. ODOT v. Clackamas County, 27 Or LUBA 141 (1994).

17. Goal 13 – Energy Conservation. Arguments that a revised Transportation System Plan (TSP) does not provide for a more energy efficient transportation system, and fails to forecast or plan for an increase in bicycle modal share, fail to demonstrate a violation of Goal 13 since Goal 13 does not state requirements with respect to other land use provisions, even where those provisions have incidental impacts on energy use and conservation, and therefore does not require a maximization of alternative modes. Shaff v. City of Medford, 79 Or LUBA 317 (2019).

17. Goal 13 – Energy Conservation. The Goal 13 requirement for local governments to "maximize the conservation of all forms of energy" does not impose an affirmative obligation on local governments to promote the development of renewable energy, or provide a basis to conclude that there is a "demonstrated need" to meet a goal requirement, in order to satisfy the standards at OAR 660-004-0022(1)(a) for adopting a reasons exception in order to site a solar energy facility on agricultural land. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Jackson County, 76 Or LUBA 270 (2017).

17. Goal 13 – Energy Conservation. Goal 13 is mostly a planning goal, and includes few substantive requirements that could directly conflict with Oregon Highway Plan amendments that increase mobility standards for state highways. To the extent higher mobility standards encourage denser development that causes increased traffic congestion, that is not inconsistent with Goal 13. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

17. Goal 13 – Energy Conservation. Goal 13 is to "conserve energy," but Goal 13 does not require that comprehensive plans ensure a net decrease in energy use, or prohibit any plan amendment that would result in a net increase in energy use. Setniker v. ODOT, 66 Or LUBA 54 (2012).

17. Goal 13 – Energy Conservation. Goal 13 is not violated by a proposal for a 102-unit assisted living facility bordering an arterial street, with nearby mass transit and a clientele that will not be heavy users of automobiles, when there is nothing in the record to suggest the proposal will waste energy or otherwise affect the city's compliance with Goal 13. Hubenthal v. City of Woodburn, 39 Or LUBA 20 (2000).

17. Goal 13 – Energy Conservation. Goal 13 does not require that a local government maximize residential density or consider the energy consequences of different levels of residential development in amending its land use regulations. Barnard Perkins Corp. v. City of Rivergrove, 34 Or LUBA 660 (1998).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Goal 14 prohibits urban uses on rural lands. Where a county's text amendments to its comprehensive plan do not allow any urban uses on rural land, but merely expand the allowable locations in the county that could be the subject of an application to change the plan designation to rural industrial, and the text amendments require the applicant to demonstrate that the proposed use for which the rural industrial plan designation change is consistent with all statewide planning goals, including Goal 14, a petitioner's arguments that the amendments violate Goal 14 do not provide a basis for reversal or remand. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 79 Or LUBA 253 (2019).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. A petitioner's challenge to a county's amendments to its comprehensive plan that expand the allowable locations in the county that could be the subject of an application to change the plan designation to rural commercial and rural industrial, that argue that the county's adopted and acknowledged rural commercial and rural industrial zones impermissibly allow urban uses in contravention of Goal 14 are an impermissible collateral attack on an acknowledged land use regulation where no provisions of the county's code were amended by the challenged decision. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 79 Or LUBA 253 (2019).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. In Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 173 Or App 321, 21 P3d 1108 (2001), the Court of Appeals concluded that under Goal 14 (effective 10/04/00), Metro could identify a subregional (i.e., geographically localized) need for housing, but when considering alternatives to amending the UGB to meet that subregional housing need, Metro could not limit its consideration to lands within the subregion. That broader geographic consideration of alternatives applies both to alternative sites inside the UGB, and to alternative sites outside the UGB subject to the priorities set out in ORS 197.298 and the Goal 14 locational factors, if a UGB amendment is required to meet the identified need. In this way, Residents of Rosemont distinguishes between subregional need and subregional analyses of alternatives. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. In City of West Linn v. LCDC, 200 Or App 269, 113 P3d 935, rev den, 339 Or 609 (2005), and Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 173 Or App 321, 21 P3d 1108 (2001), the Court of Appeals clarified that pursuant to Goal 14 (effective 10/04/00), Metro can identify a subregional need for housing, and that the Department of Land and Conservation and Development's rules to that effect were not inconsistent with Goal 14. But the Court of Appeals held that the part of the rules that authorized Metro to limit its consideration of alternatives (both inside the UGB and outside the UGB) for satisfying that subregional housing need to lands within or near the subregion, was inconsistent with Goal 14. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. In City of West Linn v. LCDC, 200 Or App 269, 113 P3d 935, rev den, 339 Or 609 (2005), and Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 173 Or App 321, 21 P3d 1108 (2001), the Court of Appeals determined the subregional need which can be identified under Goal 14 (effective 10/04/00), is a subregional need for housing, as opposed to a subregional need for a specified number of acres for development of housing that must be located within that subregion. Accordingly, Metro may not assume that a subregional need for housing can only be satisfied by constructing housing on land that is physically located within that subregion. Rather, according to Goal 14, Metro may consider proximity in determining whether an alternative site is a suitable alternative, as opposed to simply eliminating alternative sites if they are not located in the subregion. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. It is one thing to say the alternative sites for meeting an identified short-term subregional need for jobs or shopping opportunities must be located within a specified "proximity" of the shoppers and potential employees that generate the identified need or that alternative sites for meeting that need must be within some stated "proximity" of necessary or supporting improvements. But it is quite another thing to say that the short-term, subregional need for jobs and shopping opportunities can only be satisfied on lands that are located within the subregion. The most obvious flaw in that latter reasoning is that for some of those subregional shoppers and potential employees near the boundaries of the subregion, lands in adjoining subregions will be closer (more proximate) than at least some of the more distant lands inside the subregion. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. A site suitability characteristic that property must be 22 acres in size to allow development of a "Lifestyle Center" is not appropriate under Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5), where the city fails to explain why a general subregional need for between 27 and 37.9 acres of land for commercial development must be satisfied by the "Lifestyle Center" proposed by the UGB amendment applicant on a single 22-acre site. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-004-0040, which provides standards consistent with Goal 14 for certain rural residential development in rural residential zones, does not purport to constitute a complete implementation of Goal 14 with respect to all residential development on rural lands. The rule's silence regarding some types of residential uses, for example, floating homes, does not allow the inference that such development is either consistent or inconsistent with Goal 14. Squier v. Multnomah County, 71 Or LUBA 98 (2015).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Because OAR 660-004-0040, which provides standards consistent with Goal 14 for certain rural residential development in rural residential zones, does not include standards for floating homes, ORS 197.646(1) does not oblige the county to adopt land use regulation amendments to implement the rule with respect to floating homes. Consequently, that the county's land use regulations governing floating homes do not include standards based on OAR 660-004-0040 does not mean that the county failed to implement the rule, or that the rule applies directly to land use decisions concerning floating homes, pursuant to ORS 197.646(3). Squier v. Multnomah County, 71 Or LUBA 98 (2015).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. The Oregon Supreme Court decision in 1000 Friends of Oregon v. LCDC (Curry Co.), 301 Or 447, 724 P2d 268 (1986), did not obligate local governments to apply Goal 14 as interpreted directly to land use decisions made under acknowledged land use regulations, although amendments to those regulations must be consistent with Goal 14 as interpreted by Curry Co. Where a county's regulations governing floating homes were adopted and acknowledged to comply with Goal 14 in 1982, and have not been amended since, those regulations remain acknowledged to comply with Goal 14, and thus Goal 14 would not apply directly to a decision to approve floating homes under that acknowledged ordinance. Squier v. Multnomah County, 71 Or LUBA 98 (2015).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Under Goal 14, OAR 660-024-0030(1) and 660-024-0040(1), urban growth boundary amendments must be consistent with the city's 20-year population projections, which in turn must be consistent with the county's population projection for the county and urban areas within the county. For purposes of urban growth boundary amendments, both the county's and the city's population projections must be "included in the comprehensive plan or in a document referenced by the plan." Hawksworth v. City of Roseburg, 64 Or LUBA 171 (2011).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Although it may be likely that an urban growth boundary that was adopted to include a 20-year supply of buildable land no longer has a 20-year supply of buildable land 30 years later, a city must first amend its comprehensive plan to include an updated population projection, before amending its urban growth boundary based on the updated population projections rather that the old population projections in its comprehensive plan. Hawksworth v. City of Roseburg, 64 Or LUBA 171 (2011).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Remand is required where a light rail project that is located partially outside the UGB is approved under a special siting statute that only authorizes light rail projects that are located inside the UGB. Weber Coastal Bells v. Metro, 64 Or LUBA 221 (2011).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Where the OAR 660-008-0005(6) definition of "redevelopable land" specifically encompasses land on which the local government determines there is a "strong likelihood" that the lots will be redeveloped more intensively, a local government does not err in excluding land from its analysis of "redevelopable land" where it concludes that there is not a strong likelihood that redevelopment will occur on any lands within the city due to the arrangement of existing development and market factors. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 211 (2010).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. In approving a Goal 14 exception to allow urban development on rural land, OAR 660-014-0040(3)(c) requires the local government to determine whether that urban development will detract from the ability of existing cities and service districts to provide services and whether continued resource management on surrounding lands is assured. While LUBA might be able to overlook a local government's failure to specifically address OAR 660-014-0040(3)(c) if the exception limited development on the site to the four houses the applicant requested, where it is possible that as many as 14 dwellings might be developed under the exception remand is required. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 61 Or LUBA 240 (2010).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. DLCD's Goal 14 rule was amended in 2007 to require that the coordinated population projections required by ORS 195.025 and 195.036 must be "developed using commonly accepted practices and standards for population forecasting" and "based on current, reliable and objective sources and verifiable factual information, such as the most recent long-range forecast for the county published by the Oregon Office of Economic Analysis (OEA). OAR 660-024-0030. A county may not simply rely on county population projections that were found to be valid when they were adopted in 1998 to adopt updated population projections in 2009. While the county is not required to use the OEA long range forecast, it must conduct a review of its 1998 assumptions to determine whether they remain reliable in light of actual population growth and the OEA forecast. Meyer v. Douglas County, 61 Or LUBA 412 (2010).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. DLCD's Goal 14 rule was amended in 2007 to require that the coordinated population projections required by ORS 195.025 and 195.036 must be "developed using commonly accepted practices and standards for population forecasting" and "based on current, reliable and objective sources and verifiable factual information, such as the most recent long-range forecast for the county published by the Oregon Office of Economic Analysis (OEA)." OAR 660-024-0030. If in adopting a coordinated population projection under ORS 195.025 and 195.036 a county relies on a city's undocumented preference for a particular growth rate, the county forecast is not supported by an adequate factual base. Meyer v. Douglas County, 61 Or LUBA 412 (2010).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. DLCD's Goal 14 rule was amended in 2007 to require that the coordinated population projections required by ORS 195.025 and 195.036 must be "developed using commonly accepted practices and standards for population forecasting" and "based on current, reliable and objective sources and verifiable factual information, such as the most recent long-range forecast for the county published by the Oregon Office of Economic Analysis (OEA)." OAR 660-024-0030. A county decision to apply its assumed population growth rate for unincorporated areas of the county to the unincorporated areas of the county located inside urban growth boundaries is not supported by an adequate factual base where there is no explanation for why that assumption is reasonable for urban areas around cities that project a much lower population growth rate. Meyer v. Douglas County, 61 Or LUBA 412 (2010).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Where it is not clear from the record whether a county-adopted 20-year population forecast is the forecast for an urban area or merely for a city within the county, a city is not entitled to rely on the safe harbor provision at ORS 195.034(1) to extend the county's current forecast to a 20-year period using the same growth trend as assumed by the county in its adopted population forecast. Sane Orderly Development v. City of Roseburg, 59 Or LUBA 356 (2009).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. A Metro regional plan provision that requires the Metro Chief Operating Office to conform Metro's maps to the comprehensive plan mapping that local governments adopt after Metro adds land to the urban growth boundary suggests that local governments have some authority to deviate from Metro's map designations for the property that is added to the urban growth boundary when they first applies their comprehensive plan map to that property. Graser-Lindsey v. City of Oregon City, 59 Or LUBA 388 (2009).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. It is premature to argue that a legislative decision that adopts a new Airport Related zoning district violates a city's obligation to protect industrial and commercial land from incompatible uses under Statewide Planning Goal 9 and violates Goals 10 and 14 by impermissibly converting industrially zoned land, for which there is a shortage, to a residential airpark use, which is not needed under Goal 10. Such arguments must await a city decision that actually applies the new Airport Related zoning district to some property in the city. Port of St. Helens v. City of Scappoose, 58 Or LUBA 122 (2008).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Where it is not clear whether a county believes a prior county decision delineated the boundaries of a resort unincorporated community, but petitioners do not allege that the appealed county decision that adopts a large scale map that precisely delineated the resort unincorporated community boundaries violates the OAR 660-022-0020 standards that govern such delineations, petitioners provide no basis for reversal or remand. Friends of the Metolius v. Jefferson County, 58 Or LUBA 284 (2009).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Under the Unincorporated Community Rule, the boundaries of unincorporated communities must be shown on the county's comprehensive plan map "at a scale sufficient to determine accurately which properties are included." OAR 660-022-0020(2). Where a comprehensive plan is amended to designate an area as an unincorporated community but that area is not shown on the comprehensive plan at the scale required by OAR 660-022-0020(2), remand is required. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Under OAR 660-022-0030(5), hotels and motels in unincorporated communities must be served by a community sewer system. Where the zoning applied to an unincorporated community allows lodges without specifying whether the lodge must be connected to a community sewer system, and the zoning ordinance term "lodges" could overlap with the rule terms "hotels and motels," an ambiguity and potential inconsistency with the rule is created. But since the zoning ordinance was adopted to implement the unincorporated community rule, any lodge that is also a hotel or motel as the rule uses those terms would have to be connected to a community sewer system. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. A petitioner who alleges in a LUBA appeal that a rezoning of rural land is defective because it allows conversion of rural land to urban uses without an adequate Goal 14 justification or exception is obligated to develop his or her argument to that effect. Mere speculation that the uses allowed in the new zone are so uncertain or could be approved in a manner in the future that would result in such improper conversion of rural land to urban uses is not sufficient. Wood v. Crook County, 55 Or LUBA 165 (2007).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. A county cannot lawfully include resource lands within an urban unincorporated community unless that land remains planned and zoned for resource uses or the county takes an exception to Goals 3 and 4. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 50 Or LUBA 444 (2005).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. That a comprehensive plan identifies only a portion rather than the entirety of the geographic extent of a proposed unincorporated community as a "rural community," "service center," "rural center," "resort community" or similar term is not fatal, for purposes of OAR 660-022-0010(10)(b). As long as the proposed community indeed qualifies as an "unincorporated community" under OAR 660-022-0010(10), the geographic extent of the proposed community is determined under OAR 660-022-0020, which allows certain areas outside the community to be included within the community. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Tillamook County, 48 Or LUBA 423 (2005).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-022-0010(10)(b) embodies a policy choice that the universe of "unincorporated communities" is limited to settlements or communities of some kind that the local government has explicitly recognized in its comprehensive plan prior to October 28, 1994, or that are listed in the Department of Land Conservation and Development (DLCD) survey. If not listed in the DLCD survey, the comprehensive plan must describe the proposed community either by one of the terms listed in the rule or a similar term that suggests the county views the area as a community of some kind. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Tillamook County, 48 Or LUBA 423 (2005).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. A description of an industrial park in a comprehensive plan as an "industrial park" is not a "similar term" to "service center," for purposes of establishing a new unincorporated community under OAR 660-022-0010, where nothing in the comprehensive plan suggests that the county viewed the industrial park as a community of some kind, and in adopting the comprehensive plan the county failed to list or discuss the industrial park in the plan element that addresses unincorporated communities. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Tillamook County, 48 Or LUBA 423 (2005).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. OAR 660-022-0010(8) defines a rural service center in part based on what uses on the property existed or predated October 28, 1994. Where the county fails to establish what current uses of the property existed on or predated October 28, 1994, it cannot determine whether the proposed community qualifies as a rural service center under the rule. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Tillamook County, 48 Or LUBA 423 (2005).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. The requirement in OAR 660-022-0010(8) that a rural service center consist "primarily of commercial or industrial uses providing goods and services to the surrounding rural area or persons traveling through the area" means that a majority of the subject property must consist of qualifying commercial and industrial uses, and not other uses. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Tillamook County, 48 Or LUBA 423 (2005).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Rural industrial uses that manufacture products and ship them to urban areas for retail sale do not provide "goods and services to the surrounding rural area or to persons traveling through the area," for purposes of qualifying a community as a "rural service center" under OAR 660-022-0010(8). Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Tillamook County, 48 Or LUBA 423 (2005).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. A county's approval of a five-acre lot subdivision inside the UGB with a condition requiring that the applicant record CC&Rs that effectively prohibit further subdivision of those five-acre lots violates ORS 197.752. Nez Perce Tribe v. Wallowa County, 47 Or LUBA 419 (2004).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. The Court of Appeals has held that the "unneeded but committed" exception, that allows the inclusion of lands within an urban growth boundary (UGB) without demonstrating a "need" for additional land, is a valid method of amending a UGB, without regard to the Goal 14 "need" factors. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Neither Goal 10 nor Goal 14 require a finding of "demonstrated need" for additional residential land within the meaning of Goal 2, Part II or Goal 14, factors 1 and 2 before the city may amend its comprehensive plan map to allow property to be zoned for residential rather than industrial uses. Holcombe v. City of Florence, 45 Or LUBA 59 (2003).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Nothing in either Goal 9 or Goal 14 requires a city to take into account the supply and demand for commercial and industrial lands in portions of the regional UGB outside the city's planning jurisdiction in deciding whether to rezone industrial lands within the city to allow commercial uses. Friends of Marion County v. City of Keizer, 45 Or LUBA 236 (2003).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. A use permitted by statute on EFU land is not subject to the additional requirement that the use be rural or that an exception to Goal 14 be taken, even if the use is urban in nature. Where such a use is expressly permitted on EFU land, it is also implicitly permitted by statute on rural land zoned other than EFU. Stallkamp v. City of King City, 43 Or LUBA 333 (2002).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Because a public park is permitted by statute on EFU land without requiring compliance with Goal 14 or an exception to that goal, it is also permitted on rural land zoned other than EFU without requiring compliance with Goal 14 or an exception, even if the park would primarily serve urban residents. Stallkamp v. City of King City, 43 Or LUBA 333 (2002).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. A residential subdivision that includes 136 lots on 680 acres does not undermine the integrity of a UGB, in violation of Goal 14, where the subdivision is located two and one-half miles from the UGB, the lots in the subdivision will not be served by public water or sewer systems and there is evidence that the potential buyers of the proposed lots have different characteristics than potential buyers of lots within the UGB. DLCD v. Klamath County, 42 Or LUBA 368 (2002).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. The use of a state highway by commuters from a 136-lot subdivision, and the enrollment of children from that subdivision in city schools, do not impermissibly undermine the effectiveness of a UGB in contravention of Goal 14, where there is evidence that the highway and the school system will not be substantially impacted by the additional trips or by the number of students generated by the subdivision. DLCD v. Klamath County, 42 Or LUBA 368 (2002).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Nothing in Goal 14 expressly requires a county to analyze the potential impact of a proposed rezoning from non-resource to rural residential on similar property in the area or the cumulative impact of the potential rezonings and development in the area surrounding a UGB. DLCD v. Klamath County, 42 Or LUBA 368 (2002).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. The housing needs projection required by the Goal 10 rule is the same housing needs analysis that is required by ORS 197.296(3) for conducting a review of an urban growth boundary. Because the Goal 10 rule requires that the housing needs projection must be "consistent with Goal 14 requirements," the housing needs analysis under ORS 197.296(3) must be consistent with Goal 14 requirements. DLCD v. City of McMinnville, 41 Or LUBA 210 (2001).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. LCDC's choice to adopt rules that require the housing needs analysis required by ORS 197.296(3) to be "consistent with Goal 14 requirements" is essentially a choice to require that, where the analysis identifies a significant deficit in the supply of buildable land within the UGB, the city must complete the statutory process at ORS 197.296(4) through (7) and adopt one or more of the actions described in the statute to remedy the identified deficit. Because the statute and rule prescribe an iterative process highly integrated with Goal 14, the city cannot achieve finality with respect to the housing needs analysis under ORS 197.296(3) without also taking action under ORS 197.296(4) through (7). DLCD v. City of McMinnville, 41 Or LUBA 210 (2001).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. LCDC's 1985 acknowledgement of a county's rural residential zone has the legal effect of establishing that the rural residential zoning district may be applied consistent with Goal 14 to rural lands outside a UGB. However, the 1985 acknowledgment does not have the legal effect of establishing that all future applications of the zoning district to particular properties, no matter what the circumstances, will necessarily comply with Goal 14. DLCD v. Klamath County, 40 Or LUBA 221 (2001).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. A finding that Goal 14 is satisfied because the provision of community sewer or water systems would be economically infeasible does not establish that such systems will not be constructed, where it is possible that an application for clustered residential development may make such community services economically feasible and the county did not adopt conditions of approval or other mechanisms to prohibit the establishment of community sewer or water systems. DLCD v. Klamath County, 40 Or LUBA 22 (2001).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Where a local government decision does not incorporate a new city but erroneously applies LCDC's rules concerning incorporation of new cities in the course of taking an exception to Goal 14, the error is harmless and provides no basis for reversal or remand. James v. Josephine County, 35 Or LUBA 493 (1999).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. A proposal to redesignate urban land within city limits to allow for other urban uses does not implicate Goal 14's requirements regarding conversion of urbanizable land to urban uses. Citizens for Florence v. City of Florence, 35 Or LUBA 255 (1998).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. Goal 14 does not apply to property within a city's limits, and therefore a city's conclusory finding of compliance with Goal 14 is harmless error. Larvik v. City of La Grande, 34 Or LUBA 467 (1998).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. The term "public facilities," as it is used in Goal 14, includes transportation facilities. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

18.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Generally. ORS 197.175(2), Goals 11 and 14 and OAR Chapter 660, Division 11 provide authority for a city and county to adopt a comprehensive plan policy requiring that owners of unincorporated property within an urban growth boundary sign consents to annexation in order to receive sewer service. Bear Creek Valley San. Auth. v. City of Medford, 27 Or LUBA 328 (1994).

18.2 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Establishment of UGB. Under Goal 14, OAR 660-024-0030(1) and OAR 660-024-0040(1), urban growth boundary amendments must be consistent with the city's 20-year population projections, which in turn must be consistent with the county's population projection for the county and urban areas within the county. For purposes of urban growth boundary amendments, both the county's and the city's population projections must be "included in the comprehensive plan or in a document referenced by the plan." Hawksworth v. City of Roseburg, 64 Or LUBA 171 (2011).

18.2 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Establishment of UGB. Although it may be likely that an urban growth boundary that was adopted to include a 20-year supply of buildable land no longer has a 20-year supply of buildable land 30 years later, a city must first amend its comprehensive plan to include an updated population projection, before amending its urban growth boundary based on the updated population projections rather that the old population projections in its comprehensive plan. Hawksworth v. City of Roseburg, 64 Or LUBA 171 (2011).

18.2 Goal 14 - Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule - Establishment of UGB. A comprehensive plan policy governing "establish[ment] and change" of an urban growth boundary is not applicable to a local government decision amending the plan and zoning map designations of property that is entirely within the urban growth boundary. Roloff v. City of Milton-Freewater, 27 Or LUBA 256 (1994).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. In order to add land to a UGB, there must be a demonstrated need for land under the first Goal 14 need factor. Goal 14 prohibits a city from amending its UGB if the UGB has adequate capacity to satisfy the city's urban land needs for the next 20 years, and a city decision that approves a UGB amendment where the undisputed evidence in the record was that the city's UGB has adequate capacity to satisfy the city's urban land needs for the next 20 years must be reversed as prohibited by law. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 80 Or LUBA 180 (2019).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Pursuant to OAR 660-032-0040(1)(b), for purposes of projecting land need during the interim period before Portland State University Population Research Center (PRC) forecasts are available, a local government must use a population forecast that was "acknowledged prior to the effective date of" OAR 660-032-0040—March 25, 2015. Because OAR 660-032-0040(1)(b) took effect March 25, 2015, a local government may not use a February 2016 population forecast because that forecast was not acknowledged prior to March 25, 2015. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. OAR 660-024-0050(6) requires that when land is added to an urban growth boundary (UGB), the local government "must assign appropriate urban plan designations to the added land, consistent with the need determination and the requirements of section (7) of this rule, if applicable." OAR 660-024-0050(7) provides lands included with a UGB for a public facility "must be planned and zoned for the intended use and must remain planned and zoned for that use unless the city removes the land from the UGB." A city decision to retain the land's existing Exclusive Farm Use zoning until the land is annexed into the city is inconsistent with the OAR 660-024-0050(7) requirement to adopt concurrent plan and zone re-designation "for [that] intended use." Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where a petitioner argues a Geographic Information System map in the record suggests that a portion of the Willamette River Greenway included in a city's Goal 15 exception is located outside the city limits, but within county limits, and therefore the county is also required to join in or approve its own Goal 15 exception, petitioner fails to allege a basis for remand or reversal because as a matter of law the official Willamette River Greenway overlay zone boundary is the boundary mapped by the Oregon Department of Transportation, which confirms the greenway overlay zone is entirely within city limits. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. In Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 173 Or App 321, 21 P3d 1108 (2001), the Court of Appeals concluded that under Goal 14 (effective 10/04/00), Metro could identify a subregional (i.e., geographically localized) need for housing, but when considering alternatives to amending the UGB to meet that subregional housing need, Metro could not limit its consideration to lands within the subregion. That broader geographic consideration of alternatives applies both to alternative sites inside the UGB, and to alternative sites outside the UGB subject to the priorities set out in ORS 197.298 and the Goal 14 locational factors, if a UGB amendment is required to meet the identified need. In this way, Residents of Rosemont distinguishes between subregional need and subregional analyses of alternatives. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. In City of West Linn v. LCDC, 200 Or App 269, 113 P3d 935, rev den, 339 Or 609 (2005), and Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 173 Or App 321, 21 P3d 1108 (2001), the Court of Appeals clarified that pursuant to Goal 14 (effective 10/04/00), Metro can identify a subregional need for housing, and that the Department of Land and Conservation and Development's rules to that effect were not inconsistent with Goal 14. But the Court of Appeals held that the part of the rules that authorized Metro to limit its consideration of alternatives (both inside the UGB and outside the UGB) for satisfying that subregional housing need to lands within or near the subregion, was inconsistent with Goal 14. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. In City of West Linn v. LCDC, 200 Or App 269, 113 P3d 935, rev den, 339 Or 609 (2005), and Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 173 Or App 321, 21 P3d 1108 (2001), the Court of Appeals determined the subregional need which can be identified under Goal 14 (effective 10/04/00), is a subregional need for housing, as opposed to a subregional need for a specified number of acres for development of housing that must be located within that subregion. Accordingly, Metro may not assume that a subregional need for housing can only be satisfied by constructing housing on land that is physically located within that subregion. Rather, according to Goal 14, Metro may consider proximity in determining whether an alternative site is a suitable alternative, as opposed to simply eliminating alternative sites if they are not located in the subregion. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A local government complies with Goal 14 (effective 04/28/06), and OAR 661-024-0050(4) (effective 04/16/09), where it first demonstrates that the need cannot reasonably be accommodated on land already inside the UGB. Only if land within the UGB cannot reasonably accommodate the identified need would the local government proceed to consider sites outside the UGB to satisfy the identified need. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5) allow local governments to specify "size, topography or proximity" as site suitability characteristics and to limit consideration of alternative sites to land that has the specified characteristics. But OAR 660-024-0060(5) does not provide local governments with authority to geographically limit the scope of the required alternatives analysis to "subregions," a practice that was invalidated by Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 173 Or App 321, 21 P3d 1108 (2001), and City of West Linn v. LCDC, 200 Or App 269, 113 P3d 935, rev den, 339 Or 609 (2005). DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. It is one thing to say the alternative sites for meeting an identified short-term subregional need for jobs or shopping opportunities must be located within a specified "proximity" of the shoppers and potential employees that generate the identified need or that alternative sites for meeting that need must be within some stated "proximity" of necessary or supporting improvements. But it is quite another thing to say that the short-term, subregional need for jobs and shopping opportunities can only be satisfied on lands that are located within the subregion. The most obvious flaw in that latter reasoning is that for some of those subregional shoppers and potential employees near the boundaries of the subregion, lands in adjoining subregions will be closer (more proximate) than at least some of the more distant lands inside the subregion. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A site suitability characteristic that property must be 22 acres in size to allow development of a "Lifestyle Center" is not appropriate under Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5), where the city fails to explain why a general subregional need for between 27 and 37.9 acres of land for commercial development must be satisfied by the "Lifestyle Center" proposed by the UGB amendment applicant on a single 22-acre site. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5) do not permit use of a site suitability characteristic to reject alternative sites if those sites cannot be developed at a cost that is commensurate with the cost of developing a Lifestyle Center on a site owned by the UGB amendment applicant or simply because those alternative sites face development constraints. The correct inquiry is whether alternative sites "cannot reasonably * * * accommodate[]" the identified need. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Whether property is "available for purchase" is not a valid site suitability characteristic to be used to eliminate alternative sites that are already within the Urban Growth Boundary (UGB) from consideration, when determining whether a UGB amendment is necessary to add land to the UGB. Requiring sites to be currently available for purchase sets too low a threshold, impermissibly narrows the statutory, goal and rule alternatives analysis, and is not authorized pursuant to Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5). DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A city improperly rejected alternative sites already within the Urban Growth Boundary (UGB) pursuant to the Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5) alternatives analysis for determining whether a UGB amendment is necessary, when it rejected some sites because they were not already zoned commercial but the site the city ultimately selected was also not currently zoned commercial. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Although OAR 660-024-0060(5) grants authority to local governments to consider "proximity" as a required alternative site characteristic when considering alternative sites under Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5) for a potential amendment to the Urban Growth Boundary (UGB), a city may not divide the city into four subregions and eliminate any requirement to consider alternative sites inside or outside the UGB for meeting identified subregional needs simply because those alternative sites are not located within the subregion. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. LUBA will not adopt a categorical rule that a lack of 20-year need within a city's Urban Growth Boundary (UGB) under Goal 14, need factor 1 precludes a UGB amendment to correct a short-term subregional need. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Under ORS 197.298(3), lower priority land can be included in the UGB instead of higher priority land, where the higher priority land "is found to be inadequate to accommodate the amount of land" needed based on any of three reasons. Those three reasons are: (1) "specific types of identified land needs cannot be reasonably accommodated on higher priority lands," (2) "[f]uture urban services could not reasonably be provided to higher priority land due to topographical or other physical constraints," or (3) "[m]aximum efficiencies of land uses within a proposed [UGB] requires inclusion of lower priority land in order to include or provide services to higher priority land." Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. In 1000 Friends of Oregon v. LCDC, 244 Or App 239, 259 P3d 1021 (2011) (McMinnville), the Court of Appeals went through a lengthy analysis of the interaction between ORS 197.298 and Goal 14 and explained that under ORS 197.298 and Goal 14, UGB amendments require a three-step process. Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Under ORS 197.298 the exception lands that are high priority lands for UGB amendments must be "adjacent" to a UGB. But given the ORS 660-024-0060(4) definition of "adjacent lands" which includes "land within the vicinity of the UGB that has a reasonable potential to satisfy the identified need deficiency," a county errs by ruling out high priority exception lands simply because they are separated by short distances from the UGB or other adjacent exception lands. Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Absent an identified need for residential land with particular parcel sizes, a county may not exclude exception lands as inadequate to meet identified urban land needs simply because they are parcelized. Parcel size is one of the factors that can be relied on to justify an irrevocably committed exception in the first place under 660-004-0028(6)(c). Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Excluding candidate exception lands based on incompatibility between existing agricultural operations on nearby lands and the proposed residential development of lands to be added to the UGB must identify those agricultural practices and explain why any incompatibility justifies deviating from the ORS 197.298(1) priority scheme. Where all candidate lands for UGB expansion adjoin farm lands, there will be some level of conflict no matter which lands are selected. Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. It would be appropriate under Step 3 of 1000 Friends of Oregon v. LCDC, 244 Or App 239, 259 P3d 1021 (2011) (McMinnville), to apply comprehensive plan urban form policies to select among the available and suitable exception lands to add to the UGB. But it is not appropriate to apply comprehensive plan urban form policies under Step 2 of McMinnville to rule out exception lands as inadequate. Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. It is possible that circumstances on higher priority irrevocably committed lands could pose such challenges to development of multi-family housing that a local government could find and justify a decision that multi-family housing cannot "be reasonably accommodated" on such exception lands, within the meaning of ORS 197.298(3)(a). But generalized concerns about parcelization of such irrevocably committed lands complicating site acquisition or property owner opposition to multi-family housing fall far short of making the demonstration required under ORS 197.298(3)(a) that "specific types of identified land needs cannot be reasonably accommodated on higher priority lands." Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. The OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) safe harbor permits local government to "estimate that the current number of jobs in the urban area" will grow at a rate based on "the most recent forecast published by the Oregon Employment Department." A county errs by amending its UGB in 2015, based on OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a), but using the pre-2008 recession number of jobs rather than the 2015 number of jobs. Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. The OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) safe harbor does not preclude taking into account additional demand for employment land that may be generated by regional forces that may have little or nothing to do with a city's population growth. The Goal 9 rule, OAR 660-009-0015 (1) and (2), expressly permits such considerations. Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Petitioner has the burden of demonstrating error in the decision on appeal. Where LUBA cannot understand either petitioner's or respondent's arguments on a subassignment of error, LUBA will deny the subassignment of error. Land Watch of Lane County v. Lane County, 74 Or LUBA 76 (2016).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Under Goal 14, OAR 660-024-0030(1) and 660-024-0040(1), urban growth boundary amendments must be consistent with the city's 20-year population projections, which in turn must be consistent with the county's population projection for the county and urban areas within the county. For purposes of urban growth boundary amendments, both the county's and the city's population projections must be "included in the comprehensive plan or in a document referenced by the plan." Hawksworth v. City of Roseburg, 64 Or LUBA 171 (2011).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Although it may be likely that an urban growth boundary that was adopted to include a 20-year supply of buildable land no longer has a 20-year supply of buildable land 30 years later, a city must first amend its comprehensive plan to include an updated population projection, before amending its urban growth boundary based on the updated population projections rather that the old population projections in its comprehensive plan. Hawksworth v. City of Roseburg, 64 Or LUBA 171 (2011).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. The safe harbor established by OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) is only available to local governments when addressing the requirements of Goal 9, OAR chapter 660, division 9, Goal 14 and, if applicable, ORS 197.296, when determining its employment needs for purposes of a UGB amendment under OAR chapter 660, division 24. As OAR chapter 660, division 24 is now written, the OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) safe harbor is simply not available for decisions that adopt or amend economic opportunities analyses, without also amending a UGB. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 5 (2010).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. In relying on the OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) safe harbor in amending an economic opportunities analysis to estimate employment growth, the Oregon Employment Department job growth projection rate authorized by OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a)(A) and the coordinated population forecast projection rate authorized by OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a)(B) are mutually exclusive alternatives. A local government must select one or the other and may not switch back and forth between those two projection methodologies in projecting employment growth, if the local government is seeking the protection of the OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) safe harbor. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 5 (2010).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where a city's stated rationale for its 20-year employment projections in its economic opportunities analysis is the OAR 660-024-0040(9)(a) safe harbor, the city may not adopt an alternative legal rationale for the 20-year employment projections for the first time in its brief at LUBA. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 5 (2010).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. OAR 660-024-0040(4) requires a city that is amending its urban growth boundary to use "the adopted 20-year coordinated population forecast for the urban area" that has been adopted by the county in which the city is located according to the procedures set out in ORS 195.025 and 195.036. Friends of Yamhill County v. City of Newberg, 62 Or LUBA 211 (2010).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. DLCD's Goal 14 rule was amended in 2007 to require that the coordinated population projections required by ORS 195.025 and 195.036 must be "developed using commonly accepted practices and standards for population forecasting" and "based on current, reliable and objective sources and verifiable factual information, such as the most recent long-range forecast for the county published by the Oregon Office of Economic Analysis (OEA). OAR 660-024-0030. A county may not simply rely on county population projections that were found to be valid when they were adopted in 1998 to adopt updated population projections in 2009. While the county is not required to use the OEA long range forecast, it must conduct a review of its 1998 assumptions to determine whether they remain reliable in light of actual population growth and the OEA forecast. Meyer v. Douglas County, 61 Or LUBA 412 (2010).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. DLCD's Goal 14 rule was amended in 2007 to require that the coordinated population projections required by ORS 195.025 and 195.036 must be "developed using commonly accepted practices and standards for population forecasting" and "based on current, reliable and objective sources and verifiable factual information, such as the most recent long-range forecast for the county published by the Oregon

Office of Economic Analysis (OEA)." OAR 660-024-0030. If in adopting a coordinated population projection under ORS 195.025 and 195.036 a county relies on a city's undocumented preference for a particular growth rate, the county forecast is not supported by an adequate factual base. Meyer v. Douglas County, 61 Or LUBA 412 (2010).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. DLCD's Goal 14 rule was amended in 2007 to require that the coordinated population projections required by ORS 195.025 and 195.036 must be "developed using commonly accepted practices and standards for population forecasting" and "based on current, reliable and objective sources and verifiable factual information, such as the most recent long-range forecast for the county published by the Oregon Office of Economic Analysis (OEA)." OAR 660-024-0030. A county decision to apply its assumed population growth rate for unincorporated areas of the county to the unincorporated areas of the county located inside urban growth boundaries is not supported by an adequate factual base where there is no explanation for why that assumption is reasonable for urban areas around cities that project a much lower population growth rate. Meyer v. Douglas County, 61 Or LUBA 412 (2010).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Under ORS 197.825(2)(c)(A), LUBA does not have initial jurisdiction to review a decision by a city with a population over 2,500 to amend its urban growth boundary to add more than 50 acres of land where that decision is submitted to the Department of Land Conservation and Development (DLCD) for review under ORS 197.626. LUBA may later acquire jurisdiction over certain matters addressed in the decision if the director of DLCD transfers those matters to LUBA. Swalley Irrigation District v. City of Bend, 59 Or LUBA 52 (2009).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where a county adopts an ordinance that amends its comprehensive plan map in conjunction with a city's urban growth boundary (UGB) amendment, and the county's ordinance is submitted in conjunction with the city's UGB amendment to the Department of Land Conservation and Development for review, under ORS 197.825(2)(c)(A), LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review the county's decision. Swalley Irrigation District v. Deschutes County, 59 Or LUBA 192 (2009).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where it is not clear from the record whether a county-adopted 20-year population forecast is the forecast for an urban area or merely for a city within the county, a city is not entitled to rely on the safe harbor provision at ORS 195.034(1) to extend the county's current forecast to a 20-year period using the same growth trend as assumed by the county in its adopted population forecast. Sane Orderly Development v. City of Roseburg, 59 Or LUBA 356 (2009).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A Metro regional plan provision that requires the Metro Chief Operating Office to conform Metro's maps to the comprehensive plan mapping that local governments adopt after Metro adds land to the urban growth boundary suggests that local governments have some authority to deviate from Metro's map designations for the property that is added to the urban growth boundary when they first applies their comprehensive plan map to that property. Graser-Lindsey v. City of Oregon City, 59 Or LUBA 388 (2009).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A Metro decision to amend the urban growth boundary to include 308 acres for Industrial development that was based on an assumption that only 120 acres of the 308 acres would be developed for Industrial use likely would provide a basis for the local government to plan all but 120 acres of the 308 acres for non-industrial uses. But where the 120 acres the local government designates for industrial uses include acres that were already within the UGB, the local government's comprehensive plan mapping is inconsistent with Metro's map designation for the 308 acres. Graser-Lindsey v. City of Oregon City, 59 Or LUBA 388 (2009).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where Metro has designated 308 acres for industrial development, a city decision to plan only 120 of those acres for industrial development based on a finding that Metro only intended 120 acres to be developed industrially must be remanded where the record does not include substantial evidence that Metro only intended 120 of the 308 acres to be developed industrially. Graser-Lindsey v. City of Oregon City, 59 Or LUBA 388 (2009).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A decision to add land to a UGB to attract a particular type of employer cannot be totally divorced from the population projections and job growth estimates required by OAR 660-024-0040(1) and (5). Friends of French Prairie v. Marion County, 58 Or LUBA 387 (2009).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. The locational factors of Goal 14 are not separate approval criteria and only require a comparison of alternate sites and consideration of which alternatives will be more compatible with farm and forest uses. The locational factors do not require that UGB expansion areas must in all cases be compatible with farm and forest uses. Friends of French Prairie v. Marion County, 58 Or LUBA 387 (2009).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where the record shows that a local government initiated a UGB amendment prior to April 5, 2007 by notifying DLCD of the proposed amendment, OAR 660-024-0000(3)(b) allows the local government to choose to not apply OAR Chapter 660, Division 24 to the UGB amendment. Sommer v. City of Grants Pass, 55 Or LUBA 400 (2007).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. OAR 660-024-0060(2) specifically allows UGB amendments that add less than the total amount of land that has been identified as needed, if that UGB amendment is adopted following a post-acknowledgement plan amendment process pursuant to ORS 197.610 to 197.625 outside of periodic review or a legislative review. Sommer v. City of Grants Pass, 55 Or LUBA 400 (2007).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where a local government finds that there is a lack of evidence that vacant buildable lands inside an urban growth boundary are available for development, the local government impermissibly avoids the burden placed on it by Goal 14 and the applicable administrative rules to demonstrate that additional land is needed inside the urban growth boundary for urban development. Hildenbrand v. City of Adair Village, 54 Or LUBA 734 (2007).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. It is appropriate for a local government to rely on assumptions included in the city's acknowledged comprehensive plan policies in computing the acreage needed for an urban growth boundary expansion. Hildenbrand v. City of Adair Village, 54 Or LUBA 734 (2007).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A local government does not err in allowing resource land to be included in an urban growth boundary where existing exception lands located adjacent to the urban growth boundary are inadequate due to the high cost of extending services to that exception land and the location of the exception lands across a major highway. Hildenbrand v. City of Adair Village, 54 Or LUBA 734 (2007).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. An urban growth boundary (UGB) amendment that purports to include within the UGB a 90-acre area that was included inside the UGB by an earlier ordinance does not add the 90-acre area to the UGB. In that circumstance, even if LUBA were to reverse the second ordinance, the 90 acres would still be located within the UGB. City of Sandy v. Metro, 48 Or LUBA 363 (2005).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. The Court of Appeals has held that the "unneeded but committed" exception, that allows the inclusion of lands within an urban growth boundary (UGB) without demonstrating a "need" for additional land, is a valid method of amending a UGB, without regard to the Goal 14 "need" factors. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. When a local government decides that lands are committed to urban uses under the "unneeded but committed" exception, it need not demonstrate that each of the five "locational factors" of Goal 14 is independently satisfied. The local government must demonstrate that, considering all of the "locational factors," the overall picture shows commitment. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where an urban growth boundary amendment is not based upon a showing of need, as under the "unneeded but committed" exception, the ORS 197.298 priority system for including land within the urban growth boundary does not apply to the decision. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. When a local government demonstrates that land may be included in an urban growth boundary under OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(i) by demonstrating compliance with the seven factors of Goal 14, the local government need not take exceptions to other goals individually. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Although OAR 661-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(i) nominally requires a local government to apply all seven of the Goal 14 factors, when the local government is proceeding under the "unneeded but committed" exception, the two "need" factors of Goal 14 need not be addressed. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. When a local government amends its urban growth boundary under the "unneeded but committed" exception it demonstrates that the land is committed to urban uses under the five "locational factors" of Goal 14. The local government need not adopt an irrevocably committed exception under OAR 660-004-0028. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Given that ORS 197.299 requires Metro to review the supply of residential land within the Metro UGB at least every five years, Metro is not obligated to provide a quasi-judicial UGB amendment process, in addition to a legislative process, to ensure that the Metro UGB as a whole maintains an adequate supply of residential land. Homebuilders Assoc. v. Metro, 42 Or LUBA 176 (2002).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. While the courts have held that Metro can consider housing need on a subregional basis, at least in some circumstances, no legislation compels Metro to do so, or prohibits Metro from relying exclusively on legislative reviews of the entire regional UGB to ensure compliance with Goals 10 and 14. Homebuilders Assoc. v. Metro, 42 Or LUBA 176 (2002).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. The speculative possibility that a subregional housing shortage will arise in the interim between the five-year UGB reviews required by ORS 197.299, and that Metro will decline to initiate a legislative proceeding to address that interim shortage, is an insufficient basis to establish that a quasi-judicial UGB amendment process is essential to ensure continued compliance with Goals 10 and 14. Homebuilders Assoc. v. Metro, 42 Or LUBA 176 (2002).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Petitioner's argument that land formerly within a city's urban growth boundary is necessarily subject to an exception to Goal 3 provides no basis for remand where it is not clear that the property was subject to a Goal 3 exception when included in the UGB and, even if it was, petitioner does not explain why removal of the property from the UGB would leave the property subject to a Goal 3 exception as a matter of law. Manning v. Marion County, 42 Or LUBA 56 (2002).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. An applicant has not demonstrated that a property is committed to urban uses in order to justify an expansion of a UGB to include the property where the property (1) is currently vacant; is not presently served by community water or sewer systems; and (3) is bordered on three side by parcels zoned EFU. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 41 Or LUBA 342 (2002).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A desire to include land within a UGB to provide a more logical dividing line between urban uses and rural uses and to bring parkland and transportation links within the city's general planning control is insufficient to demonstrate that there is a need to expand the UGB to address livability under Goal 14, factor 2. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 41 Or LUBA 342 (2002).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where a city has adopted a buildable lands inventory that concludes that there is a 98-acre surplus of land within the UGB that is available for park and residential needs, and a decision to expand a UGB to include land to be used for residential and park lands does not address why lands within the UGB are inadequate to accommodate parks and housing, the decision to expand the UGB fails to adequately address Goal 14, factor 4. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 41 Or LUBA 342 (2002).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A county finding that concludes that property containing Class II through IV soils may be included in the UGB because the present owner of a portion of the property does not intend to farm his parcel and other residential neighbors are opposed to farm activities that generate dust does not properly address the inquiry presented by Goal 14, factor 6. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 41 Or LUBA 342 (2002).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where a county finding concludes that a proposed UGB expansion is consistent with Goal 14, factor 7 because it will result in greater compatibility between residential and adjacent agricultural uses, but fails to consider and compare the compatibility of alternative sites with agricultural uses, the finding is inadequate to address Goal 14, factor 7. Friends of Linn County v. Linn County, 41 Or LUBA 342 (2002).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where the local government's Goal 14, factor 1 and 2 findings rely on two separate methods to determine the need for industrial land, a petitioner's challenge to the evidentiary sufficiency of one method does not provide a basis for remand, where petitioner fails to challenge the other method. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Sustainable findings under the seven Goal 14 factors state a legally sufficient "reason" justifying why the state policy embodied in Goal 14 should not apply, for purposes of adopting the exception necessary to include resource land within a UGB under OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(i). Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. To demonstrate reversible error in a local government's Goal 14 findings, a petitioner must demonstrate that the local government misapplied the pertinent factors or reached key conclusions that are not supported by substantial evidence, in a manner that shows legal error or insufficiency in the local government's ultimate conclusion that the subject property is the "best" land to include in the UGB, considering and balancing each factor. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Evidence that an alternative site zoned for residential use is needed to satisfy a shortfall in residential lands, and is adjacent to high-density residential development, is sufficient to demonstrate that the alternative site cannot "reasonably accommodate" a proposed need for industrial land, for purposes of OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(ii). Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Land owned by the federal government and not subject to local zoning and planning need not be considered as an alternative site to proposed industrial development on resource land, for purposes of OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(ii). The rule does not require the local government to consider the speculative possibility that federal land might someday be exchanged or otherwise become subject to the local government's zoning and planning jurisdiction. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Evidence that an alternative site (1) is needed to satisfy a city's identified need for future residential lands, is surrounded by residential uses, (3) does not have adequate access for industrial uses, and (4) is located far from existing industrial uses, is sufficient to demonstrate that the alternative site cannot "reasonably accommodate" an identified need for industrial land, for purposes of OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(ii). Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Findings that other resource lands that are potential candidates for inclusion in the UGB are better or more productive resource lands than the subject property, and therefore the environmental, social, energy, and economic (ESEE) consequences of urbanizing other resource lands would be more adverse than urbanizing the subject property, are adequate for purposes of OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(iii). Such findings need not specifically identify and discuss each ESEE consequence with respect to each alternative site, absent issues raised below that would require more detailed discussion. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. It is not inconsistent for findings to reject alternative sites under OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(ii) because proposed industrial uses would conflict with surrounding high-density residential uses, while concluding under OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(iv) that, as limited by conditions of approval, industrial use of the subject property is compatible with rural residential uses that border the subject property on one side. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. The requirement that a proposed development of resource land be compatible with adjacent uses under OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(iv) does not require that all conflicts or adverse impacts be eliminated. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Any error in failing to comply with code provisions for amending the Metro UGB is harmless, where the pertinent code provisions are not based on statute, goal or rule; the provisions have been superseded by new standards that would apply on remand; and it is undisputed that the decision does not violate the new standards. Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 39 Or LUBA 539 (2001).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Goal 14, factor 3 is one of several factors that must be considered and balanced, not an isolated criterion that establishes a threshold for including land within a UGB. Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 39 Or LUBA 539 (2001).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. The focus of Goal 14, factor 3 is the comparative cost and feasibility of providing urban services and facilities among lands considered for inclusion within the UGB, and determining which of the alternatives is most consistent with the orderly and economic provision of public facilities and services. The focus of factor 3 is not on determining whether existing facilities are adequate or can be made adequate. Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 39 Or LUBA 539 (2001).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. The transportation planning rule does not apply to the amendment of the Metro UGB where the amendment only converts rural land to urbanizable land, and does not alter the types or intensity of allowed land uses, reduce the performance standards of transportation facilities, or otherwise "significantly affect" a transportation facility within the meaning of OAR 660-012-0060. Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 39 Or LUBA 539 (2001).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. The impracticability standard of the Metro Code (MC) for locational amendments to the Urban Growth Boundary (UGB) performs a limited version of the functional role that Goal 14, factor 6, and Goal 2, Part II(c)(2), play in the context of more comprehensive UGB amendments: ensuring that agricultural land is included in the UGB only when nonagricultural lands cannot reasonably accommodate the proposed use. Because the MC must be consistent with Goals 2 and 14, the decision is not entitled to deference under ORS 197.829(1). Malinowski Farm v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 633 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. "Practicable" has two distinct connotations: (1) technical possibility; and (2) prudential balancing of costs and other relevant considerations. An alternative is impracticable where it is either technically infeasible or, based on all relevant considerations, including consideration of cost, it would not be a feasible alternative. Malinowski Farm v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 633 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Evidence that alternatives to a preferred option require a sewer connection to a different drainage basin, a pump station contrary to applicable regulations and the removal of mature trees, and that they are significantly more expensive, demonstrates that the alternatives are impracticable. Malinowski Farm v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 633 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. An identification of a need for additional lands under Goal 14, factors 1 and 2, is to be an essential predicate for application of the ORS 197.298 priorities. Where a proposed urban growth boundary amendment is not based upon a demonstration of need, but rather upon locational considerations, ORS 197.298 is not applicable. Malinowski Farm v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 633 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Goal 14, factors 1 and 2, must both be applied and considered in determining "need" for an urban growth boundary expansion, or at the least, the less determinative or unsatisfied factor must be given appropriate consideration and weight. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. It is inconsistent with Goal 14 to determine that a subregional or geographically specific need exists without considering the role played by that need and efforts to meet it in the context of the entire urban growth boundary. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Goal 14, factors 1 and 2, the two "need" factors, are interdependent, but not identical. Metro did not err in interpreting factor 2 to focus on subregional need and factor 1 to focus on regional need, as it properly considered subregional need in the context of the larger regional need, and in so doing gave appropriate weight to both factors. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Metro's Regional Framework Plan, a master plan that incorporates and coordinates Metro's various functional plans, is a planning document of the type contemplated by Goal 2 that Metro must rely upon in making its required need determination for expanding the urban growth boundary, even though the 1997 population and demand figures in the plan do not reflect subsequent updates. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. It would be inconsistent with ORS 197.625 to allow a local government to rely on an unacknowledged urban reserve designation as a means to avoid the necessity of finding compliance with Goal 14 and other applicable criteria. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A "specific type of identified land need" for purposes of the ORS 197.298(3)(a) exception to the urban growth boundary priority scheme refers to types of development that require land with particular site or locational characteristics. An identified subregional need for additional residential housing is not a "specific type of identified land need." 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. ORS 197.298(3)(c) allows inclusion of lower priority lands in an urban growth boundary (UGB) expansion if maximum efficiency of land uses within a proposed UGB requires inclusion of lower priority lands in order to provide services to higher priority lands. Although minimizing the cost burden alone is insufficient to demonstrate compliance with ORS 197.298(3)(c), evidence that higher priority land cannot be provided with sewer and other utility lines without first developing the preferred resource site satisfies the statutory requirement. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Before amending an urban growth boundary to add land with predominantly Class I soils to meet an identified need for commercial land, a county must determine whether alternatives to adding a site with predominantly Class I soils can reasonably accommodate the identified need. That alternatives analysis under OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b)(B) is a multi-factor analysis and rejecting alternative sites solely because they have soils that may increase development costs is error. DLCD v. Douglas County, 38 Or LUBA 542 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Land that is already included within a UGB is assumed to be available for urban development. That assumption is not rendered invalid simply because sites that are planned and zoned for residential, industrial and commercial use have soil or other characteristics that make them less than ideal to develop. DLCD v. Douglas County, 38 Or LUBA 542 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Alternative sites to meet an identified need for commercially planned and zoned land may not be rejected solely because they have soils limitations that the USDA estimates may result in an average 39 percent development cost increase for some small commercial buildings. The estimated 39 percent cost increase is an average, so it may be lower in particular cases, and any added cost may be offset by other advantages the sites may possess. DLCD v. Douglas County, 38 Or LUBA 542 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A demonstration of need for a UGB amendment must be based upon and consistent with the local government's planning documents adopted pursuant to the Goal 2-mandated planning process. In order to amend the UGB based on different population and capacity projections than those in the local government's comprehensive plan, the local government must amend the plan to include those different projections. Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 199 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A UGB amendment based on a subregional need to provide affordable housing must ensure that the land included in the UGB will be used to satisfy that need. Adoption of a master plan that imposes zoning and other measures to allow for a significant number of high-density dwellings is sufficient to ensure that the land included in the UGB will be used to satisfy that need, given evidence that the lack of affordable housing in the subregion is the result of the relative absence of high-density dwellings and that such dwellings will be affordable to 83 percent of the employees in the subregion. Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 199 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A UGB amendment adopted pursuant to acknowledged local code provisions that implement Goal 14 is nonetheless subject to direct review for compliance with Goal 14 unless such review would necessarily invalidate some provision of the acknowledged code. Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 199 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Allowing affected local governments only seven days to comment on a revised UGB amendment master plan is consistent with the Goal 2 coordination requirement, where the local governments had opportunity to comment on the original master plan, the revisions reflect and attempt to accommodate those comments, and the affected local governments failed to request any additional time to comment on the revisions. Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 199 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. The exception to the priority scheme for including lands within UGBs under ORS 197.298 for resource lands that are "completely surrounded" by exception areas requires, like the similar exception in OAR 660-012-0030(3), that the local government determine that those resource lands, considered as a whole, do not constitute high-value farmland. The local government cannot include within the UGB a subset of such resource lands without first determining that the larger set of resource lands completely surrounded by exception areas is not high-value farmland. Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 199 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Like the functionally identical priority scheme at OAR 660-021-0030, the elements of the priority scheme for including lands within the UGB under ORS 197.298 must be applied in a sequential manner. A local government cannot include lower priority lands within the UGB pursuant to an exception to that priority scheme without first applying the priority scheme to determine whether higher priority lands can accommodate the identified need. Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 199 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Goal 14, factors 1 and 2 do not require a local government to demonstrate a need for the particular commercial use proposed by the owner of land being considered for inclusion within the urban growth boundary. However, where a local government's alternative sites analysis under the Goal 14 locational factors relies upon an identified need for a specific type of commercial development, the local government must have established that specific need in considering Goal 14, factors 1 and 2. Smith v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 801 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. While a local government is not required to amend its urban growth boundary to accommodate a specific type of proposed use, Goal 14 does not prohibit a local government from attempting to identify a specific type of use as a "need" under Goal 14, factors 1 and 2. Smith v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 801 (2000).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. The county did not err by relying on population projections and a commercial land-to-population ratio of 10.85 acres per 1,000 persons to establish its need for commercial land under Goal 14, Factors 1 and 2, where the ratio of 10.85 acres per 1,000 persons is included as an objective in the acknowledged comprehensive plan. DLCD v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 26 (1999).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Language in the comprehensive plan stating that a particular freeway interchange will be given priority for future urban growth boundary amendments has no legal effect on whether the interchange may be added to the urban growth boundary based on consideration of the Goal 14 factors. DLCD v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 26 (1999).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A county fails to justify amending its UGB to include commercial land at a freeway interchange where, although the interchange land would have advantages over lands further from the freeway but already inside the UGB, the county fails to demonstrate a particular need for commercial land at the interchange or that the lands inside the UGB are unsuitable for commercial development. DLCD v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 26 (1999).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. That a property may be significantly better for commercial development than lands already inside the UGB does not mean that lands already inside the UGB cannot reasonably be redesignated and developed for commercial use. DLCD v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 26 (1999).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where a county's findings do not establish that a need for commercial land can only be satisfied at a freeway interchange, its findings considering alternatives outside the UGB are also inadequate where those findings fail to consider Class II through VI agricultural or nonresource lands simply because they are not close to a freeway interchange. DLCD v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 26 (1999).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Factor 3 of Goal 14 is not met if the public facilities and services have to be upgraded to serve land that is added to its UGB and alternative sites within the UGB that could accommodate identified needs already have public facilities and services. DLCD v. Douglas County, 36 Or LUBA 26 (1999).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Population projections of a witness who is not shown to be qualified by education or experience to evaluate evidence and draw conclusions concerning a highly technical and complex subject raise substantial evidence concerns, particularly when they are contradicted by the official population estimates prepared by the Center for Population Research and Census (CPRC) and letters from CPRC experts. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. In determining whether a UGB amendment is justified on the basis of housing need, a local government cannot focus its needs analysis on the needs of the existing population if the proposed development is intended for a different population. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. If a city seeking to expand its UGB wishes to recognize a housing need for a population other than the existing population, it must amend its population projections to recognize both the natural growth of the existing population and the addition of a new population group, and must describe the proposed development with enough specificity that it is reasonably clear the UGB amendment will accomplish the desired objective. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Findings addressing livability must identify an existing livability problem justifying a UGB expansion and must evaluate potential negative impacts from the expansion. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where an amendment to a city's UGB is proposed in order to achieve a particular mix of housing, recreation and population, the amendment must beconditioned on zoning and developing the subject property to achieve the desired result. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. To defer making a necessary discretionary determination beyond the date that a UGB amendment becomes final creates a possibility the UGB will be amended before Goal 14 is satisfied. Either (1) a determination that all standards requiring discretion in their application are satisfied must be made prior to the amendment of the UGB itself; or (2) the UGB amendment must be conditioned on making the necessary determination at a time subsequent when the statutory notice and hearing requirements are observed. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. In applying Goal 14, factor 4, a local government must consider cost of services and must encourage development within urban areas before the expansion of a UGB. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. A city may satisfy Goal 14, factor 4 by carefully evaluating the availability of land within the UGB before reaching a conclusion that none will accommodate a proposed development. That evaluation must include consideration of (1) changing planning designations within the existing UGB to allow for greater densities; (2) assembling lots within the existing UGB; and (3) reconfiguring the proposed use to maximize the use of land within the existing UGB. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. To satisfy ORS 197.732(1)(c)(D), Goal 2, Part II(c)(4) and OAR 660-04-020(2)(d) as they apply to a UGB amendment, findings must explain, with respect to the subject property, what the adjacent uses, natural resources, and management or production practices are, and then explain why the proposed use is compatible with them. If setbacks and other mitigation requirements are necessary, these should be stated, and approval of the UGB amendment should be conditioned upon compliance. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where the need for available land for urban development is the basis for approving a UGB amendment, a Goal 14, factor 5 ESEE analysis cannot ignore that some or all of the land to be included within the expanded UGB may be precluded from development by state or federal law. If the land cannot become available for urban development, the UGB amendment should not be approved. Concerned Citizens v. Jackson County, 33 Or LUBA 70 (1997).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. To show a need to amend an acknowledged UGB to include more land for residential development, a local government may either increase its projected population or alter the land use planning assumptions that are applied to the projected population in determining the amount of urban and urbanizable land needed for residential purposes. Simnitt Nurseries v. City of Canby, 27 Or LUBA 468 (1994).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where a local government has a sufficient amount of vacant residential land within its acknowledged UGB to accommodate the projected population, the local government's failure to zone that land for residential development at densities consistent with its plan designation does not support a finding that there is a need to amend the UGB to add more land for residential development. Simnitt Nurseries v. City of Canby, 27 Or LUBA 468 (1994).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where a city's decision to almost double its UGB relies on a study assuming a particular combination of uses in the UGB expansion area, the city must ensure the plan designations and zoning districts applied to land within the UGB expansion area will accommodate those uses. A condition that land use allocations will be determined upon annexation is inadequate. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. If a city located outside the Metro UGB wishes to plan to capture growth currently anticipated to occur within the Metro UGB, it must specifically coordinate that desire with Metro and the affected units of government within the Metro UGB. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where an "urban planning area agreement" between a city and county does nothing to establish that designation thereunder of an area as an "area of interest" replaces the application of Goal 14 to a proposed UGB amendment involving the "area of interest," Goal 14 remains directly applicable. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. To justify a UGB amendment under Goal 14, factor 3, a local government must show its public facilities will have adequate capacity to serve the uses contemplated within the UGB expansion area over the local government's planning period. A local government is not required to show that it currently has adequate public facility capacity to serve uses to be made of the proposed UGB expansion area in the future. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Goal 14, factor 6 requires a local government to determine that other sites with less impact on high priority resource land are unavailable or unsuited to satisfy the particular need which justifies a proposed UGB amendment. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. The determination required by Goal 14, factor 7 regarding compatibility between a proposed UGB expansion and nearby farming activities cannot be made until the city identifies and limits the type and intensity of uses allowed in the UGB expansion area. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. OAR 660-12-060(1) is applicable to comprehensive plan amendments which significantly affect a transportation facility. Compliance with this rule provision must be addressed when a UGB amendment is adopted; it cannot be deferred to future annexation decisions within the UGB expansion area. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. OAR 660-12-060(4) prohibits using the existence of transportation facilities as a basis for approving exceptions to the requirements of OAR 660-12-065, adopted under OAR 660-12-070; or (2) exceptions to statewide planning goals, adopted under OAR 660-04-022 (reasons exceptions) or OAR 660-04-028

(committed exceptions). OAR 660-12-060(4) does not apply to an exception for a change to an established UGB, adopted under OAR 660-04-010(1)(c)(B). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. Where a city fails to consider (1) pollutant sources other than those associated with automobile emissions, and (2) the cumulative impacts of waste and process discharges from the uses to be established in a UGB expansion area and the discharges from existing sources, the city lacks an adequate factual base for determining the proposed UGB amendment complies with Goal 6 with regard to impacts on air quality. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

18.3 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Amendment of UGB. OAR 660-09-025 does not require the adoption of specific implementing plan designations and zoning districts, concurrent with the adoption of a UGB amendment, in all instances. OAR 660-09-025 simply establishes certain Goal 9 driven requirements that are applicable at the time certain local governments adopt measures implementing a UGB amendment. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. City of North Plains, 27 Or LUBA 372 (1994).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. In Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 173 Or App 321, 21 P3d 1108 (2001), the Court of Appeals concluded that under Goal 14 (effective 10/04/00), Metro could identify a subregional (i.e., geographically localized) need for housing, but when considering alternatives to amending the UGB to meet that subregional housing need, Metro could not limit its consideration to lands within the subregion. That broader geographic consideration of alternatives applies both to alternative sites inside the UGB, and to alternative sites outside the UGB subject to the priorities set out in ORS 197.298 and the Goal 14 locational factors, if a UGB amendment is required to meet the identified need. In this way, Residents of Rosemont distinguishes between subregional need and subregional analyses of alternatives. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. In City of West Linn v. LCDC, 200 Or App 269, 113 P3d 935, rev den, 339 Or 609 (2005), and Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 173 Or App 321, 21 P3d 1108 (2001), the Court of Appeals clarified that pursuant to Goal 14 (effective 10/04/00), Metro can identify a subregional need for housing, and that the Department of Land and Conservation and Development's rules to that effect were not inconsistent with Goal 14. But the Court of Appeals held that the part of the rules that authorized Metro to limit its consideration of alternatives (both inside the UGB and outside the UGB) for satisfying that subregional housing need to lands within or near the subregion, was inconsistent with Goal 14. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. In City of West Linn v. LCDC, 200 Or App 269, 113 P3d 935, rev den, 339 Or 609 (2005), and Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 173 Or App 321, 21 P3d 1108 (2001), the Court of Appeals determined the subregional need which can be identified under Goal 14 (effective 10/04/00), is a subregional need for housing, as opposed to a subregional need for a specified number of acres for development of housing that must be located within that subregion. Accordingly, Metro may not assume that a subregional need for housing can only be satisfied by constructing housing on land that is physically located within that subregion. Rather, according to Goal 14, Metro may consider proximity in determining whether an alternative site is a suitable alternative, as opposed to simply eliminating alternative sites if they are not located in the subregion. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. A local government complies with Goal 14 (effective 04/28/06), and OAR 661-024-0050(4) (effective 04/16/09), where it first demonstrates that the need cannot reasonably be accommodated on land already inside the UGB. Only if land within the UGB cannot reasonably accommodate the identified need would the local government proceed to consider sites outside the UGB to satisfy the identified need. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5) allow local governments to specify "size, topography or proximity" as site suitability characteristics and to limit consideration of alternative sites to land that has the specified characteristics. But OAR 660-024-0060(5) does not provide local governments with authority to geographically limit the scope of the required alternatives analysis to "subregions," a practice that was invalidated by Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 173 Or App 321, 21 P3d 1108 (2001), and

City of West Linn v. LCDC, 200 Or App 269, 113 P3d 935, rev den, 339 Or 609 (2005). DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. A site suitability characteristic that property must be 22 acres in size to allow development of a "Lifestyle Center" is not appropriate under Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5), where the city fails to explain why a general subregional need for between 27 and 37.9 acres of land for commercial development must be satisfied by the "Lifestyle Center" proposed by the UGB amendment applicant on a single 22-acre site. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5) do not permit use of a site suitability characteristic to reject alternative sites if those sites cannot be developed at a cost that is commensurate with the cost of developing a Lifestyle Center on a site owned by the UGB amendment applicant or simply because those alternative sites face development constraints. The correct inquiry is whether alternative sites "cannot reasonably * * * accommodate[]" the identified need. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Whether property is "available for purchase" is not a valid site suitability characteristic to be used to eliminate alternative sites that are already within the Urban Growth Boundary (UGB) from consideration, when determining whether a UGB amendment is necessary to add land to the UGB. Requiring sites to be currently available for purchase sets too low a threshold, impermissibly narrows the statutory, goal and rule alternatives analysis, and is not authorized pursuant to Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5). DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. A city improperly rejected alternative sites already within the Urban Growth Boundary (UGB) pursuant to the Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5) alternatives analysis for determining whether a UGB amendment is necessary, when it rejected some sites because they were not already zoned commercial but the site the city ultimately selected was also not currently zoned commercial. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Although OAR 660-024-0060(5) grants authority to local governments to consider "proximity" as a required alternative site characteristic when considering alternative sites under Goal 14 and OAR 660-024-0060(5) for a potential amendment to the Urban Growth Boundary (UGB), a city may not divide the city into four subregions and eliminate any requirement to consider alternative sites inside or outside the UGB for meeting identified subregional needs simply because those alternative sites are not located within the subregion. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. LUBA will not adopt a categorical rule that a lack of 20-year need within a city's Urban Growth Boundary (UGB) under Goal 14, need factor 1 precludes a UGB amendment to correct a short-term subregional need. DLCD v. City of Klamath Falls, 76 Or LUBA 130 (2017).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. The locational factors of Goal 14 are not separate approval criteria and only require a comparison of alternate sites and consideration of which alternatives will be more compatible with farm and forest uses. The locational factors do not require that UGB expansion areas must in all cases be compatible with farm and forest uses. Friends of French Prairie v. Marion County, 58 Or LUBA 387 (2009).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Goal 14, factors 3 through 7 implicitly require a determination that the sites chosen to be included in an urban growth boundary (UGB) are better than other alternative sites that are also considered for inclusion and rejected. Therefore, a local code provision requiring a demonstration that "the recommended site was better than alternative sites," does not "go further" or require more than the requirements of Goal 14, and assignments of error concerning that local code provision therefore involve "matters" that fall within the Land Conservation and Development Commission's exclusive jurisdiction in periodic review. City of West Linn v. Metro, 49 Or LUBA 403 (2005).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. When a local government decides that lands are committed to urban uses under the "unneeded but committed" exception, it need not demonstrate that each of the five "locational factors" of Goal 14 is independently satisfied. The local government must demonstrate that, considering all of the "locational factors," the overall picture shows commitment. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. That the local government's Goal 14 findings incorporate other findings by reference does not demonstrate inadequacy in the county's Goal 14 findings, absent a showing that the county's findings as a whole, including the incorporated findings, are inadequate. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Where the local government's Goal 14, factor 1 and 2 findings rely on two separate methods to determine the need for industrial land, a petitioner's challenge to the evidentiary sufficiency of one method does not provide a basis for remand, where petitioner fails to challenge the other method. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Sustainable findings under the seven Goal 14 factors state a legally sufficient "reason" justifying why the state policy embodied in Goal 14 should not apply, for purposes of adopting the exception necessary to include resource land within a UGB under OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(i). Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. To demonstrate reversible error in a local government's Goal 14 findings, a petitioner must demonstrate that the local government misapplied the pertinent factors or reached key conclusions that are not supported by substantial evidence, in a manner that shows legal error or insufficiency in the local government's ultimate conclusion that the subject property is the "best" land to include in the UGB, considering and balancing each factor. Alliance for Responsible Land Use v. Deschutes Cty., 40 Or LUBA 304 (2001).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Goal 14, factor 3 is one of several factors that must be considered and balanced, not an isolated criterion that establishes a threshold for including land within a UGB. Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 39 Or LUBA 539 (2001).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. The focus of Goal 14, factor 3 is the comparative cost and feasibility of providing urban services and facilities among lands considered for inclusion within the UGB, and determining which of the alternatives is most consistent with the orderly and economic provision of public facilities and services. The focus of factor 3 is not on determining whether existing facilities are adequate or can be made adequate. Citizens Against Irresponsible Growth v. Metro, 39 Or LUBA 539 (2001).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. A local government may limit the geographic scope of its alternate sites analysis for lands needed for a subregional need to lands that can satisfy the identified need. A local government is not required to consider an urban growth boundary expansion within other regional centers that would not alleviate the identified needs of the regional center being addressed. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Goal 14, factors 3 through 7 are directed at finding the "best" land for expansion of an urban growth boundary, balancing Goal 14 factors 3 through 7. However, if the preferred site requires an exception, then OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c) requires a separate inquiry into whether existing exception lands can reasonably accommodate the proposed use. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. When comparing exception lands to resource lands under the alternate sites analysis of OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c), it is not sufficient to determine that the exception lands cannot accommodate the proposed use "as well as" the resource lands. Development must be directed to exception lands rather than resource lands if the exception lands can "reasonably accommodate" the proposed development. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. The requirement that exception lands be included in an urban growth boundary expansion prior to resource lands if the exception lands can reasonably accommodate the use does not place any categorical restrictions on the type of considerations that may be employed in making the determinations. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Under the Goal 14, factor 3, analysis regarding public facilities and services, a local government may consider relative cost differences between urbanizing the preferred site or alternative sites. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. The analysis of maximum efficiency of land under Goal 14, factor 4, allows a local government to consider the ability of a site to accommodate a compact urban form. The term "maximum efficiency of land uses" invokes a concern for avoiding leapfrog or sprawling development inconsistent with the density and connectivity associated with urban development. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Goal 14, factor 5, requires an environmental, social, energy, and economic analysis (ESEE) of the consequences of expanding the urban growth boundary (UGB) at the preferred site, compared to alternate sites. A local government may not assume that similar types of residential development will have similar types of ESEE consequences no matter where the UGB is expanded. In order to compare the ESEE consequences, an ESEE analysis must be conducted for both the preferred site and for alternate sites. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Proceeding under the exceptions scheme of ORS 197.298(3) does not eliminate the need to consider Goal 14, factor 6, regarding retention of agricultural land. When there are an additional 120 acres of exclusive farm use (EFU)-zoned land in the vicinity of the 109-acre EFU preferred site, the additional 120 acres must also be considered for inclusion in an urban growth boundary expansion along with the preferred site. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Goal 14, factor 7, regarding compatibility with agricultural activities, requires a comparison of the preferred site's compatibility with that of alternate sites. A local government's balancing of this factor would have little meaning if the only analysis was of the impacts of urbanizing the proposed expansion area and not alternate sites. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. In conducting the alternative site analysis required to include lower priority resource lands in the UGB under Goal 2, Part II and ORS 197.298(3)(a), the relevant question is whether higher priority exception lands can "reasonably accommodate" the identified need, not whether such exception lands can satisfy that need as well as or better than resource lands. Findings that, due to parcelization and existing development patterns, exception lands cannot accommodate as much or as dense residential development per acre as resource lands are not sufficient to establish that exception lands cannot "reasonably accommodate" that residential development. Residents of Rosemont v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 199 (2000).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Goal 14, factors 1 and 2 do not require a local government to demonstrate a need for the particular commercial use proposed by the owner of land being considered for inclusion within the urban growth boundary. However, where a local government's alternative sites analysis under the Goal 14 locational factors relies upon an identified need for a specific type of commercial development, the local government must have established that specific need in considering Goal 14, factors 1 and 2. Smith v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 801 (2000).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. While a local government is not required to amend its urban growth boundary to accommodate a specific type of proposed use, Goal 14 does not prohibit a local government from attempting to identify a specific type of use as a "need" under Goal 14, factors 1 and 2. Smith v. Douglas County, 37 Or LUBA 801 (2000).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Findings addressing lands available for rural residential development need not consider residential land within urban growth boundaries. Land within urban growth boundaries is not rural land. Turrell v. Harney County, 36 Or LUBA 244 (1999).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Under Goal 14, factor 4, which requires "the encouragement of development within urban areas before the conversion of urbanizable areas," the city and county seeking to expand an urban growth boundary must explain in their findings what efforts were made to encourage development short of expanding the urban growth boundary and why those efforts were unsuccessful. Roth v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 181 (1996).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. Goal 14, factor 3, which requires that an expansion of an urban growth boundary be based on consideration of "orderly and economic provision of public facilities and services," is not satisfied by findings that water and sewer lines can be connected to the subject property, but must include findings explaining what impact, if any, the proposed expansion of the water and sewer systems will have on existing services. Roth v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 181 (1996).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. The disinclination of two property owners to develop their residentially zoned property for residential uses does not, of itself, create a need that justifies expansion of the city's urban growth boundary. Roth v. Yamhill County, 31 Or LUBA 181 (1996).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. A city may not justify noncompliance with provisions of Goal 14 and policies in the city's own comprehensive plan on the ground that noncompliance is necessary to accommodate a particular development proposal. DLCD v. City of St. Helens, 29 Or LUBA 485 (1995).

18.4 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Conversion Factors. In performing an alternative sites analysis under Goal 14 and its own zoning ordinance, a city may not assume that the cost of a previously developed site within the city limits is excessive or that forecasted redevelopment expenses will be prohibitive. DLCD v. City of St. Helens, 29 Or LUBA 485 (1995).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Only "transportation facilities and improvements" that meet the requirements of OAR 660-012-0065 are allowed on EFU-zoned "rural land" without an exception to Goals 3, 11 and 14. OAR 660-012-0070 provides that "transportation facilities" that do not meet the requirements of OAR 660-012-0065 cannot be constructed on "rural land" without an exception to the applicable goals. However, OAR 660-012-0070 does not require an exception to the applicable resource and urban goals where the city concurrently includes the land within its urban growth boundary, because the land is no longer "rural land" as defined in that rule. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 215 Or App 414, 171 P3d 368 (2007), which involved a reasons exception to Goals 3, 4 and 14 to develop a hotel on land zoned exclusive farm use (EFU), and its holding which interprets the rules for reasons exceptions, is inapposite where no reasons exception is involved. Similarly, OAR 661-012-0070 and its requirements for exceptions for transportation improvements on rural land do not apply where no exception to a resource goal is sought. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. It is inconsistent to approve a committed exception to Goal 14 to allow urban uses of the property (because all rural uses are impracticable) and then apply a zoning district that was adopted to limit industrial uses to rural industrial uses. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 156 (2016)

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. LUBA will not affirm a hearings officer's decision based on a legal theory that application of a rural industrial zone to rural property does not require an exception to Goal 14, where the hearings officer did not adopt that theory and instead approved an exception to Goal 14 to apply the rural industrial zone. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 156 (2016).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. OAR 660-004-0040, which provides standards consistent with Goal 14 for certain rural residential development in rural residential zones, does not purport to constitute a complete implementation of Goal 14 with respect to all residential development on rural lands. The rule's silence regarding some types of residential uses, for example, floating homes, does not allow the inference that such development is either consistent or inconsistent with Goal 14. Squier v. Multnomah County, 71 Or LUBA 98 (2015).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Because OAR 660-004-0040, which provides standards consistent with Goal 14 for certain rural residential development in rural residential zones, does not include standards for floating homes, ORS 197.646(1) does not oblige the county to adopt land use regulation amendments to implement the rule with respect to floating homes. Consequently, that the county's land use regulations governing floating homes do not include standards based on OAR 660-004-0040 does not mean that the county failed to implement the rule, or that the rule applies directly to land use decisions concerning floating homes, pursuant to ORS 197.646(3). Squier v. Multnomah County, 71 Or LUBA 98 (2015).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. The Oregon Supreme Court decision in 1000 Friends of Oregon v. LCDC (Curry Co.), 301 Or 447, 724 P2d 268 (1986), did not obligate local governments to apply Goal 14 as interpreted directly to land use decisions made under acknowledged land use regulations, although amendments to those regulations must be consistent with Goal 14 as interpreted by Curry Co. Where a county's regulations governing floating homes were adopted and acknowledged to comply with Goal 14 in 1982, and have not been amended since, those regulations remain acknowledged to comply with Goal 14, and thus Goal 14 would not apply directly to a decision to approve floating homes under that acknowledged ordinance. Squier v. Multnomah County, 71 Or LUBA 98 (2015).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Absent LCDC rule-making, whether proposed industrial use of rural land is rural or urban in nature requires consideration of the factors described in case law. Where a county takes a reason exception to allow a wide range of unspecified industrial uses without considering the factors described in case law, the county's bare finding that the proposed amendments do not authorize urban use of rural land is inadequate and conclusory. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A local government errs in purporting to adopt an exception to Goal 14 based solely on the general exception standards at OAR 660-004-0020. Those general exception standards are not a fungible substitute for the specific standards for taking an exception to Goal 14 at OAR 660-014-0040. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Columbia County, 70 Or LUBA 171 (2014).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. OAR 660-004-0040(7)(i)(B) requires a Goal 14 exception to designate rural residential areas with lot sizes smaller than 10 acres and applies to land that is "planned and zoned primarily for residential uses and for which an exception to Statewide Planning Goal 3 (Agricultural Lands), Goal 4 (Forest Lands) or both has been taken." If OAR 660-004-0040 does not apply because goal exceptions have not been taken, a Goal 14 exception may nevertheless be required to designate rural land for residential use if the factors discussed in 1000 Friends of Oregon v. LCDC (Curry Co.), 301 Or 447, 724 P2d 268 (1986) make an Goal 14 exception necessary. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 61 Or LUBA 240 (2010).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. The proximity of an RV camp/campground to an urban growth boundary, the proposed density of campground spaces, and the provision of utilities to individual camp sites temporarily occupied by RVs are not sufficient, in themselves, to convert a rural campground to an "urban use" requiring an exception to Goal 14. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Where a county's Rural Residential plan designation implements OAR 660-004-0040, which applies exclusively to rural residential areas that are subject to Goal 3 or 4 exceptions, and expressly does not apply to nonresource lands not subject to those goals, it is reasonable to presume that the Rural Residential designation also applies exclusively to resource lands for which a Goal 3 or 4 exception is taken, and is not intended to apply to nonresource lands. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 60 Or LUBA 392 (2010).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. ORS 197.493(1), which prohibits local governments from limiting the occupancy of a recreational vehicle (RV) solely on the grounds that the occupancy is in an RV, is not intended to undermine the statewide land use planning system by allowing urban-level residential uses in RV parks in rural zones. By excluding from the definition of RV park an area "designated" for overnight camping, the legislature intended that counties may continue to enforce code restrictions on residential occupancy of RVs in RV parks, in rural zones that do not permit residential occupancy of RV parks. Reeder v. Multnomah County, 59 Or LUBA 240 (2009).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Where it is not clear whether a county believes a prior county decision delineated the boundaries of a resort unincorporated community, but petitioners do not allege that the appealed county decision that adopts a large scale map that precisely delineated the resort unincorporated community boundaries violates the OAR 660-022-0020 standards that govern such delineations, petitioners provide no basis for reversal or remand. Friends of the Metolius v. Jefferson County, 58 Or LUBA 284 (2009).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. OAR 660-022-0030(4) requires that counties impose limits on new commercial uses in unincorporated communities. Where a county has imposed such limits and a petitioner does not challenge the adequacy of those limits but instead argues that a particular future development proposal might violate OAR 660-022-0030(4), the petitioner provides no basis for reversal or remand where the challenged decision does not approve any particular development proposal. Carver v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Where the challenged decision only creates a new zoning district without applying that zoning district to any property, a petitioner's argument that future development proposals may violate the new zoning district's requirement that new commercial development be small-scale and low impact is premature. Carver v. Deschutes County, 58 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Oregon Administrative Rules promulgated for the purpose of establishing minimum safety standards for the design and construction of "Recreation Parks" and that define certain structures as "Recreational Vehicles" are not particularly dispositive in resolving the question of whether a proposed development is an urban use of rural land. Baxter v. Coos County, 58 Or LUBA 624 (2009).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A proposed RV Park with permanently stationed recreational vehicles is an urban use of rural land under the first factor set out in 1000 Friends of Oregon v. LCDC (Curry Co.), 301 Or 447, 724 P2d 268 (1986). Baxter v. Coos County, 58 Or LUBA 624 (2009).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A proposed RV Park with a density of 6 units per acre on land zoned recreation and exclusive farm use is an urban use of rural land. Baxter v. Coos County, 58 Or LUBA 624 (2009).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Under the Unincorporated Community Rule, the boundaries of unincorporated communities must be shown on the county's comprehensive plan map "at a scale sufficient to determine accurately which properties are included." OAR 660-022-0020(2). Where a comprehensive plan is amended to designate an area as an unincorporated community but that area is not shown on the comprehensive plan at the scale required by OAR 660-022-0020(2), remand is required. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Under OAR 660-022-0030(5), hotels and motels in unincorporated communities must be served by a community sewer system. Where the zoning applied to an unincorporated community allows lodges without specifying whether the lodge must be connected to a community sewer system, and the zoning ordinance term "lodges" could overlap with the rule terms "hotels and motels," an ambiguity and potential inconsistency with the rule is created. But since the zoning ordinance was adopted to implement the unincorporated community rule, any lodge that is also a hotel or motel as the rule uses those terms would have to be connected to a community sewer system. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Where a county post-acknowledgment plan amendment designates an area as an incorporated community to allow a higher density of residential development that would otherwise violate Goal 14, it need not require that vacation rental units only allow de minimis occupancy by the units' owners. Whereas that occupancy limitation had been required before the area was designated as an unincorporated community to preserve the distinction between low density single family dwelling development and higher density vacation rental development under Goal 14, after the unincorporated community designation the distinction is no longer legally required. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. So long as the zoning that is applied to an unincorporated community is consistent with OAR chapter 660, division 22, the unincorporated community rule, a county need not apply Goal 14 directly when applying zoning to the designated unincorporated community. Johnson v. Jefferson County, 56 Or LUBA 25 (2008).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. While it may be incorrect to refer to a 43-lot subdivision with many 2-acre lots as "rural," simply because it is located outside an urban growth boundary, a county commits no error in referring to the subdivision as rural in applying a subdivision approval criterion that requires a finding that the subdivision "will not create urban-farm conflicts," where the county did not rely entirely on that characterization in applying the urban-farm conflicts standard. Hines v. Marion County, 56 Or LUBA 333 (2008).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A petitioner who alleges in a LUBA appeal that a rezoning of rural land is defective because it allows conversion of rural land to urban uses without an adequate Goal 14 justification or exception is obligated to develop his or her argument to that effect. Mere speculation that the uses allowed in the new zone are so uncertain or could be approved in a manner in the future that would result in such improper conversion of rural land to urban uses is not sufficient. Wood v. Crook County, 55 Or LUBA 165 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A finding that the economic success of a proposed wine country hotel would be enhanced by location in a "quiet rural atmosphere among vineyards and near wineries" is insufficient to demonstrate under OAR 660-004-0020(2) that the hotel "requires a location on resource land" as opposed to otherwise suitable non-resource land. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 55 Or LUBA 433 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A proposed RV Park on land zoned recreation and exclusive farm use, with 179 permanent spaces for stationary trailers, is more similar to permanent residential occupancy found in a high-density residential subdivision than to temporary or seasonal uses found in an RV Park, and thus is an urban use of rural land. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 55 Or LUBA 545 (2008).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A proposed RV Park with a density of 7 to 12 units per acre on land zoned recreation and exclusive farm use that is located approximately one mile from a city's urban growth boundary functions more like a residential suburb that would undermine the effectiveness of the city's UGB to contain high-density residential development within the UGB, and is an urban use of rural land. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 55 Or LUBA 545 (2008).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A proposed development that includes on-site water and sewer systems that are designed to support a high intensity, dense collection of residential uses is an urban use of rural land. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 55 Or LUBA 545 (2008).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Viewing the factors set forth in 1000 Friends of Oregon v. LCDC (Curry Co.), 301 Or 447, 724 P2d 268 (1986), together, a proposed use of land for an RV Park is an urban use of rural land that is prohibited without an exception to Goal 14. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 55 Or LUBA 545 (2008).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. OAR 660-004-0040(6) requires that a local government ensure that amendments to its rural residential zones to authorize lots as small as two acres are justified with exceptions to Goal 14. However, when a local government does so, OAR 660-004-0040(6) does not apply to unamended portions of the local government's comprehensive plan and land use regulations. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Curry County, 53 Or LUBA 503 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. OAR 660-004-0040(3)(b) requires that when a local government "amends its plan's provisions or land use regulations that apply to any rural residential area, it shall do so in accordance with this rule." However, when a local government does so, OAR 660-004-0040 does not apply to unamended portions of the local government's comprehensive plan and land use regulations. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Curry County, 53 Or LUBA 503 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A 50-unit deluxe "wine country" hotel that is intended to attract customers from urban areas is "urban development" for purposes of adopting a reasons exception to Goal 14 under OAR 660-014-0040. That the rural setting of the hotel is part of its commercial appeal does not mean the hotel is rural development. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Because the provisions OAR 660-004 govern the exception process as it applies to statewide planning goals "except as provided for" in OAR 660-014, it is reasonably clear that the Land Conservation and Development Commission intends that a reasons exception for proposed urban development be evaluated under OAR 660-014, not OAR 660-004. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Given the strong family resemblance between the various rules that interpret and apply Goal 2, Part II and ORS 197.732 in different contexts, any cases interpreting OAR 660-004-0022, the goal or the statute are at least potentially helpful in interpreting OAR 660-014-0040(2), or in evaluating a reasons exception under that rule. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Where a local government proceeds to justify an exception under reasons listed in OAR 660-014-0040(2) or OAR 660-004-0022, the decision must demonstrate that each of the elements set out in the listed reason is met. That the listed reasons are not exclusive does not mean that an exception is permissible in circumstances where only some of the elements for each listed reason are met. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. In adopting a reasons exception to allow urban development on rural land under OAR 660-014-0040(2), a local government must justify any "essential characteristic" of the proposed development, where those characteristics have the effect of eliminating the need to consider alternative locations to site the proposed urban development within urban growth boundaries under OAR 660-014-0040(3). VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Where a local government justifies a 12-acre exception area for proposed urban development under OAR 660-014-0040, the local government cannot evaluate alternative sites under OAR 660-014-0040(3) based on a minimum 33-acre parcel size. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Under OAR 660-014-0040, a local government may not treat as an "essential characteristic" of a proposed wine country hotel a location that is proximate to the densest concentration of wineries, absent evidence that locations near lesser but still significant concentrations of wineries cannot reasonably accommodate the proposed need for the hotel. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Not every feature, such as "rural ambiance," that would increase the odds of economic success of a proposed urban hotel on rural lands is an essential characteristic of the use, that can be used to categorically reject otherwise suitable alternative sites within or adjacent to urban areas under OAR 660-014-0040(2) and (3). VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A mere consumer preference among wine connoisseurs for luxury hotels in rural settings is not a sufficient basis to render a rural setting an essential characteristic of a hotel designed to accommodate affluent wine tourists, for purposes of OAR 660-014-0040, absent evidence that there is an economically significant demographic of wine tourist that will only stay in rural luxury hotels and will not stay in urban luxury hotels. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A county does not err in rejecting an argument that a reasons exception is not available to allow a proposed hotel on rural land, because the proposed development is in essence a destination resort, and therefore potentially allowable without an exception, under the reasoning in DLCD v. Yamhill County, 183 Or App 556, 53 P3d 462 (2002), where the applicable goals, rules and statutes effectively prohibit a destination resort of any kind on the subject property, and thus there is no means short of a goal exception to approve the proposed use on the property. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. OAR 660-004-0030(7) authorizes a county to adopt an exception to Goal 14 for rural residential zone or planning designations in a legislative proceeding, and to subsequently apply such zones or plan designations to specific properties without the necessity of applying or taking an exception to Goal 14. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 167 (2005).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A county commits no error in failing to apply OAR 660-004-0040 to land that is either resource land or non-resource land. OAR 660-004-0040 specifically does not apply to either resource land or nonresource land; it applies to rural lands for which an exception to resource goals has been approved, when they are planned and zoned for rural residential development. Sommer v. Josephine County, 49 Or LUBA 134 (2005).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Goal 14 implicitly requires that the intensity of uses allowed on rural lands outside unincorporated communities be less than the maximum intensity allowed inside unincorporated communities. That a plan amendment allows industrial facilities only slightly less intensive than the maximum allowed in unincorporated communities under OAR 660-022-0030(1) does little to establish that the amendment is consistent with Goal 14. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 49 Or LUBA 529 (2005).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A large public storage facility that derives almost all of its customer base from residents within the nearby UGB is not a rural use that can be allowed on rural land consistent with Goal 14. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 49 Or LUBA 529 (2005).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Goal 14 is implicated by a decision that rezones rural land to allow a planned unit development with no minimum lot size, potentially allowing clustered residential density less than one dwelling per 10 acres. Wood v. Crook County, 49 Or LUBA 682 (2005).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Simply because OAR 660-004-0018(1) has clarified since 1986 that an exception to one goal does not relieve a local government from other goal requirements does not mean that the converse was true prior to adoption of the rule. Rezoning property located in a Goal 3 exception area adjacent to a UGB requires consideration of Goal 14, even if OAR 660-004-0018(1) was not applicable at the time the Goal 3 exception was taken. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 47 Or LUBA 160 (2004).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Because Goal 14 requires that rural industrial uses in areas outside of rural unincorporated communities be less intensive than industrial uses allowed in such communities, such rural industrial uses must be smaller in size than the 40,000-square-foot maximum allowed for industrial uses in rural unincorporated communities, under OAR 660-022-0030. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 47 Or LUBA 160 (2004).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. An administrative rule that prohibits new churches and schools on land within three miles of an urban growth boundary (UGB), while allowing community centers "operated primarily by and for residents of the local rural community" within three miles of a UGB, does not violate the "equal terms" and nondiscrimination clauses of the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA), where the membership of the proposed church is primarily composed of people who reside within the UGB. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Clackamas County, 46 Or LUBA 375 (2004).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Findings that establish that a proposed motor speedway must be centrally located in its market area, that it will provide significant local economic benefits, and that it has characteristics that make locating the speedway within nearby urban growth boundaries an unreasonable alternative are sufficient to provide reasons for an exception to Goals 11 and 14. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Findings that establish that a gasoline station is needed to avoid forcing some departing speedway attendees to travel out-of-direction to buy gasoline when such out-of-direction travel would thereby adversely affect transportation facilities, are sufficient to provide a reason justifying and exception to Goal 14 to site the gas station next to a speedway on rural land, where the challenged decision imposes conditions to prevent the gasoline station from becoming a standalone facility that competes with nearby gas stations in urban areas. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A challenged decision establishes sufficient reasons to allow a restaurant and bar next to a speedway on rural land to satisfy significant on-site demand for such facilities, where locational and signage conditions are imposed to limit the possibility that those facilities would compete with nearby facilities inside urban areas for other customers not associated with the speedway. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Identified needs to (1) attract speedway fans early and keep them on site longer to spread traffic impacts, and (2) provide on-site activities for family members accompanying racing spectators may provide sufficient reasons to permit siting indoor and outdoor speedway related recreational facilities on rural land. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Findings that merely suggest that speedway-dependent and related industrial uses may require close proximity to the speedway and state that they may generate sufficient noise to make an urban location inappropriate provide weak reasons for approving a rural location for such industries. However, where petitioner does not challenge that rationale, those findings may provide sufficient reasons for a Goal 14 exception. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Where a county's findings addressing the comparative environmental, economic, social and energy consequences of siting a proposed speedway at the proposed rural location rather than other possible rural locations identify a number of unchallenged energy considerations that favor the proposed rural site, the county's failure to require that the applicant supply a fuel consumption analysis does not provide a basis for remand. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A county may not rely on a previously adopted Goal 3 exception for airport related industrial uses to justify approving a major automobile speedway and speedway related uses on rural agricultural land. Although the same factors that the county relied on to justify Goal 11 and Goal 14 exceptions for the speedway and related uses might justify a new Goal 3 exception, a new Goal 3 exception must be adopted to replace the one that was adopted for the airport related industrial uses. Doherty v. Morrow County, 44 Or LUBA 141 (2003).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Nothing in Goal 14 expressly requires consideration of the cumulative impact of proposed rural residential development with existing or future land uses on rural lands, to determine if the proposed residential development is urban in nature. The fact that OAR 660-004-0040, which governs the Goal 14 analysis of rural residential development, does not require such cumulative impacts analysis is some indication that Goal 14 does not implicitly require such analysis. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 43 Or LUBA 97 (2002).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. OAR 660-004-0040 provides that a zone that prohibits new residential lots on less than 2 acres in a rural residential area is consistent with Goal 14. Even where that rule does not apply, it provides pertinent guidance as to whether a rezoning decision that would allow residential lots larger than 2 acres is consistent with Goal 14. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 43 Or LUBA 97 (2002).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Because a public park is permitted by statute on EFU land without requiring compliance with Goal 14 or an exception to that goal, it is also permitted on rural land zoned other than EFU without requiring compliance with Goal 14 or an exception, even if the park would primarily serve urban residents. Stallkamp v. City of King City, 43 Or LUBA 333 (2002).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A use permitted by statute on EFU land is not subject to the additional requirement that the use be rural or that an exception to Goal 14 be taken, even if the use is urban in nature. Where such a use is expressly permitted on EFU land, it is also implicitly permitted by statute on rural land zoned other than EFU. Stallkamp v. City of King City, 43 Or LUBA 333 (2002).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. The redesignation of a 680-acre non-resource-zoned parcel to rural residential use will not result in impermissible urban uses on rural lands where the resulting 136 lots will not be served by public water or sewer systems, commercial uses are prohibited and no additional public services will be extended to the subject property from the nearest urban area, located two and one-half miles away. DLCD v. Klamath County, 42 Or LUBA 368 (2002).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. The Oregon land use planning scheme contemplates that some rural land will be available for homesites. That residential lots may be permitted within UGBs does not, ipso facto, mean that residential uses of lands outside UGBs are forbidden. DLCD v. Klamath County, 42 Or LUBA 368 (2002).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A petitioner must do more than merely raise an issue concerning Goal 14 to raise an issue concerning compliance with local provisions that implement Goal 14. Failure to raise an issue concerning the local provisions below precludes a petitioner from raising an issue concerning those local provisions for the first time on appeal. Durig v. Washington County, 40 Or LUBA 1. (2001)

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. The rural fire service facilities authorized by ORS 215.283(1)(w) are not required to serve rural areas exclusively. Keicher v. Clackamas County, 39 Or LUBA 521 (2001).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. In considering whether a rural fire service facility authorized by ORS 215.283(1)(w) primarily serves rural rather than urban areas, areas inside UGBs and any areas outside a UGB for which an exception to Goal

14 has been approved to allow urban-level development must be considered urban. Keicher v. Clackamas County, 39 Or LUBA 521 (2001).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A fire station with only five percent of its service area inside a UGB and somewhere between 67 percent and 76 percent of its incident responses going to rural areas outside the UGB primarily serves rural areas. Keicher v. Clackamas County, 39 Or LUBA 521 (2001).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Seven lot of record dwellings on lots that range in size from as small as two acres to as large as eight acres are properly viewed as rural land uses. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 39 Or LUBA 478 (2001).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A farm and feed store does not become an impermissible urban use in a rural residential zone simply because 10 percent of its sales are nonfarm-related items and its customer base may include residents in nearby urban areas. Barge v. Clackamas County, 39 Or LUBA 183 (2000).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Rezoning a 680-acre parcel to allow it to be developed as a residential planned unit development with commercial development at a density of one unit per five acres with no minimum lot size is not necessarily a permissible "rural" use of land, even if community water and sewer are not allowed. DLCD v. Klamath County, 38 Or LUBA 769 (2000).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. The present development intentions of current owners are not determinative as to whether undeveloped lands may require urban services in the near future. A local government may assume that continued resource use will render near term urbanization of property within the urban growth boundary impracticable, even if the current owners of urbanizable land testify that they do not intend to develop their property for urban uses anytime soon. Malinowski Farm v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 633 (2000).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Where petitioner argues that a Goal 3 exception to allow a subdivision of 10 five-acre lots on rural land also requires an exception to Goal 14, but petitioner fails to explain why such a subdivision constitutes an urban use and fails to challenge the county's findings that the proposal would be served by rural services, LUBA will reject the argument. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 489 (2000).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A county urbanization policy that was adopted to implement Goal 14 must be interpreted consistently with Goal 14's prohibition against approval of urban uses on rural land. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 37 (2000).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. In approving applications for permits for uses that are specifically allowed in rural EFU zones by ORS 215.213 and 215.283, counties are not required to apply the case-by-case urban/rural analysis that is required under Goal 14 and 1000 Friends of Oregon v. LCDC (Curry Co.), 301 Or 447, 724 P2d 268 (1986), on non-EFU-zoned rural lands. Jackson County Citizens League v. Jackson County, 38 Or LUBA 37 (2000).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A county provision requiring that schools outside urban growth boundaries be "scaled to serve the rural population" is not unconstitutionally vague where a reasonable applicant would understand that to comply with that provision, the applicant must submit evidence that the school is no larger than needed to serve the anticipated number of rural students. Christian Life Center v. Washington County, 36 Or LUBA 200 (1999).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A county provision requiring that schools outside urban growth boundaries be "scaled to serve the rural population" does not infringe directly on religious practices, and thus is not subject to strict scrutiny, absent a showing that the proposed parochial school must exist on the same rural property as its supporting church for members to exercise their rights to free exercise of religion and their right to direct their children's education. Christian Life Center v. Washington County, 36 Or LUBA 200 (1999).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. The Free Exercise Clause does not require an exemption from a county zoning ordinance that prohibits urban-sized schools on rural land, where the county has a strong interest in maintaining the boundaries between rural and urban uses, and the ordinance imposes only the minimal burden on religious practice of requiring the applicant to build a smaller parochial school than desired or locate the school on property within the nearby urban growth boundary. Christian Life Center v. Washington County, 36 Or LUBA 200 (1999).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Where the county approves a golf course expansion without adopting findings addressing a comprehensive plan provision that prohibits approval of urban uses outside urban growth boundaries, LUBA will remand the decision so that the county can adopt findings addressing whether the subject golf course is "urban" and whether the proposed expansion of the golf course is consistent with the comprehensive plan provision. DLCD v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 88 (1999).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. The term "rural community" as used in OAR 660-012-0045(3) of the Transportation Planning Rule is broader than the term "rural community" as defined in OAR 660-022-0010(7) of the Unincorporated Communities rules. Dept. of Transportation v. Douglas County, 34 Or LUBA 608 (1998).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Goal 14 is applicable to a plan amendment redesignating rural land as commercial, where the land is outside the UGB and the commercial designation would permit any commercial use of any size or intensity, including large commercial uses such as a Wal-Mart store that are urban in character and intensity. Geaney v. Coos County, 34 Or LUBA 189 (1998).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. In approving comprehensive plan and zoning map amendments, the county's findings must demonstrate that Goal 14 is satisfied without reliance on past practices or on plan and code provisions that are subject to revision during periodic review. Brown v. Jefferson County, 33 Or LUBA 418 (1997).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Under Goal 14, a decision to allow an intensification of use outside an urban growth boundary cannot be allowed to undermine the effectiveness of adjacent urban growth boundaries; one way this may occur is through the provision of urban facilities and services to rural areas. Brown v. Jefferson County, 33 Or LUBA 418 (1997).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. The county's finding that the same level of public facilities and services that will be available to the subject property is presently available to all the surrounding land is not helpful to a determination of compliance with Goals 11 and 14 where the finding does not explain whether or how the goals were applied to the surrounding properties. Brown v. Jefferson County, 33 Or LUBA 418 (1997).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A two-acre minimum lot size on property located within two miles of a UGB, in combination with the provision of an urban water system and access to public schools, raises valid concerns about the impacts of a proposed subdivision on the UGB, and a finding that consists solely of a city administrator's opinion that the city has no concerns regarding the impact of the proposed subdivision is not substantial evidence to support the county's conclusion that the proposed subdivision will not affect the UGB. Brown v. Jefferson County, 33 Or LUBA 418 (1997).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Where a county imposes specific requirements on proposed guest houses relating to minimum lot size, maximum square footage, site location and utility connections, and the county addresses the rural nature of the area, the county does not err by failing to specifically address Goal 14. Doob v. Josephine County, 33 Or LUBA 27 (1997).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. The county's determination that Goal 14 is not applicable to a zone change because the change does not convert rural land to urban uses must address relevant site-specific factors, including the location of the use relative to urban growth boundaries and the availability of urban services. Doob v. Josephine County, 32 Or LUBA 376 (1997).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. When a county rezones a 13-acre parcel to rural residential, one-acre minimum, the county's finding acknowledging that the applicant agreed to a deed restriction creating a maximum of eight lots, with a minimum lot size of 1.5 acres, does not support a determination that the rezone does not allow an urban use. Doob v. Josephine County, 32 Or LUBA 364 (1997).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Churches are not inherently urban in nature. A church that does not require urban services, serves a primarily rural congregation, and is used for religious services and educational programs is not an urban use requiring an exception from Goal 14. Cox v. Yamhill County, 29 Or LUBA 263 (1995).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. By definition, all land outside an acknowledged UGB and not the subject of an exception to Goal 14 is "rural" land. When amending its acknowledged comprehensive plan and zone designations for such land, a local government must demonstrate that the new plan and zone designations comply with Goal 14 or adopt an exception to Goal 14. Churchill v. Tillamook County, 29 Or LUBA 68 (1995).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Plan and zone designations that allow residential development on lots smaller than one-half acre, with community water and sewer services, allow urban uses. Churchill v. Tillamook County, 29 Or LUBA 68 (1995).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Where a local government redesignates and rezones what had previously been designated and zoned as agricultural or forestland, and applies a zoning district allowing residential development on existing lots much smaller than 10 acres, the local government must address compliance with Goals 11 and 14. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Yamhill County, 27 Or LUBA 508 (1994).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Where amendments to an exclusive farm use (EFU) zoning district do not change the maximum allowable density of nonfarm dwellings in PUDs, but may have the effect of increasing the numbers of, and circumstances in which, residential PUDs may be approved on EFU-zoned land, the county must consider these potential secondary effects of the amendments in determining whether the EFU zone, as amended, complies with Goals 11 and 14. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Marion County, 27 Or LUBA 303 (1994).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. The comprehensive plan provisions comprising a city's urban growth management program are clearly designed to implement Statewide Planning Goals 11 and 14. Therefore, a city errs in interpreting such plan provisions to allow the extension of urban sewage treatment service outside an urban growth boundary. DLCD v. City of Donald, 27 Or LUBA 208 (1994).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. Where the county plan and zone designations applied to certain rural property at the time of acknowledgment permit a level of activity that requires sewer service, a petitioner may not challenge proposed development allowed by the acknowledged plan and land use regulations on the basis that the allowed development violates Goals 11 and 14. DLCD v. Fargo Interchange Service District, 27 Or LUBA 150 (1994).

18.5 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Uses on Rural Land. A comprehensive plan policy that "urban services shall only be established within recognized urban growth boundaries" implements Goals 11 and 14. Because Goals 11 and 14 prohibit the extension of urban level services outside of urban growth boundaries, LUBA will not defer to a local government interpretation of that plan policy as allowing extension of service from an urban sewage treatment plant to a rural area. ORS 197.829(4). DLCD v. Fargo Interchange Service District, 27 Or LUBA 150 (1994).

18.6.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Annexations/Incorporation – Goal Standards. OAR 660-014-0060 requires that local governments apply acknowledged comprehensive plans and ordinances to annexation decisions in lieu of the statewide planning goals, unless the plan and ordinance do not "control the annexation." A comprehensive plan policy need not be a mandatory approval criterion to "control the annexation" for purposes of OAR 660-014-0060; it is sufficient that the policy provides relevant guidance with respect to annexations. Costco Wholesale Corporation v. City of Beaverton, 50 Or LUBA 476 (2005).

18.6.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Annexations/Incorporation – Goal Standards. Under OAR 660-014-0060, which requires that local governments apply acknowledged comprehensive plans and ordinances to annexation decisions in lieu of the statewide planning goals, unless the plan and ordinance do not "control the annexation," whether the plan and ordinances control the annexation depends on whether the plan and ordinances include substantive standards guiding a city's determination whether or not to annex land, not whether the plan and ordinances include procedures specific to annexations. Patterson v. City of Independence, 49 Or LUBA 589 (2005).

18.6.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Annexations/Incorporation – Goal Standards. Which substantive comprehensive plan and ordinance standards that local governments apply to annexation decisions under OAR 660-014-0060 depend in part on the nature of the annexation. The considerations governing annexation of right-of-way will differ from those that govern annexation of a parcel for industrial, commercial or residential uses. Patterson v. City of Independence, 49 Or LUBA 589 (2005).

18.6.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Annexations/Incorporation – Goal Standards. Given the limited nature of a proposed annexation of a city-maintained right-of-way, comprehensive plan policies implementing Goals 12 and 14 that provide general guidance regarding annexation decisions are sufficient to "control the annexation" of the right-of-way for purposes of OAR 660-014-0060, and thus make it unnecessary to apply the goals directly. Patterson v. City of Independence, 49 Or LUBA 589 (2005).

18.6.1 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Annexations/Incorporation – Goal Standards. Neither Goal 11 nor Goal 14 identifies annexation or application of city zoning as the decision points at which (1) a specific development proposal must be approved and (2) any public service or facility inadequacies at the property must be corrected. Just v. City of Lebanon, 45 Or LUBA 179 (2003).

18.6.2 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Annexations/Incorporation – LCDC Rule. OAR 660-024-0050(6) requires that when land is added to an urban growth boundary (UGB), the local government "must assign appropriate urban plan designations to the added land, consistent with the need determination and the requirements of section (7) of this rule, if applicable." OAR 660-024-0050(7) provides lands included with a UGB for a public facility "must be planned and zoned for the intended use and must remain planned and zoned for that use unless the city removes the land from the UGB." A city decision to retain the land's existing Exclusive Farm Use zoning until the land is annexed into the city is inconsistent with the OAR 660-024-0050(7) requirement to adopt concurrent plan and zone re-designation "for [that] intended use." Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

18.6.2 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Annexations/Incorporation – LCDC Rule. Petitioners' argument that a proposed golf course expansion violates Goal 14 because it constitutes an expansion of an urban use onto rural EFU-zoned land provides no basis for reversal or remand, because Goal 14 does not apply to a permit to expand a use allowed in an EFU zone. DLCD v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 88 (1999).

18.6.2 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Annexations/Incorporation – LCDC Rule. Where a local government decision does not incorporate a new city but erroneously applies LCDC's rules concerning incorporation of new cities in the course of taking an exception to Goal 14, the error is harmless and provides no basis for reversal or remand. James v. Josephine County, 35 Or LUBA 493 (1999).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Exceptions to. In the context of a reasons exception to allow a data center use on agricultural land, while a local government cannot judge whether a property has a service-based locational advantage without a complete understanding of the extent of services in the alternative locations, the absence of an inventory of existing infrastructure in the record does not undermine the decision-maker's conclusion that the exception area provides a "significant comparative advantage," for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c), where alternative sites were not rejected based upon the unavailability of services. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Morrow County, 81 Or LUBA 508 (2020).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Exceptions to. Speculation that a reasons exception to allow an industrial use on agricultural land will hasten future zone change applications does not establish that the exception will not "cause only minimal loss of reproductive resource lands" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0022(3)(c); however, the fact that that an equal amount of land elsewhere in the jurisdiction will be rezoned from industrial to agricultural does not demonstrate that that criterion is met where the findings do not discuss the quality or productivity of the resource lands in the proposed exception area or otherwise attempt to describe, in qualitative terms, what removing the agricultural zoning of the proposed exception area means for resource land productivity. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Morrow County, 81 Or LUBA 508 (2020).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Exceptions to. In the context of a reasons exception to allow a data center use on agricultural land, that a site is under contract or currently used for the disposal of wastewater; that a site is in federal ownership and that its ownership transfer timeline is unknown; that much of a site is covered in wetlands and that removal and fill of the wetlands will increase risk and will increase costs in an amount in the tens of thousands of dollars; that a site is too close to other existing or planned data centers to avoid general, undefined issues of facility proximity and interdependence; and that a site is inconsistent with the applicant's objective of ultimately extending services to a particular property do not necessarily establish that those sites "cannot reasonable accommodate the use" for purposes of OAR 660-004-0020(2)(b). 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Morrow County, 81 Or LUBA 508 (2020).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Only "transportation facilities and improvements" that meet the requirements of OAR 660-012-0065 are allowed on EFU-zoned "rural land" without an exception to Goals 3, 11 and 14. OAR 660-012-0070 provides that "transportation facilities" that do not meet the requirements of OAR 660-012-0065 cannot be constructed on "rural land" without an exception to the applicable goals. However, OAR 660-012-0070 does not require an exception to the applicable resource and urban goals where the city concurrently includes the land within its urban growth boundary, because the land is no longer "rural land" as defined in that rule. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 215 Or App 414, 171 P3d 368 (2007), which involved a reasons exception to Goals 3, 4 and 14 to develop a hotel on land zoned exclusive farm use (EFU), and its holding which interprets the rules for reasons exceptions, is inapposite where no reasons exception is involved. Similarly, OAR 661-012-0070 and its requirements for exceptions for transportation improvements on rural land do not apply where no exception to a resource goal is sought. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. In adopting an exception to Goal 14 based on commitment to urban levels of development, a county must do more than address all the factors set out at OAR 660-014-0030(3) and adopt findings of fact. OAR 660-014-0030(4) requires "a statement of reason explaining why the facts found support the conclusion that the land in question is committed to urban uses and urban level development rather than a rural level of development." Where that explanation for why the facts the county found support a conclusion that the property is committed to urban use is entirely missing, LUBA will sustain the challenge to the Goal 14 exception. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 156 (2016).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. It is inconsistent to approve a committed exception to Goal 14 to allow urban uses of the property (because all rural uses are impracticable) and then apply a zoning district that was adopted to limit industrial uses to rural industrial uses. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 156 (2016).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. LUBA will not affirm a hearings officer's decision based on a legal theory that application of a rural industrial zone to rural property does not require an exception to Goal 14, where the hearings officer did not adopt that theory and instead approved an exception to Goal 14 to apply the rural industrial zone. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 156 (2016).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. The statewide planning goal exception standards are set out at ORS 197.732 (statutory standard); Goal 2, Part II (goal standard); OAR chapter 660, division 4 (general administrative rule standard); OAR 660-012-0070) (transportation improvements on rural land); and OAR chapter 660, division 14 (urban development of rural land). Those different exception standards vary somewhat in their wording and level of detail, and where a Goal 14 exception is required to allow residential development on rural land, OAR 660-014-0040 is the more particular standard and the exception standard that applies to such Goal 14 exceptions. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 215 Or App 414, 422-23, 171 P3d 368 (2007). Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 61 Or LUBA 240 (2010).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. A net reduction in potential development density on rural land could be a sufficient reason under OAR 660-014-0040(2) to allow existing rural residential zoning to be relocated and reduced in size. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 61 Or LUBA 240 (2010).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. The proximity of an RV camp/campground to an urban growth boundary, the proposed density of campground spaces, and the provision of utilities to individual camp sites temporarily occupied by RVs are not sufficient, in themselves, to convert a rural campground to an "urban use" requiring an exception to Goal 14. Linn County Farm Bureau v. Linn County, 61 Or LUBA 323 (2010).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. The standards for approving a destination resort under Goal 8 and ORS 197.435 through 197.467 function as a "safe harbor" that allows local governments to approve resorts that meet minimum standards, without the necessity of adopting exceptions to Goals 11 and 14. However, the statutory process is not the only means of approving a destination resort, and counties continue to have the option of approving a destination resort subject to exceptions to Goals 3, 4, 11 and 14. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. A county may rely on the reasons that justified a Goal 4 exception earlier approved by the county and Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) for a proposed destination resort to justify reasons exceptions to Goals 11 and 14, where the record supports the county's finding that the Goal 4 reasons are still valid and the Goals 11 and 14 exceptions merely implement and complete the earlier county and LCDC approval. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Because Goal 11 and Goal 14 serve congruent policy objectives, the reasons sufficient to justify a Goal 14 exception for a destination resort may also be sufficient to justify an exception to Goal 11 to authorize a community sewer system to serve the destination resort. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Where the county and the Land Conservation and Development Commission previously approved a Goal 4 exception for a destination resort under conditions requiring specified on-site accommodations and facilities, and the county imposed an overlay zone to ensure that the resort includes those on-site accommodations and facilities, in later adopting a reasons exception to Goal 14 to complete the proposed resort the county can consider those required accommodations and facilities to be essential characteristics of the proposed use, for purposes of the alternative sites analysis required under OAR 660-014-0040(3)(a). In that circumstance, the county does not err in concluding that alternative sites within urban growth boundaries cannot reasonably accommodate the proposed use. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Where Goal 11 and 14 exceptions are necessary to complete a previously approved destination resort that is authorized under the county's acknowledged comprehensive plan and land use regulations, and the resort as completed is substantially similar to the resort as originally approved, the Goal 11 and 14 exceptions do not propose "new uses" that could be conflicting uses with a significant Goal 5 resource site and thus the county does not err in failing to apply the requirements of Goal 5 and the Goal 5 rule. Friends of Marion County v. Marion County, 59 Or LUBA 323 (2009).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Viewing the factors set forth in 1000 Friends of Oregon v. LCDC (Curry Co.), 301 Or 447, 724 P2d 268 (1986), together, a proposed use of land for an RV Park is an urban use of rural land that is prohibited without an exception to Goal 14. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 55 Or LUBA 545 (2008).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. OAR 660-004-0040(6) requires that a local government ensure that amendments to its rural residential zones to authorize lots as small as two acres are justified with exceptions to Goal 14. However, when a local government does so, OAR 660-004-0040(6) does not apply to unamended portions of the local government's comprehensive plan and land use regulations. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Curry County, 53 Or LUBA 503 (2007).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. OAR 660-004-0040(3)(b) requires that when a local government "amends its plan's provisions or land use regulations that apply to any rural residential area, it shall do so in accordance with this rule." However, when a local government does so, OAR 660-004-0040 does not apply to unamended portions of the local government's comprehensive plan and land use regulations. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Curry County, 53 Or LUBA 503 (2007).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. A 50-unit deluxe "wine country" hotel that is intended to attract customers from urban areas is "urban development" for purposes of adopting a reasons exception to Goal 14 under OAR 660-014-0040. That the rural setting of the hotel is part of its commercial appeal does not mean the hotel is rural development. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Because the provisions OAR 660-004 govern the exception process as it applies to statewide planning goals "except as provided for" in OAR 660-014, it is reasonably clear that the Land Conservation and Development Commission intends that a reasons exception for proposed urban development be evaluated under OAR 660-014, not OAR 660-004. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Given the strong family resemblance between the various rules that interpret and apply Goal 2, Part II and ORS 197.732 in different contexts, any cases interpreting OAR 660-004-0022, the goal or the statute are at least potentially helpful in interpreting OAR 660-014-0040(2), or in evaluating a reasons exception under that rule. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Where a local government proceeds to justify an exception under reasons listed in OAR 660-014-0040(2) or OAR 660-004-0022, the decision must demonstrate that each of the elements set out in the listed reason is met. That the listed reasons are not exclusive does not mean that an exception is permissible in circumstances where only some of the elements for each listed reason are met. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. In adopting a reasons exception to allow urban development on rural land under OAR 660-014-0040(2), a local government must justify any "essential characteristic" of the proposed development, where those characteristics have the effect of eliminating the need to consider alternative locations to site the proposed urban development within urban growth boundaries under OAR 660-014-0040(3). VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Where a local government justifies a 12-acre exception area for proposed urban development under OAR 660-014-0040, the local government cannot evaluate alternative sites under OAR 660-014-0040(3) based on a minimum 33-acre parcel size. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Under OAR 660-014-0040, a local government may not treat as an "essential characteristic" of a proposed wine country hotel a location that is proximate to the densest concentration of wineries, absent evidence that locations near lesser but still significant concentrations of wineries cannot reasonably accommodate the proposed need for the hotel. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Not every feature, such as "rural ambiance," that would increase the odds of economic success of a proposed urban hotel on rural lands is an essential characteristic of the use, that can be used to categorically reject otherwise suitable alternative sites within or adjacent to urban areas under OAR 660-014-0040(2) and (3). VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. A mere consumer preference among wine connoisseurs for luxury hotels in rural settings is not a sufficient basis to render a rural setting an essential characteristic of a hotel designed to accommodate affluent wine tourists, for purposes of OAR 660-014-0040, absent evidence that there is an economically significant demographic of wine tourist that will only stay in rural luxury hotels and will not stay in urban luxury hotels. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. A county does not err in rejecting an argument that a reasons exception is not available to allow a proposed hotel on rural land, because the proposed development is in essence a destination resort, and therefore potentially allowable without an exception, under the reasoning in DLCD v. Yamhill County, 183 Or App 556, 53 P3d 462 (2002), where the applicable goals, rules and statutes effectively prohibit a destination resort of any kind on the subject property, and thus there is no means short of a goal exception to approve the proposed use on the property. VinCEP v. Yamhill County, 53 Or LUBA 514 (2007).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Where a previously adopted exception to Goal 14 establishes a two-acre minimum lot size for a specific parcel, a county does not err in later rezoning that parcel to allow subdivision and residential development of that parcel with a minimum lot size of two acres without taking an exception to Goal 14 or adopting findings to establish that the development that would be allowed under that new zoning would constitute rural rather than urban development. It does not matter that the parcel was located outside the Goal 14 exception area where the prior Goal 14 exception clearly identified the parcel and clearly authorized a two-acre minimum lot size for that parcel. Holloway v. Clatsop County, 52 Or LUBA 644 (2006).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Where a proposed plan amendment, zone change and goal exception would result in a split-zoned parcel with the northern portion planned and zoned for residential use and the southern portion planned and zoned for resource use, and a policy in the county's comprehensive plan at least arguably permits land divisions along boundaries separating exception areas from resource lands, and such a division would result in lots smaller than the minimum lot size permitted by the county's acknowledged Goal 14 exception, the county must adopt Goal 14 findings or, if necessary, adopt a specific exception to Goal 14. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 51 Or LUBA 730 (2006).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. OAR 660-004-0030(7) authorizes a county to adopt an exception to Goal 14 for rural residential zone or planning designations in a legislative proceeding, and to subsequently apply such zones or plan designations to specific properties without the necessity of applying or taking an exception to Goal 14. Wetherell v. Douglas County, 50 Or LUBA 167 (2005).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. In adopting a committed exception to Goal 14, a county does not err in assuming that residential properties less than 2 acres constitute "urban levels of development," to support its conclusion that all rural uses on the subject property are impractical. Doob v. Josephine County, 49 Or LUBA 113 (2005).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. When a local government demonstrates that land may be included in an urban growth boundary under OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(i) by demonstrating compliance with the seven factors of Goal 14, the local government need not take exceptions to other goals individually. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Although OAR 661-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(i) nominally requires a local government to apply all seven of the Goal 14 factors, when the local government is proceeding under the "unneeded but committed" exception, the two "need" factors of Goal 14 need not be addressed. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. When a local government amends its urban growth boundary under the "unneeded but committed" exception it demonstrates that the land is committed to urban uses under the five "locational factors" of Goal 14. The local government need not adopt an irrevocably committed exception under OAR 660-004-0028. Milne v. City of Canby, 46 Or LUBA 213 (2004).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Even when the Goal 14 rule on rural residential development at OAR 660-004-0040 does not apply to a proposed plan or zone change for residential development on rural land, a local government must still address whether the proposed residential development is consistent with Goal 14. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 41 Or LUBA 247 (2002).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. A finding that property is "not ideal" for rural residential use under current zoning is not sufficient to demonstrate that it is "impracticable" to use the property for such rural residential use, where a rural residence exists on the property and the decision does not explain why proximity to the interstate highway or other abutting uses make continued rural residential use impracticable. James v. Josephine County, 35 Or LUBA 493 (1999).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. Where a local government decision does not incorporate a new city but erroneously applies LCDC's rules concerning incorporation of new cities in the course of taking an exception to Goal 14, the error is harmless and provides no basis for reversal or remand. James v. Josephine County, 35 Or LUBA 493 (1999).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. An exception to Goal 14 is not required where the local government imposes a zoning overlay that limits the subject property to rural uses. Sanders v. Yamhill County, 34 Or LUBA 69 (1998).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. When a change in the type or intensity of an existing use is proposed for an exception area, the county must (1) make findings showing either that Goal 14 does not apply or the proposal complies with an existing Goal 14 exception; or (2) take a new Goal 14 exception. Leathers v. Marion County, 31 Or LUBA 220 (1996).

18.7 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Exceptions to. By definition, all land outside an acknowledged UGB and not the subject of an exception to Goal 14 is "rural" land. When amending its acknowledged comprehensive plan and zone designations for such land, a local government must demonstrate that the new plan and zone designations comply with Goal 14 or adopt an exception to Goal 14. Churchill v. Tillamook County, 29 Or LUBA 68 (1995).

18.8 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Urban Reserves. Although the county concedes it erred in denying a plan amendment and zone change application based on the belief that the subject property was, at the time the county made its decision, within a designated urban reserve area, when the LCDC's urban reserve designation regarding the subject property had not actually become final at the time in question, LUBA will not remand the decision if the county's decision identifies at least one valid basis for denial that is affirmed on appeal. Stafford Investments, LP v. Clackamas County, 78 Or LUBA 320 (2018).

18.8 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Urban Reserves. LUBA will uphold a county's interpretation of its own comprehensive plan policy regarding when a property may be designated rural commercial where the county evaluated the historic uses of the subject property and concluded that those uses did not demonstrate a "historical commitment to commercial uses," after concluding that (1) temporary commercial uses, (2) incidental or accessory commercial uses to permitted residential or farm uses on the property, and (3) the current unlawful commercial uses on the property were not sufficient to demonstrate "historical commitment" of the property to commercial use, where the county chose to focus on "commitment" which the county understood to require an inquiry into the nature of the historic uses on the property and a determination of whether commercial uses have constrained the scope of the uses on the property such that going forward only commercial uses are feasible, rather than defining commitment in terms of years of commercial use. Stafford Investments, LP v. Clackamas County, 78 Or LUBA 320 (2018).

18.8 Goal 14 – Urbanization – Urban Reserves. Under OAR 660-021-0040(4), when resource lands are designated as an Urban Reserve, they must continue to be planned and zoned for the resource uses they were planned and zoned for under Goal 3, Goal 4, Goal 16, Goal 17 or Goal 18 until they are included in the UGB and made available for urban development. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Jefferson County, 65 Or LUBA 75 (2012).

18.8 Goal 14 – Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. It would be inconsistent with ORS 197.625 to allow a local government to rely on an unacknowledged urban reserve designation as a means to avoid the necessity of finding compliance with Goal 14 and other applicable criteria. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Metro, 38 Or LUBA 565 (2000).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. A local government does not violate the Goal 2 consistency requirement by using updated population projections instead of population projections in its comprehensive plan to determine the size of the urban land need under the urban reserve rule, OAR 660-021-0030, where the two projections serve different purposes and use of the updated projections does not undermine or conflict with the comprehensive plan or implementing regulations. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. The urban reserve rule does not require local governments to study all adjacent lands for suitability for inclusion in urban reserves. However, the inventory of suitable lands that the local government compiles must be responsive in size and composition to the urban land need and the priorities provided in OAR 660-021-0030(3). D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. A local government cannot rely upon an inadequate supply of higher priority lands to designate lower priority lands into urban reserves under OAR 660-021-0030(3) or (4), where the local government created the inadequacy it relies upon by failing to include enough higher priority lands in the inventory of suitable lands it compiled under OAR 660-021-0030(2). D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. The primary purpose of OAR 660-021-0030(5) is to develop findings that can form the basis of comprehensive plan language to guide future urbanization decisions. Thus, OAR 660-021-0030(5) requires that the local government adopt findings describing the results of its consideration of the suitability criteria in OAR 660-010-0030(2) for all lands included in urban reserves. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. In determining whether land is suitable for inclusion in urban reserves under the criteria at OAR 660-021-0030(2), evaluation of suitability under Goal 14, factors 3 to 7 is sufficient to show that land is suitable under each of the criteria at Goal 2, Part II, ORS 197.732(1)(c) and OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B), with the exception of the alternative sites analysis required under Goal 2, Part II (b), ORS 197.732(1)(c)(ii), and OAR 660-004-0010(1)(c)(B)(ii). D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. In determining whether land is suitable for inclusion in urban reserves, OAR 660-021-0030(2) requires that, prior to including any lower priority land in urban reserves pursuant to OAR 660-021-0030(4), the local government must conduct an alternative sites analysis sufficient to demonstrate that nonresource lands cannot reasonably accommodate the need that justifies the inclusion of land under OAR 660-021-0030(4). D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. In order to find that land is suitable for inclusion in urban reserves under OAR 660-021-0030(2), the local government must define a threshold for each applicable Goal 14 factor, and determine with respect to the lands studied whether the land achieves that defined threshold for each of the applicable Goal 14 factors. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. In determining whether land is suitable for inclusion in urban reserves under OAR 660-021-0030(2), "maximum efficiency of land uses" under Goal 14, factor 4 means that including the land under consideration in urban reserves would encourage (1) urbanization of lands proximate to existing urbanization over more distant lands and (2) urbanization of partially developed lands over undeveloped lands. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. Because land found suitable for urban reserves can be included in urban reserves only under the priorities established in OAR 660-021-0030(3), a local government cannot apply criteria extrinsic to the urban reserve rule to exclude otherwise suitable land from consideration, where doing so alters the inventory of suitable lands in a manner that allows designation of lands in violation of the OAR 660-0021-0030(3) priorities. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. Local governments can include resource land in urban reserves as first priority lands under OAR 660-021-0030(3)(a) only where the resource land is completely bordered on all sides by lands for which an exception to Goals 3 or 4 has been taken. Resource land that is partially surrounded by other resource lands is not "completely surrounded by exception areas" within the meaning of OAR 660-021-0030(3)(a). D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. Any lands designated as "marginal lands" pursuant to ORS 197.247 retain that status, notwithstanding repeal of that statute. Where the local government is considering lands for inclusion in urban reserves that might include marginal lands, it must correctly identify those lands and assign them second priority status pursuant to OAR 660-021-0030(3)(b). Failure to do so is inconsistent with the urban reserve rule because it treats second priority marginal lands as fourth priority resource lands. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. A local government may include third priority "secondary lands" within urban reserves under OAR 660-021-0030(3)(c) only if such lands have been designated as secondary lands pursuant to a statutory or rule-based definition. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. A local government may substitute lower priority lands for higher priority lands under the exceptions in OAR 660-021-0030(4) only where no land higher in priority than the land under consideration is adequate to accommodate the identified land need. To make that evaluation, the local government must first categorize the inventory of suitable lands according to the OAR 660-021-0030(3) priority scheme. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. The OAR 660-021-0030(4)(a) "jobs/housing" exception requires an analysis of whether higher priority lands, considered cumulatively, can reasonably accommodate the number of housing units or jobs needed to meet the identified need. Local governments err in limiting their analysis under that provision to whether higher priority lands considered individually are reasonable alternatives to the lower priority land under consideration. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. Where a local government includes lands in urban reserves under one or more of the exceptions provided in OAR 660-021-0030(4), it must adopt findings as required by OAR 660-021-0030(5) that are sufficient to ensure that those lands are developed in accordance with the justification for including them in urban reserves. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. Lower priority land may be included in urban reserves under OAR 660-021-0030(4)(c) where inclusion of that land is required in order for a proposed urban reserve area to achieve a maximally efficient urban form. That including lower priority land in urban reserves would allow provision of urban services to those reserves at least-cost is not a sufficient basis to include land under OAR 660-021-0030(4)(c). D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. Where a local government includes lower priority lands in urban reserves under OAR 660-021-0030(4)(c) because inclusion of such lands is required to achieve the maximum efficiency of land uses, the local government must justify the extent of the lower priority lands included in reserves, and may not include more lower priority lands than are required to achieve that purpose. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. OAR 660-021-0030(4)(c) does not permit a local government to include lower priority lands in urban reserves because those lands are in the vicinity of higher priority lands and their inclusion would amortize costs or achieve an economy of scale in providing urban services to those higher priority lands. The exception in OAR 660-021-0030(4)(c) is directed at circumstances where the geographic relationship between higher priority lands, the urban area, and the lower priority lands under consideration is such that lower priority lands must be included in reserves in order to achieve the maximum efficiency of land uses. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. The requirement at OAR 660-021-0020 that a local government coordinate with affected governmental units in including lands within urban reserves is coextensive with the Goal 2 coordination requirement. Under either requirement, the local government must consider and accommodate as much as possible the needs of affected jurisdictions, and must respond in its findings to the legitimate concerns raised by those jurisdictions. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

18.8 Urbanization/ Goal 14 Rule – Urban Reserves. Designation of "First Tier" urban reserves that will be urbanized or be considered for urbanization before other urban reserves are urbanized or considered for urbanization is inconsistent with Goal 14 where that designation is based on a single Goal 14 factor, rather than on consideration and balancing of all of the Goal 14 factors. D.S. Parklane Development, Inc. v. Metro, 35 Or LUBA 516 (1999).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Goal 15 guidelines and county code requirements that require to "the greatest possible degree, necessary and adequate public access will be provided along the Willamette River by appropriate legal means," can be met where the city finds that current public access along the river provided by a public riverfront path is adequate, and the city does not err in construing the provision as requiring access only "along" the river instead of "to" the river. Hulme v. City of Eugene, 79 Or LUBA 218 (2019).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Where a cross-petitioner seeks a remedy not available to it by statute, it is an obstacle to LUBA's review of the cross-assignment of error. LUBA lacks authority to affirm in part, and reverse in part a local government's approval of cross-petitioner's project application. ORS 197.835(1). Even assuming that the city erred by applying Willamette Greenway standards to cross-petitioner's housing project application, because they are not "clear and objective," the city's decision approving the development could not be reversed because it is not "prohibited as a matter of law." If LUBA agreed with cross-petitioners, the correct disposition would be remand, except that remand was not requested and would have no effect on the city's decision approving the application. In such a situation, LUBA will consider the request a contingent cross-assignment of error. Hulme v. City of Eugene, 79 Or LUBA 218 (2019).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Pursuant to OAR 660-004-0018(4)(a), where a city finds that "[e]xisting plan and zoning designations" will be maintained for land subject to a Goal 15 exception, but does not explain why "existing plan and zoning designations" "limit the uses * * * public facilities and services, and activities" to only those that are justified in the exception, remand is required for the city to explain why the land subject to an exception to Goal 15 satisfies the requirement in OAR 660-004-0018(4)(a) that the plan and zone designations "limit the uses * * * public facilities and services, and activities" to those justified in the exception, or apply plan and zone designations that limit the uses to the transportation facilities that are justified in the exception. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Where a petitioner argues a Geographic Information System map in the record suggests that a portion of the Willamette River Greenway included in a city's Goal 15 exception is located outside the city limits, but within county limits, and therefore the county is also required to join in or approve its own Goal 15 exception, petitioner fails to allege a basis for remand or reversal because as a matter of law the official Willamette River Greenway overlay zone boundary is the boundary mapped by the Oregon Department of Transportation, which confirms the greenway overlay zone is entirely within city limits. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. OAR 660-004-0022(6), which provides the standards for approving an exception to Goal 15, allows adverse effect on habitat as long as the adverse effect is not "significant." An argument that challenges a local government's findings that with mitigation, impacts to riparian habitat from a proposed new bridge project will not be significant because the need for mitigation at all demonstrates that the bridge will have a "significant adverse effect" on riparian values provides no basis for reversal or remand. Deumling v. City of Salem, 76 Or LUBA 99 (2017).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Goal 15 requires that the Willamette Greenway setback be based on the inventory of uses and resources within the Greenway. Remand is necessary where a city adopts a 75-foot setback that is not based on the acknowledged Greenway inventory. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. The category of "water-related uses" that may be allowed within the Greenway setback include waterfront paths, boardwalks, educational displays and similar public facilities used to provide public access to the waterfront. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Roads and highways are not water related uses allowed within a Greenway setback without an exception to Goal 15. However, a code provision authorizing "bridges for pedestrians, bicycles and motor vehicles" within the Greenway setback is not categorically inconsistent with Goal 15, as some bridges could qualify as water related uses. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Goal 15 requires that the Greenway boundaries be shown on a comprehensive plan map, but does not require local governments to show the Greenway setback from the river on a comprehensive plan map. Shamrock Homes LLC v. City of Springfield, 68 Or LUBA 1 (2013).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Even if a county is not required to issue Willamette Greenway approvals at the same time it issues a use permit to retroactively approve a wedding event business within the Greenway, a county must nonetheless impose conditions or other measures sufficient to ensure that required Greenway permits will be obtained. White v. Lane County, 68 Or LUBA 423 (2013).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. When a local government amends its greenway boundary to include additional land not previously included within the boundary, the local government must also amend its Goal 15, Paragraph B inventory to include the new land in the inventory. Gunderson, LLC v. City of Portland, 67 Or LUBA 290 (2013).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Goal 15 is silent regarding whether amendments to the greenway regulations trigger an obligation to update the greenway inventory, and if so whether the entire inventory must be updated or only the parts of the inventory that are affected by the amendments. However, the phrase "develop the plans and * * * programs" can be fairly read to encompass not only the initial development of the plans and programs but continued development and evolution of the plans and programs through changes to them. Where a current inventory or portions of that inventory were used in developing new greenway regulations, or if the new greenway regulations are of such a nature that the inventory or some part of the inventory must be updated, the inventory must be updated. Gunderson, LLC v. City of Portland, 67 Or LUBA 290 (2013).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. LUBA will affirm a planning commission's conclusion that ponds and a slough area were included within the city's Willamette River Greenway boundary for their important natural values, and not because the area is a "channel" of the Willamette River, where the city's adopted greenway boundary map and a study the city relied on in setting the boundaries support the city's conclusion. Willamette Oaks, LLC v. City of Eugene, 67 Or LUBA 351 (2013).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. The phrase "flows water at ordinary low water" as used in ORS 390.310(1) most likely refers to the flow of water of a surface body of water from the main channel of the Willamette River into the disputed body of water. Willamette Oaks, LLC v. City of Eugene, 67 Or LUBA 351 (2013).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Water flowing from the main channel of the Willamette River through gravel and rocks of a man-made weir is not a method of transmitting water from the river that falls within the ORS 390.310(1) description of "flows water at ordinary low water." Willamette Oaks, LLC v. City of Eugene, 67 Or LUBA 351 (2013).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. A hearings officer's interpretation of the phrase "Willamette River" found in the portion of the city's code that implements Statewide Planning Goal 15 (Willamette River Greenway) as meaning only the main channel of the Willamette River is inconsistent with the definition of "Willamette River" set out at ORS 390.310(3), which is referenced in Goal 15 and which defines Willamette River to include all "channels" of the river. Willamette Oaks LLC v. Lane County, 64 Or LUBA 328 (2011).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Goal 15, Paragraph (C)(3)(j) does not provide a blanket exemption from development review for expansions or intensifications of existing urban uses that are located within the Willamette River Greenway, but merely recognizes that urban uses that were already located along the riverfront at Goal 15's adoption are allowed to remain along the riverfront without having to be relocated "away from the river." Gunderson, LLC v. City of Portland, 62 Or LUBA 403 (2011).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Challenges to a local government's amendment of the Willamette River Greenway boundary for compliance with Statewide Planning Goal 15 are not within LUBA's scope of review. ORS 390.322 gives LCDC jurisdiction to approve greenway boundary amendments, and OAR 660-020-0065(6) provides that such amendments are to be approved by rule making. ORS 197.825(2)(d) provides that LUBA does not have jurisdiction to review administrative agency decisions that result in rule making. Gunderson, LLC v. City of Portland, 62 Or LUBA 403 (2011).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. A city finding that the "top of the bank" is located entirely within 50 horizontal feet of the high water line is not supported by substantial evidence, where the applicant submitted a survey showing that at two points the top of the bank is further than 50 horizontal feet, and the city cites no specific evidence to the contrary. Kingsley v. City of Portland, 55 Or LUBA 256 (2007).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Where a city code requires that one of two different methods for determining the top of the bank be applied, depending on which of two specified site conditions are found, the choice of method for determining the top of the bank is governed by the corresponding site condition, notwithstanding that the resulting top of the bank is discontinuous.

The city errs in determining the location of the top of the bank based not on one of the two specified methods, but rather on the city's preference for a continuous setback. Kingsley v. City of Portland, 55 Or LUBA 256 (2007).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. Goal 15 requires that local comprehensive plans designate lands within the Willamette River Greenway that are suitable for acquisition so that they may be put to one of a number of uses identified in Goal 15. Willamette Oaks, LLC v. City of Eugene, 46 Or LUBA 813 (2004).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. A final city decision to purchase property within the Willamette River Greenway is a land use decision, where the city is required to apply its comprehensive plan provisions that identify the property the city will purchase within the Willamette River Greenway for Willamette River Greenway purposes. Willamette Oaks, LLC v. City of Eugene, 46 Or LUBA 813 (2004).

19. Goal 15 – Willamette River Greenway. A statement that the requested Willamette River Greenway permit is to allow placement of a dwelling on the identified subject property is sufficient to satisfy the requirement of ORS 197.763(3)(a) that the notice of hearing "[e]xplain the nature of the application and the proposed use or uses which could be authorized." Reeves v. Yamhill County, 28 Or LUBA 123 (1994).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. A local government need not interpret the term "protect" the same way in the context of a statewide planning goal that does not protect a specific, unique natural resource or specific recreation area that it does in the context of a goal that does protect those things, even where the definitions of "protect" in the latter goal and in the local government's comprehensive plan are identical. Crowley v. City of Hood River, 81 Or LUBA 490 (2020).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Where a comprehensive plan provision allows "minor navigational improvements" in a particular zone, which it defines as "alterations necessary to provide water access to existing or permitted uses in conservation management units," an interpretation of that provision as not requiring that the use for which the alteration is needed and the alteration itself be located in the same zone is consistent with the provision's express language; however, an interpretation of that provision as allowing alterations that are needed for a use that is not located in a "conservation management unit" is inconsistent the provision's express language. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. City of North Bend, 81 Or LUBA 534 (2020).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Where a comprehensive plan management objective allows "a limited boat dock for transient recreation craft tie-up" in a particular zone, and the uses and activities matrix for the zone allows "docks" without limitation, but a different comprehensive plan provision states that uses and activities matrices are "subordinate" to management objectives and that allowed uses and activities must be "consistent" with the management objectives, a local government errs by allowing nonlimited boat docks in the zone. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. City of North Bend, 81 Or LUBA 534 (2020).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Goal 16, Implementation Requirement 2 (allows dredging in the estuary based on a finding of demonstrated need (e.g., a substantial public benefit), which necessarily requires consideration of the need for or public benefit of the land-based use that the dredging serves, because dredging in itself provides no public benefits apart from the uses that dredging serves. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. While Goal 16, Implementation Requirement 2 (IR2) requires a demonstration of need (e.g., a substantial public benefit) for a proposed land use served by dredging estuarine waters, IR2 does not require that the decision-maker weigh potential benefits of the proposed use against potential detriments to arrive a "net" public benefit. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. A county errs in finding that the Goal 16, Implementation Requirement 2 "demonstrated need" standard is met based on the fact that the proposed water-dependent use is an allowed use in the estuarine zone, which generally allows only water-dependent uses, as that approach conflates the separate requirements for a "water-dependent" use and a "demonstrated need" for the use. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Remand is necessary where a county finds that exclusion zones around liquefied natural gas tankers in a narrow estuary will not interfere with public trusts right to use the estuary based on the county's understanding that the Coast Guard will allow "known" boats to traverse the exclusion zone without delay, but the expert evidence in the record does not support that finding. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. In reviewing a proposed liquefied natural gas (LNG) terminal, the "demonstrated need/substantial public benefits" requirement of Goal 16, Implementation Requirement 2, does not require a county to consider the adverse effects of greenhouse gases on climate change that could be attributed to overseas consumption of natural gas that is shipped to markets via the proposed LNG. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. The "clearly supports" standard at ORS 197.835(11)(b) does not authorize LUBA to affirm a decision notwithstanding inadequate findings, where the lack of adequate findings concern a subjective approval standard under Goal 16 requiring that the local government, in approving development in an estuary, identify the "public need [for] and gain" from the project warrant any modification or loss to estuarine values that would result from the development, and evaluate and minimize the adverse impacts of development. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. A local government errs in imposing a condition of approval deferring consideration of compliance with a comprehensive plan policy requiring the applicant and county to undertake a process to consult and resolve differences with local Native American tribes before approving development in an estuary, where the deferral is to an ad hoc proceeding without any assurances that the deferred proceeding will actually occur, and the deferral is not supported by findings demonstrating that deferral is permissible under Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992), or Gould v. Deschutes County, 227 Or App 601, 206 P3d 1106 (2009). Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. A liquefied natural gas export facility is a "terminal" for purposes of OAR 660-037-0040(6)(a)(C)(iii), and thus properly viewed as a use that qualifies as a "water-dependent use" allowed in estuarine zones. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Deferral of compliance with an approval standard to a subsequent proceeding under Rhyne v. Multnomah County, 23 Or LUBA 442 (1992), or Gould v. Deschutes County, 227 Or App 601, 206 P3d 1106 (2009), may not be permissible at all where the approval standard at issue invokes a particular process that is explicitly linked to submittal of the development application, requiring consultation and dispute resolution between the applicant, the local government, and a sovereign Native American Tribe before development approval. Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition v. Coos County, 76 Or LUBA 346 (2017).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Comprehensive plan amendments must be consistent with both Goal 16 and city comprehensive plan policies that implement Goal 16. Where the comprehensive plan implements Goal 16 in identical language, there is no practical difference in the way that LUBA reviews findings that apply one rather than the other. Oregon Coast Alliance v. City of Brookings, 72 Or LUBA 222 (2015).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Goal 16, Implementation Requirement 1 requires that actions that would potentially alter the estuarine ecosystem be preceded by a clear assessment of the impacts of the proposed alteration. Read in the context of Goal 16 itself, which requires protection of the environmental values of the estuary, Implementation Requirement 1 is best understood to require that the local government (1) review an impact assessment that adequately identifies potential adverse impacts on the estuary's physical processes or biological values from development allowed under proposed comprehensive plan or zoning amendments, and (2) ensure that such impacts are avoided or minimized. Oregon Coast Alliance v. City of Brookings, 72 Or LUBA 222 (2015).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. A finding that development will have no "significant" adverse impacts on estuarine resources does not indicate that the decision maker misunderstood the applicable test under Goal 16, Implementation Requirement 1, which is focused on evaluation of "potential" adverse impacts, where other findings address the potential for adverse impacts. Oregon Coast Alliance v. City of Brookings, 72 Or LUBA 222 (2015).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Under Goal 16, Implementation Requirement 1, a city errs in finding that development allowed under proposed residential zoning will not result in potential adverse impacts on adjacent estuarine resources, based on a comparison of potential impacts of hypothetical industrial uses that could be allowed under a former county zone. Goal 16, Implementation Requirement 1 requires evaluation and avoidance or minimization of impacts of development allowed under the proposed zoning, regardless of whether such impacts would be greater or lesser compared to the impacts of hypothetical uses allowed in former zones. Oregon Coast Alliance v. City of Brookings, 72 Or LUBA 222 (2015).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. While the evaluation of impacts on estuarine resources required by Goal 16, Implementation Requirement 1 need not be prepared by an expert, the nature of some types of potential adverse impacts caused by development on estuarine resources may be such that some technical expertise is necessary to provide substantial evidence to support conclusions based on the evaluation. Oregon Coast Alliance v. City of Brookings, 72 Or LUBA 222 (2015).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Where the record includes expert testimony that residential development may adversely impact endangered salmon species in an adjacent estuary through pollution from stormwater runoff, some level of scientific or professional expertise is necessary to rebut that testimony in order to provide supporting evidence for a contrary conclusion. A letter from the applicant's attorney opining that stormwater runoff will not adversely impact salmon is not substantial evidence to support that conclusion. Oregon Coast Alliance v. City of Brookings, 72 Or LUBA 222 (2015).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. LUBA will remand for more adequate findings where a city finds that a stormwater conveyance system constructed to city standards will minimize potential adverse impacts of stormwater pollutants on estuarine fish resources, where the finding does not describe potential adverse impacts, address expert testimony regarding those impacts, or explain why compliance with city stormwater construction standards is sufficient to minimize potential adverse impacts. Oregon Coast Alliance v. City of Brookings, 72 Or LUBA 222 (2015).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Remand is required where a city's only finding responding to testimony that pesticides and herbicides runoff from residential development will harm fish in the adjacent estuary is that pesticides and herbicides will not be applied within a riparian buffer, but the finding does not address runoff from the residential development itself, and no condition is imposed that prohibits application of pesticides or herbicides within the riparian buffer. Oregon Coast Alliance v. City of Brookings, 72 Or LUBA 222 (2015).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Goal 16, Implementation Requirement 1 requires evaluation of the impacts of development allowed under proposed zoning, but does not require the local government to evaluate potential adverse impacts of alterations approved in earlier land use decisions. Oregon Coast Alliance v. City of Brookings, 72 Or LUBA 222 (2015).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Findings are inadequate to establish that rezoning land adjacent to an estuary to allow for urban residential development is consistent with Goal 16, where federal agencies testified that development allowed under the rezone would adversely affect estuarine resources, but the findings do not address that testimony, or evaluate impacts of development on the estuary as Goal 16, Implementation Requirement 1 requires. Oregon Coast Alliance v. City of Brookings, 71 Or LUBA 14 (2015).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. A finding that impacts of a proposed underwater pipeline on aquatic species will be "temporary and insignificant" is consistent with the Goal 16 obligation to "protect" estuarine resources. Citizens Against LNG v. Coos County, 63 Or LUBA 162 (2011).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Where the applicant's expert assumed that a particular species of native oyster is not found near a pipeline crossing, but opponents raised the issue below, based on a 2009 scientific article, that that species of oyster has recently repopulated the crossing area and may be impacted by the pipeline, the findings do not address that issue, and LUBA cannot tell from the record or findings whether additional measures may be necessary to protect the native oysters beyond those in place to protect other aquatic species, remand is necessary for more adequate findings. Citizens Against LNG v. Coos County, 63 Or LUBA 162 (2011).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. LUBA will affirm a finding that a proposed mining operation will not add significantly to the cumulative impact of development activities within an estuary, based on findings that the mining operation will essentially replace an existing mining operation that is approaching its end point, and the proposed operation is conditioned to minimize adverse impacts on estuarine values. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Curry County, 61 Or LUBA 8 (2010).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. When a local comprehensive plan provision that implements Goal 16 requires the local government to "protect" a resource, any development allowed is not consistent with the Goal 16 definition of "protect" unless there is at most a de minimis or insignificant impact on the resource that the provision requires to be protected. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 61 Or LUBA 96 (2010).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. A comprehensive plan provision that implements Goal 16 and requires the local government to "protect" wildlife habitat within an estuary may be satisfied through off-site mitigation within the Goal 16 definition of "protect" if such mitigation results in no net loss to the protected habitat within the estuary, even if there is an impact at the development site. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 61 Or LUBA 96 (2010).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Where the petitioner submits written testimony that the proposal is inconsistent with Goal 16, an argument that presumes Goal 16 is applicable, and the planning commission responds to that testimony with a finding that Goal 16 is inapplicable, the issue of whether Goal 16 is applicable has been sufficiently raised for purposes of ORS 197.763(1) and 197.835(3). The petitioner is not required to anticipate how the local government will respond in its findings to issues raised below. Sommer v. Douglas County, 60 Or LUBA 32 (2009).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. LUBA will affirm a finding that an upland dredged material disposal site is not part of the estuary and therefore not subject to Goal 16, where the petitioner cites nothing in the county's comprehensive plan or elsewhere indicating that the disposal site is within the estuary or otherwise subject to Goal 16. Sommer v. Douglas County, 60 Or LUBA 32 (2009).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Where a small scale estuarine management unit map is ambiguous, even if the evidence in the record established that a tax lot was being mined in 1981 when estuary management unit designations were applied to the property, that would not conclusively establish an intent to place the tax lot in an estuary management unit that allows mining, as opposed to a management unit that does not allow mining, when the small scale map was adopted in 1981. However, such evidence would likely constitute substantial evidence of an intent to place the tax lot into an estuary management unit that allows mining, when the map was adopted in 1981. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Curry County, 60 Or LUBA 415 (2010).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Comprehensive plan maps that are not tax lot specific and post-1981 aerial photographs are not substantial evidence that a small tax lot was being mined in 1981 when the comprehensive plan was first adopted. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Curry County, 60 Or LUBA 415 (2010).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. The Goal 16 obligation that comprehensive plans "maintain the diversity of important and unique environmental, economic and social features within the estuary" is an on-going obligation that is potentially applicable to a post-acknowledgement plan amendment, and is not merely applicable to the initial development and adoption of the comprehensive plan. People for Responsible Prosperity v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181 (2006).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Goal 16 Implementation Requirement 1 directs the local government to adopt land use regulations that require an impact assessment of proposed alterations in estuarine waters. Once the local government adopts such regulations, the local government is not required conduct an impact assessment when adopting plan amendments that allow a range of development uses in the estuary. Compliance with the Goal is assured by the fact that any specific development proposal will be evaluated under code standards that directly implement Implementation Requirement 1. People for Responsible Prosperity v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181 (2006).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. The Goal 16 requirement that comprehensive plans "maintain the diversity" of important and unique economic features within the estuary does not require a local government to evaluate all potential negative economic consequences of particular uses allowed by post-acknowledgment plan amendments, or require that local governments protect existing economic uses against new, perhaps competing or conflicting economic uses. People for Responsible Prosperity v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181 (2006).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. In adopting a plan amendment that redesignates a portion of the estuary from conservation to development to facilitate construction of a proposed Liquefied Natural Gas terminal, the city is not required to evaluate speculative concerns that the terminal will delay and inconvenience maritime traffic in order to comply with the Goal 16 requirement to "maintain the diversity" of important and unique economic features in the estuary. People for Responsible Prosperity v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181 (2006).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Where it is unknowable at the time the local government considers a post-acknowledgment plan amendment that allows a range of development in the estuary whether and the extent to which a specific use potentially allowed by the amendments will adversely affect maritime traffic in the estuary, it is appropriate to find that the plan amendment complies with Goal 16, based in part on reliance that speculative issues raised regarding adverse impacts of particular uses will be adequately addressed under code standards that apply to such uses at the time of construction and that are designed to address such impacts. People for Responsible Prosperity v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181 (2006).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. While it may be error to adopt findings of compliance with Goal 16 that consider only the positive economic benefits of the plan amendment without considering countervailing evidence of negative impacts, petitioners demonstrate no such error where the local government in fact considered the countervailing evidence and rejected it as unpersuasive and speculative. People for Responsible Prosperity v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181 (2006).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. In adopting post-acknowledgment plan amendments that allow a range of uses in estuarine waters, a local government may adopt findings concluding that the types of uses allowed by the amendment are consistent with applicable Goal 16 requirements, while relying on specific permitting processes that implement the goal and that are designed to address and mitigate the possibility that particular development proposals may have more intense impacts than others, as an additional basis for concluding that the amendment complies with Goal 16. People for Responsible Prosperity v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181 (2006).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Loss of two acres of estuarine habitat is not necessarily inconsistent with Goal 16, where the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife regulations provide that the goal for the habitat is "no net loss of habitat quality or quantity," there is expert testimony that potential mitigation sites are available in the vicinity, and any development allowed under the post-acknowledgment plan amendment that might result in loss of the two acres will be subject to federal, state and local permit requirements that will require mitigation. People for Responsible Prosperity v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181 (2006).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. A code provision that encourages the city to expand local maritime activities is not a "minimum acceptable performance standard" for purposes of the OAR 660-012-0060(1)(c)(B) requirement that plan amendments not reduce a transportation facility's performance below the minimum acceptable performance standard identified in the transportation system plan or comprehensive plan. People for Responsible Prosperity v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181 (2006).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. While the Goal 16 conservation unit description does not mention riprap, the administrative rule implementing Goal 16 states that riprap is appropriate in conservation units, subject only to findings that riprap is consistent with the resource capabilities and the purpose of the management unit. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lane County, 52 Or LUBA 471 (2006).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. In an appeal of a post-acknowledgment plan amendment that redesignates an estuarine area from a natural management unit to a conservation management unit, the petitioner cannot argue that the acknowledged conservation unit provisions that allow riprap as a conditional use are inconsistent with Goal 16. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lane County, 52 Or LUBA 471 (2006).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. Goal 16 requires that, in adopting a post-acknowledgment plan amendment redesignating an estuarine area to a conservation management unit in order to allow riprap to be placed in an estuary, the local government must adopt plan language that evaluates the "potential cumulative impacts of alterations and development activities envisioned." Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lane County, 52 Or LUBA 471 (2006).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. A local government may rely on evidence that clam beds that partially justified a previous natural management unit designation have been smothered by erosion, and the reduced habitat value warrants redesignation of the area to a conservation management unit, notwithstanding conflicting evidence over the remaining habitat value. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lane County, 52 Or LUBA 471 (2006).

20. Goal 16 – Estuarine Resources. A comprehensive plan policy that applies only to estuarine areas governed by Goal 16 does not apply to proposed development within a zone that includes only coastal shorelands governed by Goal 17. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 49 Or LUBA 1 (2005).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. A local government need not interpret the term "protect" the same way in the context of a statewide planning goal that does not protect a specific, unique natural resource or specific recreation area that it does in the context of a goal that does protect those things, even where the definitions of "protect" in the latter goal and in the local government's comprehensive plan are identical. Crowley v. City of Hood River, 81 Or LUBA 490 (2020).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. The petitioner failed to raise the issue below that the upland portion of a creek should be included within the coastal shoreland boundary as a riparian resource, where the only arguments made below regarding the creek concerned flooding and the only arguments regarding the shoreland boundary and riparian resources did not concern the creek. Oregon Coast Alliance v. City of Brookings, 71 Or LUBA 14 (2015).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. LUBA will affirm a local government's interpretation of the provisions of its comprehensive plan that implement Goal 17 to be as protective as, but not more protective than, Goal 17, where the text of the comprehensive plan provisions make clear that the local government did not intend to regulate coastal shorelands more protectively than Goal 17. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 68 Or LUBA 233 (2013).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. LUBA is required under ORS 197.829(1) to affirm a local government's interpretation of a provision of its comprehensive plan that identifies the location of the coastal shorelands boundary as "the top of the seacliff along the seacliff shoreline" as a "general guide as to the location of the [boundary]" rather than a specific minimum elevation, where the interpretation is not inconsistent with the express language of the provision or the comprehensive plan map, and is plausible. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 68 Or LUBA 233 (2013).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Goal 17 provides in part that coastal shorelands must include "adjacent areas of geologic instability where the geologic instability is related to or will impact a coastal water body[.]" In order to be consistent with Goal 17, a cliff erosion geologic hazard analysis that is relied on to determine the location of the coastal shorelands boundary must consider geologic instability from all causes of cliff erosion where the cliff erosion could impact the ocean. A geologic hazard analysis that does not analyze "adjacent areas of geologic instability" from causes of erosion other than waves hitting the shore cannot be relied on to locate the boundary consistent with Goal 17. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 68 Or LUBA 233 (2013).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Goal 17 requires in part that coastal shorelands must include "lands within 100 feet of the ocean shore[.]" A county decision that locates the coastal shorelands boundary at the top of the beach and at the bottom or mid-point of shorefront cliffs is inconsistent with Goal 17, because such locations are arguably where the "ocean shore," as defined in ORS 390.605(2), ends and that interpretation gives little or no depth to the coastal shorelands boundary beyond the "ocean shore" in some places. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 68 Or LUBA 233 (2013).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Remand is necessary where county regulations implementing Goal 17 require that the county delineate the coastal shorelands boundary based on a geological hazard analysis of areas of geological instability adjacent to the ocean, but the county instead adopts a delineation that does not consider geological instability and is not based on a geological hazard analysis. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 63 Or LUBA 324 (2011).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Where in approving a destination resort in coastal shorelands that is dependent on groundwater the county addresses a number of comprehensive plan policies implementing Goal 17, but does not address a potentially applicable plan policy in the plan Goal 17 element that requires the county take measures to protect groundwater, remand is necessary for the county to either address the policy or explain why it is not applicable. Oregon Coast Alliance v. Curry County, 63 Or LUBA 324 (2011).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Where a county finds that the comprehensive plan and zoning map designations for a parcel that is subject to Goal 17 can be amended consistently with the county's acknowledged Goal 17 program because that Goal 17 program is unaffected by the amendment, an argument that "this casual dismissal of Goal 17 cannot provide the basis for the rezoning decision" is not sufficiently developed for review. Holloway v. Clatsop County, 52 Or LUBA 644 (2006).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Even if the Goal 17 requirements governing shorelands "suitable for water-dependent uses" and "especially suited for water-dependent uses" have an independent significance under Goal 17, where the county's acknowledged code and plan treat the two phrases interchangeably, any error in conflating the meaning of the two phrases cannot be challenged in a permit decision. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 500 (2006).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. LUBA will affirm a governing body's interpretation that only a portion of a coastal shorelands zone is designated as "suitable for water-dependent uses" and therefore subject to a policy that limits non-water-dependent development, where the zone refers to a comprehensive map that depicts only a portion of the zone as being "especially suited for water-dependent uses" and read in context it is clear that the policy is not intended to apply throughout the zone. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 500 (2006).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. The purpose of OAR 660-037-0080(3) is to preserve suitable shorelands for water-dependent uses, by allowing non-water-dependent uses in such shorelands only if those uses are "incidental and subordinate." It is inconsistent with that purpose to include large areas of coastal waters in calculating the ratio of water-dependent to non-water-dependent uses, because that greatly increases the size and extent of non-water-dependent uses allowed on coastal shorelands. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 500 (2006).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Outdoor spaces that may be attributed to water-dependent or non-water-dependent uses, in applying the ratio test at OAR 660-037-0080(3), include developed outdoor spaces such as parking lots, and undeveloped outdoor spaces that are committed by nearby development to either water-dependent or non-water-dependent uses. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 506 (2006).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. A set of stairs 144 square feet in size providing pedestrian access to a 67,607-square-foot area of beach and tideland does not "commit" that beach area to water-dependent uses, for purposes of OAR 660-037-0080(3). Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 500 (2006).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Under the Goal 17 rule, a water-dependent use is a commercial, industrial or recreational use that requires location in proximity to an estuary in order to access the estuary. An artificial wetland used to mitigate wetland losses to residential development and filter storm water generated by residential development is not a "water-dependent use" for purposes of the rule, notwithstanding that the wetland function is dependent on water. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 500 (2006).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. 130,000 square feet of open space areas interspersed between 115,945 square feet of non-water-dependent residential development is effectively committed to non-water-dependent uses, and must be counted as a nonwater-dependent use for purposes of the ratio test at OAR 660-037-0080(3). Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 500 (2006).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. A facility that allows public viewing of estuarine waters, such as a boardwalk or a wetland viewing area, is not a recreational water-dependent use for purposes of OAR 660-037-0080(3). Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 51 Or LUBA 500 (2006).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Issues that could have been, but were not, raised in the first appeal to LUBA are waived in any appeal of the decision on remand under Beck v. City of Tillamook, 313 Or 148, 831 P2d 678 (1992). Findings adopted on remand explaining why proposed development is allowed in a public facility zone do not open the door to allow a petitioner to raise issues regarding whether the development is consistent with Statewide Planning Goal 17 (Coastal Shorelands). Moreland v. City of Depoe Bay, 50 Or LUBA 44 (2005).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. A comprehensive plan policy that applies only to estuarine areas governed by Goal 16 does not apply to proposed development within a zone that includes only coastal shorelands governed by Goal 17. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 49 Or LUBA 1 (2005).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. A requirement in the Goal 17 rule that non-water-dependent uses be constructed at the same time or after the water-dependent use is "established" does not mean that the water-dependent uses must be operating at full capacity before non-water-dependent uses may be constructed. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 49 Or LUBA 1 (2005).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. The Goal 17 rule requires that non-water-dependent uses be "incidental and subordinate" to water dependent uses, based on a 1-to-3 ratio between the square footage of indoor floor space and "outdoor acreage" distributed between the two uses. However, "outdoor acreage" includes only outdoor areas that are developed for either non-water dependent or water dependent uses, such as parking lots or boat ramps, and does not include vacant, undeveloped uplands or tidal areas that are left in their natural state. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Coos County, 49 Or LUBA 1 (2005).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Where legislative history indicates that the location of the Goal 17 Coastal Shorelands boundary is to be decided on case-by-case basis after site review for geologic hazards under the city's code, the city errs in failing to conduct the required site review to locate the Coastal Shorelands boundary. Crowley v. City of Bandon, 43 Or LUBA 79 (2002).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Where legislative history indicates that the location of the Goal 17 Coastal Shorelands boundary is to be decided on case-by-case basis after site review for geologic hazards under the city's code, the city errs in failing to conduct the required site review to locate the Coastal Shorelands boundary. Crowley v. City of Bandon, 43 Or LUBA 79 (2002).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. A city errs in interpreting a comprehensive plan provision implementing Goal 17 to allow the top of a bluff and the Coastal Shorelands boundary located along that bluff to be moved westward as a result of excavating the top of the bluff, at least absent evidence that the area between the original boundary and the relocated boundary is geologically stable. Crowley v. City of Bandon, 43 Or LUBA 79 (2002).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Where a petitioner does not explain why approval criteria for fill in a floodplain and coastal shoreland necessitated precise delineation of the floodplain boundaries and precise knowledge about the location, amount and nature of the fill, the local government's failure to precisely delineate and describe the floodplain and fill provides no basis for remand. Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 41 Or LUBA 130 (2001).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Plan policies that were clearly adopted to implement Goal 17 are not rendered inapplicable to a decision to approve fill in a coastal shoreland simply because the city codified those policies under the part of the comprehensive plan that is nominally devoted to Goal 16. Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 41 Or LUBA 130 (2001).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. A zoning ordinance provision that expresses a preference for nonstructural over structural solutions to erosion and flooding problems does not apply to an application for recreational vehicle park expansion that proposes erosion or flooding measures, at least where the proposal does not make structural erosion or flood control measures likely or inevitable. Willhoft v. City of Gold Beach, 41 Or LUBA 130 (2001).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Where the city's comprehensive plan locates the boundary of a Goal 17 overlay zone at the "top edge" of the bluff overlooking the ocean, but nothing in the record supports the city's conclusion that proposed expansion of a dwelling built into the bluff will occur outside the overlay zone, remand is necessary for the city to identify the "top edge" of the bluff and the existing dwelling's location in relation to the zoning boundary. Crowley v. City of Bandon, 41 Or LUBA 87 (2001).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Excavation or grading within a setback area in coastal shorelands is inconsistent with Goal 17, implementation requirement 5, and implementing local provisions to the extent excavation or grading increases the erosion rate of existing ocean bank material protecting new structures from erosion. Terra v. City of Newport, 36 Or LUBA 582 (1999).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Where LCDC requires a county to adopt comprehensive plan amendments implementing a statewide planning goal by a certain date, and the county fails to implement the goal as of that date, the goal becomes directly applicable to county decisions pursuant to ORS 197.646, even if the goal did not become "effective" as to that county when LCDC adopted the goal. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lincoln County, 36 Or LUBA 288 (1999).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Implementation Requirement 6 of Goal 17, which requires that local governments shall retain or replace existing rights-of-way that provide access to or along coastal waters, unambiguously provides mandatory approval requirements. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lincoln County, 36 Or LUBA 288 (1999).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. The extent of "coastal shorelands" subject to the requirements of Goal 17 are not limited to the "ocean shore" as that term is defined in ORS 390.065, but extend inland from the ocean shore at least 100 feet. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lincoln County, 36 Or LUBA 288 (1999).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Nothing in Implementation Requirement 6 of Goal 17, which requires that local governments shall retain or replace existing rights-of-way that provide access to or along coastal waters, limits the applicability of that requirement to rights-of-way that are currently being used to provide access to or along coastal waters. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lincoln County, 36 Or LUBA 288 (1999).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Goal 17, Implementation Requirement 6, requires that in vacating rights-of-way that provide access to or along the ocean shore, the vacating body must provide alternative rights-of-way that, individually or cumulatively, functionally replace the access lost through vacation. Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lincoln County, 36 Or LUBA 288 (1999).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Where the vacation of a right-of-way subject to Goal 17, Implementation Requirement 6, is premised on providing alternative rights-of-way to replace access lost through vacation, the alternative rights-of-way must not be based on speculative acquisition of easements, and must be within both the "affected site" of the vacated right-of-way and within "coastal shorelands." Oregon Shores Cons. Coalition v. Lincoln County, 36 Or LUBA 288 (1999).

21. Goal 17 – Coastal Shorelands. Even where a county determines that a comprehensive plan amendment and zone change would not allow development within the Coastal Shorelands Boundary, the county must also demonstrate that the level of development permitted in the proposed rural residential zone outside the boundary will not adversely affect Goal 17 resources within the boundary. Brown v. Coos County, 31 Or LUBA 142 (1996).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. Where neither Goal 18 nor relevant statewide planning goal definitions of "Dune" or "Foredune, Active" describe how to determine the location of the landward edge of a foredune or prescribe that a foredune includes only the top or upper portion of the landform, a local code definition of "foredune" that includes the entire "lee or reverse slope" of the foredune is not inconsistent with Goal 18 or the goal definitions. Rudell v. City of Bandon, 64 Or LUBA 201 (2011).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. A local government may regulate dunes and foredunes more protectively than the minimum required by Goal 18, as long as the regulation does not conflict with any other Goal, administrative rule or statutory requirement. Rudell v. City of Bandon, 64 Or LUBA 201 (2011).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. In some cases boundaries between Goal 18 landforms such as different types of dunes and interdunal areas may be indeterminate or briefly overlap each other. To the extent there is doubt or overlap, it is not inconsistent with Goal 18 to apply to the boundary area the regulations that govern the more heavily regulated or protected landform. Rudell v. City of Bandon, 64 Or LUBA 201 (2011).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. A local government is not bound to apply a federal definition of "primary frontal zone" to determine the landward extent of a foredune for purposes of Goal 18, where the federal definition is used to determine the location of the flood hazard velocity zone and has no bearing on the meaning of "foredune" under Goal 18. Rudell v. City of Bandon, 64 Or LUBA 201 (2011).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. ORS 197.829(1)(d) authorizes LUBA to reject an interpretation of a comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation that implements a statute, land use goal or rule, if the interpretation is contrary to a state statute, land use goal or rule that the comprehensive plan provision or land use regulation implements. ORS 197.829(1)(d) is not a vehicle to allow LUBA to reverse an interpretation of a code definition that implements and is consistent with Goal 18, based on arguments that if that interpretation is applied in other cases it might impact the adequacy of the city's Goal 9 and 10 inventories of commercial, industrial and residential lands. Rudell v. City of Bandon, 64 Or LUBA 201 (2011).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. A county's interpretation that a comprehensive plan policy, which implements Statewide Planning Goal 18 (Beaches and Dunes) and provides criteria for a determination whether development is appropriate in a beaches and dunes area, requires the county to address only adverse geologic or geotechnical impacts and not general development issues, is consistent with the text and context of the policy and the goal. Borton v. Coos County, 52 Or LUBA 46 (2006).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. A county's interpretation that a comprehensive plan policy, which implements Statewide Planning Goal 7 (Natural Disasters and Hazards), requires regulation of development in known areas potentially subject to natural disasters and is aimed at reducing risks to life and property that are caused by natural hazards, is not applicable in the context of a determination whether development is appropriate in a beaches and dunes area, pursuant to a comprehensive plan policy that implements Statewide Planning Goal 18 (Beaches and Dunes), which is aimed at reducing impacts that may be caused by the proposed development. Borton v. Coos County, 52 Or LUBA 46 (2006).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. The Goal 18, Implementation Requirement 5 restriction that "[b]eachfront protective structures may be permitted only where development existed on January 1, 1977" is ambiguous because it could refer to locations where beachfront protective structures may be allowed or it could refer to what development those structures may be constructed to protect. Regen v. Lincoln County, 49 Or LUBA 386 (2005).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. The Goal 18, Implementation Requirement 5 restriction that "[b]eachfront protective structures may be permitted only where development existed on January 1, 1977" need not be interpreted to allow construction of a beachfront protective structure anywhere along an eleven-acre parcel simply because one house was located on that eleven-acre parcel on January 1, 1977. Regen v. Lincoln County, 49 Or LUBA 386 (2005).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. A party's contention that an alternative setback must either satisfy Goal 18 or an exception must be taken to that goal is not sufficient to raise an issue regarding whether application of an alternative oceanside setback criterion requires that the city first find the standard oceanside setback is "further from the westerly property line than is required for the protection of the Foredune Management Area." Slepack v. City of Manzanita, 44 Or LUBA 301 (2003).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. The Goal 18 requirement that structural development be prohibited on "beaches, active dunes [and] on other foredunes which are conditionally stable and that are subject to ocean undercutting or wave overtopping" applies only to a proposed development site and not to the entire subject property or the entire dune upon which the proposed development site is located. Save Oregon's Cape Kiwanda v. Tillamook County, 40 Or LUBA 143 (2001).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. Expert testimony that existing riprap will prevent dune retreat if repaired when damaged is substantial evidence supporting the county's finding under Goal 18 that the dune upon which development is proposed is stabilized and not subject to wave overtopping or ocean undercutting, notwithstanding conflicting expert evidence that the riprap may be insufficient or may fail. Save Oregon's Cape Kiwanda v. Tillamook County, 40 Or LUBA 143 (2001).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. Where the accumulation of sand on petitioner's beachfront property is caused by time and nature, and not city's sand removal regulations, denial of petitioner's permit request to remove the sand does not fall within the "physical invasion" category of takings cases. Beta Trust v. City of Cannon Beach, 33 Or LUBA 576 (1997).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. Findings regarding the impact of a proposed access road across a dune area are inadequate to establish compliance with Goal 18 where those findings discuss the comparative impacts that would be generated by agricultural or forest uses, but do not directly evaluate the development impacts of the proposed road. Brown v. Coos County, 31 Or LUBA 142 (1996).

22. Goal 18 – Beaches and Dunes. Although some of the Goal 18 implementation measures apply to older stabilized dunes, Implementation Requirement 1 does not require the county to make findings regarding older stabilized dunes. Brown v. Coos County, 31 Or LUBA 142 (1996).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. A zone verification is subject to LUBA's jurisdiction and a person adversely affected by the decision may appeal the decision to LUBA "[w]ithin 21 days of the date a person knew or should have known of the decision where no notice is required." ORS 197.830(5)(b). The city was not obligated to and did not provide notice of the zone verification decision to petitioner. Petitioner was put on inquiry notice of the zone verification decision when the city provided petitioner multiple notices of a subsequent land use application, review, and approval for site review, traffic impact analysis, and adjustment review for the same subject property and development described in the zone verification decision. The city invited petitioner to participate in that subsequent land use action and to review public planning documents at the planning division and online. The appeal was untimely filed and must be dismissed because petitioner failed to make such inquiries and the 21-day appeal period expired before petitioner filed the appeal. Leyden v. City of Eugene, 79 Or LUBA 151 (2019).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. Any error in a planning commission's finding that the petitioner lacked standing to file a local appeal is harmless, where on appeal to the board of commissioners the board disposed of petitioner's appeal on the merits and did not rely on standing as a basis to deny the appeal. Richards v. Jefferson County, 77 Or LUBA 152 (2018).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. A county cannot apply more rigorous standing or timely appeal requirements on (1) local appeals of permit decisions than are authorized under ORS 215.416(11) or (2) local appeals of permit decisions under circumstances where, but for the county choosing to provide a local appeal, the petitioner would have the right to appeal the permit decision directly to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3). Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. A county is not required to evaluate a petitioner's standing to file a local appeal based on the presumption that the petitioner was entitled to notice of the decision, where there is no dispute that the petitioner did not live within the notice area and was not entitled to notice of the decision at the time the decision was made. That the petitioner now lives within the notice area does not establish entitlement under state or local law to notice of the decision or to file a local appeal. Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. A petitioner's actual knowledge that the applicant has applied to the county for a dwelling permit and that the county intends to approve it, and that a well dug on the property is to perfect the permit for a dwelling, is more than sufficient knowledge to place the petitioner on "inquiry notice" that the county has approved a dwelling on the applicant's property. Where the petitioner waits more than a year after being placed on "inquiry notice" that the county had approved a dwelling to actually discover the permit decision and file a local appeal, the local appeal is untimely filed, under local appeal provisions based on ORS 197.830(3)(b). Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. Observation of well-digging equipment traveling on a dead-end road toward one of several nearby properties is insufficient in itself to place a reasonable person on "constructive" or "inquiry notice" that the county had approved development on a specific property, for purposes of ORS 197.830(3)(b) and local code equivalents. Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. Information sufficient to place a petitioner on "inquiry notice" for purposes of ORS 197.830(3)(b) must, at a minimum, allow the petitioner to identify the property on which development has been approved. If the petitioner must conduct factual inquiries to determine which property in the neighborhood is being developed, the 21-day deadline to discover the decision approving the development may expire before the petitioner has acquired information sufficient to make effective inquiries with the local government. Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. Information sufficient to place a petitioner on "inquiry notice" for purposes of ORS 197.830(3)(b) must indicate to a reasonable person that the local government has likely issued a land use approval of some kind. Observation of road traffic associated with well-digging activities is insufficient in itself, because the activity of digging a well does not necessarily mean that the county has issued a land use approval. Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. Absent a local provision or other authority that limits standing to appeal a permit revocation decision only to current owners of the property to which the permit applies, a city errs in dismissing the permit holder's local appeal of a permit revocation decision for lack of standing, solely because the permit holder informs the city that the property has been sold to a third party. Merton v. City of Jefferson, 53 Or LUBA 559 (2007).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. Where a county code grants standing to file a local appeal to parties who are "adversely affected" by planning commission decisions, but the local code does not define the term "adversely affected," LUBA will assume the county's intended meaning of that term is consistent with its meaning in other land use laws. As that term is used in the 1979 statute that governed standing to appeal to LUBA, adversely affected means the "decision impinges upon the petitioner's use and enjoyment of his or her property or otherwise detracts from interests personal to the petitioner." Jefferson Landfill Comm. v. Marion Co., 297 Or 280, 283, 686 P2d 310 (1984). Burke v. Crook County, 46 Or LUBA 413 (2004).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. Where a local code grants standing to appeal planning commission decisions to parties who are "adversely affected," a county may not limit standing to appeal to the applicant, nearby property owners and persons who testified, where the local code does not clearly adopt that limited interpretation of the term "adversely affected." Burke v. Crook County, 46 Or LUBA 413 (2004).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. LUBA will reject a challenge to a petitioner's standing based on an allegation that petitioner appeared below as an agent of the property owner and not on its own behalf, where the only evidence cited to support that allegation is a letter from the property owner that does not authorize petitioner to act as an agent of the property owner; petitioner filed the application leading to the challenged decision; and it is clear from the record that petitioner appeared on its own behalf and not the property owner's. Confederated Tribes v. City of Coos Bay, 42 Or LUBA 385 (2002).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. When undisputed evidence in the record establishes that petitioner appeared below, and therefore establishes petitioner's standing before LUBA, the Board will not take evidence outside of the record for purposes of establishing standing before the Court of Appeals, because such evidence will not "affect the outcome" of LUBA's proceedings, within the meaning of OAR 661-010-0045(2). Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 41 Or LUBA 247 (2002).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. An organization that appears before a hearings officer and county board of commissioners has standing to appeal the county's decision to LUBA under ORS 197.830(2), and need not establish that it also meets the test for representational standing under 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Multnomah Co., 39 Or App 917, 593 P2d 1171 (1979). Central Klamath County CAT v. Klamath County, 40 Or LUBA 111 (2001).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. Where the notice of intent to appeal challenges a governing body's decision determining that petitioner has no standing to file a local appeal of a planning director's decision, but the petition for review assigns error only to the planning director's decision, the petition for review provides no basis to reverse or remand the governing body's decision. Doob v. Josephine County, 39 Or LUBA 301 (2001).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. A person's previous experience in appealing land use decisions or his philosophical interest in the correct application of the county's land use regulations may be germane to whether that person, who appears before the county, might qualify as "aggrieved" by a county permit decision, but such experience or interest is not germane to whether that person is "adversely affected" by the decision. Doob v. Josephine County, 39 Or LUBA 301 (2001).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. The question of whether intervenor was a proper party in an earlier local proceeding is determined by the local ordinance governing standing and not the ordinance that regulates the content of materials that may be presented in that proceeding. Where a party appeared during the local proceeding, the party has standing at LUBA under OAR 661-10-050. Evans v. Multnomah County, 33 Or LUBA 555 (1997).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. Where the local code provides that a property owner may file a conditional use application, a property owner has standing to file an application for approval of a home occupation, even though the property owner does not propose to reside in the dwelling and conduct the home occupation. Tarbell v. Jefferson County, 21 Or LUBA 294 (1991).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. Where the local code makes no distinction among "interested persons," "disinterested witnesses," and "parties," any person who appears at a local hearing is recognized as an "interested person" who could be aggrieved by the local decision. Lowrie v. Polk County, 19 Or LUBA 564 (1990).

24.1 Standing – Before Local Government. A statement in a governing body's decision that a person is not adversely affected by a hearings officer's decision is not equivalent to a determination that such a person is not "aggrieved" for purposes of determining standing. Lowrie v. Polk County, 19 Or LUBA 564 (1990).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Where LUBA concludes it lacks jurisdiction because the challenged decision is not a "land use decision" under ORS 197.015(10)(a), LUBA will not resolve a challenge to petitioner's standing to appeal the decision to LUBA. McLaughlin v. Douglas County, 76 Or LUBA 77 (2017).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. A county cannot apply more rigorous standing or timely appeal requirements on (1) local appeals of permit decisions than are authorized under ORS 215.416(11) or (2) local appeals of permit decisions under circumstances where, but for the county choosing to provide a local appeal, the petitioner would have the right to appeal the permit decision directly to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3). Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Observation of well-digging equipment traveling on a dead-end road toward one of several nearby properties is insufficient in itself to place a reasonable person on "constructive" or "inquiry notice" that the county had approved development on a specific property, for purposes of ORS 197.830(3)(b) and local code equivalents. Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Information sufficient to place a petitioner on "inquiry notice" for purposes of ORS 197.830(3)(b) must, at a minimum, allow the petitioner to identify the property on which development has been approved. If the petitioner must conduct factual inquiries to determine which property in the neighborhood is being developed, the 21-day deadline to discover the decision approving the development may expire before the petitioner has acquired information sufficient to make effective inquiries with the local government. Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Information sufficient to place a petitioner on "inquiry notice" for purposes of ORS 197.830(3)(b) must indicate to a reasonable person that the local government has likely issued a land use approval of some kind. Observation of road traffic associated with well-digging activities is insufficient in itself, because the activity of digging a well does not necessarily mean that the county has issued a land use approval. Eng v. Wallowa County, 76 Or LUBA 432 (2017).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Where the notice of a hearing described a proposal for a conditional use permit for a home occupation to host events in a pole barn, and the county's decision approved a conditional use permit for a home occupation to host events in a pole barn, a petitioner may not rely on ORS 197.830(3) to file its appeal, because the local government did not make a land use decision that was different from the proposal described in the notice of hearing to such a degree that the notice of the proposed action did not reasonably describe the local government's final actions. Willis v. Clackamas County, 76 Or LUBA 479 (2017).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. LUBA will decline to exercise its discretion to grant petitioners an opportunity on remand from the Court of Appeals to offer additional evidence to establish standing to appeal a land use decision to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3), where petitioners had multiple opportunities in the initial appeal to offer the additional evidence, which was at all times within petitioners' possession, but failed to do so. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 75 Or LUBA 174 (2017).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Exercise of LUBA's discretion to allow petitioners an opportunity on remand from the Court of Appeals to offer additional evidence to establish standing to appeal to LUBA would be inconsistent with the legislative policy at ORS 197.805 that time is of the essence in reaching finality in land use matters, because granting the motion would entail a lengthy round of pleadings, discovery, depositions, and resolution of conflicting evidence that would significantly delay reaching finality in the appeal. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 75 Or LUBA 174 (2017).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Exercise of LUBA's discretion to allow petitioners an opportunity on remand from the Court of Appeals to offer additional evidence to establish standing to appeal to LUBA would be inconsistent with the legislative policy at ORS 197.805 that LUBA's decisions be made consistent with sound principles of judicial review, because it would depart from the general principle that LUBA's jurisdiction over the appeal must be established prior to LUBA's issuance of its final opinion resolving the merits of an appeal. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 75 Or LUBA 174 (2017).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. For purposes of the "knew or should have known" standard in ORS 197.830(3)(b) to gain standing to appeal to LUBA, the actual or constructive knowledge of a co-owner of property adjoining development is not imputed as a matter of law to the other co-owner, the petitioner. Grimstad v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 360 (2016).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. The presence of surveyor stakes on adjoining property is not sufficient to provide actual or constructive knowledge that a county has issued a lot of record decision for the property, for purposes of the "knew or should have known" standard at ORS 197.830(3)(b), because a property owner may hire a surveyor for reasons that have nothing to do with development or land use approvals. Grimstad v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 360 (2016).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Persons who own property within sight or sound of property that is the subject of an appeal are presumptively adversely affected by an appealed decision concerning the property. However, a petitioner who claims its property is located "approximately 6,280 feet" from the subject property, and does not claim that its property is within sight or sound, is not presumptively adversely affected by the decision. Pinnacle Alliance Group, LLC v. City of Sisters, 73 Or LUBA 188 (2016).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Nothing in the express language of ORS 197.830(3) identifies it as either the exclusive or a required statutory basis to appeal a decision in cases where a hearing is not provided. Devin Oil Co. Inc. v. Morrow County, 70 Or LUBA 420 (2014).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. OAR 661-010-0045(1) limits LUBA's consideration of extra-record evidence to circumstances where there are "disputed factual allegations" in the parties briefs concerning, among other things, standing. Where there is no dispute in the parties' briefs regarding petitioner's standing to appeal to LUBA, LUBA will deny a motion to take evidence outside the record to consider evidence of a lease that the petitioner asserts may be necessary to establish injury and hence constitutional standing under federal law. Cosner v. Umatilla County, 65 Or LUBA 9 (2012).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. LUBA lacks the equitable power of a court to apply the doctrine of laches to dismiss an appeal based on allegations that a petitioner knew from conversations with a neighbor about the challenged decision long before filing the LUBA appeal. The legislature has comprehensively prescribed in ORS 197.830(3) and other relevant statutes the deadlines to appeal land use decisions to LUBA, including what states of knowledge are relevant in applying those deadlines. Jones v. Douglas County, 63 Or LUBA 261 (2011).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Standing to appeal a post-acknowledgment plan amendment to LUBA is governed by ORS 197.620(1), which requires only that the petitioner participate in the proceedings below. No statute governing LUBA requires that petitioners who wish to advance a facial constitutional challenge to an ordinance at LUBA must first demonstrate that the ordinance injures their legally protected interests. Barnes v. City of Hillsboro, 61 Or LUBA 375 (2010).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. When the original applicant would be allowed to intervene in an appeal under ORS 197.830(7)(b)(A) as the "applicant who initiated the action before the local government," the original applicant's successor in interest may also intervene. Biggerstaff v. Yamhill County, 58 Or LUBA 665 (2008).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Persons who made an appearance during the local government proceedings that led to a city decision that was remanded by LUBA satisfy the ORS 197.830(7)(b) requirement that a person who moves to intervene in a subsequent LUBA appeal of the city's decision following LUBA's remand must have "appeared." The appearance during the initial local government proceedings is sufficient to satisfy the ORS 197.830(7)(b) appearance requirement, and it does not matter that the local government refused those persons' attempt to appear during the remand proceedings. South Gateway Partners v. City of Medford, 53 Or LUBA 593 (2006).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Where a person attempts but is denied the right to appear during a local government's proceedings that lead to a land use decision, in a subsequent LUBA appeal that attempt to appear is sufficient to satisfy the ORS 197.830(7)(b) appearance requirement, to allow that person to intervene in the LUBA appeal to assign error to the local government's refusal to allow a local appearance. South Gateway Partners v. City of Medford, 53 Or LUBA 593 (2006).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Where persons appeared during the local government proceedings that led to a LUBA appeal and remand, that local appearance is sufficient to satisfy the ORS 197.830(7)(b) requirement for an appearance to have standing to intervene in a subsequent LUBA appeal challenging the local government's decision following the LUBA remand. For purposes of satisfying the ORS 197.830(7)(b) "appearance" requirement, it does not matter that those persons did not file a brief in the first LUBA appeal. South Gateway Partners v. City of Medford, 53 Or LUBA 593 (2006).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. The general standing rule that governs standing to appeal land use decisions other than post-acknowledgement plan and land use regulation amendments is set out at ORS 197.830(2) and the first sentence of ORS 197.830(9). Under those statutes, a petitioner must have "[a]ppeared before the local government," and must file a notice of intent to appeal with LUBA "not later than 21 days after the date the decision sought to be reviewed becomes final." Ettro v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 567 (2006).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. A petitioner appealing a post-acknowledgment plan and land use regulation amendment to LUBA must have "participated" in the proceedings that led to the amendment, whereas a petitioner appealing other kinds of land use decisions only must have "appeared" in the local proceedings. The participation standard is higher than the appearance standard. Ettro v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 567 (2006).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Under the first sentence of ORS 197.830(9), which applies to appeals of land use decisions other than post-acknowledgment plan amendments, the 21-day appeal period commences on the date the decision is final. Under the second sentence of ORS 197.830(9), which applies to applies to appeals of post-acknowledgment plan and land use regulation amendments, the notice of intent to appeal must be "filed not later than 21 days after notice of the decision sought to be reviewed is mailed or otherwise submitted to parties entitled to notice under ORS 197.615." Ettro v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 567 (2006).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Where a petitioner files a timely notice of intent to appeal a post-acknowledgment land use regulation amendment within the time prescribed by the second sentence of ORS 197.830(9) but that petitioner did not participate in the local proceedings that led to the challenged decision, that petitioner does not have standing to appeal under the general standing rule that applies to appeals of post-acknowledgment land use regulation amendments. Ettro v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 567 (2006).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Read in context, the ORS 197.830(2) requirement that a person must file a notice of intent to appeal in order to "petition [LUBA] for review" does not implicitly prohibit parties who have not filed a notice of intent to appeal from filing a cross-petition for review, as provided by OAR 661-010-0030(7). Horning v. Washington County, 51 Or LUBA 303 (2006).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. The legislature's use of different terms to describe the actions required to have standing to appeal to LUBA is some indication that the legislature intended to impose different standing requirements. Century Properties, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 51 Or LUBA 572 (2006).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. To have standing to appeal a post-acknowledgment plan amendment under ORS 197.620(1) an appellant must have "participated" during the local proceedings, whereas to have standing to appeal under ORS 197.830(2) an appellant must have "appeared." The dictionary definitions of "participated" and "appeared" suggest more is required to participate than to appear, but those definitions do not identify what more is required. Century Properties, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 51 Or LUBA 572 (2006).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. When ORS 197.620(1) was first adopted, the requirement that a person must have "participated" during the local proceedings that led to adoption of a post-acknowledgment plan amendment required that an appellant have done more than make a bare neutral appearance during the local proceedings. Century Properties, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 51 Or LUBA 572 (2006).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. The text, context and statutory history of ORS 197.620(1) and ORS 197.830(2) establish that while a bare neutral appearance will satisfy the standing requirement under ORS 197.830(2) that an appellant must have "appeared," such a bare neutral appearance will not satisfy the standing requirement under ORS 197.620(1) that an appellant must have "participated." To have participated under ORS 197.620(2), an appellant must have asserted a position on the merits. Century Properties, LLC v. City of Corvallis, 51 Or LUBA 572 (2006).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Standing to appeal to LUBA is a matter of state law, and a local government cannot adopt code provisions that purport to enlarge or diminish the requirements for establishing standing to appeal to LUBA. Multnomah County v. Multnomah County, 46 Or LUBA 365 (2004).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. The legislature did not contemplate in adopting the standing requirements to appeal to LUBA at ORS 197.830(2) that a local government could "appear" before itself and thereby gain standing to appeal the local government's own decision to LUBA. Multnomah County v. Multnomah County, 46 Or LUBA 365 (2004).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. While it may be possible for a local government to adopt code provisions that allow a department or subdivision within the local government to "appear" before the local government decision maker and establish standing for that department or subdivision to appeal the final land use decision to LUBA for purposes of ORS 197.830(2), the statute does not permit a local government to appeal its own decision and appear before LUBA as both petitioner and respondent. Multnomah County v. Multnomah County, 46 Or LUBA 365 (2004).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. When a party submits an affidavit in response to a jurisdictional challenge and the assertions in that affidavit are unchallenged, absent some other reason to question those assertions LUBA will accept them as true for purposes of resolving a jurisdictional issue. Comrie v. City of Pendleton, 45 Or LUBA 758 (2003).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Under Utsey v. Coos County, 176 Or App 524, 32 P3d 933 (2001), a party seeking judicial review of a LUBA decision under ORS 197.850(1), in addition to meeting the statutory standing requirements, must also establish that the Court of Appeals' decision will have a practical effect on the appealing party's rights. LUBA is an executive branch agency rather than a court. Therefore, the standing requirements to appeal a local government land use decision to LUBA are established by ORS 197.830; and the statute does not require that the appellant establish that LUBA's decision will have a practical effect on the appellant. Doob v. Josephine County, 41 Or LUBA 569 (2001).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. The standing concerns identified by the Court of Appeals in Utsey v. Coos County, 176 Or App 524, 32 P3d 933 (2001), involve an appellant's standing before the judicial branch. Because LUBA is part of the executive branch, the separation of powers problem involved in Utsey does not apply to a petitioner's standing before LUBA. Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 41 Or LUBA 247 (2002).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. ORS 197.830(7)(b)(B) allows intervention in a LUBA appeal by "[p]ersons who appeared before the local government, * * * orally or in writing." A city is a "person," as that term is defined by ORS 197.015(18). Wynnyk v. Jackson County, 39 Or LUBA 500 (2001).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Persons who appeared during local proceedings may intervene in a LUBA appeal on the side of respondent without demonstrating that the appeal will result in any actual damage or harm. Wynnyk v. Jackson County, 39 Or LUBA 500 (2001).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. ORS 197.830(6)(b)(A) permits an applicant to intervene in proceedings before LUBA even if the applicant did not appear below, so long as the motion to intervene is filed within 21 days of the date the notice of intent to appeal is filed. Dowrie v. Benton County, 37 Or LUBA 998 (1999).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. An internal vote prohibiting an unincorporated organization from pursuing an appeal does not, in itself, affect that organization's standing before LUBA. Murphy Citizens Advisory Committee v. Josephine County, 33 Or LUBA 882 (1997).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. As it applies to appeals to LUBA, the definition of "person" in ORS 197.015(8) includes an association. Helvetia Community Assoc. v. Washington County, 31 Or LUBA 446 (1996).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. A party has standing to appeal a moratorium if it has interests that are substantially affected by it. Home Builders Assoc. v. City of Wilsonville, 29 Or LUBA 604 (1995).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Where a local hearing is provided, and petitioner appears at that hearing and becomes entitled to notice of the challenged land use decision under ORS 215.416(10) or 227.173(3), the filing of petitioner's notice of intent to appeal is governed by ORS 197.830(2) and (8), not ORS 197.830(3). Ramsey v. City of Portland, 28 Or LUBA 763 (1994).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Being the owner of the property that is the subject of a LUBA appeal proceeding does not automatically establish that person's standing to intervene. Noble v. City of Fairview, 28 Or LUBA 711 (1994).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. ORS 197.830(2) establishes two requirements for standing to bring a LUBA appeal. Petitioner must have (1) filed a timely notice of intent to appeal, and (2) appeared during the local proceedings. Miller v. Washington County, 25 Or LUBA 169 (1993).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Where an attorney states during local proceedings that he represents unspecified "appellants" and "opponents" but (1) nothing in the local record establishes who such persons are, and (2) the attorney fails to submit an affidavit or other evidence to establish who such persons are, the attorney's appearance below is inadequate to confer standing on the unspecified appellants and opponents. Townsend v. City of Newport, 21 Or LUBA 286 (1991).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. The amendments to ORS 197.830(3) adopted by the 1989 legislature, concerning standing to appeal a land use decision made without hearing or with inadequate notice of hearing, do not apply to decisions made before October 3, 1989, the effective date of the amendments. Torgeson v. City of Canby, 19 Or LUBA 623 (1990).

24.2.1 Standing – Before LUBA – Generally. Where standing is not an issue, an affidavit attached to the petition for review for the sole purpose of establishing petitioner's standing is not subject to a motion to strike. Stefan v. Yamhill County, 18 Or LUBA 820 (1990).

24.2.2 Standing – Before LUBA – Requirement to Establish. Where the petitioner does not respond to a motion to dismiss for lack of standing, LUBA will dismiss the appeal. Kittams v. Clackamas County, 81 Or LUBA 141 (2020).

24.2.2 Standing – Before LUBA – Requirement to Establish. LUBA will decline to exercise its discretion to grant petitioners an opportunity on remand from the Court of Appeals to offer additional evidence to establish standing to appeal a land use decision to LUBA under ORS 197.830(3), where petitioners had multiple opportunities in the initial appeal to offer the additional evidence, which was at all times within petitioners' possession, but failed to do so. Rogue Advocates v. Jackson County, 75 Or LUBA 174 (2017).

24.2.2 Standing – Before LUBA – Requirement to Establish. Pursuant to ORS 197.830(4), there are three circumstances under which a petitioner may appeal a local government's land use decision without a hearing directly to LUBA: (1) if petitioner was not provided notice of the decision; (2) if petitioner was not entitled to notice of the decision but is "adversely affected or aggrieved by the decision"; or (3) if petitioner received notice of the decision, but "the notice did not reasonably describe the nature of the decision." Levy v. Jackson County, 75 Or LUBA 401 (2017).

24.2.2 Standing – Before LUBA – Requirement to Establish. Even though a county's notice of its decision made without a hearing did not state that "The [] person who is mailed written notice of the decision cannot appeal the decision directly to [LUBA] under ORS 197.830" as required under ORS 215.416(11), such an omission does not constitute a failure to reasonably describe the nature of the decision, and therefore petitioner may not appeal the decision directly to LUBA under ORS 197.830(4)(c). Levy v. Jackson County, 75 Or LUBA 401 (2017).

24.2.2 Standing – Before LUBA – Requirement to Establish. A party does not establish that the party "appeared" during the proceedings below where the record of the proceedings that led to the challenged decision includes only evidence of the appearance by that party in a different land use proceeding. Sommer v. Josephine County, 58 Or LUBA 505 (2009).

24.2.2 Standing – Before LUBA – Requirement to Establish. LUBA will deny a motion to dismiss based on a petitioner's failure to allege facts demonstrating her standing to appeal, where the party moving to dismiss alleges facts that demonstrate that petitioner filed a timely notice of intent to appeal and appeared during the local proceedings. Dobson v. City of Newport, 47 Or LUBA 267 (2004).

24.2.2 Standing – Before LUBA – Requirement to Establish. When undisputed evidence in the record establishes that petitioner appeared below, and therefore establishes petitioner's standing before LUBA, the Board will not take evidence outside of the record for purposes of establishing standing before the Court of Appeals, because such evidence will not "affect the outcome" of LUBA's proceedings, within the meaning of OAR 661-010-0045(2). Friends of Yamhill County v. Yamhill County, 41 Or LUBA 247 (2002).

24.2.2 Standing – Before LUBA – Requirement to Establish. LUBA's rules require that the petition for review "[s]tate the facts that establish petitioner's standing," but do not require that such allegations of fact appear in any particular form or any particular portion of the petition for review. Friends of the Creek v. Jackson County, 36 Or LUBA 562 (1999).

24.2.2 Standing – Before LUBA – Requirement to Establish. It is petitioner's responsibility to establish standing. Where the parties stipulate to suspend the appeal proceeding until respondent's motion to dismiss for lack of standing is resolved, and petitioner does not respond to the motion, LUBA will dismiss the appeal. Strauss v. Jackson County, 28 Or LUBA 56 (1994).

24.2.2 Standing – Before LUBA – Requirement to Establish. That petitioners' allegations of standing were made in their answer to a motion to dismiss, rather than in the petition for review as required by OAR 661-10-030(3)(a), is a technical violation of LUBA's rules which does not prejudice respondent's substantial rights where respondent had a full opportunity to respond to petitioners' allegations in its response brief. Schatz v. City of Jacksonville, 21 Or LUBA 214 (1991).

24.2.2 Standing – Before LUBA – Requirement to Establish. After the petition for review is filed, respondents may, in their response brief or in a motion to dismiss, identify disputed allegations of fact, and explain why under their version of the facts petitioners lack standing. Petitioners may then request permission to file a reply brief to respond to respondent's legal arguments, move for an evidentiary hearing to present facts establishing standing or do both. Citizens Concerned v. City of Sherwood, 20 Or LUBA 550 (1991).

24.2.2 Standing – Before LUBA – Requirement to Establish. If a petitioner's standing to appeal to LUBA on any basis can be established without the necessity of an evidentiary hearing, LUBA will not conduct an evidentiary hearing to enable the petitioner to establish standing to appeal on a different basis. Lowrie v. Polk County, 19 Or LUBA 564 (1990).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Whether an individual "appeared" during the proceedings below and thus has standing to appeal or intervene before LUBA is a mixed question of law and fact that often requires extra-record evidence to evaluate, including the circumstances surrounding whatever action is the basis for the asserted appearance. Conte v. City of Eugene, 76 Or LUBA 498 (2017).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. The inclusion of a party's name and address in a list of residents who "endorse" a report that was prepared by opponents to a project application, which includes a complete list of residents in the project area, and states that "100% of the residents * * * do not support" the project, and designates various individuals as "lead authors" and "supporting authors," but which does not list the party in question as one of the authors, is not sufficient to constitute an "appearance" for purposes of ORS 197.830(7)(b)(B). The party's intent regarding the inclusion of her name in the report is irrelevant; to demonstrate an appearance, the party must submit a document or oral testimony that the local government would reasonably recognize as an appearance by that party. Conte v. City of Eugene, 76 Or LUBA 498 (2017).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where an entity named "Shepherdsfield Ministries" moves to intervene in an appeal to LUBA, but the entity fails to establish that it appeared during the proceedings below under that name, or that it has met the requirements for representational or organizational standing, the entity has not established standing to intervene. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 664 (2016).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where it is undisputed that a corporation named "Shepherdsfield Church" appeared during the proceedings below, but the motion to intervene mistakenly identifies the appearing party as "Shepherdsfield Ministries," LUBA will allow the motion to intervene to be revised to name the correct party as long as the correction does not prejudice the substantial rights of other parties. Central Oregon Landwatch v. Deschutes County, 74 Or LUBA 664 (2016).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. For purposes of standing to appeal to LUBA under ORS 197.830(2), a petitioner "appeared" on his own behalf where the petitioner filed the local appeal statement in his own name and the challenged decision identifies petitioner as the local appellant, nothwithstanding that the petitioner also appeared on behalf of other persons. Martin v. City of Central Point, 73 Or LUBA 422 (2016).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. Where a local government combines proceedings on two related land use matters, and a party moving to intervene in an appeal of one of the resulting land use decisions testified at the combined hearing, that party has appeared in the proceedings before the decision-maker and has standing to intervene in the appeal, even if the party's testimony did not specifically refer to the decision that was appealed. Iyer v. Washington County, 72 Or LUBA 491 (2015).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. An email that was sent to the planning director prior to the date and time that she made her administrative decision on an application, and that included a request that the email be included in the record of the proceeding, is sufficient to constitute an "appearance" for purposes of satisfying ORS 197.830(2)(b). Devin Oil Co. Inc. v. Morrow County, 70 Or LUBA 512 (2014).

24.2.3 Standing – Before LUBA – Appearance. A planning consultant did not "appear" and does not have standing to join in his client's appeal of a land use decision to LUBA, where the planning consultant's only appearances during the local land use proceeding were on behalf of his clients. The appearances a planning consultant makes on behalf of his clients are not sufficient to satisfy the ORS 197.830(2)(b) "appearance" requirement for standing to appeal to LUBA. Warren v. Josephine County, 67 Or LUBA 74 (2013).
